Raimund, FERDINAND, stage-name of F. RAIMANN (*Vienna 1 VI 1790; ∞1820 Luise Gleich [†1882]; †ibid. 5 VII 1836), Austrian dramatist. A turner's son, Raimund became an actor (1808), attached to the Josefstadt theatre (1814-17), and to the Leopoldstadt theatre (1817-30), where he was director from 1828. A popular comic actor and typical melancholy humorist, he had an unfortunate domestic situation and, depressed by the thought of Nestroy's* fame eclipsing his own, finally shot himself, after being bitten by what he feared was a mad dog. He was inspired by Shakespeare* and Calderón*; his urge was towards serious literary achievement. His first original play, Der Barometermacher auf der Zauberinsel (1823), was a traditional fairy-tale farce, but the romantic fantasy and deep humour of his later plays—in particular Der Alpenkönig—elevated the Viennese popular play, while keeping touch with the simple public.

Der Alpenkönig und der Menschenfeind (1828; Eng. tr. J. B. Buckstone, 1850); Der Verschwender (1834; Eng. tr. E. Tramer, 1949).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. J. N. Vogl, 4 vols, 1837); Historisch-kritische Säkularausgabe (ed. F. Bruckner and E. Castle, 6 vols, 1924-34); R.-Liederbuch (ed. W. A. Bauer, 1924).

H. Kindermann, R. (1940); F. Schreyvogel, F. R. (1960); K. Kahl, F. R. (1967); J. Michalski, F. R. (New York, 1968).—R.-Almanach (1963).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Raine, ALLEN, pseud. of ANNE ADALISA EVANS (*Newcastle Emlyn 6 X 1836; ∞1872 Beynon Puddicombe; †Penbryn 21 VI 1908), Welsh novelist whose simple romantic stories usually have strong Welsh local colouring.

A Welsh Singer (1897); A Welsh Witch (1902); Queen of the Rushes (1906); Neither Storehouse Nor Barn (1908). R.M.H.

Raine, KATHLEEN (*London 14 VI 1908; ∞Charles Madge [o/o]), English poet and critic, who writes religious and philosophic poetry in the manner of William Blake*, whom she admires.

Stone and Flower: Poems 1935-43 (1943); Living in Time (1946); The Pythoness (1949).—Collected Poems (1956).—CRITICISM: Letters of S. T. Coleridge (ed.; 1950); Defending Ancient Springs (1967); Blake and Tradition (1969). W.R.A.

Rainis, pseud. of JĀNIS PLIEKŠĀNS (*Tadenava manor 11 IX 1865; ∞23 XII 1897 Elza Rozenberga [Aspazija*]; †Riga 12 IX 1929), Latvian poet and playwright. Combining the practice of law with political activities, he incurred the displeasure of the Russian authorities and was exiled to Vyatka. On his return to Riga he married Aspazija and in 1906 escaped with her to Switzerland, where they remained till 1920. During the last decade of his life he was a parliamentary deputy, director of the National Theatre and Minister of Education in Latvia.

Rainis' is the most illustrious name in Latvian literature and his fame rests mostly on his dramatic poetry, in which symbolism bodies forth a humane philosophy, deriving in part from Goethe*, and a romantic love of country. Most of his poetry and the best of his plays were written in Switzerland. Their most remarkable quality resides in the creative use of Latvian, which becomes an eloquent medium in the poet's hands. Like Goethe, whose Faust he translated, Rainis gradually evolved a dignified and pregnant style.

VERSE: Tālas noskanas zilā vakarā (1903); Vētras sēja (1905); Klusā grāmata (1909); Gals un sākums (1913); Sudrabota gaisma (1921).—PLAYS: Pusi-deālists (1900); Uguns un nakts ('Fire and Night'; 1905); Zelta zirgs (1910); Indulis un Arija (1911); Pūt, vējņi (1913); Spēlēju, dancoju (1919); Jāzeps un viņa brāļi (1919); The Sons of Jacob, tr. Grace Rhys, 1924); Ilja Mūromietis (1922).—REMINISCENCES: Castagnola (1928).—Dzīve un darbi (life and works; ed. A. Birkets, 10 vols, 1925 ff.).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Tricolour Sun (1936).

P. Dauge, R., pēvēts bor'by, solnša i lyubvi (1920); K. Egle, Atziņas (1923); A. Birkerts, R. kā mākslinieks (1925) and R. kā domātājs (1925); Z. Mauriņa, Daži pamata motīvi Raiņa mākslā (1928); F. Cielēns, R. un Aspazija (Stockholm, 1955). W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Rais, KAREL VÁCLAV (*Bělohrad 4 I 1859; †Prague 8 VII 1926), Czech novelist. After his early historical novels and nationally inspired poetry Rais found his true talent in a series of novels and stories descriptive of north Bohemian peasant life (Zapadlí vlastenci, 1893). His approach is on the whole realistic rather than idyllic, and his best novels have considerable documentary value.

Vybrané spisy (ed. J. Štefánek, 1959 ff.).—J. Janáčková in Česká literatura (1958). R.A.

Rajan, BALACHANDRA (*1920), Indian critic and novelist, educated in Madras and Cambridge, sometime Fellow and Director of Studies in English at Trinity College. He served with UNESCO for seven years, and has been Professor of English at Delhi, Wisconsin and in Canada. He edited Focus at irregular intervals, and wrote scholarly works on Milton* and W. B. Yeats*. His The Dark Dancer (1958) and Too Long in the West (1961) are both rather unreadable novels. His writing, both creative and critical, is characterized by a remarkable verbal fluency but also a surprisingly insensitive use of language. C.D.N.

Rājasekhara (c. A.D. 900), Sanskrit dramatist, remembered chiefly for his Karpūramañjarī (tr. C. R. Lanman, 1901); also wrote the Kāvyamīmāṃsā, a discursive work on poetics. J.E.B.G.

Rajna, Pro (*Sondrio 8 VII 1847; †Florence 25 XI 1930), Italian philologist, outstanding student of Romance languages and literature.

G. Vandelli, Miscellanea di studi critici dedicata a P. R. (1911; with biblio.). N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Rakić, MILAN (*Belgrade 18 IX 1876; †Zagreb 30 VI 1938), Serbian poet. Studied law in Paris, and in the diplomatic service worked in Europe and the Near East. Although influenced by contemporary French poets he retained his individuality as a writer, and in his poems perfection of form and harmony are combined with sincerity of emotion and depth of thought.

Pesme (1904); Nove pesme (1912).—Sel. poems (9 vols, 1924–68).

V. Djurić, M. R. (1957); S. Marković, M. R. (1963). V.J.

Rakitin, NIKOLA (*Lujene 6 VI 1885; †[suicide] Svoje tunnel 2 V 1934), Bulgarian poet. He preferred the peace of provincial life to Sofia and lived all his life in Pleven, becoming curator of its museum a year before his death. He wrote quiet, contemplative verse of the countryside; his charming prose sketches of Bulgarian rural life, Rusalska polyana, were published posthumously in 1938.

Tsufnati vishni (1909); Razmirni godini (1919); Predi da sumne (1920); Prolet pri Vit (1929); Dunavski soneti (1930); Kapyat listata (1933).—Coll. works (ed. P. Dinekov, 2 vols, 1946).

V.P.

Rakovski, GEORGI (*Kotel 2 IV 1821; †Bucharest 9 X 1867), Bulgarian writer–revolutionary. He travelled and lived outside Bulgaria for most of his chequered, militant life, which included spying against the Turks in the Crimean War and setting up a 'Bulgarian Legion' in Belgrade in 1860. Indefatigably, he preached the Bulgarian cause and his haydutin ('insurgent') ideal in such journals as his Dunavski lebed. A colourful and influential figure of the national revival, he aspired to be poet, journalist, philologist, historian, philosopher and scientist, but neither his literary nor his academic skill matched his enthusiasm.

Gorski putnik (Novi Sad, 1857); Pokazalets (Odessa, 1859); Klyuch bolgarskago yazika (Belgrade, 1860); Kratko razsuzhdenie (ibid., 1860); Bulgarski hayduti (1867).

G. Konstantinov, R. i bulgarskata revoliutsionna ideologia (1939); M. Arnaudov, G. R. jivot, delo, idei (1969). V.P.

Ralbag: see Gersonides, LEVI BEN GERSON.

Raleigh, or Ralegh, SIR WALTER (*Hayes Barton, Budleigh, Devon c. 1552; ∞1592 Elizabeth Throgmorton; †London 29 X 1618), English seaman, explorer, politician, historian and poet, who is taken as the type of Elizabethan courtier. From Oriel College, Oxford (1568–69), without a degree, he joined the Huguenot army in France. Later a member of the Middle Temple, Raleigh sailed with Gilbert* (1578–79), was in Ireland (1580–81), colonized Virginia, sailed to Guiana (1594–95) and was at Cadiz (1596). A favourite with Elizabeth* until his marriage, he was knighted (1582) and created warden of the Stannaries, lord lieutenant of Cornwall and vice-admiral of Devon and Cornwall (1585). At different times M.P. for Dorset, Devon and Cornwall respectively, he was an eloquent speaker. Apparently innocent, Raleigh was sentenced to death for complicity in plotting against James* I (1603), but remained in the Tower, friendly with Prince Henry, till 1616; released for his unsuccessful search for gold in Guiana, sentence was carried out on him on his return for disobeying James I's instructions. Raleigh's uncompleted History shows a devout orthodoxy despite contemporary suspicions of atheism. His verse shows fine workmanship, a flexible command of metre, combining strength with melody in its English understanding of classicism. B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

The Revenge (1591); Guiana (1596; repr. 1967); The History of the World (1614; sel. ed. G. E. Hadow, 1917).—Poems (ed. Sir E. Brydges, 1813; ed. A. M. C. Latham, 1929, 1951); Works (ed. W. Oldys and T. Birch, with biog., 8 vols, 1829); A. M. C. Latham, Selected Poetry and Prose (1965).—E. Edwards, The Life of Sir W. R. (2 vols, 1868).

T. N. Brushfield, Bibliography of Sir W. R. (1908); C. H. Firth, 'Sir W. R.'s History of the World' in Proc. Brit. Acad. (1918); M. Waldman, Sir W. R. (1928); M. C. Bradbrook, The School of Night (1936); D. B. Quinn, R. and the British Empire (1947); E. Strathmann, Sir W. R.: A Study in Elizabethan Skepticism (1951); P. Edwards, Sir W. R. (1953); W. Oakeshott, The Queen and the Poet (1960); A. L. Rowse, R. and the Throckmorton (1962); E. G. Clark, R. and Marlowe (1965); P. Lefranc, Sir W. R. écrivain (Paris, 1968). J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Raleigh, Sir Walter Alexander (*London 5 IX 1861; ∞1890 Lucie Gertrude Jackson; †Oxford 13 V 1922), English critic. Though most of his career was in academic posts (Professor of English literature at Oxford, 1904), his reputation rests on humane criticism rather than scholarship. He successfully endeavoured to interpret authors through their personalities. His lucid style has the virtues extolled in his excellent essay on Style (1897).

CRITICISM: The English Novel (1894); Milton (1900); Wordsworth (1903); Shakespeare (1907); Six Essays on Johnson (1910); Lockhart's Life of Burns (ed.; 1914).—On Writing and Writers: Extracts From his Notebooks (1926).—The War in the Air (1st vol of official hist.; 1922).—Letters, 1879–1922 (ed. Lady R., 2 vols, 1926).

H. A. Jones, Sir W. R. and the Air History (1922); V. Crum, Sir W. A. R. (1923).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Ralin, Radoy (*Sliven 22 IV 1923), Bulgarian poet and satirist. A former war correspondent and an editor of the satirical weekly Sturshel ('Hornet'), he has written fine verse but is particularly popular for his witty and outspoken feuilletons in verse and prose, notably on the 'personality cult' of the 1950s.

Stihotvorenia (1949); Voynishka tetradka (1955); Strogo poveritelno (1956); Istoria s luv (1958); Nepredvideni chuvstva (1959); Vtoro rajdane (1959); Bezopasni igli (1960); Vnimatelni feyletoni (1963).
V.P.

Ramaa: see Isserles, MOSES.

Ramalhó: see Ortigão, JOSÉ DUARTE RAMALHO.

Rāmānuja (*Conjeeveram, Madras early 12th century), the first of the great Vaishnava teachers of southern India. In opposition to Śaṅkarācārya* he taught a system of 'qualified monism', and was the author of commentaries in Sanskrit on the Brahmasūtra and the Bhagavad Gītā (see MAHĀ-BHĀRATA).
H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Rama Rau, Shantha (*1923; ∞Faubion Bowers), daughter of Sir B. Rama Rau from South India and Lady Rau, a Kashmiri Brahmin. She was educated in England and at Wellesley College, U.S.A. She met her husband while in Tokyo where her father was Indian ambassador, has lived in the U.S.A. and written about her travels in Africa, Europe and Russia. Her successful dramatization of E. M. Forster's* A Passage to India (1960) as well as her only novel, Remember the House (1956), exploit different uses of English speech by British and Indians and the consequent misunderstandings. Her understanding of India is authentic, her treatment sympathetic while disinterested. She brings seriousness and insight into the East-West encounter. The autobiographical Gifts of Passage (1961) and Home to India (1945) show her 'indelible engagement with India'.

C.D.N.

Rambaldoni, Vittorino de', better known as Vittorino da Feltre (*?1378; †1446), Italian humanist, 'the founder of modern pedagogy'. A pupil of Guarino da Verona (Guarini*), he was appointed tutor to the children of Gianfrancesco Gonzaga at Mantua where he founded his famous school, the Casa Gioiosa. His curriculum included the Trivium and Quadrivium, Platonic and Aristotelian philosophy, music and physical training.

W. H. Woodward, V. da F. and Other Humanist Educators (2nd ed. 1905); G. Saitta, L'educazione dell'umanesimo in Italia (1928).
B.R.

Ramban: see Nachmanides.

Rambert, Eugène (*Lausanne 6 IV 1830; †ibid. 21 XI 1886), Swiss essayist, critic, historian and poet. He contributed for 30 years to the Bibliothèque universelle and is particularly remembered for his Alpes Suisses (5 ser., 1865–75).

Journal d'un neutre (1871); Récits et croquis (1887).—Works (10 vols, 1888–90).

V. Rossel, E. R., son temps, sa vie, son œuvre (1917); P. Kohler, Deux études sur E. R. (1931).
J.P.I. (G.G.)

Rāmdās ('slave of Rāma'), originally NĀRĀYAṆA (*1608; †nr Nāsik 1681), Marāthī poet. A contemporary of Shivājī (*1627; †1680), the Marāthā national hero, he wrote the Dāsabodha, a long didactic poem, and founded a sect of Rāmdāśīs that is still flourishing.

W. S. Deming, R. and the Rāmdāśīs (Calcutta, 1928).
H.G.R. (I.R.)

Ramler, Karl Wilhelm (*Kolberg 25 II 1725; †Berlin 11 IV 1798), German poet. A friend of Lessing*, with whom he published Logau's* Sinngedichte, Ramler became a schoolmaster in Berlin in 1748. Devoid of originality, he was viewed in his day as a master of form. He translated Dryden's* Alexander's Feast (1766) and Horace*. In his anthologies he frequently adapted poems to his own taste.

VERSE: Lyrische Gedichte (1762); Oden (1767).—ANTHOLOGIES: Lieder der Deutschen (4 vols, 1766); Lyrische Blumenlese (2 vols, 1774–78).—Poetische Werke (2 vols, 1800–01).—Briefwechsel zwischen Gleim und R. (ed. C. Schüddekopf, 1906).

C. Schüddekopf, K. W. R. bis zu seiner Verbindung mit Lessing (1886); H. Freydank, Goethe und R. (1928).
H.B.G.

Ramón: see Gómez de la Serna, RAMÓN.

Ramos, GRACILIANO (*Quebrangulo, Alagoas 27 X 1892; †Rio de Janeiro 20 III 1953), Brazilian novelist. He started writing fiction after 20 years in the service of the government of Alagoas, and with abundant experience of the social, political and climatic conditions of the Brazilian North East. Arrested in 1936 for supposed complicity in the left-wing revolt in Pernambuco, he spent a long period as a political prisoner and emerged with ruined health. His later works, notably his Memórias do cárcere (1953), are largely autobiographical. His novels are marked by austere purity of style, a fine control of form, and deep insight into the minds and instincts of the underprivileged.

Caetés (1933); São Bernardo (1934); Angústia (1936; Eng. tr. 1946); Vidas secas (1938; Eng. tr. 1963); Infância (1945); Insônia (1947).—Obras (1947); Obras completas (1961).

Homenagem a G. R. (1943); Floriano Gonçalves, 'G. R. e o romance' in Obras, I (1947); H. Pereira de Silva, G. R.: Ensaio crítico-psicanalítico (1950); B. M. Woodbridge Jr, G. R. (1954); A. Cândido, Ficção e confissão (1956); R. M. Pinto, G. R.: Autor e ator (1962); H. Feldmann, G. R. Eine Untersuchung zur Selbstdarstellung in seinem Epischenwerk (1965). J.T.B.

Ramsay, ALLAN (*Leadhills 15 X 1686; ∞1712 Christian Ross; †Edinburgh 7 I 1758), Scottish poet. Ramsay was apprenticed to an Edinburgh wig-maker in 1700; he opened a bookshop and Scotland's first circulating library; and struggled to revive drama in Edinburgh. As a collector of popular lyric and ballad, and of the older Scots poetry, Ramsay made the work of Dunbar*, Henryson* and others available to his own century—particularly to Burns*—and restored a decaying poetic tradition. His original songs are not great lyric; he excels rather in broad humour, geniality, vivid sketches and satire; he carries off the translation of Horace's* Odes in Scots with astonishing grace; and in his pastoral comedy, The Gentle Shepherd (1725), he brings real country accents into an artificial genre. It was successfully revived at Edinburgh (1950).

Christ's Kirk on the Green, from an old Manuscript Collection (1716–18); Poems (1721); Fables and Tales (1722); Fair Assembly (1723); Health (1724); Tea-Table Miscellany, I (1724), II (1726), III (?1727); The Evergreen, being a Collection of Scots Poems wrote by the ingenious before 1600 (1724); Poems (1728); Thirty Fables (1730).—Poetical Works (ed. G. Chalmers, 2 vols, 1800; 3 vols, 1851); Works (ed. B. Martin, J. W. Oliver, A. M. Kinghorn and A. Law, 4 vols, 1951– ).

J. W. Mackail, 'A. R. and the Romantic revival' in Essays and Stud., X (1924); B. Martin, A. R. (1931); J. W. Oliver, 'The 18th century revival' in Edinburgh Essays on Scots Literature (1933); D. Daiches in Scottish Poetry: A Critical Survey (ed. J. Kinsley, 1955); D. Craig, Scottish Literature and the Scottish People 1680–1830 (1961). J.K.

Ramusio, GIAMBATTISTA (*Treviso 20 VII 1485; ∞1524 Franceschina Navagero; †Padua 10 VII 1557), Italian geographer. A classical scholar and friend of Bembo*, he is best known for his critical edition of tales of travel and voyages from classical times to his own day.

Delle Navigationi et Viaggi (3 vols, 1550–59).

A. Del Piero, 'Della vita e degli studi di G. B. R.' in Nuovo Archivio Veneto, new ser., IV (1902); G. Toffanin, Il Cinquecento (1960; with biblio.). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Ramusio, GIROLAMO (*Rimini 1450; †in the East 1486), Italian poet and friend of Giovanni Pico* della Mirandola to whom he dedicated his Latin lyrics. His Italian verse is unpublished.

Opera (Paris, 1791).—F. Flamini, G. R. e i suoi versi latini e volgari (1900). C.Dr.

Ramuz, C(HARLES) F(ERDINAND) (*Lausanne 24 IX 1878; †Pully 23 V 1947), Swiss writer, the most powerful and original since Rousseau*. After a vital 12 years' literary apprenticeship in Paris he returned to his native canton of Vaud. A founder of the Cahiers vaudois, Ramuz devoted his entire career to artistic research, creating a remarkable oral style, free from traditional syntax, with a ruggedness that is a bold stylization of the speech of instinctive Vaudois and Valaisan peasants. A thinker and poet, Ramuz is more than a regional writer who excels in portraying the landscape and peoples of the Rhôneland. His stories are lyrical, dramatic or mystical; their outcome is often violent and tragic. This cosmic visionary is a creator of myths, based on close observation of life and inspired by a passionate love of all creation. Severely criticized at first, Ramuz has gained a considerable reputation and been widely translated.

The first novels, Aline (1905), Les circonstances de la vie (1907), Jean-Luc persécuté (1909), are realistic; Aimé Pache, peintre vaudois (1911) is a fictionalized account of his own life. Other works concerned with an individual destiny or which throw light on Ramuz' life and development are La vie de Samuel Belet (1913); The Life of Samuel Belet, tr. Mervyn Savill, 1951; Taille de l'homme (1933), Besoin de grandeur (1937); What is Man, sel. tr. G. Paulding, 1948; Paris, Notes d'un vaudois (1938); Découverte du monde (1939) and the Journal, 1896–1942 (1943).

Raison d'être (in Cahiers vaudois, 1914; completed 1926); La guerre dans le haut pays (1915); Le règne de l'esprit malin (1917); La guérison des maladies (1917); Les signes parmi nous (1919); Terre du ciel (1921); Présence de la mort (1922); The Triumph of Death, tr. A. R. Macdougall and

A. Comfort, 1946); Passage du poète (1923); La séparation des races (1923); L'amour du monde (1925); La grande peur dans la montagne (1926; Terror on the Mountain, tr. Milton Stansburg, 1967); Beauté sur la terre (1927; Beauty on Earth, tr. 1929); Salutation paysanne (1929; incl. 'Lettre à Bernard Grasset'); Adam et Eve (1932); Derborence (1934; When the Mountain Fell, tr. S. Fisher Scott, 1949); Le garçon savoyard (1936); Si le soleil ne revenait pas (1937); La guerre aux papiers (1942); Pays de Vaud and Vues sur le Valais (1943); Nouvelles (1944); Les servants et autres nouvelles (1946); Histoires (1946); Journal. Dernières pages. 1942-1947 (1949).—Œuvres complètes (23 vols, 1940-54).—CORRESPONDENCE: Lettres 1900-1918 (1956); Lettres 1919-1947 (1959); C.-F. R. ses amis et son temps (ed. Gilbert Guisan, 6 vols, 1967-70).
 Pour ou contre R. (coll. studs; 1926); A. Tissot, C.-F. R. ou le drame de la poésie (1947); B. Voyenne, C.-F. R. ou la sainteté de la terre (1948); G. Guisan, C.-F. R. ou le génie de la patience (1958); Clarence R. Parsons, Vision plastique de C.-F. R. (1964); M. Nicod, Du réalisme à la réalité. Évolution artistique et itinéraire spirituel de R. (1966); G. Guisan, C.-F. R. (1967); D. R. Haggis, C.-F. R. ouvrier du langage (1968).—T. Bringolf, Bibliographie de l'œuvre de C.-F. R. (1942) and Notes bibliographiques sur l'œuvre de C.-F. R., 1942-1966 (1967). A.M.I. (G.G.)

Ranch, HIERONYMUS JUSTESEN (*Vinkel nr Viborg 1539; ∞ Karen Olufsdatter; †Viborg 3 XII 1607), Danish playwright and poet. He studied theology at Copenhagen, took his degree at Wittenberg, and became a clergyman at Viborg. Of his three plays, two have Biblical themes, the third, Karrig Nidding, a farce about a miser, being his best. He also wrote a moral poem, Fuglevisen, 'The Song of the Birds'.

H. J. R.'s Danske Skuespil og Fugleviser (ed. S. Birket Smith, 1876-77). E.B.

Rand, AYN (*St Petersburg 1905), American novelist. Ayn Rand graduated from the University of Leningrad in 1924, came to the U.S.A. in 1926 and took out naturalization in 1931. While she has been both a screen writer and a University lecturer, she is best known for novels such as The Fountainhead (1943), somewhat sentimental 'packages of life'.

We the Living (1936); Anthem (1938); Atlas Shrugged (1957). D.E.Mo.

Randolph, THOMAS (~Newnham-cum-Badby, Northants 15 VI 1605; †Bathwick 17 III 1635), English poet and playwright. Educated at Westminster School and Trinity College, Cambridge, of which he became Fellow, Randolph was one of the 'sons' of Ben Jonson*. He was well known as a poet and wit and his plays have much gaiety and vivacity.

Poems (1638).—PLAYS: Aristippus, or the Jovial Philosopher (1630); The Jealous Lovers (1632); Hey for Honesty, Down with Knavery (adapt. of Aristophanes' Plutus; pr. 1651).—Poetical and Dramatic Works (ed. W. C. Hazlitt, 2 vols, 1875).

G. C. Moore Smith, 'The canon of R.'s dramatic works' in Rev. Eng. Stud. (1925) and 'T. R.' in Proc. Brit. Acad. (1927); S. A. and D. R. Tannebaum, T. R.: a Concise Bibliography (1947).

J.B.B.

Ranjina, DINKO (*Ragusa [Dubrovnik] 1536; †ibid. 1607), Ragusan poet of wealthy bourgeois origin; a typical man of the Renaissance in education, gifts and outlook. He spent his youth in Italy, but later occupied high office in Ragusa. His poems are more spontaneous and sincere than those of his Ragusan predecessors; occasionally they are bitter, pessimistic and satirical.

Pjesni razlike (Florence, 1563).

Arturo Cronia, Il canzoniere raguseo del 1507 (1927); J. Torbarina, Italian Influence on the Poets of the Ragusan Republic (1931). V.J.

Ranke, LEOPOLD VON (*Wiehe 21 XII 1795; ∞ Windermere 26 X 1843 Clarissa Graves; †Berlin 23 V 1886), German historian, from 1825 Professor in the University of Berlin. Ranke's influence on historiography has been immense and has been exercised directly outside Germany since he applied his empirical scholarship, with its rigorous dependence on primary sources and its high impartiality, to illuminate the histories of all the main European countries. Ranke was a good prose writer and consciously aimed at artistic composition. Perhaps his finest works are Die römischen Päpste, which gained a world-wide reputation, and his Deutsche Geschichte im Zeitalter der Reformation, which was his most popular book among his own countrymen.

Geschichte der romanischen und germanischen Völker (1824; Eng. tr. 1846); Die römischen Päpste . . . im XVI. und XVII. Jahrhundert (3 vols, 1834-39; Eng. tr., 3 vols, 1846); Deutsche Geschichte im Zeitalter der Reformation (6 vols, 1839-47; ed. P. Joachimsmen, 1925-26; Eng. tr., 3 vols, 1845-47); Französische Geschichte . . . im XVI. und XVII. Jahrhundert (5 vols, 1852-61); Englische Geschichte . . . im XVII. Jahrhundert (7 vols, 1859-68; Eng. tr., 6 vols, 1875); Wallenstein (1869); XII Bücher preussischer Geschichte (5 vols, 1874-79; ed. G. Kuntzel, 1930); Weltgeschichte (9 vols, 1881-88).—Coll. works (54 vols, 1867-90).

H. F. Helmholz, R.-Bibliographie (1910).—E. Guglia, R.s Leben und Werke (1893); G. P. Gooch, History and Historians in the XIXth Century (1913); Th. H. von Laue, L. R.: The Formative Years (1950). D.H.

Rankins, WILLIAM (fl. 1587-1601), English writer of satire, drama and a venomous attack on the theatres, A Mirror of Monsters (1587). He was paid by Henslowe for Mulmutius Dunwallow (1598), probably wrote The English Ape (1588) and collaborated with Richard Hathway on a play Hannibal (1601), and several others. Meres* mentions Rankins as a satirist.

Seven Satires (1598; ed. A. Davenport, 1948).
B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Ranković, SVETOLIK (*nr Belgrade 7 XII 1863; †Belgrade 18 III 1899), Serbian novelist; an Orthodox priest. His three psychological novels and his short stories deal with life in the Šumadija; their mood is bitter and pessimistic.

Gorski car (1897); Seoska učiteljica (1898); Porušeni ideali (1900); Slike iz života (1904).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 2 vols, 1952). V.J.

Ransom, JOHN CROWE (*Pulaski, Tenn. 30 IV 1888; ∞1920 Robb Renvill), American poet and critic. Ransom founded the Kenyon Review and was the driving force behind the Fugitive Group. The New Criticism (1941) examines the critical theories of T. S. Eliot*, I. A. Richards* and William Empson*, and in desirating 'an ontological critic' provided the impetus for the work of Blackmur*, Brooks* and Burke*. Despite a certain crankiness, there is a trenchant insight and a commitment to the significant study of poetry. His own poetry is ironic in tone with a certain wry seriousness in its desire to unite theoretic speculation with 'stubborn and contingent objects'.

VERSE: Poems About God (1919); Chills and Fever (1924); Two Gentlemen in Bonds (1927); Selected Poems (1945); Collected Poems (1963).—CRITICISM: God Without Thunder: An Unorthodox Defense of Orthodoxy (1930); I'll Take My Stand by Twelve Southerners (1930); The World's Body (1938); The Intent of the Critic (ed. D. A. Stauffer, 1941); The Kenyon Critics (1951).

R. Penn Warren, 'J. C. R.: a study in irony' in Virginia Quart. Rev. (Jan. 1935); Y. Winters, In Defense of Reason (1947); 'Homage to J. C. R.' in Sewanee Rev., LVI (1948); Focus Five: Modern American Poetry (ed. B. Rajan, 1950); J. M. Bradbury, The Fugitives: A Critical Account (1958); L. Cowan, The Fugitive Group (1959); J. L. Stewart, J. C. R. (1962); T. H. Parsons, J. C. R. (1969).
G.A.K.

Ransome, ARTHUR (*Leeds 18 I 1884; ∞1909 Ivy Constance Walker, ∞1924 Evgenia Shelepin; †3 VI 1967), English writer, critic and journalist, with personal knowledge of Russia and a love of sailing and fishing. In middle age he turned to writing realistic books for and about young people: the lively and self-reliant characters are involved in adventures which arise naturally in the course of their sailing and camping holidays. These carefully written open-air books—there were 11 in all, from Swallows and Amazons (1930) to Great Northern? (1947)—rank high in their kind: they have been imitated frequently but seldom bettered.

Old Peter's Russian Tales (1916); The Soldier and Death (1920); Rod and Line (1929).—Edgar Allan Poe (1910); Oscar Wilde (1912).
H. B. Shelley, A. R. (1960). W.R.A.

Rao, RAJA (*nr Mysore 1909), Indian novelist. He graduated in English and history (aged 19) from Nizam's College, Hyderabad, went to France to do research under Professor Cazamian but decided to write. He occasionally returned in search of a guru. His work successfully recovers and revitalizes his own tradition, accommodating English language to the expression of an essentially Indian sensibility. His range is the widest of any Indian writer—from village life in Kanthapura (1938), to the international theme in The Serpent and the Rope (1960), and the cosmic significance of the deceptively simple, allegorical The Cat and Shakespeare (1965). He began with short stories in Kannada, some of which he translated in The Cow of the Barricades (1947), wrote also in French and ultimately preferred English. C.D.N.

Raoul de Cambrai: see CHANSONS DE GESTE, text and biblio.

Raoul de Houdenc (*?1180; †?1234), French poet. His important Arthurian romance Méragis de Portlesgue influenced the prose Lancelot and is noteworthy for its mannered style, psychological interest and narrative skill. His didactic Roman des Ailes symbolizes knightly ideals, while his aggressively satirical Songe d'Enfer is the allegory of a pilgrimage. His authorship of the realistic romance Vengeance Raguidel and the homiletic allegory Voie de Paradis is doubtful. Artistic quality makes him the most eminent disciple of Chrétien* de Troyes. A competent allegorist, he is himself a precursor of Guillaume* de Lorris.

Méragis de Portlesgue (ed. M. Friedwagner, 1897); Roman des Ailes and Songe d'Enfer (ed. A. Scheler in Trouvères Belges, II, 1879).

G. Huet, 'Le Lancelot en prose et Méragis de Portlesgue' in Romania, XLI (1912); A. Fourrier, 'R. de H.: est-ce-lui?' in Mélanges Delboulle, II (1964).
M.F.L.

Raoul de Soissons, VICOMTE DE CŒUVRES (*c. 1210; ∞1240 Alix de Champagne, widow of Hugues de Lusignan, King of Cyprus, ∞1246 Comtesse de Hangest; last mention [†?] Tunis 1270), French lyric poet. Much of his life was spent in Crusading (1239–43, 1248–54, 1270). He supported (unsuccessfully) his first wife's pretensions to the Crown of Jerusalem. His 13 extant poems are on conventional lines, with occasional references (e.g. in his jeu-parti with his friend Thibaut* de Navarre) to his gout and corpulence. One poem (Quant voi la glaie meüre), full of vernal imagery, was much admired by contemporaries.

Ed. E. Winkler (1914).—P. Paris in Histoire littéraire de la France, XXIII (1856). F.W.

Rapin, RENÉ (*Tours 1621; †Paris 27 X 1687), French Jesuit, humanist and Latin poet. Wrote against the Jansenists (Evangelium Jansenistarum, 1658; Histoire du Jansénisme, pub. 1861) and composed treatises (in French) on religious subjects. In the dispute on the ANCIENTS AND THE MODERNS, he upheld the authority of Aristotle* and the principle of the imitation of the classics which he practised, as a member of the Paris PLÉIADE (with Santeul*, La Rue, Du* Perrier, Ménage*, Commire* and Petit), in his Eglogae sacrae (1659), Christianizing Theocritus*, and in Hortorum Libri IV, translations of which into French, English and Italian gave the poem a lasting influence on the 'landscape' literature of Europe until the end of the 18th century.

Euvres (3 vols, Amsterdam, 1709–10; Fr. works only); The Whole Critical Works (tr. B. Kennet, 2 vols, 3rd ed. 1731).

J. A. Vissac, De la poésie latine en France au siècle de Louis XIV (1862); H. Gillot, La querelle des anciens et des modernes (1914). P.T.

Rapin de Thoyras, PAUL (*Castres 25 III 1661; †Wesel 16 V 1725), French historian, left France on account of his Huguenot sympathies. He lived in England for some time and finally retired to Wesel where he composed his influential and scholarly history of England.

Histoire de l'Angleterre (13 vols, 1724–36; vols XI and XII by D. Durand and vol. XIII by Dupard; tr. and contin. N. Tindal, 28 vols, 1728–47).

R. de Cazenove, R. T., sa famille, sa vie et ses œuvres (1866). D.H.

Rapisardi, MARIO (*Catania 25 II 1844; †ibid. 4 I 1912), Italian philosopher-poet of prolific but uneven output. He exalts the reformation of religion in La Palingenesi (1868), human reason in Lucifero (1877), nature in Giobbe (1884), socialism in Giustizia (1882), and his philosophy goes from one extreme to another with Byronic exuberance. Only in Poesie religiose (1887) and Poemetti (1885–1907) is spontaneous lyric creation allowed to triumph.

Poemi, liriche e traduzioni (1912); Epistolario (ed. A. Tomaselli, 1922).—Antologia poetica (ed. E. Scuderi, 1968).

C. Pascal, La vita e l'opera poetica di M. R. (1914); A. Tomaselli, Commentario rapisardiano (1932); E. Bevilacqua, Rapisardiana (1932).

N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Rappoport, SOLOMON JUDAH LEIB, known as SHM (*Lwów 1 VI 1790; †Prague 18 X 1867), Galician Hebrew writer. A disciple of N. Krochmal*, Rappoport at an early age identified himself with 'Enlightenment' (Haskalah) and for this reason had to suffer persecution until in 1840 he became rabbi in Prague. In his earlier period he published some original poetry and much translated. In 1827 he published an adapted translation of Racine's* Esther, the first Hebrew drama in Eastern Europe, with an important critical introduction. His fame rests mainly on a series of biographical studies of medieval writers. Most of his writings were published in the periodical Bikkure ha-'Ittim.

A. Kurländer, Biographie S. L. R.s (1878); 'Das Centenarium S. L. R.s' in Oesterreichische Wochenschrift, special no., XXI (1890); B. Wachstein, Die Hebräische Publizistik in Wien, I (1930). C.R.

Rashba: see Adret, SOLOMON.

Rashbam, abbr. of SAMUEL BEN ME'IR (*c. 1085; †Ramerupt nr Troyes c. 1174), French Hebrew religious writer. Grandson and pupil of Rashi*, he composed numerous legal works and wrote a commentary on the Bible. A Latin scholar, he attacked the Vulgate.

Comm. on Canticles and Ecclesiastes (ed. A. Jellinek, 1855); Pentateuch comm. (ed. D. Rosin, 1881).

D. Rosin, S. ben M. als Schrifterklärer (1880). C.R.

Rashbaz: see Duran, SIMEON BEN ZEMAH.

Rashi, abbr. of RABBI SHELOMOH IZHAQI, otherwise SOLOMON BEN ISAAC (*Troyes 1040; †ibid. 1105), French Hebrew poet and religious writer, studied at Worms and Mainz and founded a Talmudic academy at Troyes. He wrote commentaries on the Old Testament and TALMUD. In traditional Jewish circles the Bible was never studied without his commentaries, which have thus exercised immeasurable influence on Hebrew literature, both through their contents and because they determined the way in which Biblical language material is used. The French glosses scattered throughout both commentaries are an important means of studying early French. As a liturgical poet, Rashi shines by his simplicity and depth of feeling. Many responsa (discussions of law cases) by him are preserved and constitute a source for the life of the period.

COMMENTARIES: Pentateuch (1st ed. Reggio di Calabria, the first Hebrew book printed, 5 Feb. 1475); whole O.T. (Venice, 1525); Eng. tr. of Pentateuch comm. (ed. A. M. Silbermann, 5 vols, 1929–34).—Rashi betor paytan (ed. S. Bernstein, 1940); Responsa Rashi (ed. I. Elfenbein, 1943).

M. Liber, R. (Eng. ed. 1906); A. Darmesteter and D. S. Blondheim, Les gloses françaises . . . de Rachi, I (1929); J. Pereira-Mendoza, R. as Philologist (1940); E. I. Rosenthal, R. and the English Bible (1940); I. Avinery, Hekhal R., I–IV (encycl. of R.'s works; 1940–65); A. Marx, Essays in Jewish Biography (1947); R. Levi, Contribution à la lexicographie française selon d'anciens textes d'origine juive (1961); H. Hailperin, R. and the Christian Scholars (1963).
C.R.

Rashid al-Din, FAZLALLAH TABĪB (*Hamadan c. 1247; †18 VII 1318), Persian statesman, historian and scholar. He served the Mongol rulers of Persia and attained an influential position under Uljaitu (1304–16). After Uljaitu's death, however, he was dismissed and finally executed on the charge of having poisoned Uljaitu. His most important work is Jāmi' al-Tavārīkh, a universal history of great value, especially for the Mongol period.

Jāmi' al-Tavārīkh (I, Histoire des Mongols de la Perse . . ., ed. and tr. E. M. Quatremère, Paris, 1836; I, Pt 1, ed. A. K. 'Ali-zadeh, Moscow, 1965; II, ed. E. Blochet, Leiden, 1911; III, ed. A. K. 'Ali-zadeh, with Russ. tr. A. K. Arends, Baku, 1957); Dastān-i Ghazan (ed. K. Jahn, 1940); Histoire universelle de Rachid al-Din . . . (ed. and tr. idem, Leiden, 1951 ff.).

E. Blochet, Introduction à l'Histoire des Mongols de Fadhl Allah Rachid ed-Din (1910); W. Barthold, Turkestan (1928).
E.Y.

Rasmussen, HALFDAN (*Copenhagen 29 I 1915; ∞1943 Ester Nagel), Danish poet. From a working-class milieu, he is committed not to any political ideology but to the freedom of man, a supporter of protest and social conscience. He is also Denmark's leading author of nonsense poetry (Tosserier, 7 vols, 1951–57).

Soldat eller Menneske (1941); Det lukkede Ansigt (1943); Digte under Besættelsen (1945); Korte Skygger (1946); På Knæ for Livet (1948); Gaden (1948); De som har set September (1949); Forventning (1951); Skoven (1954); Torso (1957); Stilheden (1962).—Digte i Udvalg (1953); Tosserier i Udvalg (1960).
E.B.

Raspe, RUDOLF ERICH (*Hanover 1737; †Muckcross 1794), German scholar, Romantic and adventurer, who introduced Percy's* Reliques to Herder*. When living in England and working as a mining engineer he launched Munchausen in literature as a 'type' of fantastic liar.

Tabby in Elysium. A mock poem from the German (1781); Baron Munchausen's Narrative of his marvellous Travels and Campaigns in Russia (1785; with Life, 1895).

R. Halls, R. (1934); J. P. Carswell, The Prospector. Being the Life and Times of R. E. R. (1950).
R.M.H.

Rastell, JOHN (*Coventry c. 1475; †London 1536), English printer and dramatist. Brother-in-law of Sir Thomas More* and thus associated with the beginnings of modern English drama, Rastell and his son printed the work of More, Heywood* and Medwall*. Rastell's own plays show Medwall's influence in their free treatment of MORALITY themes.
G.K.H.

A new interlude of the nature of the four elements (1519); Of gentleness and nobility (c. 1527); Calisto and Melebea (c. 1527).

A. W. Reed, Early Tudor Drama (1926); Pearl Hogrefe, The Sir Thomas More Circle (1959).
G.K.H. (C.B.)

Rastell, WILLIAM (*Coventry 1508; †Louvain 27 VIII 1565), English printer who edited the English works of his uncle Sir Thomas More* with pious fidelity. Son of John Rastell*.

The works of Sir Thomas More written by him in the English tongue (1557).—A. W. Reed, Early Tudor Drama (1926).
G.K.H.

Rather of Liège (*c. 887; †974), Bishop of Verona in 931. He wrote his main (Latin) work, Praeologia, in prison, a book of manifold content with personal touches, criticism of clergy, satire, advice to rulers.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXXXVI (1853); letters ed. F. Weigle in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Die Briefe der deutschen Kaiserzeit, I (1949).
F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Ratichius (Ratke), WOLFGANG (*Wilster 18 X 1571; †27 III 1635), German educationist, noted for his grandiose plan of a uniform method to acquire all sciences, arts and languages, which he laid before the imperial diet in a Memoriale (1612). By its insistence on the importance of instruction in German, it attracted Duke Ludwig of Anhalt-Köthen, who gave him a post in which to try out his educational theories. Ratichius' universalism is allied to that of Comenius*.

Ratichianische Schriften (ed. P. Stötzner, 1892–93).—G. Krause, W. R. im Lichte seiner und der Zeitgenossen Briefe (1872); G. Vogt, Das Leben W. R.s (1876); W. R. der Vorgänger des Comenius (1894); C. Seiler, Das pädagogische System W. R.s (1931); E. Ising, W. R.s Schriften zur dt. Grammatik (2 vols, 1959).
L.W.F.

Ratosh, YONATHAN, pseud. URIEL HALPERIN, SHALAH (*Russia 1908), Hebrew poet; went to Palestine at an early age. He was an active member of the Revisionist party, but later left it and became the ideologist of the group called the Canaanites. He saw it necessary to break with Jewish traditional values and envisaged the 'Hebrews' as an integral part of the larger Semitic world. He therefore sought a new idiom to express his approach and based his poetic style on archaic forms of words and structure. The 'Canaanite cult' was also reflected in the eroticism of his poetry. His verse is often sensuous and musically rich in metre.

Khipah Shehorah (1941); Yuhmad (1952).

L.Y.

Rattermann, HEINRICH ARMIN (*Ankum, Hanover 14 X 1832; ∞1856 Katherine Ruff, ∞1857 Katherine Dorothy Müller; †Cincinnati, Ohio 6 I 1923), minor German-American poet. As editor of Der deutsche Pionier (11 vols, 1874-85) and Deutsch-amerikanisches Magazin (1 vol., 1886-87), he pioneered historical investigations of German-American culture. His poems are in the tradition of German classicism; some treat original themes from American nature.

Gesammelte ausgewählte Werke (12 of 16 vols planned, 1906-14).

M. E. Spanheimer, H. A. R. (1937). E.R.

Rattigan, TERENCE MERVYN (*London 10 VI 1911), English playwright. His early comedy, French Without Tears (1936), ingenious, amusing, plausible, had a great success. It was followed by a series of interesting comedies. He showed in The Winslow Boy (1946) that he could make a difficult problem yield a highly dramatic situation. Ross (1960) is a play about Lawrence* of Arabia.

After the Dance (1939); Follow My Leader (1940); Flare Path (1942); While the Sun Shines (1943); Love in Idleness (1944); The Browning Version (1948); The Deep Blue Sea (1952); The Sleeping Prince (1953); Separate Tables (1954).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Rau, SEBALDUS FULCO JOHANNES (*Utrecht 16 X 1765; †Leiden 1 XII 1807), Dutch theologian and poet, minister in the Refugees' Protestant Church, contributor to Bellamy's* Proeven voor het verstand, de smaak en het hart (1784) in which appears the romance Ewald en Elize. In 1787 he became Professor at Leiden.

J.W.W.

Rau, SHANTHA RAMA: see Rama Rau, SHANTHA.

Rauch, MEN, pseud. MEN FÜM, ZACLIN (*Scul 1882; †ibid. 1958), Romansch writer, journalist and poet. By profession an engineer, he turned to politics and journalism, founding the Gazetta Ladina, with a literary supplement, Il Tramagliunz, in 1922 and merging it in 1940 with the Fögl d'Engiadina to form the Fögl Ladin. He became noted for his lyrical, often humorous poetry, his books (1935, 1951) on prominent men in the Engadine and surrounding areas, for his short stories and latterly for his share in founding the cabaret La panaglia, where he himself performed.

VERSE: L'Alba e la S-charbunada (1932); Il battaporta (1944); Chanzuns umoristicas rumant-

schas (1925, 1950); Il bal dal schaiver nair (1953).—SHORT STORIES: Il nar da Falun (1923); In bocca d'luf (1941); Fanzögnas da Calögnas (1955).—PLAYS: La chanzun da la libertà (with Men Gaudenz; 1952); Il premi de la vita (with idem; 1961).

R.R.B.

Raupach, ERNST BENJAMIN SALOMON (*Straupitz 21 V 1784; †Berlin 18 III 1852), German playwright. He spent 1804-22 in Russia and settled in Berlin 1823. With his 117 plays he rivalled Kotzebue* in production and popularity and was pilloried by Immermann* and Platen* with spite and envy. Of his largely derivative work his comedies had most individuality. Der Müller und sein Kind (1835), an All Souls play, is still occasionally acted.

Die Leibeigenen (1826; Eng. tr. R. Talbot, 1828); Der Nibelungenhort (1834; Eng. tr. D. de Pontes, 1847).—Dramatische Werke komischer Gattung (4 vols, 1829-35), . . . ernster Gattung (16 vols, 1835-43).

P. Raupach, E. R. (1853); C. Bauer, R. als Lustspieldichter (diss. Breslau, 1913).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Ravenscroft, EDWARD (*c. 1650; †c. 1700), English dramatist. He is usually remembered because he attacked Dryden*, and rewrote Shakespeare*. Even in his age he was a notable plagiarist, Molière* being a principal source. The farce he reduces his originals to is, however, fluent and effective farce, and was very popular in its day.

G.K.H.

The Citizen turn'd gentleman (1672); Scaramouch a philosopher. Harlequin a schoolboy, bravo, merchant and magician. A comedy after the Italian manner (1677); The London Cuckolds (1682); Titus Andronicus, or the Rape of Lavinia (1687).

Allardyce Nicoll, History of Restoration Drama (1928); L. Hughes, A Century of English Farce (1956); James Sutherland, English Literature of the Late 17th Century (1969).

G.K.H. (C.B.)

Ravikovitz, DALIA (*Ramat Gan 1936), Hebrew poet and writer. She published her first poems when aged 18 and still doing army service. Through its concern with personality, sensuality and its use of romantic imagery her poetry has exerted an enormous influence on the themes and style of young poetry in Israel. Besides her verse, she has also written short stories and children's stories.

VERSE: Ahavat Tapuah Hazahav (1959); Horef Kasheh (1964); Mesibah Mishpahtit (children's poems; 1968); Ha-Sefer Ha-Shelishi (1970).

L.Y.

Ravitch, MEILECH (*Radimno, Galicia 1893), Yiddish poet and essayist. He began writing in 1909, served in the Austrian army during the First World War, then lived in Vienna and, in the interwar years, in Warsaw; travelled widely and finally settled in Canada, after some years in Israel. In his poetry he expresses the belief in the 'universal mission of man and the Jew's mission in mankind', basing his philosophy on Spinoza* to whom he devoted his first book of verse (Vienna, 1921).

Spinoza (1921); Nakete lieder (1921); Bloot oif der fon (social drama; 1929); Kontinentn un Okeanen (1937); Main leksikon (profiles; 3 vols, 1945, 1947, 1958); Dos maase bukh fun main leben (autobiog.: 1893–1908, Buenos Aires, 1962; 1908–21, ibid., 1964); Ikker shukhakhti (poems, 1954–69; 1969). J.S.

Ray, JEAN, pseud. of RAYMOND-JEAN-MARIE DE KREMER (*Ghent 8 VII 1887; ∞ Nina Balta, pseud. of Virginie Bal; †ibid. 17 IX 1964), Belgian writer, journalist and unquestioned master of horror tales and fantastic stories, told in a cold, measured style with precise, incisive details and restrained dialogue. He wrote also in Dutch under the name of JOHN FLANDERS. His early works appeared in American reviews (tr. R. T. House).

SHORT STORIES: Les contes du Whisky (1925); Le grand nocturne (1942); Les derniers contes de Canterbury (1944); Le carrousel aux maléfices (1964).—NOVELS: Malpertuis (1943); La cité de l'indiscible peur (1943).—Œuvres complètes (4 vols, 1964). J.C.D.

Ray, JOHN (*Black Notley, Braintree 29 XI 1627; ∞1673 Margaret Oakeley; †ibid. 17 I 1705), English naturalist, who while on tours collecting material for a new classification of plants and animals, also recorded proverbs and local words. These collections are now valued more than his once popular Wisdom of God and Discourses.

R.M.H.

Collection of English Proverbs (1670; ed. H. G. Bohn, 1889); Collection of English Words not generally used (1674); Wisdom of God manifested in the Works of the Creation (1691); Miscellaneous Discourses concerning the Dissolution and Changes of the World (1692); Catalogus Plantarum Angliae (1670); Historia Plantarum (3 vols, 1686, 1688, 1704).

A. C. Seward, J. R. A Biographical Sketch (1937); C. E. Raven, J. R. Naturalist (1942); G. L. Keynes, J. R. A Bibliography (1951).

R.M.H. (A.N.W.)

Raychev, GEORGI (*Toprak Hissar 7 XII 1882; †Sofia 18 II 1947), Bulgarian story-writer. In his many stories he analyses human reactions to pressures of Bulgarian urban and rural life. His translations of Krylov's* fables and his romantic folk drama Elenovo tsarstvo illustrate his skill at verse.

Vesseli razkazi (1918); Lyubov v poletu (1918); Razkazi (1923); Pessen na gorata (1928); Legenda

za parite (1931); Gospodinut s momicheto (novel; 1937); Zlatniyat klyuch (1942).—Sel. works (ed. S. Sultanov, 2 vols, 1957). V.P.

Raymond, MARCEL (*Geneva 20 XII 1897), critic and Professor of French literature at the University of Geneva (1936–62). In his L'Influence de Ronsard sur la poésie française 1550–1585 (1927) and Baroque et Renaissance poétique (1955) he was the first to apply the artistic terms 'Baroque' and 'mannerist' to shed light upon 16th- and 17th-century literature. His study of modern poetry, De Baudelaire au Surréalisme (1933; Eng. tr. B. Karpel, 1957), has become a standard work of literary history. In his criticism he identifies with his object, his intuition counterbalanced by a rigorous analysis of form.

ESSAYS: Génies de France (1942); Le sens de la qualité (1948); Vérité et poésie (1964); Être et dire (1970).—CRITICISM: Jean-Jacques Rousseau. La quête de soi et la reverie (1962); Fénelon (1962); Senancour, Sensations et révélations (1965).—Le sel et la cendre (autobiog.; 1970). M.G.

Raynal, PAUL (*Narbonne 25 VII 1885; †Paris 19 VIII 1971), French dramatist. In his treatment of the struggle between love and friendship, Raynal has been compared to Corneille*, but most of his determinedly serious plays are marred by verbosity—even his much-discussed Tombeau sous l'Arc de Triomphe (1924; The Unknown Warrior, tr. C. Lewis, 1928)—though in Le matériel humain (wr. 1935; prod. 1948) he has achieved a finely balanced example of modern tragedy.

Le maître de son cœur (wr. 1909; prod. 1920); Au soleil de l'instinct (1932); La Francerie (1933); Napoléon Unique (1937); A souffert sous Ponce-Pilate (1939).

P. Brisson, Le théâtre des années folles (1943); R. Lalou, Le théâtre en France depuis 1900 (1951); G. Pillement, Anthologie du théâtre français contemporain, III (1948). T.W.

Raynov, NIKOLAY (*Kessarevo II 1889; †Sofia 2 V 1954), Bulgarian poet and art historian. His education combined art school with seminary—he remained grateful to the latter for introducing him to 'the quest beyond man'. His travels in the Orient often inspired his settings and fed his fascination with phantasy in lore, legend and apocrypha. He applied his imaginative Symbolist skill to his prose as well as to his verse, contributing to Bulgarian literature a decorative style of much beauty. An aesthete of great perception, he also became concerned with problems of the artist's participation in society. His enormous literary output includes a 12-volume history of world art and an evaluation of Bulgarian literature with examples, Vechnoto v nashata literatura (8 vols, 1941), an unusual combined literary history and anthology.

Bogomilski legendi (1912); Videnia iz drevna Bulgaria (1918); Kniga za tsarete and Ochite na Arabia (1918); Mejdu pustinyata i jivota (1919); Kniga na zagadkite (1921); Korabut na bezsmurnite (1925); Velikiyat tsar (1929); Schupeni stukla and Surdechen ogun (1939); Otdavna, mnogo otdavna (1939); Kruvojadni (1947).—Sel. works (1957).

Yubileen list N. R. (1939); P. Tiholov, N. R.—jivot, tvorchestvo, anekdoti (1948). V.P.

AL-RĀZĪ (Latinized RHAZES), ABŪ BAKR MUḤAMMAD IBN ZAKARĪYA (*al-Rayy nr Tehran 865; †925), physician, alchemist and philosopher, not to be confused with his contemporary and opponent ABŪ ḤATĪM AL-RĀZĪ, the Ismaʿīlī missionary, nor with the 12th-century theologian, FAKHR AL-DĪN AL-RĀZĪ. Little is known of the life of this Arab author of Persian nationality to whom 140 works are ascribed, many spurious. Translated into Latin in medieval times, his alchemical works were widely read. His medical treatise distinguishes between smallpox and measles for the first time in the history of medicine. His philosophical writings were unorthodox and quite independent of the Aristotelian–Neo-Platonic syncretism of the rest of Islamic philosophy, which considered itself an interpretation of the religious truths of the Koran. al-Rāzī rejected any reconciliation of philosophy with theology and denied the validity of prophets and the authenticity of religious texts. He held that there were five principles—the Creator, Soul, Matter, Time and Space. His physical system was atomistic—more akin to the atomism of Democritus* than to that of the Kalām.

Al Hawi (20 vols, Hyderabad, 1955–67; tr. Liber dictus Elhavi, Brescia, 1486); Al Mansuri (Trois traités d'anatomie arabes, ed. and tr. P. de Koning, Leiden, 1903; tr. Liber ad Almansorem, 10 vols, Milan, 1481); al Sirat al Falsafiyya (The Philosopher's Way of Life, ed. and tr. P. Kraus, Orientalia, new ser., IV, 1935); Rasā'il li Abi Bakr al Rāzī (Treatises by Abū Bakr al-Rāzī, ed. P. Kraus, Cairo, 1939); al-Tibb al-Rūhānī (The Spiritual Physic of Rhazes, tr. A. J. Arberry, Wisdom of the East Series, 1950).

G. Sarton, Introduction to the History of Science, I (1927); M. Meyerhof, 'The philosophy of the physician al R.' in Islamic Culture, XV (1941); J. Ruska, 'Die Alchemie ar R.' in Islam, XXII (1935). P.K.H. (H.V.B.B.)

Razón Feita de Amor, LA (early 13th century). This lyric is the earliest extant written in Castilian. The anonymous poet describes autobiographically and with great delicacy the meeting of two lovers in a locus amoenus. This narrative merges into a burlesque debate between water and wine. The meaning of the poem is still disputed; Provençal influence is strong.

Ed. R. Menéndez Pidal in Rev. Hispanique, XIII (1905); G. H. London in Romance Philol., XIX (1965–66).—L. Spitzer, 'Razón de amor' in Romania, LXXI (1950); M. di Pinto, Due contrasti d'amore nella Spagna medievale (Pisa, 1959); E. de Rivas, Figuras y estrellas de las cosas (1969).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Raztvetnikov, ASSEN (*Draganovo 2 II 1897; †Moscow 30 VIII 1951), Bulgarian poet. He wrote for left-wing journals till 1924, then contributed his imaginative and pessimistically introspective verse to Zlatorog (Vassilev*). He refused to write 'political verse' after the Second World War and was sent to Moscow for 're-education' and medical treatment which he did not survive.

Jertveni kladi (1924); Dvoynik (1926); Planinski vecheri (1926); Podvigut (play; 1946).—Sel. poems (1952). V.P.

Rázus, MARTIN (*Vrbic 18 X 1888; †Brezno 8 VIII 1937), Slovak poet and novelist. His poems on national themes are traditional in form, frequently moving and sincere in content and show a considerable mastery of language. Of his novels the realistic portrayal of a post-war Slovak village (Svety, 4 vols, 1929) is particularly noteworthy.

VERSE: To je vojna (1919); Hoj zem drahá (1919); Kameň na medzi (1925); Stretnutie (1937).—Maroško (novel; 1932). R.A.

Read, SIR HERBERT (*Kirbymoorside 4 XII 1893; ∞1919 Evelyn Roff, ∞Margaret Ludwig; †12 VI 1968), English poet and art critic. After active service in the First World War he became a versatile critic, writing confidently on art, literature, philosophy, politics and education.

Collected Poems (1966).—English Prose Style (1928); In Defence of Shelley (1936); The True Voice of Feeling (1953); Poetry and Experience (1967).—The Meaning of Art (1931); Art Now (1933; 5th ed. 1968); Art and Industry (1934); Education Through Art (1943); Icon and Idea (1955); A Concise History of Modern Painting (1959); To Hell With Culture, and Other Essays on Art and Society (1963); The Origins of Form in Art (1965); The Cult of Sincerity (1968).—The Green Child (novel; 1935).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Annals of Innocence and Experience (1946); The Contrary Experience (1963).

H. Treece, H. R. (1944); F. Berry, H. R. (1953); H. R.: A Memorial Symposium (ed. R. Skelton, 1970). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Reade, CHARLES (*Ipsden 8 VI 1814; †London 11 IV 1884), English dramatist and novelist. Vice-President of Magdalen, in 1843 he was called to the Bar. But though he kept his Fellowship he spent most of his time in London and his interests were—or became—theatrical rather than academic. Reade could plan a dramatic situation and write fluent and witty dialogue but it is for his novels rather than his plays that he is remembered—for his massive historical novel, The Cloister and the Hearth: A Tale of the Middle Ages (4 vols, 1861), and his well-documented didactic tales.

It is Never Too Late To Mend: A Matter of Fact Romance (3 vols, 1856); Hard Cash: A Matter of Fact Romance (3 vols, 1863); A Woman Hater (3 vols, 1877).—The Uniform Library Ed. (17 vols, 1895).

C. L. and C. Reade, C. R.: Dramatist, Novelist, Journalist. A Memoir compiled chiefly from his Literary Remains (2 vols, 1887); W. C. Phillips, R. and Collins: Sensation Novelists (1919); M. Elwin, C. R. A Biography (1931); W. Burns, C. R. (1961). B.H. (M.A.)

Reael, LAURENS (*1583; †Amsterdam 1637), Dutch statesman and writer, Vice-Admiral and Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies (1616–19). Keenly interested in literature but without literary ambition, he rarely published his writings. With Joost Baeck and Vossius* he was Hooft's* most intimate friend (see MUIDERKRING). In Minneplicht en kuysheyts-Kamp he contributed an Aubade (1626); on the occasion of Hooft's second marriage he wrote Bruilofsdicht (1627); the publisher Blaeu included a poem by him in Vondel's* Verovering van Grol.

J. Scheltema, Geschied- en letterkundig Mengelwerk, II (1817); P. Leendertz, Uit den Muiderkring (1935); L. C. Michels, 'Een epos van R.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LIII (1960).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Reael, LAURENS JACOBSZ (*Amsterdam 1536; ∞Geerte Pietersd. [†1600]; †ibid. 7 IV 1601), Dutch poet in the REDERIJER tradition (motto: 'Liefde vermag 't al'), from 1578 holder of various municipal posts. From 1567 to 1578 he was exiled because of his adherence to the Reformation, continuing his ecclesiastical and political activities from Emden, Danzig and elsewhere. Reael was a member of the Chamber of Rhetoric De EGBELANTIER. His lyrical poetry remains in MS (at the University Library at Ghent), bearing the title: 'Refereynen, Baladens, Epitafien, Historialen en andere Liedekens', running from 1569 until 1601. In addition he wrote a Catechismus offte Kinderlere (1571) and valuable memoirs only fragments of which are extant.

Some songs ed. J. C. Breen in Archief v. Nederl. Kerkgesch., VI (1897; also Catechismus); some in E. T. Kuiper and P. Leendertz, Het Geuzenliedboek (1924–25); memoirs ed. J. C. Breen in Bijdragen en Med. v. h. hist. Genootschap te Utrecht, XVII (1896).

J. C. Breen in Nieuw Nederl. Biographisch Woordenboek, IV (1918; with biblio.); W. A. P. Smit, Dichters van de Reformatie (1939).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Reaney, JAMES (*Stratford, Ontario 1 IX 1926; ∞1951 Colleen Thibadeau), Canadian writer of poetry and verse plays and Professor of English at the University of Western Ontario. He is noted for his fertile, often child-like imagination and skill in prosody.

Red Heart (1949); Suit of Nettles (1958); Killdeer and Other Plays (1962); Twelve Letters to a Small Town (1962); Dance of Death at London, Ontario (1963).

A. A. Lee, J. R. (Twayne, 1968). R.Su.

Rebhuhn, PAUL (*Waidhofen an der Ybbs c 1500; †Ölsnitz 1546), German dramatist. Protestant parson, studied in Wittenberg under Luther* and Melancthon*, wrote a notable play Susanna (1536), a Protestant polemical drama well constructed, of poetic merit and remarkable for its ambitious versification and classical tendencies. His Hochzeit zu Cana (1538) is less successful.

Susanna (ed J. Tittmann in Schauspiele, I, 1868; with Hochzeit zu Cana in Dramen, ed. H. Palm, 1859)—R. Pilger, Die Dramatisierungen der Susanna im 16. Jh. (1879). D.G.D.

Rebolledo, COUNT BERNARDINO DE (*León 1597; †Madrid 1676), Spanish poet. He was a soldier and for 14 years Spanish ambassador in Denmark. His poetry is intellectual and rather arid: verse paraphrases of the Psalms, Job and Lamentations, a poetical history of Denmark, a verse treatise on war and politics and minor poems. His works were published in Cologne and Antwerp.

Obras (Madrid, 3 vols, 1778); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XVI, XXXV, XLII. E.M.W.

Rebora, CLEMENTE (*Milan 6 I 1885; †Stresa 1 XI 1957), Italian poet. His first essays and poems were published in La Voce, but his Frammenti lirici (1913) passed almost unnoticed. The spiritual unease apparent in these poems and in the Canti anonimi (1922) led to his conversion to Catholicism and ordination as a priest. Curriculum vitae (1955) is a kind of autobiography in verse, and the Canti dell'infermità (1956) the expression of an intense mysticism.

Le poesie 1913–1957 (1957).

M. Marchione, L'immagine tesa. La vita e l'opera di C. R. (1960). B.M.

Rebreanu, LIVIU (*Tîrlișiu 1885; †Valea Mare 1944), Rumanian novelist. The son of a Transylvanian village schoolmaster, he was educated partly in Hungary and served for over a year in the Austro-Hungarian army before migrating to the Rumanian Kingdom. During the German occupation of Bucharest in the First World War he suffered considerable hardship. His first novel Ion (1920; Eng. tr. 1961) is a story of peasant ruthlessness in the pursuit of land. Pădurea spinuzașilor

(The Forest of the Hanged, tr. A. V. Wise, 1930), based on the fate of his brother Emil, hanged in 1917 for attempted desertion from the Austro-Hungarian army, followed in 1922. The subject of Răscoala (1932; Uprising, tr. P. Grandjean and S. Hartauer, 1964) is the peasant uprising of 1907. His novels, which show a consistently high standard of workmanship, are among the best in Rumanian literature. Rebreanu excels in the representation of village life and in the handling of crowd scenes. His work is marred by a certain humourlessness.

Nușele și schișe (1921); Cuibul visurilor (stories; 1927); Gorila (novel; 1938). Nușele (1957).

Fanny L. R., Cu soțul meu (1963); A. Piru, L. R. (Rum. and Eng. ed.; 1965); L. Raicu, L. R. (1967). F.J.B.

Recke, ERNST FREDERICK WILHELM VON DER (*Copenhagen 14 VIII 1848; ∞1886 Anna Petrea Frederikke Reinhard; †Aalsgaard 2 XII 1933), Danish poet, playwright and literary scholar. His youthful lyrical drama Bertran de Born (1872) had a great success, but his other romantic plays were little appreciated in a realistic age. Most of his lyrics are imitations of late Romanticism.

PLAYS: Kong Liuvigild og hans Sønner (1878); Archilochos (1878); Knud og Magnus (1881); Fru Jeanna (1891); Hertuginde af Burgund (1891); Dronning Eigra (1900); Det lukkede Land (1901); Keiser Michael (1908); Kong Ortni (1910); Spoletos Blomst (1913).—VERSE: Lyriske Digte (1876); Smaadigte (1883); Spredte Blomster (1885); Kantate (1888); Gamle og nye Digte til Een (1889); Blandede Digte (1890); Nye Digte (1900); Digte (1911); Til Alda (1931).

Johannes Stein, E. von der R. (1934). E.B.

Redentin Easter Play, named after a monastery near Wismar in Mecklenburg, performed about 1465, probably in Wismar. The play—one of the best specimens of medieval drama—is not a complete cycle but deals mainly with the episode of the knights by the sepulchre and ends with a devils' play; it is therefore actually a drama 'on the adversaries of Christ'. It is distinguished by vivid humour and individual characterization; the sinners who are dragged down to hell are gildsmen, but Satan, wailing, recoils from the good priest.

Ed. C. Schröder (1893); R. Froning, Das Drama des Mittelalters (in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XIV, 1892); W. Krogmann (1937; with complete biblio.); Eng. tr. with good intro. A. E. Zucker (New York, 1941).

G. Rosenhagen, 'Das Redentiner Osterspiel im Zusammenhang mit dem geistlichen Schauspiel seiner Zeit' in Niederdt. Jahrb., LI (1926); H. Rosenfeld, 'Das Redentiner Osterspiel—ein Lübecker Osterspiel' in Paul und Braunes Beiträge, LXXIV (1952); L. Humburg, Die Stellung des Redentiner Osterspiels in der Tradition des mittelalterlichen geistlichen Schauspiels (1966); H. Linke, 'Die Teufelszenen des Redentiner Osterspiels' in Niederdt. Jahrb., XC (1967). G.C.

Redford, JOHN (*c. 1486; †1547), English musician, poet and dramatist, who was Master of the Children at St Paul's. His interlude Wit and Science shows a mellow attitude to teaching and children, which expresses itself in a neat allegory with sound dramatic qualities.

Wyt and Science (ed. A. Brown, Malone Soc., 1951).

A. Brown, 'The play of Wit and Science' in Philol. Quart., XXVIII (1949); J. W. Velz and C. P. Daw, 'Tradition and originality in Wit and Science' in Stud. in Philol., LXV (1968).

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Redi, FRANCESCO (*Arezzo 18 II 1626; †Pisa 1 III 1698), Italian poet, philologist and scientist. Redi applied himself with equal success to the practice of medicine, to scientific research (his brilliant experiments laid the foundations of modern biology), to philologic studies and to University teaching of Tuscan language. His letters and scientific works are stimulating and amusing.

One poem gave Redi greater fame than all his other achievements—a dithyramb, in which Bacchus comes to Tuscany to taste of its wines and to praise them in terms inversely proportional to his own sobriety. Variety of rhythms, verses, rhymes and effects fill this poem with infectious gaiety and vitality.

Osservazioni intorno alle vipere (1664; tr. Observations about Vipers, 1673); Esperienze intorno alla generazione degli insetti (1668; Experiments on the Generation of Insects, tr. M. Bigelow, Chicago, 1909); Osservazioni intorno agli animali viventi (1684); Consulti medici (1726–29; ed. C. Livi, 1863); Bacco in Toscana (1685; Bacchus in Tuscany, tr. L. Hunt, London, 1825).—Opere (7 vols, 1712–30); Poesie (1883); Opuscoli di Storia Naturale (ed. C. Livi, 1858).

G. Imbert, Il 'Bacco in Toscana' di F. R. e la poesia ditterambica (1890) and F. R.: l'uomo (1925); E. Micheli-Pellegrini, F. R. letterato e poeta (1911); U. Viviani, Vita e opere di F. R. (1924); C. A. Madrignani, 'La poetica di F. R.' in Belfagor, XV (1960) and 'Il metodo scientifico di F. R.' in Rassegna della lett. ital., LXV (1961). U.L.

Reed, ISAAC (*London 1 I 1742; †ibid. 5 I 1807), English commentator and editor whose 'first variorum' edition of Shakespeare* completed the work of Johnson* and Steevens*. He amassed valuable biographical material.

Biographia Dramatica (2 vols, 1782).—EDITED: Historical Memoirs of Dr Dodd (1777); Dr Dodd's Thoughts in Prison (1777); Dodsley's Old Plays

(1780); Shakespeare (21 vols, 1803).—I. R. Diaries 1762–1804 (ed. C. E. Jones, 1946).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Reed, TALBOT BAINES (*London 3 IV 1852; ∞1876 Elizabeth Jane Greer; †London 28 XI 1893), English writer of stories for boys, which first appeared in the Boy's Own Paper and were subsequently republished. He also wrote A History of the Old English Letter Foundries (1887) and in 1892 co-operated in launching the Bibliographical Society.

The Adventures of a Three-Guinea Watch (1880); The Fifth Form at St Dominic's (1881); The Master of the Shell (1887); The Cock-house at Fellsgarth (1891).
W.R.A.

Reehany (AL-RAIḤĀNĪ), AMĪN (*Frēke, Lebanon 1876; †13 IX 1940), Syrian-American Arab essayist, novelist and traveller. Born of Maronite parents, he emigrated to the U.S.A. in 1888. He had no school education and little interest in Arabic, but discovered his vocation when reading an English book on Muḥammad. In 1906 he returned to the Lebanon and became a Muslim in 1923. He wrote both in English and Arabic and was a past-master in the form of literature most beloved by the Syrian-Americans, 'poetry in prose'. He advocated Westernization and religious tolerance, and became one of the chief propagandists of Arab national revival.
C.R.

ENGLISH WORKS: Makers of Modern Arabia (1928); Ibn Sa'oud of Arabia (1928); Around the Coasts of Arabia (1930); Arabian Peak and Desert (1930).—A Chant of Mystics and Other Poems (tr. of Abū 'l-'Alā' al-Ma'arri; 1921).—NOVELS: Khārij al-ḥarīm (1915); Khālīd (1911); Zanbaqat al-ghaur (1917).—ESSAYS: Ar-Raiḥāniyyāt (3 vols, 1910–23); At-Taṭarruf wa'l-islāḥ (1929); An-tumu 'l-shu'arā (1933).

I. Krachkovsky, 'Die Literatur der arabischen Emigranten in Amerika' in Le monde oriental, XXI (1927); S. Al-Kayyālī, A. R. (1960).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Reenberg, TØGER CLAUSEN (*Viborg 10 X 1656; ∞1685 Magdalene Broberg; †Ristrup 24 VI 1742), Danish poet. He is remembered for his literary satires, for his amusing occasional pieces and rhymed letters, and for his main work, Ars poetica (c. 1701).

Poetiske Skrifter (ed. T. R. Teilmann and B. W. Luxdorph, 2 vols, 1769).
E.B.

Reeve, CLARA (*Ipswich 1729; †ibid. 3 XII 1807), English novelist in the Otranto tradition, popular in her day and influencing Mrs Radcliffe*, but dubbed 'tedious and insipid' by Walpole* for her greater adherence to probability.
R.M.H.

The Champion of Virtue, a Gothic Story (1777);

repr. as The Old English Baron, 1778; The Two Mentors (2 vols, 1783); The School for Widows (3 vols, 1791); The Progress of Romance (an account of contemporary fiction; 1785).

Sir Walter Scott, Memoir to The Old English Baron (1823); J. M. S. Tompkins, The Popular Novel, 1770–1800 (1932).
R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Reeve, HENRY (*Norwich 9 IX 1813; ∞1841 Hope Richardson; †Foxholes, Hants 21 X 1895), English man of letters.

Greville's Memoirs (ed. 1874–87).—Letters of Charles Greville and H. R. (1924).

Sir J. K. Laughton, Life and Correspondence (2 vols, 1898).
R.M.H.

Reeves, WILLIAM PEMBER (*Lyttleton, Canterbury 10 II 1857; †London 15 V 1932), New Zealand poet and essayist. Entered the House of Representatives (1887) after farming, law and journalism; member of the Cabinet (1891–96); Agent-General and High Commissioner in London, and Director, London School of Economics (1908–19).

Colonial Couplets (with G. P. Williams; 1889); In Double Harness (with idem; 1891); New Zealand and Other Poems (1898); The Passing of the Forest and Other Verse (1925).—HISTORICO-POLITICAL: The Long White Cloud (1898); State Experiments in Australia and New Zealand (1902).

Keith Sinclair, W. P. R., New Zealand Fabian (1965).
K.Sm.

Refik Halid Karay (*Istanbul 15 III 1888; †ibid. 8 VII 1965), Turkish author. Confined to Anatolia by the Union and Progress Party for his political satires, he wrote there his best book, Memleket Hikâyeleri (1910, 1940; Contes turcs, tr. Belkis Tavak, n.d.). Later he was exiled, because of his opposition to the nationalist movement, until 1938. His short stories have an unusual power of description and characterization, though lacking in human warmth. His sentimental and sensuous novels, weak in structure, are less successful experiments. He is at his best in humorous and satirical essays.

ESSAYS: Kirpinin Dedikleri (1911); Sakın Aldanma, İnanma, Kanma (1919); Ago Paşanın hatıratı (1922); Ay Peşinde (1920); Guguklu Saat (1920); Tanrıdıklarım (1920); Delî (incl. his only play; 1939); Bir İçim Su (1939); Bir Avuç Saçma (1939); İlk Adım (1942); Tanrıya Şikâyet (1944); Makiyaflı Kadın (1942); Üç Nesil Üç Hayat (1943).—Gurbet Hikâyeleri (short stories; 1940).—NOVELS: İstanbulun İç Yüzü (1920; new ed., İstanbul Bir Yüzü, 1939); Yezidin Kızı (1939); Çete (1940); Sürgün (1941); Anahtar (1947); Bu bizim hayatımız (1950); Nilgün (3 vols, 1950–60); Diş Örümecek (1953); Ter altında dünya var (1953); Bugünün saraylısı (1953); İki bin yılın sevgilisi (1954); İki cismli kadın (1955); Kadınlar tekkesi

(1955); Karlı dağdaki ateş (1956); Dört yapraklı yonca (1957).

O. Spies, Türkische Erzähler der Gegenwart (1927), Die Türkische Prosaliteratur der Gegenwart (1943) and Erzähler aus aller Welt, I (1947); E. Saussey, Prosateurs turcs contemporains (1935); Hikmet Münir Ebcı, Kendi yazıları ile R. H. (1943). F.İ.

Regelson, AVRAHAM (*Halusk, Byelorussia 1896), Hebrew poet and essayist. Influenced by classical Greek poetry and English Romanticism, his style and vocabulary are a blend of Biblical puritanism and modern Hebrew.

Cain and Abel (poem; 1933); Talit Malei Alim (coll. essays; New York, 1942); Massah Habubot le-Eretz Israel (children's story; 1935). S.A.

Reggio, ISAAC SAMUEL (*Gorizia 19 VIII 1784; †ibid. 29 VIII 1855), Hebrew-Italian scholar and philosopher. Being by marriage of independent means, he succeeded his father as unpaid rabbi of Gorizia. He was a prolific writer contributing to Hebrew periodicals, producing many important books and translating the Torah and other parts of the Old Testament into Italian. His chief work is Ha-Torah ve-ha-Filosofia (Vienna, 1827), an attempt to harmonize religion with science. He founded the rabbinical college at Padua.

Maamar Torah min Hashamayim (Vienna, 1818); Iggerot Yashar (2 vols, Vienna, 1834-36); Maskeret Yashar (autobiog.; 1849). S.A.

Reginald of Canterbury (*Faye-la-Vineuse c. 1030/50; †after 1109), a Benedictine monk of St Augustine's, Canterbury, was a friend of Gilbert Crispin, Hildebert* of Le Mans and Lambert of St Bertin. In addition to prayers and epigrams he wrote a lengthy poem on the life of St Malchus, the Syrian hermit.

Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets, II (ed. T. Wright, 1872); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, I (1907); Vita Sancti Malchi (ed. L. R. Lind, 1942).—F. Liebermann, 'R. von C.' in Neues Archiv., XIII (1888). R.R.R.

Reginald of Durham (fl. 1170), monk of Durham, wrote lives of St Godric, the hermit of Finchale whom he visited for the purpose, St Cuthbert and St Oswald.

Libellus de vita et miraculis S. Godrici (ed. J. Stevenson, 1847); Libellus de admirandis Beati Cuthberti virtutibus (ed. J. Raine, 1835); Life of St Oswald (part ed. T. Arnold in Symeonis Dunelm. opera, I, 1882). F.J.E.R.

Régio, JOSÉ, pseud. of JOSÉ MARIA DOS REIS PEREIRA (*Vila do Conde 1901), Portuguese poet, playwright and novelist; founder and co-editor of the literary review Presença (1927-40). His lyrics reflect vague religious preoccupations and a sense of frustration, of the futility of life, themes which pass over into Régio's fiction.

VERSE: Poesias de Deus e do Diabo (1925); Biografia (1929); As Encruzilhadas de Deus (1936); Fado (1941); Mas Deus é grande (1945).—PLAYS: Benilde ou a Virgem Mãe (1947); El-Rei Sebastião (1949); A salvação do mundo (1954); Três peças em um acto (1957); Filho do homem (1961).—FICTION: Jogo da Cabra cega (1934); O príncipe com orelhas de burro (1942); A velha casa (5 vols, 1945-66); Histórias de mulheres (1946).

G. Castro, Mário de Sá Carneiro, Miguel Torga, J. R. (1949); E. Lisboa, J. R. (1957); O. Lopes, Cinco personalidades literárias (1961). T.P.W.

Regnard, JEAN FRANÇOIS (~8 II 1655; †Château de Grillon, Normandy 4 IX 1709), French dramatist. Of prosperous middle-class origin, Regnard had the means to travel widely. Returning by sea from Italy, he was captured by Algerian pirates (1678), an adventure which he romanticized in his novel La Provençale (ed. E. Pilon, 1920). In 1683 he bought the sinecure post of trésorier du roi and settled in Paris (later, on his newly-acquired estate in Normandy) to write comedies: first for the Italian players in Paris, then for the Comédie Française. His gift for social observation (Le Joueur, 1696; Le Légataire universel, 1708) places him among the successors of Molière*, though his more superficial vein is best suited to light comedy.

Arlequin homme à bonnes fortunes (1690); Attendez-moi sous l'orme (1694); Le Bal (1696); Le Distrain (1697); Le Retour imprévu (1700); Les Folies amoureuses (1704).—Œuvres (6 vols, 1822); Œuvres (sel ed. E. Fournier, 2 vols, 1876).

P. Toldo, 'Étude sur le théâtre de R.' in Rev. d'Hist. Litt. (1903-05); H. C. Lancaster, History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, IV (1940) and Sunset (1954); A. Calame, R. Sa vie, son œuvre (1960). G.B.

Regnard, JACOB: see Schein, JOHANN HERMANN.

Régner, HENRI FRANÇOIS JOSEPH DE (*Honfleur 28 XII 1864; ∞1896 Marie de Heredia; †Paris 23 V 1936), French poet and novelist. He was one of the most sensitive and talented of the lesser Symbolists. After 1900 he concentrated largely on prose fiction. Although he gradually detached himself from the principles of Symbolism, its influence remained apparent in the poetic atmosphere and the curious hedonism of the novels. He was elected to the French Academy in 1911.

VERSE: Les lendemains (1886); Apaisement (1886); Poèmes anciens et romanesques (1890); Tel qu'en songe (1892); Poèmes 1887-1892 (1895); La cité des eaux (1902); Le miroir des heures (1910).—NOVELS: La double maîtresse (1900); Les amants singuliers (1901); Le mariage de minuit (1903); La

peur de l'amour (1907); L'escapade (1926).—CRITICISM: Faces et profils (1931).—Œuvres (7 vols, 1930–31).

H. Berton, H. R.: le poète et le romancier (1910); R. Honnert, H. R.: son œuvre (1923); E. Buenzod, H. de R. (1966). M.T.

Régnier, JEAN (*Auxerre c. 1390; ∞Isabeau Chrétien; †1468), French poet. Bailli of Auxerre under the Duke of Burgundy, he was captured by French partisans near Rouen in 1432. In prison he began his Livre des Fortunes et Adversitez, the first part of which ('Le Livre de prison') is a long meditative poem interspersed with ballades, lais and rondels. Without great artistic merit, it is interesting as an autobiographical document and reveals a personality attractive because of its devout simplicity and its capacity for deep and true feeling. The metrical form of the body of the work is the same as that used later by Villon*.

Livre des Fortunes (ed. E. Droz, 1923; with good intro.).—E. Petit, Le poète J. R. (1904). F.W.

Régnier, MATHURIN (*Chartres 21 XII 1573; †Rouen 22 X 1613), French satirical poet, hailed as a master by Boileau*, and by Boileau and Musset* as a forerunner of Molière* in painting humanity and its foibles. His satires are loose and digressive, following his personal humour and echoing, among others, Horace*, Juvenal*, Rabelais*, Ronsard* and Desportes*, who was his uncle. They are social, as Satire XIII (Macette), a caricature of hypocritical piety; literary, as Satire IX, against Malherbe*, whose purism Régnier disliked; philosophic, as Satire XVII, on sadness in love. Régnier also wrote short poems and elegies and some 'official' verse (Inscriptions, 1610). Intended by his parents for ecclesiastical preferment, Régnier led a dissipated life and achieved only a canonry at Chartres.

Satires, I–XII (1608–09), XIII (1612), XIV–XIX (posthumous); Macette (ed. F. Brunot, 1900); Œuvres complètes (ed. J. Plattard, 1930, rev. P. Jourda, 1954).

M. H. Cherrier, Bibliographie de R. (1884); J. Vianey, M. R. (1896); A. Adam, Histoire de la littérature française au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, I (1949). G.B.

Reid, FORREST (*Belfast 24 VI 1876; †1947), Irish novelist, biographer and literary critic; a notable prose stylist of mystical and romantic temperament.

Following Darkness (1912); W. B. Yeats (1915); Apostate (1926); Private Road (1946). E.T.W.

Reid, THOMAS (*Strachan 26 IV 1710; ∞1740 Elizabeth Reid; †Glasgow 7 X 1796), Scottish philosopher; Professor at Aberdeen, 1752, and at Glasgow, 1763. He criticized the subjective idealism and ultimate scepticism of the Locke*–

Hume* tradition, emphasized the common consciousness of men, and reasserted the reality of mind and the external world. He was the founder of the Scottish 'Common Sense' philosophical school.

'An Essay on Quantity' in Philos. Trans. (1748); An Inquiry into the Human Mind on the Principles of Common Sense (1764); Essays on the Intellectual Powers of Man (1785); Essays on the Active Powers of Man (1788).—Works (ed. Sir William Hamilton, 2 vols, 1846); sel. in British Empirical Philosophers (ed. A. J. Ayer and R. Winch, 1952).

A. S. Pringle Pattison, Scottish Philosophy (1885); A. C. Fraser, R. (1898); S. A. Grave, The Scottish Philosophy of Common Sense (1960). J.K.

Reid, SIR THOMAS WEMYSS (*Newcastle-on-Tyne 29 III 1842; ∞1867 Kate Thornton, ∞1873 Louisa Berry; †London 26 II 1905), English journalist, biographer and novelist, appointed manager of Cassell's in 1887 and knighted in 1894.

Charlotte Brontë: a Monograph (1877; with letters from Ellen Nussey); W. E. Forster (2 vols, 1888); Life of W. E. Gladstone (1899).—Gladys Fane: a Story of Two Lives (1884); Mauleverer's Millions: a Yorkshire Romance (1886).—Memoirs of Sir T. W. R. (ed. S. Reid, 1905).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Reina, CASIODORO DE (*Granada; †after 1581), Spanish Biblical translator, of Moorish descent. A Friar who became Protestant and resided in England (1563), Strasbourg, Basle and Antwerp (1578), his translation of the Bible (the 'Bear Bible') was published at Basle (1569). He revised the Spanish-Jewish version of Ferrara (1555) for the Old Testament.

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, IV. E.M.W.

Reina, MANUEL (*Puente Genil, Córdoba 1856; †ibid. 1905), Spanish poet. A wealthy man, he occasionally intervened in politics but lived mainly on his estate, reading, writing and translating Musset* beautifully. His delicate fantasy, eroticism and musicality made him, though on a minor scale, one of the most original poets prior to MODERNISM, foreshadowing many of its innovations.

Andantes y allegros (1877); Cromos y acuarelas (1878); La vida inquieta (1894); Poemas paganos (1896); Robles de la selva sagrada (1906).—Sus mejores versos (ed. B. Belmonte, 1928; anthol.).

E. de Ory, M. R., estudio biográfico (1916); F. Aguilar Piñal, La obra poética de M. R. (1968). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Reinbot von Durne (fl. 1230–36), Bavarian author of a 'courtly' and still dragon-less martyrdom of

St George (source probably Latin). The stylistic model is Wolfram* von Eschenbach's Willehalm. (See Plüterich*.)

Ed. F. Vetter (still important for stud. of the legend; 1896); ed. C. von Kraus (1907).

J. E. Matzke, 'Contributions to the history of the legend of St G.' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. America, XVII, XVIII (1903-04). F.P.P.

Reinig, CHRISTA (*Berlin 6 VIII 1926), German poet and prose writer, who until 1963 lived in East Berlin and worked as an art-historian. Her poetry shows the influence of Brecht's* ballads and songs, but none of the latter's typical lyrical 'gestures' and linguistic finesse. The language of her Gedichte (1963) is almost totally non-metaphorical, direct, and always dangerously close to turning into everyday prose. Traditional and contemporary outcast figures are frequently the subject of her poetry.

VERSE: Die Steine von Finisterre (1960); Schwabinger Märterln (1968); Schwalbe von Olevano (1969).—Der Traum meiner Verkommenheit (1961); Drei Schiffe (1965); Orion trat aus dem Haus (1968). F.M.K.

Reinmar der Alter, or von Hagenau (fl. 1190-1210), minnesinger and Viennese court poet: he is both, notably in an elegy (a widow's lament) on Leopold V of Austria (1194). His patient analysis of the situations and moods of amour courtois and his melodies became the acknowledged pattern of strict minnesang. Gottfried* von Strassburg and Walther* von der Vogelweide praise his artistry—the latter despite a rivalry allusively reflected in the poetry of each. Reinmar's range is narrow but in Vienna at least he ousted his rival.

Die Lieder R.s des A. (ed. C. von Kraus, 1919); Minnesangs Frühling (ed. K. Lachmann and C. von Kraus, 1944); Olive Sayce, Poets of the Minnesang (1967).

K. Burdach, R. der A. und Walther von der Vogelweide (1929); Fr. Maurer, Die Pseudoreinmare (1966). F.P.P.

Reinmar von Zweter (fl. 1227-47), Rhenish poet active in Austria and Bohemia; of knightly birth but dependent—like Walther* von der Vogelweide, of whose moral-didactic, religious and political poetry he is a more worthy emulator than der Marner*. He wrote in support of Frederick* II (excommunicated 1239), thereafter for Wenceslas of Bohemia. Despite the uniformity of his 200 stanzas he was, like der Marner, claimed by the MASTERSINGERS.

Ed. G. Roethe (1887); Olive Sayce, Poets of the Minnesang (1967).

E. Bonjour, R. von Z. als politischer Dichter (1922). F.P.P.

Reinoso, FÉLIX JOSÉ (*Seville 20 XI 1772; †Madrid 27 IV 1841), Spanish poet, humanist and priest; co-founder of the Sevillian Academia de Letras Humanas. He is mainly remembered by his long poem in two cantos, La inocencia perdida (1804). Influenced by Milton's* Paradise Lost, this composition, of beautiful, vigorous descriptive stanzas, suffers by the inevitable comparison with its model. In an interesting essay he explained his pro-Napoleonic sympathies.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIX (with biblio.) and LXVIII; Obras (ed. A. Martín Villa, 2 vols, 1872-79).—Who is the Liberator of Spain? An Essay (tr. H. Wood, 1846). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Reisel, VLADIMÍR (*Brod'any 19 I 1919), Slovak poet. His early, Surrealist work shows poetic talent of a high order (Vidím všetky dni a noci, 1939; Neskutočné mesto, 1943). In later poems he attempts to come to terms with the realities of his time (D'akujem ti, 1957; Láska na posledný pohľad, 1964). R.A.

Reiss-Andersen, GUNNAR (*Larvik 21 VIII 1896; †1925 Tordis Castberg; †30 VII 1964), Norwegian poet. A lyric poet, possessing considerable technical skill and elegance, whose fluency has often been fatal to a profounder development of his ideas. Some of his best work is to be found in his occasional poems and his war poems, but he did not achieve a really independent stature until his last two collections, Usynlige seil (1956) and År på en strand (1962).

VERSE: Indvielsens aar (1921); Mellem løven og Venus (1923); Solregn (1924); Kongesønnens bryllup (1926); Himmelskrift (1928); Lykkens prøve (sel. poems; 1931); Horisont (1934); Vidnesbyrd (1936); Kampdikt fra Norge (Stockholm, 1943); Norsk røst (ibid., 1944); Dikt fra krigstiden (1945); Prinsen av Isola og andre dikt (1949).—Samlede dikt (1946); Dikt i utvalg (1964).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Nyt liv (1925); Spanske farver og annen kulør (1933).

A. Aarnes in Det poetiske fenomen (1963).

R.G.P.

Reitzel, ROBERT (*Weitenau, Baden 27 I 1849; †Detroit 31 III 1898), German-American author. He edited the brilliant free-thought magazine Der Arme Teufel (1884-98).

Mein Buch (ed. M. Drescher, 1898); Des Armen Teufels Gesammelte Schriften (ed. M. Baginski, 3 vols, 1913).

A. E. Zucker, R. R. (1917) and in Dictionary of American Biography, XV (1935). E.R.

Reizen, ABRAHAM (*Kojdanov 1875; †New York 1953), Yiddish poet and short-story writer, emigrated to the U.S.A. (1908). He edited several literary periodicals in succession, and also a weekly devoted mainly to Yiddish translations of European literature. His poems have the simplicity of folk-songs, and many of them were set to music and achieved great popularity, as did his hundreds of stories and sketches, describing Jewish life in the 'old country' as well as in the 'new world'.

Tsait-lieder (1901); Gezamelte schriftn (3 vols, 1908–09); coll. works (12 vols, Vilna–New York, 1924). J.S.

Rej, MIKOŁAJ (*Żórawno 4 II 1505; †XI 1569), Polish writer. A country squire, self-educated chiefly through reading, in 1546 he became a Calvinist and was the first to write systematically in Polish. He has been called 'the father of Polish literature', but he was above all a moralist who took an active part in political and religious debate. Having started by writing satirical dialogues in verse, he based his plays Żywoł Józefa and Kupiec on Crocus* Comœdia sacra Joseph (1535) and Naogeorgus* Mercator (1540). In a huge poem Wizerunek . . ., based on the Zodiacus vitae (1535) by Palingenius*, he depicted a youth in quest of a decent life. Zwierzyniec (in verse) is a collection of epigrams some of which (Przypowieści-Figliki) are quite frivolous; and in a more serious miscellaneous work, Zwierciadło (in prose and in verse), there is the well-known Żywoł Człowieka pocziwego (in prose) in which he describes the model life of a Polish squire. In Apocalypsis and Postilla, the latter of which shows his extensive knowledge of theology, he gives a comprehensive explanation of the Bible. His prose translation of David's Psalms (1546) is excellent, and his work has been important for the formation of the Polish literary language.

VERSE: Krótka rozprawa między trzema osobami panem, wojtem a plebanem (1543; crit. ed. R. Zawiliński, 1892); Wizerunek własny żywota człowieka pocziwego (1558; crit. ed. S. Ptaszycki, 1881–88); Zwierzyniec . . . (1562; cont. among others: Przypowieści przypade, pub. separately in 1577 as Figliki and repr. 1905; crit. ed. W. Bruchnalski, 1895).—PLAYS: Żywoł Józefa (1545; crit. ed. R. Zawiliński, 1889); Kupiec . . . (1549; crit. ed. R. Kotula and A. Brückner, 1924).—VARIOUS: Świętych słów a spraw Pańskich kronika albo Postilla (1557; the modernized ed. by T. Haase, 1883, bears the title Kazanie . . . albo Postilla); Zwierciadło . . . (1567; new ed. by J. Czubeck and J. Łos, 2 vols, 1914); tr., Psalterz Dawidów (1546; repr. S. Ptaszycki, 1901).—Pisma prozą i wierszem (sel. ed. A. Brückner, 1921).

A. Brückner, M. R. Studium historyczne (1905; the best work on R.) and M. R. Człowiek i dzieło (1922); S. Windakiewicz, M. R. z Nagłowic (1895; 3rd ed. 1922); B. Chlebowski, M. R. jako pisarz (1905); W. Bruchnalski, Rozwój twórczości pisarskiej M. R. (1908); M. Janik, M. R. Żywoł i pisma (1923). S.S. (P.H.)

Rejment, WŁADYSŁAW STANISŁAW: see Reymont, WŁADYSŁAW STANISŁAW.

Reljković, MATIJA (*Svinjar 1732; †Vinkovci 1798), Croatian didactic poet. After a period in captivity in Germany as an army officer, he composed a popular narrative poem of 11 cantos in lively doggerel, Satir iliti divji čovik (1762), criticizing conditions in his own country and instructing the people to raise their intellectual, cultural, economic and social standards.

Nova slavonska i nimačka gramatika (1767); Nek je svašta ili sabranje pametnih riči (1795).—Djela (1916). V.J.

Remacle d'Ardenne (*nr Mauberge 1482; †1524), French neo-Latin poet. A lawyer, then a pedagogue and finally secretary to Margaret of Burgundy, his work is heavily erudite and imitative.

Epigrams (1507); Amores (1513; addressed to 'Jordanna', and echoing Horace, Propertius and Tibullus); Palamedes (1512; a comedy, allegedly Plautine in form).

D. Murarasu, La poésie néolatine (1928); P. Van Tieghem, Littérature latine de la Renaissance (1944). F.W.

Remarque, ERICH MARIA, pseud. of ERICH PAUL REMARK (*Osnabrück 22 VI 1898; †Locarno 25 IX 1970), German novelist. The author of the world-famous Im Westen nichts Neues (1928; All Quiet on the Western Front, tr. A. W. Wheen, 1929), he has written several other novels which are similarly distinguished by their simple style, realism and humanitarianism.

Der Weg zurück (1931; The Road Back, tr. A. W. Wheen, 1929); Drei Kameraden (1938); Flotsam (1941); Arc de Triomphe (1946); Der Funke Leben (1952); Spark of Life, tr. J. Stern, 1952); Zeit zu leben, Zeit zu sterben (1954; A Time to Live and a Time to Die, tr. D. Lindley, 1954); Die Nacht von Lissabon (1962; The Night in Lisbon, tr. R. Mannheim, 1964).

Mynona [for 'anonym(ous)'], Hat R. wirklich gelebt? (1929); W. K. Pfeiler, War and the German Mind (1941); E. M. R. zum 70. Geburtstag (1968). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Remizov, ALEXEY MIKHAILOVICH (*1877; †Paris 1957), Russian modernist prose writer. His work consists of realistic narratives and novels; of excellent paraphrases of Russian folk-tales, apocrypha, legends and parables; of diaries, recorded dreams, chronicles of the Revolution, mystery plays, and even of poems written in ornate rhythmic prose. He has much in common with Gogol* and Dostoyevsky*, yet some of his stories are modelled on Leskov's* SKAZ (a story 'told' with all the individual intonations and peculiarities of the narrator). His racy Russian is quite above the dictates of any grammars, and he delights in new patterns of words and constructions.

Sochineniya (8 vols, 1910–12); Ukrepa (1916); Trava-Murava (1920); Ognennaya Rossiya (1921); Vzvykhrennaya Rus' (1927); Olya (1927); Posolon' (1930); Plyashushchiy demon (1949); Povest' o dyukh zveryakh Ikhnelat (1950).—The Fifth Pestilence (tr. A. Brown, 1927); The Clock (tr. J. Cournos, 1924); On a Field of Azure (tr. B. Scott, 1946). J.L.

Renak: see KROCHMAL, NACHMAN.

Renan, (JOSEPH) ERNEST (*Tréguier 28 II 1823; †Paris 2 X 1892), French historical and theological writer. Renan was intended for the priesthood, but the scientific bent of his mind and doubts sown by the 'higher criticism' of the Bible soon detached him from orthodox Christianity (1845). He conceived himself thereafter as a sort of lay clerk, and engaged on the study of religion 'from the outside'. To acquire an adequate background for his work, he travelled in Italy, Greece and Phoenicia. He was appointed to the Collège de France in 1862, but was unable to lecture there regularly until 1870. He was an unsuccessful parliamentary candidate in 1869 and 1876, but was elected to the Academy (1876). Renan approached religion as a rationalist, but also with respectful comprehension and a poetic appreciation for its various historical and geographical backgrounds. As a philosopher, he was at first strongly influenced by the scientific point of view (L'avenir de la science, wr. 1848), though he later adopted a dilettante and sceptical attitude (Drames philosophiques). His historical work is now outdated, but the brilliance of his style, and the limpidity of some of his personal writings (Souvenirs d'enfance et de jeunesse) have kept his influence alive.

HISTORICAL: Averroès et l'averroïsme (1852); Histoire des origines du Christianisme (8 vols, 1863–83), incl.: Vie de Jésus (1863; Eng. tr. C. E. Wilbour, 1864), Saint Paul (1869), Marc Aurèle (1881); Histoire du peuple d'Israël (5 vols, 1887–93; Eng. tr. C. B. Pitman and D. V. Bingham, 3 vols, 1888–91).—ESSAYS: Drames philosophiques (Caliban, 1878; L'eau de Jouvence, 1880); L'avenir de la science (1890); The Future of Science, tr. A. D. Vandam and C. B. Pitman, 1891).—MEMOIRS: Souvenirs d'enfance et de jeunesse (1883; Recollections of My Youth, tr. C. B. Pitman, 1883); Ma sœur Henriette (1895).—Œuvres complètes (ed. H. Psichari, 3 vols, 1947–49).

G. Monod, Les maîtres de l'histoire (1894); P. Lasserre, La jeunesse de R. (3 vols, 1925–32); J. Pommier, R. (1923) and La pensée religieuse de R. (1925); H. Psichari, R. d'après lui-même (1937); P. Van Tieghem, R. (1948); R. Dussaud, L'œuvre scientifique d'E. R. (1951); J. Tielrooy, E. R.: sa vie et son œuvre (1958). M.G.; J.P.R.

Renard, JULES (*Chalon-sur-Mayenne 22 II 1864; †Paris 22 V 1910), French writer. He began to contribute to the Mercure de France after 1890. He lived almost entirely away from big towns and brought to the description of peasants, animals and the peace of the countryside a penetrating observation, and a style marked by extreme conciseness. His books present a series of 'pictures', expressed in short, dry phrases which are always unexpected and contain an undercurrent of wit. In the theatre he is remembered as the author of Poil de Carotte, the moving story of a child victim. His Journal intime (1935) is an invaluable 'document', intelligent and beautifully written.

NOVELS: L'écornifleur (1892); Histoires naturelles (1896 and 1904; Eng. tr. T. W. Earp and G. W. Stower, 1948); Bucoliques (1898); Le vigneron dans sa vigne (1901); Ragotte (1908).—PLAYS: Le plaisir de rompre (1897); Le pain de ménage (1899); Poil de Carotte (1900; Carrots, tr. C. W. Stonier, 1946); Monsieur Vernet (1903); La bigote (1909).—Œuvres complètes (ed. Bernouard, 17 vols, 1925); Pléiade ed. (1971).

H. Bachelin, J. R. (1932); L. Guichard, L'œuvre et l'âme de J. R. (2 vols, 1936) and J. R. (1961); J. Schneider, J. R. par lui-même (1955).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Renaut, 13th-century French poet, sometimes erroneously identified with Jean* Renart. His romance Galeran de Bretagne, about the misadventures of two lovers, combines descriptive writing in traditionally rhetorical style with a new psychological realism.

Galeran de Bretagne (ed. L. Foulet, 1925).

E. Hoepffner, 'Renart ou Renaut?' in Romania, LXII (1936); F. Lyons, Les éléments descriptifs dans le roman d'aventure au XIIIe siècle (1965).

M.F.L.

Renaut de Beaujeu, 13th-century French poet. Distinguished by technical carelessness and personal feeling, his work is that of a brilliant amateur. A native of north-east France, he wrote, besides lyric poetry, an Arthurian romance, the Bel Inconnu (?1225); there is a 16th-century prose version. His short Lai d'Ignaure treats the legend of the eaten heart (Jakemes*) in a tone of light gallantry.

Bel Inconnu and one lyric poem (ed. G. P. Williams, 1929); Lai d'Ignaure (ed. R. Lejeune, 1938).

A. Fierz-Monnier, Initiation und Wandlung. Zur Geschichte des altfranzösischen Romans von Chrétien de Troyes zu R. de B. (1951). M.F.L.

Renaut de Montauban: see CHANSONS DE GESTE, biblio.

Rèpaci, LEONIDA (*Palmi di Calabria 23 IV 1898),

Italian novelist, playwright and journalist. A militant Communist in his youth, Rêpaci was, until 1926, literary critic of the Communist newspaper Unità. His main work is a cycle of novels, the writing of which was interrupted during the Fascist period, centred round a Calabrian family called Rupe. Taccuino segreto (1940) throws an interesting light on his views on life and literature.

NOVELS: La carne inquieta (1930); Storia del Rupe, I: Principio di secolo (1969) and II: Tra guerra e rivoluzione (1970; each vol. cont. 3 novels). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Répide, PEDRO DE (*Madrid 1882; †ibid. 1947), Spanish writer and journalist. Until 1904 he acted as librarian to Isabel II, exiled in Paris. Passionately interested by Madrid life and history he became its chief chronicler. His various works—biographies, novels, narratives and plays—written in good prose, constitute indispensable documents on the history of Madrid.

Del Rastro a Maravillas (1907); El Madrid de los abuelos (1908); Costumbres y devociones madrileñas (1914); La Rusia de ahora (1930); Isabel II, reina de España (1933).

E. G. de Nora, La novela española contemporánea, I (1958). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Reşad Nuri Güntekin (*Istanbul 25 XI 1889; †London 7 XII 1956), Turkish author. The son of an army doctor, he was educated at a French school in Izmir and at Istanbul University. A teacher, then an inspector of education in Anatolia, he was elected Member of Parliament. He started as a theatrical critic and playwright. After the great success, in 1922, of his novel Çalıkuşu, in which sentimental romance is mingled with realistic observations of Anatolian life, he published several similar works. From 1928 onwards, he wrote a series of novels on social problems created by the changes of the past decades. He writes with ease in a polished, straightforward Turkish, at times tending to be over-sentimental.

NOVELS: Gizli El (1922); Çalıkuşu (1922; 6th ed. 1942; Autobiography of a Turkish Girl, tr. Sir W. Deedes, 1950; Der Zaunkönig, tr. M. Schultz, 1943); Damga (1924); Dudaktan Kalbe (1925); Akşam Güneşi (1926; Afternoon Sun, tr. Sir W. Deedes, 1951); Bir Kadın Düşmanı (1927); Acımak (1928); Yeşil Gece (1929); Yaprak Dökümü (1930); Kızılçık Dalları (1932); Gök Yüzü (1935); Eski Hastalık (1938); Ateş Gecesi (1940); Değirmen (1944); Miskinler Tekkesi (1946).—SHORT STORIES: Sönmüş Yıldızlar (1927); Tanrı Misafiri (1927); Leylâ ile Mecnun (1928); Olağan İşler (1930).—PLAYS: Eski Rüya (1920); Taş Parçası (1926); Haçer (1927); Felâket Karşısında Gözdağı, Eski Borç (1931); İstiklâl (1933); Hülleci (1935); Balıkesir Muhasebecisi (1953).—TRAVEL: Anadolu Notları (2 vols, 1939–66).

E. Saussey, Prosateurs turcs contemporains (1935); O. Spies, Die Türkische Prosaliteratur der Gegenwart (1943); Türkân Poyraz and Muazzez Albek, R. N. G. (1957). F.İ.

Resende, GARCIA DE (*Evora c. 1470; †3 II 1536), Portuguese poet and chronicler. A genial and talented personality whose life centred on the Portuguese court, he was page and later secretary to John II and retained the favour of the succeeding monarchs, Manuel I and John III. In his Cancioneiro Geral (1516), he collected and edited a vast number of poems composed and recited as a form of social pastime at the court (CANCIONEIROS). His chronicle of the life of John II is written more in the style of memoirs than of history. Similarly, in the 300 stanzas of his Miscelânea he recounts the notable events of the age in which he lived.

Livro das obras de G. de R. (1545; 2nd ed., cont. the Miscelânea, 1554); Crónica de D. João II in Biblioteca de Cláss. Port. (3 vols, 1890); Miscelânea e variedade de histórias, etc. (ed. Mendes dos Remédios, 1917).

A. Braamcamp Freire, 'G. de R.' in Crítica e História, I (1910). T.P.W.

Reshëtnikov, FËDOR MIKHAYLOVICH (*Ekaterinburg 5 IX 1841; †St Petersburg 9 III 1871), Russian author whose novel Podlipovtsy (1864) gave a particularly gruesome naturalistic picture of village life in the far north. His stories of factory workers and proletarians were allowed to be printed (under the old régime) only in fragments.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (2 vols, 1904); Podlipovtsy (1920; Ceux de Podlipnaia, tr. C. Neyroud, 1927); Gumovy (1959). J.L.

Restif (or RÉTIF) de la Bretonne, NICOLAS EDMË (*Sacy 23 X 1734; ∞1760 Anne Lebègue; †Paris 3 II 1806), French novelist. A peasant's son who became a printer's journeyman, he composed some of his books directly in print, producing some 250 volumes. His novels, designed to form an 18th-century Comédie humaine, are broadly realistic pictures of contemporary low life, from which he seeks to draw moral lessons. The best known, Le Paysan pervers (4 vols, 1776), illustrates the demoralizing effect of the city on the virtuous countryman. His Contemporaines catalogues the 250 occupations of women in Paris. A talent for observation struggles through his reformism, his eroticism, his sentimentality and his nostalgia for 'nature'.

Lucile, ou Les Progrès de la vertu (1768); La vie de mon père (1778; ed. G. Rouger, 1970); Les Contemporaines (42 vols, 1780–85); La Paysanne pervers (1784); Monsieur Nicolas, ou Le Cœur humain dévoilé (16 vols, 1794–97; romanced autobiog.).—Œuvres (ed. H. Bachelin, 9 vols, 1930–32).

C. R. Dawes, R. de la B. (1946); A. Bégue, État présent des études sur R. de la B. (1948); J. Rives Childs, R. de la B., témoignages et jugements (1948); M. Chadourne, R. de la B. ou Le Siècle prophétique (1958); C. A. Porter, R.'s Novels (1967). G.B.

Rettenbacher, SIMON (*Aignertal 1634; †Fischlham 1706), Austrian Latin dramatist. He became a Benedictine (1661), and Professor at Salzburg. The principal representative of Benedictine competition with JESUIT DRAMA, he wrote some 20 Latin dramas, showing history as God's judgement. In his vivid and powerful works he is concerned, unlike Avancini*, to maintain verisimilitude.

Selecta Dramata (1673); Deutsche Gedichte S. R.s (ed. R. Newald, 1930).

A. Kutscher, Das Salzburger Barocktheater (1924); E. Haller, 'S. R.' in Heimatgaue (Linz, 1927–28); W. Flemming, Das Ordensdrama (Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, 1930; with text of R.'s Demetrius); Hildegard Pfanner, Das dramatische Werk S. R.s (1954). L.W.F.

Retz, JEAN FRANÇOIS-PAUL DE GONDI, CARDINAL DE (*Montmirail 20 IX 1613; †Paris 24 VIII 1679), French politician and memorialist, was ordained priest in 1643 and made a Cardinal in 1651. He was a supporter of the Fronde; after its failure he lived for ten years in exile, though later he was occasionally employed by Louis XIV. His vivid and sometimes penetrating memoirs are not always reliable.

Mémoires (3 vols, 1717; crit. ed. 10 vols, 1872–96); Œuvres (11 vols, 1870–1920).

L. Battifol, Le cardinal de R. (1927). D.H.

Reubeni, AARON, pseud. of A. SHIMSHELEVITZ (*Poltava 2 VIII 1886), Hebrew writer. His experiences in Russia during and after the Revolution serve as a basis for his novels. His investigations on the origin of the Semitic race—Shem, Ham and Japhet (Tel Aviv, 1932)—are an important contribution to both anthropology and Semitology.

Leylot Yerushalayim (1957).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Re'ubeni, DAVID (†Lharena, Portugal after 1535), Hebrew traveller and diarist. A mysterious personality, he appeared in 1524 in Italy, declaring himself the brother and ambassador of the king of the tribe of Reuben. He raised Messianic hopes among Jews, was accepted as genuine by Pope Clement VII, but after a brilliant career was imprisoned by Charles V and executed by the Inquisition. His diaries describe his journey from Arabia to Italy and his activities in Europe.

Sippur David Ha-Re'uveni (ed. A. Neubauer, Mediaeval Jewish Chronicles, II, 1895; ed. A. Z. Aeshcoly, 1940).

H. Graetz, History of the Jews, IV (1892); E. Biberfeld, Der Reisebericht des D. R. (1892). C.R.

Reuchlin, JOHANN (*Pforzheim 22 II 1455; †Bad Liebenzell 30 VI 1522), German humanist. He studied at Basle, lectured at Tübingen, Heidelberg and Ingolstadt, was a lawyer and diplomat and the foremost Hebrew scholar of his day. Reuchlin founded the study of Hebrew and (with Erasmus*) of Greek in Germany. His Rudimenta linguae hebraicae (1506), a lexicon and grammar, was an epoch-making work, his De verbo mirifico (1494) and De arte cabbalistica (1517) profound studies in cabbalism. His tolerant attitude to Jewish sacred literature led to the conflict with Pfefferkorn and the publication of the *Epistolae* Obscurorum Virorum*. With his two Latin plays, Henno and Sergius, he was a pioneer of comedy in Germany.

Sergius (1496; ed. H. Holstein, 1888); Henno (1497; ed. idem, 1888; ed. K. Preisendanz, with Ger. tr. Hans Sachs, 1922); De accentibus et orthographia linguae hebraicae (1518); Briefwechsel (ed. L. Geiger, 1875).

L. Geiger, J. R. (1871); H. Holstein, R.s Komödien (1888); S. A. Hirsch, 'J. R., the father of the study of Hebrew . . .' and 'J. Pfefferkorn and the Battle of the Books' in Essays (1905); H. Dibbelt, 'R.s griechische Studien' in Das Gymnasium, XLIX (1938); J. Benzing, Bibliographie der Schriften R.s im 15. und 16. Jahrhundert (1955); Johannes R. 1455–1522 (ed. M. Krebs, 1956). D.G.D.

Reuter, CHRISTIAN (*Kütten, Saxony 1665; †after 1710), German writer. When a student he fell out with his landlady and in revenge pilloried her as Frau Schlampampe and her son as Schelmuffsky in works whose realism and wit are still enjoyable. He was sent down as a result but wrote courtly pageants in Berlin (1703 to 1710). Schelmuffsky, with its fresh character-drawing and amusing incidents, parodies the picaresque novel; the adventures are all bogus and the hero has never left his native town.

Der ehrlichen Frau Schlampampe Krankheit und Tod (1686); L'honnête femme oder die Ehrliche Frau zu Plissine (1695; ed. W. Flemming in Dt. Lit. in Entwicklungsreihen, Barockdrama, IV, 1931); Schelmuffskys Reisebeschreibung (1696; ed. A. Schullerus, 1885; ed. R. Zoozmann, 1905; tr. W. Wonderley, 1962); Letztes Denck- und Ehrenmahl der weyland gewesenen Ehrlichen Frau Schlampampe (1697); Graf Ehrenfried (1700; ed. W. Hecht, 1961).—Lust- und Singspiele (ed. G. Ellinger, 1890); coll. works ed. G. Witkowski (with biog.; 2 vols, 1916); sel. ed. G. Jackel (1962; good).

F. Zarncke, C. R. (1884); O. Deneke, Schelmuffsky (1927); E. Dehmel, Sprache und Stil bei R. (diss. Jena, 1929); F. J. Schneider, 'R.s Komödien

und die Bühne' in Zschr. für dt. Philol., LXII (1937); H. König, Schelmuffsky als Typ der barocken Bramarbasdichtungen (1947); W. Hecht, C. R. (good biblio.; 1966). L.W.F.

Reuter, FRITZ (*Stavenhagen 7 XI 1810; †1851 Luise Kuntze; †Eisenach 12 VII 1874), Low German poet and novelist. As a member of a German national students' organization he was in 1833 condemned to death by a Prussian court, mitigated to 30 years' imprisonment. Reprieved after eight years he recovered through farm-work in his native Mecklenburg. Political stories (in High German) proved a failure, but he gained fame with his Läuschen un Rimels (1853; Neue Folge, 1859) in which he retold popular anecdotes in easy-flowing verse. There followed some verse epics which showed Reuter's compassion, strengthened by his reading of Dickens*, for the poor and weak. He reached his peak however with the novels published in the 1860s, which made him known far beyond the Low German regions. They are mainly based on either his personal experiences (Ut mine Festungstid, 1862; Ut mine Stromtid, 3 vols, 1863–64) or historical reminiscences of the Mecklenburg people (Ut de Franzosentid, 1860; Dörchläuchting, 1866). Reuter mostly deals with the conditions of the lower middle class and the farmers, whose lives were still closely interwoven. He sides with the simple-hearted and honest against the cunning and ruthless; and solves their problems in the spirit of humanity and humour. This attitude was very acceptable to his contemporaries and partly explains his great success. However, Reuter is in his own right one of the foremost representatives of German humour.

De Reis' na Bellingen (1855); Kein Hüsung (1858); Hanne Nüte un de lütte Pudel (1860); Schurr-Murr (1861); Olle Kamellen (7 vols, 1860–68; incl. Franzosentid, Festungstid, Stromtid, Dörchläuchting, De mecklenbörgschen Montecchi un Capuletti, oder: De Reis' na Konstantinopel); Nachgelassene Schriften (ed. A. Wilbrandt, 2 vols, 1874–75).—Briefe an seinen Vater (ed. F. Engel, 1896; ed. O. Weltzien, 1913).—Biblio. in Niederdt. Jahrb., XXII (1897), XXVIII (1902), XLI (1915).—Werke (ed. W. Seelmann et al., 7 vols, 1905–06; new ed., 7 vols, 1907; 12 vols, n.d.); Gesammelte Werke und Briefe (ed. K. Batt, 8 vols, 1967).

A. Wilbrandt, R. (1890); A. Römer, F. R. in seinem Leben und Schaffen (1896); R. Dohse, R. (1910); K. T. Gaedertz, F. R. (n.d.); W. Siebold, Unser Fritzing (1935); F. Griesse, F. R. (1938).—W. Seelmann, 'R.-Forschungen' in Niederdt. Jahrb., XXXVI (1910); C. Krüger, 'Quellenforschungen zu F. R.s Dichtungen und Leben', ibid., XXXVIII–XLI (1912–16); H. Eekholt, Untersuchungen über die Romantechnik R.s (diss. Münster, 1913); M. Hähner, Der politische und kulturgeschichtliche Hintergrund in F. R.s 'Stromtid' (diss. Greifswald, 1920); H. Müller, F. R.s

epische Entwicklung (diss. Freiburg, 1922); R. Bender, Die hochdeutsche Urgestalt der Stromtid (1930); H. Bunje, Der Humor in der niederdeutschen Erzählung des Realismus (1953); K. Batt, F. R., Leben und Werk (1967). G.C.

Reve, GERARD KORNELIS (FRANCISCUS) VAN HET (*Amsterdam 14 XII 1923), Dutch novelist, story writer and playwright. In 1947 he published the novel, De avonden (under pseud. SIMON VAN HET REVE), which had an impact on Dutch post-war literature only equalled by that of the books of W. F. Hermans*. The novel is minutely realistic in style, focusing on ordinary people, but also showing the psychological contradictions of Romantic writing. The loneliness of the main character remained an essential element of his work. In the 1960s, having published equally important stories, he started to write 'letters', which taken together formed a personal type of novel. They were surprisingly widely read, and are more open confessions than his early writing. Their central themes are religion, homosexual love, loneliness and drunkenness. But it is with death as the ultimate aim of life that he is primarily pre-occupied, thus approaching even closer one of the traditions of Romanticism.

Werther Nieland (1949); De ondergang van de familie Boslowits (1950); The Acrobat (in Eng.; 1956); Tien vrolijke verhalen (1961); Commissaris Fennedy (play; 1962); Op weg naar het einde (1963); Nader tot U (1966); A Prison Song in Prose (1968).

'Avondblad', special no. of Podium (1947); W. F. Hermans, 'Het alziend oog in de nachtspiegel' in Criterium (1948); S. Vestdijk, Zuiverende kroniek (1956); Kees Fens, De gevestigde chaos (1966); J. J. Oversteegen in Kees Fens et al., Literair lustrum (1967).—INTERVIEWS: H. U. J. d'Oliveira in Scheppen riep hij gaat van Aul (1965); Bibeb in Bibeb en Vip's (1965). J.J.O.

Reverdy, PIERRE (*Narbonne 13 IX 1889; †Solesmes 17 VI 1960), French poet. Reverdy's lifelong search was to attain an absolute through reality. One of the instigators of Cubism and SURREALISM (founding Nord-Sud in 1917), he held aloof from these movements and retired near the famous Benedictine Abbey at Solesmes (1926). His thickly textured, anguished and sometimes hermetic poetry has been collected as Plupart des temps 1915–1922 (1945) and Main-d'œuvre 1913–1949 (1949); and his essays, which partially reveal his deep inward experience of mystic withdrawal into poetry, are essential reading.

Le gant de crin (1937); Le livre de mon bord (1948); En vrac (1956).

J. Rousselot and M. Manoll, P. R. (1951); 'Hommage à P. R.' in Le Point (1961); various authors, P. R. recueil d'hommes (1967); M. Daniel, 'The poetry of P. R.' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LVIII

(1963); R. W. Greene, 'The moralism of P. R.' in Fr. Stud., XXI (1967). M.G.

Revett, ELDRED (*?1632-38), English poet educated at Cambridge and the Middle Temple who knew Lovelace*. His Poems (1657) reveal a mind attracted by the fantastic. They are at their best when influenced by Herbert*.

Selected Poems (ed. D. M. Friedman, 1966). H.N.D.

Revis, JACOBUS (*Deventer 1586; †Leyden 15 XI 1658), Dutch poet and historian, parson at Deventer. A rigid Calvinist, he is polemic and passionately patriotic; his poetry sometimes is reminiscent of the Geuzenliederen. He wrote a number of historical works, some poetry and a drama; he was reviser to the official translation of the Bible. His sonnets bear witness to a most delicate control of the language and to the depth and force of his unshakable, dogmatic faith; they bear comparison with those of Vondel*; some of them are among the best Dutch literature has produced.

HISTORICAL WORKS: Leven van David Jorisz (1642); Daventria illustrata (1651); Leven en marteldood van Jan de Bakker (1652).—Haman (drama; 1630).—VERSE: Overysselsche Sangen en Dichten (1630; ed. W. A. P. Smit, 2 vols, 1930-35, incl. previously unpub. poems); De CL psalmen Davids eerst in Ned. dicht gebracht door P. Dathenum ende nu gebetert door J. Revis (1660).

J. van Iperen, Kerkelijke historie van het Psalmgezag, I (1777); J. van Vloten, Het leven ende uitgelezen Zangen en Dichten van J. R. (1863); E. J. W. Posthumus Meyjes, J. R. (1895); G. F. Haspels, Uit onzen bloeitijd, de geestelijke poëzie (1909); W. A. P. Smit, De dichter R. (1928); M. Nijhoff, 'R. 1586-1936' in De Gids, XCIX (1936); J. Haantjes, 'R. en zijn Prince' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XLV (1952); Chr. Stapelkamp, R.-studien (1955); J. Strenght, 'De geschiedenis van een emblema' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LI (1958); F. J. Warnke, European Metaphysical Poetry (1961; with tr. of poems by R.); H. ten Harmsel, 'J. R., Dutch Baroque poet' in Comparative Lit., XV (1963). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Rey de Artieda, MICER ANDRÉS (*Valencia 1549; †ibid. 1613), Spanish dramatist and poet. He studied law and fought at Lepanto. His only surviving play—a four-act tragedy about the AMANTES DE TERUEL (1581)—is rather a clumsy affair, but it foreshadows the plays of Lope de Vega*. He also wrote two interesting verse letters on the Spanish drama.

Discursos, epistolas y epigramas de Artemidoro (1605); E. Juliá Martínez, Poetas dramáticos valencianos, I (1929).

E. Cotarelo y Mori, 'Sobre el origen y desarrollo de la leyenda de los Amantes de Teruel' in Rev.

de Archivos, VIII (1903); H. Mérimée, L'art dramatique à Valence (Toulouse, 1913). E.M.W.

Reyes, ALFONSO (*Monterrey 1889; †Mexico City 1959), Mexican writer and poet whose chief work has been in the realm of literary criticism and history. He is one of the outstanding critics and essayists writing in the Spanish language. As a poet, he writes simple and tender verse with a due regard for popular tradition, the poetry of a Hispanic scholar. E.Sa.

CRITICISM: Cuestiones estéticas (Paris, 1911); Cartones de Madrid, 1914-1917 (1917); Visión de Anáhuac, 1519 (1917; Madrid, 1923); Simpatías y diferencias (5 vols, 1921-26); Cuestiones gongorinas (1927).—VERSE: Ifigenia cruel (1924); Pausa (Paris, 1926).—Obras completas (15 vols, 1955-63); Selected Essays (tr. C. Ramsdell, Berkeley, 1964). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Reyles, CARLOS (*Montevideo 1868; †1938); Uruguayan novelist. A careful constructor of plots, deeply influenced by the great French novelists, especially the Naturalists, he created powerful visions of contemporary life. One of his favourite themes was the inactive intellectual contrasted with the man or woman of action, as in El terruño (1916). His best-known novel, however, is El embrujo de Sevilla (1922); Castanets, tr. J. Leclercq, 1929 in which he departs from Naturalism; it is a lyrical evocation of Andalucía. J.F.

NOVELS: Por la vida (1888); Beba (Madrid, 1894); Primitivo (1896); El extraño (1897); La raza de Caín (1900); El gaucho florido (1932).—ESSAYS: La muerte del cisne (1917); Diálogos olímpicos (1919). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Reymont (REJMENT), WŁADYSŁAW STANISŁAW (*Kobiele Wielkie 7 V 1867; †Warsaw 5 XII 1925), Polish writer. Son of a country church organist, without completing school (he left it several times as he left his shop and trade apprenticeships) he joined an actors' troupe, worked as a railway official, was a novice in a monastery at Jasna Góra, and later spent several years abroad.

He began writing with short stories (1st pr. 1893). The content of many of his novels and short stories is based on his own observations and experiences but he gradually introduces Symbolist elements into his prose without, however, obscuring the realistic qualities of his work. The life of the wandering stage artists he portrayed in Komediantka and Fermenty; life in the textile factories of Łódź is depicted in Ziemia obiecana; in Wampir he described the spiritualist movement, in which he was very much interested. The prose epic of Polish peasant life is his monumental novel, Chłopi, for which in 1924 he was awarded the Nobel prize. All characteristic features of a Polish village people, their passions, customs and ways, vices and virtues are presented with realism and in a language modelled on the peasant speech. He was less successful when he tried in the novel Rok 1794 to interpret Polish political and social life at the close of the 18th century.

NOVELS: Komediantka (1896; The Comedienne, tr. E. Obecný, 1921); Fermenty (2 vols, 1897); Sprawiedliwość (1899; Justice, tr. P. Cazin and A. Jacquet, 1925); Ziemia obiecana (2 vols, 1899; The Promised Land, tr. M. H. Dziewicki, 1927); Chłopi (4 vols, 1904–09; The Peasants, tr. idem, 1925–26); Wampir (1911; Der Vampir, tr. L. Richter, 1914); Rok 1794 (3 vols, 1914–19).—SHORT STORIES: Przed świtem (1902); Burza (1908); Przysięga (1917); Za frontem (1919; 2nd ed. under title Pęknięty dzwon); Bunt (1924; Die Empörung, tr. J. P. d'Ardeschah, 1926); Krosnowa i świat (1928).—VARIOUS: Pielgrzymka do Jasnej Góry (1895; Pèlerinage polonais, tr. F. L. Schoell, 1933); Z ziemi chełmskiej (1909; L'Apostolat du knout en Pologne, tr. P. Cazin, 1912).—Pisma (36 vols, 1930–32; new ed. Z. Szwejkowski, 1950 ff.); Dzieła wybrane (14 vols, 1955–57).

J. Krzyżanowski, W. S. R. Twórca i dzieło (1937; the best work on R.); J. Lorentowicz, Ladislav R. Essai sur son œuvre (1925); F. L. Schoell, Les Paysans de Ladislav R. (1925); Z. Falkowski, W. R. Człowiek i twórca (1929); W. Borowy, 'R.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XVI (1937–38); M. Rzeuska, 'Chłopi' R.a (1950); L. Budrecki, W. S. R. (1953). S.S. (P.H.)

Reynold, GONZAGUE DE (*Cressier, Fribourg 15 VII 1880; †ibid. 1970), Swiss humanist, historian and critic, champion of Swiss unity and brilliant painter of her rich and necessary diversity in Cités et pays suisses (3 vols, 1914–20), an outstanding work blending history, geography and landscape in an intimate, poetic vision. He finds proof of the existence of an esprit helvétique in 18th-century Swiss literature: Le Doyen Bridel et les origines de la littérature suisse romande (1909) and Bodmer et l'école suisse (1912). The more recent works of this ardent Catholic, aristocrat and traditionalist are searching inquiries into the spiritual crisis of our civilization.

Charles Baudelaire (criticism; 1920).—HISTORY: La démocratie et la Suisse (1929; definitive ed. 1934); L'Europe tragique (1934); Conscience de la Suisse (1938); La formation de l'Europe (1944–47); Destin du Jura (1968).—Mes mémoires (1963).

G. de R. et son œuvre (coll. studs; 1955).

J.P.I. (G.G.)

Reynolds, HENRY (fl. 1628–32), English poet and critic, a friend of Drayton*, who addressed his Epistle of Poets and Poesy (1627) to him. Reynolds lauded the Ancients over the Moderns in his Mythomystes (1632; ed. J. E. Spingarn in Critical Essays of the 17th Century, I, 1908).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Torquato Tasso's Aminta Englished ... [and] ... Ariadne's Complaint in imitation of Anguillara (1628); The tale of Narcissus (from Anguillara, added to Mythomystes, 1632; ed. J. R. Tutin, 1906).

D. Bush, Mythology and the Renaissance Tradition in English Poetry (1932; rev. 1963); J. W. H. Atkins, English Literary Criticism: The Renaissance (1947; rev. 1951). R.M.W.

Reynolds, SIR JOSHUA (*Plympton 16 VII 1723; †London 23 II 1792), English painter and art critic, the first President of the Royal Academy (1768). Closely associated with Dr Johnson*, with whom he founded the 'Club', Reynolds systematized Johnson's ideas. His annual Discourses endowed with new life the aesthetic and literary doctrines of imitation and tradition. R.F.

Seven Discourses (1778); The Discourses of Sir Joshua Reynolds (ed. J. Burnet, 1842; ed. R. R. Wark, 1959).—Collected Works (ed. E. Malone, 2 vols, 1797; ed. H. W. Beechey, 2 vols, 1835).—Letters (ed. F. W. Hilles, 1929); Portraits by Sir J. R. (ed. idem, 1952).

J. Northcote, Memoirs of Sir J. R. (2 vols, 1813–15); C. R. Leslie and T. Taylor, Life and Times of Sir J. R. (2 vols, 1865); F. W. Hilles, The Literary Career of Sir J. R. (1936); D. Hudson, Sir J. R.: A Personal Study (1958); E. H. Gombrich in Norm and Form (1966). R.F. (M.Bu.)

Řezáč, VÁCLAV, pseud. of VÁCLAV VOŇAVKA (*Prague 5 V 1901; †ibid. 22 VI 1956), Czech novelist whose post-war work illustrates the merits and defects of 'Socialist Realism' as a guiding principle of Czech literature.

Černé světlo (1940); Rozhraní (1945); Nástup (1951); Bitva (1954). R.A.

Rhazes: see AL-RĀZĪ.

Rhetorica ad Herennium, the name given to a work on rhetoric in four books, written c. 86–82 B.C. and dedicated to C. Herennius (otherwise unknown). Excepting Cato's* De re rustica, the Ad Herennium is the oldest complete prose work in Latin and the first Latin manual of rhetoric. The sources are Greek, but technical terms and examples are Latin. Much of the material appears also in Cicero's* De inventione, to which its relation is obscure. The work, attributed in MSS to Cicero and by some modern scholars to Cornificius, enjoyed high esteem in the Middle Ages.

J.A.W.

Ed. F. Marx (2nd ed. 1923; repr. 1966); tr. H. Caplan (1954).—J. Werner, Zur Frage nach dem Verfasser der Herenniusrhetorik (1906).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Riba, CARLES (*Barcelona 1893; ∞1916 Clementina Arderiu; †1959), Catalan poet, critic and classical scholar. Riba is a great poet within the European Symbolist tradition; in his concentrated, organized and intense verse, Symbolism reached its highest point in Catalonia. Estances, his first important work, is marked by great precision of language and thought, but is perhaps too aesthetically remote. In his poems written in exile following the Civil War, he turns the influence of the classics, Goethe* and Hölderlin* to good account, objectivizing his own anguish to recreate universal myths of great depth and complexity. Beneath a highly intellectualized form lies a passionate concern for the moral issues of patriotism and human behaviour and for the personal problems of love and ageing. He translated widely from the classics and German, bringing a superbly cultured mind to his works of criticism.

Estances (1919 and 1933); L'Ingenu Amor (1924); Elegies de Bierville (1942); Del Joc i del Foc (1947); Salvatge cor (1953); Esbós de tres oratoris (1957).—Obres completes (intro. A. Terry and G. Sansone, 2 vols, 1965–68); Obra poètica (Cat. and Span., 1956).—Poems (tr. J. L. Gili, 1964). G.W.R.

Ribadeneira, PEDRO DE (*Toledo 1527; †1611), Spanish historian, biographer and religious writer. He met Loyola* in Rome and became a Jesuit, founding the Belgian branch of the Society in 1555. During the reign of Mary he visited England. His life of St Ignatius is the first modern Spanish biography; he also wrote lives of St Francis Borgia and Diego Lafnez. His history of the English Reformation (1st ed. 1588) is eloquent and vituperative; his narration is based on Roman Catholic historians, such as Sanders, and first-hand accounts from refugees. The Flos Sanctorum—lives of the saints in the Roman calendar arranged for daily reading—went through many editions. He also wrote an anti-Machiavellian treatise on the virtues of a Christian prince. His treatise on tribulation, an ascetic work of considerable merit, is typical of the Christian stoicism of the Counter-Reformation.

Historias de la contrarreforma (1945); Obras escogidas in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LX; Monumenta Ribadeneirae (3 vols, 1920–23).—The life of B. Father Ignatius of Loyola (tr., St Omer, 1616).

R. Lapesa, 'La vida de San Ignacio del P. R.' in Revista de Filol. Esp., XXI (1934). E.M.W.

Ribah: see Jacob ben Asher.

Ribeiro, AQUILINO (*Carregal da Tabosa 13 IX 1885; †Lisbon 27 V 1963), Portuguese novelist. In the early years of the century he was imprisoned for revolutionary activities, escaped, and was later twice exiled in France, where he studied at the Sorbonne. He finally returned to Portugal in 1932. When opposition candidates were permitted by the Salazar regime, he supported them.

He is the most rewarding of 20th-century

Portuguese writers for the outsider precisely because he is the most Portuguese, concerned with the country itself and not with literary fashions from abroad as is commonly the case. He exalts nature, life, instinct, vitality, resilience; he exposes sham, hypocrisy, exploitation, brutality. He revels in a vocabulary that is rich and sensuous to the point of self-indulgence. In a country where pre-historical conditions survive in the remoter provinces alongside the cosmopolitan life of the big towns, he explores the past in the present, not for nostalgia, but in a quest for knowledge, to 'diagnose who we are', and as a tentative guide to a still uncertain future.

Jardim das tormentas (1913); Via sinuosa (1918); Terras do demo (1919); Estrada de Santiago (1922); Andam faunos pelos bosques (1926); O homem que matou o diabo (1930); Maria Benigna (1933); S. Bonabóia, anacoreta e mártir (1937); Mónica (1939); O arcanjo negro (1947); Volfrâmio (1947); A casa grande de Romarigães (1957); Quando os lobos uivam (1959); Casa do escorpião (1964).—Aldeia: terra, gente a bichos (1935); Os avós de nossos avós (1942).

C. Brando Chaves, A. R. (1935); E. da Rocha Gomes, Glossário sucinto para melhor compreensão de A. R. (1935); M. Mendes, A. R. (1960); J. Serrão, Temas de cultura portuguesa, II (1965); Taborda de Vasconcelos, A. R. (1966). T.P.W.

Ribeiro, BERNARDIM (*Torrão ?1482; †Lisbon 1552), Portuguese novelist and poet. Of his life little is known with certainty and biographical interpretations of his Menina e Moça have proved incapable of clarifying the problem. The inclusion of some of his verses in the Cancioneiro Geral (1516) indicates that he frequented the court of Manuel I, and in 1524 he was a secretary of John III. He later seems to have lost his reason—as the result of a hopeless passion, according to tradition—and died in a Lisbon hospital.

The first edition of his works (Ferrara, 1554) contains the sentimental novel Menina e Moça, six eclogues—including the eclogue Crisfal, with an ambiguous attribution of this work to Cristóvão Falcão*—and a number of minor poems. In the second edition (Evora, 1557), the novel appears in a considerably lengthened form, part at least of the continuation being of doubtful authorship. In its present state the plan of this work is somewhat confused; originally conceived as a series of inter-related narratives told by a lady, it contains pastoral episodes along with passages which recall the romances of chivalry, and the whole has a strongly feminist bias. The elegiac tone of the narrative, its subtle fusion of natural description with the expression of human grief, the penetrating psychological interpolations of the narrator, all lend a unique interest to this strange work, a peculiarly Portuguese contribution to European PASTORAL literature.

Hystoria de Menina e Moça por Bernaldim Ribeiro . . . e assi algũas Eglogas suas, etc. (Ferrara, 1554; repr. in B. R. e Cristóvão Falcão: Obras, ed. A. Braamcamp Freire and C. Michaëlis de Vasconcelos, 2 vols, 1923); Primeira e Segunda Parte do Livro chamado as Saudades de B. R., com todas suas obras (augmented ed., Evora, 1557); História de 'Menina e Moça' (ed. D. E. Grokenberger, 1947).—Obras completas (ed. A. Ribeiro and M. Marques Braga, 2 vols, 1949–50).

T. Braga, B. R. e o bucolismo (1897); M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 'Menina e Moça de B. R.' in Orígenes de la novela, I (1905); M. da Silva Gaio, Bucolismo, I: B. R. (1932); A. Salgado Júnior, A 'Menina e Moça' e o romance sentimental (1st pub. in Labor, 1937–40). T.P.W.

Ribera y Tarragó, JULIÁN (*Carcagente, Valencia 19 II 1858; †Madrid 1934), Spanish Arabic scholar, Professor at Saragossa and Madrid Universities. A specialist in the history of Islamic culture in Spain, his discoveries had deep repercussions in and outside Spain. Proving in his edition of Historia de los jueces de Córdoba (1914) and in Cancionero de Abencuzmán (1912) that a Romance dialect was used by Spanish mozárabes, he opened new lines of investigation on the origins of Spanish and Romance poetry. No less important is his work on Arabo-Andalusian lyrics. His research on Hispano-Arabic music (Música de las Cantigas, 1922) gave rise to great polemics on the origin of European music.

La enseñanza entre los musulmanes españoles (1893); Orígenes del Justicia mayor de Aragón (1897); Lo científico en la historia (1906); La superstición pedagógica (1910); Música andaluza medieval en las canciones de trovadores, troveros y minnesinger (1923–25; Music in Ancient Arabia and Spain, tr. E. Hague and M. Leffingwell, 1929). R.M.N.

Ricardo, DAVID (*London 19 IV 1772; ∞1793 Priscilla Wilkinson; †Gatcombe Park, Glos 11 IX 1823), English political economist who, receiving stimulus from the works of Adam Smith* and encouraged by Mill*, wrote Principles of Political Economy and Taxation (1817), expounding the economic doctrines of the utilitarian school and elaborating the theory of rent associated with his name.

Works and Correspondence (ed. P. Sraffa and M. H. Dobb; 11 vols, 1951–57); Minor Papers on the Currency Question (ed. J. H. Hollander, 1932).

J. M. Keynes in Essays on Biography (1933); O. St. Clair, A Key to R. (1957).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Riccardo da Venosa (*Venosa c. 1200), Italian judge, wrote between 1230 and 1233 a Latin elegiac comedy, Liber de Paulino et Polla, for the diversion of Frederick* II.

E. du Meril, Poésies populaires latines du moyen âge (1847); R. Briscese, Paolino e Polla (1903); M. Rigillo, Paolino e Polla (1906); E. Pèrcopo, Poesia giocosa (n.d.).

G. Fortunato, R. da V. e il suo tempo (1918).

R.R.R.

Rice, ELMER (*New York 28 IX 1892; ∞1915 Hazel Levy [o/o1942], ∞1942 Betty Field; †8 V 1967), American playwright and novelist. In Street Scene (1929), awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1929, the characters are inhabitants of a city tenement block, the events those of an ordinary day. The Adding Machine (1923), an Expressionistic experiment, shows the monotony and spiritual poverty in the life of an office worker. Rice has fought for various liberal causes; his plays translate his political views.

PLAYS: On Trial (1914); The Home of the Free (1917); The Subway (1929); See Naples and Die (1930); We, the People (1933); American Landscape (1939); Flight to the West (1941); Dream Girl (1946).—NOVELS: A Voyage to Purilia (1930); Imperial City: A Novel (1937); The Show Must Go On (1950); The Grand Tour (1952); The Winner (1954); Cue for Passion (1954).—The Living Theatre (essays; 1959).—Minority Report (autobiog.; 1963). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Rice, JAMES: see Besant, SIR WALTER.

Rich, BARNABE (*?Essex 1540; †Ireland 1617), English prose-writer. Rich had a long career as a soldier, serving mainly in the Low Countries and in Ireland. In about 1574 he turned to writing and became a prolific (and repetitive) author of romances and pamphlets. He lacks, however, the polish of Lyly* and the vigour of Nashe*, and his writings are indubitably of the second class. The story of Apollonius and Silla (in his Farewell) is the source of Twelfth Night.

Rich his Farewell to Militarie Profession (1581); The strange and wonderful adventures of Don Simonides (1581–84); Faults, Faults, and nothing else but Faults (1606); A Short Survey of Ireland (1609). J.B.B.

Richard I, LIONHEART (*Oxford 8 IX 1157; †Chaluz 6 IV 1199), KING OF ENGLAND, Provençal troubadour and French trouvère. As the son of Henry II of England, Count of Anjou and Duke of Normandy, and of Eleanor of Aquitaine and Poitou, his education was completely French; he never learned English properly. He spent most of his life in France, particularly in Poitou, over which he ruled during the lifetime of his father, at first on behalf of his mother (the famous patroness of troubadours and trouvères), later alone. His repeated revolts against the authority of his father, his interminable feuds with the barons of southern France and with the King of France, his Crusade, captivity in Germany and his brief rule (1189-99) which was one series of wars—far from proving a handicap, gave him every opportunity to vent his feelings in extraordinarily vigorous songs and sirventes, mainly political in content. Some have come down to us in French (Poitevin), e.g. the impressive Rotrouenge written in captivity (1192-94), and an embittered attack on the Daifin* d'Alvernha.

Les plus anciens chansonniers français (ed. J. Brakelmann, 1896); K. Bartsch and L. Wiese, Chrestomathie de l'ancien français (1913). R.R.B.

Richard de Fournival (*c. 1200; †1260), French ecclesiastic, physician and poet. Son of Roger de Fournival, physician to Philip Augustus, he was Chancellor of the cathedral at Amiens in 1246. He wrote courtly lyrics (ed. P. Zarifopol, 1904), and didactic works on courtly love, including Li Conseus d'Amors (ed. W. M. McLeod in Stud. in Philol., XXXII, 1935), La Poisanche d'Amors, and Le Bestiaire d'Amors (ed. C. Segre, 1957). This latter work parodies the religious BESTIARY, using animal-lore to typify feminine qualities, with application to courtly love in the first book and with more serious moralizing intention in the second. Richard also produced the Latin Vetula, a curious poem, heavy with medieval didacticism, which claims to be a sequel, by Ovid* himself, to the Ars amatoria and the Remedia amoris. This was translated by Jean Lefevre* of Resson (mod. ed. of tr. by H. Cocheris, 1861). F.W.

Richard le Pèlerin: see Graindor de Douai.

Richard of St Victor (†11 III 1173), of Scottish birth, became sub-Prior of St Victor c. 1159 and Prior in 1162. Much influenced by Hugh*, he turned to a speculative mysticism; 'he was in meditation more than man' (Dante). He wrote in an original style, often obscure, but with a poetical colouring. Among his works may be mentioned the De quatuor gradibus violentae caritatis, the Benjamin major, the De conditione interioris hominis, and the De Trinitate. F.J.E.R.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXCVI (1855); Les quatre degrés de la violente charité (ed. G. Dumeige, 1955); De Trinitate (ed. J. Ribailier, Paris, 1958); Liber exceptionum (Paris, 1958); Opusculs théologiques (ed. J. Ribailier, Paris, 1967).—Selected Writings on Contemplation (tr. C. Kirchner, 1957).

G. Dumeige, R. de S.-V. et l'idée chrétienne de l'amour (1952). Tor.

Richards, IVOR ARMSTRONG (*Sandbach, Cheshire 26 II 1893; ∞1926 Dorothy Eleanor Pilley), English critic. As a teacher he had great influence at Cambridge, in the 1920s. He examined the creative process in art and critical principles in the light of psychology, but his own literary criticism is much more illuminating than might have been expected from his severely pathological principles.

CRITICISM: The Meaning of Meaning (with C. K. Ogden; 1923); Principles of Literary Criticism (1924); Science and Poetry (1926); Practical Criticism (1929); Mencius on the Mind (1932); Coleridge on Imagination (1934); How to Read a Page (1943); Plato's Republic (ed. and tr.; 1966).—Basic English and Its Uses (1943).

W. H. N. Hotopf, Language, Thought and Comprehension: A Case Study of the Writings of I. A. R. (1965); J. P. Schiller, I. A. R.'s Theory of Literature (1969). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Richardson, DOROTHY MILLER (*Abingdon, Berks 1873; ∞Alan Odle; †Beckenham, Kent 17 VI 1957), English novelist. She has two remarkable claims to distinction. (1) She is the first English novelist who deliberately set out to reconstruct reality as a stream of images or impressions running through the mind of one person—Miriam—thus anticipating Joyce* and Virginia Woolf*. (2) Hers is the feminine point of view, par excellence, subtly and temperamentally shown. Lack of form is her defect. Pilgrimage is the collective title of her 12 novels.

Pointed Roofs (1915); Backwater (1916); Honeycomb (1917); The Tunnel (1919); Interim (1919); Deadlock (1921); Revolving Lights (1923); The Trap (1925); Oberland (1927); Dawn's Left Hand (1931); Clear Horizon (1935); Dimple Hill (1938).

J. C. Powys, D. M. R. (1931); C. R. Blake, D. R. (1960). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Richardson, HENRY HANDEL, pseud. of ETHEL FLORENCE LINDSAY RICHARDSON (*Melbourne 3 I 1870; †Hastings 20 III 1946), Australian novelist. Her schooldays at a Melbourne Ladies College are closely reflected in The Getting of Wisdom (1910) which depicts with astringent comedy the development of a sensitive young girl. In 1887 she went to Leipzig to study music and returned only briefly to her country. After her marriage in 1895 to J. G. Robertson, Professor of German literature at the University of London, she lived in England. Early stimulation by writers such as Stendhal*, Tolstoy* and Bjørnson* influenced the Naturalist direction of her writing, first in Maurice Guest (1908), a story of a music student's disastrous infatuation, and then in the Richard Mahony trilogy, a study of an unstable Irish doctor whose fluctuating circumstances in Australia end in his mental disintegration.

The Fortunes of Richard Mahony (1930; contin. as The Fortunes of Richard Mahony, The Way Home and Ultima Thule, sep. pub. in various eds); End of a Childhood and Other Stories (1934); The Young Cosima (1939); Myself When Young (autobiog., unfinished; 1948).

N. Palmer, H. H. R. (1950); V. Buckley, H. H. R. (2nd ed. 1970).
F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Richardson, SAMUEL (*Derbyshire 1689; ∞1721 Martha Wilde, ∞1731 Elizabeth Leake; †London 4 VII 1761), English novelist, by whose works the analysis of the human heart was established as the true theme of the novel. Richardson, a successful printer, twice married and bereaved, was at 50 asked by brother printers to produce a 'little volume of letters in common style for the use of country readers' (published as Familiar Letters, 1741). From these grew Pamela, or Virtue Rewarded (2 vols, 1740), followed by Pamela Married (2 vols, 1741), Clarissa; or the History of a Young Lady (7 vols, 1748) and The History of Sir Charles Grandison (7 vols, 1754). Richardson's sense of overwhelming importance of the vicissitudes of the individual soul, his fervent piety and subtle emotional intuition, combined to win instant success for Pamela with a wide public hungry for entertainment that did not affront its sense of life's seriousness. In Clarissa, free of the apparently utilitarian morality of Pamela, Richardson's genius unfolded to the full, producing a profound study of a divided soul: but Grandison, written to portray a virtuous male, failed to reach such heights. Richardson's inestimable influence on European literature through the release of the sentimental renaissance is attested by Rousseau*, Lessing* and Goldoni*. In England, with Fielding*, he stands at the fountainhead of one of the most native forms of literary expression. R.M.H.

Works (ed. L. Stephen, with biog; 12 vols, 1883); Selected Letters (ed. J. Carroll, 1964).—See also H. Fielding, An Apology for the Life of Mrs Shamela Andrews (1741) and The Adventures of Joseph Andrews (1742; begun as burlesque of Pamela).

E. Schmidt, R., Rousseau und Goethe (1875); A. Dobson, R. at Home (1894) and R. (1902); J. Texte, J. J. Rousseau and the Cosmopolitan Spirit in Literature (tr. J. W. Matthews, 1899); C. L. Thomson, S. R. (1900); B. A. Facticeau, Les romans de R. sur la scène française (1927); P. Dottin, S. R. (1931); A. D. McKillop, S. R., Printer and Novelist (1936); K. Hornbeak, R.'s Familiar Letters and Domestic Conduct Books (1938); W. M. Sale, S. R.: Master Printer (1950); I. Watt, The Rise of the Novel (1957).
R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Richardt, ERNST CHRISTIAN (*Copenhagen 25 V 1831; ∞1865 Marie Koës Hammerich; †Vemmetofte 18 XII 1892), Danish poet. He took an active part in undergraduate life at Copenhagen and supported the movement for Scandinavian union. He gained much popularity with his student songs, his patriotic poetry, his religious lyrics, his nice little genre pictures, and the libretto of the opera Drot og Marsk (1878).

Smaa digte (1860); Nyere Digte (1864); Texter og

Toner (1868); Billeder og Sange (1874); Halvhundrede Digte (1878); Billedtexter (1879); Kantater og Digte (1880); Vaar og Høst (1884); Blandede Digte (1891); Vort Land (1889).—Samlede Digte (3 vols, 1895); Digte i Udvalg (2 vols, 1914).

J. K. Carlsen, C. R. (1928).

E.B.

Richart de Semilli (f. c. 1200; †?Paris), French lyric poet. Ten poems are attributed to him, several of these being pastourelles or related types, and even his chansons d'amour being in the same light and appealing vein. His work is marked throughout by a simplicity and gracious idyllicism which contrasts markedly with the earnest solemnity of poets like Blondel* de Nesle or Guillaume* de Ferrières.

Ed. G. Steffens in Festgabe W. Foerster (1902).
F.W.

Richepin, JEAN (*Médéa, Algeria 4 II 1849; †Paris 2 XII 1926), French writer. Richepin studied at the École Normale but later broke away from his University connections. The theatrically violent verse of his Chanson des gueux (1876) caused an outcry and brought him a short term of imprisonment for the work's nihilist tendencies. He later repented of his unconventionality, with the result that, in his old age, he received official recognition.

VERSE: Les blasphèmes (1884); La mer (1886); Poèmes durant la guerre (1914–18).—PLAYS: Le flibustier (1888); Le chemineau (1897); La glu (1910); Théâtre en vers (4 vols, 1919).—NOVELS: Les morts bizarres (1876); La glu (1881); Le pavé (1883); Miarka (1883); Flamboche (1895).—Selections From R. (ed. with intro. and biblio. A. G. Cameron, New York, 1905).

A. Zévaès, Les procès littéraires au XIX<sup>ème</sup> siècle (1924).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Richler, MORDECAI (*Montreal 27 I 1931; ∞1960 Florence Wood), Canadian writer of novels, film scripts, essays and stories. Much of his best work, marked by sardonic wit and narrative skill, is set in the Jewish community of central Montreal where he was raised; his often bitter satire has been directed against many aspects of contemporary life, including news and film industries.

Acrobats (1954); Son of a Smaller Hero (1955); A Choice of Enemies (1957); The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz (1959); The Incomparable Atuk (1963); Cocksure (1968).—Hunting Tigers Under Glass (essays; 1968).

W. H. New, 'Apprenticeship of discovery' in Canad. Lit., XXIX (1966).
R.Su.

Richter, HANS WERNER (*Bansin 12 XI 1908), German novelist. A leading writer among those whose novels have ceased to be fiction and aim at a true report of factual events. As the editor of periodicals—e.g. Der Ruf, Die Literatur—he has done much to encourage younger writers. He founded Gruppe 47.

Die Geschlagenen (1949; Beyond Defeat, tr. R. Kee, 1950); Sie fielen aus Gottes Hand (1951; They Fell From God's Hand, tr. G. Sainsbury, 1956); Spuren im Sand (1953); Du sollst nicht töten (1955).

R. Lettau, Die Gruppe 47. Bericht, Kritik, Polemik (1967). F.M.K.

Ridruejo, DIONISIO (*Burgo de Osma, Soria 1912), Spanish poet writing in the classical tradition, but also experimenting with free and blank verse.

Hasta la fecha (1934–1959) (1962). J.E.V.

Riehl, WILHELM HEINRICH VON (*Biebrich 6 V 1823; †Munich 16 X 1897), German historical and cultural writer, influenced by Arndt* and Kinkel at Bonn, Professor of Kulturgeschichte at Munich from 1859. His life-work was the creation of a cultural physiognomy of the German people. His attitude was didactic and conservative, and he used the historical short story as a vehicle for his ideas, showing the repercussions of great historical crises upon humble lives. He treated music as a dominant strand in the cultural fabric, and himself composed songs.

Naturgeschichte des Volkes als Grundlage einer deutschen Sozialpolitik (4 vols, 1851–69); Musikalische Charakterköpfe (3 vols, 1853–78); Kulturstudien aus drei Jahrhunderten (1859); Geschichten aus alter Zeit (2 vols, 1863 ff.); Am Feierabend (1880); incl. Burg Neideck, Eng. tr. A. H. Reiner, 1907).—Gesammelte Geschichten und Novellen (7 vols, 1898–1900).

V. von Geramb, W. H. R. (1954).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Riemersma, TRINUS (*Ferwerd 17 V 1938), Frisian writer, who published novels in a modern, experimental manner; the most significant and many-sided author of the youngest generation in Frisian literature.

NOVELS: Fabryk (1964; Dutch tr. 1966); By de hannen om 't ôf (1965); Minskrotten-rotminken (1966; Dutch tr. 1968); De moardner komt werom (1967); De hite simmer (1968).—SHORT STORIES: De duvel misbeteard (1967); Myn folk, myn bimbinder (1970).—Riemersma II 26–50 (verse; 1970). K.D.

Rieti, MOSES DI, called MAESTRO GAIO (*Rieti VI 1388; †Rome c. 1460), Italian Hebrew poet and historian, was physician to Pope Pius II and Rabbi of Rome. His Mikdash Me'af is an imitation of Dante's* Commedia (Rieti introduced terza rima into Hebrew), discussing all sciences of the period. Part II, canto 2, is used as a prayer by Italian Jews. He also wrote philosophical works and a history of the Jews (unpublished).

Me'on ha-Sho'alim (i.e. Canto II.2; Venice, c. 1585; Ital. tr. Debora Ascarelli, 1602); Mikdash Me'af (ed. with biog. as Il Dante Ebreo by J. Goldenthal, 1851). C.R.

Rif: see Alfasi, ISAAC BEN JACOB.

Rifbjerg, KLAUS (*Amager 15 XII 1931; ∞1955 Inge Andersen), Danish novelist, playwright and poet. He has established his position in almost every field of contemporary Danish literature and is today generally recognized as the leading writer of his generation. He has also written several film scripts.

VERSE: Under Vejr med mig selv (1956); Efterkrig (1957); Konfrontation (1960); Camouflage (1961); Voliere (1962); Portræt (1963); Amagerdigte (1965); Fædrelandssange (1967); Mytologi (1970); I Skyttens tegn (1970).—NOVELS: Den kroniske Uskylde (1958); Operaelskeren (1966); Arkivet (1967); Lønn og Karl (1968); Anna (jeg) Anna (1969); Marts 1970 (1970); Leif den Lykkelige (1971); Lena Jørgensen (1971).—SHORT STORIES: Og andre Historier (1964); Rejsende (1969).—PLAYS: Hva skal vi lave? (with Jesper Jensen; 1963); Diskret Ophold (with idem; 1964); Hvad en Mand har Brug for (1966); Voks (1968); Tørresnoren (1969); Narrene (1971).—VARIOUS: Boi-i-ing 64! (1964); Rif (1967).

Th. Bredsdorff, Sære Fortællere (1967); T. Brostrøm, K. R. (1970). E.B.

Rigaut (RICHAUT) de Berbezilh, i.e. BARBEZIEUX (c. 1170–1200), Provençal troubadour. The medieval Provençal biographer relates that this poor knight after long and fruitless yearning for his revered lady, the daughter of Jaufré* Rudel, abandoned her service at the instigation of her scheming rival. Realizing his error, rueful and contrite, he retired to a hermitage. Only when a hundred knights and a hundred ladies had pleaded on his behalf did his lady forgive him. Even his contemporaries discovered in the songs of this melancholy poet, in the studied originality of his style, his similes from lapidaries and bestiaries, a novel charm, which recurs in the work of his Italian, more particularly Sicilian imitators, and in the work of Guido Guinizelli*.

C. Chabaneau and J. Anglade, 'Les chansons du troubadour R. de B.' in Rev. des langues romanes, LX (1919); M. Braccini, R. de B., Le canzon (1960); A. Varvaro, R. de B., Liriche (1960).

R. Lejeune, 'Le troubadour R. de B.' in Mélanges Frank (1957), 'Analyse textuelle et histoire littéraire: R. de B.' in Le Moyen Âge, LXVIII (1962) and 'La datation du troubadour R. de B., Questions de détails et question de méthode', ibid., LXX (1964); A. Varvaro, 'Encore sur la datation de R. de B.', ibid., LXX (1964).

R.R.B. (K.R.)

Righetti, CARLO (*Milan 1830; †ibid. 3 XI 1906), Italian patriot and irresponsible journalist, comic writer and novelist known by the anagram of CLETO ARRIGHI. Some of his plays in Milanese dialect are still performed; his Dizionario milanese-italiano (1896) is useful.

Memorie d'un soldato lombardo e memorie di un ex-repubblicano (1865).—F. Camerini, Nuovi profili, II (1875); G. Bolza in Ars et labor (1906). N.K.W.

Rijndorp, JACOB VAN (*The Hague 8 III 1663; †1692 Anna C. de Quistana; †4 XII 1720), Dutch actor and playwright, who trained a company of good pupils and gave performances with them at Brussels, Copenhagen and Danzig.

De geschaakte bruid (1690); De bruiloft van Kloris en Roosje (with D. Buysero; 1727); De Hellevaart van Dokter Joan Faustus (1733).

E. F. Kossmann, Das Niederländische Faustspiel des 17. Jh. (1910) and Bijdragen tot de geschiedenis van het Nederlandsche toneel (1915). J.W.W.

Rijssse, COLIN VAN, 15th-century Dutch poet in the REDERIJKER tradition; lived in Brussels. He wrote De Spiegel der Minnen (comprising six plays, altogether 6,169 lines), the earliest bourgeois drama in Western Europe. The theme is the unhappy love of Dierick den Hollander, a rich merchant's son from Middelburg, for Katherina Sheermertens, a poor seamstress; for its time it shows amazing psychological insight. D. V. Coornhert* had it printed at Haarlem in 1561 (repr. 1577 and 1617). For some time a number of other plays were attributed to him.

Ed. M. W. Immink (1913); modern adaptations by R. Jacobs (1958) and F. Engelen (1960).

W. van Eeghem in Rev. belge de philol. et d'hist., XIV (1935) and Brusselse dichters, V (1963); P. van der Meulen in Nieuwe Taalgids, XL (1947); E. de Bock, Opstellen over C. van R. en andere rederijkers (1958). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Riley, JAMES WHITCOMB (*Greenfield, Ind. 7 X 1849; †Indianapolis 22 VII 1916), American verse-writer, he began writing verses for newspapers in the homely Hoosier vernacular. His songs of Mid-Western farm life won him wide contemporary fame.

The Old Swimmin'-Hole, and 'Leven More Poems (1883); Afterwhiles (1887); The Days Gone By and Other Poems (1895); Home-Folks (1900); Riley Songs O' Cheer (1905); A Hoosier Romance, 1868 (1910); Fugitive Pieces (1914).—The Complete Poetical Works (1937).

M. Dickey, The Youth of J. W. R. (1919) and The Maturity of J. W. R. (1922); R. Crowder, Those Innocent Years: The Legacy and Inheritance of a Hero of the Victorian Era, J. W. R. (1957); P. Revell, J. W. R. (1970). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Rilke, RAINER MARIA (*Prague 4 XII 1875; †Val-Mont, nr Montreux 29 XII 1926), German poet. Continually afraid of ties, he wandered through the world, everywhere a mere visitor. His wanderings led him to Munich (1896), Berlin (1897), Worpswede (1900), Paris (1902), Rome (1903), Paris (1905), Munich (1910), Paris (1911), Munich (1914), Switzerland (1919). His early poetry continues the tradition of the German folk-song, characterized by the intensity of feeling, the subordination of a logical course of thought to sound-associations, and the preference for nature, death, love and the maiden as motifs. The virtuosity of rhythm and rhyme recalls Heine*. But even in his earliest poems there is evidence of a very personal style—the transmutation of a sequence in time into a juxtaposition in space, the neutralization of verbs into verbal nouns, a preference for the present participle, and an idiosyncratic use of enjambement. This style is maintained throughout his work, imposing a great formal unity on a profusion of thought. Mysticism supplanted his original Roman Catholic beliefs, and characterizes a second period of his poetry, when he believed he had found his spiritual home in the vast Russian plains. To this period belong, besides Geschichten vom lieben Gott (1900–04; Stories of God, tr. M. D. Herter-Norton and N. Purtscher-Wydenbruck, 1931) and Stundenbuch (1899–1903), the first masterpieces in Buch der Bilder (1902). The years 1903–12 mark the period of happiest achievement. Rodin and the world of sculpture, modern French poetry and Parisian life are the decisive influences; Neue Gedichte (2 vols, 1907–08) the crowning work. The completion of his life's work is marked by hymnic poems recalling Hölderlin*—Duineser Elegien (1911–22; Duinese Elegies, tr. E. and V. Sackville-West, 1930; Duino Elegies, tr. J. B. Leishman and S. Spender, 1939) and Sonette an Orpheus (1922; Sonnets to Orpheus, tr. J. B. Leishman, 1936). Rilke's poetry, the 'Rilkean metaphor' in particular, has decisively influenced the development of 20th-century European poetry. The English poets of the 1930s have particularly warmly acknowledged this influence. Philosophical reflection, a creative and nervous sensibility, a sense of joy, affirmation, and praise, but also a supreme realism, are the key elements of his poetry. 'Verses are not, as people imagine, simply feelings; they are experiences', as he once put it. Rilke's prose seems always on the verge of passing into verse—quite clearly and consciously in the short masterpiece of impressionism, Die Weise von Liebe und Tod des Cornets Christoph Rilke (1906; The Tale of Love and Death of Cornet Christopher Rilke, tr. M. D. Herter-Norton, 1932); but also in his greatest prose work, the Aufzeichnungen des Malte Laurids Brigge (1910; Notebook of Malte Laurids Brigge, tr. J. Linton, 1930).

VERSE: Larenopfer (1896); Traumgekrönt (1897); Mir zur Feier (1899); Requiem (1909; Eng. tr. J. B.

Leishman, 1935); Das Marienleben (1913); Späte Gedichte (1934); Poèmes français (Paris, 1935).—PROSE: Worpswede (1903); Auguste Rodin (1903; tr. J. Lemont and H. Trausil, 1919); Erzählungen und Skizzen aus der Frühzeit (1928).—Gesammelte Werke (6 vols, 1927); Gesammelte Gedichte (4 vols, 1930–33); Gesammelte Briefe (ed. R. Sieber-Rilke and C. Sieber, 6 vols, 1936–39); Tagebücher aus der Frühzeit (1943); Letters to Merline, 1919–22 (tr. from Fr. V. M. Macdonald, 1951); Sämtliche Werke (ed. R. Sieber-Rilke and E. Zinn, 5 vols, 1955–63).

L. Andreas-Salomé, R. M. R. (1928); F. Gundolf, R. M. R. (1936); M. Betz, R. vivant (Paris, 1937); H.-E. Holthusen, R.s Sonette an Orpheus (1937) and R. in Selbstzeugnissen und Bilddokumenten (1958); H. Wocke, R. in Italien (1940); H. Salinger, An Index to the Poems of R. (Madison, 1942); E. M. Butler, R. M. R. (Cambridge, 1946); N. Wydenbruck, R. Man and Poet (1949); E. Buddeberg, R. M. R., eine innere Biographie (1955); W. L. Gran, R. Creative Anguish of a Modern Poet (1956); G. Schroubek, Bibliographie der seit Kriegsende erschienenen deutschsprachlichen R.-Literatur (1957); W. Fuerst, Phases of R. (1958); W. L. Graff, R.s lyrische Summen (1960); H. F. Peters, R. Masks and the Man (1960); B. Allemann, Zeit und Figur beim späten R. (1961); D. Bassermann, Der andere R. (1961); C. Dédéyan, R. et la France (4 vols, 1961 ff.); E. C. Mason, R., Europe, and the English-Speaking World (1961); P. W. Shaw, R., Valéry and Yeats (1964); S. Mandel, R. M. R.: The Poetic Instinct (1965); K. A. Batterby, R. and France: A Study in Poetic Development (1966); K. W. Jonas, Die Rilke-Kritik 1950–66, Insel-Almanach (1967); K. Wais, Studien zu R.s Valéry-Übertragungen (1967).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Rilski, NEOFIT (orig. NIKOLA PETROV) (*Bansko 1793; †Sofia 4 I 1881), Bulgarian literary pioneer. A monk of Rila monastery, he wrote the first Bulgarian grammar and other works relevant to the formation of the new literary language. He rendered the New Testament into the vernacular (Smyrna, 1840).

Bolgarska gramatika (Kraguevats, 1835); Hristomatia (Istanbul, 1852); Opissanie Rilskago Monastirya (1879).—Sel. works (ed. M. Grigorov, 1926).

I. Snegarov, Prinos kum biografiata na N. R. (1952). V.P.

Rimbaud, JEAN ARTHUR (*Charleville 20 X 1854; †Marseilles 10 XI 1891), French poet. Brought up by his mother, whom his father (an army captain) had abandoned, Rimbaud soon revolted against the harshness of maternal control and the stupidity of provincial life. After a number of temporary escapes he went to Paris in 1871, where he spent a year in literary circles and then set off for Belgium and London with his new friend Verlaine*.

During a quarrel in Brussels, the latter drew a revolver and wounded him. Three months later, Rimbaud published Une saison en enfer (1873) and then or soon after abandoned literature for ever. Thereafter he wandered about the world (Germany, the Dutch East Indies, Egypt and Cyprus) earning his living in many different ways and finally settling in Abyssinia, where he engaged in the coffee business, gun-running and the slave trade. A tumour on the knee led to the amputation of his leg, and he died at 37 in the hospital at Marseilles.

Rimbaud's earliest literary influences were Hugo* and Baudelaire*, but in 1871 he formulated a new poetic theory: the poet's task is to become a voyant or 'seer' and, as the result of a long continued 'disordering of all the senses', to perceive and describe entirely new manifestations of the universe. Poetry becomes a revolutionary force which transforms life. Rimbaud evoked his new worlds, first in verse (as Bateau ivre), later in Les illuminations, which are part verse, part prose poems; in these, through a series of 'coloured miniatures' and astonishing visions, he projected the pure and chaotic universe of his adolescent genius. Une saison en enfer narrates, with comparable power and technique, the drama of a consciousness which can achieve no sort of certainty, and ends by denying every artifice of the imagination and takes refuge in practical activities. Rimbaud has exercised immense influence upon modern literature both because of the revolutionary nature of his aesthetic theory and because of his final repudiation of art.

Une saison en enfer (1873; crit. ed. H. de Bouillane de Lacoste, 1941); Les illuminations (pub. by Verlaine, 1887; crit. ed. idem, 1949); Poésies complètes (1895; crit. ed. idem, 1939); The Drunken Boat (36 poems tr. B. Hill, 1952); Lettres de la vie littéraire (1931).—Œuvres complètes (ed. J. Mouquet and R. de Renéville, 1946).

P. Berrichon, Vie d'A. R. (1897); J. M. Carré, La vie aventureuse d'A. R. (1926; new ed. 1949); R. de Renéville, R. le voyant (1929); J. Rivière, R. (1931); B. Fondane, R. le voyou (1933); A. Dhôtel, L'œuvre logique de R. (1933); R. Étiemble and Y. Gaucière, R. (1950); C. A. Hackett, Le lyrisme de R. (1938) and R. l'enfant (1948); H. de Bouillane de Lacoste, R. et le problème des Illuminations (1949); J. Gengoux, La pensée poétique de R. (1950); A. Adam, 'L'énigme des Illuminations' in Rev. des Sciences humaines (1950); E. Starkie, R. in Abyssinia (1937) and R. (rev. ed. 1961); R. Étiemble, Le mythe de R. (1952–61); Y. Bonnefoy, R. par lui-même (1961). M.G.; J.P.R.

Rinaldo d'Aquino (fl. first half of 13th century), South Italian poet; praised by Dante* (De vulg. eloq., I, xii, 8; II, v, 4). Ten canzoni are ascribed to him, eight being in one MS, Vat. 3793, where their position suggests that Rinaldo is among the earlier poets of the SICILIAN SCHOOL. The MS also calls him 'messenger', showing that he was a man of importance in society. He was probably related to St Thomas* Aquinas and may even have been his brother, put to death by Frederick* II; or perhaps a nephew, said to have held office under Frederick but to have later gone over to the Guelf side and served under Charles of Anjou. His best-known poem is the lament of a girl whose lover is leaving for a Crusade.

Crestomazia italiana dei primi secoli (ed. E. Monaci; 2nd ed. rev. F. Arese, 1955); La scuola poetica siciliana, II (ed. B. Panvini, 1957); Poeti del Duecento, I (ed. G. Contini, 1961); Early Italian Texts (ed. C. Dionisotti and C. Grayson, 2nd ed. 1965).

F. Torracca, Studi sulla lirica italiana del Duecento (1902); V. De Bartholomaeis, 'Ricerche intorno a R. e Jacopo d'A.' in Studi medievali, X (1937). K.F.

Ringelnatz, JOACHIM, pseud. of HANS BÖTTICHER (*Wurzen, nr Leipzig 7 VIII 1883; †Berlin 16 XI 1934), German humorous poet and painter. In his verses he recounts the experiences of a drunken, whoring sailor (he travelled the world as an able seaman and his pseudonym means 'sea-horse') or views the post-war German society as a cynical and restless outsider.

Turngedichte (1920); Kuttel Daddeldu (1923); Allerdings (1928); Mein Leben bis zum Kriege (autobiog.; 1931).—Gesammelte Gedichte (1950).

G. Schultze, In memoriam J. R. (1937); H. Günther, J. R. (with biblio.; 1964). K.P.

Ringmann (PHILESIUS), MATTHIAS (*Selestat 1482; †ibid. 1511), Alsatian humanist, pupil of Wimpfeling*. Translated Caesar's* Commentarii de bello Gallico (1508); author of a Grammatica figurata.

Grammatica figurata (facs. ed. F. R. von Wiese, 1905).—R. Newald, Probleme und Gestalten des dt. Humanismus (1963). F.P.P.

Ringuet: see Panneton, PHILIPPE.

Ringwaldt, BARTHOLOMÄUS (*Frankfurt an der Oder 1530/31; †Langenfeld nr Zielenzig 9 V 1599), German poet and moralist. He wrote an impressive play Speculum Mundi (1590) and some highly popular works (Christliche Warnung des treuen Eckharts, 1582–88; Die lautere Wahrheit, 1586), depicting in powerful realistic prose the religious struggles of the time and the fate of the damned. He also wrote many popular Lutheran hymns.

Trostlieder (1577; in his selected hymns, Geistliche Lieder, ed. H. Wendebourg, 1858).

F. Wegner, Die 'Christliche Warnung' des B. R. (1909); E. Krafft, Das 'Speculum Mundi' des B. R. (1915). D.G.D.

Rinser, LUISE, pseud. of L. ORFF (*Pitzling, Bavaria 30 IV 1911), German novelist and short-story writer. Her fiction is traditional in style but uncompromising in the treatment of its themes, religious problems and situations of conflict being her favourite subject. Die gläsernen Ringe (1940; Rings of Glass, tr. R. and C. Winston, 1958), a novel in the first person, tells how a young girl comes to terms with the world of grown-ups. Nina (1961; originally two novels pub. 1950 and 1957; tr. idem, 1956) is an Entwicklungsroman, a psychological novel, which portrays the precarious life of a modern woman through letters, dialogues and reflections.

NOVELS: Die Stärkeren (1948); Daniela (1953); Der Sündenbock (1955); Die vollkommene Freude (1962); Tobias und ich (1966).—Ein Bündel weisser Narzissen (short stories; 1956).

A. Scholz, 'Zu L. R.s "Gefängnistagebuch"' in Ger. Quart., XL (1967). F.M.K.

Rintala, PAAVO (*Viipuri 20 IX 1930; ∞1955 Raili Pihkala), Finnish novelist, playwright and critic. Since his literary début in 1954 Rintala has been a merciless critic of the myths surrounding certain national figures and events. These include the Mannerheim cult, the Lotta movement, attempts to glorify war, and the 'inevitability' of Finland's involvement in Hitler's Barbarossa plan. His motives and techniques of recent years have been reminiscent of Truman Capote*. Rintala's work has frequently initiated public debate and controversy; it is indicative of his stature that many of his ideas and techniques have been adopted by the post-war generation of Finnish writers and historians.

NOVELS: Rikas ja köyhä (1955); Lakko (1956); Pojat (1958); Jumala on kauneus (1959); Mummoni ja Mannerheim (1960); Mummoni ja marsalkka (1961); Mummon ja Marskin tarinat (1962); Sissiluutnantti (1963); The Long Distance Patrol, tr. M. Michael, 1967; Palvelijat hevosten selässä (1964); Diener auf dem Pferderücken, 1966; Leningradin kohtalon sinfonia (1968); Paasikiven aika (1969); Kekkosen aika (1970); Viapori 1906 (1971).—REPORTAGE: Sotilaiden äänet (1966); Sodan ja rauhan äänet (1967); Napapiirin äänet (1969); Vietnamin kurjet (1970).—PLAYS: Rouva Sotaleski (1957); Kunnianosoitus Johann Sebastian Bachille (1963).—CHILDREN'S STORIES: Keskusteluja lasten kanssa (1965).

P. Tarkka, P. R:n saarna ja seurakunta (1966). M.A.B.

Rinuccini, CINO (*Florence c. 1350; †ibid. 1417), Italian poet; wool merchant. An admirer and defender of Dante*, he composed sonnets, ballate and canzoni in the style of Petrarch*, but his poetry also owes much to Guido Cavalcanti* and the older poets of the dolce stil nuovo (STILNOVISMO).

Rime (ed. S. Bongi, 1858); Rimatori del tardo Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1967).—E. Li Gotti, Restauri trecenteschi (1947). M.W.

Rinuccini, OTTAVIO (*Florence 20 I 1562; †ibid. 28 III 1621), Italian poet. Created melodrama—a poetic 'libretto' which took into account the composer's problems. His three melodramas have a musicality, a gentleness and freshness which make them charming works of art in their own right.

Dafne (1594); Euridice (1600); Arianna (1607); Poesie (1622).—Drammi per musica (ed. A. Della Corte, 1926, 1958); ed. L. Fassò in Teatro del Seicento (1956).

F. Raccamadoro-Ramelli, O. R. (1900); A. Solerti, Gli albori del melodramma (1904); A. Momigliano, 'I melodrammi del R.' in Studi di poesia (1938). U.L.

Rioja, FRANCISCO DE (*Seville ?1583; †Madrid 1659), Spanish poet. He was royal librarian and chronicler of Castile, a faithful adherent of Olivares. His poems are written in a style reminiscent of Herrera's* but with a greater subtlety. The best known are about flowers as symbols of mutability.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXII; Poesías (ed. C. A. de la Barrera, 1867); Adiciones a las poesías (ed. idem, 1872).

A. Lumsden, 'F. de R.' in Spanish Golden Age Poetry and Drama (ed. E. A. Peers, 1946).

E.M.W.

Ripalda, DUQUE DE: see Bermúdez de Castro, SALVADOR.

Ripley, GEORGE (*Greenfield, Mass. 3 X 1802; ∞1827 Sophia Dana, ∞1865 Mrs Louisa Schlossberger; †New York 4 VII 1880), American editor, literary critic, reformer. He organized the Brook Farm experiment in collective living; he later became literary critic of the New York Tribune.

A Handbook of Literature and the Fine Arts (with B. Taylor; 1852); New American Cyclopaedia (with C. A. Dana; 16 vols, 1858–63).

O. B. Frothingham, G. R. (1882); C. Crowe, G. R.: Transcendentalist and Utopian Socialist (1967). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Rist, JOHANN (*Ottensen 8 III 1607; †Wedel 31 VIII 1667), German poet, Lutheran pastor of Wedel in Holstein and founder of the Elbschwanenorden, a literary society. He is chiefly known for his hymns, of which he wrote over 600, many of which are translated, including 'O Ewigkeit, du Donnerwort' ('Eternity, Thou Word of Fear', tr. E. Thring, 1874). He also wrote secular poetry of all kinds including dramatic interludes in Low German, pastoral, moral and some rather indifferent amatory verses. His style is sober, Opitzian and rather heavy.

DRAMA: Irenaromachia (1630; ed. W. Flemming in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, Barockdrama, VI, 1933); Perseus (1634); Friedewünschendes Teutschland (1647; ed. H. M. Schletter, 1864); Depositio Cornuti Typographi (1655; ed. T. Gaedertz, 1886).—VERSE: Poetischer Lust-Garte (1638); Himlische Lieder (1643); Geistliche Poetische Schriften (2 vols, 1657–58).—PROSE: Rettung der Edlen Teutschen Hauptsprache (1642); Monatsgespräche (6 vols, 1663–68).—Sel. works (ed. K. Goedeke and E. Goetz, 1885); Sämtliche Werke (ed. E. Manack, 1967–; in progr.).

T. Hansen, J. R. und seine Zeit (1879); J. Julian, Dictionary of Hymnology (1907); O. Kern, R. als weltlicher Lyriker (1919); A. Jericke, R.s Monatsgespräche (1928); R. A. Schröder, Dichtung und Dichter der Kirche (1936); A. Rettler, Niederdeutsche Literatur im Zeitalter des Barock (1949). L.W.F.

Rist, PETER FREDERIK (*Copenhagen 7 VII 1844; ∞1874 Ida Margrethe Alvina Møller; †ibid. 25 VI 1926), Danish novelist and historical writer. He had a military career, taking part in the Slesvig war. His book on the war, En Rekrut fra 64 (1889), became very popular and is now a classic.

Fra Støvlet-Tiden (1884); Soldater (1890); Efter Dybbøl (1892); Jonathan og andre Fortællinger (1894); Pagebreve (1898); Fortællinger og Typer (1901); Lasse Månsson fra Skaane (1903). E.B.

Ritson, JOSEPH (*Stockton-on-Tees 2 X 1752; †London 23 IX 1803), English antiquarian, collector of early songs, ballads and tales, whose truculent accuracy and ill health led him to attack Percy*, Johnson*, Warton* and other less pedantic scholars. R.M.H.

Observations on the three first volumes of the 'History of English Poetry' [by Thomas Warton] (1782); Select Collection of English Songs (3 vols, 1783; cont. attack on Percy's Reliques); Remarks Critical and Illustrative on the text and notes of the last edition of Shakespeare [by Johnson and Steevens] (1783); Cursory Criticisms (1792; against Malone's Shakespeare); Scottish Songs (2 vols, 1794); Ancient English Metrical Romances (3 vols, 1802).

Letters (with memoir by H. Nicholas, ed. J. Frank, 2 vols, 1833); H. A. Burd, J. R. (1916); W. P. Ker, J. R. (1922); B. Bronson, J. R., Scholar at Arms (2 vols, 1938). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Rittner, TADEUSZ, pseud. TOMASZ CZASZKA (*Lwów 31 V 1873; †Gastein 20 VI 1921), Polish novelist and playwright. Brought up in a cultured home, he was a lawyer and an official in Vienna. He wrote in both Polish and German. A realistic observer and a sceptic, he took his characters from everyday life. In his plays there is humour and brisk dialogue, well supported by his acquaintance with stage technique. In his novels he combines naturalness with psychological approach.

PLAYS: Maszyna (1904); W małym domku (1904; Das kleine Heim, 1908); Głupi Jakób (1910; Der dumme Jakob, 1910); Lato (1912; Sommer, 1912); Człowiek z budki suflera (1913; Der Mann im Souffleurkasten, 1912); Wilki w nocy (1916; Wölfe in der Nacht, 1914).—NOVELS: Drzwi zamknięte (1922; Das Zimmer des Wartens, 1918); Most (1926; Die Brücke, 1920).—SHORT STORIES: Duchy w mieście (1921; Geister in der Stadt, 1921).—Dziela (3 vols, 1930–31); Dramaty (1966).

W. Grubiński, 'T. R.' in W moim konfesjonale (1925); J. Schenk, 'R.' in Pologne Littéraire, XXIII (1928); Z. Dębicki, 'T. R.' in Portrety, II (1928). S.S. (P.H.)

Rivalto, GIORDANO DA: see Giordano da Pisa.

Rivarol, ANTOINE, self-styled LE COMTE DE (*Bag-nols, Gard 26 VI 1753; †Berlin 11 IV 1801), French moralist. He achieved a reputation as a wit and satirist during the last years of the old régime and died in exile after the Revolution. He has few rivals as an author of pointed maxims, such as: 'One does not fire bullets at ideas'. His most substantial work, the Discours sur l'universalité de la langue française (1784), contains the notorious dictum: 'Ce qui n'est pas clair n'est pas français'.

Le Chou et le Navet (1782); Petit Almanach de nos grands hommes pour l'année 1788; Petit Dictionnaire de nos grands hommes de la Révolution (1790).—Œuvres (ed. M. de Lescure, 2nd ed. 1880).

A. Le Breton, R. (1896); R. Groos, La vraie figure de R. (1927). G.B.

Rivas, DUQUE DE: see Saavedra y Ramírez de Baquedano, ÁNGEL DE.

Rivaudeau, ANDRÉ DE (*Fontenay-le-Comte c. 1540; †ibid. 1580), French Protestant poet and humanist scholar. He composed early tragedies in Latin and French, of which only one, his Biblical tragedy Aman, was published, in his Œuvres poétiques (1566; ed. C. M. de Sourdeval, 1859). It was probably acted at Poitiers in 1561.

Aman (crit. ed. K. Cameron, 1969).—R. Lebègue, Le théâtre religieux en France (1929).

G.B.

Rivera, JOSÉ EUSTASIO (*Neiva 1889; †New York 1928), Colombian novelist and poet. He created a sensation with La vorágine (1924; The Vortex, tr. E. K. James, 1935), a novel of the Amazon forests and the exploitation of labour by the rubber traders. It differs from most examples of this literature of the oppressed in containing also a further interest: the effect of the forest on the minds of educated people from the capital. It is a powerful study in psychology. Rivera also published a sonnet-sequence of polished evocations of Colombian landscape.

E.Sa.

Tierra de promisión (1921).—E. Neale Silva, Horizonte humano: Vida de J. E. R. (Wisconsin, 1960).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Rivière, JACQUES (*Bordeaux 15 VII 1886; †Paris 14 II 1925), French writer. Rivière was a friend of Alain Fournier*, whose sister he married, and with whom he exchanged a remarkably interesting correspondence. He belonged to Gide's* circle and became editor of La Nouvelle Revue Française (1919–25). His insistence on sincerity in a writer, his strong sympathy with spiritual things (he became a Roman Catholic in 1913) and his humane intelligence made him one of the great moral influences of his generation.

CRITICISM: Études (1912); L'allemand (1918); À la trace de Dieu (1925); Nouvelles études (1947).—NOVELS: Aimée (1920); Florence (1935).—Correspondance avec Claudel (1926); Correspondance avec A. Fournier (4 vols, 1926–27); Correspondance avec Proust (1955).

Special no. of Nouvelle Rev. fr. (1925); F. Mauriac, Le tourment de J. R. (1926); A. Jans, La pensée de J. R. (1938); C. E. Magny, Histoire du roman français depuis 1918 (1950); P. Beaulieu, J. R. (1955).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Rizal, JOSÉ (*Calamba 19 VI 1861; †Manila 30 XII 1896), Philippine novelist, poet, philologist, ophthalmic surgeon; the first exponent of nationalism in Asia. He studied medicine in Madrid, Paris and Heidelberg. His two novels, written in Europe, are the major works of Philippine literature, giving an impression of the country and its people which has never been equalled. They provided the main stimulus for the Philippine revolution of 1896–98. His finest poem, Ultimo Adiós, was written in prison on the eve of his execution by a Spanish firing squad. Considered the national hero of the Philippines, his works are studied in all schools and colleges.

NOVELS: Noli me tangere (Berlin, 1887; The Social Cancer, tr. C. E. Derbyshire, Manila, 1913; Eng. tr. León Ma. Guerrero, London, 1961); El filibusterismo (Ghent, 1891; The Reign of Greed, tr. C. E. Derbyshire, Manila, 1914).—Poesías de R. (Manila, 1946).

W. E. Retana, Vida y escritos del Dr J. R. (Madrid, 1907); Ante Radaic, J. R., romantico realista (anatomía literaria de 'Noli' y 'Fili') (Manila, 1961); León Ma. Guerrero, The First Filipino (ibid., 1963); Austin Coates, R., Philippine Nationalist and Martyr (Oxford, 1968). A.C.

Roa Bastos, AUGUSTO (*1917), Paraguayan writer who has for years lived in exile in Buenos Aires. His two major works are the collection of short stories El trueno entre las hojas (1953) and a novel Hijo de hombre (1959; Son of Man, tr. R. Caffyn, 1965), a lyrical and mythic account of Paraguay over a long period of its history. J.F.

Robbe-Grillet, ALAIN (*Brest 18 VIII 1922), French novelist. With his scientific and technical education, Robbe-Grillet is one of the founders and the theoretician of the NOUVEAU ROMAN. The film of L'année dernière à Marienbad (1961; Eng. tr. R. Howard, 1962) first brought him fame. His novels usually have no plot and priority is given to the minute description of objects, with the interplay of associations and psychological analysis. He explains his theories in Pour un nouveau roman (1963; Eng. tr., with Snapshots, B. Wright, 1965).

NOVELS: Les gommages (1953; Eng. tr. R. Howard, 1966); Le voyeur (1955; Eng. tr. idem, 1959); La jalousie (1957; Eng. tr. idem, 1959); Dans le labyrinthe (1959); La maison de rendez-vous (1965); Projet pour une révolution à New York (1970).—FILMS: L'immortelle (1963); Trans-Europ Express (1969); L'Eden et après (1970).

B. Morissette, Les romans de R.-G. (1962); J. G. Weightman, 'A. R.-G.' in Encounter, XVIII (1962); O. Bernal, A. R.-G. and the New French Novel (1964); J. Miesch, R.-G. (1965); J. V. Alter, La vision du monde d'A. R.-G. (Geneva, 1966). M.G.

Robert, GRUFFYDD (*?Caernarvonshire ?1530; †c. 1600), Welsh grammarian and prose stylist. He was appointed Archdeacon of Anglesey in 1558 but left the country the following year and later became confessor to Cardinal Carlo Borromeo and canon of Milan. His 'Welsh Grammar', while it includes an admirable analysis of the grammar of the language, may be described as a handbook for such Welshmen as might seek to make their native tongue a worthy medium for the New Learning. Imbued with the Renaissance spirit, it is an early masterpiece of Ciceronian prose in the vernacular.

Gramadeg Cymraeg: Pt I, Dosparth Byrr ar y Rhann Gyntaf i Ramadeg Cymraeg (Milan, 1567; 5 other pts followed bet. 1584 and 1600; ed. G. J. Williams, with intro., 1939).—His responsibility for Y Drych Cristianogawl (1585) is now questioned.

Saunders Lewis, Ysgrifau Dydd Mercher (1945); T. G. Griffith, 'Italian humanism and Welsh prose' in Yorkshire Celt. Stud., VI (1953–58). B.Re.

Robert, SHAABAN (BIN): see Shaaban Robert.

Robert Biket, 12th-century Anglo-Norman poet. His delightful Lai du Cor (?1150), about a test of chastity at the court of King Arthur, is considered earlier than the work of Marie* de France.

Le Lai du Cor (ed. C. T. Erickson, 1971). M.F.L.

Robert de Blois, 13th-century French poet. His chief patron was Hue Tyrel, Lord of Poix (†1260). The didactic Enseignement des princes and Chastoiement des Dames are handbooks of polite conduct. A moralizing tendency is present in the Arthurian romance Beaudous (?1250) and even in the short Ovidian Floris et Liriope.

Sämtliche Werke (ed. J. Ulrich, 3 vols, 1889–95).

J. H. Fox, R. de B., son œuvre didactique et narrative (1950). M.F.L.

Robert de Borron (*?Borron nr Belfort; fl. c. 1200), French author of a Grail romance in octosyllabic couplets, called by modern critics Joseph d'Arimathea. The work was written for Gautier de Montbéliard, Lord of Montfaucon (†1212 or 1214). The first known work to identify the Grail with the vessel of the Last Supper, given to Joseph of Arimathea by Christ, it is a wholly religious work, heavy with doctrinal symbolism. In the unique MS the Joseph is followed without a break by the first 502 lines of a Merlin romance in verse, the rest being extant in a prose remaniement. Robert is widely assumed to have written (or at least projected) a verse Perceval, thus producing a trilogy intended to portray the coming of the Grail knight in Arthur's reign as the fulfilment of a redemptive process begun when the Grail was confided to Joseph. The general view is that the Joseph is later than Chrétien* de Troyes' Conte del Graal.

Joseph and Merlin (ed. W. A. Nitzze, 1927).

J. D. Bruce, Evolution of Arthurian Romance (2nd ed. 1928); P. A. Becker in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., LV (1935); contends that Joseph is anterior to the Conte del Graal; Didot Perceval (ed. W. Roach, 1941); W. A. Nitzze, 'The home of R. de B.' in Mod. Philol., XL (1943); P. Zumthor, Merlin le prophète (1943); P. Le Gentil, 'The work of R. de B.' in Arthurian Literature in the Middle Ages (ed. R. S. Loomis, 1959). F.W.

Robert de Reims, called LA CHIEVRE, 13th-century French lyric poet. His poetry is in the style of Richart* de Semilli. He is clearly a different person from the Tristan poet La Chievre.

W. Mann, 'Die Lieder des R. de R.' in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., XXIII (1899). F.W.

Robert of Gloucester (fl. 1260–1300), English poet, author or continuator of a metrical chronicle of England (completed not earlier than 1297) from earliest times down to 1272.

The Metrical Chronicle of R. of G. (ed. W. A. Wright, 2 vols, 1887).—A. Hudson, 'R. of G. and the antiquaries, 1550–1800' in Notes and Queries, new ser., XVI (Sept. 1969). R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Roberts, SIR CHARLES GEORGE DOUGLAS (*Douglas, New Brunswick 10 I 1860; ∞1880 Mary Fenety; †Toronto 26 XI 1943), Canadian poet, story writer and novelist. His voluminous works cover a wide range of subject-matter, forms and techniques but he is now mainly noted for power of perception in his animal stories and capacity to evoke a visual sense of landscape in his poetry.

Orion (1880); In Divers Tones (1866); Songs of the Common Day (1893); New York Nocturnes (1898); Selected Poems (1936).—PROSE: Kindred of the Wild (1902); Watchers of the Trails (1904); Red Fox (1905).

J. Cappon, R. and the Influences of His Time (1905); W. J. Keith, C. G. D. R. (1969). R.Su.

Roberts, KATE (*Rhosgadfan, Caernarvonshire 13 II 1891; ∞1928 Morris T. Williams), Welsh short-story writer and novelist. She graduated in the University of Wales, taught Welsh in various secondary schools and later (1935) became a director of a publishing house in Denbigh. It was in her work that the short story emerged as a major form in Welsh literature. Most of her stories are informed by her awareness of the relentless struggle which ordinary people have to sustain. The range she depicts is somewhat restricted, but her view of life is neither parochial nor mean.

O Gors y Bryniau (1926); Deian a Loli (1926); Rhigolau Bywyd (1929); Laura Jones (1930); Traed mewn Cyffion (1936); Ffair Gaeaf (1937); Stryd y Glep (1949); Y Byw Sy'n Cysgu (1956); Te yn y Grug (1959); Tea in the Heather, tr. W. Griffith, (1968); Y Lôn Wen (1960); Tywyll Heno (1962); Hyn o Fyd (1964); Tegwch y Bore (1967); Prynu Dol (1969).—A Summer Day (tr. of sel. short stories; 1946).

Crefft y Stori Fer (ed. Saunders Lewis, 1949); K. R. (ed. B. Jones, 1969). B.Re.

Roberts, KENNETH LEWIS (*Kennebunk, Me. 8 XII 1885; ∞1911 Anna Mosser; †21 VII 1957), American novelist. He has done valuable research work to show aspects of American history in a series of novels.

Arundel (1930); The Lively Lady (1931); Rabble in Arms (1933); Captain Caution (1934); Northwest Passage (1937); Oliver Wiswell (1940); A K. R. Reader (1945); I Wanted to Write (1949); The Seventh Sense (1953). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Robertson, THOMAS WILLIAM (*Newark 9 I 1829; ∞1856 Elizabeth Taylor; †London 3 II 1871), English dramatist and actor. In Caste (1867) and later plays Robertson combined social exposure and domestic realism.

Society (1865); Ours (1866); Play (1868); School (1869); M.P. (1870).—The Principal Dramatic Works of T. W. R. With a Memoir by his son (1889).

T. E. Pemberton, The Life and Writings of T. W. R. (1893); G. B. Shaw, 'T. W. R.'s Caste' in Saturday Rev., LXXXIII (1897); M. Savin, R. (1950). B.H. (M.A.)

Robertson, WILLIAM (*Borthwick 19 IX 1721; ∞1753 Mary Nisbet; †Edinburgh 11 VI 1793), Scottish historian of international reputation. From 1761 till 1793 Robertson was joint minister of Greyfriars, Edinburgh; in 1762 he was made Principal of the University; and in 1764, Historiographer-Royal. He is thorough, shrewd in judgement and a good writer in the middle style.

History of Scotland during the Reigns of Queen Mary and of James VI (1759); History of Charles V (1769); History of America (1777); Disquisition concerning the Knowledge which the Ancients had of India (1791); corresp. with Horace Walpole in Yale ed. of Walpole, Correspondence, XV (1952).

Dugald Stewart, Life and Writings of W. R. (1801); J. B. Black, The Art of History: A Study of Four Historians (1926). J.K.

Robinson, CLEMENT (fl. 1566–84), English editor and ballad-writer. Robinson's miscellany, A handful of pleasant delights, was probably published first in 1566. Its ballads seem to have been known to Shakespeare*, and the collection was the most popular as well as the second earliest in the period.

A handful of pleasant delights, containing sundry new sonnets and delectable histories in divers kinds of metre. Newly devised to the newest tunes that are now in use, to be sung (1584; ed. Hyder Rollins, 1924). G.K.H.

Robinson, EDWIN ARLINGTON (*Head Tide, Me. 22 XII 1869; †New York 6 IV 1935), American poet. He grew up in Gardiner, Me., which became the 'Tilbury Town' of his poems; was a precocious child who wrote verses at the age of 11. His study at Harvard was cut short by lack of money and he was forced to take odd jobs in New York. The Children of the Night (1897) contains his well-known psychological portraits of Richard Cory, Cliff Klingenhagen, Luke Havergal and others. He was given a position in the New York Custom House when President Theodore Roosevelt acclaimed his poetry. After 1910 he devoted himself entirely to writing. The Man Against the Sky (1916) made him a national literary figure; he was three times awarded the Pulitzer prize. His Arthurian trilogy was widely popular; Tristram (1927) received more response than most successful novels. His character studies were mainly of sick souls and of failures; he saw human life as a tragedy in a chaotic world, but held a mystic faith in a 'glimmer' of light beyond.

Captain Craig (1902; rev. ed. 1915); The Town Down the River (1910); Van Zorn (1914); The Porcupine (1915); Merlin (1917); The Three Taverns (1920); Lancelot (1920); Avon's Harvest (1921); Roman Bartholow (1923); The Man Who Died Twice (1924); Dionysus in Doubt (1925); Sonnets 1889-1927 (1928); Fortunatus (1928); Modred: a Fragment (1929); The Prodigal Son (1929); Cavender's House (1929); The Glory of the Nightingales (1930); Nicodemus (1932); Talifer (1933); Amaranth (1934); King Jasper (1935).—Collected Poems of E. A. R. (1937); Selected Letters of E. A. R. (ed. R. Torrence, 1940).

M. Van Doren, E. A. R. (1927); [H. Hagedorn, E. A. R.: A Biography (1938); Y. Winters, E. A. R. (1947); H. C. Franchère, E. A. R. (1968); L. O. Coxe, E. A. R.: The Life of Poetry (1969).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Robinson, HENRY CRABB (*Bury St Edmunds 13 III 1775; †London 5 II 1867), English diarist with a lively zest for friendship, talk, travel and ideas.

Diary, Reminiscences and Correspondence of H. C. R. (ed. T. Sadler, 1869); Correspondence of H. C. R. With the Wordsworth Circle (ed. E. J. Morley, 2 vols, 1927); C. R. on Books and Their Writers (ed. idem, 3 vols, 1938).

E. Morley, Life and Times of H. C. R. (1935).
R.M.H. (K.W.)

Robinson, LENNOX (*Douglas, Co. Cork 4 X 1886; †Dublin 1958), Irish dramatist. A director of the Abbey Theatre, where over 20 of his works were produced. Best known by his plays and at his best in the comedy of rural or small-town Irish society, characterized by a delicate sense of satire and of pathos. He also wrote poems and stories.

Collected Plays (1928).—VARIOUS: W. B. Yeats (1939); Curtain Up (1942); The Oxford Book of Irish Verse (ed., with D. MacDonagh; 1958).

Frank O'Connor, My Father's Son (1969).

E.T.W.

Robinson, THERESE ALBERTINE LOUISE: see Talvj.

Roblès, EMMANUEL (*Oran 4 V 1914), French novelist and dramatist. After an unsettled early life in North Africa, Roblès became a war correspondent and travelled widely. His proletarian novel Travail d'homme (1942) made his reputation. His other books, set in Algeria, depict the labours and passions of characters at odds with fate. He has won success in the theatre by his historical tragedy, Montserrat (1949).

L'action (1933); La vallée du paradis (1941); La Marie des quatre vents (1942); Nuits sur le monde (1944); Les hauteurs de la ville (1948); Cela s'appelle l'aurore (1952); La vérité est morte (1952); Le Vésuve (1961); La remontée du fleuve (1964); Un printemps d'Italie (1970).

J. L. Depierreis, Entretiens avec E. M. (1967).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Rob-Poničan, JÁN (*Očová 15 VI 1902), Slovak author and a founder-member of the Dav group (Clementis*, Novomeský*). His best achievement is the epic Divný Janko (1941), in which glorification of the Romantic poet Janko Kráľ* was an indirect expression of opposition to the Fascist régime.

VERSE: Som ... (1923); Demondáž (1929); Póly (1937); Riava neuticha (1958).—Stroje sa pohli (novel; 1935).

Št. Drug et al., Dav: Spomienky a štúdie (1965).
R.A.

Rocca, GINO (*Mantua 22 II 1891; †Milan 13 II 1941), Italian playwright and novelist. Rocca was for many years dramatic critic of Il popolo d'Italia. A streak of satire runs through his plays, many of which are written in Venetian dialect. In Il mondo senza gamberi (1932), which with Il terzo amante (1928) is his best work, he argues that evil is necessary and desirable since without it good would not exist. His best novel is L'uragano (1919).

PLAYS: Tragedia senza eroe (1924); Il re povero (1939); Teatro scelto (1967).—Romanzo d'un viaggio (novel; 1937).—VARIOUS: Teatro del mio tempo (1935).
J.F.C. (B.M.)

Roccatagliata Ceccardi, CECCARDO (*Genoa 6 I 1872; †Genoa 3 VIII 1919), Italian poet of wild and quixotic temperament and genius. His verse is fragmentary and moves towards a purer style and a more intimate and troubled lyricism or elegy.

Il libro dei frammenti (1896); I sonetti e poemi (1898-1909); Sillabe ed ombre (1910-19).

L. Viani, C. R. C. (1929); C. Pellizzi in Italian Stud. (1938); G. Mariani, 'C. R. C.' in Poesia e tecnica nella lirica del Novecento (1958).

N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Rocco, WILHELM (*Bremen 22 III 1819; †Halle, Saale 19 X 1897), Low German story writer who describes with humour the life of the Bremen citizen in the middle of the 19th century.

Vor veertig Jahr (1880); Scheermann & Co. (1881); Kinner un ohle Lüde (1882); Bi Grossmudder Lührssen (1885).

J. Beyer, 'W. R.' in Mitteilungen Quickborn, XII (1918); H. Bellmer, W. R. als niederdeutscher Dichter (1933).
G.C.

Rocha Pita, SEBASTIÃO DA (*Salvador, Bahia 3 V 1660; †Paraguauçu, Bahia 2 XI 1738), Brazilian historian and poet. A member of the Academia Brasileira dos Esquecidos, his history of Brazil is more memorable for its baroque and poetic rhetoric than for its scientific qualities. It was a main source of the topos of Brazil as an earthly paradise. He composed skilful conceit-ridden poetry in the taste of the period, and contributed to the poetic tournaments of his Academia.

Breve compêndio e narração do fúnebre espetáculo . . . (Lisbon, 1709; incl. some poems); História da América Portuguesa (Lisbon, 1730; 2nd ed. 1880; 4th ed. 1910); sel. poems in P. E. da Silva Ramos, Poesia barroca (1967).

Pref. by J. G. Gois in 2nd ed. of R. P.'s História; Pedro Calmon, História da literatura Baiana (1949). J.T.B.

Rochester, JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF (*Ditchley 11 IV 1647; ∞29 I 1667 Elizabeth Malet; †Woodstock 26 VII 1680), English courtier patron and writer of verse, who was educated at Burford Grammar School and Wadham College, Oxford, contributing to University collections of verse, and proceeding to the M.A. when aged only 14. After three years abroad Rochester volunteered to fight against the Dutch (1665). He became an associate of Villiers and other notorious Restoration figures, was an intimate of Charles II and lived with Mrs Barry, the actress. He spent a short term in prison for plotting to abduct his future wife, and in his life as in his verse justified the conventional Victorian estimate of a Restoration courtier.

Poems on Several Occasions (?1680); Poems (ed. V. de Sola Pinto, 1953); Complete Poems of J. W. (ed. D. M. Vieth, 1968).

J. Prinz, J. W., Earl of R., His Life and Writings (1927); V. de Sola Pinto, Portrait of a Restoration Poet (1935; rev. ed. Enthusiast in Wit: J. W. Earl of R., 1962). B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Rod, ÉDOUARD (*Nyon, Vaud 29 III 1857; †Grasse, France 29 I 1910), Swiss novelist and critic who spent many years in Paris, where he founded the Revue contemporaine. From 1886 to 1893 he was Professor of comparative and French literature at the University of Geneva. After a brief association with the Naturalistic school Rod began his series of psychological and moral investigations into the great problems of man's destiny: La course à la mort (1885) and Le sens de la vie (1889). He excels in the analysis of human conscience tormented by scruple and torn between passion and duty: La vie privée de Michel Teissier (1893; tr. The Private Life of an Eminent Politician, 2 vols, 1893) and La seconde vie de Michel Teissier (1894). His rather austere manner is in keeping with a pessimistic outlook.

NOVELS: Les roches blanches (1895; Eng. tr. F. Rothwell, 1916); La-haut (1897); Le ménage du pasteur Naudie (1892).—CRITICISM: Les idées morales du temps présent (1891); L'affaire J.-J. Rousseau (1906).

V. Giraud, Les maîtres de l'heure, II (1914); C. Delhorbe, E. R. (1938). J.P.I.

Rode, EDITH, née NEBELONG (*Copenhagen 23 II 1879; ∞1902 Fritz Julius August Magnussen, ∞1903 Helge Rode*; †ibid. 3 IX 1956), Danish novelist and short-story writer. She has also written a few plays, but her intimate knowledge of human psychology, her irony and her humour are best displayed in her short stories.

NOVELS: Misse Wichmann (1901); Maja Engell (1901); Gold (1902); Tilfredse Hjerter (1905); Grazias Kærlighed (1919); Den unge Olding (1927); J. e. d. (1943); Ogsaa i andre Huse—(1946); Smaa Børn og store (1950).—SHORT STORIES: Kvinde (1908); Af Kundskabens Træ (1912); Pige (1914); Den tunge Dør (1922); Det bittersøde Æble (1926); Afrodite smiler (1929); Mennesker i Mondo (1935); Livets Ekko (1944); I Tidens Klo (1950).—MEMOIRS: De tre smaa Piger (1943); Der var engang (1951); På Togt i Erindringen (1953); På Rejse i Livet (1957). E.B.

Rode, HELGE (*Copenhagen 16 X 1870; ∞1903 Edith Nebelong; †Frederiksberg 23 III 1937), Danish poet, playwright and essayist. He spent his childhood in Norway, where his mother lived after her second marriage, and a year in England, before he finally settled in Denmark. His first volume of poems made a sensation with its mixture of naïveté and aesthetic pantheism. Both in his poetry and his essays he expresses a religious mysticism. In his dramas and his criticism he has attacked modern intellectualism, especially the agnosticism of Brandes* and the Darwinism of Johannes V. Jensen*.

VERSE: Hvide Blomster (1892); Digte (1896); Digte, gamle og nye (1907); Ariel (1914); Den stille Have (1922); Den vilde Rose (1931).—Udvalgte Digte (1945).—PLAYS: Kongsønner (1896); Sommeræventyr (1897); Dansen gaar (1898); Kain og Abel (1898); Kampene i Stefan Borgs Hjem (1901); Lamia (1901); Solsagn (1904); Komedier (2 vols, 1905); Morbus Tellermann (1907); Flugten (1909); Grev Bonde og hans Hus (1912); Shakespeare (1916); Det store Forlis (1917); En Mand gik ned fra Jerusalem (1920); Moderen (1921); Theatret (1922); Alt er godt (1928).—ESSAYS AND CRITICISM: Italien (1909); Krig og Aand (1917); Regenerationen i vort Aandsliv (1923); Pladsen med de grønne Træer (1924); Det store Ja (1926); Det sjælelige Gennembrud (1928).

H. J. Hansen, Dramatikerne H. R. (1948).

E.B.

Rodenbach, ALBRECHT (*Roeselare 27 X 1856; †ibid. 23 VI 1880), Flemish poet and playwright, leader of the Catholic Flemish students' movement (Blauwvoetierie), the 'ideal youth'. He wrote sturdy militant poetry, mature reflective lyrics, monumental epic poems and the romantic nationalistic drama Gudrun which shows an acute intuitive psychology and is still in the repertoire. His writings have their weaknesses but are the expression of a passionate and intellectualistic urge of a young titan.

Eerste gedichten (1878); Gedichten (ed. F. Rodenbach, 2 vols, 1928).—Gudrun (1882; Ger. tr. R. Hermann and J. Lochner, 1919).—Brieven

(ed. R. F. Lissens, 1942).—Verzamelde werken (ed. F. Baur, 3 vols, 1956–60).

H. Verriest, Twintig Vlaamsche koppen (1901); L. van Puyvelde, A. R. (1908); I. Oorda, De dichter A. R. (1909); F. Rodenbach, A. R. en de Blauwvoeterij (2 vols, 1909); J. Vermeulen, A. R. (1930); A. Westerlinck, A. R. (1958). R.F.L.

Rodenbach, GEORGES - RAYMOND - CONSTANTIN (*Tournai 16 VII 1855; †1888 Anna-Maria Urbain; †Paris 25 XII 1898), Belgian poet, novelist and Jeune Belgique. Nostalgic, precious and inspired by the atmosphere of Bruges, the poetry and novels of this brilliant young lawyer delighted Coppée*, Daudet* and fashionable Paris, his adopted city.

VERSE: Tristesses (1879); La jeunesse blanche (1886); Les vies encloses (1896).—NOVELS: Bruges-la-Morte (1892); Le carillonneur (1897).—Le rouet des brumes (short stories; 1901).

G. Turquet-Milnes, Some Modern Belgian Writers (1916). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Rodenburg, THEODORE (*Antwerp 1578; †ibid. 1644), Dutch playwright. Much travelled and of a haughty character, he irritated his Amsterdam colleagues. Moreover his style was diametrically opposed to that of the Academy. He translated Spanish and English plays, full of emotion and action. First a member of Het Wit Lavendel, Rodenburg transferred his allegiance in 1617 to De Egelantier and wrote in its defence Borstweringh, nominally his own work but actually mainly a translation of Sidney's* Defence of Poesie. A.M.B.W.

PASTORALS: Batavische Vrijagie-spel (1616); Den vrouwen Batavier (1617; after Guarini); Mays Treur-bly-einde spel (1634).—PLAYS: Hertoginne Celia en Grave Prospero (1666), Casandra (1617), Jaloursche Studenten (1664; all 3 after Lope de Vega); Wraeckgierigers treurspel (1618; from the Eng.); Rodomont en Isabella (1618); Hoecx en Cabelfaas oft Hartogh Karel den Stouten en Bataviana (1628; same theme as Measure for Measure); Vrou Jacoba (1638).—Drie Christelijke gedichten (verse; 1639).—Eglentiers-Poëten-Borstweringe (criticism; 1619).

A. C. Loffelt, 'Costers Strijd met R.' in De Gids, XXXVIII (1874); J. H. W. Unger, 'T. R.' in Brederoo-Album Oud-Holland, II (1885); R. A. Kolléwijn, 'R. en Lope de Vega' in De Gids, LV (1891); H. E. Moltzer, Feestbundel voor M. de Vries (1892); J. Alblas, Bibliografie van T. R. (1894); J. A. Worp, 'Dirk R.' in Oud-Holland, XIII (1895); W. Zuidema, 'T. R.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., XXI–XXIV (1902–05); J. Brouwer in De Letterkunde van Renaissance en Barok (1911); S. F. Witstein, Bronnen en bewerkingswijze van de ontleende gedeelten in R.'s Eglentiers Poëten Borstweringh (1964).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Rodgers, WILLIAM R(Obert) (*Belfast 1911; †II 1969), Irish poet; an excellent lyric poet of a style akin to, but not derived from, that of Gerard Manley Hopkins*, idiomatic and contemplative.

Awake! and Other Poems (1941); Europa and the Bull (1952).—Collected Poems (1971).

R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Rodó, JOSÉ ENRIQUE (*Montevideo 15 VII 1872; †Palermo 1 V 1917), Uruguayan author, foremost prose writer of MODERNISM, who represents the passage of that movement from a purely aesthetic preoccupation to one of high moral purpose. Rodó feared that rising democracy would mean the submergence of cultural values in an exclusively materialist civilization, and in all his books, but specially in Ariel, his most famous, he pleads for the spiritual. This he understands as the cultivation of the individual personality and of the intellect; he cited the United States as a country devoted to materialist aims and undervalues the cultural achievements of that nation.

Ariel (1900; ed. G. Brotherston, London, 1967; tr. F. J. Stimson, 1922); Motivos de Proteo (1909); The Motives of Proteo, tr. A. Flores, intro. H. Havelock Ellis, 1928; El mirador de Próspero (1913); Cinco ensayos (Madrid, 1917); El camino de Paros (Valencia, 1918). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Rodríguez, CLAUDIO (*Zamora 1934), Spanish poet, author of Don de la ebriedad (1953) and Conjurios (1958). J.E.V.

Rodríguez, FREILE JUAN (*Bogotá 25 IV 1566; †?1640), author (1636) of a chronique scandaleuse of the life of his time in Santa Fe de Bogotá, unique in Spanish-American colonial literature and invaluable for the social history of the 16th and 17th centuries.

El Carnero (first pub. 1859; tr. W. C. Atkinson, The Conquest of New Granada, 1961). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Rodríguez de Lena, PERO: see Passo Honroso, LIBRO DEL.

Rodríguez del Padrón or de la Cámara, JUAN (fl. first half of 15th century; *Padrón; †?Corunna), Spanish prose writer and poet. A Galician minor noble, he may have been page to John II of Castile. He accompanied an ecclesiastical patron to Basle, and entered the Franciscan Order in Jerusalem c. 1441. Many stories are told of his misfortunes as a lover. Some of his poems were included in the Cancionero de Baena. He also wrote a defence of the virtues of women and a treatise on nobility, and translated Ovid*. His book of courtly love, El siervo libre de amor, is partly autobiographical, partly a sentimental romance. His writing shows craftsmanship and strong feeling.

Obras (ed. A. Paz y Melia, 1884); 'Lieder des J. R. del P.' (ed. H. A. Rennert in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., XVII, 1893).

M. R. Lida de Malkiel, 'J. R. P.' in Nueva Revista de Filol. Hisp., VI (1952), VIII (1954) and XIV (1960); E. Dudley, 'Court and country: the fusion of two images of love' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., LXXXII (1967). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Rodríguez de Montalvo: see Montalvo, GARCÍ RODRÍGUEZ DE.

Rodríguez Galván, IGNACIO (*Fizayuca 22 III 1816; †La Habana 25 VI 1842), Mexican poet, most of whose work is spoiled by extravagant Romantic emphasis and by the extreme bitterness of its spirit, the result of personal disappointments and struggles. Nevertheless he is the author of what is usually held to be the best poem of Mexican Romanticism, 'La Profecía de Guatimoc'. In elevated strain but undistinguished diction he invokes the last Aztec ruler against the threat of France, England and the United States, and unites, in Biblical lament and imprecation, his private sorrows and the public woes.

Poesías (intro. A. Rodríguez Galván, 1851); Obras (2 vols, 1876); Poesías (1883; with biog. by R. B. de la Colina). E.Sa.

Rodríguez Marín, FRANCISCO (*Osuna, Seville 27 I 1855; †Madrid 1943), Spanish writer and scholar, academican and director of the National Library. His original works—poems, short stories etc.—are a happy combination of classicism and Andalusian wit. However, he will always be remembered as a Cervantist. His annotated edition of Don Quixote (last ed. 1964) is indispensable for the understanding of the book. R.M.N.

Cantos populares españoles (5 vols, 1882–83); El Loaysa de 'El Celoso extremeño' (1901); Madrigales y sonetos (1909).

G. M. del Río y Rico, Biografía y bibliografía de D. F. R. M. (1947); J. Fernández Martín, Biografía y epistolario íntimo de D. F. R. M. (1952).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Rodríguez-Moñino, ANTONIO (*Calzadilla de los Barros, Badajoz 14 III 1910; ∞María Brey Mariño; †Madrid 1970). The most important Spanish bibliographer of the 20th century, Moñino edited Cancioneros españoles (10 vols, 1949–54), Floresta. Joyas poéticas españolas (10 vols, 1953–66); Las fuentes del Romancero general de 1600 (12 vols, 1957) and Romanceros españoles de los siglos de oro (1968–). He also directed the Biblioteca de erudición y crítica and La lupa y el escarpelo, series of erudite volumes published by Editorial Castalia, and himself published many volumes including the edition of the Cancionero general of 1511 (1958) and the Suplemento al cancionero general de Hernando de Castilla (1959).

It is difficult to overestimate the significance of his bibliographical and critical contributions to the development of Spanish studies.

Don Bartolomé José Gallardo, 1776–1852 (1955); Construcción crítica y realidad histórica de la poesía española de los siglos XVI y XVII (1965; tr. L. B. Simpson, 1968); Historia de una infamia bibliográfica. La de San Antonio de 1823 (1965); Catálogo de los manuscritos poéticos castellanos existentes en la Biblioteca de The Hispanic Society of America (with María Brey Mariño; 3 vols, 1965); La Silva de romances de Barcelona, 1561 (1969); Diccionario bibliográfico de pliegos sueltos poéticos, siglo XVI (1970).

A. R.-M.: estudios sobre su labor científica (various authors; 1968). J.E.V.

Rodziewiczówna, MARIA, pseud. ŻMOGAS (*Pienucha 2 II 1863; †Żelazna ?16 XI 1944), Polish author. In her many novels, generally set in White Russia, she voiced patriotic enthusiasm and perseverance, criticism of the ways of Polish aristocrats and reverence for true patriots. Lato leśnych ludzi (1920) is a charming novel of the young. Because of their patriotic element and warm descriptions of nature, her novels and short stories, though without any significant literary value, were very popular.

NOVELS: Straszny dziadunio (1887; Geld und Arbeit, tr. J. Praun, 1891); Szary proch (1889); Dewajtis (1889; Devaytis, Eng. tr. Count S. C. de Soissons, 1901); Ona (1890; Sie, Ger. tr., 1892); Anima vilis (1895; Eng. tr. Count S. C. de Soissons, 1900); Kądział (1899; The Distaff, tr. idem, 1901).—SHORT STORIES: Nowele (2 vols, 1890 and 1908); Rupiecie (1908).—Pisma (36 vols, 1931–38).

A. Zahorska, M. R. i jej dzieła (1931); K. Czachowski, M. R. na ile swoich powieści (1935); J. Puzyna, Moje wspomnienia o Rodziewiczównie (1947). S.S. (P.H.)

Roelants, MAURICE (*Ghent 19 XII 1895; †St-Martens-Lennik 25 IV 1966), Flemish novelist, poet and writer of short stories. His early verse was warm-hearted and well-balanced. In the 1930s he brought new life to Flemish novel-writing with psychological stories centring on themes in which values and happiness are preserved by means of renunciation. Again attracted by poetry after the Second World War, he wrote a baroque praise of love, Lof der liefde (1949), and showed in Vuur en dauw (1965; Glut und Tau, tr. H. Graef, 1967) a dualism he had managed to control in his prose.

VERSE: De kom der loutering (1918); Het verzaken (1930).—NOVELS: Komen en gaan (1927; La vistischeuse, tr. J. Geers, 1935); Het leven dat wij droomden (1931; Maria Danneels, Ger. tr. E. and F. Augustin, 1932); Alles komt terecht (1937; Tout s'arrange, tr. F. Maret, 1941); Gebed om een goed einde (1944; Gebet um ein gutes Ende, tr. G.

Hermanowski, 1955).—SHORT STORIES: De Jazz-speler (1928; 'The Jazz Player', tr. Jo Mayo in Harvest of the Lowlands, ed. J. Greshoff, 1945); Twee helden (1929); Altijd opnieuw (1943); Drie romanellipsen (1943).

F. Closset, M. R. (1946); A. van der Veen, M. R. (1960). R.F.L.

Roethke, THEODORE (*Saginaw, Michigan 25 VI 1908; †Seattle 1 VIII 1963), American poet. Open House (1941), with its regularity and directness of verse-rhythm, gave no hint of the richness, intensity and compression of Praise to the End (1951). Dramatizing a quest for the self, his poetry shows an impressive control and ranges from lyric to meditative, from nonsense poems to dramatic monologues.

The Lost Son and Other Poems (1948); The Waking Poems 1933–53 (1953); Words for the Wind: The Collected Verse of T. R. (1958); I Am! says the Lamb (1961).

Trial Balances (ed. Ann Winslow, 1935); M. L. Rosenthal, The Modern Poets: A Critical Introduction (1960); New World Writing, XIX (ed. A. Ostroff, 1961); R. J. Mills, Poets in Progress (1962) and T. R. (1963). G.A.K.

Rogers, SAMUEL (*Stoke Newington 30 VII 1763; †London 18 XII 1855), English poet, a man of fastidious mind, benevolent heart and venomous tongue, at whose breakfast-table men of letters met to talk. His poems, lacking original poetic power, show appreciation of accepted models and a certain assiduously cultivated but passive good taste.

Pleasures of Memory (1792); Epistle to a Friend (1798); Jacqueline (1814); Italy: a Poem (1822).—Poetical Works: with Memoir (ed. E. Bell, 1856).

Recollections of Table Talk of S. R., with Memoir (ed. A. Dyce, 1856; ed. M. Bishop, 1952); P. W. Clayden, R. and his Contemporaries (1889).

R.M.H.

Rogge, ALMA (*Brunswarden 24 VII 1894; †Bremen 7 II 1969), Low German playwright and author. She wrote character comedies and short stories and sketches centring on the lives of peasants and small-town folk of her native Oldenburg. In the serious play In de Möhl (1929) she successfully grafted the technique of the naturalistic drama upon a North German setting.

PLAYS: Up de Freete (1917); De Aukschoons-Schooster (1922); De Straaf (1925); Twe Kisten Rum (1939).—Sine (stories; 1929). G.C.

Roig, JAUME (*Valencia c. 1405; ∞ c. 1435 Isabel Pellicer; †ibid. 1478), Catalan writer. He was a prominent doctor in Alfonso V's court. He wrote Lo Spill o Llibre de les Dones, also known as the Llibre de Consells, about 1460. The book, written in the first person, continues the medieval anti-feminist current; only his wife and the Virgin Mary escape the bitter general censure. Roig's satirical venom, the wealth of realistic detail and his vivid, earthy style, with its picaresque flavour, give the book considerable interest; the verse form (five-syllable lines rhyming in couplets) is well handled but ends by becoming monotonous.

Spill (crit. ed. R. Chabás, 1905; ed. F. Almela i Vives, 1928; Span. tr. R. Miquel y Planes, 1942). G.W.R.

Roís de Corella, JOAN (*?Gandia 1433–43; †Valencia 1497), Catalan poet, prose writer and translator. As a humanist he brought Renaissance influences from Italy to Catalan letters. He wrote lives of saints and mythical Greek personages in an elevated and rhetorical style. As a poet, his lines, although fully in the tradition of troubadour poetry, echoed the more sonorous rhythms of the Italian Renaissance poets. His Oració a la Verge is one of the masterpieces of Catalan poetry. He wrote Tragèdia de Caldesa (in verse and prose), Triomf de les Dones, a long poem on the life of the Virgin, and a large number of fine and original love poems.

Obres (ed. R. Miquel i Planes, 1913).

J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Rojas, FERNANDO DE (*Puebla de Montalbán, Toledo; ∞ Leonor Álvarez; †Talavera IV 1541), Spanish novelist of Jewish descent. According to the prologue and acrostic verses at the beginning of La Celestina* and to the findings of modern scholarship, Rojas was the author of Acts II–XXI. Sixteenth-century documents also attest his authorship in general terms. Whether he also wrote Act I of the great novel still remains difficult to decide.

F. del Valle Lersundi, 'Documentos referentes a F. de R.' and 'Testamento de F. de R.' in Revista de Filol. Esp., XII (1925), XVI (1929); S. Gilman, 'F. de R. as author' and (with R. Gonzálvez) 'The family of F. de R.' in Romanische Forschungen, LXXVI (1964) and LXXVIII (1966).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Rojas, MANUEL (*Buenos Aires 1896), Chilean novelist who has described the many-sided life of his country in a series of novels and stories, based frequently on the experiences of his own varied career.

El hombre de los ojos azules (1926); Hombres del sur (1926); Tonada del transeunte (verse; 1927); El delincuente (1929); Lanchas en la bahía (1932); Hijo de ladrón (1951); Born Guilty, tr. F. Gaynor, 1955).—Obras completas (1961). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Rojas, RICARDO (*Tucumán 16 IX 1882; †1957),

Argentinian literary critic and historian. Of his vast output (some of it of the greatest importance for the interpretation of Spanish America), little is a contribution to pure literature; but his work includes some interesting verse and a successful adaptation of the Peruvian play (in Quechua), Ollantay (1939).

VERSE: La victoria del hombre (1903); Los lises del blasón (1911); Canciones (1920); Poesías (1923).—HISTORY AND CRITICISM: Blasón de Plata (1912); La literatura argentina (4 vols, 1913; 8 vols, 1924–25); La argentinidad (1916); La Eurindia (1924); El Cristo invisible (1927); Un Titán de los Andes (1939; cont. R.' study of the tradition on which Ollantay is based; the 18th-century version of the play in Biblioteca de Cultura Peruana, I, Paris, 1938). E.Sa.(J.F.)

Rojas Villandrando, AGUSTÍN DE (*Madrid 1572; †Paredes de Nava after 1618), Spanish novelist and dramatist. He had an adventurous life as soldier, traveller and writer for a travelling company before he became an official notary. He wrote one play, many dramatic prologues, a miscellany which was suppressed by the Inquisition, and an entertaining dialogue-novel about travelling actors, El viaje entretenido.

El buen repúblico (1611); El viaje entretenido (in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXI; ed. J. García Morales, 1945); El natural desdichado (ed. J. W. Cromwell, 1939). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Rojas Zorrilla, FRANCISCO DE (*Toledo 4 X 1607; ∞Catalina Yáñez Trillo de Mendoza; †Madrid 23 I 1648), Spanish dramatist. He studied at Salamanca and lived afterwards in Madrid. He was treacherously attacked after he had acted as a judge at a poetical competition. His play Los bandos de Verona—about Romeo and Juliet—was the first to be acted in the court theatre of El Buen Retiro (1640). Philip IV made him a Knight of St James in 1643. As a dramatist Rojas was much influenced by Calderón*. His finest play, García del Castañar, has a supposed peasant hero who thinks that the king has infringed his marital honour; he avenges himself when he discovers his enemy's identity. The comedy Entre bobos anda el juego is vigorous and amusing. Cada cual lo que le toca, an interesting and thoughtful play, was hissed because it gave an unconventional solution to a problem of honour. His plots were used by French dramatists: T. Corneille*, Scarron* and Lesage*.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LIV; Teatro [García del Castañar and Entre bobos anda el juego] (ed. F. Ruiz Morcuende, 1917); Cada cual lo que le toca and La viña de Nabot (ed. Américo Castro, 1917); Donde ay agravios no ay celos (ed. B. Wittmann, Geneva, 1962); Lucrecia y Tarquino (ed. R. R. MacCurdy, 1963).

E. Cotarelo y Mori, Don F. de R. Z. (1911);

R. R. MacCurdy, F. de R. Z. and the Tragedy (1958) and F. de R. Z.: bibliografía crítica (1965). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Rokeach, DAVID (APTEEKER) (*Lvov, Galicia 1914), Hebrew poet; settled in Palestine in 1934. His first Hebrew poem, 'Jerusalem', was published in the newspaper Ha-aretz (1935). He has been widely translated.

Be-Gesher Hayeud (1939); Yamim Ashenim (1941); Moadei Erga (1953); Ar'ar 'alei Shaham (1958). L.Y.

Roland Holst, ADRIAAN (*Amsterdam 23 V 1888), Dutch writer, who studied at Oxford (1908–11), edited De Gids (1920–34) and was one of the most important writers of the anti-Nazi underground, 1940–45. His early verse was influenced by Gorter* and Leopold*, but soon the admiration for Shelley* and Yeats* became preponderant. For this poet the existing world became of negative value; the sublime was a symbol or token of a prehistoric Celtic past of pristine greatness, of a realm of the soul beyond this world. Roland Holst himself points to Yeats, whose influence is both unmistakable and misleading: the pristine elysium, the focus of his life's vision, is opposed to Yeats' patriotic Celtic past; and, while for Yeats the tragic was contained in his own personality, for Roland Holst it consists in his conviction that the world's essence has perished. J.W.W.

VERSE: Verzen (1911); Een winter aan zee (1937); Swordplay, wordplay (with S. Vestdijk; 1950); In gevaar (1958); Omtrent de grens (1960); Een kleine schoof (1969).—Par delà les chemins (Fr. tr. of some poems Ans and Henri Deluy, 1954).—PROSE: Deirdre en de zonen van Usnach (1920); Over den dichter Leopold (1926); Shelley (1928); Woest en moe (1951); Het experiment (1960); Kort (aphorisms; 1967).—Verzamelde werken (coll. works; 4 vols, 1948–49).

A. van Duinkerken, Ascense der schoonheid (1941); H. Roland Holst et al., Over den dichter A. R. H. (1948); G. Sötemann, A. R. H. en de mythe van Ierland (1950); W. H. Stenfert Kroese, De mythe van A. R. H. (1951); De Gids, special no. (May 1958); Schrijvers prentenboek, I (1958). J.J.O.

Roland Holst-Van der Schalk, HENRIETTE GOVERDINA ANNA (*Noordwijk-Binnen 24 XII 1869; ∞1896 R. N. Roland Holst; †28 XI 1952), Dutch poet who played an important role in political life. As a Communist she sympathized with the Russian Revolution; after 1925 her view of life evolved to a form of religious socialism. Her first poems were original; she handled the sonnet 'as it had become, not an imaginative structure but a wave of perception' (Verwey). In her later volumes of poetry, her verse retained the rhythmical freedom and the preference for the 'run-on-line', while in vigorous prose she wrote theoretical works and biographies. Not all her writings were of equal beauty of form, but they were all parts of her life's work, an expression of the principle of love. Her poetry is avowed in the highest sense.

VERSE: Sonnetten en verzen in terzinen geschreven (1895); De nieuwe geboort (1903); Opwaartsche wegen (1907); De vrouw in het woud (1912); Het feest der gedachtenis (1915); Verzonken grenzen (1918); Tusschen twee werelden (1923); Heldensage (1927); Verworvenheden (1927); Vernieuwingen (1929); Tusschen tijd en eeuwigheid (1934); De loop is bijna volbracht (1943); Uit de diepte (1946); Wordingen (1949).—PLAYS: De opstandelingen (1910); Thomas More (1912); Het offer (1921); De kinderen (1922); Wij willen niet (1931); Kinderen van dezen tijd (1931); De moeder (1932); De roep der stad (1933); Der vrouwen weg (1933).—BIOGRAPHY: Dante Gabriël Rossetti (1898); J. J. Rousseau (1912); De held en de schare (1920); In memoriam Herman Gorter (1928); Tolstoi (1930); Guido Gezelle (1931); Herman Gorter (1933); Rosa Luxemburg (1935); Kinderjaren en jeugd van R. N. Roland Holst (1940); Romain Rolland (1946); Gandhi (1947).—PROSE: Socialisme en literatuur (1899); Kapitaal en arbeid in de 19de eeuw (1902); Open brief aan Maxim Gorki (1918); De voorwaarden tot hernieuwing der dramatische kunst (1924); Over leven en schoonheid (1925); Het vuur brandde voort (1949); Romankunst als levensschool (1950).

K. F. Proost, H. R. H. en haar strijd om de gemeenschap (1937); Bernard Verhoeven, De zielegang van H. R. H. (2nd ed. 1939); M. M. Ariens, Het jeugdwerk van H. R. H. (1943); J. P. van Praag, H. R. H. (1946); R. Antonissen, H. Gorter en H. R. H. (with biblio.; 1946); Wim J. Simons, H. R. H. (1969). J.W.W. (J.J.O.)

Rolfe, FREDERICK WILLIAM, BARON CORVO (*London 22 VII 1860; †Venice 26 X 1913), a versatile and eccentric English writer whose present reputation owes much to the brilliant biographical study by A. J. A. Symons, The Quest for Corvo (1934). His novels are largely personal and autobiographical. The best-known, Hadrian the Seventh (1904), the story of an obscure priest who became Pope, was successfully dramatized by Peter Luke in 1967.

Stories Told Me (1898); Don Tarquinio (1905); The Desire and Pursuit of the Whole (1934); Nicholas Crabbe (1958).

C., 1860–1960 (ed. C. Woolf and B. Sewell, 1961); D. Weeks, C. (1971).—Biblio. by C. Woolf (1957; 1972). W.R.A.

Rolland, ROMAIN (*Clamecy 29 I 1866; †Vézelay 30 XII 1944), French writer. Romain Rolland came of a bourgeois family living in central France. He held a post as Professor of art history at the Sorbonne and was a friend of Péguy*, in whose Cahiers de la Quinzaine his novel Jean-Christophe first appeared serially (1904–12). In 1914 he was living in Switzerland, and from there launched a series of pacifist manifestos, later collected in Au-dessus de la mêlée (1915). He was awarded the Nobel prize in 1915. After the war he divided his time between literature and politics. He was the recognized representative of a revolutionary and independent humanism. As a novelist he remains memorable for his roman-fleuve, Jean-Christophe, which centres on the life of a musician of genius who combines the highest qualities of the French and the Germans. As a historian, he was animated by a worship of great men (Michelangelo*, Tolstoy*, Gandhi* and, in particular, Beethoven). He advocated the creation of a 'people's theatre', and in that spirit wrote some 20 plays on the theme of revolutionary heroism.

NOVELS: Jean-Christophe (10 vols, 1904–12; defin. ed. 1931–34; Eng. tr. G. Cannan, 4 vols, 1910–13); Colas Breugnon (1919); Clérambault (1920; Clérambault, or One Against All, tr. anon., 1933); L'âme enchantée (7 vols, 1933; Eng. tr. B. R. Redman, E. Stimson, Van Wyck Brooks and A. de Alberti, 6 vols, 1927–35).—PLAYS: Les tragédies de la foi (1891 and 1898); Le triomphe de la raison (1898); Le théâtre de la Revolution: Danton (1900; tr. B. H. Clark, 1918); Le quatorze Juillet (1902; Eng. tr. idem, 1928); Robespierre (1939) etc.; Lilluli (1926).—VARIOUS: Vie de Beethoven (1902; tr. F. Rothwell, 1907); Vie de Michel-Ange (1906; tr. F. Lees, 1912); Vie de Tolstol (1911; tr. B. Miall, 1911); Mahatma Gandhi (1924; tr. C. D. Groth, 1924); Péguy (2 vols, 1944); Beethoven, Les grandes époques créatrices (1930, 1945).—Journal des années de guerre, 1914–19 (ed. Marie R. R. [his widow], 1953).

P. J. Jouve, R. R. vivant (1920); S. Zweig, R. R. (1929); A. R. Levy, L'idéalisme de R. R. (1946); R. Arcos, R. R. (1950); J. B. Barrère, R. R. par lui-même (1955); J. Robichez, R. R. (1961); R. Cheval, R. R. et l'Allemagne (1963).—Cahiers R. R. (1948–). M.G.; J.P.R.

Rolle, RICHARD (*Thornton Dale, Yorks c. 1300; †Hampole, Yorks 29 IX 1349), English mystic, hermit and writer. His canon is uncertain, but he wrote many Latin and English devotional treatises, scriptural commentaries and lyrics, most of them exalting the contemplative life; he is important in the development of English prose.

The Pricke of Conscience (now rejected from canon; ed. R. Morris, 1863); The Psalter Translated by R. R. (ed. H. R. Bramley, 1884); Incendium Amoris (R. Misy's Eng. tr. of 1435, ed. R. Harvey, 1896; Lat. text ed. M. Deanesly, 1915); C. Horstmann, Yorkshire Writers: R. R. of Hampole and His Followers (2 vols, 1895–96); R. R.: English Writings (ed. H. E. Allen, 1931); The Melos Amoris of R. R. of H. (ed. E. J. F. Arnould, 1957).

H. E. Allen, Writings Ascribed to R. R. (1927);

F. M. M. Comper, The Life of R. R. (1928); R. M. Wilson, 'Three Middle English mystics' in Essays and Stud., IX (1956); N. Marzac, R. R. de H. (1300-1349): vie et œuvres suivies du Tractatus super Apocalypsim (1968; with biblio.).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Rollenhagen, GEORG (*Bernau 22 IV 1542; †Magdeburg 20 V 1609), German poet and dramatist. Pedagogue and preacher, Rollenhagen is famous for his Froschmeuseler, a didactic but entertaining satire on 16th-century Germany modelled on the pseudo-Homeric Batrachomyomachia. He also wrote notable Lutheran dramas.

Froschmeuseler (1566, pub. 1595; ed. K. Goedeke, 2 vols, 1876).—PLAYS: Abraham (1569); Tobias (1576; ed. J. Bolte, 1930); Spiel vom reichen Manne und armen Lazaro (1590; ed. J. Bolte, 1929).

J. Bolte, Quellenstudien zu G. R. (1929); E. Sobel, 'G. R.' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., LXX (1955).
D.G.D.

Rolleston, THOMAS WILLIAM (*Shinrone, Co. Offaly 1857; †Hampstead 5 XII 1920), Irish poet and scholar. He wrote notable versions of Irish legends and his own poem 'The Dead at Clonmacnoise' remains one of the most evocative of all Irish poems.

Sea Spray (verse; 1909).—VARIOUS: The High Deeds of Finn (1910); Myths and Legends of the Celtic Race (1911).—A Treasury of Irish Poetry (ed., with Stopford Brooke; 1900).
E.T.W.

Rolli, PAOLO (*Rome 13 VI 1687; †Todi 20 III 1765), Italian poet and librettist; 'Eulibio Brenatiaco' in Arcadia. Living in England from 1715 to 1744, Rolli composed many operatic libretti and played a decisive part in creating the fashionable taste for Italian poetry and opera in London society. A prolific author of mellifluous Arcadian verse, in 1717 he published Le Rime, a collection of odes, endecasillabi and canzonette, in which he strove to capture a classical clarity of expression by modelling his style on that of Anacreon* and Catullus*. Other works include a collection of 95 epigrams (Marziale in Albion) and a translation of Milton's* Paradise Lost (1735).

Poetici componimenti (1782); Liriche (ed. C. Calcaterra, 1926; with important intro.).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959; with biblio.).

S. Fassini, Il melodramma italiano a Londra (1914); T. Vallese, P. R. in Inghilterra (1928); G. E. Dorris, P. R. and the Italian Circle in London (1967).
M.W.

Rølvaag, OLE EDVART (*Dønna, Helgeland, Norway 22 IV 1876; ∞1908 Jennie Berdahl; †Northfield, Minn. 5 XI 1931), American novelist.

His masterpiece, Giants in the Earth (1927), tells the tragedy of Scandinavian emigrants in the battle against the Frontier. His writings analyse the transition from the Old World to the New.

Peder Victorious (1929); Pure Gold (1930); Their Father's God (1931); The Boat of Longing (1933).
T. Jorgenson and N. O. Solum, O. E. R.: A Biography (1939).
H.L.C.

Romagnosi, GIANDOMENICO (*Salsomaggiore 11 XII 1761; †Milan 8 VI 1835), Italian patriot and legal writer, who inspired all the legislation of the Regno italico. On account of his contributions to the Conciliatore he was arrested and imprisoned, but liberated in 1821.
N.K.W.

Opere (1841-48); Scritti inediti (1862); Opuscoli filosofici (1919); Opere scelte di R., Cattaneo e Ferrari (with 'Nota bio-bibliografica'; ed. E. Sestan, 1957).

C. Cagli, G. R., la vita, i tempi, le opere (1935).
N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Romains, JULES, pseud. of LOUIS FARIGOULE (*Saint-Julien-Chapteuil 26 VIII 1885; †Paris 14 VIII 1972), French poet, dramatist and novelist, elected to the French Academy in 1946. After finishing his studies in Paris at the École Normale Supérieure (1909), he was for some years a teacher of philosophy. His characteristic early poems, La vie unanime (1908), were published by the small community of writers (including Georges Duhamel* and Charles Vildrac*) organized in 1907 at 'L'Abbaye' at Créteil. Unanimism, the relation of the individual to the group and of groups to each other (defined in Manuel de déification, 1910), forms, in its different aspects, the basis of all Romains' works from his early novels Mort de quelqu'un (1911) and Les copains (1913), through his plays—the most successful of which has been Knock, ou le triomphe de la médecine (1923)—to the vast Zolaesque fresco of French society between 1908 and 1933, the 27 volumes of Les hommes de bonne volonté (1932-48).

VERSE: Odes et prières (1913); Europe (1916); Chant de dix années (1928); L'homme blanc (1937); Pierres levées (1948).—PLAYS: Théâtre (7 vols), incl.: Knock (1923); Dr Knock, tr. H. Granville-Barker, 1925; Le dictateur (1930); Donogoo-Tonka (1931); L'armée dans la ville (1911); Cromedeyre-le-Vieil (1920); Volpone (adapt. with S. Zweig from Ben Jonson; 1928); Grâce encore pour la terre (1940); L'an mil (1947).—NOVELS AND PROSE WORKS: Le Bourg régénéré (1906); Puissances de Paris (1911); Le vin blanc de La Villette (1914); La vision extra-rétinienne (1920); Psyché, I: Lucienne (1922), II: Le dieu des corps (1928), III: Quand le navire (1929); The Men of Good Will (tr. W. B. Wells and G. Hopkins, 1933 ff.); Bertrand de Ganges (1940); Le moulin de l'hospice (1949); Violation de frontières (1951); Le fils de Jerphanion (1956); Une femme singulière (1957); Mémoires de Mme Chauverel (2 vols, 1959–60).—ESSAYS (about 20 vols): Ai-je fait ce que j'ai voulu? (1964); Pour raison garder (1960–67); Lettre ouverte contre une vaste conspiration (1966).

A. Cuisenier, R. et l'Unanimité (1935) and L'art de R. (1948); M. L. Bidal, Les écrivains de l'Abbaye (1938); N. Martin-Desliars, J. R. (1951); A. Figueres, J. R. (1952); M. Berry, J. R. (1960); A. Bourin and J. R., Connaissance de J. R. (1961).
T.W. (M.G.)

Roman, PASSION DE: see Autun Passion.

Roman de la Rose, French romance, begun by Guillaume* de Lorris c. 1235, and continued by Jean* Chopinel de Meung c. 1280.

Eds: E. Langlois (1914–24); F. Lecoy (1965–); Eng. trs: F. S. Ellis (3 vols, 1926–28); H. W. Robbins (1962).

C. S. Lewis, The Allegory of Love (1936); G. Paré, Le R. de la R. et la scolastique courtoise (1941) and Les idées et les lettres au XIIIe siècle (1947); F. W. Mueller, Der Rosenroman und der lateinische Averroismus des 13ten Jahrhunderts (1947); A. M. F. Gunn, The Mirror of Love (1952); J. V. Fleming, The R. de la R. (1969).
F.W.

Romanelli, SAMUEL AARON (*Mantua 19 IX 1757; †Cassale Monferato 17 X 1814), Hebrew–Italian poet and traveller. Little is known of his upbringing, as he left home very early in life. He supported himself during his wanderings by teaching, but mostly by writing occasional songs. However his great didactic poem, Ruach Nachon (Berlin, 1792), is of lasting value. He translated into Italian the Jewish prayer book, and also into Hebrew from the Italian classics.

Massa ba-Arab (Berlin, 1792; Eng. tr. S. M. Schiller-Szinessy, 1886–87); Zimrat Arizim (poems in honour of Napoleon; Mantua, 1807); Machaseh Shaday (coll. Hebrew and Ital. poems; ibid., 1808).
S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Romanes, GEORGE JOHN (*Kingston, Canada West 20 V 1848; ∞1879 Ethel Duncan; †Oxford 23 V 1894), English man of science whose works amplify Darwin's* teaching. His posthumous Thoughts on Religion (1895) shows modification of his early aggressive agnosticism. He endowed the Romanes Lectures in Oxford.

Candid Examination of Theism by Physicus (1878); Scientific Evidences of Organic Evolution (1882); Animal Intelligence (1883); Mental Evolution in Animals (1883); Mental Evolution in Man (1888); Darwin and after Darwin (1892); Mind and Motion and Monism (1895).

E. Romanes, Life and Letters of G. J. R. (1896).
R.M.H. (M.A.)

Romanov, KONSTANTIN, GRAND DUKE: see K. R.

Romanov, PANTELEYMON SERGEYEVICH (*1884; †1936), Soviet author whose novel Rus' (4 vols, 1924–36) was to be part of an ambitious plan to depict the transition between the old and the new Russia. Another topical problem is tackled in his novel Sobstvennost' (1933). He was an interesting transition figure who honestly tried to adapt himself to the demands of an entirely new era while yet remaining rooted in the ethical values of the old one.

Goluboye platye (1926); Russkaya dusha (1926); Bez cherēmukhi (1927); Novaya skrizhal' (1928); Rasskazy (1935).—Without Cherry Blossom (tr. L. Zarine, 1930); Three Pairs of Silk Stockings (tr. idem, 1931); The New Commandment (tr. V. Snow, 1933); On the Volga (tr. A. Gretton, 1934); Diary of a Soviet Marriage (tr. J. Furnivall and R. Parmenter, 1936).
J.L.

Romanus THE 'MELODOS' (fl. 5th–6th century), Byzantine poet, renowned for his church hymns. These are in the form of a kontakion and owe much to Syriac poetry, especially that of Ephrem*. With Romanus Greek hymnography appears to have made the change from quantitative to accented metre which characterizes its later development.
J.M.H.

P. Maas and C. Trypanis, Sancti Romani Melodi cantica (2 vols, 1963–70).—E. Wellesz, A History of Byzantine Music and Hymnography (2nd ed. 1961); K. Mitsakis, Byzantinē Hymnographia (1971).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Romberg, JOHANNES CHRISTLIEB NATHANAEAL (*Alt-Bukow, Mecklenburg 1808; †in his home on the San Bernard River, Texas 1891), Texas-German poet in the German classicist tradition.

Gedichte (ed. A. Wagner, 1900).

S. Metzenthin-Raunick in Amer.-Ger. Rev., XII (1946).
E.R.

Romein, JAN MARIUS (*Rotterdam 30 X 1893; ∞Anna Margaretha Verschoor; †Amsterdam 16 VII 1962), Dutch historian and essayist. Besides his many history books, he wrote fascinating but reliable essays. Together with his wife, he wrote the celebrated series, Erflaters van onze beschaving (4 vols, 1938–40), a portrait gallery of all important Dutchmen. In these essays, the liberal Marxist point of view of the authors and an insight backed by modern psychology are supported by an efficient, fluent style.

He was also a noted philosopher of history, following his teacher Huizinga* though tending more towards systematization; Theory of History has become an important branch of history teaching at Amsterdam University.

De dood van Nikephoros Phokas (short novel;

1929).—HISTORY: Dostojewsky in de westersche kritiek (1924); De lage landen bij de zee (with Annie R.-Verschoor; 1934); Het onvoltooid verleden (1937); In opdracht van de tijd (1946); De biografie (1946); Tussen vrees en vrijheid (1950); In de hof der historie (1951); Carillon der tijden (1953); De eeuw van Azië (1956; The Asian Century, tr. R. T. Clark, 1962); Eender en anders (1964); Op het breukvlak van twee eeuwen (ed. Annie R.-Verschoor, 2 vols, 1967).

De Nieuwe Stem, memorial no., XI, XII (1962); Jacob Presser, biblio. with intro. (1963). J.J.O.

Romero, José RUBÉN (*1890; †1952), Mexican novelist, author of a modern picaresque novel, La vida inútil de Pito Pérez (1938), a bitter denunciation of man's inhumanity to man put into the mouth of an unrepentant village drunkard.

J.F.

Mi caballo, mi perro y mi rifle (1926); Apuntes de un lugareño (1932); Desbandada (1934); El pueblo inocente (1934); Rosenda (1946).—Obras completas (ed. A. Castro Leal, Mexico, 1957).

G. La Farga, La evolución literaria de R. R. (1939); E. R. Moore, Novelistas de la Revolución mexicana: J. R. R. (1940); J. R. R. vida y obra, bibliografía, antología (New York, 1946).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Rompler van Löwenhalt, JESAIAS (*Dinkelsbühl c. 1610; †after 1672), German poet, founder of the Aufrichtige Tannengesellschaft in Strasbourg (1631), in opposition to the Prince of Anhalt's Fruchtbringende Gesellschaft and representing a South German Protestant Baroque in opposition to Opitz*. He also attempted spelling reforms.

Erstes Gebüsch Reimgetichte (1647).—J. H. Scholte, 'Wahrmond von der Tannen' in Neophilologus, XXI (1936); A. H. Kiel, J. R. van L. (diss. Amsterdam, with sel. of poems, very good; 1940) and 'Unveröffentlichte Briefe des J. R. van L. an J. H. Boecler' in Zschr. für die Gesch. des Ober-rheins, new ser., LIV (1943). L.W.F.

Romulus: see Phaedrus.

Roncesvalles, CANTAR DE (13th century). This 100-line Spanish epic fragment descends from the Chanson de Roland, and is probably of Navarrese origin. It contains, in powerful and economical form, CHARLEMAGNE's lament for his dead warriors.

R. Menéndez Pidal, Tres poetas primitivos (Buenos Aires, 1948); J. Horrent, R. Étude sur le fragment de cantar de gesta (1951) and La Chanson de Roland dans les littératures française et espagnole du Moyen Âge (1951). A.D.D.

Rondeletius, JACOBUS PETRI (*Runnaby c. 1580; †1662), Swedish cleric and dramatist. He became headmaster at Södertälje in 1613, and in 1614 wrote, for performance by his pupils, the play Judas Redivivus (in Swedish), a didactic tragedy founded on the medieval Judas legend, but reflecting also the influence of Asterophorus* Tisbe, of Plautus* and of Terence*.

Judas Redivivus (ed. G. Klemming, 1871).

G. Ljunggren, Svenska dramat intill slutet av sjuttonde århundradet (1864); A. Peterson, Det svenska skoldramat (1929).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Ronsard, PIERRE DE (*Manoir de la Possonnière nr Vendôme 11 IX 1524 or 1525; †Abbey of Saint-Cosme, Touraine 27 XII 1585), French poet, leader of the PLÉIADE. Ronsard says that he was born on 'Saturday, Sept. 11th, in the year of the battle of Pavia' (1524 O.S. or 1525 N.S.). In neither year was this a Saturday and 2 IX 1524 or 1525 have also been proposed. He was intended for a career of arms and diplomacy and became a page to the Dauphin at the age of ten. With various masters he visited Scotland, the Netherlands and Alsace—travels without effect on his later work. At 18 a serious illness left him partly deaf. He was tonsured but not ordained and turned to literature. Intensive study under Dorat at the Collège de Coqueret in company with J. A. de Baif* and J. Du* Bellay gave him a deep knowledge of Greek and Latin literature, of which the first fruits appeared in his Odes (1550 and 1552), of Pindaric and Horatian inspiration; a little later (1554–55) the influence of Anacreon* appears in his work (H. Estienne*). Meanwhile the example of Italian poets, particularly Petrarch*, had inspired the first Amours (1552–53), consisting chiefly of sonnets and addressed to Cassandre de Salviati whom Ronsard traditionally met at a ball at Blois and continued to adore after her marriage. His second and third Amours (1555–56), of more native and sensual inspiration, are addressed to Marie, a country-girl of Anjou whose identification (as e.g. Marie Du Pin) is only conjecture. Also in 1555–56 Ronsard published his first Hymnes, occasional poems in the grand manner addressed to his friends or to the great. By 1560 ten years' work had established him as the exponent of a new poetry based on HUMANISM which now replaced any lingering medieval conceptions, and a dominant figure in letters and at court. Lucrative abbey were granted him (Saint-Cosme, 1564; Croixval, 1565), where he spent much of his time.

After 1560 he wrote notably: Les Discours (1560–70), noble poems in alexandrines allied to the earlier Hymnes and treating the wars of religion from the Roman Catholic and national standpoint; La Franciade (1572), an unsuccessful mythological epic of the French monarchy, in decasyllables, of which only four books out of 24 appeared; a group of sonnets on the death of Marie, attached in 1578 to the earlier Amours de

Marie, but now believed to be courtier's poems on the death (1574) of Marie de Clèves, the young mistress of Henri III; and the Sonnets pour Hélène (1578), perhaps his finest work, addressed to Hélène de Surgères, maid-of-honour to Catherine de Medicis.

In his last years Ronsard became detached from the court, which favoured the younger poet Desportes*. Tormented by arthritis, he died at Saint-Cosme after a painful journey. Though condemned by Malherbe* and neglected for 250 years, Ronsard again stands as the chief figure in French Renaissance poetry, an innovator of immense technical virtuosity though of narrower emotional range. He established, though he did not introduce, the alexandrine, and with Du Bellay fixed the form of the French sonnet. To his main work should be added the important collections: Les Follastries (1553), Les Bocages (1550, 1554) and Élégies, Mascarades et Bergeries (1565). His constant rearrangements of his poems complicate his bibliography, studied in full in P. Laumonier, Tableau chronologique des œuvres de Ronsard (1911).

Les Amours (ed. H. W. and C. Weber, 1963); Le Bocage (ed. G. Cohen, 1937); Sonnets pour Hélène (ed. M. Smith, 1970).—Œuvres collectives (1560, 1578, 1584, 1587, etc.); Œuvres complètes (ed. G. Cohen, 2 vols, 1938, follows 1584 ed.; ed. P. Laumonier et al., 1914 ff., authoritative); Œuvres (ed. I. Silver, 1965 ff., follows 1587 ed.).

P. Laumonier, R., poète lyrique (1909); G. Cohen, R., sa vie et son œuvre (1924); P. Champion, R. et son temps (1925); M. Raymond, L'Influence de R. (1927); M. Bishop, R., Prince of Poets (1940); G. Gadoffre, R. par lui-même (1960); R. Lebègue, R., l'homme et l'œuvre (1966); D. Stone, R.'s Sonnet Cycles (1966). G.B.

Roovere, ANTHONIS DE (*Bruges c. 1430; †16 V 1482), Dutch poet in the REDERIJER tradition (motto: 'Den voys hoert eer an'), bricklayer by trade and organizer of festivities, member of the Chamber of Rhetoric De H. Geest. At the age of 17 he was given the title 'Prinche van rethorycken'. From 1465 he received a special annual grant from the town of Bruges. He practised well-nigh all the genres of the Rederijkers. From his plays only the Morality Quicunque vult salvus esse has been preserved. In prose he wrote De blyde incoempste van Vrouw Margriete van Yorck and probably also the section 1467–82 in Die excellente cronike van Vlaenderen. His Lof van den heylighen Sacramente (1457) was printed in 1478 and has come down to us in several MSS. The dialogue Van pays ende oorloghe is known from the editions of 1557 and 1578. Eighty years after his death his fellow-townsmen Edewaerd de Dene* published a large anthology of his refrains (especially didactic and religious ones, among which are some ingenious eulogies on the Virgin Mary), rondels (sourly satirical) and other shorter pieces, under the title Rethoricale Wercken (1562).

Gedichten van A. de R. (ed. J. J. Mak, 1955); Blyde incoempste (ed. W. G. Brill in Kronijk v. h. Hist. Genootschap te Utrecht, 1866); Quicunque vult salvus esse (ed. L. Scharpé in Leuvense Bijdragen, IV, 1900).

G. C. van t'Hoog, A. de R. (1918); J. J. Mak, Uyt Ionsten Versaemt (1957); A. Viaene, 'A. de R., "Stadsdichter v. Brugge" (1466–1482)' in Ad Harenas (1960); R. Willemyns in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1967); G. Stuiveling, Vakwerk (1967); W. L. Braekman in Jaarboek De Fontaine (1968). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Roper, WILLIAM (*Canterbury 1496; ∞2 VII 1521 Margaret More; †ibid. 4 I 1578), English biographer. Roper's Life of Sir Thomas More, his father-in-law, which was composed about 1535 but published first in Paris in 1626, gives a delightful picture of the More* household and is one of the first biographies in English. J.B.B.

Ropshin, V., pseud. of BORIS SAVINKOV (*1879; †1926), Russian revolutionary author who played a somewhat ambiguous political part after 1917 and eventually committed suicide. His novel, Kon' bledny (1913; The Pale Horse, tr. Z. Vengerova, 1917), is an interesting dissection of a terrorist's mind. J.L.

Rørdam, VALDEMAR (*Dalby 23 IX 1872; ∞1901 Margrethe Jensine Hansen, ∞1938 Margaretha Brill; †Copenhagen 14 VII 1946), Danish poet. He was a prolific and versatile writer, the majority of his 50 books being poems. He learnt much from English poets, especially Swinburne* and Kipling*, and he made some excellent translations of Kipling, Reymont* and Pushkin*. The strong moralizing and patriotic fervour of his lyric poetry, which demanded sacrifices from his countrymen, and his jingoism had a certain effect, which was lost when he praised Hitler and the Nazis during the occupation of Denmark. He realized his fatal mistake and died a disappointed man.

Dansk Tunge (1901); Gudrun Dyre (1902); Den gamle Kaptajn (3 vols, 1906–07); Strid og Strængeleg (1912); Udvalgte Digte fra tyve Aar (2 vols, 1918); Afrodites Boldspil (1920); Jens Hvas til Ulyborg (2 vols, 1922–23); Sangen om Danmark (1923); Danmark i tusind Aar (1940).—Udvalgte Digte 1895–1940 (1966). E.B.

Rosa, SALVATORE (*Naples 21 VI 1615; ∞Lucrezia Paolino; †Rome 15 III 1673), Italian painter and satirical poet. The often-displayed erudition in his seven Satire is counterbalanced by their value as a document of his times. They deal with corruption among musicians and ecclesiastics; literary and artistic fashions—which he castigates; the scourge of war; and the polemics in which he was involved. His letters reveal a fascinating personality.

Satire (Amsterdam [Rome], 1694; crit. ed. G. A. Cesareo in Poesie e Lettere edite e inedite di S. R., 2 vols, 1892); Lettere inedite di S. R. a G. B. Ricciardi (ed. A. de Rinaldis, 1939); Poesie e lettere inedite (ed. U. Limentani, 1950).

L. Ozzola, Vita e opere di S. R. (1908); U. Limentani, 'S. R. Nuovi studi e ricerche' in Ital. Stud., VIII-IX (1953-54), Bibliografia della vita e delle opere di S. R. (1955), 'S. R.' in La Satira del Seicento (1961) and 'S. R.: supplemento alla bibliografia' in Forum Italicum (Mar. 1973); L. Salerno, S. R. (1963). U.L.

Rosales, LUIS (*Granada 1910), neo-classical Spanish poet, literary critic and, with Luis Vivanco*, dramatist.

Abril (1935); Retablo sacro del nacimiento del Señor (1940); La casa encendida (1949); Rimas (1951); El contenido del corazón (1969). J.E.V.

Roscoe, WILLIAM (*Liverpool 8 III 1753; ∞1781 Jane Griffies; †ibid. 30 VI 1831), English banker, botanist, philanthropist and author of biographical works on the Italian Renaissance. He also wrote against the slave trade and composed the nursery classic 'The Butterfly's Ball and the Grasshopper's Feast' (in The Gentleman's Magazine, 1806). R.M.H.

The Wrongs of Africa (1787); Life of Lorenzo de' Medici (1796); The Life and Pontificate of Leo X (1805); Illustrations of the Life of L. de Medici (1822).—Poetical Works (1853).

H. Roscoe, Life of W. R. (1833); Sir C. S. Jones, W. R. 1753-1831 (1931); W. R. of Liverpool (ed. with life by G. Chandler, 1953).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Roscommon, WENTWORTH DILLON, EARL OF (*Ireland ?1633; ∞IV 1662 Lady Frances Boyle, ∞X 1674 Isabella Matthew; †London I 1685), English courtier-poet, who studied at the Protestant University of Caen, travelled in France, Germany and Italy, was skilled in linguistics and numismatics. Returning to England on the Restoration, Roscommon lived the life of a 'wit', gambling, duelling, yet lived to form an academy like that at Caen. A fine orator, he wrote on translated verse, was the first critic to praise Paradise Lost publicly, recommending blank verse as a medium.

The Miscellaneous Works of the late Earls of Rochester and R. (1707); Poems by the Earl of R. (1717; repr. Johnson, X; Anderson, VI; Chalmers, VIII).—Horace's Art of Poetry, made English (1680; 1684, facs. 1971); An Essay on Translated Verse (1684; enlarged 1685; repr. in J. E. Spingarn, Critical Essays of the 17th Century, III, 1909; facs. 1971).

S. Johnson, Lives, I (1781; repr. G. B. Hill, I, 1905). B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Rosenberg, WILHELM LUDWIG (*Hamm, Westphalia 10 I 1850; †Lillian, Ala. 30 I 1934), German-American author. Driven out by the German anti-socialist law, he continued his politics in America.

VERSE: Lieder und Gedichte (1881); An der Weltenwende (1910); Krieg dem Kriege (1915); Weltverrat und Weltgericht (1920).—Crumbleton (drama; 1898).—VARIOUS: Irrfahrten, eine soziale Lebensgeschichte (1880); Aus dem Reiche des Tantalus, Skizzen (1888). E.R.

Rosenplüt, HANS (=HANS SCHNEPPERER) (fl. c. 1430-60), brass-worker and poet of Nürnberg. He wrote historical and political songs, lyrics, didactic and satirical poems, Schwünke (see SCHWANK) and Shrovetide plays. He perfected the didactic sub-genre 'Priamel'. Though much of what he wrote is crudely vulgar, his purpose was always serious.

No complete ed.—A. Keller, Fastnachtsspiele, III (4 vols, 1853-58); K. Euling, Das Priamel bis H. R. (1905); G. Ehrismann, Gesch. der dt. Lit., final vol. (1935); H. Maschek, Lyrik des späten MA.s (Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, 1939). F.P.P.

Rosenstein, NILS (ROSEN) VON (*Uppsala 12 XII 1752; †Stockholm 7 VIII 1824), Swedish orator, philosopher and civil servant. A follower of French Enlightenment, he, at the invitation of Gustav* III, became the first secretary of the Swedish Academy. He was a great patron of the arts and a friend of the leading writers of his day.

Anmärkingar om vitterhet och smak (1787); Försök till en afhandling om upplysningen (1793); Samlade skrifter (ed. J. N. Tersmeden, 3 vols, 1838); N. von R.'s brevsamling (ed. H. Schück, 1905).

L. M. Enberg, 'Åminnelsetal' in Svenska akademien handlingar ifrån år 1796, XI (1827); H. Larssen, 'R.'s avhandling om upplysningen' in Gemenskap (1932). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Rosetti, CONSTANTIN (*Bucharest 1816; †ibid. 1885), Rumanian politician and poet. One of the leading figures in the 1848 revolution in Wallachia, he was driven into exile and helped Bălcescu* to edit România viitoare in Paris. He returned to Wallachia in 1857 and took over the journal Românul, which pressed for a united Rumania. As a young man he wrote a volume of poetry, Ceasuri de Mulțumire (1843), which shows the influence of French Romanticism, and he translated from Byron*, Lamartine* and Hugo*.

Istoria literaturii române, II (1968); R. Pantazi, C. A. R. Ginditorul (1969). D.J.D.

Roshi: see Asher ben Yechiel.

Rosmini-Serbati, ANTONIO (*Rovereto 24 III 1797; †Stresa 1 VII 1855), Italian philosopher, political writer, scholar and founder of the religious Order of the Rosminians. His Nuovo saggio sull'origine delle idee (1830) showed more originality than any other Italian philosophical work since Vico's* death. His bold independence of thought soon found him enemies and he retired to Stresa, spending his last years on works of philosophy and religion and enjoying the friendship of Manzoni*. That his influence on Italian writers was not greater was largely due to his cumbersome style.

Opere edite e inedite (1934 ff.); Epistolario completo (1887-94); Le cinque piaghe della santa Chiesa (1849; ed. C. Riva, 1966).

G. Bozzetti, A. R. nell'aspetto estetico e letterario (1909); C. Caviglione, Bibliografia delle opere di A. R. (1925); L. Bulferetti, A. R. nella Restaurazione (1955); F. Traniello, Società religiosa e società civile in R. (1966; with full biblio.).

N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Rosny, J. H., joint pseud. of JOSEPH-HENRI BOËX (*Brussels 17 II 1856; †Paris 15 II 1940) and JUSTIN BOËX (*Brussels 21 VII 1859; †Paris 14 VI 1948), French novelists. The brothers signed their novels jointly until 1908. Then they published separately as ROSNY AÎNÉ and ROSNY JEUNE. Their huge output has the most varied settings, from pre-history to modern society, and has philosophical and moral aspects.

Signed J. H. Rosny: L'immolation (1887); Vamireh (1892); L'impériuse bonté (1905).—Signed Rosny aîné: La guerre du feu (1911); La vague rouge (1910); Les rafales (1912); La force mystérieuse (1914); L'appel au bonheur (1919); Les pécheresses (1928).—Signed Rosny jeune: L'affaire dérive (1909); Sépulchres blanchis (1913); La courtisane passionnée (1924); La pantine (1929).

M. C. Poinot, J. H. R. (1907); G. Cazella, R. (1907).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Ross, MARTIN: see Somerville, EDITH (ANNA) GENONE.

Ross, SINCLAIR (*Prince Albert, Saskatchewan 1908), Canadian novelist and story writer who was a bank clerk for many years in small Western towns and now works for Royal Bank in Montreal. His realistic studies of prairie life are highly regarded for their psychological penetration and effective atmosphere.

As For Me and My House (1941); The Well (1958).—D. Stephens, 'Wind, sun and dust' in Canad. Lit., XXIII (1965).

R.Su.

Rossetti, CHRISTINA GEORGINA (*London 5 XII 1830; †ibid. 29 XII 1894), English poet, daughter of Gabriele Rossetti*. Often compared with George Herbert*, Christina Rossetti possessed something of the same power to express deep religious feeling in apparently simple terms. She lived a life of self-dedication, twice renouncing the prospect of marriage for the sake of her faith. The passionate southern strain in her nature found its outlet in lyricism of great strength and subtlety. Her direct phrasing is woven by repetition and rhyme into patterns of exquisite melody, and a profound sadness permeates its quiet cadences.

Goblin Market and Other Poems (1862); The Prince's Progress (1866); A Pageant and Other Poems (1881); Verses (1893); New Poems (1896).—Poetical Works (with a memoir by W. M. Rossetti, 1904).

H. T. M. Bell, C. R., a Biographical and Critical Study (1898); D. M. Stuart, C. R. (1930); E. W. Thomas, C. G. R. (1931); L. M. Packer, C. R. (1963).

R.F. (M.A.)

Rossetti, GABRIEL CHARLES DANTE (*London 12 V 1828; ∞1860 Elizabeth Siddal [†1862]; †ibid. 9 IV 1882), English poet and painter, the son of Gabriele Rossetti*. He was educated at King's College School, Cary's Art Academy and the Royal Academy. He later became a pupil of Ford Madox Brown and in 1848 met Millais and Holman Hunt and formed the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood. In 1850 the first number of The Germ was published, and in this journal Rossetti published 'The Blessed Damozel' and other poems, which provoked Buchanan's* attack on 'The Fleshly School of Poetry'. Rossetti's poetry was perhaps weakened by his visual preoccupation and his painting by his literary interests, but his best ballads and sonnets are dramatic as well as decorative.

Poems (1870); Ballads and Sonnets (1881); The House of Life, a Sonnet-Sequence (ed. P. F. Baum, 1928).—The Collected Works of D. G. R. (ed. W. M. Rossetti, 2 vols, 1886); The Works of D. G. R. (ed. idem, 1911); D. G. R., An Anthology (ed. F. L. Lucas, 1933).—Letters (ed. O. Doughty and J. R. Wahl, 5 vols, 1965- ).

W. Sharp, D. G. R. A Record and a Study (1882); E. L. Cary, The R.s (1900); W. Holman Hunt, Preraphaelitism and the Preraphaelite Brotherhood (2 vols, 1905); C. Davies, D. G. R. (1925); S. Ghose, D. G. R. and Contemporary Criticism, 1849-1882 (Dijon, 1929); L. Wolff, D. G. R. (Paris, 1934); E. R. Vincent, G. R. in England (1936); O. Doughty, A Victorian Romantic (1949); G. H. Flemming, R. and the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood (1967).

B.H. (M.A.)

Rossetti, GABRIELE (*Vasto, Abruzzi 28 II 1783; †London 24 IV 1854), Italian patriot, poet and scholar. Exiled after the Naples revolution in 1821 which he celebrated in an ode 'Sei pur bella con gli astri sul crine', he taught at King's College, London, and in his works Commento analitico della Divina Commedia (1826-27), Mistero dell' amore platonico (1842) and Beatrice di Dante (1842) presents Dante* as the exponent of anti-Papalism and Church reform. Rossetti wrote various volumes of poetry—Poesie (1806), Iddio e l'uomo (1833), religious in inspiration as is also L'Arpa evangelica (1852)—and patriotic lyrics.

Le poesie di G. R. (ed. Carducci, 1879); Opere inedite e rare. Poesie inedite e rare tratte dagli autografi (ed. D. Ciampoli, 4 vols, 1929–31).

G. Perale, L'opera di G. R. (1906); R. D. Waller, The R. Family (1932); E. R. Vincent, G. R. in England (1936). N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Rossi, VITTORIO (*Venice 3 IX 1865; †Rome 18 I 1938), Italian philologist, scholar, historian and literary critic. His later work combines the best of both the historical and the idealistic schools of criticism.

Storia della letteratura italiana (1900–02); Scritti di critica letteraria (3 vols, 1930); Il Quattrocento (1933).

Un cinquantennio di studi sulla letteratura italiana (1937); L'opera d'un maestro, Bibliografia ragionata degli scritti di V. R. (1938). N.K.W.

Rostand, EDMOND EUGÈNE ALEXIS (*Marseilles 1 IV 1868; ∞ Rosemonde Gérard; †Paris 2 XII 1918), French dramatist, elected to the French Academy in 1902. Rostand's early plays in verse, Les Romanesques (1894), La princesse lointaine (1895), and La Samaritaine (1897), all show the rich fund of lyricism and the remarkable verbal virtuosity which found their finest expression in Cyrano de Bergerac (1897; tr. H. Wolfe, 1937), a masterpiece of heroic drama on the theme of the unrequited love of an ugly soldier-poet of the 17th century. The hero of L'Aiglon (1900; tr. B. Davenport, 1927), the tragedy of the ineffectual son of a great soldier, is Napoleon's son, the Duc de Reichstadt. Chantecler (1910), in which all the characters are animals and birds, owes much to La* Fontaine's Fables and Hugo's* La forêt mouillée. Produced in 1910, it was not a success but it was well received on its revival in 1926. Rostand's plays are not so much an innovation in French poetic drama as the last exuberant blossoming of the Romantic drama launched by Victor Hugo in Hernani.

La dernière nuit de Don Juan (play; 1921).—VERSE: Les musardises (1890); Le cantique de l'aile (1922); Le vol de la Marseillaise (1922).

G. Haraszti, E. R. (1913); J. Suberville, Le théâtre de R. (1921); A. Apestéguy, La vie profonde d'E. R. (1929); N. J. Premela, E. R. (1933); J. W. Grieve, L'œuvre dramatique de R. (1931); R. Gérard, E. R. (1935). T.W.

Rostand, MAURICE (*Paris 26 V 1891; †Ville d'Avray 21 II 1968), French poet and dramatist, son of Edmond, wrote numerous collections of poems and plays in verse often dealing with historical subjects, the best of which is La gloire (1921).

VERSE: Les insomnies (1913); Morbidezza (1928).—L'homme que j'ai tué (novel; 1925).—PLAYS: Napoléon IV (1928); Le dernier Tzar (1929); Le procès d'Oscar Wilde (1935).

P. Brisson, Le théâtre des années folles (1943); G. Pillement, Anthologie du théâtre français contemporain, III (1948). T.W.

Rostworowski, KAROL HUBERT, COUNT (*Rybná 3 XI 1877; †Cracow 4 II 1938), Polish poet and playwright. After studying music and philosophy, he settled in Cracow (1914). A convinced Roman Catholic and nationalist, he is sometimes called the Polish Mauriac*. From experimenting in naturalism in his first plays, he turned to psychological dramas of ideas (Judas z Kariothu, 1913; Kajus Cezar Kaligula, 1917) in which he tried in an Expressionistic manner to throw new light on legendary characters. In the Mystery Miłosierdzie (1920) humanity is the only actor. The naturalistic trilogy on peasant life (Niespodzianka, 1929; Przeprowadzka, 1930; U mety, 1932) is both tragic and comic. Rostworowski's main preoccupation is man's relationship to God.

PLAYS: Zmartwychwstanie (1923); Antychryst (1925); Czerwony marsz (1931).—VERSE: Zygzyki (1932); Dramaty wybrane (1967).

R. Bergel, 'Tradycje dramatyki ludowej w teatrze R.' in Życie Teatru, IX (1926); S. Adamczewski, 'Drogi i bezdroża twórczości R.' in Kultura, XVIII (1932); K. Czachowski, 'R. Polish tragic dramatist' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XVII (1938–39). S.S. (P.H.)

Rotgans, LUCAS (*Amsterdam X 1654; ∞ Anna A. de Salengre; †Kromzicht, Breukelen 3 XI 1710), Dutch poet. A patrician, he served in the army 1672–74 and afterwards went to Paris. In addition to traditional poems he wrote the epic Wilhelm III (2 vols, 1698–1700) and the mildly realistic poem De Boerenkermis (1708; repr. 1851), both important despite the regular versification of his time.

J.W.W.

VERSE: Gedichten (1691); Poëzy van verscheidene mengelstoffen (with biog. F. Halma, 1715).—PLAYS: Scilla (1711; ed. L. Strengholt, 1966); Eneas en Turnus (1715; ed. idem, 1959).

W. Kloos, Een daad van eenvoudige rechtvaardigheid (1909); W. A. P. Smit, 'R.'s epos Wilhelm de Derde' in Verslag Provinciaal Utrechts Genootschap (1950). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Roth, HENRY (*Austria-Hungary 8 II 1906), American novelist. Although he wrote only one book, Call It Sleep (1934), which was so poorly received that he withdrew in disgust from the literary scene, this chronicle of the mental suffering and bewilderment of a Jewish child in New York, crippled by his helplessness with the new language and yet capable of religious vision within his own culture, has come to be seen as one of the most remarkable documents of immigrant life. Since his self-imposed silence, Roth has worked as a machinist, one-room schoolteacher and water-fowl farmer.

D.E.Mo.

Roth, JOSEF (*Schwabendorf nr Brody 2 VI 1894; †Paris 27 V 1939), Austrian novelist, essayist, critic. With Musil*, Broch* and Stefan Zweig*, he is an important chronicler of the Habsburg monarchy. All his characters experience the impossibility of shaking off the impersonal power and magic of the old world, which as an 'infection' and inescapable dimension of the soul constantly threatens their personal identity, notably in the novel Radetzkymarsch (1932). Ironic detachment from and complete abandonment to the 'Habsburg myth' are both characteristic of Roth's work. Like many Austrian writers of his generation, he is a skilled craftsman and stylist.

NOVELS: Hotel Savoy (1924); Die Flucht ohne Ende (1927); Hiob (1930); Die hundert Tage (1936); Die Kapuzinerkrufft (1938; sequel to Radetzkymarsch).—SHORT STORIES: Die Legende vom heiligen Trinker (1939); Der Leviathan (1940).—ESSAYS: Juden auf der Wanderschaft (1926); Panoptikum (1930); Der Antichrist (1934).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesammelte Werke (ed. H. Kesten, 3 vols, 1956); Romane, Erzählungen, Aufsätze (1964).

H. Böll, 'Leben und Werk J. R.s' in Deutsche Rundschau, LXXXIII (1957); C. Magris, 'J. R.' in Der Habsburgische Mythos in der österreichischen Literatur (1966; tr. of Ital. ed., 1963); H. Scheible, J. R. (1970).

F.M.K.

Roth, PHILIP (*Newark, N.J. III 1933), American short-story writer and novelist. His first novel, Goodbye, Columbus (1959), a wry portrait of a vacation romance between students who ask more than their limited independence can permit, was an immediate success. A graduate of the University of Chicago (1955) and teacher there immediately afterwards, Roth has put his knowledge of the American campus to good use.

Letting Go (1962); Portnoy's Complaint (1969).

D.E.Mo.

Rothe, JOHANNES (†1434), German moralist, canon of Eichstätt. Der Ritterspiegel, a stanzaic speculum written for and with the advice of 'noble friends', gives the contemporary ideal of the Christian gentleman and soldier, the neighbour of peasant and townsman, engaged if need be in commerce. It owes nothing to the chivalrous epic; it seeks its authority in the Fathers and Vegetius* classic on military strategy.

Thüring. Chronik (ed. R. von Liliencron, 1859); Die hl. Elisabeth (excerpt) in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., X (1882–89); Des rätis czucht or Von der stete ampten ('Of Civic Office'; ed. A. Heinrich, 1913); Lob der Keuschheit (ed. H. Neumann, 1934); Ritterspiegel (ed. idem, 1936).

J. Petersen, Das Rittertum in der Darstellung des J. R. (1909).

F.P.P.

Rothensteiner, JOHN ERNST (*St Louis, Mo. 7 I 1860; †ibid. 26 IX 1936), German-American poet and excellent translator.

VERSE: Hoffnung und Erinnerung (1903); Indianersommer (1906); Heliotrope (1908); Am sonnigen Hang (1909); Lieder eines Deutschamerikaners (1916).—TRANSLATIONS: A German Garden of the Heart (1934).—VARIOUS: Die literarische Wirksamkeit der deutschamerikanischen Katholiken (1922).

B. Wilram, J. R. der deutschamerikanische Priestersänger, ausgewählte Dichtungen (1924); F. Bruns, 'J. R.†' in Monatshefte f. dt. Unterricht (Wisc.), XXVIII (1936).

E.R.

Rothmann, MARIA ELIZABETH: see M. E. R.

Rotrou, JEAN (~Dreux 21 VIII 1609; †ibid. 28 VI 1650), French dramatist. He was attached as a 'hired author' in succession to Hardy* to the Hôtel de Bourgogne, for which he wrote 35 known plays. A prolific writer of comedies and romantic or melodramatic tragi-comedies, he was P. Corneille's* chief competitor in the 1630s and 1640s. His best-known tragedies are Saint Genest (acted 1645), one of the last French religious tragedies until Racine's* Esther (1689), Venceslas, a drama of love and politics set in Poland, and Cosroës, a political drama comparable to some of Corneille's more powerful plays. He drew heavily on Spanish sources and in his turn was pillaged by later dramatists including probably Racine.

COMEDIES: Filandre (1633); Clorinde (1635); La Belle Alphrède (1636).—TRAGEDIES: L'Hypocondriaque (1628; crit. ed. F. Gohin, 1924); Hercule mourant (?1634); Agésilas de Colchos (1636); Laure persécutée (c. 1638); Antigone (1637); Iphigénie (1640); Bélisaire (1643); Le Véritable Saint Genest (1645; crit. ed. T. F. Crane, New York, 1907); Venceslas (1647; crit. ed. idem, 1907; ed. W. Leiner, Saarbrücken, 1956); Cosroës (1648; ed. J. Scherer, 1950).—Œuvres (ed. Viollet-le-Duc, 5 vols, 1820); Théâtre choisi (ed. F. Hémon, 1883).

H. Chardon, La vie de R. (1884); H. C. Lancaster, A History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th century, I, II (1929–32); Rev. d'hist. litt. de la France, L (1950); I. Buffum, Studies in the Baroque (Yale, 1957); J. van Baelen, R. (1965); J. Morel, R., dramaturge de l'ambiguïté (1968).

G.B.

Roud, GUSTAVE (*Vevey 20 IV 1897), the Franco-Swiss Hesiod*. His works draw upon the countryside around Jorat, which he knows so well and where he lives, to express fleeting moments of harmony between the poet and world. His poems express his search for the invisible in the very heart of the visible. He has made fine translations from Hölderlin*, Novalis*, Rilke* and Trakl*.

Écrits (coll. works; 3 vols, 1950–70).

Hommage à G. R. (1957); P. Jaccottet, G. R. (1968). G.G.

Rougémont, DENIS LOUIS DE (*Neuchâtel 8 IX 1906), Swiss essayist. Professor, editor and publisher of reviews in Switzerland and Paris, active in a number of liberal and cultural organizations. Since 1934, he has adhered to E. Mounier's* philosophy of personalism as an active member of the Esprit movement. Famous for the publication of L'amour et l'occident (1939; Passion and Society, tr. M. Belgion, 1940), which threw new light on the sources of European civilization, in more than 20 brilliant and convincing works he has defended spiritual values with talent, knowledge and faith.

Politique de la personne (1934); Penser avec les mains (1936); La part du diable (1942; Talk of the Devil, tr. K. Raine, 1945); Vivre en Amérique (1947); L'aventure occidentale de l'homme (1957); Man's Western Quest, tr. M. Belgion, 1947); Comme toi-même: essais sur les mythes de l'amour (1961, 1968; Eng. tr. R. Howard, 1964); Les chances de l'Europe (1962; The Meaning of Europe, tr. A. Braley, 1965); La Suisse ou l'histoire d'un peuple heureux (1965); Journal d'un époque 1926–46 (1968). M.G.

Rouget de Lisle, CLAUDE-JOSEPH (*Lons-le-Saulnier 10 V 1760; †Choisy-le-Roi 20 VI 1836), French poet and song-writer, author of at least the words of the first six stanzas of Le Chant de guerre de l'armée du Rhin, composed 25/26 IV 1792, renamed La Marseillaise after 30 VII 1792. The final stanza (not Rouget's) is sometimes ascribed to the journalist L. Du Bois. The origin of the music (rearranged 1887) has been much debated, but Rouget's authorship of it has not been conclusively disproved.

Essais en vers et en prose (1797); Chants français (1825).

H. Coutant, La Marseillaise, son histoire depuis 1792 (1919); M. Henry-Rosier, R. de L. (1937); M. de la Fuye and E. Guéret, R. de L. inconnu (1943). G.B.

Roumain, JACQUES (*1907; †1944), Haitian poet, novelist, ethnologist, essayist, civil servant, politician and diplomat; born of an élite mulatto family, educated in Europe and in the U.S.A., co-editor of La Revue indigène (1927), an important modern review stressing the value of native Haitian (including African) culture. He founded the Haitian Communist party in 1934. His poetry, largely in free verse, is of ardent protest and emotional tension, based on Haitian experience. His chief work, however, is his novels dealing with Haitian urban and peasant life. His vigorous and dramatic style includes Creolisms.

NOVELS: La proie et l'ombre (1930); Les fantoches (1931); La montagne ensorcelée (1931); Gouverneurs de la rosée (his best novel; 1944; tr. Masters of the Dew, New York, 1947).—Bois d'ébène (verse; 1945). D.P.

Roumanille, JOSEPH (*Saint-Rémy 8 VIII 1818; †Avignon 24 V 1891), Provençal writer and poet. Roumanille was the friend and instructor of Mistral*, one of the founders of the FÉLIBRIGE, and the editor of the Armana Provençau. His own work, which took many different forms, is marked by a lyrical gift shot through with humour. He wrote in a homely and familiar style, and had a markedly moral outlook and a strongly controversial turn of mind.

VERSE: Li margarideto (1848); Li Sounjarello (1851); Lis oubreto en vers (1862).—PROSE: Lis oubreto en prose (1859); Li conte provençau (1883); Li Cascareleto (1883).—La part dou bon Dieu (play; 1853).

E. Ripert, La renaissance provençale (1918) and J. R. (1948). M.G.; J.P.R.

Roumer, ÉMILE: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

Rous, FRANCIS (*Dittisham, Devon 1579; ∞?Philippa; †Acton I 1659), English Puritan divine. Rous was Provost of Eton and Speaker of the 'Little Parliament' as well as a theologian.

The Psalms of David in English Meeter (1643); Treatises and Meditations (1657). J.B.B.

Rousseau, JEAN-BAPTISTE (*Paris 6 IV 1671; †Brussels 17 III 1741), French poet and dramatist. The son of a cobbler, he was of arrogant character and easily made enemies. On the eve of his election to the French Academy he was accused of slander and obliged to leave France (1710; FORGERIES). He spent the rest of his life abroad in poverty (Switzerland, Vienna, Brussels, London). He excelled in the ode on general and topical subjects (À la Fortune, Sur la mort de Conté) and in his dignified, rhetorical manner was one of the foremost French serious poets of his age.

PLAYS: Le Café (1694); Le Flatteur (1696); Le Capricieux (1700).—VERSE: Odes, Cantates, etc. (London, 1723).—Œuvres (1743, 1757; ed. A. de Latour, 1868–69).

Voltaire, Vie de J.-B. R. (1748); H. A. Grubbs, J.-B. R. (1941). G.B.

Rousseau, JEAN-JACQUES (*Geneva 28 VI 1712; ∞1768 Thérèse Levasseur; †Ermenonville nr Paris 2 VII 1778), French writer and philosopher. His French Calvinist ancestors came to Geneva in 1550. He lost his mother at birth and lived with his irresponsible father, a watchmaker, who 'educated' him by the reading of both Calvinist sermons and romantic novels of the 17th century. From ten to 16 the instability of his life under various unsympathetic guardians and employers in Geneva added to the instability of his character. From 16 to 29 he extended the field of his wanderings to Savoy, Piedmont and France, becoming converted to Catholicism out of sheer opportunism, accepting the hospitality of Mme de Warens who became his mistress. He later had a long liaison with an uneducated woman, Thérèse Levasseur, whom he finally married; their five children were abandoned to a foundling institution. Having tried many jobs and discouraged many benefactors, he went to Paris where his natural charm was to bring him many more amongst the most illustrious: Fontenelle*, Marivaux*, Condillac*, Diderot* and others. In 1750, after years of painful struggles, he won the prize offered by the Académie de Dijon for the best essay on Si le progrès des sciences et des arts a contribué à corrompre ou à épurer les mœurs (ed. G. R. Havens, 1946). Rousseau chose the paradox which made him famous overnight: so-called progress in letters, society, civilization has only served to pervert the innate goodness of man.

During the next 12 years appeared all the works which were to make him one of the most famous writers of his time: the Discours sur l'origine et les fondements de l'inégalité parmi les hommes (1755) attacks private property; in Julie ou la Nouvelle Héloïse (1761; eds: D. Mornet, 1925; J. Pomeau, 1960), a novel in letters, the family, the primitive unit, triumphs over the wickedness of modern society; the Lettre à d'Alembert sur les spectacles (1758) proclaims the corruption which the theatre is bound to bring upon the city of Geneva if Voltaire's* conceptions prevail; Émile ou de l'éducation (1762; ed. F. and P. Richard, 1961) shows how man can preserve his fundamentally good instincts, whilst in Du Contrat social ou principes du droit politique (1762) we see how man born free and now in chains can regain his lost heritage. These last two books, condemned by the French authorities, compelled Rousseau to flee to Switzerland where he started writing his autobiographical Confessions, perhaps the most remarkable of his works (wr. 1765–70; pub. posth., 1781–88; tr. J. M. Cohen, 1953). Disavowed by the Genevan Protestants also, he went in I 1766 to England where David Hume* found him a residence in Derbyshire; but he soon left, having developed a persecution mania which marred the last few years of his life in Paris. The Convention in 1794 transferred his remains to the Panthéon. Rousseau is still today the controversial figure whose works aroused such strong passions during his lifetime. The intuition of this visionary and his constructive approach account for his immense influence, both in the field of politics through the French Revolution and in the realm of literature through Romanticism. La Profession de foi du Vicaire Savoyard (Émile, IV) is the most complete spiritual testament of Rousseau's faith, a kind of Christian socialism based on belief in God and the sanctity of his moral law. As a stylist Rousseau ranks amongst the greatest.

Le Devin du village (1752); Discours sur l'économie politique (1755); Lettre à Christophe de Beaumont (1763); Lettres de la Montagne (1764); Lettres sur la législation de la Corse (1765); Dictionnaire de musique (1767); Considérations sur le gouvernement de la Pologne (1772); Rêveries du promeneur solitaire (1782–90; eds: R. Niklaus, 1943; M. Raymond, 1948); Correspondance générale (ed. T. Dufour and P. P. Plan, 20 vols, 1924–34); Correspondance (ed. R. A. Leigh, 1965 ff.).—Œuvres (complètes) (ed. B. Gagnebin and M. Raymond, 1959 ff.).

L.-J. Courtois, Chronologie critique de la vie et des œuvres de J.-J. R. (1924); P.-M. Masson, La religion de J.-J. R. (3 vols, 1916); A. Schinz, La pensée de J.-J. R. (2 vols, 1929); A. Cobban, Rousseau and the Modern State (1934); J. S. Spink, Rousseau and Geneva (1934); C. W. Hendel, J.-J. R., Moraliste (1934); J. Guéhenno, Jean-Jacques (3 vols, 1948–52; tr. J. G. and D. Weightman, 1967); D. Mornet, Rousseau, l'homme et l'œuvre (1950); F. C. Green, J.-J. R. (1955); R. Grimsley, J.-J. R., a Study in Self-Awareness (1961) and J.-J. R. and the Religious Quest (1968); G. May, Rousseau par lui-même (1961); J. H. Broome, Rousseau, A Study of His Thought (1963); L. G. Crocker, J.-J. R. (1968 ff.).

J.P.I. (G.B.)

Roussel, RAYMOND (*Paris 20 I 1877; †Palermo 14 VII 1933), French poet. Of a rich family, Roussel travelled round the world but was not of it, being totally obsessed by the use of wit and interplay of words. The Surrealists appreciated this forerunner of theirs whose novels and plays aroused shock and bewilderment. His work, resissued in 1963, attracted the attention of the Structuralist philosophers. One of his essays, Comment j'ai écrit certains de mes livres (1935) explains the sources of his ideas, but the reasons for his suicide remains a mystery.

VERSE: La doubleure (1897); Chiquenaude (1900); La vue (1904).—NOVELS: Impressions d'Afrique (1910; Eng. tr. L. Foord and R. Heppenstall, 1969); Locus solus (1914); Nouvelles impressions d'Afrique (1932).—PLAYS: L'étoile au front (1925); La poussière des soleils (1926).

M. Foucault, R. R. (1963); Bizarre, XXXIV–XXXV (special nos; 1964); J. Ferry, L'Afrique des impressions (1967); J. H. Matthews, Surrealism and the Novel (1966).

M.G.

Roussin, ANDRÉ (*Marseille 22 I 1911), French actor and dramatist, founder, with Louis Ducreux, of the Rideau Gris company in Marseille, noted for its production of Webster's* Duchess of Malfi in Paris (1937). His crazy comedy Am-stramgram (1941) was acclaimed as a modern commedia dell'arte for the greater significance it attributed to actors and 'properties' than to conventional dramatic dialogue. Roussin has since met with great popular success with satirical comedies of a fantastic nature.

La petite hutte (1948; The Little Hut, adapted N. Mitford, 1950); Les œufs de l'autruche (1948); Nina (1950); Bobosse (1950); Lorsque l'enfant paraît (1951); La main de César (1951); L'amour fou (1955); Une femme qui dit la vérité (1960); Les glorieuses (1960); Un amour qui ne finit pas (1963); La locomotive (1966); On ne sait jamais (1970).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Patiences et impatiences (1953); Une contentement raisonnable (1965).

P. Surer, Le théâtre français contemporain (1964); P. L. Mignon, Le théâtre d'aujourd'hui de A jusqu'à Z (1966). T.W. (M.G.)

Roux, PAUL [SAINT-POL]: see Saint-Pol-Roux.

Rovani, GIUSEPPE (*Milan 12 I 1818; †ibid. 26 I 1874), Italian historical novelist and doyen of the scapigliatura. He moved away from the heroic and sentimental plots of the would-be followers of Manzoni*, but even in his cyclic novel I cento anni (1750–1850) he is far from rivaling Manzoni's organic presentation of society.

I cento anni (5 vols, 1859–64; ed. B. Gutierrez, 1934).

L. Russo, I narratori (1922); G. Mariani, Storia della Scapigliatura (1967); G. Baldi, G. R. e il problema del romanzo nell'800 (1967); R. Tordi, 'R. tra avanguardia e tradizione' in Rassegna della lett. ital. (1968). J.G.-R.

Rovetta, GIROLAMO (*Brescia 30 IX 1851; †Milan 8 V 1910), Italian novelist and playwright. He wrote about 20 very popular novels of varying types of which the best is Le lacrime del prossimo (1888). The greatest of his historical plays, Roman-ticismo (1901), is still staged.

E. Bevilacqua, 'Saggio di bibliografia rovet-tiana' in La Lucerna (1926) and G. R. (1931). N.K.W.

Rowe, NICHOLAS (*Little Barford, Beds 20 VI 1674; ∞1698 Antonia Parsons, ∞1717 Anne Devenish; †London 6 XII 1718), English dramatist. He introduced into the text of his Shakespeare* edition the stage directions reproduced in many modern editions. He was called to the Bar, but turned to literature on inheriting an independent income (1692). A member of Addison's* circle and a friend of Pope*, he was regarded with affection and admiration by many, despite the attacks of Curll and his writers. Rowe employed Betterton* to visit Stratford to collect traditions of Shakespeare. Secretary to Queensberry (1709), Rowe became poet laureate in 1715. His own dramas are best represented by the tragedies Tamerlane (1702), The Fair Penitent (1703) and Jane Shore (1714) which held the stage throughout the century and longer until the tradition of 'heroic' acting degenerated. He writes in his own Shakespearean style, is often moving, and his blank verse, if mannered, is competent and acts well in the convention for which he wrote. B.L.J.

Works (2 vols, 1747; with life); The Ambitious Stepmother (1701); Tragedy of Lady Jane Gray (1715); Three Plays (ed. J. R. Sutherland, 1929).—TRANSLATIONS ETC.: Boileau's Lutrin (1708); Shakespeare's Works (6 vols, 1709; with life); Lucian's Pharsalia (with life; 1718).

S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets; W. S. Austin and J. Ralph, Lives of the Laureates (1835). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Rowlands, SAMUEL (*?1570; †?1630), English poet and pamphleteer. Rowlands is an obvious successor to the Elizabethan chroniclers of low life, Greene* and Nashe*; his first prose work is Greene's ghost haunting cony-catchers (1602). Characteristic of his later date is the greater emphasis on verse satire in his work, developing the 'rogue' pamphlets' description of low life and thieving habits into the epigrams and Theophrastan character-sketches of the 17th century in such works as Look to it for I'll stab ye (1604), The knave of hearts (1612) and More knaves yet? (1613). A rival of Dekker's*, his Martin Mark-all beadle of Bridewell (1610) is a reply to Dekker's Belman of London. Rowlands was ready to handle any theme that was likely to be popular—the romance of Guy of Warwick, or pious versifications of Bible stories.

The Elizabethan Underworld (ed. A. V. Judges, 1930, 1965). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Rowley, WILLIAM (*1585; †1642), English dramatist. Little is known of Rowley's life beyond the fact that he was an actor. His best work as a playwright was done in collaboration with Middleton*, with whom he wrote The Changeling (acted 1623/24). His forte was comedy, although he had some ability to achieve tragic pathos.

A Match at Midnight (1637); All's Lost by Lust (1630); The Changeling and The Spanish Gipsie (both 1653; with Middleton); The Witch of Edmonton (1658; with Dekker and Ford); The Birth of Merlin (1662; 'by William Shakespeare and William Rowley').

C. W. Stork, W. R. (1910); D. M. Robb, 'The canon of R.'s plays' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XIV (1950). J.B.B.

Roy, GABRIELLE (*Saint-Boniface, Manitoba 1909; ∞1947 Dr Marcel Carbotte), major Canadian novelist. After teaching in rural areas for several years she went to Paris to study drama (1937-39). She returned to Montreal and eventually settled in Quebec City. Her novels, set in working-class Montreal, isolated rural sections of Western Canada and the far North, are rich in narrative interest and psychological insight. She has created a gallery of distinctive and full-bodied characters, exploring a variety of social and personal problems in life and art.

Bonheur d'occasion (1945; The Tin Flute, tr. H. Josephson, 1947); Alexandre Chenevert (1954; The Cashier, tr. H. Binsse, 1955); La montagne secrète (1961); The Hidden Mountain, tr. idem, 1962); La route d'Altamont (1966; The Road Past Altamont, tr. J. Marshall, 1967).

M. Genuist, La creation romanesque chez G. R. (1966). R.Su.

Roy, VLADIMÍR (*Kochanovce 17 IV 1885; †Nový Smokovec 6 II 1936), Slovak poet. A Protestant pastor who studied in Scotland, Roy was one of the most successful Slovak neo-Romantic poets of the generation of Krasko*, whose influence is apparent in his work.

Básne (sel. poems; ed. J. Brezina, 1963).—J. Brezina, Básnik V. R. (1961) R.A.

Rozanov, MIKHAIL GRIGORYEVICH: see Ognëv, N.

Rozanov, VASILY VASILYEVICH (*Vetluga 1856; †1919), Russian essayist. His numerous writings (dealing mostly with sex, religion, Church and family) show not only an original mind but a highly original and personal style—a style full of winks and inflections. His book, Legenda o velikom inkvizitore (1890; Dostoevsky and the Legend of the Grand Inquisitor, tr. S. E. Roberts, 1972), was partly responsible for the revival of the interest in Dostoevsky* among the Russian intellectuals. In his cult of the flesh and of the irrational he anticipated D. H. Lawrence*, but he found his allies in the Old Testament and even in ancient Egypt. From 1899 onward, he was on the staff of the conservative Novoye Vremya, but after 1917 he fell on evil days and retired to the Troitsky monastery (now Zagorsk) near Moscow where he wrote Apokalipsis nashego vremeni ('The Apocalypse of our Time') a few months before he died.

Sumerki prosveshcheniya (1899); Priroda i istoriya (2nd ed. 1903); Semeyny vopros v Rossii (1903); Okolo tserkovnykh sten (1906); Kogda nachal'stvo ushlo (1910); Tëmny lik (1911); Literaturnye izgnanniki (1913); Opavshie listya (1913); Sredi khudozhnikov (1914); Uyedinënnoye (1916).—Solitaria (1927), Fallen Leaves (1929; both tr. S. S. Kotelyansky).

M. G. Kurdyumov, O R. (1929); M. Spasovskiy,

R. v poslednie gody svoey zhizni (1935); R. Poggioni, R. (1962). J.L.

Różewicz, TADEUSZ (*Radomsko 9 X 1921), Polish poet, short-story writer, playwright. Hardly any living Polish poet had more followers than Różewicz, whose first poetry published after the war contrasted with that of earlier decades in his deliberate abolishment of accepted poetic conventions. His diction's similarity to prose conveys his deep distrust in the relevance of literature for man after the experiences of the Second World War. In his later short stories and plays he introduces fantastic, grotesque and absurd elements, but his poetry (often referred to as 'anti-poetry') remains his main achievement.

POETRY: Niepokój (1947); Czerwona rękawiczka (1948); Pięć poematów (1950); Poemat otwarty (1956); Głos anonima (1961); Formy (1961; poetry and prose); Zielona róża/Kartoteka (1961; poetry and a play).—Formen der Unruhe. Gedichte (tr. K. Dedecius, Munich, 1965); Faces of Anxiety, Poems (tr. A. Czerniawski, London, 1969).—SHORT STORIES: Przerwany egzamin (1960); Wycieczka do muzeum (1966).—Opowiadania wybrane (1968).—In der schönsten Stadt der Welt. 6 Geschichten (tr. A. Dross, Munich, 1962).—PLAYS: Utwory dramatyczne (1966).—Der unterbrochene Akt und andere Stücke (tr. I. Boll, Frankfurt, 1966).

J. Błński, Poeci i inni (1956).

P.H.

Rubió i Ors, JOAQUIM (*1818; †1899), Catalan poet and scholar. Writing as 'Lo gaiter del Llobregat' from 1839 onwards, he was the first poet to write in Catalan with the deliberate intention of reviving the language; his verse consciously looks back to the troubadour tradition. He was prominent in the restoration of the Jocs Florals of Barcelona (1859), the poetical contest which played an essential part in the revival of Catalan literature. J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Rubow, PAUL VIKTOR (*Copenhagen 9 I 1896; ∞1927 Kamilla Skibsted, ∞1949 Helene Inger Plaugmann-Øpik; †ibid. 7 IV 1972), Danish literary scholar and critic; from 1933 Professor of comparative literature at Copenhagen. A brilliant stylist, his works on Georg Brandes*, Hans Andersen*, Holger Drachmann* and Shakespeare* deserve special mention.

Dansk litterær Kritik i det 19. Aarhundrede (1921); Saga og Pastiche (1923); H. C. Andersens Eventyr (1927); Georg Brandes og hans Lærere (1927); Hippolyte Taine (1930); Georg Brandes og den kritiske Tradition (1931); Georg Brandes' Briller (1932); Shakespeare paa Dansk (1932); Holger Drachmanns Ungdom (1940); Holger Drachmann 1878-97 (1945); Oehlenschlägers Arvtager (1947); Shakespeare i Nutidsbelysning (1948); Shakespeare og hans samtidige (1948); Two Essays. Henrik

Ibsen. The Sagas (1949); Holger Drachmann. Sidste Aar (1950); Søren Kierkegaard (1950); Shakespeares Hamlet (1951); Verdenslitteraturen (1953); Klassiske og moderne Studier (1954); Epigonerne (1956); King John (1960); Kunsten at skrive og andre Essays (1964); Shakespeares Sonetter (1967).

Festskrift til P. V. R. (1956).

E.B.

Rucellai, GIOVANNI (*Florence 20 X 1475; †Rome 3 IV 1525), Italian poet and humanist. Nephew of Lorenzo il Magnifico (Medici*) and member of a literary family, he entered the Church and served both the Medici Popes. His tragedy Rosmunda (1515; pub. 1525), composed at the same time as his friend Trissino's* Sofonisba, was based likewise on Greek tragedy, though Rucellai chose a medieval subject. His paraphrase of Virgil's* Georgics IV, Le Api (1524; pub. 1539) is more important.

Opere (ed. G. Mazzoni, 1887; good intro.).

F. Neri, La tragedia italiana nel Cinquecento (1904); A. Marpicati, Saggi critici (1934).

C.Dr.

Rückert, FRIEDRICH (*Schweinfurt 16 V 1788; †1822 Anna Luise Wiethaus-Fischer; †Neuss nr Coburg 31 I 1866), German poet. He came under the Romantic influence of Grimm* and Creuzer and was introduced to Oriental studies by Hammer-Purgstall in Vienna, when returning from Italy in 1818. He edited Fouqué's* Frauentaschenbuch (1821–25), was Professor of Oriental languages at Erlangen (1826) and Berlin (1841), but retired to Neuss (1848). His verse flowed in two placid but relentless streams, one Oriental, the other domestic, both characterized by easy mastery of form lacking content.

Gesammelte Gedichte (6 vols, 1834–38; sel. tr. in Library of World's Best Literature, ed. C. D. Warner, 1917–18); Die Weisheit des Brahmanen (6 vols, 1836–39; Eng. tr. C. T. Brooks, 1882); Erbauliches und Beschauliches aus dem Morgenlande (2 vols, 1837–38); Rostem und Suhrab (1838); Kindertodtenlieder (1872).—PLAYS: Saul und David (1843); Kaiser Heinrich IV (2 vols, 1844); Christoforo Colombo (2 vols, 1845).—Gesammelte poetische Werke (ed. H. Rückert and D. Sauerländer, 12 vols, 1867–69); F. R., Gedächtnis und Vermächtnis (ed. G. Schneider, 1955).

L. Magon, Der junge R. (1914); H. Prang, F. R. (1963).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Rūdākī, JA'FAR, ABU 'ABDALLĀH (*Rudak of Samarkand; †ibid. 940/941), Persian poet, was an esteemed companion and panegyrist of the Samanid Nasr II (913–942). Later in life he became blind. Rūdākī is the first great poet of Islamic Persia and has been deservedly called the father of Persian poetry. He developed the style and established the models followed by classical Persian poets, especially in the Ghaznavid period.

His surviving poems show a fine taste and mature mind, with an epicurean, yet contemplative approach.

Divān (Tehran, 1897).

H. Ethé, 'R., der Samaniden-Dichter' in Nachrichten von der Königl. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen (with text and tr. of poems; 1873); C. J. Pickering, 'A Persian Chaucer' in Nat. Rev. (1890); A. W. Jackson, Early Persian Poetry (1920); S. Naficy, Ahvāl va Āthār-i R. (3 vols, Tehran, 1931–40); A. Gh. Mirzayef, A. A. R. (Stalinabad, 1958).

E.Y.

Rudbeckius, JOHANNES JOHANNIS (*Ornosta 3 IV 1581; †Västerås 8 VIII 1646), Swedish scholar. In 1604 he became Professor of mathematics at Uppsala, in 1611 Professor of theology there. He was appointed Vice-Chancellor in 1613, but, because of quarrels with Messenius*, both parties were banned from the University in the same year. Rudbeckius was made court preacher by Gustav Adolf and in 1619 became Bishop of Västerås. He was extremely active in the service of education and founded the first Swedish grammar school at Västerås in 1623. Until 1636 he also took part in politics.

Logica (1625); Controversiae logicae (1629).—J. Rudbeck, Bibliotheca Rudbeckiana (1918).

B. R. Hall, J. R., en historisk-pedagogisk studie (1911); H. Cnattingius, J. R. och hans europeiska bakgrund (1946).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Rudbeckius, OLAUS (~Västerås 12 XII 1630; †Uppsala 17 IX 1702), Swedish historian, scholar, and doctor; son of Johannes Rudbeckius*. After studies in Holland and Uppsala he became Professor of medicine at Uppsala (1658–91). A notable polymath, he devoted more and more time to the study of Swedish history. In 1679 appeared the first volume of Atlant eller Manheim, in which Rudbeckius developed the idea that Sweden is the original home of human culture. This was a work of fantastic but brilliant imagination, which had considerable influence upon his contemporaries, not only in Sweden.

Atlant (Latin title Atlantica), II (1689), III (1698), IV (mostly destroyed in a fire at Uppsala, 1702); Atlantica (Swed. text, ed. A. Nelson, 3 vols, 1937–47); Brev av O. R., rörande Uppsala Universitet (ed. C. Annerstedt, 4 pts, in Uppsala Universitets årsskrift, 1893–1905); Efterskörd (ed. A. Grape, ibid., 1930).—J. Rudbeck, Bibliotheca Rudbeckiana (1918).

G. Löw, Sveriges forntid i svensk historiskrivning (1908); Rudbecksstudier (1930); J. Nordström, De yverbörnes ö (1934).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Ruddiman, THOMAS (*Boyndie X 1674; †1701 Barbara Scollay, †1711 Janet Horsburgh, †1729 Anne Smith; †Edinburgh 19 I 1757), Scottish grammarian. He began as a schoolmaster and from 1700 was Keeper of the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh. In 1728 he became University printer. His main work was his edition of Buchanan* (2 vols, 1715), Grammaticae Latinae Institutiones (2 vols, 1725–31; 3 vols, 1740), and an edition of Livy* (4 vols, 1751).

G. Chalmers, Life of R. (1794).

J.K.

Rudel: see Jaufré Rudel.

Rudnicki, ADOLF (*Warsaw 19 II 1912), Polish novelist. Having established himself in the 1930s as a promising young writer he published after the war some collections of shattering short stories describing the fate of the Polish Jews, often in an only very slightly fictionalized way. His most important later achievement is his series of brief essays (Niebieskie kartki, 1956 ff.) on various subjects, expressing both his own and the spiritual climate of his day.

NOVELS: Szczury (1932); Doświadczenia (1939). —SHORT STORIES: Szekspir (1948); Ucieczka z Jasnej Polany (1949); Żywe i martwe morze (1952); The Dead and Living Sea and Other Stories, tr. J. Zwolska, Warsaw, 1957); 50 opowiadań (1966); Niekochana i inne opowiadania (1969). —Ascent to Heaven (tr. H. C. Stevens, London, 1951).

P.H.

Rudolf von Ems (fl. 1220–54), Swiss poet, ministerialis, serving the Lords of Montfort. A learned and careful 'emulator of the masters' (Gottfried* von Strassburg is his model). His subject is 'great men', his purpose didactic: he avoids Arthurian themes. His early legends, Der gute Gerhard (c. 1225, source unknown) and Barlaam und Josaphat, are his most satisfactory works. Later works are 'historical': Alexander and Wilhelm von Orleans (1230–38), and a Weltchronik (broken off at King Solomon), of which there are c. 80 MSS and many continuations and imitations.

Barlaam (ed. F. Pfeiffer, 1843); Der gute Gerh. (tr. K. Simrock, 1848; ed. J. A. Asher, 1962); summaries and excerpts in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., IV (1882–89); Weltchronik (ed. G. Ehrismann, 1915); Alexander and Wilh. von O. (ed. V. Junk, 1928–29).

G. Ehrismann, Studien über R. von E. (1919); E. Schröder, 'R. von E. und sein Literaturkreis' in Zsch. für dt. Alt., XVII (1930); Helmut Brackert, R. von E. (1968).

F.P.P.

Rudolf von Fenis, COUNT OF NEUENBURG (fl. 1158–92), the first Swiss minnesinger. Most of his songs are close adaptations (even to the placing of the caesura) of troubadour stanzas—Folquet* de Marseille and Peire* Vidal.

Des Minnesangs Frühling (ed. K. Lachmann and

C. von Kraus, 1950).—E. Baldinger, Der Minnesänger Graf R. von F. (1923).

F.P.P.

Rueda, LOPE DE (*Seville c. 1505; †Córdoba 1565), Spanish dramatist. He was a gold-beater, who took to acting and writing plays. Records prove that he acted in Valladolid (1551), before Philip II at Benavente (1554), at the consecration of Segovia cathedral (1558) and at Seville (Corpus Christi, 1559). His four full-length plays are close imitations of Italian models. He also composed dramatic pastorals and religious plays that are of little importance. His pasos—one-act plays—are excellent: short, vivid dramatizations of folk-tales or popular scenes in lively prose, with stock characters. Timoneda* published his works in Valencia (1567).

Obras (ed. E. Cotarelo, 2 vols, 1908); Teatro (ed. J. Moreno Villa, 1924; selection); Pasos completos (1944).

A. L. Stieffel, 'L. de R. und das italienische Lustspiel' in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., XV (1891); E. Cotarelo, L. de R. y el teatro español de su tiempo (1898); V. Tusón, L. de R., bibliografía crítica (1965).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Rueda, SALVADOR (*Benaque, Málaga 3 XII 1857; †Málaga 1933), Spanish poet of humble origin. In prolific writings of uneven quality, his innovations in metre, rhythm and metaphors were an anticipation of the forms of modernismo. He outran his own ability and became overshadowed by the modernistas, but at his best he wrote brilliant Andalusian poetry.

Cantos de la vendimia (with intro. Clarín, 1891); Fuente de salud (1906); Poesías completas (1911); Mi estética (1918).

A. González-Blanco, Los grandes maestros: S. R. y Rubén Darío (1908); M. Prados y López, S. R., el poeta de la Raza (1941); D. Vázquez Otero, S. R. (1960).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Ruf (RUOF, RUEFF, RUFF), JAKOB (*c. 1500; †Zürich 1558), Swiss dramatist. A surgeon in Zürich, Ruf wrote anti-Papal, moralizing plays on Biblical themes (Joseph, Adam und Eva, Lazarus, Geburt Christi) and a Wilhelm Tell. With their Swiss political background and their high moral purpose the plays are interesting social documents and, despite diffuseness, of literary merit.

Das Buch Hiob (1535); Etter Heini uss dem Schwizerland (1538; ed. H. M. Kottlinger, 1847); Des Herrn Weingarten (1539); Spiel von Joseph (1540); Wilhelm Tell (1545; ed. J. Bächtold in Schweizer Schauspiele, III, 1893); Adam und Eva (1550; ed. H. M. Kottlinger, 1848); Lazarus (1552); Geburt Christi (1552).

R. Wildhaber, J. R. (diss. Basle, 1929); D. van Abbe, Drama in Renaissance Germany and Switzerland (1961).

D.G.D.

Ruffini, GIOVANNI (*Genoa 20 IX 1807; †ibid. 3 XI 1881), Italian patriot and novelist. A follower of Mazzini*, he went into exile in 1833, living mostly in England and writing most of his work in English. His best work Lorenzo Benoni (Edinburgh, 1853) is a partly autobiographical patriotic novel. Dottor Antonio (1855; new ed. 1945), also written in English, is still read. Ruffini also wrote the libretto for Donizetti's Don Pasquale.

A. Linaker, G. R. (1882); M. Pertusola, La vita e gli scritti di G. R. (1908); G. R. e i suoi tempi: studi e ricerche a cura del comitato per le onoranze a G. R. (1931). N.K.W.

Rufo y Gutiérrez, JUAN (*Córdoba ?1547; †after 1620), Spanish poet and writer of anecdotes. He wrote an epic about Don John of Austria (1584), partly based on Hurtado* de Mendoza's history. His ballad Los comendadores was the source of a famous play, Los comendadores de Córdoba, by Lope de Vega*. His book of anecdotes is extremely amusing.

La Austriada in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIX; Las seiscientas apotegmas y otras obras en verso (ed. A. G. de Amezúa, 1923).

R. Ramírez de Arellano, J. R., jurado de Córdoba (1912); R. Foulché-Delbosc, 'L'authenticité de la Guerra de Granada' in Rev. Hispanique, XXXV (1915). E.M.W.

Rúfus, MILAN (*1928), Slovak poet. His collection of poems Až dozrieme (1956), with its profound exploration of personal feelings and strong moral sense, expressed a sharp contrast to the often shallow and schematic poetry of the preceding period. R.A.

Rühmkorf, PETER (*Dortmund 25 X 1929), German poet. He is a satirical, almost aggressive writer, but his anger tends to disappear beneath the formal brilliance of his verse. He has a talent for parody which he applies to both traditional (Irdisches Vergnügen in g, 1959) and contemporary poetry (Lyrikschlachthof). He also writes, and collects, nursery rhymes and Lieder (songs) which show his critical wit at its best.

Heisse Lyrik (1956); Kunststücke (1962); Über das Volksvermögen (about nursery rhymes; 1967). F.M.K.

Ruiz, JUAN, ARCIPRESTE DE HITA (†c. 1350), Spanish poet. Little is known of the life of the Archpriest—the greatest Spanish medieval poet—except what he himself tells us in his poetic miscellany, the Libro de Buen Amor (1330; rev. 1343), which is almost entirely fictional. Its contents are varied: unsuccessful love affairs, a successful one, didactic exposition, burlesque encounters with wild country girls in the mountains, religious lyrics, a battle between Carnival and Lent, Love's triumphal entry, more love affairs, an imprecation against death, hymns to the Virgin, a satire against the clerics of Talavera. Thirty-five fables and apologues (mostly Aesopic) are related by different characters during the work. The go-between Trotaconventos is a brilliant creation. The seduction of Doña Endrina derives from the 12th-century Latin comedy Pamphilus; the liturgical parodies, the praise of small women and the satire against the clerics are of Goliardic inspiration. The Archpriest draws also on Provençal and earlier Spanish literature, on sermon technique, and on European traditions of fictional autobiography; debts to the Arabic and Hebrew literature of Spain remain unproven. There is a constant tension in the Libro de Buen Amor between Christian morality and enjoyment of the world; the book's irony, ambiguity and parody are an attempt to reconcile these aspects. The narrative portions are mostly in free CUADERNA VÍA; the lyrics show considerable metrical variety. The book fell from favour after the mid-15th century.

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Libro de Buen Amor (ed. J. Ducamin, Toulouse, 1901; ed. G. Chiarini, Milan-Naples, 1964; ed. M. Criado de Val and E. W. Naylor, 1965; ed. J. Corominas, 1967; ed. and tr. R. S. Willis, Princeton, 1972; The Book of Good Love, tr. E. K. Kane, Kane, Pa., 1933; tr. M. di Cesare and R. Mignani, Albany, N.Y., 1968).

H. B. Richardson, An Etymological Vocabulary to the L. B. A. (New Haven, 1930); F. Lecoy, Recherches sur le L. B. A. (Paris, 1938); G. B. Gybbon-Monypenny, 'Autobiography in the L. B. A. in the light of some literary comparisons' in Bull. Hispanic Stud., XXXIV (1957) and 'Estado actual de los estudios sobre el L. B. A.' in Anuario de Estud. Medievales, III (1966); M. R. Lida de Malkiel, Two Spanish Masterpieces: The Book of Good Love and the Celestina (Urbana, 1961); A. Castro, La realidad histórica de España (rev. ed. Mexico, 1962); O. H. Green, Spain and the Western Tradition, I (Madison, 1963); J. Guzmán, Una constante didáctico-moral del L. B. A. (Mexico, 1963); A. N. Zahareas, The Art of J. R. (1965); F. Rico, 'Sobre el origen de la autobiografía en el L. B. A.' in Anuario de Estud. Medievales, IV (1967); L. B. A. Studies (ed. G. B. Gybbon-Monypenny, London, 1970). A.D.D.

Ruiz Aguilera, VENTURA (*Salamanca 1820; †Madrid 1881), Spanish poet; studied medicine which he never practised; director of the Museum of Archaeology. Much praised during his lifetime, his subsequent oblivion is undeserved, if only because of Elegías (1862), a collection of delicate, intimate poems written on his daughter's death. He is generally good when writing in a minor key but falls short on social or patriotic themes.

Ecos nacionales (1849); La Arcadia moderna

(1867); La leyenda de Nochebuena (1872); Las estaciones del año (1879).

Poetas in Biblioteca Universal, LXV (1880).

R.M.N.

Ruiz de Alarcón, JUAN (*Tasco, Mexico ?1581; †Madrid 1639), Spanish dramatist. Alarcón studied in Mexico City and at Salamanca and returned to Mexico in 1608 where he took the degree of licentiate in laws. Back in Spain in 1615, he eventually obtained a good post in the Council for the Indies. His plays were written between 1615 and 1625. A careful writer, Alarcón was more restrained than Lope de Vega*, of whom he was otherwise a follower. His most famous plays, La verdad sospechosa (the immediate source of P. Corneille's* Le Menteur) and Las paredes oyen, show how defects like lying and slander bring disaster to those who practise them. He wrote 24 plays. He was a hunchback, and his physical defect made him the subject of many lampoons from his enemies; perhaps it also led him to prefer the cautiously dull man to the picturesque, brilliant gallant. His versification is not remarkable, but his plays are well contrived and planned and his characterization has been much praised.

Obras completas (ed. A. Millares Carlo, 3 vols, 1957-68); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XX; Teatro (ed. A. Reyes, 1918).

L. Fernández Guerra y Orbe, J. R. de A. (1871); A. Castro Leal, J. R. de A., su vida y su obra (1943); J. Granados, J. R. de A. e il suo teatro (1954); A. V. Ebersole, El ambiente español visto por J. R. de A. (1959); C. O. Brenes, El sentimiento democrático en el teatro de J. R. de A. (1960); W. Poesse, Ensayo de una bibliografía de J. R. de A. y M. (1964). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Rukavishnikov, IVAN SERGEYEVICH (*1877; †1930), Russian author whose principal novel, Proklyaty rod ('The Accursed Generation'), was a ruthless criticism of the Russian merchant class to which he himself belonged. As a poet he stood close to the Symbolists. J.L.

Rukeyser, MURIEL (*New York 15 XII 1913), American poet. Her poetry shows social and political insight and an imaginative control of abstruse symbolism.

VERSE: Theory of Flight (1935); U. S. I. (1938); Mediterranean (1938); Wake Island (1942); Selected Poems (1951).—The Orgy (novel; 1966).—The Life of Poetry (essays; 1949).—TRANSLATIONS: Selected Poems of Octavio Paz (1963); Selected Poems of Gunnar Ekelöf (1967). G.A.K.

Rulfo, JUAN (*1918), Mexican writer. His first book was a collection of short stories, El llano en llamas (1952; The Burning Plains, tr. G. de Schade, 1968), which, though set in Rulfo's native Jalisco, transcends the regional. Often written in the form of a monologue or dialogue from shifting points of view, they are lyrical, tragic and sometimes humorous accounts of violent and frustrated lives. Pedro Páramo (1955; tr. L. Kemp, 1959), his only novel, is one of the great contemporary prose works of Latin America, a highly original descent into the hell of Comala, a village in Jalisco whose inhabitants are dead and whose ghostly passions are overheard by the narrator from the voices that linger in the air. J.F.

Rulmann, ANTON (†Bückeburg 1652), or, less probably, his brother HENRICH (†ibid. 1651), author of the Low German collection of 50 poems, Eilike korte und verstendlike Kling-Gedichte van allerhand Saken (c. 1650), which in a humorous vein describe everyday happenings. They are remotely reminiscent of the popular SCHWANK tradition, but mark Rulmann as an independent representative of what may be termed 'popular baroque'.

A. Leitzmann, Niederdeutsche Klinggedichte (1928).—Günther Müller, 'A. R., ein Bückeburger Barockhumanist' in Westfalen, XXVI (1941). G.C.

Rūmī: see Maulavi, JALĀL-AL-DĪN MUHAMMAD, RŪMĪ.

Rumphius, GEORGIUS EVERHARDUS (*Hanau 1628; †Hitoe, Amboina 15 VI 1702), German naturalist, in the service of the Dutch East India Company from 1652. As a 'merchant' he wrote several unequalled naturalist works, continued after his blindness (1670) with the help of his son and others.

D'Amboinsche rariteitkamer (1705); Het Amboinsche Kruidboek (7 vols, 1741-55).

P. A. Leupe, G. E. R. (1871); Rumphius-Gedenkboek (1902); E. D. Merrill, An Interpretation of R.'s Herbarium Amboinense (Manila, 1917); G. Ballintijn, R. (1944). J.W.W.

Runeberg, JOHAN LUDVIG (*Pietarsaari 5 II 1804; ∞1831 Fredrika Tengström; †Porvoo 6 V 1877), Swedish poet of Finland. After graduating at Turku (Åbo) academy, he went to Helsinki, where he became the centre of a literary group in 1830. He maintained himself and his family by teaching, journalism and authorship till 1857, when his financial worries were ended by a national gift of money in recognition of his services to literature.

Runeberg had begun to write in 1822 but published nothing till 1830. His first published work was dedicated to M. Franzén*, who predicted a brilliant future for him as a poet. The prediction was amply fulfilled in later years. Runeberg's poetry combines classical with romantic and realistic elements, the first being especially noticeable in his form-consciousness. As a poet he is scholarly, patriotic, moral and optimistic. His influence has been very great in Finland not only on Swedish but also on Finnish literature.

VERSE: Dikter (3 vols, 1830–43); Älgskyttare (1832); Hanna (1836); Den gamle trädgårds-mästarens brev (1837); Kung Fjalar (1844; King Fjalar, tr. A. Bohnhof, 1904); Fänrik Ståls sägner (2 vols, 1848–60; The Songs of Ensign Stål, tr. C. B. Shaw, 1925); Nadeschda (1851); Julkvällen (1861).—PLAYS: Kan ej (1863); Kungarne på Salamis (1862).—Samlade arbeten (8 vols, 1899–1902); Samlade skrifter (1933–35); Samlade skrifter (ed. O. Ahlbäck and G. Tideström, 1963 ff.).

C. G. Estlander, R's skaldskap (1902); R. Suomen kansan runoilijana (1903); H. Lindgren, J. L. R. (1904); E. Aspelin, J. L. R. suomalaisuus (1904); M. Talvio, J. L. R. (2nd ed. 1913); R. Hedvall, R's poetiska stil (1915) and R. och hans diktning (1931); S. Belfrage, J. L. R. i sin religiösa utveckling (1917); I. A. Heikel, J. L. R. (2 vols, 1926); J. E. Strömberg, Biografiska anteckningar om J. L. R. (4 vols, 1927–31); W. Söderhjelm, J. L. R., hans lif och hans diktning (2 vols, 1929); Y. Hirn, Runebergskulten (1935); G. Tideström, R. som estetiker (1941); F. C. Runeberg, Anteckningar om R. (1946); L. Castrén, L. J. R.'s hand-skrifter (1949); G. Castrén, J. L. R. (1950); G. Mårtensson, Fader R. (1953); E. Brydolf, Sverige och R. 1830–1848 (1943) and Sverige och R. 1849–1863 (1966). W.K.M. (I.S.)

Rung, OTTO CHRISTIAN HENRIK (*Copenhagen 16 VI 1874; ∞1907 Gertrud Vilhelmine Klamke; †ibid. 19 X 1945), Danish novelist and short-story writer. Apart from a stay in the Far East he lived mostly in Copenhagen, where he was a civil servant. The characters and milieu of Copenhagen are his true domain, and his psychological and stylistic precision is found at its best in his short stories and memoirs.

NOVELS: Det uafvendelige (1902); Sidste Kamp (1904); Den hvide Yacht (1906); Lønkammeret (1912); Den lange Nat (1913); Den store Karavane (1914); Syndere og Skalke (1918); Paradisfuglen (1919); Da Vandene sank (1922); Den røde Halvmaane (1923); Stjtaalne Masker (1924); Englen med Æselørerne (1924); Lykkens Omnibus (1926); En Pige i to Spejle (1936).—SHORT STORIES: Desertører (1908); Skyggernes Tog (1909); Livet farligt (1927); Rettens Sværd (1927); Tyve og Røvere (1927); Skælme og Skurke (1934); Retfærdighedens Kiosk (1944); Smitsons mærkelige Forvandling og andre Noveller (1946).—PLAYS: Broen (1910); Fanevagt (1918); Florian (1921); Kriminal-sagen Helga Nordland (1930).—Fra min Klunketid (memoirs; 1942).

C. Rimestad, O. R. (1924).

E.B.

Runius, JOHAN (*Laros 1 VI 1679; †Stockholm 1 VI 1713), Swedish poet. Unable through poverty to complete his studies at Uppsala, Runius went to Reval in 1707 as private tutor and secretary to the family of the Swedish governor of Estonia. In 1710 he returned to Stockholm, earning his living by writing occasional poetry. His work is elegant and musical, and his religious poems reveal a rather touching naïveté.

Dudaim (3 vols, 1714, 1715, 1733); Samlade skrifter (ed. E. Noréen, 1933 ff.).

F. Bööck, Stridsmän och sångare (1922); A. Kjellén in Årsskrift för modersmålsläraernas förening (1940); M. von Platen, J. R. (1954).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Runyon, (ALFRED) DAMON (*Manhattan, Kans. 4 X 1880; ∞1911 Ellen Egan, ∞1932 Patrice del Grande; †New York 10 XII 1946), American journalist and short-story writer. A leading sports columnist, he wrote stories of the underworld, professional athletes and Broadway operators, marked by their use of a slang invented by himself. His movie scripts include Lady for a Day and Little Miss Marker.

Guys and Dolls (1932); Take It Easy (1938); My Wife Ethel (1940); Runyon à la Carte (1944); In Our Town (1946); Short Takes (1946). H.L.C.

Ruodlieb, the first European romance; written in Leonine hexameters c. 1050 by a young German noble, probably a monk of Tegernsee. The Latin is vivid but 'barbarous', with many Germanisms. The (fragmentary) story, an expanded folk-tale, is slight, merely what happens to a young noble at court, on the road, at home. All the more striking are the characters (particularly young people) and the scenes (at court, in manse, in village street). They are 'realistic' and owe little to literary convention. The picture of civilized behaviour, formal and informal, is invaluable to the student of later Arthurian make-believe. The poem had no influence and remained unknown till the 19th century.

Ed. F. Seiler (1882); F. J. E. Raby, Secular Latin Poetry, I (1934); Lat. text, Eng. tr. with notes E. Zeydel (1959).—Werner Braun, Studien zum R. (1962); P. Dronke, Poetic Individuality in the Middle Ages (1970). F.P.P.

Ruppius, OTTO (*Glauchau, Saxony 1 II 1819; †Berlin 25 VI 1864), German novelist. Fleeing a prison sentence imposed on him for revolutionary activities, he roamed America from 1849 to 1861. On his return to Germany he continued his journalistic career. His realistic novels on American life are still readable.

Der Pedlar (1857; The Peddler, 1877); Das Vermächtnis des Pedlars (1869); Geld und Geist (1860); Eine Karriere in Amerika (1861); Der Prairietöfeln (1861; tr. José, 1890); Zwei Welten (1863; tr. Two Hemispheres, 1870).—Gesammelte Werke (3rd ed., 15 vols, n.d.).

T. Graewert, O. R. und der Amerikaroman im 19. Jh. (1935); L. H. Woodson, American Negro Slavery in the Works of Friedrich Strubberg, Friedrich Gerstäcker, and O. R. (1949). E.R.

AL-RUṢĀFĪ, MA'RUF (*Baghdad 1875; †16 III 1945), Iraqi Arab poet, mystic and literary historian. Originally MA'RUF BIN 'ABD-AL-GHANĪ, he was given the name Ruṣāfī by his Sufi teacher Maḥmūd al-Ālūsī. His mystic views are laid down in al-Shakhṣiyyah al-Muḥammadiyyah, which he forbade to be published before A.D. 2000. His poetry is mainly social and philosophical in content.

VERSE: Diwān (1910); Diwān al-R. (Cairo, ?1957). —PROSE: Rasā'il al-talqāt (1944); Alā bāb sijh Abī 'l-'Alā (1946).

S. A. Khulusi, 'Ma'ruf ar-Ruṣāfī' in Bull. School Oriental Stud., XIII (1950); M. 'Alī, Muḥāḍarāt 'an R. (1954). C.R. (M.M.B.)

Ruseler, GEORG (*Obenstrohe, Oldenburg 11 I 1866; †Oldenburg 6 III 1920), German playwright, imitated the classicist drama and wrote local festival pageants, but achieved success only with a Low German comedy.

Die Stedinger (1890); König Konradin (1893); Gudrun (1897); Die Schuhe der Prinzessin (1906); De Doekatersdeern (later renamed De dulle Deern; 1920).

W. R. Frerichs, G. R. (diss. Greifswald, 1932). G.C.

Rusiñol, SANTIAGO (*Barcelona 1861; †Aranjuez 1931), Catalan writer and painter. One of the first to introduce into Catalan literature, and into Spain generally, the latest artistic and literary European trends at the turn of the century, he is probably, with Rubén Darío*, the most typical modernista. Though a humorist by nature, he soon adopted a sceptical and even sarcastic attitude to modernista snobbery (and hence to his earlier work) and turned to the traditional genres of the sainete and the costumbrista novel, which he approached in an ironical detached way. Thus his masterpiece L'auca del senyor Esteve (which he wrote as a novel in 1907 and as a play in 1917) is both a satire and an elegy of an archetypal petit-bourgeois of Barcelona.

Obres completes (1947).

J. Pla, 'R. i el seu temps' in Tres artistes. R., Manolo, Mir (1970). J.L.M.

Ruskin, JOHN (*London 8 II 1819; ∞1848 Euphemia Chalmers Gray [o/o1854]; †Brantwood, Coniston 20 I 1900), English writer. The son of a rich wine merchant, he was educated at home and at Oxford and was frequently taken abroad. His mother gave him a feeling for the Authorized Version which coloured all his writing. Her unwillingness to free him from the shelter of his home life probably diminished his achievements.

His Elements of Drawing (1857) and Elements of Perspective (1859) are highly thought-of today. The first two volumes of his most famous work in praise of Turner were anonymous: Volume I of Modern Painters: their Superiority in the art of landscape painting to all the Ancient Masters, proved by examples of the True, the Beautiful and the Intellectual from the works of modern artists, especially from those of J. W. M. Turner, 'by a graduate of Oxford', came out in 1843. After three editions the work was completed in five volumes, the 3rd, 4th and 5th under the author's name. Although it is in his lectures and essays on social reform—e.g. Sesame & Lilies (delivered 1864–68; pub. 1871), The Crown of Wild Olive (1866) and Munera Pulveris (1872)—that his views on morality are given most direct and practical expression, all his writings on art hammer out the 'morality' of good art, the 'rightness' of nature. He put his sociological principles into practice by teaching at colleges for working men.

His life bore the marks of the upbringing which he described in Praeterita (1885–89) without, apparently, realizing the harm it had done him. He was unable to stand the buffets of intimate, equal-terms friendships; his first two love affairs came to nothing; his marriage with Effie Gray, sponsored by his mother, ended in her marrying Millais after an annulment in 1854, and his subsequent attachment to a young girl, Rose de la Touche, was not reciprocated.

Modern Painters (3rd ed., 5 vols, 1846–60; in small form, 2 vols, 1897); The Seven Lamps of Architecture (1849); The King of the Golden River (2nd ed. 1851; illus. A. Rackham, 1932); Pre-Raphaelitism (1851); The Stones of Venice (3 vols, 1851–53); Catalogue of the Turner Sketches in the National Gallery Part I (1857); Unto This Last (essays on art and political economy; 1862; orig. in Cornhill Mag.); The Two Paths (1859); Lectures on Art (delivered 1870; pub. 1870); A Joy for Ever (1880); Poems (ed. J. O. Wright, 1894); Giotto and his works in Padua (1900); Diaries of R. (ed. J. Evans and J. H. Whitehouse, 3 vols, 1956–59).

J. A. MacN. Whistler, Whistler v. Ruskin (1878); W. Smart, R. (1880); T. J. Wise and J. P. Smart, A Bibliography of R. (1893); J. H. Whitehouse, Vindication of R. (1900); F. Harrison, J. R. (1902); R. G. Collingwood, R.'s Philosophy (1922); H. E. Luxmore, The Guild of St George (1925); H. Gally, R. et l'esthétique intuitive (1933); R. H. Wilenski, J. R. (1933); G. A. Crow, R. (1936); R. W. Livingstone, R. (1945); W. M. James, The Order of Release (1947); K. Clark, R. at Oxford (1947); F. Delattre, R. et Bergson (1947); P. C. Quennell, R. (1949); J. Evans, J. R. (1954); J. D. Rosenberg, The Darkening Glass (1961); M. Lutyens, Millais and the R.s (1967). R.Sk. (M.A.)

Russell, BERTRAND (ARTHUR WILLIAM), 3RD EARL (*Trelleck 18 V 1872; ∞1894 Alys Smith, ∞1921 Dora Black, ∞1936 Patricia Spence, ∞1952 Edith Finch; †2 II 1970), British mathematician and philosopher. He wrote numerous technical and popular works on philosophy, politics and education. He took a major part in the 20th-century renaissance of logic and made continued efforts to identify the methods of philosophy with those of the sciences. He received the Nobel prize for literature in 1950.

Principia Mathematica (with Prof. A. N. Whitehead; 1910–13); An Introduction to Mathematical Philosophy (1919); The Practice and Theory of Bolshevism (1920); On Education (1926); The Analysis of Matter (1927); Marriage and Morals (1929); The Conquest of Happiness (1930); The Scientific Outlook (1931); Freedom and Organization 1814–1914 (1934); In Praise of Idleness (1935); Power (1938); An Inquiry into Meaning and Truth (1940); A History of Western Philosophy (1945); Human Knowledge: Its Scope and Limits (1948); Authority and the Individual (1949); Unpopular Essays (1950); Logic and Knowledge: Essays 1901–50 (1956); Portraits from Memory (1956); My Philosophical Development (1959); Wisdom of the West (1959); Autobiography (3 vols, 1967–69).

A. Wood, B. R.: The Passionate Sceptic (1957); H. Gottschalk, B. R. (Berlin, 1962; tr. 1965); J. Lewis, B. R.: Philosopher and Humanist (1968); J. Watling, B. R. (1970). H.L.C. (W.R.A.)

Russell, GEORGE WILLIAM, pen-name 'A. E.' (*Lurgan, Co. Armagh 10 IV 1867; †Bournemouth 17 VII 1935), Irish poet and essayist. He was a painter of talent, an ardent theosophist, actively interested in the co-operative movement in Ireland, and one of the seminal forces of the Irish literary revival. He edited The Irish Statesman, wrote for the Irish theatre and influenced many by his writings and by his brilliant conversation. His poetry, mystical and sometimes too facile, has many passages of contemplative charm and of visionary intensity. R.McH.

VERSE: Homeward, Songs by the Way (1894); The Earth Breath (1897); The Nuts of Knowledge (1903); The Divine Vision (1904); Collected Poems (1913); Selected Poems (1935).—VARIOUS: Imaginations and Reveries (1915); The National Being (1916); The Candle of Vision (1918); The Interpreters (1922).—Letters From A. E. (ed. A. Denson, 1961).—A. Denson, Printed Writings by G. W. R. (1961). George Moore, Hail and Fairwell (1914); Darrell Figgis, A. E.: A Study of a Man and a Nation (1916); W. K. Magee, A Memoir of A. E. (1937); C. G. Contes, Some Less-Known Chapters in the Life of A. E. (1939). E.T.W.

Russell, JOHN (fl. 1450), English author of the Boke of Nurture, a famous treatise on domestic management in rhyming quatrains.

Ed. F. J. Furnivall in Manners and Meals in Olden Time (1868). R.W.B.

Russo, ALECU (*1819; †Iasi 1859), Rumanian writer. A friend of Kogălniceanu* and Alecsandri*, his early work caused him to be exiled in 1846 on political grounds. After the 1848 revolution he left for Paris, where he published Cîntarea României (1850) in Bălcescu's* România viitoare. This patriotic poem reflects the tragedy of Rumanian history and expresses a belief in the final victory of liberty. His early work, mainly travel journals, was published in French and only translated into Rumanian after his death (Piatra teiului and Piatra corbului), both of which contain some fine descriptions of the Rumanian countryside.

Piatra teiului (1967); Cîntarea României (1969). T. Virgolic, A. R. (1964); Istoria literaturii române, II (1968). D.J.D.

Rustaveli, SHOTA (fl. c. 1200), the national bard of Georgia, author of the epic Vepkhis-tqaosani (pr. 1712; good mod. ed. S. Kakabadze, Tiflis, 1927; crit. ed. A. G. Shanidze and A. G. Baramidze, 1966; The Man in the Panther's Skin, prose tr. M. Wardrop, 1912; verse tr. V. Urushadze, 1968). The knightly feats of Tariel and Avtandil in quest of the fair Nestan-Darejan serve as an allegorical portrayal of the Georgian heroic age.

D. M. Lang, The Georgians (1966). D.M.L.

Rusticiano (or RUSTICHELLO) da Pisa (fl. second half of 13th century), Tuscan compiler of tales from the 'Breton cycle' of ARTHURIAN LEGEND; his work, written in French c. 1270, was known as Meliadus. But Rusticiano is better known as the amanuensis of Marco Polo*.

G. del Guerra, R. da P. (1955); see also G. Bertoni, Il Duecento (2nd ed. 1930); C. Pellegrini, 'Relazioni fra la letteratura italiana e la letteratura francese' in Problemi ed Orientamenti, IV (ed. A. Momigliano, 1948). K.F.

Rustico Filippi (*c. 1230; †before XII 1300), Florentine poet. Of bourgeois Ghibelline stock, but a friend of the Gueff Brunetto Latini*, who dedicated a poem to him, Rustico wrote love-sonnets in the courtly style, but his fame rests on 29 sonnets in the anti-courtly or 'comic' manner which he seems to have been the first to cultivate in Italy; the manner of his more gifted younger contemporary Cecco Angiolieri* and indeed of substantial parts of Dante's* Inferno—deliberately pungent, fairly often coarse and lewd, and sharply slanted towards caricature and vituperation. Rustico's coarser work, no doubt, provoked Francesco* da Barberino to single him out especially as a detractor of women.

Rimatori comico-realistici del Due e Trecento, I (ed. M. Vitale, 1956); Poeti giocosi del tempo di

Dante (ed. M. Marti, 1957); Poeti del Duecento, II (ed. G. Contini, 1961).

S. Santangelo, Le tenzoni poetiche nella letteratura italiana delle origini (1928); M. Apollonio, Uomini e forme nella cultura italiana delle origini (2nd ed. 1943); M. Marti, Cultura e stile nei poeti giocosi del tempo di Dante (1954). K.F.

Rusvā, MUHAMMAD HĀDĪ (*1858; †1931), theologian, scientist, inventor, translator, and the first true novelist in Urdu. His Umrāo Jān Adā (1899) is a brilliant portrait of the social life of Lucknow in the decades spanning the revolt of 1857, told in the form of the autobiography of a cultured Lucknow courtesan.

Umrāo Jān Adā (Eng. tr. Khushwant Singh and M. A. Husaini, 1961). R.R.

Rutebeuf (*?Champagne; fl. Paris 1250–85), French poet. He wrote some 56 pieces: personal poems, fabliaux, funeral laments, a miracle play, two saints' lives, and a considerable number of political poems and social satires, in which he attacks, in a vigorous personal style, almost all classes of French society, especially the mendicant Orders. A man of some learning, yet he did not make his career in Church or University. He led the precarious, shiftless existence of the jongleur, spending much of his time and substance in the pleasures of the tavern, yet he had connections with some of the most influential men of his time (including the King's brothers, and possibly Louis IX himself) on whom he depended for his livelihood and who no doubt hired his talent to further their political ends. Nevertheless, hired propagandist though he was, we must admire the sincerity and the sturdy individualism of a faith which led him consistently to champion the Crusades in a century in which they were unpopular, and to attack the vices of a Church whose faithful son he was, as well as the courage and loyalty with which he defended the University masters against the powerful Friars, sparing in this quarrel not even St Louis nor the Pope himself. Anticipating Jean* de Meung by some 15 years, he may be considered the first great French satirist.

Œuvres complètes (ed. J. Bastin and E. Faral, 2 vols, 1959–60); H. Lucas, Poèmes de R. concernant l'Université de Paris (1952).

L. Clédat, R. (1909).

H.L.

Rutherford, MARK: see White, WILLIAM HALE.

Rutherford, SAMUEL (*Jedburgh c. 1600; ∞1626 Eupham Hamilton, ∞1640 Jean McMath; †St Andrews 29 III 1661), Scottish divine; Regent in humanity at Edinburgh 1623; Professor of divinity at St Andrews 1639; Rector of St Andrews 1651. The devotional quality of his correspondence preserves this alone of his writings.

Exercitationes pro divina Gratia (1636); Lex Rex (1644); Trial and Triumph of Faith (1645); Christ Dying and Drawing Sinners to Himself (1647); Letters (1664; ed. A. A. Bonar, 1848).

T. Murray, S. R. (1828); A. Whyte, S. R. and his Correspondents (1894); R. Gilmour, S. R. (1904). J.K.

Rutilius Namatianus, CLAUDIUS: see Namatianus, CLAUDIUS RUTILIUS.

Rutter, JOSEPH (fl. 1635), English poet and dramatist, who belonged to the circle of Jonson's* old age and was tutor to the two sons of the 4th Earl of Dorset, at whose demand he translated Corneille's* The Cid (2 parts, 1637–39).

The Shepherd's Holiday. A Pastoral Tragic-comedy (1635; in Dodsley's Select Collection of Old English Plays, ed. W. C. Hazlitt, XII, 1875).

W. W. Greg, Pastoral Poetry and Pastoral Drama (1906); A. Harbage, Cavalier Drama (1936); G. E. Bentley, Jacobean and Caroline Stage, V (1956). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Ruusbroec, JAN VAN (*Ruusbroec nr Brussels 1293; †Groenendaal 2 XII 1381), Dutch mystic. Ordained priest in 1317, he was chaplain to St Gudula until 1343 when he retired to the forest of Soignes, where he founded the Abbey of Groenendaal. He wrote 11 mystic treatises; in chronological order: Vanden Rike der Ghelieven; Die chierheit der gheesteleker brulocht (his masterpiece); Het Hantvingherlijf of van den blickenden steene; Het Boec van vier becoringen; Vanden kerstenen ghelove; Het Boec van den gheesteleken Tabernacule (begun in Brussels, continued in Groenendaal); Het Boec van seven sloten; De Spieghel der ewigher salicheit (1357); Van seven Trappen; Het Boec der hoechster Waerheit or Samuel; Het Boec vanden Twaelf Beghinen. Van den XII Dogheden was ascribed to him, but turned out to be the work of Godefridus Wevel*, one of his disciples. In these books, mainly destined for monks and written in the best Middle Dutch prose, Ruusbroec equals the greatest mystics of the Middle Ages. Against the older mysticism, Ruusbroec's represents a consistent Trinitarianism; against the contemporary, chiefly the German, mystics, he emphasized the empiric element. After his death he was accused of atheism and pantheism by Jean Gerson*, Chancellor of Paris University, against whom Ruusbroec's pupil, Jan van Schoonhoven*, defended his beloved master. His works had an enormous circulation in MS form and greatly influenced the mysticism of the following centuries, in the Netherlands especially H. Herp* and, by way of Surius' Latin translation (3 eds in mid-16th century), the French, German, Italian and Spanish mystics.

Ed. J. B. David (1858–68); ed. by the Ruusbroec-Genootschap (1931–32; 2nd ed. 1944–48; contribs by J. van Mierlo, D. Stracke and L. Reypens, the great R.-specialist.—Complete Fr. tr. by the Benedictines of Wisques (1912–30); sel. Eng. trs: J. T. Stoddart, Ruysbroeck and the Mystics ... (1894); Earle Baillie, Reflections from the Mirror of a Mystic ... (1905); C. E. S., Flowers of a Mystic Garden (1912); J. Francis, The Book of the Twelve Béguines (1913); C. A. Wynschenck, John of Ruysbroeck, The Adornment of the Spiritual Marriage, The Sparkling Stone, The Book of Supreme Truth (1916); T. Arnold Hyde, The Kingdom of the Lovers of God by Jan Ruysbroeck ... (1919); E. Colledge in English Stud. (1952; on 15th-century Eng. trs), The Spiritual Espousals (1952) and Mediaeval Netherlands Religious Literature (1965; incl. tr. of Het Hantvingherlijen).—M. Maeterlinck, Fr. tr. of Brulocht (1889) and 'R. l'admirable' in Le trésor des humbles (1896).—W. Eichler, J. van R. 'Brulocht' in oberdeutscher Überlieferung (1969).

V. Scully, A Mediaeval Mystic: A Short Account of the Life and Writings of Blessed J. R. (1910); J. van R., Leven, Werken (with extensive biblio.; 1931); A. Combes, Essai sur la critique de R. par Gerson, I (1945); W. H. Beuken, R. en de Middeleeuwse Mystiek (1946); A. Ampe, Kernproblemen uit de leer van R. (4 vols, 1950–57); St. Axters in Nationaal Biografisch Woordenboek, I (1964); numerous arts in Ons Geestelijk Erf (pub. of the R.-Genootschap, Antwerp) and in Dr L. Reypens-Album (1964). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Ruysbroeck, JOHN OF: see Ruusbroec, JAN.

Ruzzante, IL: see Beolco, ANGELO.

Rydberg, ABRAHAM VIKTOR (*Jönköping 18 XII 1828; †Djursholm 21 IX 1895), Swedish poet, writer and scholar. After a difficult childhood Rydberg started writing for Jönköpingsbladet in 1847, and in 1849 joined Göteborgs Handelstidning. He interrupted his journalistic career in the hope of taking a degree at Lund, a venture broken off in 1852 because of financial stress. He then became a tutor, but returned to Göteborgs Handelstidning in 1855 and continued there till 1876. In that year he became an extra-mural lecturer in Göteborg, and from 1884 to his death was Professor of cultural history at Stockholms Högskola. His first original writings appeared in serial form (Vampyren, 1848; Ett äventyr i finska skärgården, 1850): they reveal his radical political sympathies. A more practical liberalism is expressed in the novel De vandrande djäkarna (1856), whilst Den siste atenaren (1859; The Last Athenian, tr. W. W. Thomas, 1869), a historical and ideological novel, puts forward his classical and humanistic belief in Christian Platonism. His critical work, Bibels lära om Kristus (1862), had considerable importance in modifying the narrow orthodoxy then prevalent in Sweden. After a visit to Italy in 1874 he turned more and more to poetry and the study of mythology. His poems (Dikter, 1828, 1891) express a high idealism, but also an increasingly despairing awareness of the trends of modern society in the machine age.

NOVELS: Positivspelarna (1851); Fribytaren på Östersjön (1857); The Freebooter of the Baltic, tr. C. L. Broomall, 1891; Singoalla (1857; rev. ed. 1865; tr. A. Josephson, 1903); Vapensmeden (1891).—ESSAYS AND CRITICISM: Romerska dagar (1877); Mytologiska undersökningar i germansk mytologi (2 vols, 1886–89).—Samlade skrifter (ed. K. Warburg, 14 vols, 1896–99); Brev (3 vols, 1923–26).—For Eng. trs see N. Afzelius, Books in English on Sweden (1951).

K. Warburg, V. R., en levnadsteckning (2 vols, 1900); V. Svanberg, R.'s Singoalla, en studie i hans ungdomsdiktning (1923) and Novantiken i Den siste atenaren (1928); O. Holmberg, V. R.'s lyrik (1935); Ö. Lindberger, Prometheustanken hos V. R. (2 vols, 1938); G. Löwendahl, Kärlek och svärmod hos V. R. (1960); A. Forrström, V. R. (1960). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Rydel, LUCJAN (*Cracow 17 V 1870; †ibid. 8 IV 1918), Polish author. His play Zaczarowane kolo (1900) is a decorative fairy-tale written under the influence of G. Hauptmann's* Die versunkene Glocke. A master of poetic form, he was a successful translator and good story teller.

Poezje (verse; 1899).—PLAYS: Betleem polskie (1905); Zygmunt August (1913).—VARIOUS: Ferenike i Pejssidoros (1909); Z greckiego świata (1910).—Utwory dramatyczne (2 vols, 1902).

Z. Wasilewski, 'L. R.' in Współcześni (1924). S.S.

Rygier-Nalkowska, ZOFIA: see Nalkowska, ZOFIA.

Ryleyev, KONDRATY FĖDOROVICH (*18 IX 1795; †St Petersburg 13 VII 1826), Russian civic poet and a leader of the abortive Decembrist revolt in 1825, after which he was hanged. His narrative poem Voynarovsky (1825) shows Byron's* influence. Some of his revolutionary civic poems are among the best in Russia. He was a friend of Pushkin* and as a member of the Pushkin Pléiade he began editing, in 1823, the important yearly miscellany Polyarnaya Zvezda.

Sochineniya (Berlin, 1860); Sochineniya i perepiska (1872); Sobranie sochineniy i perepiska (1906); Stikhotvoreniya (1947).—The Poems of K. F. Ryleyev (tr. T. Hart-Davies, 1887).

N. A. Kotlyarevsky, R. (1908); K. F. Ryleyev, O pyati poveshennykh (1927); S. V. Shuvalov, Sem' poetov (1927); N. A. Bestuzhev, Vospominaniya o Ryleyevе (1931); A. G. Tseitlin, K. F. R. (1945) and Tvorchestvo Ryleyeva (1955); K. V. Pigarev, Zhizn' Ryleyeva (1947). J.L.

Rymer, THOMAS (*The Hall, Yafforth 1641; †London 14 XII 1713), English antiquary, translator and critic. From Smelt's school at Danby-Wiske, Rymer went through Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, without a degree, to Gray's Inn (1666) and was called to the Bar in 1673. In 1692 he became Historiographer Royal and in 1693 editor of diplomatic documents and treatises. He took his friend Leibniz's* Codex Juris Gentium Diplomaticus (1693) as a model for his Foedera, a compilation of English State papers from the Middle Ages to 1654, a major landmark in English historical studies, of which 15 volumes had appeared by his death. The major English advocate of contemporary French neo-classicism, in 1674 he translated Rapin's* Reflections on Aristotle's Treatise of Poesie. His dogmatic adherence to the judgement of drama by the neo-classic principles of probability, the strict application of the 'rules', and a rigid concept of decorum, are expressed in his hostile account of Elizabethan drama in The Tragedies of the Last Age Consider'd and Examin'd by the Practice of the Ancients and by the Common Sense of All Ages (1678). His emphasis on meaningful plotting in drama is less remembered than his notorious attack on Othello as a 'bloody farce' in A Short View of Tragedy (1692).

Edgar, An Heroick Tragedy (1678); An Essay Concerning Critical and Curious Learning (1698; ed. C. A. Zimansky, 1965); Foedera (20 vols, 1704-35; ed. A. Clarke, J. Caley and F. Holbrook, 1816-19); The Critical Works of T. R. (ed. C. A. Zimansky, 1956).

A. Hoffherr, T. R.'s dramatische Kritik (1908); J. W. Atkins, English Literary Criticism 17th and 18th Centuries (1951); D. C. Douglas, English Scholars 1660-1730 (2nd ed. 1951); G. Watson, The Literary Critics (1962); A. Maurocordato, La critique classique en Angleterre de la Restauration à la mort de Joseph Addison (1964). R.M.W.

Rymkiewicz, JAROSŁAW MAREK (*Warsaw 13 VII 1935), Polish poet. A talented representative of the trend in Polish poetry of the 1960s to return to neo-classical form and diction, he has published highly erudite and philosophical poetry which at times resembles pastiche. He is a very gifted translator, especially of Baroque literature.

POETRY: Człowiek z głową jastrzębia (1960); Metafizyka (1963); Animula (1964).—VARIOUS: Kwiat nowy starych romanc czyli imitacje i przekłady hispańskich romanes (1966); Czym jest klasycyzm. Manifesty poetyckie (1967); Myśli różne o ogrodach. Dzieje jednego toposu (1968). P.H.

Ryum, ULLA (†Frederiksberg 4 V 1937), Danish novelist, a leading prose writer of the 1960s.

NOVELS: Spejl (1962); Natsangersken (1963);

Latterfuglen (1965).—STORIES: Jakelhatten (1967); Tusindskove (1969); Noget om i går og idag (1971). Th. Bredsdorff, Sære Fortællere (1967). E.B.

Ryūtei TANEHIKO, pseud. of TAKAYA TOMOHIRA, also called TAKAYA HIKOSHIRŌ (*Edo [=Tokyo] 1783; †ibid. 23 VIII 1842), Japanese novelist and essayist. A samurai in feudal service throughout his adult life, he was at an early age interested in painting and drama, and also in the composition of haiku poems (Bashō*). A cultured, learned man, he became the most famous writer of his day except for Bakin*, though surprisingly it was not in the more 'literary' genre of 'text books' or yomihon but in that of illustrated books that he was most successful. The best-known of his works is Nise Murasaki inaka Genji (1815-42), a modernized imitation of Genji monogatari by Murasaki* Shikibu. His novels share with those of his contemporaries traditional standards of moral outlook (loyalty, revenge, filial piety) which prevented realistic plots and characterization.

NOVELS: Awa no naruto (1807); Asamagatake omokage zōshi (1808); Nise Murasaki inaka Genji (extract tr. in M. Revon, Anthologie de la littérature japonaise, 1923; summary and discussion in B. Lewin, Japanische Chrestomathie, I, 1965); Ukiyogata rokumai byōbu (1821; Ger. tr. P. Kühnel in Asobi, Altjapanische Novellen, 1923); Kantan shokoku monogatari (1834-41).—ESSAYS: Kankan shiryō (on antiquarian subjects, 1826); Sokushin' ō ki (n.d.) E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Rzewuski, HENRYK, COUNT, pseud. J. BEJLA (*Ślawa 3 V 1791; †Cudnów 28 II 1866), Polish novelist. He took part in the 1809 campaign, then travelled extensively abroad. Later he became reactionary in his social and political views and even worked (1850) as an official of Paskiewicz who represented Russia in Warsaw. His stories from the 18th century depicting vividly the life of the Polish gentry and nobility, in a form gawęda szlachecka, became very popular. His series of historical novels, of which Listopad with its psychological facts is the best, is noteworthy.

SHORT STORIES: Pamiętki J. Pana Seweryna Soplisy (4 vols, Paris, 1839; Les récits d'un vieux gentilhomme polonais, tr. L. Mickiewicz, 1866; ed. Z. Szwejkowski, 1928); Mieszaniny obyczajowe ... (2 vols, 1841-43).—NOVELS: Listopad (3 vols, 1845-46; ed. K. Wojciekowski, 1923; November, Eng. tr. 1857); Zamek krakowski (3 vols, 1841-48; Das Schloss von Krakau, tr. Bachmann, n.d.); Adam Smigielski (2 vols, 1850; Ger. tr. idem, 1859); Zaporoże (4 vols, 1854).—Dzieła. Powieści historyczne (6 vols, 1877-82).

S. Tarnowski, H. R. (1887); Z. Szwejkowski, Powieści historyczne H. R. (1922); J. Krzyżanowski, 'H. R.' in Polish Romantic Literature (1930). S.S. (P.H.)

S

Saadiyah Gaon, otherwise SA'ID BEN JOSEPH AL-FAYYŪMĪ (*Dilāz 892; †Sura X 942), Hebrew poet and writer. Banished(?) from Egypt in 915, he settled after some wanderings in Babylonia, where he was in 928 appointed Gaon (director) of the Talmudic college of Sura. Deposed in 930 after a quarrel with the Exilarch (temporal head of Babylonian Jews), he was restored in 936. The most outstanding personality of the 'gaonic' age (6th–11th century), he was the first representative of פייט in Babylonia and one of the greatest פייטניו writers. His poems are involved and obscure. He wrote an autobiographical work, Sefer ha-Galuy, in highly rhetorical Hebrew, with Arabic translation, partly to serve as a model of Hebrew composition. He was also author of the first Hebrew dictionary and grammar (partly preserved). He wrote in Arabic Al-Amānāt wal-I'tiqādāt (930; Hebrew, Emunoth we-De'oth), the first and one of the most important of philosophical treatments of the Jewish religion; he followed mainly the Muslim school of scholastic theology, the Mutakallimūn (Kalām). He is also the author of an Arabic translation and commentary of the Old Testament, and many other works.

Siddur R. Saadiyah (verse; ed. I. Davidson, S. Assaf and B. Joel, 1941).—PHILOSOPHY: Amānāt etc. (Arabic text ed. S. Landauer, 1880; Heb. tr. 1st ed. Constantinople, 1562; ed. with new Heb. tr. J. Qafih, 1970).—Sel.: A. Altmann (1946); The Book of Beliefs and Opinions (tr. S. Rosenblatt, 1948).—OTHER WORKS: Saadia's Polemic Against Hiwi al-Balkhi (in Heb. and Eng.; ed. and tr. I. Davidson, 1915); Ha-Egron (dictionary; ed. N. Allony, 1969).

H. Malter, S. G., His Life and Works (1921); much information in millenary vols (Jerusalem, New York, Manchester, 1943); M. Ventura, La philosophie de S. G. (1943); A. Marx, Essays in Jewish Biography (1947); Al targum Rav S. G. la-Torah (ed. with Eng. summary M. Zucker, 1959); R. Ecker, Die arabische Job-Übersetzung des G. S. (1962). C.R.

Saavedra Fajardo, DIEGO (*Algazares, Murcia 1584; †Madrid 1648), Spanish moralist and historian. After reading law at Salamanca he became cypher-secretary at the Spanish embassy in Rome. In 1631 he was appointed ambassador there, and he was later ambassador in Germany and a plenipotentiary at the Congress of Münster (1643). On his return to Madrid he served as Counsellor for the Indies.

His most famous work, the Idea de un príncipe político cristiano (pub. Munich, 1640), is a commentary on 102 emblems, after the manner of J. B. Angermunt's Emblemata politica (1618). Its general tendency is anti-Machiavellian and Catholic. It shows wide and profound learning, and the prose is laconic and polished. Equally well written is his República literaria, a vision of the arts and sciences. He also began an historical work, the Corona gótica, which was continued by another hand after his death. Minor works include a panegyric of Ferdinand the Catholic and a satire on the follies of Europe. E.M.W.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXV; República literaria (ed. M. Serrano y Sanz, 1907; ed. V. García de Diego, 1922); Idea de un príncipe político cristiano (ed. V. García de Diego, 4 vols, 1927–30).—Obras completas (ed. A. González Palencia, 1946).—The Commonwealth of Learning (London, 1705); The Republic of Letters (tr. J. E., 1727); The Royal Politician (tr. Sir Z. Astruc, 2 vols, 1700).

J. C. Dowling, El pensamiento político-filosófico de S. F. (1957); F. Murrillo Ferrol, S. F. y la política del Barroco (1957). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Saavedra y Ramírez de Baquedano, ÁNGEL DE, DUQUE DE RIVAS (*Córdoba 10 III 1791; ∞ Encarnación Cueto; †Madrid 22 VI 1865), Spanish poet and dramatist; educated at the Seminario de Nobles in Madrid. He fought against Napoleon and was seriously wounded. As a liberal he was condemned to death by Ferdinand VII and went into exile (1823–34) to London, Malta and Paris. On his return he inherited the title, became conservative, ambassador, Prime Minister, Chairman of the Council of State and director of the Royal Academy. Although his first works showed the influence of late neo-classicism, he became the champion of Spanish Romanticism, encouraged and inspired by John Hookham Frere*. Rather than by the poem El faro de Malta (1828) the transition is marked by El moro expósito (1834), a narrative poem in 12 cantos based on a famous legend (SIETE INFANTES DE LARA): a Walter Scott* formula in a conventional medieval Spanish and Moorish setting. Dedicated to Hookham Frere, it has a famous preface by Alcalá* Galiano. His Don Álvaro o la fuerza del sino (1835) has been called the Hernani of the Spanish stage, but in this respect its importance has been exaggerated. Prose and many types of verse intermingle in this too exaggerated though powerful drama, where not a single topic of Romanticism is absent. Verdi used it for his La forza del destino. Of more solid, permanent value are his brilliant Romances históricos (1841). The revival of the ballads, initiated by Meléndez* Valdés in the 18th century, is here developed by Rivas.

Obras completas (7 vols, 1894–1904); Obras completas (ed. J. Campos in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., C-CII, 1957); Romances (ed. C. Rivas Cherif, 2 vols, 1912).—'Ode to the Lighthouse of Malta', tr. T. Walsh in Hispanic Anthology (New York, 1920); 'Poems' in Ancient Spanish Ballads (ed. J. G. Lockhart, 1823 and later eds).

E. Funes, Don Álvaro o la fuerza del sino (1899); N. González Ruiz, El duque de Rivas (1914); 'Azorín', Rivas y Larra: razón social del romanticismo en España (1916); E. A. Peers, Rivas and Romanticism in Spain (Liverpool, 1923) and 'Some observations on "El desengaño en un sueño"' in Homenaje a Menéndez Pidal, I (1925); G. Boussagol, A. de S. duc de Rivas. Sa vie, son œuvre poétique (1926); V. Cerny, 'Quelques remarques sur les sentiments religieux chez Rivas et Espronceda' in Bull. Hispanique, XXXVI (1934).
R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Saba, UMBERTO (*Trieste 9 III 1883; †Gorizia 25 VIII 1957), Italian poet, the most traditional and accessible of modern Italian poets. His work has been only slightly affected by the main poetic movements of his time. He is a prolific writer whose poetry is uneven in quality; his best poems are to be found in Casa e campagna and Trieste e una donna, in Il canzoniere (coll. poems; 1921, def. ed. 1961), and in Parole (1934) and Mediterraneo (1947). Storia e cronistoria del Canzoniere (1948; now in Prose, 1964) is Saba's own commentary on his poems.

F. Portinari, U. S. (1963); E. Caccia, Lettura e storia di S. (1967).
B.M.

Sabadino degli Arienti, GIOVANNI: see Arienti, GIOVANNI SABADINO.

Sabahaddin Ali (*Gümülcine, Western Thrace 12 II 1906; †Kırklareli 2 IV 1948), Turkish author, the pioneer of the social realism of the 1930s. Educated in Istanbul and Germany; his short stories are sketches of Anatolian peasants. His novel Kuyucaklı Yusuf (1937) powerfully portrays life in a western Anatolian town before the First World War.

SHORT STORIES: Değirmen (1935); Kağı (1936); Ses (1937); Yeni Dünya (1943).—NOVELS: İçimizdeki Şeytan (1940); Kürk Mantolu Madonna (1943).—Dağlar ve Rüzgâr (verse; 1934).—Bütün eserleri (complete works; 7 vols, with intro. and biblio., pub. Varlık, 1965–66).

O. Spies, Die türkische Prosaliteratur der Gegenwart (1943); Yaşar Nabi, Genç Neslin en Güzel Hikâyeleri (1948); F. von Rummel, Fünf türkische Novellen (1948); Tahir Alangu, Cumhuriyetten sonra hikâye ve roman, I (1959).

F.İ.

Sábato, ERNESTO (*1911), Argentine writer, author of two novels, El túnel (1948; The Outsider, tr. H. de Onís, 1950) and Sobre Héroes y tumbas (1951). The latter is a violent and complex novel of contemporary Argentina, which traces the frustration of the Argentines to their origins in the 19th century. Sábato's views on literature are expressed in his essays, El escritor y sus fantasmas (2nd ed. 1964).
J.F.

Sabbe, MAURITS (*Bruges 9 II 1873; †Antwerp 12 II 1938), Flemish novelist, playwright, critic and literary historian. He was custodian of the Plantin-Moretus Museum at Antwerp. A late Romantic, he evoked the old, peaceful Bruges in charming prose enlivened with touches of humour. He was a student of 17th-century Dutch literature and typography.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Een Mei van vroomheid (1903); De filosoof van 't Sashuis (1907); De nood der Bariseele's (1912); 't Pastorken van Schaerdycke (1919); Le petit curé de Schaerdycke, tr. W. Timmermans, 1926; 't Kwartet der Jacobijnen (1920).—PLAYS: Bietje (1913); Caritate (1914).—CRITICISM: Het proza in de Vlaamsche letterkunde (1909); Mozatek (1912); Peilingen (1935).—STUDIES: Het leven en de werken van M. de Swaen (1905); Uit het Plantijnsche huis (1924); De Moretus en hun kring (1928); Brabant in 't verweer (1933).

R. Roemans, Analytische bibliographie van en bibliographie over M. S. (1932); L. Monteyne, De S.'s (1934).
R.F.L.

Sabellico, MARCANTONIO, properly MARCANTONIO COCCIO (*Vicovaro ?1436; †Venice 1506), Italian humanist and historian. Both his Historiae Rerum Venetarum (1487) and his universal history in 92 books, Enneades sive Rapsodiae historiarum (1498–1504), are rhetorical rather than critical.

Opera (2 vols, 1538); Del sito di Venezia città (1502; ed. G. Meneghetti, 1957).

R. Bersi, 'Le fonti della prima decade delle Historiae Rerum Venetarum' in Nuovo Archivio Veneto, XIX–XX (1910); B. Fueter, Geschichte der neueren Historiographie (1936); C. Dionisotti, Gli umanisti e il volgare fra Quattro e Cinquecento (1968).
C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Sabinus, GEORG (*Brandenburg 23 IV 1508; †Frankfurt an der Oder 2 XII 1560), German neo-Latin poet. Humanist, philologist, historian and diplomat, friend of Melanchthon*, Hessus* and Pietro Bembo*, he wrote countless graceful Latin poems, of which the love poems show true feeling and sincerity. The Elegies (Elegiae, 1550) are his best work.

Poemata (1544, 1558).

M. Töppen, Die Gründung der Universität Königsberg und das Leben ihres ersten Rektors G. S. (with full biblio.; 1844); R. Fester, 'Sleidan, S., Melanchthon' in Hist. Zeitschr., LXXXIX (1903).
D.G.D.

Sabuco y Álvarez, MIGUEL (*?Alcaraz; †ibid. 1588), Spanish writer. His Nueva filosofía de la naturaleza del hombre (1587) was published with his daughter's name (OLIVA) on the title-page. It treats of the interrelations between the mind, the passions and the body, in agreeable prose. It contains colloquies on self-knowledge, the world, medicine and the state.

Coloquios in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXV.—Obras (ed. O. Cuartero, 1888).

J. M. Hidalgo, 'Doña Oliva de S. no fué escritora' in Rev. de Archivos, VII (1903).

E.M.W.

Sá-Carneiro, MÁRIO DE (*Lisbon 1890; †Paris 1916), Portuguese poet; an inadaptable nature, whose short life ended in suicide. His brilliant, highly original style is often used with great skill to describe the pathological states of a mind in constant danger of disintegration. This part of his work is comparable to that of his friend Pessoa*. At other times he sinks into a mawkish self-indulgence reminiscent of António Nobre*.

VERSE: Dispersão (1914); Indícios de ouro (1938); Poesias (ed. J. G. Simões, 1946).—STORIES: Princípio (1912); A confissão de Lúcio (1914); Céu em fogo (1915).

A. Casais Monteiro, 'M. de Sá C.' in Considerações pessoais (1933); Castro Gil, M. de Sá-C. . . . (1949); C. Berardinelli, M. de Sá-C. (Rio de Janeiro, 1958); M. Arlete Galhoz, M. de Sá-C. (1963).

T.P.W.

Saccal Sarmast (*1739; †1826), author of a large number of short mystical (Sūfi) poems in both Sindhi and the Multani dialect of Punjabi. He is the most important writer in this genre after Shāh* Abdul Latif, and his verse is, in general, simpler and more direct, if less rich, than that of his great predecessor.

A. Bausani, Storia delle letterature del Pakistan (1958).

C.S.

Sacchetti, FRANCO (*?Ragusa c. 1332/34; ∞1354 Maria Felice Strozzi, ∞1383 Ghita Ghirardini, ∞1396 Giovanna Bruni; †Florence VIII 1400), Italian poet and narrative writer. After a period abroad (1356–62) he rose high in Florentine public life. As a pastime he wrote verse of all kinds; many of his madrigals and cacce were set to music by contemporary composers of the Florentine ars nova. Sacchetti is remembered especially for the Trecentonovelle (223 extant), a series of popular tales in vigorous colloquial prose (c. 1388–795). 'Born of a smile', anecdotal in tone and full of good sense, they reflect their author's moral sensibility and hatred of all that menaced the liberties of Florence. The tale of Agnolo di ser Gherardo (LXIV) contains elements which Cervantes* used later for Don Quixote.

Rime (ed. A. Chiari, 1936); La battaglia delle belle donne—Le lettere—Le sposizioni di Vangeli (ed. A. Chiari, 1938); Il Trecentonovelle (ed. V. Pernicone, 1946).—Opere (sel. ed. A. Borlenghi, 1957).

E. Li Gotti, F. S. uomo 'discolo e grosso' (1940); L. Caretti, Saggio sul S. (1951).

M.W.

Sacchetti, GIANNOLLO (*Florence c. 1340; †ibid. 15 X 1379), Italian poet; brother of Franco Sacchetti*. A spiritual follower of Santa Caterina* da Siena, he led a tumultuous life and was executed for his participation in the revolt of the Ciompi (1378). His 11 poems include some of great poignancy which reveal his dramatic struggle against fortune, his yearning for religious peace and sense of mortal corruption.

Rime (ed. O. Sacchetti, 1948); Rimatori del tardo Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1967).

E. Li Gotti, Restauri trecenteschi (1947).

M.W.

Sachs, HANS (*Nuremberg 5 XI 1494; ∞1519 Kunigunde Kreutzer, ∞1561 Barbara Harscher; †ibid. 19 I 1576), German poet and dramatist. Son of a tailor, he was apprenticed to a shoemaker (1509), went on his 'Wanderjahre' (1511–16), settled down in Nuremberg as a master cobbler (1517). A MASTERSINGER and leading member of the Nuremberg Singschule, he became a keen follower of Luther* in 1523 with the publication of Die Wittenbergische Nachtigall, a verse allegory popularizing Luther's doctrines. From then until his death he produced a vast collection of Meisterlieder, Schwänke, dialogues, Shrovetide and other plays based on his wide reading of the Bible, Luther's writings, Renaissance literature in translation and the literature of the late Middle Ages. In over 4,000 Meisterlieder he enlivened the rigid, conventional form with fables and witty stories. He excelled in the dialogue (Disputation zwischen einem Chorherrn und Schuhmacher), the SCHWANK (Sanct Peter mit der Gaiss) and the Fastnachtsspiele (Der farenndt Schüler im Paradeiss, Der Baur im Fegfewer). Written in a simple, robust language in homely KNITTELVERS, full of humour, genial observation, vivid characterization, local Nuremberg colour, a feeling for nature, and a bourgeois ethic quite free from fanaticism or bitterness, these works have a great variety within their limitations. At more ambitious 'comedies' and 'tragedies' Sachs was generally less successful. Often romanticized (Wagner*, Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg) and over-praised, Hans Sachs remains a poet of great charm and sympathy, a born story-teller and a notable representative of 16th-century Nuremberg.

Sämtliche Werke (ed. A. von Keller and E. Goetze, 26 vols, 1870–1908); Sämtliche Fastnachtsspiele (ed. E. Goetze, 7 vols, 1880–87); Sämtliche Fabeln und Schwänke (ed. idem and K. Drescher, 6 vols, 1893–1913).—SELECTIONS: ed. K. Goedeke and J. Tittmann (3 vols, 2nd ed., 1883–85); ed. B. Arnold in Dt. Nat.-Lit. (1885); ed. P. Merker and R. Buchwald (2 vols, 1923); ed. T. Schuhmacher (1957).—Vier Dialoge (ed.

R. Köhler, 1858); Nürnberger Meistersinger-Protokolle (ed. K. Drescher, 1897).

C. Schweitzer, La vie et les œuvres de H. S. (1887); R. Genée, H. S. und seine Zeit (1894); E. Geiger, H. S. in seinen Fastnachtsspielen (1904), H. S. in seinen Fabeln und Schwänken (1908) and Der Meistersänger des H. S. (1956); P. Landau, H. S. (1924); H. Cattànès, Les Fastnachtsspiele de H. S. (Northampton, U.S.A., 1924); W. French, Mediaeval Civilization Illustrated by the Fastnachtsspiele of H. S. (Göttingen, 1925); H. von Wendler, H. S. (1953). D.G.D.

Sachs, NELLY (*Berlin 10 XII 1891; †Stockholm 12 V 1970), German poet, who lived in Sweden. Her first volume of poetry appeared as late as 1946 (In den Wohnungen des Todes). Her verse, discovered by younger writers of the 1950s, is a kind of religious lamentation, often prophetic and Biblical in tone, concerned with the Jewish predicament in modern times. She shared the 1966 Nobel prize for literature with the Jewish poet Shmuel Agnon*.

VERSE: Und niemand weiss weiter (1957); Flucht und Verwandlung (1959).—COLLECTED WORKS: Fahrt ins Staublose (1961); Zeichen im Sand (poetic plays: 1962).

K. Schwedhelm, 'Die Dichtung der N. S.' in Jahresring (1959–60); N. S. zu Ehren (ed. W. A. Berendsohn et al., 1966); W. A. Berendsohn, Die Dichterin jüdischen Schicksals N. S. (1966); O. Lagercrantz, Versuch über die Lyrik der N. S. (1967; in Swed. 1966). F.M.K.

Sackville, CHARLES and THOMAS: see Dorset, CHARLES SACKVILLE, 6TH EARL OF; Dorset, THOMAS SACKVILLE, 1ST EARL OF.

Sacrobosco, JOHANNES DE (fl. 1230; *Halifax or Holywood; †Paris), English astronomer. From the 13th to the 17th century his lucidly expressed de Sphaera, which draws on Ptolemy*, Macrobius* and al-Farghani, provided Europe with its conception of the material universe. He also wrote on arithmetic. Commentaries date from 1230; Roberts' in 1271.

Libellus de Sphaera (eds: 1515, 1549, 1561).

L. Thorndyke, The Sphere of S. and Its Commentators (1949). H.An. (Tor.)

Sacy, ANTOINE-ISAAC SILVESTRE, BARON DE (*Paris 21 IX 1758; †ibid. 21 II 1838), French philologist. By the time he was 12 he could read the Bible in Hebrew. He taught himself Syriac, Chaldean, Arabic, Persian, Turkish—then English, and eventually most European languages. He became Professor of Persian at the Collège de France in 1806.

Sur l'histoire des Arabes avant Mahomet et sur l'origine de leur littérature (1785); Chrestomathie Arabe (3 vols, 1806, 1826, 1827); Mémoires

d'histoire et de littérature orientales (1818); Exposé de la religion des Druzes (1838).

H. Derenbourg, S. de S. (1895). H.An.

Sa'd-al-Din Varāvinī, 13th-century Persian writer. He rendered into Persian the Marzbān-Nāma, a collection of fables, short stories and anecdotes, ethical and didactic, from an original by Marzbān ibn Rustam in Tabaristani dialect.

Marzbān-Nāma (intro. Muhammed Qazvinī, 1908).

E. G. Browne, An Abridged Translation of the History of Tabaristan (Leiden, 1905). E.Y.

Sade, DONATIEN ALPHONSE FRANÇOIS, MARQUIS DE (*Paris 2 VI 1740; †Charenton 2 XII 1814), French writer. Sade was an army officer until 1768, was sentenced to death by default at Aix for a sexual offence (1772), reprieved, but as a result of other excesses spent 30 years in prison. He died in a lunatic asylum. During his rare periods of freedom, he published some of the works composed in his cell, but the majority long remained, or still are, unpublished. His work carries the individualism of the 18th century to frenzied heights and preaches and exemplifies with monotonous obscenity the total liberty of the instincts. Sade has exerted an almost hypnotic influence over a number of contemporary French thinkers and writers. (See EROTIC LITERATURE.)

Justine ou les malheurs de la vertu (1791; crit. ed. M. Heine and J. Paulhan under title Les infortunes de la vertu, 1946); Aline et Valcourt (1793); La philosophie dans le boudoir (1795); Juliette (1797); Les 120 journées de Sodome (1904; crit. ed. M. Heine, 1935); Dialogue entre un prêtre et un moribond (1926); Correspondance (1929).—Morceaux choisis (eds: G. Apollinaire, 1909; M. Heine, 1933; M. Nadeau, 1948; G. Lely, 1948).—Œuvres complètes (15 vols, 1960).

P. Klossowski, S., mon prochain (1947); C. P. Dawes, The Marquis de S. (1927); M. Blanchot, Lautréamont et S. (1949); G. Gorer, The Life and Ideas of the Marquis de S. (1953); J. Lély, Vie du Marquis de S. (1952–57). M.G.; J.P.R.

Sá de Miranda: see Miranda, FRANCISCO DE SÁ DE.

Sa'dī, MUSLIḤ-AL-DĪN, SHAIKH (*Shiraz 1194; †ibid. 1282 or 1292), Persian poet and writer, studied at the Nizamiyya college of Baghdad under the patronage of Sa'd ibn Zangī I of Fars (1195–1226). He travelled extensively (c. 1226–56), and passed the latter part of his life in Shiraz under the patronage of the Sulghurid rulers of Fars.

Sa'dī is the richest and most versatile figure in Persian literature. His Gulistān (1258), an ethical and humorous miscellany in rhymed prose, is regarded as the gem of Persian prose. In Būstān (1257), a moralizing poem of great depth and humanity, he combines didactic and mystical tendencies in Persian poetry for the first time. His genius, however, reaches its climax in his lyrics (ghazals). His works include, moreover, panegyrics, didactic odes, elegies, homilies, epigrams, aphorisms, humorous poems and 'facetiae'.

As a thinker and moralist, despite his moderate fatalism, Sa'di looks upon the world with humorous sympathy. His moral teachings, although flavoured with mystical idealism, reveal a preference for practical wisdom, judging deeds by virtue of their results. The liberality of his taste and his wide experience of the world give a cosmopolitan character to his ideas and judgements.

Gulistan (Calcutta, 1806; tr. J. T. Platt, 1873; Kings and Beggars, partial tr. A. J. Arberry, 1945); Būstān (Calcutta, 1810; tr. A. H. Edwards, 1911; verse tr. G. S. Davie, 1882); Kulliyāt (ed. J. A. Harrington, 2 vols, Calcutta, 1791-95, incl. 4 groups of lyrics: 1. Ṭayībāt, tr. L. W. King, 1926; 2. Badāyī', tr. idem, 1925; 3. Khavāṭm; 4. Qazaliyāt-i Qadīm; also Qasā'id, Marāṭhi, Risālāt, Pand-Nāma, of doubtful authority, and Hazliyāt); new arrangement of Kulliyāt (ed. M. A. Furughi, Tehran, 1941).—FURTHER TRANSLATIONS: W. Bacher, S.s Aphorismen und Sinngedichte (1879); F. Rückert, Aus S.s Diwan (1893); R. Levy, Stories from S.'s Bustan and Gulistan (1928); A. J. Arberry, Immortal Rose (1948).

J. A. Harrington, intro. to ed. of Kulliyāt (above); H. Ethé, 'Neupersische Litteratur' in W. Geiger and E. Kuhn, Grundriss der iranischen Philologie, II (1896-1904); H. Massé, Essai sur le poète S. (1919); S.-Nāma (various authors; Tehran, 1941). E.Y.

Sadoletto, JACOPO, Cardinal (*Modena 12 VII 1477; †Rome 18 X 1547), Italian humanist, a conscientious Papal secretary and enthusiastic scholar, renowned for his pure Ciceronian style and tolerant common sense. C.Dr.

Opera omnia (Mainz, 1607; fuller ed., 4 vols, Verona, 1737-38); De liberis recte instituendis (1533; Eng. tr. E. T. Campagnac and K. Forbes, 1916).

A. Joly, Étude sur J. S. (1856); G. Toffanin, Il Cinquecento (1960; with biblio.).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Sadoveanu, ION MARIN, pseud. of IANCU-LEONTE MARINESCU (*Bucharest 1893; †1964), Rumanian novelist, dramatic critic and historian. For his principal novel, Sfîrşit de veac în Bucureşti, he chose a theme familiar in Rumanian literature—the rise of a parvenu—but he brought to it exceptional gifts of observation and analysis and succeeded in creating a variety of characters illustrating the different social, moral and psychological factors involved, and in forging a highly elaborate style well suited to the minuteness of his descriptions of persons and settings.

CRITICISM: Dramă şi teatru (1926); Istoria universală a teatrului (1942); Drama şi teatrul religios în Evul Mediu (1942).—NOVELS: Sfîrşit de veac în Bucureşti (1944); Ion Sîntu (1957).

Perpessicius, Menţiuni critice, I (1928); C. Regman, pref. to Sfîrşit de veac (1966 ed.).

F.J.B.

Sadoveanu, MIHAIL (*Paşcani 1880; †Bucharest 1961), Rumanian author. The son of a barrister and a servant girl, he became Director of the National Theatre in Iaşi (1910-19), a Member of Parliament (1926) and President of the Senate (1930-31). After the Second World War, he aligned himself decisively with the Communists and was appointed Vice-President of the Grand National Assembly. In language enriched by a savour of the Moldavian dialect he evokes in his novels and tales the landscape, wild life and history of his native land and creates a host of peasant characters as memorable as they are impenetrable. His masterpiece, the long tale Baltagul (1930), raises the story of a peasant woman's search for her murdered husband to the dignity of classical tragedy. He is more a storyteller than a formal novelist.

Povestiri (1904); Dureri înăbuşite (1904); Crtşma lui Moş Precu (1905); Povestiri din război, Aminiriile căprarului Gheorghiţă (1906); La noi la Vişoara, Vremuri de bejenie (1907); Neamul Şoimăreştilor (1915); Venea o moară pe Siret (1923); Dumbrava minunată (1926); Ţara de dincolo de negură (1926); Hanu Ancuţei (1928); Zodia Cancerului (1929); Fraţii Jderi (1935-42); Anii de ucenicie (memoirs; 1944); Mitrea Cocor (experiment in Socialist Realism; 1949); Nicoară Potcoavă (1952); Aventura în lunca Dunării (1954). 'Bibliografie sadoveniană' in Steaua, XI.10 (1960).—M. Friedwagner, M. S. (1912); S. Bratu, M. S. (1963); C. Ciopraga, M. S. (Rum. and Eng. eds; 1966). F.J.B.

Šafařík, PAVEL JOSEF (*Kobeliarovo 13 V 1795; †Prague 26 VI 1861), Slovak philologist and antiquary. His association with Palacký* stimulated his Slavonic enthusiasm; and he devoted his life to the study of Slavonic philology and antiquities, becoming one of the leading figures in the Czech and Slovak national revival. From 1819 to 1833 he was director of the Serbian Orthodox school at Novi Sad. He then moved to Prague, where he lived as a private scholar for the remainder of his life. While some of his work still suffers from an uncritical romantic enthusiasm, he nevertheless laid the foundations of Slavonic archaeology and actively furthered the scholarly study of the Slavonic languages.

Spisy (coll. works; 1862-65).—Slovanské starožitnosti (2 vols, 1837; Slawische Altertümer, tr. M. von Aehrenfeld, 2 vols, 1843); Geschichte der südslawischen Literatur (1864); Über den Ursprung

und die Heimat des Glagolitismus (1858).—Letters ed. V. A. Francev (2 vols, 1927–28); corresp. with Palacký ed. V. Bechyňová and Z. Hauptová (1961).

K. Paul, P. J. Š. (1961).

R.A.

Sagan, FRANÇOISE, pseud. of FRANÇOISE QUOIREZ (*Carjac 21 VI 1935), French novelist and dramatist. Famous at 18 for her novel Bonjour tristesse (1945; Eng. tr. I. Ash, 1955), an impeccable psychological study, tinged with a resigned pessimism. Other short novels confirmed her exceptional gifts for the analysis of the feminine heart, and her classical style. After 1960 she wrote regularly and successfully for the theatre, with worldly, bitter-sweet comedies.

NOVELS: Un certain sourire (1953; Eng. tr. I. Ash, 1955); Dans un mois, dans un an (1957; Those Without Shadows, tr. idem, 1957); Aimez-vous Brahms? (1959; Eng. tr. P. Wiles, 1960); Les merveilleux nuages (1961; Eng. tr. A. Green, 1961); La garde du cœur (1968; Eng. tr. R. Westhoff, 1968); Un peu de soleil dans l'eau froide (1969).—PLAYS: Les violons parfois (1962); La robe mauve de Valentine (1963); L'écharde (1966); Le cheval évanoui (1966).

G. Hourdin, Le cas de F. S. (1958); G. Mourgue, F. S. (1958); 'Do you like flounder? A talk with F. S.' in Transatlantic Rev., IV (1960); A. Gismaru, 'F. S.'s theory of complicity' in Dalhousie Rev. XLV.4 (1965); B. Brophy, Don't Ever Forget (1966).

M.G.

Sagarra i Castellarnau, JOSEP MARIA DE (*1894; †1964), Catalan poet and dramatist. A fluent, vigorous and prolific writer, he composed short lyrics, long epic poems such as El Mal Caçador (1916) and El Comte Arnau (1928; modern interpretations of Catalan legends), many plays and two novels, one of them, Vida privada, a scandalous satire of the Barcelona upper class. His facility often caused him to become diffuse or superficial. He translated into Catalan the whole of Shakespeare* and the Divina Commedia, and many other works.

Obra poètica (1912–37) (1947).—PLAYS: L'estudiant i la pubilla (1921); Les veus de la terra (1923); Marçal Prior (1926); L'hostal de la Glòria (1931).—Memòries (1954).

J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Sā'ib, MĪRZĀ MUḤAMMAD 'ALĪ (*Īsfahan c. 1603; †ibid. 1669), Persian poet. He spent a considerable time in India, where he joined the court of Shāh Jahān (1628–59). On his return he was made poet laureate by Shāh 'Abbās II (1642–67).

Sā'ib is the main exponent of the so-called Indian style in Persian poetry. Despite his great power of imagination, ingenuity of thought and penetrating observation, his imagery is often elaborate and far-fetched and his rhythms rather languid.

Divān (Cawnpore, 1871); Kulliyāt (Lucknow, 1875).

H. Ethé, Catalogue of Persian MSS in the Library of the India Office, I (1903); Shibli Nu'mani, Shi'r al-'Ajam, III (Lahore, 1924); Z. Mu'tamin, intro. to Muntakhab-i Ash'ār-i Sā'ib (Tehran, 1940); J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968).

E.Y.

Said Faik Abasıyanik (*Adapazarı, north-western Anatolia 23 XI 1906; †Istanbul 11 V 1954), Turkish author. He bases his compelling short stories and sketches on the life and milieu of simple people, workers, fishermen, vagabonds, etc. The style, often unpolished, is, nevertheless, very warm and forceful.

SHORT STORIES: Semaver (1936); Sarıç (1939); Şahmerdan (1940); Lüzumsuz Adam (1948); Mahalle Kahvesi (1950); Havada Bulut (1951); Kumpanya (1951); Havuzbaşı (1952); Son Kuşlar (1952); Alemdağında var bir yılan (1954); Az şekerli (1954); Tüneldeki çocuk (1955); Mahkeme kapısı (1956).—Un point sur la carte (sel. short stories; tr. Sabri Esat Siyavuşgil, 1962).—NOVELS: Medarı Maişet Motörü (1944; later eds entitled Bir takım insanlar); Kayıp arıyor (1953).—Şimdi sevişme vakti (verse; 1953).—Bütün eserleri (complete works; 8 vols, pub. Varlık, 1965).

Tahir Alangu, Sait F. için (1956); Muzaffer Uyguner, Sait F.'in hayatı (1959) and Sait F. A. (1964).

F.İ.

Sā'idī, GHULĀM-ḤUSAIN (*Tabriz 19 I 1936), Persian writer. A physician by profession and committed to reformist ideas, Sā'idī has exhibited considerable literary versatility. He is at his best in social and psychological satire and is considered the foremost Persian playwright (under pseud. GAUHĀR-I MURĀD). He has also published several monographs on Persian villages and local communities.

PLAYS: Karbafakha dār Sangar (1960); Kalata Gül (1961); Dāh Lāl-Bāzi (10 pantomimes; 1963); Bihtarīn Baba-yi Dunyā (1966); Chūb-bi-dastha-yi Varazil (1966); Panj Nāmayish-nāma . . . (1967); Khāna Raushani (1967); Aye Bikulah, Aye Bakulah (1967); Diktek va Zāvīyah (1968).—NOVELS: Tūp (1968); Tars u Larz (1968).—SHORT STORIES: Āzadaran-i Bayal (1965); Vahimiha-yi Bīnīshān (1967).—MONOGRAPHS: Ilkhchi (1964); Khiyav (1966); Ahl-i Havā (1967).

E.Y.

Saidi bin Abdalla: see AL-Buhry, HEMEDI BIN ABDALLA BIN SAIDI BIN ABDALLA BIN MASUDI.

Saigyō, pseud. of SATŌ NORIKIYO (*1118; †Kyoto 23 III 1190), Japanese tanka poet. He gave up court service at the age of 23 to become an itinerant priest, and became an outstanding poet. His poetry is well known for its clearness and simplicity, and especially for its appreciation of nature and life.

Sankashū (date of composition uncertain; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948); sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry (1936); Anthology of Japanese Literature (ed. D. L. Keene, 1955); R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Saikaku: see Ibara SAIKAKU.

Saint-Amant, MARC-ANTOINE DE GÉRARD, SIEUR DE, originally ANTOINE GIRARD (*Rouen 1594; †29 XII 1661), French poet, independent, like his friend Théophile de Viau*, of both préciosité and classical purism. With various noble patrons he travelled to Madrid, Rome, London, Stockholm and Warsaw, visited America and Africa, fought at La Rochelle and elsewhere, and enjoyed music and the tavern. Much of his work is characterized by verbal exuberance and baroque fantasy, which can be found even in his Biblical epic, Moïse sauvé. His Rome ridicule (1633) is an early example of BURLESQUE poetry.

Les visions (1628); Le passage de Gibraltar (1640); Albion (1644); Moïse sauvé (1653); La solitude (1654).—Œuvres complètes (ed. C. L. Livet, 2 vols, 1855; ed. J. Bailbé, 5 vols, 1970- ); Œuvres poétiques (sel. ed. L. Verane, 1930).

J. Lagny, Bibliographie des œuvres de S.-A. (1960) and Le poète S.-A. (1965); F. Gourier, Étude des œuvres poétiques de S.-A. (Geneva, 1961). G.B.

Saint-Denys-Garneau: see Garneau, HECTOR DE SAINT-DENYS.

Sainte-Beuve, CHARLES AUGUSTIN (*Boulogne 23 XII 1804; †Paris 13 X 1869), French critic. Sainte-Beuve first studied medicine, but, in consequence of his friendship with Hugo*, took to literature as a declared champion of the Romantics (1827-40). He fell in love with Hugo's wife, Adèle, and this painful episode led to a breach with his old friend. In 1837-38 he taught at Lausanne. From 1840 to 1848 he was curator of the Bibliothèque Mazarine, and in 1848-49 held a professorship at Liège. He gave his allegiance to the Empire and was appointed to the Collège de France, where his lectures were interrupted by the hostile demonstrations of his former liberal friends. In 1851 he began his series of Lundis—weekly critical articles which appeared in the Constitutionnel, the Moniteur and the Temps. He became a senator in 1865 and threw in his lot with the liberal opposition.

Under the influence of the English 'Lake School' he began by writing personal and subjective poetry. He was the author of a profound and tormented novel Volupté (1834) which reads now as strangely modern. He is, however, best known for the vast output of critical writing in which he dealt with every aspect of French literature since the Renaissance. Though declaredly scientific and positivist (he once described literary criticism as 'the natural history of the human spirit'), his chief value as a critic lies in the subtlety and literary skill of his approach and in the psychological understanding which enabled him to overcome his personal prejudices (frankly revealed in Mes poisons), and to study with sympathy many different types of experience and writing.

VERSE: La vie, les poésies et les pensées de J. Delorme (1829); Le livre d'amour (1843).—Volupté (novel; crit. eds: P. Poux, 1927; M. Allem, 1934).—CRITICISM: Tableau de la poésie française au 16<sup>e</sup> siècle (1827); Histoire de Port-Royal (3 vols, 1840-48; 3rd ed., 7 vols, 1867); Portraits littéraires (1844); Portraits de femmes (1884); Portraits contemporains (1846; new ed., 3 vols, 1869-71); Causeries du lundi (11 vols, 1851-62); Chateaubriand et son groupe littéraire (1861; ed. M. Allem, 2 vols, 1948); Nouveaux lundis (13 vols, 1863-70); Premiers lundis (3 vols, 1874-75); Tables analytiques (ed. C. Pierrot, 1881; ed. V. Giraud, 1904); Les grands écrivains français (studs from Lundis and Portraits; 22 vols, 1926-33); Œuvres critiques (Premiers lundis and Portraits; ed. M. Leroy, 1949).—VARIOUS: Mes poisons (1926); Correspondance générale (ed. J. Bonnerot, 6 vols, 1935-49).

G. Michaut, S. B. (1921); H. Brémont, Pour le romantisme (1924); V. Giraud, La vie secrète de S. B. (1935); M. Allem, S. B. et Volupté (1935); J. Bonnerot, Bibliographie de l'œuvre de S. B. (2 vols, 1937-49); M. Leroy, La pensée de S. B. (1940); A. Billy, S. B. et son temps (1952); M. Proust, Contre S. B. (1954). M.G.; J.P.R.

Sainte-Marthe, SCÉVOLE DE (*Loudun 2 II 1536; †ibid. 29 III 1623), French poet and Latinist, the best-known member of a family of poets and historians. His life centred on Poitiers, where he held state financial offices and of which he was twice mayor. A prolific writer, his French verse was influenced by the FLÉIADE and the Latin poets. His Latin verse, perhaps superior, includes a didactic poem on the feeding and upbringing of infants, La Pédotrophie.

Premières œuvres (1569); Œuvres mêlées (1573); Œuvres poétiques (1579, 1600); Poemata (1575-1606); De puerorum educatione [La Pédotrophie] (1580-84).

L. Feugère, S. de S.-M. (1854); A. J. Farmer, Les œuvres françaises de S. de S.-M. (1920).

G.B.

Saint-Èvremond, CHARLES DE MARGUETEL DE SAINT-DENIS DE (*Saint-Denys-le-Guast, Cotentin I 1616; †London 20 IX 1703), French writer. A nobleman and a soldier, Saint-Èvremond was exiled in 1661, apparently for having attacked Mazarin's foreign policy and, except for a stay in Holland (1665-70), spent the rest of his life in England. Esteemed at the English court and in the Duchesse of Mazarin's Chelsea circle, he was buried in Westminster Abbey. He was the supreme example of the 'reasonable libertine', an acute literary critic, a philosopher of history foreshadowing Montesquieu*, and the possessor before Voltaire* of the dry, resilient prose-style of some of France's greatest writers.

La Comédie des Académistes (wr. 1643; pub. 1650); Réflexions sur les divers génies du peuple romain (1663); De la tragédie ancienne et moderne (1672); Sur les poèmes des anciens (1685).—Œuvres mêlées (ed. P. Des Maizeaux, with life, 2 vols, London, 1705); Œuvres en prose (ed. R. Ternois, 1965- ); Choix d'œuvres (ed. R. de Planhol, 3 vols, 1927).—Correspondance (with Ninon de Lenclos; 1752).

W. Melville Daniels, S.-E. en Angleterre (1907); M. Wilmette, S.-E. critique littéraire (1921); G. Cohen, Le séjour de S.-E. en Hollande (1926); A. M. Schmidt, S.-E. ou l'humaniste impur (1932).
G.B.

Saint-Exupéry, ANTOINE DE (*Lyon 29 VI 1900; †31 VII 1944), French writer. The material of Saint-Exupéry's work is taken directly from his experiences as an aviator—first on commercial lines between France and North Africa and in South America, then as a military pilot in 1940. He went to America after the fall of France, returned to fly with the Allied Air Forces and disappeared during a reconnaissance over the Mediterranean. He was essentially a singer of the skies, the mountains and the desert, and embodied a new humanism founded on action, combined with meditation on the true values of civilization.

Courrier-Sud (1928; Southern Mail, tr. S. Gilbert, 1933); Vol de nuit (1931; Eng. tr. idem, 1932); Terre des hommes (1939; Wind, Sand and Stars, tr. L. Galantière, 1939); Pilote de guerre (New York, 1942; Night Flight to Arras, tr. idem, 1942); Lettre à un otage (ibid., 1942; Eng. tr. J. Gerst, 1950); Le petit prince (ibid., 1943; Eng. tr. K. Woods, 1944); Citadelle (1948).

Special no. of Confluences (1947); L. Werth, La vie de S.-E. (1948); L. Estang, S.-E. par lui-même (1956); P. Chevrier, A. de S.-E. (1959); M. Migeo, S.-E. (1959); S.-E. (Génies et Réalités, 1964); C. Cate, A. de S.-E.: His Life and Times (1971).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Saint-Gelais, MELLIN DE (*Angoulême 1491; †Paris 1558), French poet, the son or nephew of Octovien de Saint-Gelais*. He was the court poet of François I and, with Marot*, first introduced Italian modes and verse-forms into France. He translated Trissino's* tragedy, Sofonisba (acted 1554). His light, slender poetry was overrun by Ronsard's* school.

Œuvres poétiques (1574).—Œuvres (ed. P. Blanchemain, 3 vols, 1880).

H. J. Molinier, M. de Saint-Gelais (1910); P. A. Becker, M. de S.-G. (Vienna, 1924).

G.B.

Saint-Gelais, OCTOVIE DE (*1468; †1502), French poet. After study in Paris he enjoyed a worldly life before becoming Bishop of Angoulême (1494). He translated the Heroides and the whole of the Aeneid into French verse. His best work, prose and verse, is Le Séjour d'honneur in which rhetorical allegory mingles with personal memories and graceful regrets over his lost youth.

H. J. Molinier, Essai biographique et littéraire sur O. de S.-G. (1910).
M.Y.

Saint-John Perse, pseud. of ALEXIS LÉGER (*La Guadeloupe 31 III 1887), French poet. Alexis Léger was trained as a diplomat, and played a not unimportant part between 1933 and 1940 as Secretary-General at the Quai d'Orsay. After 1945 he lived in the United States, working in the Library of Congress at Washington. Meanwhile he has quietly pursued a second career, that of a poet, at first under his own name (Les Éloges, 1904-08), but later under that of Saint-John Perse. He has been influenced by both Symbolism and Surrealism, but never to the extent of drowning his own highly personal note which is passionately lyrical. He accumulated, after 1924, a small band of faithful admirers, and, with Exil (a ringing call to a change of heart), in 1945 reached a wider public. Nobel prize for literature 1960.

Anabase (1926; with Eng. tr. T. S. Eliot, 1930); Exil (1945); Vents (1946); Œuvre poétique (2 vols, 1953-60); Amers (1957); Chronique (1960); Pour Dante (1965).

M. Sallet, S.-J. P. (1953); A. Bosquet, S.-J. P. (1953); R. Caillois, Poétique de S.-J. P. (1954); J. Charpier, S.-J. P. (1962).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Saint-Lambert, JEAN-FRANÇOIS DE (*Nancy 26 XII 1716; †Paris 9 II 1803), French poet. A soldier and courtier, he is fortuitously remarkable for having inspired the affection of both Mme du Châtelet, Voltaire's* friend, and Mme d'Houdetot, the 'Julie' of Rousseau's* Nouvelle Héloïse. His long pastoral poem, Les Saisons (1769), freely modelled on James Thomson's* Seasons (1730), combines a measure of 18th-century sensibility with somewhat conventional descriptions of country scenes.

Poésies fugitives (1759); Contes (1769-70); Mémoires sur la vie de Bolingbroke (1796); poems in Anthologie poétique français du 18e siècle (ed. M. Allem, 1919, 1966).

E. Faguet, Histoire de la poésie française, VIII, IX (1935); M. Cameron, L'influence des 'Saisons' de Thomson sur la poésie descriptive en France (1943). G.B.

Saint-Pol-Roux, pseud. of PAUL ROUX (*Saint-Henry 15 I 1861; †Brest 18 X 1940), French poet. Saint-Pol-Roux, known as 'the magnificent', was a somewhat eccentric figure round about the year 1900. From the places in which he lived, notably the Ardennes and Camaret in Brittany, he amassed an astonishing mythology which combined the charm of the Middle Ages and the audacities of the Symbolist school. At 79, he was beaten to death in Brest by the Germans. His work is remarkable for its great verbal eloquence and for the richness of its imagery.

Les reposoirs de la procession (3 eds 1893-1907); La dame à la faux (1899); La rose et les épines du chemin (1901); Anciennetés (1903, rev. ed. 1946); Les féeries intérieures (1907); Louise (1900; libretto for opera by G. Charpentier).

P. T. Pelleau, S.-P.-R. le crucifié (1946); T. Briant, S.-P.-R. (1952). M.G.; J.P.R.

Saint-Simon, CLAUDE-HENRI DE ROUVROY, COMTE DE (*Paris 17 X 1760; †ibid. 19 V 1825), French philosopher. Saint-Simon was the great-nephew of the author of the famous Mémoires. He served as an officer (1777), took part in the American War of Independence, devoted himself to the study of politics, left the army, supported the French Revolution, and set himself to the task of building up an ambitious social philosophy. This, under the name of Saint-Simonism, gave birth to what might almost be called a religion. His system took its stand on the priority which should be accorded to 'production'—and to producers, whether manual or intellectual—over 'capital'. Saint-Simon's socialism influenced a considerable number of Romantic writers.

Mémoire sur la science de l'homme (1813); L'industrie, ou discussions politiques, morales et philosophiques... (1817); L'organisateur (1819); Le système industriel (1821); Le catéchisme des industriels (1824).—Œuvres de Saint-Simon et d'Enfantin (ed. Dentri, 46 vols, 1863-78).

S. Charléty, Histoire du Saint-Simonisme (1896; 1931; 1965); C. Bouglé, L'œuvre de S.-S. (1925); H. Gouhier, S.-S. jusqu'à la Restauration (1936); M. Dommanget, H. de S.-S. (1953); G. Gurvitch, Les fondateurs français de la sociologie (1955); D. G. Charlton, Secular Religions in France (1963). M.G.; J.P.R.

Saint-Simon, LOUIS DE ROUVROY, DUC DE (*Paris 15 I 1675; ∞1695 Marie-Gabrielle de Durfort; †ibid. 2 III 1755), French memoir-writer. Saint-

Simon's career may be summed up as ambition deservedly unrewarded. He inherited from his father a great name and influential posts, served with distinction as a soldier (1691-1702) and resigned with the rank of Maître de camp because promotion came too slowly. A haughty, critical and intriguing courtier, he was passed over by Louis XIV and joined the cabal which formed round the Duc de Bourgogne, heir-apparent to the throne. After Bourgogne's premature death, his friendship with the Duke of Orleans brought him membership of the council of regency during Louis XV's minority, a short appointment as ambassador in Madrid (1721), then nothing more. He vented his frustration in his Mémoires, which cover the period 1691-1723, part of which he had hardly known personally. He had begun towards 1730 to annotate the Journal of Dangeau (covering 1684-1720) but, finding it of 'an emetic flatness', expanded it into his own splendidly coloured version of the events, gossip and personalities of the French court. Unreliable as an historian, he is unrivalled as a writer of impressionist prose who creates rather than resurrects his subject. Banned or clandestine during the 18th century, his memoirs were first openly published in 1829-30.

Mémoires (ed. A. de Boislisle and L. Lecestre, 43 vols, 1873-1931; ed. G. Truc, 1947 ff.); Plus belles pages (ed. E. Barthélemy, 1908); Historical Memoirs of the Duc de S.-S. A Shortened Version (tr. L. Norton et al., 3 vols, 1967-72).

G. Boissier, S.-S. (1892); A. Le Breton, La comédie humaine de S.-S. (1914). G.B.

Saki, pseud. of HECTOR HUGH MUNRO (*Akyab, Burma 18 XII 1870; †in action, Beaumont Hamel 14 XI 1916), English author, of Highland stock. He early distinguished himself as a political satirist and sketch-writer in The Westminster Gazette. He collaborated with F. C. Gould the cartoonist in the gentle extravagances of The Westminster Alice. His unique vein of fantasy and wit found best expression in his short stories.

SHORT STORIES: Not So Stories (1902); Reginald (1904); Reginald in Russia (1910); The Chronicles of Clovis (1911); Beasts and Super-Beasts (1914).—The Bodley Head Saki (1963).—The Unbearable Bassington (novel; 1912).—The Rise of the Russian Empire (history; 1900).

E. M. Munro, biog. in The Square Egg (1924). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Sakulin, PAVEL NIKITICH (*Samara province 1868; †1926), Russian literary historian and critic of the Marxian school. He was particularly anxious to give a sociological explanation of literary styles and genres.

Iz istorii russkogo idealizma (1913); Pushkin i Radishchev (1920); Russkaya literatura (1926; Die russische Literatur, 1927). J.L.

Sala, GEORGE AUGUSTUS HENRY (*London 24 XI 1828; ∞1859 Harriet Sala, ∞1891 Bessie Stannard; †Brighton 8 XII 1895), English novelist and journalist, who contributed to Dickens* periodicals and the Daily Telegraph.

A Journey due North (1858); Strange Adventures of Captain Dangerous (3 vols, 1863); Quite Alone (3 vols, 1864); Trip to Barbary (1866); Life and Adventures of G. A. S. written by himself (2 vols, 1895).

R. Straus, S.: The Portrait of an Eminent Victorian (1942). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Salacrou, ARMAND (*Rouen 9 VIII 1899), French dramatist. Salacrou's plays, though theatrically effective, defy definition. Their themes are as varied as their style and composition, mingling farce and tragedy, realism and fantasy, poetry and music-hall back-chat. There is surrealism in Tour à terre (1925), social satire in L'inconnue d'Arras (1935) and L'Archipel Lenoir (1948) and stark documentary in Les nuits de la colère (1946).

Le casseur d'assiettes (1924); Le pont de l'Europe (1927); Atlas Hôtel (1931); Une femme libre (1934); Un homme comme les autres (1936); La terre est ronde (1938); Histoire de rire (1940); Les fiancés du Havre (1944); Dieu le savait (1951); Les invités du bon Dieu (1953); Le miroir (1955); Une femme trop honnête (1955); Boulevard Durand (1960); Comme les chardons (1964); La rue noire (1967).—Théâtre (8 vols, 1943–).—ESSAYS: Les idées de la nuit (1960); Impromptu délibéré. Entretiens avec P. L. Mignon (1955).

G. Pillement, Anthologie du théâtre français contemporain, I (1945); J. Van des Fesch, A. S. (1947); S. Radine, Anouilh, Lenormand, S. (1951); P. H. Simon, Théâtre et destin: l'athéisme anxieux d'A. S. (1959); P. L. Mignon, A. S. (1961); A. Ubersfeld, A. S. (1970). T.W. (M.G.)

Salas Barbadillo, ALONSO JERÓNIMO DE (*Madrid 1581; †ibid. 1635), Spanish novelist and dramatist. He had a turbulent youth and suffered from poverty in later years. His novels, influenced by Cervantes* Novelas ejemplares and the Celestina*, are lively in style but coarse in feeling. His works provided dramatic material for John Fletcher and Scarron*. He also wrote some interludes.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXIII; Dos novelas (El cortesano descortés, El necio bien afortunado); ed. F. R. de Uhagón, 1894; La hija de la Celestina (ed. J. López Barbadillo, 2 vols, 1907); Obras (ed. E. Cotarelo y Mori, 2 vols, 1907–09); La peregrinación sabia y El sagaz Estacio (ed. F. A. de Icaza, 1924); La casa del placer honesto (ed. E. B. Place, Boulder, Col., 1927); El caballero perfecto (ed. P. Marshall, ibid., 1949).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Salat, HANS (*Sursee 1498; †1552 or after),

Swiss historian, poet and pamphleteer. Salat wrote violent satires against Zwingli* (Triumphus Herculis Helvetici, 1532), the Roman Catholic Reformation plays Judith (1534) and Der verlorene Sohn (1537), and a well-written, though inaccurate, Reformationschronik (1536). Bullinger* satirized him in Salz zum Salat (1532).

Bruder Klaus (1537; Volksbuch ed. J. Baechtold, 1876); Der verlorene Sohn (adapt. for modern stage by Cäsar von Arx, 1935).

J. Baechtold, H. S. (life and some texts; 1876); P. Cuoni, H. S. und sein Werk (diss. Zürich, 1938). D.G.D.

Salazar, AMBROSIO DE (*Murcia ?1575), Spanish grammarian and miscellany-writer. He went to France where he became tutor to the Dauphin (later Louis XIII). He wrote dialogues on Spanish grammar, collections of anecdotes, etc. His work partly derives from Santa* Cruz and Mexía*.

Espejo general de gramática (Rouen, 1614); Las clavellinas de recreación (Paris, 1614); Libro de flores diversas (ibid., 1619); Thesoro de diversa lición (ibid., 1637).

A. Morel-Fatio, A. de S. et l'étude de l'espagnol en France sous Louis XIII (1901).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Salazar, DIEGO DE (fl. mid-16th century), Spanish translator. He was a captain who became a hermit. He was a partner in the translation of Sannazaro's* Arcadia (1549) and Boccaccio's* Filocolo (1546). He also translated Appian* and imitated Machiavelli's* Art of War (Tratado de re militari, 1536). E.M.W.

Salazar y Torres, AGUSTÍN DE (*Almazán, Soria 28 VIII 1642; †Madrid 29 XI 1675), Spanish poet and dramatist. He was a minor poet of some ingenuity who was much influenced by Góngora* and Quevedo*.

Cythara de Apolo (1681; in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLII, XLIX).

J. Ares Montes, 'Del otoño del gongorismo: don A. de S. y T.' in Revista de Filol. Esp., XLIV (1961). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Šalda, FRANTIŠEK XAVER (*Liberec 22 XII 1867; †Prague 4 IV 1937), Czech critic, poet and novelist. Šalda's writings revolutionized Czech literary criticism. He taught his nation to view its literature against the background of European trends and worked indefatigably for the acceptance of higher, more objective critical standards. His most influential book was 'Spirit and Work' (Duše a dílo, 1913), a collection of studies dealing with Czech and European representatives of Romanticism (in the widest sense of the term).

Dílo (coll. works; 12 vols, 1934–41; new ed. 1947 ff.).

O. Fischer, Šaldovo češství (1936); F. Götz, F. X. Š. (1937); F. Vodička et al., F. X. Š. 1867, 1937, 1967 (1968). R.A.

Salesbury, WILLIAM (*Llansannan, Denbighshire c. 1520; ∞ Catrin Llwyd; †?c. 1595), Welsh scholar. He studied in Oxford and London and was a man of wide learning. The 1567 translation of the New Testament into Welsh was for the most part his work, but the pedantic orthography he adopted has robbed him of much of the credit this achievement deserves. His hand is also to be discerned in the Welsh Book of Common Prayer (1567), ascribed to Bishop Richard Davies. Among his other works are an earlier translation of the Epistles and Gospels appointed to be read in churches and a Welsh-English dictionary.

Oll Synnwyr pen Kembero ygyd (?1547; ed. J. G. Evans, 1902); A Dictionary in Englyshe and Welshe (1547); The baterie of the Popes Botereulx (1550); Kynniver llith a ban or yscrythur lan ac a ddarlleir yr Eccleis (1551; ed. J. Fisher, 1931); Lliver Gwedd Gyffredin . . . (1567; ed. M. Richards and G. Williams, 1965); Testament Newydd . . . (1567); Dethollion o Destament Newydd 1567, ed. T. Parry 1967).

T. C. Edwards, 'W. S.'s translation of the New Testament . . . ' in Trans. Liverpool Welsh Nat. Soc. (1885-86); D. R. Thomas, The Life and Times of Bishop Davies and W. S. (1902); E. L. Evans, 'W. S.' in Y Llenor, XII (1933); W. A. Mathias, 'Gweithiau W. S.' in Jour. Welsh Biblio. Soc., VII (1952) and chs 2 and 3 in Y Traddodiad Rhyddiaith (ed. G. Bowen, 1970); Isaac Thomas, W. S. and His Testament (1967). B.Re.

Salas de Tournemir, COUNT EVGENY ANDREYEVICH (*1840; †1908), Russian author of historical novels which from the 1870s onwards were greatly relished by the general reader. His most successful novel was Pugachevtsy (1874).

Sobranie sochineniy (27 vols, 1894-1901).—Kiriak; or the Hut on Hen's Legs (tr. S. Edwards, 1896). J.L.

Salimbene of Parma (*Parma c. 1221; †c. 1288); OGNIBENE DE ADAMO, before he entered the Order of St Francis. His Chronicle (from 1168 to 1287) is a lively record of his own life as well as of the history of his time. He draws an unfavourable picture of Frederick* II but recognizes his genius. The Chronicle is an invaluable source for contemporary Franciscan history.

Chronica (eds: O. Holder-Egger in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Scriptores, XXXII, 1905-13; F. Bernini in Scrittori d'Italia, 1942).

N. Scivoletto, Fra S. da P. (1950); G. G. Coulton, From St Francis to Dante (1907).

F.J.E.R.

Salinas, PEDRO (*Madrid 27 XI 1891; †Boston 4 XII 1951), Spanish poet and critic. He was lecturer at the Sorbonne (1914-17) and at Cambridge (1922-23). After having been Professor at Murcia and Seville, he went to America in 1936 where he taught at Wellesley College and at Johns Hopkins University.

His first book of poems appeared in 1923. He wrote delicate, conversational love poems, from which all rhetoric was absent. The beloved endows everyday things with new meaning. He edited some poems of Meléndez* Valdés, translated the Poema de Mio Cid (CID) into modern verse, wrote a general work on Spanish poetry and two excellent more detailed studies of Jorge Manrique* (1947) and Darío* (1948; 2nd ed. 1957).

Poesías completas (ed. J. Marichal, 1956).—Poema del Cid (1925); Poesía junta (incl. all earlier poem: Buenos Aires, 1942); El contemporáneo (México: 1947); Todo más claro (Buenos Aires, 1949).—CRITICISM: Reality and the Poet in Spanish Poetry (Baltimore, 1940; 2nd ed. 1967); Literatura española siglo XX (1941; 2nd ed. 1949); Jorge Manrique o tradición y originalidad (Buenos Aires, 1947); La poesía de Rubén Darío (ibid., 1948).—Trs in E. Turnbull, Contemporary Spanish Poetry (Baltimore, 1945).

P. Darmangeat, P. S. et 'La voz a ti debida' (1955); E. Dehennin, Passion d'absolu et tension expressive dans l'œuvre de P. S. (1957); C. Feal Deibe, La poesía de P. S. (1965); J. Palley, La luz no usada. La poesía de P. S. (1966); A. de Zubizarreta, P. S.: El diálogo creador (1969).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Salinger, JEROME DAVID (*New York 1919; ∞1953 Claire Douglas), American novelist. The Catcher in the Rye (1951) is remarkable for its insight into the mind of its adolescent hero, Holden Caulfield, a modern Huck Finn. The wit, toughness and sensitivity of the novel are typical of Salinger's work at its best. His characters seek the presence of grace in life even when they know the quest is an impossible one. The later stories of the Glass family show odd touches of Salinger's old insight and humour, but lapse into a self-indulgent coyness emphasized by the static nature of the narrative.

For Esme—With Love and Squalor, and Other Stories (1953); Franny and Zooey (1961); Raise High the Roofbeam, Carpenters and Seymour: An Introduction (1963); Hapworth 16, 1924 (1965).

F. L. Gwynn and J. L. Blotner, The Fiction of J. D. S. (1958); J. D. S. and the Critics (ed. W. F. Belcher and J. W. Lee, 1962); S.: A Critical and Personal Portrait (ed. H. A. Grunwald, 1962); Warren French, J. D. S. (1963); Studies in J. D. S. (ed. M. Laser and N. Fruman, 1963); If You Really Want to Know: A Catcher Casebook (ed. M. M. Marsden, 1963); J. E. Miller, Jr., J. D. S. (1965). G.A.K.

Salis-Seewis, JOHANN GAUDENZ, FREIHERR VON (*Bothmar, Switzerland 16 XII 1762; †ibid. 29 I 1834), Swiss poet. An officer in the Swiss royal guard at Versailles, Salis resigned at the outbreak of the French Revolution. He occupied high administrative posts in Switzerland until his retirement in 1817. His friend Matthiesson* published his poems, mostly delicate elegies reflecting a sensitive mind in harmony with nature.

Gedichte (1793; ed. E. Corrodi, 1937).

A. Frey, 'J. G. von S.-S.' in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XLI (1889); E. Jenal, J. G. von S.-S. (1924); A. E. Cherbuliez, Der Dichter J. G. von S.-S. (1935). H.B.G.

Salkey, (FELIX) ANDREW (ALEXANDER) (*Colón, Panama 30 I 1928; ∞1957 Patricia Verden), West Indian novelist and literary critic. His fiction is characterized by a fine dramatic sense and a spare style that have recently turned him into a successful writer of children's novels such as Earthquake (1965) and Riot (1967). His major novels, however, seem to require more substantial content in order to create stress within this spareness of style. His consciousness of the disabling social and political enigmas in West Indian society, even when he sets a novel in England, imparts interest and urgency to his work.

A Quality of Violence (1959); Escape to an Autumn Pavement (1960); Hurricane (1964); The Late Emancipation of Jerry Stover (1968); The Adventures of Catullus Kelly (1969); Havana Journal (1971).

W. I. Carr, 'A complex fate' in The Islands In-Between (ed. Louis James, 1968). A.D.Dr.

Sallust (GAIVS SALLUSTIVS CRISPVS) (*86; †c. 34 B.C.), Roman historian. Of plebeian birth, Sallust became quaestor in 59 and tribune of the plebs in 52. In 50 he was expelled from the Senate for immorality but was restored to the quaestorship by Caesar* in 49. He served under Caesar in the civil war and became proconsul of Numidia. Sallust retired into private life with a huge fortune, which he spent partly in laying out the famous Horti Sallustiani. His extant works are the Conspiracy of Catiline and the War Against Jugurtha. Sallust is careless in chronology and in narrative of events but as a stylist he has enjoyed great fame. His style is archaizing, compressed and epigrammatic, the characters are vividly delineated, and the speeches are marked by a high degree of artistry. He has been accused of writing his historical works as propaganda for the popular party, but this view is unjust. A vile and scurrilous attack upon Cicero* passing under the name of Sallust is of doubtful authenticity; and of a larger historical work (Historiarum libri V) only fragments remain.

Ed. A. Kurfess (1968); Appendix Sallustiana

(ed. idem, 2 pts, 1962).—Eds with comm.; Catiline and Jugurtha (W. W. Capes, 2nd ed. 1889); Catiline (A. M. Cook, 1884; W. C. Summers, 1900); Jugurtha (W. C. Summers, 1902).—Fr. tr. A. Ernout (1941); tr. J. C. Rolfe (1920); S.: The Jugurthine War and The Conspiracy of Catiline (tr. S. A. Handford, 1963).

K. Büchner, S. (1960); R. Syme, S. (Sather lectures, XXXIII; 1964); D. C. Earl, The Political Thought of S. (1966); Latin Historians (ed. T. A. Dorey, 1966). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Salmon, ANDRÉ (*Paris 4 X 1881; †ibid. 12 III 1969), French poet. Salmon came of a family of artists, travelled widely, and earned his livelihood as a journalist. His first long poem, Prikaz (1921), is what might be called a 'surrealist reportage' of the Russian Revolution, which he saw at first hand. His later work uses such different modern settings as Montmartre, the cinema and the war. He has a remarkable power of evoking dream-like scenes in a dry, precise, language.

Poèmes (1905); Féeries (1907); Le calumet (1920); Le manuscrit trouvé dans un chapeau (1924); L'entrepreneur d'illuminations (1921); L'âge de l'humanité (1922); Peindre (1922); Vénus dans la balance (1926); Max Jacob (1928); Tendres canailles (6th ed. 1921; with sequel Monstres choisis, new ed. 1938); Odeur de poésie (1944); L'air de la butte (1945); Les étoiles dans l'encrier (1952); Souvenirs sans fin (1956–57).

P. Berger, S. (1955).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Salmon, JEAN, called MACRIN (*Loudun 1490; ∞1528 Guilloinne Boursault; †ibid. 1557), French neo-Latin poet. A protégé of Jean and Guillaume Du* Bellay and a valet-de-chambre of François I, he was known to contemporaries as the 'French Horace', a poet whose indolent epicureanism he found attractive and from whom he made extensive borrowings. His poems to Gelonis (i.e. his wife Guilloinne) enjoyed some fame.

Carmina (1530); Hymnorum libri VI (1537); Odorum libri III (1546); Naeniarum libri III de Gelonide Borsola uxore (1550).

J. Boulmier, 'S. M., l'Horace français' in Bull. du Bibliophile (1870–71); P. van Tieghem, Littérature latine de la Renaissance (1944). F.W.

Saltonstall, WYE (*London; fl. 1630–40), English translator, poet and character-writer, educated at Queen's College, Oxford. He returned to Oxford (1625) and tutored in French and Latin, in reduced circumstances. His verse and prose show talent and his satire has bite.

Picturae Loquentes. Or Pictures Drawn forth in Character (1631; with adds, 1635; ed. C. H. Wilkinson, 1946).

B. Boyce, The Theophrastan Character in England to 1642 (1947; repr. 1967).

B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Saltus, EDGAR EVERTON (*New York 8 X 1855; ∞1883 Helen Read [o/o], ∞1894 Elsie Smith [o/o], ∞1911 Marie Giles; †Tarrytown, N.Y. 31 VII 1921), American novelist. He wrote studies on Balzac* and Schopenhauer*, sensational novels of murder and adultery, sweeping historical chronicles. His mannered style shows affinities with the Decadents of the 1890s.

Balzac (1884); The Philosophy of Disenchantment (1885); The Anatomy of Negation (1886); Imperial Purple (1892); The Poms of Satan (1904); The Perfume of Eros (1905); Oscar Wilde: An Idler's Impression (1917); Parnassians Personally Encountered (1923).

M. Saltus, E. S., the Man (1925); C. Sprague, E. S. (1968). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Saltykov-Shchedrin, MIKHAIL EVGRAFOVICH (*Tver province 15 I 1826; †28 IV 1892), Russian satirical author belonging to the great realistic era. He made his début in 1847, but he reached the height of his creative power in the 1870s and early 1880s, while editing the radical monthly Otechestvennye Zapiski ('The Fatherland's Annals'). The bulk of his satirical work is much too topical to be far removed from scathing journalism. His amusing Istoriya odnogo goroda ('History of a Town'; 1870) and his diatribes against the bureaucrats, landowners and the new grabbing 'gentlemen of Tashkent' require a knowledge of the period to be fully enjoyed, as do, to some extent, his political Basni ('Fables'; 1880-85). His undisputed masterpiece is however his powerful novel, Gospoda Golovlëvy (1876), the chronicle of a dehumanized gentry family declining after the reform of 1861. Iudushka the hypocrite, its principal character, has become a nickname in Russia. It is mainly this work that has preserved Saltykov's name in Russian and also in world literature.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1891-93; other eds 1905, 1933; 20 vols, 1933-41); Pis'ma (1925); Izbrannye sochineniya (1946).—Tchinovniks (tr. F. Aston, 1861); The Golovlev Family (tr. A. Ridgway, 1916), A Family of Noblemen (tr. A. Yarmolinsky, 1916), The Golovlyov Family (tr. N. Duddington, 1931-34); Fables (tr. V. Volkhovsky, 1931).

A. N. Pypin, M. E. S. (1899); Y. E. Elsberg, Mirovozzrenie i tvorchestvo Shchedrina (1936); N. Strelsky, Saltykov and the Russian Squire (1940); V. Kirpotin, S.-S. (1948); Ya. Elsberg, S.-S. (1953); K. Sanine, Saltykov-Chtchédrine (Paris, 1955); V. N. Baskakov, Bibliografiya literatury o Saltyskove-Shchedrine (1966). J.L.

Salutati, LINO COLUCCIO (*Stignano, Valdinievole 16 II 1331; †Florence 4 V 1406), Italian humanist; notary; chancellor of the Florentine Signoria (1375-1406). A disciple of Petrarch*, Salutati composed Latin verse, political and moral treatises and an Epistolario. He introduced eloquentia into chancellery correspondence, brought to light old MSS, examined them philologically, and encouraged in Florence the study of Greek.

Epistolario (ed. F. Novati, 4 vols, 1891-1911); De tyranno (ed. A. von Martin, Berlin, 1913; Eng. tr. E. Emerton, 1925); De nobilitate legum et medicinae and De verecundia (ed. E. Garin, 1947); De laboribus Herculis (1951) and De seculo et religione (1957; both ed. B. L. Ullman).

B. L. Ullman, The Humanism of C. S. (1963). M.W.

Saluzzo, DIODATA (*Turin 31 VII 1775; †ibid. 24 I 1840), Italian poet, admired by both classical and Romantic schools. She wrote some long works—an epic, Amazzoni (1795), two tragedies, a romance in verse and Novelle—but her lyrics are her best work.

Verst (1816-17); Poesie postume (1852); Novelle (1830).

B. Croce in Critica, XXV (1927); W. Binni, Preromanticismo italiano (1959).

N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Salvat-Papasseit, JOAN (*Barcelona 1894; †ibid. 1924), Catalan poet. A working-class and self-taught orphan, he was brought up on the fin-de-siècle pseudo-anarchist literature, whose influence is reflected in the aggressive and subversive approach of his early and more or less avant-gardist books. But, a sick man all his life, he turned gradually towards a realistic and optimistic poetry, concerned with everyday life and its small joys and sorrows. He also wrote some original, sensual and uninhibited erotic poems.

Poesies (intro. Joan Fuster, 1962). J.L.M.

Salvianus (*?Trier c. 400; †Marseilles c. 480), Christian writer. His principal work, De gubernatione Dei, attacks contemporary worldliness, particularly among the clergy, and gives valuable information on 5th-century Gaul. J.A.W.

Eds: Migne, Patrologia Latina, LIII (1865); C. Halm in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Auctores antiquissimi, I (1877); F. Pauly in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., VIII (1883).—De gubernatione Dei (tr. E. M. Sanford, 1930).

G. Sternberg, Das Christentum des 5. Jahrh. im Spiegel . . . des S. (1909); C. Brakman, 'Observationes grammaticae et criticae in Salvianum' in Mnemosyne (1924). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Samaniego, FÉLIX MARÍA (*Laguardia, Álava 12 X 1745; †ibid. 11 VIII 1801), Spanish fabulist of noble family, much influenced by French encyclopaedism. He wasted his remarkable wit in the useless polemics of the period. His Fábulas morales (1781) are still widely read. Aesop*, Phaedrus*, Juan Ruiz*, La* Fontaine and Gay* are the models he copied or translated with notable ability.

Poesías in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXI; Obras inéditas o poco conocidas (ed. E. Fernández de Navarrete, Vitoria, 1866).

Julián de Apráiz, 'El centenario de S.' in Ilustración Esp. y Amer. (1901).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

AL-Samau'al, 6th-century pre-Islamic Arabic poet of Jewish religion. According to a famous story, the fugitive Imru' al-Qais left in al-Samau'al's charge his coat of mail, which al-Samau'al refused to deliver to the enemies of Imru' al-Qais, even when they killed his son. Hence the proverb: 'More loyal than al-Samau'al'. S.M.S.

Samba: see Shikitei SAMBA.

Samuel ha-Nagid, otherwise SAMUEL BEN JOSEPH IBN NAGDELA or NAGRELA (*Cordova 993; †Granada 1055), Spanish-Hebrew poet. A businessman, he possessed a remarkable Arabic style and in 1027 became Vizier to King Habus of Granada. He encouraged, taught and financially supported many poets, and is responsible for the standards of linguistic purity which mark the poetry of the 'Golden Age'. His own poems are notable for elegance rather than poetic beauty or depth; they largely follow Arab models. His special genre was didactic poetry. He also wrote an introduction to the TALMUD (Mevo' ha-Talmud, 1st ed. Constantinople, 1510; Clavis Talmudica, tr. C. l'Empereur, 1633); and works on grammar.

Dwan (ed. D. S. Sassoon, 1934); Kol Shirei Shemuel ha-N. (ed. A. M. Haberman and M. Abramson, 2 vols, 1947).

J. M. Millás Vallicrosa, La poesía sagrada hebraicoespañola (1940). C.R.

Sanā'ī, MAJDŪD, ABU'L-MAJD (*Ghazna; †ibid. ?1150), Persian poet. At first a panegyrist of the Ghaznavid house, he suddenly abandoned court life for asceticism. His Ḥadiqa is a mystical poem on religion and ethics. His Divān contains odes, short lyrics and other genres.

Ḥadiqat al-Ḥaqīqa (Lucknow, 1878; 1st book tr. and intro. J. Stephenson, Calcutta, 1911); Sair al-'Ibād ilā'l-Ma'ād (Tehran, 1937); Divān (ibid., 1941).

J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Sánchez, FLORENCIO (*Montevideo 1875; †23 II 1910), Uruguayan playwright. Chief dramatist of the River Plate region (he worked mainly in Buenos Aires), he left a repertory of some two dozen plays, dealing with local problems, of the realist-thesis type of Ibsen*. His main theme is the conflict between the traditional and the modern.

La gringa (school ed. J. T. Lister and R.

Richardson, New York, 1927); Teatro completo (intro. V. Martínez Cuitino, 1951).—Representative Plays (tr. W. K. Jones, 1961).

Ruth Richardson, F. S. and the Argentine Theatre (1933); D. Corti, F. S. (with biblio.; 1937). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Sánchez, MIGUEL (*?Valladolid; †after 1615), Spanish poet and dramatist. Only two poems by him have survived, a fine religious ode and a ballad, which is quoted in Don Quixote, II, xxvi. Two plays by him are also extant. Lope de Vega* praised him as a predecessor; his contemporaries called him 'el divino'.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., X, XLIII, XXXV; La isla bárbara and La guarda cuidadosa (ed. H. A. Rennert, Boston, 1896). E.M.W.

Sánchez, TOMÁS ANTONIO (*Ruisenada, Santander 1723; †Madrid 1802), Spanish scholar and poet. Sánchez was the first to publish editions of the Cantar de Mio Cid (1779), the poetry of Berceo* (1780), the Libro de Alexandre (1782) and the work of the Arcipreste de Hita (Ruiz*; 1790).

Colección de poesías castellanas anteriores al siglo XV (4 vols, 1779–90). J.E.V.

Sánchez Calavera (or wrongly Talavera), FERRÁN (fl. early 15th century), Spanish court poet who wrote on various themes. A converted Jew, he argued poetically with López* de Ayala about predestination and took a pessimistic and critical view of religious and social questions. His most famous poem, on the death of Ruy Díaz de Mendoza, probably influenced Jorge Manrique's* Coplas. (See also Baena*.) E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Sánchez de Badajoz, DIEGO (†?Talavera ?1549), Spanish dramatist. He was priest at Talavera near Badajoz from 1533 to 1549. His 28 plays consist of a strange mixture of traditional religious allegory, anti-clerical satire and coarse buffoonery. They were published by his nephew in 1554.

Recopilación en metro (facs. 1929; ed. F. Weber de Kurlat et al., Buenos Aires, 1968).

J. López Prudencio, D. S. de B. (1915); B. W. Wardropper, Introducción al teatro religioso del siglo de oro (1953). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Sánchez de Badajoz, GARCÍ (*Écija c. 1480; ∞María de Orellana; †after 1534), Spanish poet. He is said to have died mad through an unfortunate love affair. His poems, chiefly lovers' complaints feelingly expressed, were much appreciated by later poets including Herrera* and Lope de Vega*. E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

P. Gallagher, The Life and Works of G. S. de B. (London, 1968); N. G. Round, 'G. S. de B. and the revaluation of cancionero poetry' in Forum for Mod. Lang. Stud., VI (1970). A.D.D.

Sánchez de las Brozas, FRANCISCO, known as EL BROENSE (*Las Brozas, Cáceres 1523; †Valladolid 1601), Spanish humanist. He was Professor of Greek at Salamanca. His outspoken criticism of the Vulgate caused his arrest by the Inquisition in 1600. He died before the case was completed. He wrote many treatises on classical subjects, edited Virgil's eclogues, Ovid's Ibis and Persius's. He wrote commentaries on Epictetus, Garcilaso and Juan de Mena.

De arte dicendi (1556); Verae Brevesque grammaticae latinae institutiones (Lyons, 1562); Opera poetica, Obras de Garcilaso, Obras de Juan de Mena (Geneva, 1765).

Colección de documentos inéditos para la historia de España, II (1843; cont. the Inquisitorial process); Procesos inquisitoriales contra F. S. de L. B. (ed. A. Tovar and M. de la Pinta Llorente, 1941).—Marqués de Morante, Biografía del M. F. S. (1859); M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, III (1889); A. F. G. Bell, F. S., El Broense (Oxford, 1925). E.M.W.

Sánchez de Vercial, CLEMENTE: see Exenplos, LIBRO DE LOS.

Sánchez Ferlosio, RAFAEL (*Rome 4 XII 1927; †Carmen María Gaité), Spanish novelist whose first work, Industrias y andanzas de Alfahul (1951), is only now beginning to receive the attention it deserves. El Jarama (1956) is his major work, an apparently objective documentary novel which combines realism with a moving use of poetic imagery.

E. C. Riley, 'Sobre el arte de S. F.: aspectos de El Jarama' in Filología, IX (1963). J.E.V.

Sanchuniathon: see FORGERIES, LITERARY.

Sanctis, FRANCESCO DE: see De Sanctis, FRANCESCO.

Sand, GEORGE, pseud. of AMANDINE-AUORE-LUCIE DUPIN (*Nohant 1 VII 1804; †1822 Baron Casimir Dudevant [o/o 1830]; †ibid. 8 VI 1876), French novelist. After her early marriage and divorce, George Sand became notorious for her many stormy love affairs (Sandeau*, who was responsible for her assumed name of Sand, Musset*, with whom she broke after their stay in Venice and who made use of their intrigue in his Nuits, Chopin—and many others). She was a strong feminist and openly contemptuous of middle-class conventions. In old age, 'all passion spent', she became known as the 'kind lady of Nohant', and was on terms of affectionate friendship with Flaubert*. Her many novels are written with a disconcerting facility, and are varied in their inspiration: romantic tales of forbidden passion and social revolt, violently individualistic in tone (Indiana, 1832; Lélia, 1833); novels with sociological and humanitarian themes, strongly influenced by Pierre Leroux (Le compagnon du tour de France, 1840; Consuelo, 1842–43); stories of the countryside (La mare au Diable, 1846); provincial idylls (Le Marquis de Villemer, 1861); and personal narratives (Elle et Lui, 1859). But in whatever she wrote there sounded an unchanging note of optimistic idealism and human sympathy.

NOVELS: Rose et Blanche (1831); Valentine (1832); Jacques (1834); Mauprat (1837); Spiridon (1839); La Comtesse de Rudolstadt (9 vols, 1843–45); Jeanne (8 vols, 1844); Le meunier d'Angibault (3 vols, 1845); La mare au Diable (2 vols, 1846); The Devil's Pool, tr. J. M. and E. Sedgwick, 1895; François le Champi (2 vols, 1846; François the Waif, tr. G. Masson, 1889); Le péché de M. Antoine (1847); La petite Fadette (2 vols, 1849); Les maîtres sonneurs (1852); Les beaux messieurs de Bois Doré (1858); Jean de la Roche (1860); Mlle de la Quintinie (1863); La confession d'une jeune fille (1865); Monsieur Sylvestre (1866); Mlle de Merquem (1868).—PLAYS: François le Champi (1849); Les beaux messieurs de Bois Doré (1862); Le Marquis de Villemer (1864).—VARIOUS: Le secrétaire intime (1834); Lettres d'un voyageur (1834; 1836); Histoire de ma vie (1854; 1855).—Correspondance (6 vols, 1882–84); Lettres à Musset et Sainte-Beuve (1897); Souvenirs et idées (1904); Journal intime (1926).—Œuvres complètes (ed. M. Levy, 105 vols, 1868).

E. Caro, G. S. (1887); R. Downie, G. S. (1909); S. de Lovenjoul, Étude bibliographique (1914); C. Maurras, Les amants de Venise (1915); M. J. Howe, The Intimate Journal of G. S. (1929); M. Louise Pailleron, G. S. (2 vols, 1938–43); M. Toesca, Une autre G. S. (1945); M. L'Hopital, La notion d'artiste chez G. S. (1945); M. Paz, La vie d'un grand homme: G. S. (1947); J. Larnac, G. S. révolutionnaire (1948); A. Blanc, Notre amie G. S. (1950); A. Maurois, Lélia ou la vie de G. S. (1952; Eng. tr. G. Hopkins, 1953); P. Salomon, G. S. (1955); E. Thomas, G. S. (1959). M.G.; J.P.R.

Sandburg, CARL (*Galesburg, Ill. 6 I 1878; †1908 Lillian Steichen; †22 VII 1967), American poet and biographer. The son of a Swedish immigrant, he grew up in a prairie town and roved from one job to the next. His poetry of the sprawling prairies and Mid-West industrial cities is written in loose rhythms, homely diction interspersed with exalted lyrical passages. He collected material for 30 years for his great biography of Lincoln.

VERSE: Chicago Poems (1916); Cornhuskers (1918); Smoke and Steel (1920); Slabs of the Sunburnt West (1922); The People, Yes (1936); Harvest Poems (1960); Wind Song (1960); Honey and Salt (1963).—Selected Poems of C. S. (ed. Rebecca West, 1926).—BIOGRAPHY: Abraham Lincoln: The Prairie Years (1926); Abraham

Lincoln: The War Years (1939).—Always the Young Strangers (1953; autobiog.).

K. W. Detzer, C. S.: A Study in Personality and Background (1941). H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Sandeau, JULES (*Aubusson 19 II 1811; †Paris 24 IV 1883), French novelist and dramatist. Sandeau began his career as a student of law. He developed a close intimacy (1831–33) with Aurore Dudevant, who took from him her pen-name of George Sand*. They wrote in collaboration Rose et Blanche (1831). His own work ranges from the Romanticism of Madame de Sommerville (1834) to the discreet realism of Mademoiselle de la Seiglière (1848), his best book. He collaborated with Émile Augier* in the theatre (Le gendre de Monsieur Poirier, 1854; and other plays).

Les revenants (1836); Mlle de Kérourat (1840); Le Docteur Herbeau (1841); Valcreuse (1846); Sacs et parchemins (1851); La maison du Penarvan (1858); Un début dans la magistrature (1862).

M. Silver, J. S., l'homme et la vie (1937).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Sandel, CORA, pseud. of SARA MARGARETHE FABRICIUS (*Kristiania 20 XII 1880; †1913 Anders Jönsson [o/o 1922]), Norwegian novelist. She spent her teens and early womanhood in Tromsø in north Norway. Later she studied painting, spent many years in Paris, and from 1921 lived mainly in Sweden. Before her début as a novelist at the age of 46 she had contributed articles and sketches to the Norwegian press, but nothing which seemed to presage the immediate success of Alberte og Jacob (1926; Alberte and Jacob, tr. E. Rokkan, 1962). Later she wrote two further novels with the same central character, Alberte og friheten (1931; Alberta and Freedom, tr. idem, 1965) and Bare Alberte (1939; Alberta Alone, tr. idem, 1965), to make the trilogy one of the most important works in Norwegian literature of the inter-war years. Alberte, the artistically gifted heroine of the series, who dreams of becoming a writer, is clearly based on Cora Sandel herself, but both in period (the action takes place some 20 years earlier) and in perspective (often bitter-sweet and ironical) there is distance between the authoress and her subject. Cora Sandel's literary qualities include a lively capacity for creating milieu, an intimate but pregnant style, and a memorable insight into the psychology of the talented, but complex-ridden and unfulfilled woman. The type also recurs in her short stories, and in her novel (one of her best) Kranes konditor (1945; Krane's Café, tr. E. Rokkan, 1968), which also achieved great success in a version dramatized by Helge Krog*.

En blå sofa og andre noveller (1927); Carmen og Maja og andre noveller (1932); Mange takk doktor (1935); Dyr jeg har kjent (1945); Figurer på mørk bunn (1949); Kjøp ikke Dondi (1958; Leech, tr. E. Rokkan, 1960); Vårt vanskelige liv. Noveller i utvalg (ed. O. Solumsmoen, 1960).—Samlede verker (6 vols, 1950–51).

O. Solumsmoen, C. S.—en dikter i ånd og sannhet (1957). R.G.P.

Sandemose, AKSEL (*Nykøbing 19 III 1899; †3rd 1962 Karen Holbek; †Copenhagen 6 VIII 1965), Norwegian novelist, born NIELSEN of a Danish father and a Norwegian mother (a variation of whose name Sandermosen he adopted in 1921). At 15 he ran away to sea and for some years lived a jack-of-all-trades existence. His first novels and short stories, written in Danish, deal with life at sea, with Scandinavian pioneers in Canada, and with the workings of primitive, instinctive minds. In 1929 he settled in Norway and from then on wrote in Norwegian. His novel En sjemann går i land (1931) makes use of a background similar to that of his earlier work, but is much more typical of the later Sandemose in its exploration of love-hate relationships and the psychology of murder. The 'hero' of the novel, Espen Arnakke, who has many features in common with Sandemose himself, reappears in later novels. In En flyktning krysser sitt spor (1933; A Fugitive Crosses His Tracks, tr. E. Gay-Tift, 1936)—one of the most remarkable Norwegian novels of the 1930s—Eспен recounts his childhood in a search for the reasons which led him to commit murder, including a savage attack on the restrictiveness of the small town, called Jante, where he was brought up. In form the novel is a series of explorations, rather than a chronological sequence, in which thought associations, psychology, symbolism, even mysticism all play their part to form a remarkable conglomeration representing the shaping forces of Espen's inner life. Der stod en benk i haven (1937) and Brudulje (1938) deal with other periods of Espen's life. Sandemose's digressive technique is also seen to advantage in Vi pynter oss med horn (1936; Horns for Our Adornment, tr. E. Gay-Tift, 1939), an exploration of primitive minds on board ship, and in Det svundne er en drøm (in Swed., 1944; in Norwegian, 1946). In the latter work different levels of time, place and consciousness are interwoven in a labyrinthine manner in the exploration of an apparent murder mystery in which the novel's first person is somehow involved. In his later novels Sandemose further varied the love-hate and murder themes. Between 1951 and 1955 he published a one-man periodical Årstidene.

Fortællinger fra Labrador (1923); Ungdomssynd (1924); Storme ved Jævnøgn (1924); Mænd fra Atlanten (1924); Klabautermand (1927; rev. 1932); Ross Dane (1928); Sandemose forteller (1937); September (1939); Fortællinger fra andre tider (1940); Tjærehandleren (1945); Alice Atkinson og hennes elskere (1949); En palmegrønn øy (1950); Reisen til Kjørkelvik (1954); Varulven (1958); The Werewolf, tr. G. Lannestock, 1966); Murene rundt Jeriko (1960); Felicias bryllup (1961); Mytteriet på barken Zuidersee (1963); Dans, dans, Roselill (1965).—Verker i utvalg (8 vols, 1965–66).

J. Væth, A. S. og Jante (1966); C.-E. Nordberg, S. En biografi (1967). R.G.P.

Sandgren, GUSTAV (*Västra Stenby 20 VIII 1904), Swedish novelist, poet and dramatist. One of Fem Unga ('Five Young Men') who, influenced by Freud*, D. H. Lawrence* and Walt Whitman*, produced vitalistic, primitivistic literature. From a working-class home and self-taught, Sandgren deliberately offended moral and literary conventions.

Du bittra bröd (1935); David blir människa (1943); Liv ge oss svar (1949); Livsresa (1965).

A. Lundkvist, Jag minns mitt gröna 30-tal (1959). I.S.

Sandoval, PRUDENCIO DE (*Valladolid 1553; †Estella 1621), Spanish historian. He was a Benedictine and became Bishop of Túy and of Pamplona. His history of Charles V is his most famous work; he also wrote chronicles of the reigns of Alfonso VII and of the monarchs who preceded him. His work is inaccurate.

Historia de la vida y hechos del emperador Carlos V (1604–06; ed. C. Seco Serrano, 3 vols, Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXXX–LXXXII); Historia de los cinco reyes (1615); Chronica del emperador Alfonso VII (1600).

A. Morel-Fatio, Historiographie de Charles V (Paris, 1913). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Sandys, GEORGE (*Bishopthorpe 2 III 1578; †Boxhey 1644), English traveller and translator. Sandys travelled widely in Europe and spent some time in America as treasurer of the Virginia Company. He is chiefly known for his translation of Ovid's* Metamorphoses, which marks an important stage in the development of the heroic couplet.

Ovid's Metamorphosis Englished (1626); Paraphrase upon the Psalms, etc. (1636); Christ's Passion, a Tragedy (from the Lat. of Grotius; 1640).—The Poetical Works of G. S. (ed. R. Hooper, 2 vols, 1872). J.B.B.

Sanetomo: see Minamoto no Sanetomo.

Sangiro, pseud. of ANDRIES ALBERTUS PIENAAR (*Pretoria 23 VIII 1894), Afrikaans prose-writer. Sangiro is the depicter of South African animal life. He has a fluent, sonorous and witty style and has played an important part in the development of Afrikaans prose. Some of his works have been translated into different European languages.

Uit Oerwoud en Vlakte (1921; Adventures of a Lion Family, tr. B. and E. D. Lewis, 1923);

Op Safari (1925); Diamantkoors (1926); Simba (1944).

P. J. and G. S. Nienaber, Die Afrikaanse Dierverhaal (1942). G.D. (N.D.C.)

San José, FRAY JERÓNIMO DE (*Mallén, Saragossa ?1587; †Saragossa 1654), Spanish historian, biographer, letter-writer and poet. He studied with Bartolomé Leonardo de Argensola* and became a Carmelite. He wrote an interesting treatise on historiography, some entertaining letters, a history of his order, a life of St John* of the Cross and a number of religious poems.

Historia del Carmen descalzo (1637); 'Dibujo del venerable varón fray Juan de la Cruz' in Obras del venerable y místico doctor F. Juan de la Cruz (1630 etc.); Genio de la historia (1651; 1768); Poesías (1877); Cartas (ed. J. M. Blecua in Archivo de filología aragonesa, I, 1945). E.M.W.

Śaṅkarācārya (*Malabar c. A.D. 788; †Kedārnāth 820), the greatest exponent of the Vedānta system of philosophy, was a Brahmin by caste, and a devotee of Shiva, of whom he is popularly regarded as an incarnation. He preached the doctrine of unqualified monism (advaita): nothing exists save the universal spirit (Brahman), and the phenomenal world is an illusion (māyā). He founded four monasteries (maṭhas) at the four extremities of India for the propagation of his teaching, which is contained in his commentaries on the Upanishads, the Brahmasūtras and the Bhagavadgītā.

The Vedānta-Sūtras With the Commentary by Śaṅkarācārya (tr. H. Thibaut in Sacred Books of the East, XXXIV, 1890, and XXVIII, 1896).—P. Deussen, Das System des Vedānta (1920).

H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Sannazaro, JACOPO, pseud. ACTIUS SYNCERUS (*Naples 28 VII 1456/58; †ibid. 24 IV 1530), Italian poet and humanist. The most important influences of his youth were the years spent in the country with his mother after his father's early death (1470) and his contact, when he returned to Naples (c. 1475), with that select body of humanists who, under the jovial leadership of Pontano*, constituted the Neapolitan academy. He served the Aragonese faithfully and even sold his goods to accompany Frederick into exile in France in 1501. On his return to Naples in 1504 he settled down in his villa at Mergellina to a life of tranquil study, broken only by his championship of the beautiful Cassandra Marchese who had been repudiated by her husband and whose friendship he cherished until his death.

His Latin and Italian writings possessed, for his contemporaries, the most important attributes of a work of art: he created an idyllic world of nature by means of literary reminiscence. This is especially true of his famous pastoral romance, L'Arcadia which exemplifies that complete absorption of classical culture typical of writers of the full Renaissance. Composed when Sannazaro was still a young man (bet. 1480 and 1496; 1st pub. 1501, complete ed. 1504), its success was immediate and lasting. It consists of 12 eclogues interspersed with 12 prose passages, describing the life of the shepherds of Arcadia and introducing some personal interest and added urgency of feeling in the character of Sincero, the author. Its originality lay in the framework of continuous narrative which enabled the singers to achieve an individuality of their own and opened the way for the pastoral drama and the pastoral novel, for Tasso*, Guarini*, Cervantes*, Honoré d'Urfé*, Spenser* and Sir Philip Sidney*. Both prose and poetry are polished, dignified and musical, and have the power to create that atmosphere of tranquil melancholy whose charm still has some appeal for us.

Sannazaro's other Italian writings are of minor importance: three rappresentazioni acted at court, gliomeri (poetic monologues) and a collection of Petrarchan Rime. More interesting are his Latin works, especially the Piscatoriae, five bucolic eclogues in which the shepherds of Arcadia are replaced by the fishermen of Mergellina. He also wrote three books of Epigrammata and three of Elegiae and a short religious poem De partu Virginis in which classical mythology and the Christian story are fused, not in an epic, but in an act of contemplation.

It is difficult to establish an exact chronol. for the pub. of S.'s works. Best coll. eds: Opera omnia Latine scripta (ed. Aldus, 1535); Opera Latine scripta (ed. J. A. Volpi, 1719; fuller ed. J. Brookhusius, Amsterdam, 1728); Opere volgari (ed. Volpi, 1723, cont. life by G. B. Crispo and the Farsa of 4 Mar. 1492; ed. A. Mauro, 1961).—Arcadia (ed. P. Summontio, 1504; crit. ed. E. Carrara, 1926, with biblio.); Piscatoriae (1526; Eng. tr. Rooke, 1726; crit. ed. W. P. Mustard, Baltimore, 1914); De partu Virginis (1526; crit. ed. A. Altamura, 1948); Rime (1530).

Comprehensive biblio. in V. Rossi, Il Quattrocento (1960) and G. M. Monti, 'Intorno al S. e ad un suo imitatore' in Archivum romanicum, XI (1927); E. Pèrcopo, 'Vita di J. S.' [1894], ed. G. Brognoligo in Archivio storico per le provincie Napoletane, LVI (1931).—E. Carrara, La poesia pastorale (1910); S. A. Sainati, La lirica latina del rinascimento (1919); M. I. Gerhardt, La Pastorale (in Fr.; Assen, 1950); A. Altamura, J. S. (1951); G. Folena, La crisi linguistica del Quattrocento e l'Arcadia del S. (1952); F. Tateo, Tradizione e realtà nell'umanesimo italiano (1967); M. Corti, 'Il codice bucolico e l'Arcadia di J. S.' in Strumenti crit., VI (1968). CDr. (J.G.-R.)

San Pedro, DIEGO DE (fl. late 15th century), Spanish romance-writer and poet. Little is known of his life. He wrote two romances of courtly love, Arnalte y Lucenda and La cárcel de Amor, which derive from the Italian tradition (Boccaccio's* Fiammetta, Enea Silvio Piccolomini*), from Rodríguez* del Padrón, the romances of chivalry and cancionero poetry. In them we find the idealization of the faithful lover, who either commits suicide or retires in despair from the world. The prose is highly rhetorical in the first, but severely pruned in the second. Both books were translated into French, Italian and English. San Pedro also wrote a verse narrative of the Crucifixion, whose great popularity continued into the 19th century; he stresses the horrific aspects.

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Obras (ed. S. Gili Gaya, 1950; ed. K. Whinnom and D. S. Severin, 3 vols, 1972- ).—The Castel of Love (tr. Lord Berners, ?1540); The prette and wittie historie of Arnalte and Lucenda (tr. C. Holyband, 1575).

B. W. Wardropper, 'Allegory and the role of El Autor in the Cárcel de Amor' in Philol. Quart., XXXI (1952); K. Whinnom, 'D. de S. P.'s stylistic reform' in Bull. Hispanic Stud., XXXVII (1960); A. D. Deyermund, 'El hombre salvaje en la novela sentimental' in Filología, X (1964); J. L. Varela, 'Revisión de la novela sentimental' in Revista de Filol. Esp., XLVIII (1965); F. Márquez Villanueva, 'C. de A., novela política' in Rev. de Occidente, XIV (1966); P. Waley, 'Love and honour in the Novelas sentimentales of D. de S. P. and Juan de Flores' in Bull. Hispanic Stud., XLIII (1966); R. Langbehn-Rohland, Zur Interpretation der Romane des D. de S. P. (Heidelberg, 1970). A.D.D.

Santa Cruz de Dueñas, MELCHOR DE (*Dueñas; fl. mid-16th century), Spanish writer of anecdotes. His Floresta (1574) is a very amusing compilation which contains stories of all classes of men. It was often reprinted and frequently quoted by later writers, and read in England and France.

Floresta española, I (ed. P. Oyanzuren, 1910); ed. Soc. de Bibliófilos Esp., XXIX (1953).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Santa Cruz y Espejo, FRANCISCO JAVIER EUGENIO DE (*Quito 21 II 1747; †ibid. 27 XII 1795), Ecuadorean satirical writer. A doctor and notable scientific spirit, Espejo is one of the outstanding representatives of Spanish rationalism and an important precursor of political independence. In the Nuevo Luciano, he goes to the root of the deficiencies of Spanish culture, and he shows similar independence of thought in his other critical essays.

El nuevo Luciano de Quito (circulated in MS 1779; ed. P. A. Espinosa Pólit, 1943); La ciencia blancardina (a reply to some criticisms of Nuevo Luciano; MS 1780); Cartas riobambenses (MSS; 1787).—Escritos de E. (ed. F. González Suárez, 3 vols, 1912–23); Obras de E. (ed. A. Muñoz Vernaza, 1913). E.Sa.

Santa María, PABLO DE, originally SOLOMON HA-LEVI (*Burgos 1350; †ibid. 1435), Spanish theologian and historian. His education was Jewish but St Vincent Ferrer's preaching converted him to Christianity (1390). He took Orders in Paris and became Bishop of Burgos (where he had been Chief Rabbi) in 1416. Besides a historical compilation (1412) and the allegorical-historical poem Edades del mundo (1418) in Spanish, he wrote several works in which he used his rabbinical knowledge for Christian Biblical exegesis.

Additiones notabiles ad has postillas Nicolai de Lyra in totam Scripturam (Venice, 1483); Scrutinium Scripturarum (Rome, 1470; Burgos, 1591); R. Foulché-Delbosc, Cancionero castellano del siglo XV (Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXII).

F. Cantera Burgos, Alvar García de S. M. y su familia de conversos (1951). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Santa María Egipcíaca, VIDA DE, 13th-century Spanish poem in irregular octosyllabic couplets. This story of a beautiful prostitute who repents and leads an ascetic life in the desert is inspired by that of Mary Magdalene. It is effectively told, and poetic traditions are used to point the moral lesson. The source is a French poem, in general faithfully followed. There are four prose versions of the story: 10th-century Hispano-Latin, 14th-century Portuguese, and 14th- and 15th-century Castilian.

Ed. M. S. de Andrés Castellanos (1964); Poemas hagiográficos de carácter juglaresco (ed. M. Alvar, 1967); Estoria de S. M. E. (ed. R. M. Walker, Exeter, 1972).

A. T. Baker, 'La Vie de Sainte Marie l'Égyptienne' in Rev. des langues romanes, LIX (1916–17); J. W. Rees, 'Notes on the text of the V. S. M. E.' in Hispanic Studies in Honour of I. González Llubera (1959); J. R. Craddock, 'Apuntes para el estudio de la leyenda de S. M. E. en España' in Homenaje a Rodríguez-Moñino, I (1966). A.D.D.

Santayana, GEORGE (*Madrid 16 XII 1863; †Rome 27 IX 1952), Spanish-American philosopher. He was the son of Spanish parents and retained his Spanish nationality, but was brought up in Boston and wrote in English. He studied philosophy at Harvard, in Germany and in England; he taught at Harvard from 1889 to 1912. His writings began with poetry, Sonnets and Other Verses (1894) and an examination of aesthetics, The Sense of Beauty (1896). His main work, however, has been philosophical, written in a rich poetic style. In the five volumes of The Life of Reason (1905–06), he develops his naturalistic doctrine that matter is the only reality and shows the limitations of reason in the various branches of man's activity. In his later series, The Realms of Being, he investigates the four realms of matter, essence, spirit and truth. His works dealing with the conflict of materialism and idealism in American life are Philosophical Opinion in America (1918) and Character and Opinion in the United States (1920). His single novel, The Last Puritan (1935), the story of a Puritan character 'at enmity with joy', became a best-seller.

Three Philosophical Poets: Lucretius, Dante, and Goethe (1910); Egotism in German Philosophy (1916); Soliloquies in England and Later Soliloquies (1922); Scepticism and Animal Faith (1923); Dialogues in Limbo (1925); Platonism and the Spiritual Life (1927); The Realm of Essence (1927); The Realm of Matter (1930); The Realm of Truth (1937); The Realm of Spirit (1940); The Idea of Christ in the Gospels (1946); Domination and Powers (1951).—The Works of G. S. (14 vols, 1936–37).—Persons and Places (autobiog.; 1946).

V. M. Ames, Proust and S.: The Aesthetic Way of Life (1937); G. W. Howgate, G. S. (1938); P. A. Schilpp, The Philosophy of G. S. (1940).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Santeul (less correct Santeuil), JEAN-BAPTISTE DE (*Paris 12 V 1630; †Dijon 5 VIII 1697), French Latin poet. The most eminent member of the Paris PLÉIADE (with La Rue, Ménage*, Du* Perrier, Rapin*, Commire* and Petit), Latin translator of Corneille*, he became the unofficial poet laureate of Louis XIV, whose exploits in war and peace he celebrated. In a sonnet he described the Great Fire of London as a retaliation for the execution of Charles I. His hymns secured him lasting fame as a poet, but gave rise to bitter polemics for they were thought to be too pagan. Bossuet* intervened on his behalf; and Saint-Simon*, La* Bruyère and others were among his friends.

Opera omnia (3 vols, 1729).

L. A. Montalant-Bougleux, J.-B. S. ou la poésie latine sous Louis XIV (1855); C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Causeries du Lundi, XII (Paris, n.d.); J. A. Vissac, De la poésie latine en France au siècle de Louis XIV (1862). P.T.

Šantić, ALEKSA (*Mostar 27 V 1868; †ibid. 2 II 1924), Serbian poet, and a prominent writer of the nationalist movement before the First World War. His earlier poetry was influenced by that of Zmaj* and V. Ilić* but his own individuality was to emerge in subjective, emotional and patriotic verses which won him wide popularity.

Pesme (1891 etc.); Hasanaginica (1911).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 3 vols, 1957); Izabrana dela (ed. Dj. Gavella, 1965).

V. Djurić, A. S. (1963).

V.J.

Santillana, ÍÑIGO LÓPEZ DE MENDOZA, MARQUÉS DE (*Carrión de los Condes 19 VIII 1398; ∞1416 Catalina de Figueroa; †Guadalajara 25 III 1458), Spanish poet. He was a turbulent nobleman who combined warfare and intrigue with reading and poetry. He captured Huelma from the Moors and plotted against John II's favourite, Álvaro de Luna*. Homer*, Plato*, Virgil* and Seneca's* tragedies were translated for him, and he imitated Horace's* Beatus ille. His Comedieta de Ponza (1436) is a panegyric on Alfonso V of Aragon; this and other allegorical poems, like the Infierno de los enamorados, show Italian influence. He was the first Castilian poet to try to naturalize the sonnet in Spain; the result was not successful. He continued the Galician and Provençal traditions in his shorter poems. His serranillas—poems about encounters with mountain girls—are courtly and charming. He also essayed didactic poems in his Didálogo de Blas contra Fortuna (1448) and Proverbios (1437). He wrote a prose discourse on poetry in a letter to Pedro*, Constable of Portugal (1449); it is the first sustained attempt at descriptive criticism in Spanish. A collection of proverbs is also attributed to him.

Obras (ed. J. Amador de los Ríos, 1852); Canciones y decires (ed. V. García de Diego, 1913); Letter of the Marquis of Santillana to Don Peter (ed. A. R. Pastor and E. Prestage, 1927); Prose and Verse (ed. J. B. Trend, 1940).—The proverbes of Sir J. Lopez de Mendoza (tr. B. Googe, 1579).

M. Schiff, La bibliothèque du Marquis de Santillana (1905); R. Lapesa, Los decires narrativos del M. de S. (1954) and La obra literaria del M. de S. (1957); F. Street, 'Some reflections on S.'s Prohemio e carta' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LII (1957); J. Delgado, El M. de S. (Buenos Aires, 1968). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Sant Jordi, JORDI DE (*Valencia c. 1395; †ibid. c. 1424), Catalan poet. In the company of Andreu Febrer, translator of the Divina Commedia, he took part in Alfonso V's first expedition against Sardinia and Corsica; he was taken prisoner in 1423. His few surviving poems continue the Provençal tradition in language and metre, but are also influenced by Petrarch*. The poet reasons about his love and his captivity, often achieving considerable precision and concentration. His humorous account of his troubles (Enuigs) is excellent. Sant Jordi is a worthy second to Ausiàs March* in the Valencian poetic group of the 15th century.

Obres poètiques (crit. ed. J. Massó Torrents, 1902; ed. M. de Riquer, Granada, 1955).

G.W.R.

Santō Kyōden, pseud. of IWASE SEI, also called IWASE NOBUYOSHI (*Edo [=Tokyo] 12 IX 1761; ∞1790 Kikuzono [†1792], ∞II 1800 Yuri; †ibid. 27 X 1816), Japanese novelist and writer. The son of a merchant, he passed a profligate youth and started work in a shop; but as early as 1778 he took up writing short stories, specializing in illustrated 'rake's guides' to the demi-monde, with which he was obviously very familiar (both his wives had been prostitutes, but both marriages proved highly successful). His writings became popular, but a police prosecution in 1791 led him to abandon pornography, and he turned to publishing romantic novels free of coarseness. The popularity of his books continued unabated and in the remaining 25 years of his life he produced several dozen novels and essays. His fiction-writing after 1791 set a new pattern in that his plots, instead of being based on traditional stories, were almost entirely imaginary. He was in fact the first modern Japanese novelist and set a pattern which was closely followed by his pupils Bakin*, Ryūtei* Tanekiko etc. His plots were usually exciting, sensational and closely-packed, but his style is straightforward and clear.

E.B.C.

SHORT STORIES: Edo-umare uwaki no kabayaki (1785; summary and discussion in B. Lewin, Japanische Chrestomathie, I, 1965).—NOVELS: Chūshin suikoden (1798; a version of the story of the 47 Rōnin; see Takeda* Izumo); Udonge monogatari (1804); Sakurahime zenden akebono zōshi (1805); Das Web des Yoshiharu, tr. B. Lewin, 1956); Mukashigatari inazuma hyōshi (1805; summary in K. Florenz, Geschichte der japanischen Litteratur, 1906); Honchō suibodai (1806); Sōchōki (1813).—ESSAYS: Kinsei kiseki kō (1804); Kottōshū (1815). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Santob de Carrión, otherwise RABBI ŠEM TOB IBN ARDUTIEL BEN ISAAC (fl. mid-14th century), Spanish poet. He lived at Soria and probably at Carrión. He may have been involved in the persecutions of Alfonso XI. In Hebrew he wrote a hymn for Yom Kippur, a poetic debate between pen and scissors (1345), a liturgical translation from the Arabic and a Cabbalistic treatise. He dedicated to Peter the Cruel his Proverbios morales, a poem of 725 alexandrine couplets with internal rhyme. Its sources are chiefly Biblical, Talmudic and Arabic, but Santob draws also on Latin and Spanish works, proverbs and everyday life. This gnomic poetry is wise and moral, with simple effective imagery and more than a spice of humour.

Proverbios morales (ed. I. González Llubera, Cambridge, 1947).

A. Castro, La realidad histórica de España (rev. ed., Mexico, 1962); J. H. Klausner, 'The historical and social milieu of S.'s Proverbios morales' in Hispania (U.S.A.), XLVIII (1965). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Santos, FRANCISCO (*Madrid; fl. 17th century),

Spanish novelist and descriptive writer. He wrote in the picaresque tradition, but the emphasis falls on the background, not on the anti-hero. His most famous work, Día y noche de Madrid, is really a series of interesting essays on the seamy side of Madrid life.

Obras (3 vols, 1723); Día y noche de Madrid in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXIII; Costumbristas españoles, I (ed. E. Correa Calderón, 1950); El arca de Noé y campana de Belilla (ed. F. Gutiérrez, 1959).

A. Valbuena Prat, La novela picaresca española (1946). E.M.W.

Sanudo, MARINO, THE YOUNGER (*Venice 22 VI 1466; †ibid. 4 IV 1536), Italian historian. For his famous Diarii, covering the period 1496 to 1533, he was allowed access to Venetian official documents and letters.

I Diarii (58 vols, 1879–1903); Vite dei Dogi (ed. G. Monticolo in Rerum Italicarum scriptores, XXII.4, 1900).

G. Cozzi, 'M. S. il giov.: dalla cronica alla storia' in Rivista storica ital., LXXX (1968). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Sanz del Río, JULIÁN (*Torrearevalo, Soria 1814; †Madrid 1869), Professor of philosophy at Madrid University. He gave life to krausismo, the important intellectual movement which exercised so deep an influence on Spanish thought, education and life till 1936. Rather than embodying the philosophical ideas of Krause, krausismo came to mean a liberal, non-confessional but strongly ethical attitude to life. Opposed by orthodox Catholicism, its influence is seen in the moral asceticism and vigour of its great followers (Giner* de los Ríos; Cossío*).

Lecciones para el sistema de la filosofía analítica de Krause (1850); Ideal de la humanidad por la vida (1860); Filosofía de la muerte (1877).

J. B. Trend, The Origins of Modern Spain (1934); L'Abbé Pierre Jobit, Les éducateurs de l'Espagne contemporaine, II (1936); V. Cacho Viu, La Institución libre de enseñanza (1962).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Sanz y Sánchez, EULOGIO FLORENTINO (*Arévalo, Ávila 11 III 1822; †Madrid 29 IV 1881), Spanish writer. At 23 he scored a great success with Don Francisco de Quevedo, a sober Romantic play on the famous writer and on Philip IV's court (pub. 1848). A poet of distinction, his excellent translations of Heine* had a deep influence on Spanish lyricists.

Narciso Alonso Cortés, Quevedo en el teatro y otras cosas (1930).—E. Carrère, 'De la vida de un poeta' in Ilustración Esp. y Amer., LXXXV (1908); F. Zarza y Roldán, Folleto biográfico de . . . don E. F. S. . . . (1910); J. M. Díez Taboada in Rev. de Literatura, XIII (1958).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Sappho, Greek lyric poetess contemporary with Alcaeus*, who flourished in Lesbos c. 600 B.C. In her best-preserved poems she describes the physical effects of sexual passion and the pain of unrequited love. (It is impossible to be certain whether she was a 'lesbian' in the modern sense.) She also composed poems on heroic subjects and wedding-songs, including one which celebrates the marriage of Hector and Andromache. The Sapphic stanza is named after her.

E. Lobel and D. L. Page, Poetarum Lesbiorum fragmenta (2nd ed. 1963; complete text); D. L. Page, S. and Alcaeus (1955; principal frags with tr. and comm.).—U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, S. und Simonides (1913); C. M. Bowra, Greek Lyric Poetry (2nd ed. 1961). J.T.H.

Sarashina Nikki ('Sarashina Diary'), Japanese literary diary, written in 1059–60 by the daughter (*1009; personal name unknown) of Fujiwara Takasue. It is a delicate account of a journey from Shimōsa to Kyoto (the capital) in 1021, a later journey from Kyoto to Sarashina, and of various miscellaneous events of interest.

As I Crossed a Bridge of Dreams (tr. I. I. Morris, 1971); Ger. tr. U. Kemper (ed. H. Hammitzsch, 1966). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Sarbiewski (SARBIWIVUS), MACIEJ KAZIMIERZ (*Sarbiew 24 II 1595; †Warsaw 2 IV 1640), Polish-Latin poet. A teacher at Jesuit schools, imitating Horace* and Pindar*, this 'Horatius Christianus' wrote often in a baroque style. There were 58 editions of his works between 1625 and 1892.

Lyricorum libri IV Epodon liber unus alterque Epigrammatum (1631); Lyricorum libri V in 1647 ed.); Translations from Casimir S. (J. Kitchener, 1821); sel. poems tr. J. Bowring in Specimens of the Polish Poets (1827).—Poemata omnia (ed. T. Walla, 1892).

F. M. Müller, De M. C. S. Polono S. J. Horatii imitatore (1917); T. Sinko, Poetyka S. (1918); J. Oko, M. K. S. poeta uwieczniony (1923; popular); Z. Szmydtowa, O księdze I Poetyki S. (1949).

S.S. (P.H.)

Sardou, VICTORIEN (*Paris 5 IX 1831; †ibid. 8 XI 1908), French dramatist. In spite of much unfavourable criticism, Sardou, a disciple of Scribe*, became one of the most popular dramatists of his time and was elected to the French Academy in 1877. His plays, though superficial, are spectacular and often dramatically effective. He was a meticulous producer and often wrote with certain great players (Sarah Bernhardt, Réjane, Henry Irving) in mind. 'Sardoodledom' was Shaw's* word for Sardou and his influence in the theatre.

Les pattes de mouche (1860); Patrie (1869); Fédora (1882); Théodora (1884); La Tosca (1887); Madame Sans-Gêne (with E. Moreau; 1893); Robespierre (1899); Dante (1902).—Théâtre complet (11 vols, 1950).

J. A. Hart, S. and the S. Plays (1913); G. Mouly, La vie prodigieuse de V. S. (1931); A. Nicoll, World Drama (1949). T.W.

Sargeson, FRANK (*Hamilton 23 III 1903), New Zealand short-story writer, novelist, playwright. Sargeson stories, usually of working-class people, told through a vernacular, began to appear in the 1930s. He became the most influential New Zealand writer through this mode, while himself altering his style to suit an enlarging social range and increasingly complex method of narration, changing from short stories to novels. As he grew older he became more inventive, moving from naturalistic writing to his recent fantastic works. His later fiction is intensely bound to literature of the main English tradition, New Zealand in its location but international and calculatedly historical in its provenance.

Conversation With My Uncle and Other Sketches (1939); A Man and His Wife (1940); When the Wind Blows (1945; this became Pt I of I Saw in My Dream, 1949); That Summer and Other Stories (1946); I for One (1st pub. in Landfall, 1952; 1954); Memoirs of a Peon (1965); The Hangover (1967); Joy of the Worm (1969); Man of England Now (3 novellas; 1972).—Ed., Speaking for Ourselves (1945).—Wrestling With the Angel (two plays; 1964).—Collected Stories (N.Z. ed. with intro. Bill Pearson, biblio. and gloss., 1964). K.Sm.

Sargidzhan, AMIR: see Borodin, SERGEY PETROVICH.

Sarmiento, DOMINGO FAUSTINO (*El Carrascal 14 II 1811; †Asunción 11 IX 1888), Argentinian writer, prolific essayist and pamphleteer, deeply involved in the struggle against Rosas. He was fiercely polemical, a clear and able writer, determined to use his native speech with as little regard for academic standards as possible. By temperament an individualist, he succumbed to the full flood of Romanticism introduced by Echeverría*. Twice exiled to Chile, he founded the Normal school in that country and also contributed to newspapers. He defended Romanticism and provoked a heated polemic with the classical-minded Bello*, a man of much sounder understanding but less vehement personality. In 1845, he published the work for which he is now best known, Facundo (orig. Civilización y barbarie; Life in the Argentine Republic, tr. Mrs. H. Mann, 1868), in which he analysed the reasons for the defeat in Argentina of 'Civilisation' by barbaric caudillos such as Facundo Quiroga. He also traced the rise to power of Rosas. On the defeat of Rosas, Sarmiento returned to the Argentine and in 1868 was elected President, serving one term of office.

Recuerdos de provincia (1850).—Obras (52 vols, 1903; Paris, 1910).

J. G. Guerra, D. F. S., su vida y sus obras (1910); R. Rojas, Bibliografía de S. (1911); P. Soldán, D. F. S. (1911); L. Lugones, Historia de S. (1911); N. Pinilla, La polémica del Romanticismo (1943); A. W. Bunkley, The Life of S. (1952); A S. Anthology (tr. S. E. Grummor, ed. and intro. A. W. Bunkley, Princeton, 1948).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Saroyan, WILLIAM (*Fresno, Calif. 31 VIII 1908; ∞1943 Carol Marcus [o/o 1949]), American short-story writer and playwright. In the early 1930s his short stories—without plot, without directed action, without denouement—became a huge success. A prolific writer, he has written many whimsical and symbolic plays such as The Time of Your Life (1939).

SHORT STORIES: The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze, and Other Stories (1934); Little Children (1937); A Native American (1938); My Name Is Aram (1940); Saroyan's Fables (1941); The Human Comedy (1943); The Bicycle Rider in Beverly Hills (1953); The Whole Vovald (1956); After Thirty Years: The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze (1964); Letters From 74 Rue Taitbout or Don't Go But If You Must Say Hello to Everybody (1969).—PLAYS: My Heart's in the Highlands (1940); Jim Dandy (1947).—NOVELS: Mama I Love You (1956); Papa You're Crazy (1957).—Short Drive, Sweet Chariot (autobiog.; 1966). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Sarpi, PIETRO (*Venice 14 VIII 1552; †ibid. 7 I 1623), Italian ecclesiastical historian; he changed his Christian name to PAOLO when he took Holy Orders. Sarpi was the Venetian Republic's adviser, in spite of excommunications and interdicts, in its successful resistance to Pope Paul V. In his history of the Council of Trent he showed great lucidity and a masterly command of his subject; his condemnation of Papal absolutism and his indignation at ecclesiastical corruption pervade this work.

Trattato dell' Interdetto di Paolo V (1606; crit. ed. M. D. Busnelli and G. Gambarin, together with several minor works, 3 vols, 1940); Istoria del Concilio Tridentino (London, 1619; crit. ed. G. Gambarin, 1935); The Historie of the Council of Trent, tr. Sir N. Brent, 1620).—Opere (24 vols, 1789–90); Scritti filosofici e teologici editi e inediti (1951); Scritti scelti (ed. G. Da Pozzo, 1968); Opere (sel.; ed. G. and L. Cozzi, 1969).

A. Robertson, Fra P. S., the Greatest of the Venetians (1894); G. Getto, P. S. (1941); F. A. Yates, 'P. S.'s "History of the Council of Trent"' in Jour. Warburg and Courtauld Inst. (1944); L. Salvatorelli, 'Le idee religiose di Fra P. S.' in Atti della Accad. Nazionale dei Lincei (1953); G. Cozzi, 'Fra P. S., l'anglicanesimo e la Historia del Concilio Tridentino' in Nuova rivista storica (1956); F. Seneca, La politica veneziana dopo l'Interdetto (1957); F. Chabod, La politica di P. S. (1962). U.L.

Sarraute, NATHALIE, née TCHERNIAK (*Ivanovo, Russia 18 VII 1900), French novelist who 'invented' the NOUVEAU ROMAN in 1938, when she published Tropismes. In a collection of essays, L'ère du soupçon (1956; Eng. tr. with Tropismes, 1963), she comments on this new novel form, in which main characters are omitted and small facts and gestures are amassed to create a world haunted by symbols which the reader must decipher for himself.

NOVELS: Portrait d'un inconnu (1948; Eng. tr. M. Jolas, 1959); Martereau (1953; Eng. tr. idem, 1964); Le planétarium (1959; Eng. tr. idem, 1961); Les fruits d'or (1963; Eng. tr. idem, 1965); Entre la vie et la mort (1968); Vous les entendez (1972).—PLAYS: Le silence; Le mensonge (1966; Eng. tr. idem, 1969).

M. Cranaki and Y. Belev, N. S. (1965); R. Micha, N. S. (1966); S. Sontag, Against Interpretation (1967); M. Tison-Braun, N. S. (1971). M.G.

Sarshār, RATAN NĀTH (*1846; †1902), Urdu journalist and writer, whose voluminous major work, the Tale of Azād (1879), is a link between the oral romances of medieval Islamic chivalry and the novel. Its hero is little more than the mouthpiece of Sarshār's modernist reforming zeal, but dialogue and descriptive writing are excellent, and there are vivid pictures of the contemporary Lucknow scene. R.R.

Sartorius, E.: see Schneider, HEINRICH EMIL.

Sartre, JEAN-PAUL (*Paris 21 VI 1905), French philosopher and writer. Sartre lost his father—a sailor—while he was still a child. His early years were spent at La Rochelle. He was educated at the Lycée Henri IV and at the École Normale Supérieure and placed first in the Agrégation de Philosophie. He taught at Laon and at Havre, ending up, after an interlude at the Institut Français in Berlin, in Paris. While in Berlin he made the acquaintance of modern German philosophy. After playing an active part in the Resistance, he left the teaching profession, travelled in the United States (1945), and since then has devoted the whole of his time, in close association with Simone de Beauvoir*, to writing and to his periodical, Les Temps Modernes. In 1964 he was awarded, and refused, the Nobel prize, and after Les mots (1964; Eng. tr. I. Clephane, 1964), he abandoned literature and devoted himself to political and ideological activity.

As a philosopher, Sartre has been the founder in France of EXISTENTIALISM. Through the medium of one long and difficult book, L'être et le néant (1943), and of his essays in Les Temps Modernes (collected under the title of Situations), he has reached a world-wide public. His novels are powerful, intelligent and imaginative. They show an original technique, and their style is at once vital and artistically accomplished. In his stories (from Le mur, 1939, to Les chemins de la liberté) the existentialist theme of 'man is what he makes himself' even contributes to the fictional interest. In the theatre he has been as successful with tragedy on a classic subject (Les mouches, 1942; The Flies, tr. S. Gilbert, 1946) as with symbolically realistic drama (Huis-Clos, 1944; In Camera, tr. idem, 1946) or with philosophic plays (Le Diable et le bon Dieu, 1951; Lucifer and the Lord, tr. K. Black, 1953). He is, as well, a penetrating critic (Baudelaire, 1947). He has touched on many facets of the human intelligence, and occupies a place in the front rank of contemporary thought.

PHILOSOPHY: L'imagination (1938; Eng. tr. F. Williams, 1962); L'imaginaire (1940); Esquisse d'une théorie des émotions (1940; Eng. tr. P. Mairet, 1962); L'existentialisme est un humanisme (1946; Eng. tr. idem, 1948); Critique de la raison dialectique (1960; The Problem of Method, tr. H. E. Barnes, 1963).—NOVELS AND STORIES: La nausée (1938); Les chemins de la liberté (4 vols, 1945 ff., incl.: L'âge de raison, Eng. tr. E. Sutton, 1948; Le sursis, The Reprieve, tr. idem, 1949; La mort dans l'âme, Iron in the Soul, tr. G. Hopkins, 1951).—PLAYS AND FILMS: Morts sans sépulture (1947); Les jeux sont faits (1947; The Chips Are Down, tr. L. Varese, 1951); Les mains sales (1948); L'engrenage (1948); Kean (1954); Les séquestrés d'Altona (1959; Loser Wins, tr. S. and G. Leeson, 1960).—Three Plays (tr. K. Black, 1949).—ESSAYS: Réflexions sur la question juive (1947); Baudelaire (1947; Eng. tr. M. Turnell, 1950); Entretiens sur la politique (1949); Jean Genet (1951); Situations (8 vols, 1947–71); L'idiote de la famille (Flaubert; 1971).

C. E. Magny, Les sandales d'Empédocle (1945); R. Campbell, J.-P. S. ou un littérature philosophique (1945); J. Beauffret in Confluences (1945); F. Jeanson, Le problème moral et la pensée de S. (1947; 2nd ed. 1966) and S. par lui-même (1956); C. Varet, L'ontologie de S. (1948); N. N. Greene, J.-P. S. The Existentialist Ethic (1963); J. Houbart, Un père dénaturé. Essai sur la pensée philosophique de J.-P. S. (1964); M. Warnock, The Philosophy of S. (1965); R. Lafarge, La pensée philosophique de J.-P. S. (1967); D. K. MacCall, The Theatre of J.-P. S. (1969); M. Contat and M. Rybalka, Les écrits de S. (1970).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Sarvig, OLE (*Copenhagen 27 XI 1921; ∞1949 Patricia Stacey, ∞1962 Helen Aileen Dewell), Danish poet, a sophisticated and gifted exponent of the lyrical break-through of the 1940s.

VERSE: Grønne Digte (1943); Jeghuset (1944); Mangfoldighed (1945); Digte (1945); Legende (1946); Min Kærlighed (1952); I Forstaden (1956); Efterskrift (1966); Poemes Germes (1968); Rekviem (1968).—PROSE: Tre Elegier (1948); Krisens Billedbog (1950); Midtvejs i det tyvende Århundrede (1950); Nattevagten (1951); Stenrosen (1955); Glimt (1956); De sovende (1958); Havet under mit Vindue (1960); Limbo (1963); Stedet som ikke er (1966); Stemmer i Mørket (1970); Prosadigte (1971). E.B.

Sassetti, FILIPPO (*Florence 26 IX 1540; †Goa 3 IX 1588), Italian merchant and writer. In addition to his critical writings on Dante*, he wrote letters from India during the last five years of his life, including some on the Indian language.

Discorso in difesa di Dante (ed. M. Rossi, 1897); Lettere . . . con la Vita di Francesco Ferrucci (ed. E. Camerini, 1874); Lettere scelte (ed. G. Raya, 1932; with intro. and notes). C.Dr.

Sassi (SASSO DE SASSI), PANFILO (*Modena ?1455; †Lonzano, Romagna 1527), Italian poet. Famous as an improviser, he wrote occasional verse and Petrarchan sonnets.

Opere (Venice, 1501).

G. Tiraboschi, Biblioteca Modenese (6 vols, 1781–86); A. d'Ancona, 'Del secentismo nella poesia cortigiana del secolo XV' in Pagine sparse di letteratura e di storia (1914). C.Dr.

Sassoon, SIEGFRIED (*Brenchley, Kent 8 IX 1886; ∞1933 Hester Gatty; †Heytesbury, Wilts 1 IX 1967), English poet and memoirist. Having enjoyed a privileged youth, he was profoundly stirred by his war experiences, whose effect was seen in moving memoirs and in his earlier poetry. Many of his later verses, reflecting quietly introspective moods or response to beauty, are distinguished and individual.

MEMOIRS: Memoirs of a Fox-Hunting Man (1928); Memoirs of an Infantry Officer (1930); Sherston's Progress (1936).—VERSE: Counter-Attack (1918); Satirical Poems (1926); The Heart's Journey (1928); Rhymed Ruminations (1940); Collected Poems 1908–56 (1961).—Meredith (biog., 1948).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: The Old Century and Seven More Years (1938); The Weald of Youth (1942); Siegfried's Journey 1916–20 (1945).

M. Thorpe, S. S. (Leiden, 1966).—Biblio. by G. Keynes (1962). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Sastre, ALFONSO (*Madrid 20 II 1926), Spanish dramatist with an intense concern for social issues. As a student Sastre established Arte Nuevo (1945), a group which for three years produced experimental plays. In 1950 he joined José María de Quinto in founding the Teatro de Agitación Social (T.A.S.) and, later, the Grupo de Teatro Realista (G.T.R.). His theory of the theatre is to be found in works such as Drama y sociedad (1956). His plays are symbolic, often ambiguous, and employ themes of violence and sudden death.

Escuadra hacia la muerte (1953); La mordaza (1954); El cuervo (1957); Muerte en el barrio (1959). J.E.V.

Satchell, WILLIAM (*London 1 II 1860; †Auckland 21 X 1942), New Zealand novelist. Educated partly at Heidelberg, he migrated from a minor literary milieu to northern New Zealand. He worked at various occupations, and is remembered now for four novels in which local colour and Hardyish mysticism are mixed. His plots were improbable, his characterization uncertain.

The Land of the Lost (1902); The Toll of the Bush (1905); The Elixir of Life (1907); The Greenstone Door (1914).

P. Wilson, The Maorilanders (1961) and W. S. (with chronol., crit. and sel. biblio.; 1968). K.Sm.

Satire Ménippée, an early French satirical pamphlet reflecting the hostility of the French bourgeoisie to the States-General convoked by the ultra-Catholic Ligue in 1593 to elect a new King other than Henry of Navarre. Promoted by Jean Leroy, a canon of Rouen, it has parts written by Pierre Pithou, Jean Passerat*, Nicolas Rapin* and others. A vigorous medley of prose and verse, it includes notably parodies of speeches by delegates to the States-General.

Satyre Ménippée (1594; ed. C. Read, 1876). F. Giroux, La composition de la S. M. (1904). G.B.

Satō HARUO (*Shingū, Wakayama 9 IV 1892), Japanese novelist and poet, and translator of Chinese classical works.

Supein-inu no ie ('The House of a Spanish Dog', tr. G. Saito in Modern Japanese Stories, ed. I. I. Morris, 1961); Den'en no yūtsu (1919); Tokai no yūtsu (1922; summary of this and prec. in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Jokaisen kidan (1925; 'The Tale of the Bridal Fan', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Japan Quart., IX.3, 1962); Kikusui monogatari (1935; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959).—POETRY: Sel. poems tr. in: T. Ninomiya and D. J. Enright, The Poetry of Living Japan (1957); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Satomi TON, pseud. of YAMANOUCHI HIDEO (*Yokohama 14 VII 1888), Japanese novelist, like his younger brother Arishima* Takeo.

E.B.C.

Haha to ko (1914); Kawanami no oto (1921; 'Le bruit des vagues de la rivière', tr. S. Elisséev in Neuf nouvelles japonaises, 1924); Tajō busshin (1922-23; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature I, 1939); Tsubaki (1923; 'The Camellia', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Modern Japanese Stories, ed. I. I. Morris, 1961); Migoto na shūbun (1947; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Satta, SEBASTIANO (*Nuoro 21 V 1867; †ibid. 29 XI 1914), Italian poet, regarded by Sardinians as their national bard. His poetry is often shallow and his diction stilted, but in rare moments, especially in Canti Barbaricini (1910), he captures the primitive epic grandeur of the island's lonely mountains and shepherds, or the anguish of Sardinia's, and the world's, poor and oppressed, as well as private griefs and solaces.

Versi ribelli (1893); nella Terra dei Nuraghes (1893); Canti del salto e della tanca (1924; with Canti Barbaricini, in Canti, 1955).

J.G.-R.

Sattler, OTTO (*Emmendingen, Baden 4 III 1872; †New York 15 III 1950), German-American author. Prominently active in the trade union movement, he was best known as contributor to the New York Volkszeitung and as editor of Solidarity, official organ of the Workmen's Benefit Fund of the U.S.A.

VERSE: New York und die Welt (1913); Krieg (1914).—Lockende Welt (autobiog.; 1931).

[S. Schocken], 'O. S.' in Solidarity, Eng. ed., XLV (1950).

E.R.

Satyrus (3rd century B.C.), Greek biographer from Calliatis Pontica, best known from a papyrus fragment of his Life of Euripides, an anecdotal work in dialogue form which draws freely on passages in the plays and in contemporary comedy. He is also credited with a work on Characters (part of 'The Rake' survives). The historian Satyrus who wrote On the Demes of Alexandria is unlikely to be the same person.

C. Müller, Fragmenta historicorum Graecorum, III (1849); Life of Euripides in Oxyrhynchus Papyri, IX (1912; no. 1176); ed. G. Arrighetti (with intro. and comm.; 1964); Demes of Alexandria in Oxyrhynchus Papyri, XXVII (1962; no. 2465).

E.W.H.

Sauer (SAUR, SOWER), CHRISTOPH (*Laasphe on the Lahn 1693; ∞Maria Christina?; †German-town, Pa. 25 IX 1758), German-American printer and editor. He printed a German Bible in 1743, the first edition of the Scriptures printed in the Western hemisphere in a European language. He edited Der Hoch-Deutsch Pensylvanische Geschicht-Schreiber, oder Sammlung wichtiger Nachrichten aus dem Natur- und Kirchen-Reich (1739 ff.) and Der Hoch-Deutsch Americanische Calendar (1739 ff.), through which he directed the thinking of the American-German population of the 13 colonies for two decades.

G. H. Genzmer, 'Sower, Christopher' in Dictionary of American Biography, XVII (1935); F. Reichmann, C. S., an Annotated Bibliography (1943).

E.R.

Sava, Sr (*c. 1174; †Trnovo 1235), Serbian chronicler, the first Archbishop of Serbia. His biography of his father Stefan Nemanja (the first ruler of the united Serbian provinces) contains a simple yet moving account of his death. St Sava is renowned as a promoter of education.

Stare srpske biografije (1924; cont. mod. Serbo-Croatian version of S.'s work); Stefan Nemanja nach den Viten des hl. Sava und Stefans des Erstgekronten (tr. with notes S. Hafner, 1962); V. Gligorić, Iz naše književnosti feudalnog doba (sel. with notes; 1968); Stare srpske biografije (ed. D. Bogdanović, 1969).

V.J.

Savage, RICHARD (*c. 1697; †Bristol 1 VIII 1743), English poet and dramatist. An opportunist, distinguished largely by his association with Pope* and Johnson* and by an unsubstantiated claim to noble birth, Savage is at his best in satire ('Author to Be Let', for instance) but his comedies, tragedies and poems escape mediocrity by virtue of their vigour and fluency.

B.H.

PLAYS: Love in a Veil (1718); Sir Thomas Overbury (1723).—VERSE: Miscellaneous Poems (1726); The Wanderer (1729).—Works (2 vols, 1775); Poetical Works (ed. with notes C. Tracy, 1962).

S. Johnson, An Account of the Life of Mr R. S. (1744); S. V. Makower, R. S.: A Mystery in Biography (1909); C. Tracy, The Artificial Bastard: A Biography of R. S. (1953).

B.H. (M.Bu.)

Savard, FELIX ANTOINE (*Quebec City 31 VIII 1896), Canadian cleric and writer. He drew upon his experiences in Abitibi for the authentic settings of his books, which are poetic novels or prose poems extolling conservative nationalist feeling and religious tradition. He also wrote sketches, reminiscences, poetry and drama.

Ménard, maître-draveur (1937); Boss of the River, tr. A. Sullivan, (1947); L'Abatis (1943); La minuit (1948); Martin et le pauvre (1959).

A. Major, F.-A. S. (1968).

R.Su.

Savich, OVADY, Soviet author. His main work is his novel Voobrazhayemy sobesednik ('The Imaginary Interlocutor'; 1928). Its irrational character is reminiscent of both Tolstoy* and Dostoyevsky*.

Po kholstyanoy zemle (1923); Plovuchiy ostrov (1927); My i oni (anthol. about France, ed. with Ilya Ehrenburg; 1932). J.L.

Savile, GEORGE, 1ST MARQUESS OF HALIFAX (*Thornhill, Yorks 11 XI 1633; ∞29 XII 1656 Dorothy Spencer; †London 5 IV 1695), English politician and prose-writer. Having lived in France and Italy from XII 1647 to 1650 or 1654, Halifax was involved in all the chief events from the Restoration until his death. He figures as Jotham in Dryden's* Absalom and Achitophel, his greatest achievement being the triumph over Shaftesbury [Cooper*] in the rejection of the Exclusion Bill (1680). A pleasant companion, brilliant in conversation, Halifax's prose is accurate and pungent, wittily ironical, often aphoristic as in his excellent Character of Charles II (not published until 1750). Associating with Pepys*, he was interested in the navy, advocated compulsory education at the public cost, and was a Christian though sceptical.

Life and Letters . . . With his Works (ed. H. C. Foxcroft, 1898); The Complete Works (ed. J. P. Kenyon, 1969).—Advice to a Daughter (1688; ed. B. Dobrée, 1927); The Character of a Trimmer (circ. in MS, 1684; pub. 1688).—H. C. Foxcroft, A Character of 'The Trimmer' (1946).

B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Savile, SIR HENRY (*Bradley, nr Halifax 30 XI 1549; ∞c. 1592 Margaret Dacres; †Eton 19 II 1621/22), English scholar, immensely learned in profane literature. A mathematician and Greek scholar who founded Professorships of geometry and astronomy, he was Warden of Merton College, Oxford (1585) and, though not ordained, Provost of Eton (1596), where he set up a press which printed his great edition of St John* Chrysostom.

Four bookes of the Histories of Cornelius Tacitus (tr.; 1591).—Rerum Anglicarum scriptores (1596); Xenophon, Cyropaedia (1613); Chrysostom, Works (8 vols, 1610–12). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Savinio, ALBERTO, pseud. of ANDREA DE CHIRICO (*Athens 25 VIII 1891; †Rome 6 IV 1952), Italian painter, musician, novelist, essayist and playwright. By virtue of his remarkable versatility Savinio occupies a unique position in modern Italian culture. Brother of the Italian painter Giorgio de Chirico, he lived as a young man first in Germany, where he studied composition under Max Reger, and later in Paris, where he was the friend of Apollinaire* and Max Jacob*. He was associated with Cardarelli's* review La

Ronda. He is an original writer, Tutta la vita (1945) being his most characteristic work.

J.F.C. (B.M.)

NARRATIVE: La casa ispirata (1925); Achille innamorato (1938); Infanzia di Nivasio Dolcemare (1941).—PLAYS: Capitano Ulisse (1934); Alceste di Samuele (1949).—VARIOUS: Dico a te Clio (1940); Ascolto il tuo cuore, città (1944). B.M.

Savinkov, BORIS: see Ropshin, V.

Saviozzo: see Serdini, SIMONE.

Savonarola, GIROLAMO (*Ferrara 21 IX 1452; †Florence 23 V 1498), Italian preacher and reformer. Savonarola's early years were spent at Ferrara where his father was physician to the Este family. Even as a young man he was oppressed by the corruption and vanity of the world, as his two Latin poems De ruina mundi (1472) and De ruina ecclesiae (1475) testify. In 1475 he left Ferrara secretly to join the Dominican Order at Bologna, whence he was transferred in 1482 to the convent of San Marco at Florence. Then, at the centre of Renaissance culture and in the middle of what Guicciardini* later described as a golden age, he began his series of dark prophetic sermons with their constant theme of the corruption of Christendom soon to be justly punished so that the Church might be born again to a new life. Except for the years 1487–90 he continued to preach on these lines to crowds of ecstatic followers until his death.

His religious ideals naturally led him into politics, but he unfortunately made common cause with the invader Charles VIII of France, whom he saw as God's instrument for the scourging and renewal of the Church. Savonarola was the inspiration behind the 'popular republic' set up in Florence, with Christ as spiritual king, after Piero de' Medici's surrender to the French in 1494; but after the French withdrawal from Italy Savonarola's defiance of Rome even in the face of excommunication brought about his downfall in 1498 as a result of factional intrigue, and he was burnt at the stake as a heretic.

Savonarola has been variously hailed as a prophet and martyr in the cause of religious and political reform, and condemned for unorthodoxy. His failure has been explained as an anachronistic attempt to return to the Middle Ages, but his writings, sermons, treatises and poems bear witness to the sincerity of his ideals, while the vivid fervour of his style goes far to explain the extraordinary hold which his eloquence maintained over the people of Florence.

P. Ginori Conti, Bibliografia delle opere di S., I (1939); M. Ferrara, Bibliografia savonaroliana (1958).—Prediche italiane ai Fiorentini (I and II ed. F. Cognasso, 1930; III ed. R. Palmarocchi, 1933–35; covers 1494–96); Lettere (ed. R. Ridolfi, 1933); Prediche e scritti (ed. M. Ferrara, 1930, 1952; good sel., full biblio. and essay on S.'s influence on art and lit.); Trattato circa il reggimento della città di Firenze (ed. G. F. Romanello, 1954); Poesie (ed. M. Martelli, 1968).—Edizione Nazionale of S.'s works (directed R. Ridolfi, 12 vols, 1955– ).

P. Villari, Storia di G. S. (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1887–88; Life and Times of S., tr. L. Villari, 1888); P. Luotto, Il vero S. e il S. di L. Pastor (1897); L. Pastor, Geschichte der Päpste, III (7th ed. 1924); G. Schnitzer, S. (2 vols, 1924); Studi Savonaroliani (1935); G. Spini, 'Introduzione al S.' in Belfagor, III (1948); R. Ridolfi, Vita di G. S. (2 vols, 1952; Eng. tr. C. Grayson, 1959); E. Garin, Ritratti di umanisti (1967).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Saxo Grammaticus, 12th-century Danish historical writer. Nothing is known of him, but it is known that his great work, Gesta Danorum, must have been written between 1185 and 1222. Of its 16 books the first nine cover prehistoric Danish antiquity: Christianity was now so firmly established in Denmark that even a member of the clergy (as Saxo presumably was) could afford to record these pagan legends and heroic poems. Some of them date back (e.g. the legend of Uffe) to the 4th century, and those about the skjoldunger (the first legendary kings) to the 7th–11th centuries. Almost identical names appear in Beowulf*, which is set among the 'Sea-Danes'. One of the stories is the legend of Amleth, which was used by Shakespeare* in Hamlet. These first nine books of Saxo have little historical value but are unique in their highly dramatic quality—rendered in eloquent Latin which must often have contrasted unfavourably with the brief, saga-like style of the original legends.

In Saxo's chronicle three heroic poems stand out, in which it is sometimes possible to discern the originals, the oldest known poetry of Denmark. Bjarkemaaleet is an incitement to war; Ingjaldskvadet is in praise of the old warlike spirit; Hagbard and Signe is a tragic, but unsentimental love story against a background of family feuds.

Saxo's purpose when he wrote his history was to demonstrate to the world that Denmark was an ancient country with old traditions. He was inspired by a patriotism centred on the King as the symbol of national unity. His history is Denmark's first contribution to world literature.

Gesta Danorum (1st ed. Paris, 1514; 2 vols, 1931–48; The First Nine Books of the Danish History of S. G., tr. O. Elton, 1894).

Angers-Fragmentet af et Haandskrift af S. G. (ed. C. Bruun, 1879); A. Olrik, Kilderne til S.s Oldhistorie (2 vols, 1892–94); C. Weibull, S. (1915); C. Behrend, R. Pauli and C. S. Petersen, Apoteker Sibbersens Saxobog (1927); H. Schneider, Germanische Heldensage (2 vols, 1928–34);

V. Madsen, Et Saxoproblem (1930) and Om den nye Udgave af S.'s Danmarks Historie (1936).—J. Plumtree, Observations on Hamlet, and on the motives which most probably induced Shakespeare to fix upon the story of Amleth from the Danish Chronicle of S. G. for the plot of that tragedy (1796); R. G. Latham, Two Dissertations on the Hamlet of S. G. and Shakespear (1872); Kemp Malone, The Literary History of Hamlet (1923); Sir I. Gollancz, The Sources of Hamlet (1926).

E.B.

Sayat-Nova, pseud. of HARUTHIUN (*Tiflis c. 1712; †1795), Armenian minstrel. He started life as a weaver, composed many songs in Armenian, Azeri Turkish and Georgian which he sang to his own accompaniment on the saz, and became the court minstrel of King Erekle II of Georgia. Retiring after his wife's death to a monastery (1770), he was killed by Shah Agha Muhammad's troops who sought to suppress a Georgian rebellion, having reputedly refused to renounce his faith with the improvised East Turkish verses çikmanam killisadan, dönmanam Isadan ('I shall not leave the Church, I shall not turn from Jesus'). Only 161 of his songs have been preserved, mainly love-songs. He dwells on the ambiguity and precariousness of the human condition, the ills of the world, the joys and pains of love and one's duty to love God, honour, the poor, the stranger. His imagery, derived from jewels, precious metals, silks and brocades, is somewhat artificial, perhaps typical of any 18th-century court poet. His language is the vernacular of his time and region, full of Persian and Turkish loan-words. His songs have a fresh and poignant beauty, and many (e.g. There Is None Like Thee; Whence Comest Thou, Wandering Nightingale?) are still frequently performed.

Ed. G. Akhverdian (Moscow, 1852).—Sel. tr. Z. C. Boyadjian, Armenian Legends and Poems (1916; 1958); Fr. trs: A. Tchobanian, Les troubadours arméniens (1906); L.-A. Marcel in Cahiers du Sud, CCCXLII (1957); Russ. trs: V. Y. Briusov, Poeziya Armenii (Moscow, 1916); S.-N. (Erevan, 1963).

S.-N. (ed. M. S. Hasrathian, Erevan, 1963).

C.J.F.D.

Sayers, DOROTHY LEIGH (*Oxford 13 VI 1893; ∞1926 Atherton Fleming; †Witham, Essex 18 XII 1957), English detective novelist and playwright. She has written well-devised and exciting detective novels several of which through clever characterization and description have the merits of novels of character; also, successful plays for stage and wireless, mostly on religious themes.

DETECTIVE NOVELS: Clouds of Witness (1926); Strong Poison (1930); The Five Red Herrings (1931); Murder Must Advertise (1933); The Nine Tailors (1934); Gaudy Night (1935); Busman's

Honeymoon (1937).—PLAYS: The Zeal of Thy House (1937); The Devil to Pay (1939); The Man Born to be King (1943); The Just Vengeance (1946).—ESSAYS: The Mind of the Maker (1941); Unpopular Opinions (1946); Introductory Papers on Dante (1954).—Tr., Dante, Inferno (1949), Purgatorio (1955), Paradiso (part; 1962).

F. Wölcken, Der literarische Mord (1953).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

AL-Sayyāb, BADR SHĀKIR (*Jaykur, Iraq 1926; †Baghdad 1964), Iraqi Arab poet, who gained wide fame throughout the Arab world. He began as a romantic poet, a follower of the Egyptian 'Alī Maḥmūd Ṭāhā*, then embraced Socialist Realism, thereby suffering as a result of his Communist activities, but subsequently became disillusioned with Communism and turned to Symbolist poetry, in which under the influence of modern English poetry, especially T. S. Eliot*, he resorted to the use of mythology. He helped to spread the new form of Arabic verse which departs from the traditional Arabic metres.

VERSE: Azhār dhābila (1947); Asāṭir (1950); Ḥaffār al-qubūr (1952); al-Mūmis al-'amyā (1954); al-Asliha wa'l-afāl (1954); Unshūdat al-maṭar (1960); al-Ma'bad al-ghariq (1962); Manzil al-aqnān (1963); Shanāshil ibnat al-ghalab (1965); Iqbāl (1965).—Anthologie de la littérature arabe contemporaine: La poésie (tr. Luc Norin and Édouard Tarabay, Paris, 1967).

S. Jargy, 'Poètes arabes d'avant-garde' in Orient, XVIII (1961) and XXI (1962); P. Minganti, 'B. S. S.' in Annali dell'Istituto Universitario Orientale di Napoli, XIV (1964); M. A. Khouri and H. Algar, 'Modern Arabic poetry' in Jour. Arabic Lit., I (1970).

M.M.B.

Sbarbaro, CAMILLO (*Santa Margherita Ligure 12 I 1888; †Savona 31 X 1967), Italian poet and prose-writer, a member of La Voce group. After the metrical experiments of the Futurists and the sentimentalism of the crepuscular poets (Gozzano*), there is a certain sobriety about Sbarbaro's poetry which paves the way for Montale*.

POETRY: Pianissime (1914; rev. ed. 1954); Rimanenze (1955); Primizie (1958); Poesie (1961).—PROSE: Trucioli (1920; defn. ed. 1948); Scampoli (1960).

B.M.

Scaliger, JULIUS CAESAR (*Padua or Riva 1484; ∞1529 Andiette de Roques-Lobejac; †Agen 21 X 1558), Italian humanist, critic and physician. A typical man of the Renaissance, Scaliger fought with distinction in the Franco-Italian wars, became a Franciscan Friar, returned to soldiering, then settled down as physician to the Bishop of Agen, married and had 15 children, the tenth of whom was the great classical scholar JOSEPH JUSTUS SCALIGER (1540–1609). He studied omnivorously throughout his life and engaged in violent controversy with Erasmus*, as the champion of the Ciceronians, with E. Dolet and Rabelais*. All his writings are in Latin. His Poetics libri septem (1561), which interpreted in simplified and dogmatic form the literary theories of Aristotle*, had a formative effect on French classical literature and particularly on tragedy (e.g. the doctrine of the unities). For nearly a century French critics knew Aristotle chiefly through Scaliger.

A. Magen, Documents sur J. C. S. et sa famille (1873); E. Lintilhac, De J. C. Scaligeri poetice (1887); G. B. Saintsbury, History of Criticism in Europe, II (1902); R. Bray, Formation de la doctrine classique en France (1927); W. F. Paterson, Three Centuries of French Poetic Theory (Ann Arbor, 1935).

G.B.

Scarron, Paul (~Paris 4 VII 1610; ∞1652 Françoise d'Aubigné; †ibid. 7 X 1660), French writer. After an exuberant youth Scarron became a cripple (1638), allegedly through plunging into the icy river Sarthe at Le Mans in carnival-time. In Paris he acquired great popularity as a broad-humoured poet and wit, married the future Mme de Maintenon and died of his infirmities. His work reflects a love of humorous exaggeration based largely on Spanish models. His Roman comique, one of the few realistic novels of the period, deals with the adventures of a troupe of strolling players. His parody of the Aeneid and his other anti-heroic poems made him the foremost French exponent of BURLESQUE. His comedies, also derived from Spain, are masterpieces of the ridiculous, expressed in ingeniously exuberant dialogue.

VERSE: Les Œuvres burlesques (1643–51); Typhon ou la Gigantomachie (1644); Virgile travesti (1648–59; ed. V. Fournel, 1858); Épîtres chagrines (1659); Poésies diverses (ed. M. Cauchie, 1948).—Le Roman comique (novel; 1651–57; ed. V. Fournel, 1857).—PLAYS: Jodelet, ou Le Maître Valet (1643); Jodelet duelliste (1645); Don Japhet d'Arménie (1647; ed. R. Garapon, 1967); Le Marquis ridicule (1655); La Fausse Apparence (1657).—Œuvres (ed. A. A. Bruzen de la Martinière, 10 vols, Amsterdam, 1737).

P. Morillot, S. et le genre burlesque (1888); E. Magne, S. et son milieu (1923); L. Giraud-Badin, Bibliographie générale des œuvres de S. (1924); H. C. Lancaster, History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, II (1932); R. Garapon, La fantaisie verbale et le comique dans le théâtre français (1957); F. Bar, Le genre burlesque en France au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle. Étude de style (1960).

G.B.

Scève, MAURICE (*?Lyons ?1501; †?ibid. c. 1560), French poet. The leader of the Lyons poets, through whom Italian Renaissance poetry first reached France, Scève was the earliest and most accomplished French exponent of PETRARCHISM. His chief work, Délie, is a long collection of dizains (ten-line stanzas on four rhymes) hymning a platonic mistress, partly identifiable with Perrette du* Guillet. He also wrote an eclogue, La Saulsaye, and Microcosme, a long philosophic and religious poem inspired by the Book of Genesis. Scève's subtle and difficult work was long obscured by the more accessible poetry of the PLÉIADE, which it preceded; he has enjoyed a recent revival. Little is known of his life and nothing definite of his last years.

Délie, objet de la plus haute vertu (1544; complete in A.-M. Schmidt, Poètes du XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle, 1953; crit. eds: E. Parturier, 1916; I. D. McFarlane, 1966); Saulsaye, églogue de la vie solitaire (1547); Microcosme (1562).—Œuvres poétiques complètes (ed. P. Guégan, 1927).

A. Baur, M. S. et la Renaissance lyonnaise (1906); H. Chamard, Les origines de la poésie française de la Renaissance (1920); V. L. Saulnier, M. S. (2 vols, 1948); P. Boutang, Commentaire sur 49 dizains (1953). E.B.

Schack, HANS EGEDE (*Sengeløse 2 II 1820; ∞1854 Fanny Vendela Armida Hebbe; †Schlangensbad, nr Frankfurt 20 VII 1859), Danish novelist. He took his degree in law at Copenhagen and for a period took an active interest in politics. His only novel is an analysis of excessive day-dreaming, full of witty satire against contemporary literary fashion.

Phantasterne (1857; ed. with intro. H. Hertel, 1970); Sandhed med Modification (ed. with intro. idem, 1968).—Breve (1959).

Omkring Phantasterne (ed. H. Hertel, 1969). E.B.

Schade, JENS AUGUST (*Skive 20 I 1903), Danish poet. His poetry is a highly original mixture of grotesque humorism, outspoken eroticism and cosmic surrealism. Even his prose is clearly written by a poet.

VERSE: Den levende Violin (1926); Sjov i Danmark (1928); Hjertebogen (1930); Jordens Ansigt (1932); Kærlighed og Kildevand (1936); Kællingedigte (1944); Jordens største Lykke (1949); Til en uartig Pige (1949); Schades Højsang (1958); Schades erotiske Univers (1967).—Udvalgte Digte (1962).—PROSE: Den himmelske Elskov på Jorden (1931); En mærkelig Aften i Verdens Historie (1933); En eneste stor Hemmelighed (1937); Kommode-Tyven (1939); Verdenshistorier (1940); Kærlighedens Symfoni (1942); Mennesker mødes, og sød Musik opstår i Hjertet (1944); Jeg er tosset efter dig (1945); Schade-Dramatik (2 vols, 1963–66); Danmarksrejse (1970).

V. Schade, Den lyse Digter S. (1963). E.B.

Schaeppman, JOHANNES ALOYSIUS MARIA (*Tubbergen 2 III 1844; †Rome 21 I 1903), Dutch priest-poet and statesman-journalist. He wrote oratorical poetry and admired Da* Costa.

Parijs (1872); Napoleon (1873); Aya Sophia (1886); Menschen en boeken (5 vols, 1893–1905); Chronica over staatkunde en letteren (3 vols, 1901–03).

J. Persijn, J. A. M. S. (3 vols, 1912–16); Seerp Anema, Eerherstel voor S.'s Aya Sophia (1918); G. Brom, S. (with biblio.; 1936). J.W.W.

Schäfer, WILHELM (*Ottrau 20 I 1868; †Überlingen 19 I 1952), German writer of anecdotes, novelist and essayist. His work is characterized by a neo-classic prose style, a sense of humour and strong nationalism. He revived an old literary genre—the anecdote.

Der Lebenstag eines Menschenfreundes (Pestalozzi novel; 1915); Die dreizehn Bücher der deutschen Seele (1922); Der Hauptmann von Köpenick (novel; 1930); Hundert Histröchen (1940).—Gesamtausgabe der Novellen (1943); Gesamtausgabe der Anekdoten (3 vols, 1943).

C. Höfer, W.-S.-Bibliographie (2 vols, 1937–43); G. K. Eten, Stil und Weltbild in S.s Anekdoten (1938). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Schandorph, SOPHUS CHRISTIAN FREDERIK (*Ringsted 8 V 1836; ∞1867 Ida Sofie Branner; †Frederiksberg 1 I 1901), Danish novelist and short-story writer; teacher in Copenhagen. His early poetry is of very little importance, but he gained a wide reputation as a leading realist, with his novels and short stories, of which only very few have survived.

Fortællinger (2 vols, 1901); Romaner. Folkeudgave (6 vols, 1904–05).

Georg Brandes, Det moderne Gennembruds Mænd (1883). E.B.

Schaper, EDZARD (*Ostrowo, Posen 30 IX 1908), German novelist, journalist, author of many short stories and books on religion. Having fled from the Nazis and the Russians, who sentenced him to death for his journalistic activity, he lived in Scandinavia, accepted Finnish citizenship in 1944, before finally settling in Switzerland. Converted to Roman Catholicism in 1951, he has since established himself as one of the leading Catholic writers in German.

NOVELS: Die sterbende Kirche (1935, 1953); Der Henker (1940); Die Freiheit des Gefangenen (1950); Macht und Freiheit (1961).—SHORT STORIES: Stern über der Grenze (1950); Star Over the Frontier, tr. I. and F. McHugh, 1960; Das Tier (1958); The Dancing Bear, tr. N. Denny, 1961; Dragonergeschichte (1963).—OTHER WORKS: Das Leben Jesu (1936); Bürger in Zeit und Ewigkeit (autobiog.; 1956).

M. Wehrli, 'Zum Werk E. S.s' in Schweizer

Monatshefte (1950); E. Heimgartner, Die Erzählungen E. S.'s (1958); W. Grenzmann, 'E. S.' in Dichtung und Glaube (1960). F.M.K.

Schatz, Zevi (*Romny, Ukraine 24 XII 1890; †nr Jaffa 1921), Hebrew novelist and poet. His early poetry and stories are in Russian. In Palestine, however, influenced by Brenner*, he began writing in Hebrew. He wrote the first Hebrew poems in the modern 'Sephardic' prosody. His short stories gave first-hand accounts of the Palestinian pioneers. His longer story, Batyah, was adapted for the Palestinian theatre.

Al Gevul ha-Dmama (coll. short stories; 1929). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Schede (SCHEDIUS), PAUL: see Melissus, PAULUS.

Scheffauer, HERMAN GEORGE, pseud. R. L. ORCHELLA (*San Francisco 3 II 1878; †Berlin 6 X 1927), German-American author and translator.

Das Land Gottes (1923); The New Vision in the German Arts (1924); Das geistige Amerika von heute (1924); Wenn ich Deutscher wäre! (1925); Das Champagnerschiff (1925). E.R.

Scheffel, JOSEF VIKTOR VON (*Karlsruhe 16 II 1826; ∞1864 Karoline von Malsen [o/o 1867]; †ibid. 9 IV 1886), German poet and novelist. He became increasingly restless and melancholic. Having studied law, he wished to paint, but wrote three popular favourites: the narrative poem Der Trompeter von Säckingen, whose gaudy sweetness finally became hackneyed; Ekkehard, where his own emotional experience enlivened remote historical material; and Gaudeamus, a collection of drinking-songs.

Der Trompeter von Säckingen (1854; 332nd ed. 1921; Eng. tr. J. Beck and L. Lorimer, 1893); Ekkehard (1862; 224th ed. 1921; Eng. tr. S. Delfs, 1867); Gaudeamus, Lieder aus dem Engern und Weitem (1868; Eng. tr. C. G. Leland, 1872); Bergpsalmen (1870; Eng. tr. F. B. Brünnow, 1882).—Gesammelte Werke (ed. F. Panzer, 4 vols, 1919); Lebensbild in Briefen (ed. W. Klinke, 1948).

J. Proelss, S.s Leben und Dichten (1887); Jahrbuch des S.-Bundes (1890 ff.); W. Klinke, S. Lebensbild in Briefen (1947).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schehadé, GEORGES (*Alexandria 2 XI 1907), Lebanese poet and dramatist, writing in French. His Poésies (I, 1938; II, 1948; III, 1949), collected into one slim volume (1952), are sparkling and richly textured. This interweaving of images inspired by Surrealism, and by the East where he has always lived, has also given rise to poetic and subtle plays whose verbal inventiveness is tempered by delicacy and gentleness.

POETRY: Poésies V (1970).—PLAYS: Monsieur Bob'le (1951); La soirée des proverbes (1954); Histoire de Vasco (1956); Les violettes (1960); Le voyage (1961); L'émigré de Brisbane (1965).

Cahiers de la Compagnie Renaud-Barrault, IV (1954), XVII (1956) and XXXIV (1961); G. Bounoure, Marelles sur le parvis (1958); L. Pronko, 'Poetry and priority, the theatre of G. S.' in Fr. Rev., XXVI.5 (1958); J. P. Richard, Onze études sur la poésie moderne (1964); J. Silenicks, 'G. S., the transfiguration of a poetic theatre' in Mod. Drama, X.2 (1967). M.G.

Schein, JOHANN HERMANN (*Grünhain 20 I 1586; †Leipzig 19 XI 1630), German composer and poet, who set his own poems to music in the Italian style and introduced native baroque elements into the poetry of the 'Gesellschaftslied' of which, with JACOB REGNART (†c. 1600) and HANS LEO HASSLER (1564–1612), he was one of the principal musical exponents.

Venuskränzelein (1609); Musica boscareccia (1621–43); Diletti pastorali, Hirtenlust (1624).—Complete works (ed. A. Prüfer, 7 vols, 1901–19).

A. Prüfer, J. H. S. (1895) and J. H. S. und das weltliche deutsche Lied des 17. Jh. (1908); Günther Müller, Geschichte des deutschen Liedes (1925); W. Brauer, 'Jacob Regnart, J. H. S. und die Anfänge des deutschen Barock' in Dichtung und Volkstum, XVII (1939); A. Adrio, 'J. H. S.' in F. Blume, Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart, II (biblio.; 1963). L.W.F.

Schelling, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (*Leonberg 27 I 1775; ∞26 VI 1803 Caroline Schlegel*; †Ragaz 20 VIII 1854), German Romantic philosopher. He studied theology at the University of Tübingen in the renowned Tübinger Stift, together with Hölderlin* and Hegel*. In 1798, recommended by Goethe* and Fichte*, he lectured at Jena where he was closely linked with the Romantic circle. Professorships at Würzburg, Munich and Berlin followed. The philosophic spokesman of Romantic thought and ideals, Schelling has become the father of existential tendencies at work in modern art. He came near to making a religion of art, which he considered as the ultimate blend of nature and spirit. He composed verse, but his philosophy itself was the creation of poetic imagination, an organic process of inner experience and intuition which coincides with the evolutionary drive of the universe. Contemporary preoccupation with the human subconscious and the collective unconscious has led to a significant revival of Schelling's basic tenets. This is especially true of the relative importance he attaches to being and thinking: 'I am, therefore I think' as opposed to Descartes* 'I think, therefore I am'.

Das Verhältnis der bildenden Künste zur Natur (1807; Eng. tr. J. E. Cabot, 1913–15); Philosophische Untersuchungen über das Wesen der

menschlichen Freiheit (1809; Eng. tr. J. Gutmann, 1936); Zur Geschichte der neueren Philosophie (1826 ff.); System des transzendentalen Idealismus (1890; facs. 1924; Eng. tr. T. Davison, 1871).—Über die Gottheiten von Samothrake (1815; tr. F. de Wolfe Bolman in The Ages of the World, 1942); Sämtliche Werke (ed. K. F. A. Schelling, 14 vols, 1856–61; ed. M. Schröter, 6 vols, 6 supps, 1927–56, 2nd ed. 1956– ); Gedichte (ed. E. Schmidt, 1913); Briefe und Dokumente (ed. H. Fuhrmans, 1962– ).

J. Knittermeyer, S. und die romantische Schule (1929); H. Fuhrmans, S.s letzte Philosophie (1940); K. T. Bluth, 'The revival of S.' in Horizon, XII.69 (1945); H. Zeltner, S. (1954); E. Benz, S. (1955); K. Jaspers, S. (1955); S.-Studien (ed. A. M. Koktanek, 1965).—G. Schneeberger, F. W. J. von S. Bibliographie (1954). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schendel, ARTHUR FRANCOIS EMILE VAN (*Djakarta 5 III 1874; ∞1902 Bertha Jacoba Zimmermann, ∞1908 Annie de Boers; †Amsterdam 11 IX 1946), Dutch poet, story writer and primarily novelist. His first novel, Drogon (1896), immediately proved him a master. He never followed fashionable trends. Beginning with romantic short novels set in the Italian Middle Ages, he later turned to Dutch subject-matter, when he lived in Italy: religious guilt feelings, landscape and life in a small town. His impressively numerous novels present a personal interpretation of 'the Dutch fate'. His style is straightforward and efficient, yet poetical; his psychology refined, though perhaps slightly too restrained, lacking any kind of biological directness.

PROSE: Een zwerver verliefd (1904); Een zwerver verdwaald (1907); De schoone jacht (1908); De berg van droomen (1913); Verhalen (1917); Der liefde bloesems (1921); Angiolino en de lente (1923); Merona, een edelman (1927); Fratilamur (1928); Florentijnsche verhalen (1929); Het fregat-schip Johanna Maria (1930; Eng. tr. Brian Downs, 1935); Jan Compagnie (1932); De waterman (1933; Eng. tr. Neline C. Clegg, 1963); Herinneringen van een dommen jongen (1934); Een Hollandsch drama (1935); The House in Haarlem, tr. M. S. Stephens, 1939); Nachtgedaanten (1938); De wereld een dansfeest (1938); Anders en eender (1939); De zeven tuinen (1939); Mijnheer Oberon en mevrouw (1940); Het spel der natuur (1942); Het oude huis (1946); Voorbijgaande schaduwen (1948); Een zindelijke wereld (1950); De pleziervaart (1951).—Pandorra (play; 1919); De Nederlanden (verse; 1945); Herdenkingen (verse with prose; 1950).

Menno ter Braak, In gesprek met de vorigen (1938); J. Greshoff, Over A. van S. (1942); R. Pulinckx, A. van S. (1944); F. Batten et al., Lof van A. van S. (1945); G. H. 's-Gravesande, A. van S. (with biblio.; 1949); G. Stuiveling, Steekproeven (1950); J. Noë, A. van S. (1961);

F. W. van Heerikhuizen, Het werk van A. van S. (1961); H. P. A. van Eyck, Mededelingsvormen bij A. van S. (1965). J.J.O.

Scherenberg, CHRISTIAN FRIEDRICH (*Stettin 5 V 1798; †Zehlendorf, Berlin 9 IX 1881), German poet. After a varied career as an actor, man-of-affairs and official he became the centre and hero of the Berlin literary society, Tunnel über der Spree. As the representative type and personification of the inspired poet he was made immortal in Theodor Fontane's* S. und das literarische Berlin 1840–60 (1885). He reached the summit of his poetic achievement with his verse-play Waterloo (1848). But even before he reached old age he was unjustly forgotten or, at least, overlooked. As a minor but highly-gifted poet he deserves resurrection and recognition even in our time.

Vermischte Gedichte (1845); Ligny (1846); Leuthen (1852); Abukir, die Schlacht am Nil (1856); Hohenfriedberg (1868).—Ausgewählte Dichtungen (ed. H. Spiero, 1914); Metrical Translations and Poems (sel. tr. F. H. Hedge and A. L. Wister, 1888).

R. Ulich, S. (1915). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Scherfig, HANS (*Copenhagen 8 IV 1905; ∞1931 Elisabeth Karlinsky), Danish novelist and essayist. He was an artist long before he began to write, and the charming jungle fantasies in his paintings have gained much admiration. He is the elegant satirist among contemporary Danish novelists, and all his novels, always disguised as detective stories, are full of acid satire. Thus Det forsømte Foraar (1940) is a witty attack on the stupidity of secondary-school education, and Idealister (1945; The Idealists, tr. N. Walford, 1949) ridicules the many idealistic sects, each with its own easy remedy for improving the world. In his essays he expresses an intellectual Communism.

NOVELS: Den døde Mand (1937); Den forsvundne Fuldmægtig (1938); Skorpionen (1953); Frydenholm (1962); Den fortabte Abe (1964).—ESSAYS: Danmark i Lys og Skygge (1947); Biologisk Besættelse (1948); Hellas (1949); Rejse i Sovjetunionen (1951); Paa vej ind i vandmanden (1951); Den gloende Drage over Roskilde (1959); Tre Digtere (1963); En Boggave (1965); Naturens Verden (1965); Dammen (1971); Morgenrødens Land (1971). E.B.

Schermer, LUCAS (*Haarlem 5 IX 1688; †ibid. 10 II 1711), Dutch poet. During his unfinished studies and subsequent years of illness he wrote traditional pastorals, country songs and occasional poems with mythological figures, repeatedly distinguished by passages of poetical beauty.

J.W.W.

PLAYS: Atalante in den hof van Kalidon (1711); Meleager en Atalante (1712; ed. C. M. Geerars, 1966).—Gedichten (verse; with biog. P. Vlamming, 1712).

W. Kloos, Een daad van eenvoudige rechtvaardigheid (1909); M. M. Prinsen, De idylle in de 18e eeuw (1934). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Schickele, RENÉ (*Oberehnheim, Alsace 4 VIII 1883; †Sanary, France 31 I 1940), German novelist, poet and essayist. Part French, part German, prophet of a united Europe, he fought against war and national prejudice with French esprit and German Gründlichkeit. His best-known work is the novel trilogy Das Erbe am Rhein (3 vols, 1926–31; tr. H. Waller, I, Maria Capponi, II, The Heart of Alsace, 1928–29).

Werke (ed. H. Kesten, 3 vols, 1960–61).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Schildt, ERNST RUNAR (*Helsingfors 26 X 1888; †ibid. 29 IX 1925), Finnish-Swedish prose writer and dramatist. Of middle-class origin, he inherited melancholic tendencies from his father, and committed suicide in spite of considerable success as an author. Even in his earliest stories he showed notable mastery of form and style (e.g. Den segrande Eros, 1912), modelled on Hjalmar Söderberg*, and, as he matured, while retaining these powers, he treated a wider range of subjects with increasing depth.

STORIES: Asmodeus och de tretton själarna (1915); Regnbågen (1916); Rönnbruden (1917); Perdita (1918); Hemkomsten (1919); Häxskogen (1920).—PLAYS: Galgmannen (1922; 'The Gallows Man', tr. in Scandinavian Plays of the XXth Century, I, 1924); Den stora rollen (1923); Lyckoriddaren (1923).—Samlade skrifter (6 vols, 1926).

G. Castrén, R. S. (1927); H. Söderhjelm, Författareprofilen (1938); H. Cederlöf, Stilstudier i R. S.s novellistik (1967). B.M.E.M. (I.S.)

Schiller, JOHANN CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH (*Marbach 10 XI 1759; ∞1790 Charlotte von Lengefeld; †Weimar 9 V 1805), German dramatist. Schiller wished to enter the Church but was conscripted in 1773 into Duke Karl Eugen of Württemberg's military academy, where he remained until 1780. Die Räuber (1781) expresses the tension of this long restraint. It aroused the anger of Karl Eugen, who forbade Schiller (now a regimental doctor in Stuttgart) to write further. Schiller therefore fled in 1782 to Mannheim, then to Bauerbach. After a winter at Bauerbach, where he wrote Kabale und Liebe (1784) and began Don Carlos (1787), Schiller returned to Mannheim as salaried dramatist in 1783. From a hopeless love affair he escaped in 1785 to Leipzig, where Gottfried Körner, father of the poet Theodor Körner*, offered him hospitality. After finishing Don Carlos Schiller visited Weimar and in 1789 accepted a Chair of history at Jena University. After a severe illness (1791) he received a substantial grant from Prince Augustenburg and Count Schimmellmann which he utilized to study Kant's* philosophy. In 1794, after years of antipathy, a friendship began between Schiller and Goethe*, who encouraged Schiller to resume creative writing. The later plays followed quickly and Schiller was working on Demetrius (unfinished, 1805) when he died. His last years, outwardly uneventful, were a triumph of will-power and intellect over disease and physical weakness.

Schiller's career falls into three periods. He was a writer of STURM UND DRANG (1781–84), expressing social criticism in quasi-realistic terms. From 1785 to 1796 he was mainly a historian and a philosopher. From 1796 until his death Schiller wrote mature verse plays, all exhibiting tense dramatic situations, noble rhetoric, sharp characterization and an exalted conception of the drama. In philosophy he was largely Kantian, but in aesthetics he maintained that psychological equilibrium is the aim of art. His historical works, though conscientious, reveal the rhetorical dramatist.

PLAYS: Die Verschwörung des Fiesco (1782); Wallenstein (1798); Maria Stuart (1800); Die Jungfrau von Orléans (1801); Die Braut von Messina (1803); Wilhelm Tell (1804).—VERSE: Anthologie auf das Jahr 1782 (1781); Xenien (with Goethe; 1796); Gedichte (2 vols, 1800–03).—NOVELS: Der Verbrecher aus Infamie (1786; as Der Verbrecher aus verlorener Ehre, 1802); Der Geisterseher (1787–89).—HISTORICAL: Geschichte des Abfalls der vereinigten Niederlande (1788); Geschichte des dreissigjährigen Krieges (1790–92); Belagerung von Antwerpen (1794).—PHILOSOPHICAL: Über den Grund des Vergnügens an tragischen Gegenständen (1792); Über die tragische Kunst (1792); Über Anmut und Würde (1793); Über das Pathetische (1793); Über die ästhetische Erziehung des Menschen (1795); Über naive und sentimentalische Dichtung (1795–96); Über das Erhabene (1801); Über den Gebrauch des Chors in der Tragödie (1803).—WORKS: Sämtliche Werke (ed. C. G. Körner, 12 vols, 1812–15); Säkular-Ausgabe (ed. E. von der Hellen, 16 vols, 1904–05); Horen-Ausgabe (ed. C. Schüddekopf and C. Höfer, 22 vols, 1910–26); Nationalausgabe (ed. J. Petersen and G. Fricke, 44 vols, 1943–; 16 pub. by 1969); Sämtliche Werke (ed. G. Fricke and H. G. Göpfert, 5 vols, 1958–).—LETTERS: Schillers Briefe (ed. F. Jonas, 7 vols, 1892–96); Briefwechsel zwischen Goethe und S. (ed. G. Gräf and A. Leitzmann, 3 vols, 1912); Schillers Briefwechsel mit Körner (ed. K. Goedeke and L. Geiger, 1893); Briefwechsel zwischen S. und Wilhelm von Humboldt (ed. A. Leitzmann, 1900).

C. G. Körner, S.s Leben (1812); T. Carlyle, The Life of F. S. (1925); C. von Wolzogen, S.s Leben (1830); K. Berger, S. (2 vols, 1905–09); J. G. Robertson, S. After a Century (1906);

L. Bellermann, S.s. Dramen (2 vols, 1911); E. Kühnemann, S. (1927); F. Strich, S. (1928); H. Cysarz, S. (1934); R. Buchwald, S. (2 vols, 1937; new ed. 1959); W. Witte, S. (1949); H. B. Garland, S. (1949) and S. the Dramatic Writer (1969); B. von Wiese, S. (1959); G. Storz, Der Dichter F. S. (1959); E. Staiger, S. (1967).

H.B.G.

Schimmel, HENDRIK JAN (*The Hague 30 VI 1823; ∞1865 Anna M. Kalff, ∞1873 Louise M. A. Kalff; †Bussum 14 XI 1906), Dutch novelist, playwright, critic and poet; founder of Het Nederlandsch Tooneel (1875), of outstanding importance because of his dramas and his leading role in theatrical matters. After a hard youth he ended as director of the Amsterdamsche Crediet Mij. Between 1851 and 1867 he was co-director of De Gids, from 1854 editor also of Nederland and from 1891 of Elsevier's Maandschrift. His first dramas were characterized by Romantic pathos; finally he found a more realistic style in his historical plays, based on pungent dialogue. His fame mainly rests on his historical novels, not always sound psychologically but clever and well-balanced, based on detailed study of the period.

VERSE: Verspreide gedichten (1852); Nieuwe gedichten (1857); Herfstloover (1871).—PLAYS: Twee Tudors (1847); Joan Woutersz (1847); Giovanni di Procida (1848); Oranje en Nederland (1849); Napoleon Bonaparte (1851); Schuld en boete (1852); Het kind van staat (1859); Struensee (1868); De kat van de Tower (1880); Dramatische werken (3 vols, 1884–85).—NOVELS: Bonaparte en zijn tijd (1853); De eerste dag eens nieuwen levens (2 vols, 1855); Een Haagsche Joffer (1856); Mary Hollis (3 vols, 1860; Eng. tr. A. V. W. Bikkers, 1872); My lady Carlisle (4 vols, 1864); Het gezin van baas van Ommeren (2 vols, 1870); Sinjeur Semeyns (3 vols, 1875); De Kaptein van de lijfgarde (1888; tr. The Lifeguardsman, 1896).

E. J. Potgieter, 'Hollandsche dramatische poëzie' in Studien en Schetsen, I (1879); C. Busken Huet, Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, II, XV (1881–88); H. Robbers, H. J. S. (1907); J. Prinsen J.Lzn., De oude en de nieuwe historische roman in Nederland (1919); B. Hunningher, Het dramatische werk van H. J. S. (1931); Jkvr. C. M. de Beaufort, De historische romans en novellen van H. J. S. (1943). J.W.W.

Schlaf, JOHANNES (*Querfurt 21 VI 1862; †ibid. 1 II 1941), German playwright and novelist; pioneer of German Naturalism of which, in co-operation with Arno Holz*, he wrote the first model works. He soon lost interest, however, always starting on new ideas, never coming to a conclusion. His short works like In Dingsda (1892) and Frühling (1896), idyllic sketches in lyric prose, are his best.

PLAYS: Die Familie Selicke (with A. Holz; 1890); Meister Ölze (1892).—NOVELS: Das dritte Reich (1900); Am toten Punkt (1909); Mutter Lise (1914); Die Wandlung (1922).—VERSE: Heldunkel (1899); Sommerlied (1905).—Aus meinem Leben (autobiog.; 1941); Grashalme (tr. of W. Whitman, Leaves of Grass; 1968).

J. S. Leben und Werk (ed. L. Bäte et al., 1933); L. Hempe, J. S.-Bibliographie (1938); S. Berger, J. S. (1941). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Schlegel, AUGUST WILHELM VON (*Hanover 6 IX 1767; ∞1796 Caroline Böhmer [o/o 1803], ∞1818 Sophie Paulus; †Bonn 12 V 1845), German translator, critic, poet and Orientalist. A nephew of J. E. Schlegel*, he was fostered at Göttingen by Bürger* and, after tutoring in Amsterdam, went to Jena (1796), where he wrote for Schiller's* Horen till quarrels followed. After a period of Berlin lectures he became Mme de Staël's* literary adviser and moved chiefly in her orbit till her death in 1817. He studied Sanskrit in Paris (1816–17) and as Professor in Bonn (1818) founded a Sanskrit press. With interpretative rather than creative gifts, he systematized and popularized—where his brother originated—Romantic theory. His major contributions to literature were his translations of Shakespeare* (1797–1810; 4 vols, 1967).

Über dramatische Kunst und Literatur (3 vols, 1809–11; Eng. J. Black, 1815); Poetische Werke (2 vols, 1811); Kritische Schriften (2 vols, 1828); Sämtliche Werke (ed. E. Böcking, 12 vols, 1846–47); Œuvres écrites en français (3 vols, 1846); Vorlesungen über schöne Literatur und Kunst (ed. J. Minor, 1884); Briefe von und an A. W. Schlegel (ed. J. Körner, 2 vols, 1930); Kritische Schriften und Briefe (ed. E. Lohner, 1962–).

B. von Brentano, A. W. S. (1943, 1949); P. de Pange, S. et Mme de Staël (1938; Ger. tr. 1940, 6th ed. 1949); G. Toynbee, A. W. S.'s Lectures on German Literature (ed. H. G. Fiedler, 1944); M. E. Atkinson, A. W. S. as a Translator of Shakespeare (1958). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schlegel, CAROLINE (*Göttingen 2 IX 1763; ∞1784 J. F. W. Böhmer [†1788], ∞1796 A. W. Schlegel [o/o 1803], ∞26 VI 1803 F. W. Schelling; †Maulbronn 7 IX 1809), German Romantic, daughter of the Orientalist J. D. Michaelis. Widowed at 25, she became entangled with revolutionaries in Mainz, fell into difficulties, married A. W. Schlegel* out of gratitude for his protection, but left him for Schelling*. She inspired Schlegel's Shakespeare* translations, collaborated in the Athenäum etc., but her brilliance chiefly spent itself in conversation and letter-writing.

Caroline: Briefe aus der Frühromantik (ed. E. Schmidt, 2 vols, 1913); Caroline. Leben in ihren Briefen (ed. R. Huch, 1914).

M. Schauer, C. S.-Schelling (1922); T. von Düring, K. S. (1942); K. Kern, Vom Genius der Liebe: Frauenschicksale der Romantik (1939); G. F. Ritchie, C. S.-Schelling in Wahrheit und Dichtung (1968). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schlegel, DOROTHEA, née MENDELSSOHN (*Berlin 24 X 1763; ∞1783 Simon Veit [o/o 1799], ∞1804 Friedrich Schlegel; †Frankfurt-am-Main 3 VIII 1839), German Romantic, daughter of Moses Mendelssohn*. A moving spirit among the early Romantics, she left Simon Veit for F. Schlegel*, whom she married 1804; jointly converted to Roman Catholicism 1808. Her one novel remained unfinished, but her spirited letters have made her one of the great women letter-writers.

Florentin (1801); Sammlung romantischer Dichtungen des Mittelalters (ed., with F. Schlegel; 2 vols, 1804); Lothar und Maller, eine Rittergeschichte (1805); Briefe von und an F. und D. S. (ed. J. Körner, 1926); Krisenjahre der Frühromantik (ed. idem, 2 vols, 1936-37).

J. M. Raich, D. von S. (2 vols, 1881); F. Deibel, D. S. als Schriftstellerin (1905); H. Finke, Über Friedrich und D. S. (1918). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schlegel, FRIEDRICH VON (*Hanover 10 III 1772; ∞1804 Dorothea Veit; †Dresden 12 I 1829), German writer, critic and Orientalist, younger brother of A. W. Schlegel*. Having escaped from a business career, he studied classical antiquity at Leipzig, showing outstanding brilliance. Alternating between Berlin and Jena (1796-1800), his ideas inspired the Romantics. He edited Das Athenäum (1798-1800) with his brother, and stimulated others. His tragedy Alarcos (1802) and his erotic novel Lucinde (1799) showed his own creative weakness, though his verse had more life than his brother's. Disagreement between their wives separated the brothers after 1800. In Paris (1802) F. Schlegel mastered Sanskrit, making important contributions to comparative philology and Oriental studies, and in 1808 became a Roman Catholic, thereafter living in Vienna. He was a key figure in the development of the modern spirit. Even at an early stage he turned his attention to all European and extra-European literatures, realized their interdependence, produced the first standard work on the language and wisdom of the Indian and founded modern literary criticism and literary history in Germany. His later studies of general and art history, philosophy, theology and science impelled him to strive for European integration.

Lucinde (1799; Eng. tr. P. B. Thomas, 1913-15); Über die neuere Geschichte (1811; Eng. tr. L. Purcell and R. H. Whitelock, 1849); Geschichte der alten und neuen Literatur (2 vols, 1815; Eng. tr. J. G. Lockhart, 1818); Philosophie der Geschichte (2 vols, 1829; Eng. tr. J. B. Robertson, 1835).—Sämtliche Werke (15 vols, 1846); Kritische Ausgabe

(ed. E. Behler et al., 35 vols, 1958- ).—F. S. und Novalis (letters; ed. M. Preitz, 1957).

J. Körner, F. S.s philosophische Lehrjahre (1935); E. Behler, F. S. (1966); W. Weiland, Der junge F. S. (1968). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schlegel, JOHANN ELIAS (*Meissen 17 I 1719; †Sorø, Denmark 13 VIII 1749), German dramatist. Schlegel was among Gottsched's* followers at Leipzig, but afterwards joined the opposing faction ('Bremer Beiträger'). In 1748 he became a teacher at the Danish Ritterakademie. His tragedies are on the French model as approved by Gottsched, but in his criticism he shows an unexpected appreciation of Shakespearean drama.

TRAGEDIES: Hermann (1741); Canut (1743).—COMEDIES: Der geschäftige Müßiggänger (1741); Der Triumph der guten Frauen (1748).—CRITICAL: Vergleichung Shakespeares und Andreas Gryphs (1742); Gedanken zur Aufnahme des dänischen Theaters (1749).—Werke (5 vols, 1761-70; sel. ed. F. Muncker in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XLIV, 1889); Ästhetische und dramaturgische Schriften (ed. J. von Antoniewicz, 1887).

E. Wolff, J. E. S. (1889); E. M. Wilkinson, J. E. S. as a German Pioneer in Aesthetics (1945); J. Salzbrunn, J. E. S. (1957). H.B.G.

Schleiermacher, FRIEDRICH DANIEL ERNST (*Breslau 21 XI 1768; ∞Henriette von Willich-Mühlenfels; †Berlin 12 II 1834), German theologian. Brought up a Moravian, he broke away in 1786 and studied theology and philosophy at Halle; was preacher at the Berlin Charité 1796, when he was influenced by F. Schlegel*; Professor in Halle (1804) and Berlin (1810). His defence of Schlegel's Lucinde shows how intimately he was linked with the Romantics. In Über die Religion he formulated the Romantic view of religion as an essentially personal matter—the poetry of the soul—where Christian doctrine was of lesser importance. His influential eloquence did much to bring about the end of the ENLIGHTENMENT.

Über die Religion (1799; Eng. tr. J. Oman, 1892); Monologen (1800; Eng. tr. H. L. Friess, 1926); Die Weihnachtsfeier (1806; Eng. tr. W. Hastie, 1890).—Sämtliche Werke (30 vols, 1834-64); Briefwechsel mit seiner Braut (ed. H. Meisner, 1919).

W. Dilthey, S.s Leben (1870; ed. H. Mulert, 1922); H. Meisner, S. als Mensch. Familien- und Freundesbriefe (2 vols, 1922) and S.s Lehrjahre (ed. H. Mulert, 1934); A. von Ungern-Sternberg, Freiheit und Wirklichkeit (1931); B. Bartelheimer, S. und die gegenwärtige S.-Kritik (1931); J. A. Chapman, An Introduction to S. (1932); R. Odebrecht, S.s System der Ästhetik (1932); H. Mulert, S. und die Gegenwart (1934); R. Brandt, The Philosophy of F. S. (1941); P. H. Jørgensen, Die Ethik S.s (1959); R. Niebuhr, S. on Christ and Religion (1964). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schlumberger, JEAN (*Guebwiller 26 V 1877; †Paris 25 X 1968), French novelist and essayist. By birth an Alsatian Protestant, Schlumberger was a friend of Gide*, whose psychological curiosity and moral preoccupations he shared. But with him this state of mental disquiet usually falls into a pattern of tranquillity, thanks to a moral sense, which relates him to the 'heroic' tradition of Corneille*. His style is quiet and disciplined, and the natural nobility of his character shows itself at its best in his finest novel, Saint-Saturnin (1931), the tragic story of a family.

NOVELS: L'inquiète paternité (1913); Un homme heureux (1921); L'enfant qui s'accuse (1927); Les yeux de 18 ans (1928); Histoire de 4 potiers (1935).—ESSAYS: Plaisir à Corneille (1936); Jalons (1941); Nouveaux jalons (1943); Passim (1955); Madeleine et André Gide (1956).

M. Delcourt, J. S. (1945); C. E. Magny, Histoire du roman français depuis 1918 (1950). M.G.; J.P.R.

Schmidt, ARNO (*Hamburg 18 I 1910), German novelist, essayist, critic, translator. He is the most radical and most controversial of Germany's avant-garde traditionalists. According to him the ENLIGHTENMENT, ROMANTICISM, and EXPRESSIONISM provide a source for his own formal experiments. He is a master of language games, cherishes mathematical puzzles and philological oddities, and in his most effective writings combines a naive belief in the all-powerful magic of language with a calculated contempt for his readers. He has translated works by Fenimore Cooper*, Poe*, Faulkner*, Pietro di Donato, and Peter Fleming.

NOVELS: Aus dem Leben eines Fauns (1953); Das steinerne Herz (1956); Die Gelehrtenrepublik (1957); Nobodaddy's Kinder (trilogy; 1963).—OTHER WORKS: Kosmas (1955); Fouqué (biog.; 1958); Berechnungen I und II (1959); Trommler beim Zaren (1966); Der Triton mit dem Sonnenschirm (radio-essays; 1969).

K. Schumann, 'Dichtung oder Bluff?' in Eckart, XXVII (1958); K. Schauder, 'A. S.s experimentelle Prosa' in Neue deutsche Hefte, XCIX (1964); M. Reich-Ranicki, 'A. S.s Werk oder Eine Selfmadeworld in Halbtrauer' in Literatur der kleinen Schritte (1967). F.M.K.

Schmidt-Barrien, HEINRICH (*Uthlede nr Bremen 19 I 1902), Low German writer and playwright. He writes psychological novels of suspense, his best being the story of an East Prussian refugee woman (De frömde Fro, 1952), and satirical comedies. He has adapted some of his works as radio plays and talks. He has been a strong advocate of poetry and of the theoretical value of Low German as a poetic language.

SHORT NOVELS: De Windmüller (1948); De

Spaasmaker (1960); De Moorkeerl (1968).—PLAYS: Klocken von guntsiet (1953); Nachtvagels (1964); Wi armen Armen (1964). G.C.

Schmidt Degener, F. (*Rotterdam 10 XII 1881; †Amsterdam 21 XI 1941), Dutch poet and essayist. His poetry shows affinities with that of his friend Paul Valéry*. He wrote essays on literature (Flaubert*, J. H. Leopold*) and art (Rembrandt, Jan Steen). He was director of the Amsterdam State Museum, the Rijksmuseum.

ESSAYS: Phoenix (1942); Het blijvend beeld der Hollandse kunst (1949); Rembrandt (1950).—De poort van Ishtar (play and coll. verse; 1945).

J.J.O.

Schmitthenner, ADOLF (*Neckarbischofsheim 24 V 1854; †Heidelberg 22 I 1907), German novelist. Das deutsche Herz (1908) was his contribution to the historical novel, a vogue which was then just coming to an end. His short stories, however, with their fine and roguish descriptions of people, are of more lasting appeal. R.W.L.

Novellen (1896); Leonie (1899); Neue Novellen (1907); Vergessene Kinder (1910); Treuherzige Geschichten (1912).—Das Tagebuch meines Urgrossvaters (ed. H. Daur, 1908).

E. Frommel, A. S. (1924). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Schnabel, JOHANN GOTTFRIED, pseud. GISANDER (*Sandersdorf nr Bitterfeld 7 XI 1692; †after 1750), German novelist. Schnabel is known to have served as a surgeon in the War of the Spanish Succession and then to have settled in Stolberg. His novel Die Insel Felsenburg (4 vols, 1731–43), influenced by Robinson Crusoe, embodies in its combination of individualistic adventurousness and middle-class quietism two important aspects of the age.

Der im Irrgarten der Liebe herumtaumelnde Cavalier (1738).—A. Stern, Der Dichter der Insel Felsenburg (1893); F. Brüggemann, Utopie und Robinsonade (1914). H.B.G.

Schnauffer, KARL HEINRICH (*Heimsheim, Württemberg 4 VII 1822; ∞V 1851 Elise Wilhelmine Moos; †Baltimore, Ohio 4 IX 1854), German-American poet, influenced by Béranger* and Freiligrath*. He founded the Baltimore Wecker.

VERSE: Todtenkränze (1850); Lieder und Gedichte aus dem Nachlasse (1879).—2 poems tr. in L. D. Smith, Flowers from Foreign Fields (1895).—König Karl I. oder Cromwell und die englische Revolution (drama; 1854).

A. E. Zucker in Dictionary of American Biography, XVI (1935); D. Cunz, 'Carl H. S.s literarische Versuche' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. Amer., LIX (1944). E.R.

Schneider, HEINRICH EMIL, pseud. E. SARTORIUS

(*Mühlberg, Elbe 29 I 1839; †Hoboken, N.J. 1928), German-American poet, successively bookseller, pastor and journalist.

VERSE: Aus der Tornistermappe eines preussischen Freiwilligen (1864); Das Wort der Wahrheit (1879); Die Psalmen in Sonetten (1881); Das Lied vom Prinzen Friedrich Carl (1885); Von St Louis nach Bremen (1885); Gedichte (1886).—DRAMA: Isabella auf dem Nürnberger Reichstag (1880); Ulfila (1882).—STORIES: Aus den Jugenderinnerungen eines alten Holzpantoffels (1882).—Waldpot von Bassenheim (epic; 1884).—Memoiren eines Kosmopoliten (1887). E.R.

Schneider, REINHOLD (*Baden-Baden 13 V 1903; †Freiburg im Breisgau 6 IV 1958), German poet, essayist and short-story writer. A Roman Catholic, he tried to interpret history in relation to God. Sonnet, short story and essay were his favourite forms; history (including the present) and literature (with striking reinterpretations of classic authors) his main subjects.

VERSE: Sonette (1939); Die neuen Türme (1946); Apokalypse (1946); Herz am Erdsäume (1947); Sonette (1955).—'Poems', tr. E. Peters in Ger. Life and Letters, III (1949).—ESSAYS: Auf Wegen deutscher Geschichte (1934); Der Dichter vor der Geschichte (1943); Dämonie und Verklärung (1948); Gelebtes Wort (1961).—Ausgewählte Werke (sel. works; 4 vols, 1953).

L. Bossle, Utopie und Wirklichkeit im politischen Denken von R. S. (1965); B. Scherer, Tragik vor dem Kreuz: Leben und Geisteswelt R. S. (1966).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Schneur, SALKIND ZALMAN (*Sklov 1886; †20 II 1959), Hebrew and Yiddish author and critic, considered the greatest Hebrew poet of his day. His formal education was very short since, at 14, he was already among the young poet-apprentices in Bialik's* circle in Odessa. His early poems appeared in various Hebrew periodicals in Odessa. He soon left for Warsaw and Vilna, the two literary centres of that time. About 1908 he went to Switzerland, where he started his series Beharim, and then to Paris, where he read philosophy and literature at the Sorbonne. But his restless temperament drew him to travel and he toured Europe and North Africa. At the outbreak of the First World War he was interned in Berlin as a citizen of an enemy country; he succeeded, however, in escaping to Scandinavia and thence to America. His best-known poems include 'Pirkay Yaar' ('The Chapter by the Forest') and 'Vilna'.

Im Shkiatt Hachamah (Warsaw, 1907); Vilna (New York, 1920; 2nd illustr. ed., Berlin, 1923); Bamayzar (Warsaw, 1923); Gesharim (Berlin, 1924); Noach Pandra (novel; Eng. tr. J. Leftwich, 1936).—Complete works (10 vols, Tel Aviv, in progr.). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Schnitzler, ARTHUR (*Vienna 15 V 1862; †ibid. 21 X 1931), Austrian playwright and novelist. The futility of life, the decadent mood of fin-de-siècle Vienna, physical love and its subconscious aspects are expressed with wit and melancholy in his dramatic sketches and some of his short stories. Schnitzler is a skilful psychologist and subtle moralist.

PLAYS: Anatol (1893; Eng. tr. H. Granville-Barker, 1911); Liebelei (1896; The Reckoning, tr. G. I. Colbron, 1907); Reigen (1900; Hands Around, tr. L. D. Edwards and F. L. Glaser, 1920; filmed as La Ronde, 1950); Professor Bernhardt (1912; Eng. tr. 1927).—NOVELS: Der Weg ins Freie (1908; The Road to the Open, tr. H. B. Samuel, 1923); Therese (1928; Theresa: The Chronicle of a Woman's Life, tr. W. A. Drake, 1928).—SHORT STORIES: Dr Graesler, Badezeit (1917; Eng. tr. E. C. Slade, 1923); Casanova's Heimfahrt (1918; Casanova's Homecoming, tr. E. and C. Paul, 1921); Fräulein Else (1924; Eng. tr. F. H. Lyon, 1925); Traumnovelle (1925; Rhapsody: A Dream Novel, tr. O. P. Schinnerer, 1927).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesammelte Werke (11 vols, 1912–28); Gesammelte Schriften (6 vols, 1928–29); Gesammelte Erzählungen (1950); Meisterdramen (1955); Die erzählenden Schriften (2 vols, 1961); Die dramatischen Werke (2 vols, 1962).—Jugend in Wien (autobiog.; ed. T. Nickl and H. Schnitzler, 1968).

J. Körner, A. S.s Gestalten und Probleme (1921); W. Heine, Der Kampf um den Reigen (1922); Olga Schnitzler, Spiegelbild der Freundschaft (1962); C. E. Schorske, 'Politics and the psyche in fin-de-siècle Vienna: S. and Hofmannsthal' in Amer. Hist. Rev., LXVI (1961); H. Politzer, 'A. S.: poetry of psychology' in Mod. Lang. Notes, LXXVIII (1963); G. Baumann, A. S. (1965); R. H. Allen, An Annotated A. S. Bibliography (1966); G. Just, Ironie und Sentimentalität in den erzählenden Dichtungen A. S.s (1968). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Schnurre, WOLFDIETRICH (*Frankfurt 22 VIII 1920), German writer and satirist. He served in the army (1939–45) and then returned to Berlin where he had grown up. In 1947 he helped to found the Gruppe 47, remaining a member until 1951. His writing has avant-garde and somewhat experimental tendencies, his satire is biting, and he has frequently attacked the 'cold war' and in particular the Berlin Wall.

VERSE: Kassiber (1956); Abendländler (1957).—RADIO PLAYS: Stimmen über dem Fluss (1953); Das Haus am See (1954); Spreezimmer möbliert (1955); Die Gläsernen (1960).—NOVELS: Als Vaters Bart noch rot war (1958); Das Los unserer Stadt (1959).—Man sollte dagegen sein (stories; 1960).

G. von Wilpert, Deutsches Dichterlexikon (1963); H. Kunisch, Handbuch der deutschen Gegenwartsliteratur (1967). D.E.

Scholz, Wilhelm von (*Berlin 15 VII 1874), German playwright, novelist and poet. He took, with Paul Ernst*, a leading part in the neo-classic revival of the German drama, influenced by Hebbel* and Maeterlinck*. For him fate, not character, was the important part of a tragedy and was interpreted in mystic terms, as in his most successful play Der Wettlauf mit dem Schatten (1921). His less esoteric prose works were of more general and more lasting appeal.

PLAYS: Meroë (1906); Die Feinde (1917); Die gläserne Frau (1924); Welttheater. Vier Schauspiele nach Calderon (1943).—STORIES: Die Unwirklichen (1916); Die Gefährten (1937); Das Inwendige (sel. stories; 1959).—NOVELS: Perpetua (1926); Theodor Dorn (1966).—VERSE: Spiel in Lüften (1936); Ausgewählte Gedichte (1953).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Mein Leben (1934); Lebenslandschaft (1943); Mein Theater (1964).—ESSAYS: Gedanken zum Drama (2 vols, 1905, 1915); Der Zufall, eine Vorform des Schicksals (1924).—Gesammelte Werke (5 vols, 1919–24).

A. M. Reis, W. von S. Studien zu seiner Weltanschauung (1939).
R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Schonaeus (Schoon or de Schoone), CORNELIS (*Gouda 1541; †Haarlem 23 XI 1611), Dutch educationist, neo-Latin poet and playwright, studied at Louvain and became teacher at the Latin school at Haarlem in 1569, making it famous as its headmaster (from 1575). In addition to a Latin grammar he wrote, in the manner of Terence*, a number of dramata scholastica, namely on sacred subjects (e.g. Tobaeus, Nehemias, Saulus conversus, Naäman, Josephus, Susanna, Daniël, Triumphus Christi) and farces (e.g. Cunae, Vitulus, Dyscoli). The great success of these plays, some of which were repeatedly reprinted and translated into Dutch and German, earned him the name of 'Terentius Christianus'.

C. J. Gonnet, 'C. S. en eenige zijner Haarlemsche vrienden' in Bijdrage v. de Geschiedenis v. h. Bisdome Haarlem (1881); A. H. Garrer, S., Bijdrage tot de geschiedenis der Latijnsche school te Haarlem (1889); J. A. Worp, Geschiedenis van het Drama en het tooneel in Nederland, I (1904); G. Ellinger, Geschichte der neulateinischen Lyrik in den Niederlanden (1933).
J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Schoolmester, DE: see Linde Jansz, Gerrit van de.

Schoonhoven, Jan van (†Groenendaal, nr Brussels 1431), Dutch writer. Entering the monastery of the Canons Regular at Groenendaal c. 1377, he later became its sub-prior. He defended his Prior, Jan van Ruusbroec*, against Gerson's* accusation of atheism and pantheism. He also wrote a number of tracts (including the famous De passione Domini) and several letters, including some to his cousin Simon which became famous.

J.J.M.

Works listed in J. G. R. Acquoy, Het klooster te Windesheim en zijn invloed, II (1875–80); nearly all of them still exist in MSS, scattered over the Netherlands, England and Germany; the same applies to the many trs, esp. in Dutch and Ger. One complete letter to Simon in De Katholiek (1884–85) and the Middle Dutch tr. of Sermoen van de Gulden Berch in Bijdrage v. de Geschiedenis v. h. Bisdome Haarlem, XXX (1906).

W. de Vreese in Biographie Nationale de Belgique, XXI (1913); Dom J. Huyben in Ons Geestelijk Erf, VI (1932); W. de Roy, ibid. (1945); A. Combes, Essai sur la critique de Ruysbroeck par Gerson, I: Introduction critique et dossier documentaire (1945); A. Ampe in Rev. d'histoire ecclésiastique, LV (1960).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Schopenhauer, Arthur (*Danzig 22 I 1788; †Frankfurt-am-Main 20 IX 1860), German philosopher. His mother was the novelist Johanna Schopenhauer. He spent much of his boyhood in France and England, went into business, but after his father's suicide (1805) resumed his studies: in Berlin (1811) he found Fichte* disappointing. He worked out his own philosophy in Dresden (1814–18), became a tutor in Berlin (1820), was unnoticed and soon gave up, after 1831 living in misogynistic seclusion at Frankfurt. His system—in which will is at once the mainspring of the universe and essentially wicked—attracted little attention till the 1850s, when its unrelieved pessimism was in tune with the prevailing mood. His style and modernity, together with the special place he accorded to the arts, increased its appeal, and its influence—notably upon Wagner*, Nietzsche*, Thomas Mann*, Gide*—was of incalculable significance.

Die Welt als Wille und Vorstellung (1818; Eng. tr. R. B. Haldane and J. Kemp, 3 vols, 1883; Eng. tr. E. F. J. Payne, 2 vols, 1958); Über den Willen in der Natur (1836; Eng. tr. 1900); Parerga und Paralipomena (1851; Eng. tr. T. B. Saunders, 1891).—Kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. P. Deussen, 15 vols, 1911 ff.); Reisetagebücher 1802–04 (ed. C. von Gwinner, 1923); Der junge S., Aphorismen und Tagebuchblätter (ed. A. Hübscher, 1938).—SELECTED TRANSLATIONS: The Basis of Morality (tr. A. B. Bullock, 1903); Selected Essays of S. (tr. T. B. Saunders, 1951); Essays on the Freedom of the Will (tr. K. Kolenda, 1960); The Will to Live. Selected Writings of A. S. (ed. R. Taylor, 1962).

H. Zimmern, A. S. His Life and Philosophy (1876, 1932); V. J. McGill, S. (New York, 1931); W. Schneider, S. (1937); Thomas Mann, S. (1938); F. Copleston, A. S., Philosopher of Pessimism (1946); H. M. Wolff, A. S.—hundert Jahre später (1960); P. Gardiner, S. (Eng. tr. 1963).—S.-Jahrb. (1912 ff.).
H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schottel, Justus Georg (*Einbeck 23 VI 1612; †Wolfenbüttel 25 X 1676), German writer, linguist and diplomat at the court of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel. His philological works sum up the theories of the period and formulate rules. He is aware of the importance of earlier linguistic periods and follows the usage of Luther* and Opitz*. His approach is basically mechanistic and classificatory, but his work was the basis of future work in German grammar and philology. His poetry, though neat and characteristic of the period, is of minor importance.

Lamentatio Germaniae Exspirantis (verse; 1640; ed. E. Voss in Jour. Germanic Philol., VII, 1907); Teutsche Sprachkunst (1641); Der Teutschen Sprach Einleitung (1642); Friedens Sieg (drama; 1642; ed. F. Koldewey, 1900); Fruchtbringender Lustgarte (1647; repr. ed. M. Burkhard, 1967); Ausführliche Arbeit von der Teutschen Haupt Sprache (his main work; 1663; repr. ed. W. Hecht, 1967); Sittenkunst oder Wollebenskunst (1669); Horrendum bellum grammaticale Teutonum antiquissimum (1673); Manuductio ad Orthographiam et etymologiam in lingua Germanica (1676).

A. Schmarow, Leibniz und S. (1877); M. H. Jellinek, Geschichte der neuhochdeutschen Grammatik (1913); P. Hankamer, Die Sprache, ihr Begriff und ihre Deutung im 16. und 17. Jh. (1927); F. Gundolf, 'S.' in Festschrift F. Panzer (1930); B. Marckwardt, Geschichte der deutschen Poetik, I (1937); B. Walter-Schulze-Möbius, Friedenssehnsucht und Kriegsabschluss in der deutschen Dichtung zum 1650 (diss. Breslau, 1940). L.W.F.

Schreiber, LADY CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH, daughter of the 9th Earl of Lindsey (*Uffington House, Lincs 19 V 1812; ∞29 VII 1833 Josiah John Guest, ∞10 IV 1855 Charles Schreiber; †Canford Manor, Dorset 15 I 1895), English translator and collector, who achieved literary fame with her publication of the MABINOGION. This took place after her marriage to Guest, the Merthyr industrialist, had brought her into touch with Welsh literature. She was assisted in her translation of this Welsh classic by Tegid, Carnhuanawc and other Welsh writers; and she achieved a very happy rendering.

Fans and Fan Leaves, collected and described (2 vols, 1888-90); Playing Cards of Various Ages and Countries (3 vols, 1892-95).—Journal, 1869-85 (ed. M. J. Guest, 2 vols, 1911); Extracts From the Journal of Lady C. S., 1833-52 (ed. Earl of Bessborough, 1950); Extracts . . . , 1853-91 (ed. idem, 1952).

D. R. Phillips, Lady Charlotte Guest and the Mabinogion (1921). C.P.

Schreiner, OLIVE EMILIE ALBERTINA (*Wittebergen Mission Station, Cape Province 24 III 1855; ∞1894 Samuel Cron Cronwright; †Cape Town 11 XII 1920), South African novelist and short-story writer. The daughter of a missionary, for several years she earned her living as a governess in South Africa, but she lived in England from 1881 to 1889. The publication of The Story of an African Farm in 1883 brought her fame and the friendship of many notable people, including especially Havelock Ellis*.

NOVELS: Trooper Peter Halket of Mashonaland (1897); From Man to Man (1926); Undine (1928).—SHORT STORIES: Dreams (1891); Dream Life and Real Life (1893); Stories, Dreams and Allegories (1920).—POLITICAL AND SOCIAL WRITINGS: An English South African's View of the Situation (1899); A Letter on the Jew (1906); Closer Union (1909); Woman and Labour (1911); Thoughts on South Africa (1923).—The Letters of O. S. (1924).

S. C. Cronwright-Schreiner, The Life of O. S. (1924); V. Buchanan Gould, Not Without Honor (1948); J. Meintjes, O. S. Portrait of a South African Woman (1965). E.R.S. (U.La.)

Schröder, RUDOLF ALEXANDER (*Bremen 26 I 1878; †Bad Wiessee 22 VIII 1962), German poet, translator and essayist. A friend and collaborator of O. J. Bierbaum*, Rudolf Borchardt*, H. von Hofmannsthal*, and co-founder of the periodical Die Insel (1899-1902), basis of the distinguished Inselverlag. A scholar and outstanding critic, he has been called 'the last of German humanists'. His translations from Greek, Latin, French and English have opened new vistas. Protestant faith informs his creative work which comprises Die weltlichen Gedichte (1940) and Die geistlichen Gedichte (1949), the latter containing re-creations of 16th-century hymn forms.

VERSE: Empedokles (1900); Sprüche in Reimen (1900); Elysium (1906); Mitte des Lebens (1930); Ballade vom Wandersmann (1937); Kreuzgespräch (1939); Der Mann und das Jahr (1946); Auf dem Heimweg (1946); Weihnachtslieder (1946); Gute Nacht (1947).—ESSAYS: Dichtung und Dichter der Kirche (1936); Reden und Aufsätze (2 vols, 1939); Christentum und Humanismus (1946).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Aus Kindheit und Jugend (1935); Abendstunde. Ein Selbstbildnis in Gesprächen (ed. L. Besch, 1960); Freundeswort. Briefwechsel mit S. Stehmann (1962).—Gesammelte Werke (1952- ).

Werke und Tage. Festschrift (1938); L. Denkhäus, R. A. S. (1947); K. Berger, Die Dichtung R. A. S. (1954); R. Adolf, R. A. S. (1958).—S.-Bibliographie (1952). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Schubart, CHRISTIAN FRIEDRICH DANIEL (*Ober-sontheim 24 III 1739; †Stuttgart 10 X 1791), German poet. Schubart, after a wild youth, became in 1769 organist in Ludwigsburg, but his conduct led to banishment. In Augsburg he published Die deutsche Chronik (1774-77), a forerunner of the modern newspaper. In 1777 he was enticed to Württemberg and imprisoned at Hohenasperg without trial for ten years because of a libel on the Duke. On his release he was restored to favour. Apart from realistic rural poetry, Schubart wrote Die Fürstengruft, a poem condemning the abuse of despotic power.

Sämtliche Gedichte (2 vols, 1785–86); Gesammelte Schriften (8 vols, 1839–40); sel. ed. A. Sauer in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., LXXXI (1883); sel. ed. K. Gaiser (with biog.; 1929).

K. M. Klob, S. (1908); T. Jäger, C. S. (1913).
H.B.G.

Schück, JOHN HENRIK EMIL (*Stockholm 2 XI 1855; †ibid. 3 X 1947), Swedish cultural and literary historian; lecturer at Uppsala 1882, Professor at Lund 1890, at Uppsala 1898, retired 1920, Rector Uppsala University 1905–18, member of the Swedish Academy 1913. An extremely industrious and productive writer, he exercised influence by writing rather than by teaching. He employed the historical approach to literary and cultural problems, laying especial stress upon background.

Illustrerad svensk litteraturhistoria (with K. Warburg; 1896; 3rd ed. 1926–30, in which S. rewrote all W.'s parts; still the standard authority); Gustaf III (1904); En äventyrare (L. Wivallius; 1918); Shakespeare och hans tid (2 vols, 1916); Messenius (1920); Allmän litteraturhistoria (6 vols, 1919–25); Elis Schröderheim (1942).

N. Afzelius, Bibliografi över H. S. (1936).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Schuere, JACOB VAN DER, 17th-century Flemish writer, settled at Haarlem, where he taught French, was a friend of Carel van Mander* and contributor to Nederduytschen Helicon (1610) with 19 poems. He also wrote Bewerking van de Tristium ofte truerdichten van P. Ovidius Nazo (1612).

J. te Winkel, 'Over den Nederduytschen Helicon' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., XVIII (1899).
A.M.B.W.

Schulman, KALMAN (*Bykhov, Byelorussia 19 VIII 1819; †Vilna 15 I 1899), Hebrew historian and author. As an original writer Schulman is unimportant but he has done useful work with his adaptations and translations. His translation of Les Mystères de Paris by Eugène Sue* introduced the Romantic movement into Jewish literature.

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Schupp, JOHANN BALTHASAR (*Giessen 1 III 1610; †Hamburg 26 X 1661), German poet, chiefly known for his religious verse and anti-courtly polemical, didactic and satirical writings. He was a Lutheran preacher with wide knowledge of the world and a representative of the Landgrave of Hesse at the Münster peace conference (1647).

His work shows simple, sincere piety and a straightforward and forceful, though often over-estimated, prose style.

Morgen- und Abendlieder (1643); Lehrreiche Schriften (1663); Der Freund in der Not (1657; ed. W. Braune, 1878); Streitschriften (sel. ed. C. Vogt, 2 vols, 1910–11); Corinna (ed. idem, 1911).

J. Lühmann, J. B. S., Beiträge zu einer Würdigung (1908); C. Vogt, 'Zur Lebensgeschichte J. B. S.' in Euphoriion, XVI (1909), XXI (1914); H. E. Wichert, J. B. S. and the Baroque Satire in Germany (New York, 1952; good).
L.W.F.

Schurek, PAUL (*Hamburg 2 I 1890; †ibid. 22 V 1962), Low German playwright. His comedies successfully achieve the 'Low German folk-comedy' demanded by Bossdorf*. Their setting is usually the small-town lower middle class, the world of the 'little man'. Beside the tradition of the Low German comedy, Molière*, Holberg*, Gogol* and Ernst Barlach* have stimulated Schurek.

PLAYS: Stratenmusik (1921); Snider Nörig (1927); Lünkenalarm (1929); Pott will heitraden (1932); Kasper kummt na Huus (1932); Tulipantjes (1936); Ulen speegel (1957).—STORIES: Düvel un Dichter (1920); Snaksche Geschichten (1922).—NOVELS: De rode Heben (1921); Das Leben geht weiter (1940).—VARIOUS: Begegnungen mit Barlach (1946).

G. Cordes, 'Tragik und Humor in der Mundartdichtung' in Euphoriion, LXI (1967).
G.C.

Schurer, FEDDE (*Drachten 25 VII 1898; †Heerenveen 19 III 1968), Frisian poet. He advocated the use of Frisian in law-courts. During the Second World War he published illegally poems to aid the Resistance movement. Editor-in-chief of the daily newspaper Friese Koerier (1946–63); Member of the Dutch Parliament for the Labour Party (1956–63). In 1945 he founded the literary periodical De Tsjerne. A virtuoso and many-sided lyrical, religious and satiric poet, he translated the Psalms and poems of Heine*, Rilke* and John Donne*. His lyrical Biblical drama Simson (1947) enriched Frisian dramatic literature.

Fersen (1925); Utflecht (1930; 2nd ed. 1936); Op alle winen (1936); Fan twa wallen (1940); Vox Humana (1949); Fingerprinten (1955); Efter it nijs (1966); De gitaer by it boek (1966; 1969).—De bisleine spegel (autobiog.; 1969).

A. Wadman, Frieslands Dichters (1949); E. Howard Harris, The Literature of Friesland (1956); J. Piebenga, Koarte Skiednis fan de Fryske Skriftekennisse (2nd ed. 1957).

W.E.C. (K.D.)

Schurman, ANNA MARIA VAN: see Schuurmans, ANNA MARIA.

Schütze, MARTIN (*Mecklenburg 21 XII 1866; †Woodstock, N.Y. 19 VII 1950), German-American scholar and poet. He anticipated and corrected much of the New Criticism.

VERSE: Crux Aetatis and Other Poems (1904); Songs and Poems (1914).—TRAGEDIES: Hero and Leander (1908); Judith (1910).—CRITICISM: Studies in German Romanticism (1907); Academic Illusions in the Field of Letters and Arts (1933).

H. Bluhm in Monatshefte für dt. Unterricht (Wisc.), XL (1950). E.R.

Schuermans, ANNA MARIA (*Cologne 1607; †Wieuwerd 1678), Dutch philologist, in her time a linguistic wonder, admired by Cats* and Huygens*, a religious zealot, pupil of Voetius, follower of Jean de Labadie.

Uitbreiding over de drie eerste Capittels van Genesis and Geestelijk huwelijk van Chr. met de Gelovigen (1732); Heylige Gesangen (1675; from the Fr.); Bedenckingen over de toekomst van Christi Koninkryck.—Opuscula (ed. F. Spanheim, 1648).

G. D. J. Schotel, A. M. van S. (1853); P. Tschackert, A. M. van S., der Stern von Utrecht, die Jüngerin Labadies (1876); H. Birch, A. van S. (London, 1909); A. M. H. Douma, A. M. van S. (1924). A.M.B.W.

Schwab, GUSTAV BENJAMIN (*Stuttgart 19 VI 1792; †ibid. 4 XI 1850), German poet, studied theology at Tübingen, where he formed a life-long friendship with Uhland* and Kerner*. Sociable and attractive, he formed the link between the Swabian circle and the outer world, fostered Lenau* and edited the Musenalmanach with Chamisso* (1833–38). He realized that as a poet he was at best a talented follower of Uhland. A few of his songs and ballads are widely known, and his classical legends are read in German nurseries. K.W.M.

Neues deutsches allgemeines Commers- und Liederbuch (1815); Gedichte (2 vols, 1828–29); Deutsche Volksbücher (3 vols, 1836–37); Die schönsten Geschichten und Sagen (2 vols, 1836–37); Wanderungen durch Schwaben (1837); Schillers Leben (3 vols, 1840); Die schönsten Sagen des klassischen Altertums (3 vols, 1838–40).

W. Schulze, S. als Balladendichter (1914); G. Storz, Schwäbische Romantik (1967).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Schwartz, DELMORE (*Brooklyn, N.Y. 8 XII 1913; †11 VII 1966), American poet, critic and short-story writer. An inventive poet whose early promise was not fulfilled through an over-allusive and indulgent tone in his later work.

In Dreams Begin Responsibilities (1938); Shenandoah (1941); The World Is a Wedding (1947); Vaudeville for a Princess (1950); Summer Knowledge: New and Selected Poems (1959); Successful Love and Other Stories (1962). G.A.K.

Schwarzmann, LEV ISAAKOVICH: see Shestov, LEV.

Schwieger, JACOB: see Stieler, KASPAR VON.

Scott, ALEXANDER (*c. 1520; †c. 1585), Scottish poet, whose work is preserved in the Bannatyne MS. A melodious and ingenious lyrical in the medieval genres; 'the Anacreon of old Scottish poetry' (Pinkerton*).

Poems (ed. A. K. Donald, 1902; ed. A. Scott, 1953). J.K.

Scott, DUNCAN CAMPBELL (*Ottawa 2 VIII 1862; ∞1894 Belle Warner Botsford [†1929], ∞1931 Elise Aylen; †19 XII 1947), Canadian poet and story writer whose work in the Government Department of Indian Affairs (1879–1932) provided material for sensitive, often profound, and realistic portrayals of the North American Indian; noted also for the descriptive and rhythmic qualities of his work.

Magic House (1893); Labour and the Angel (1898); New World Lyrics and Ballads (1905); Poems (1926); Circle of Affection (1947).—STORIES: In the Village of Viger (1896); Witching of Elspie (1923).

D. Pacey, 'D. C. S.' in Ten Canadian Poets (1958); A. J. M. Smith, 'D. C. S.' in Our Living Tradition (ed. R. L. McDougall, 1959). R.Su.

Scott, FRANCIS REGINALD (*Quebec City I VIII 1899; ∞1928 Marian Mildred Dale), Canadian poet and authority on constitutional law, Professor (from 1928) and Dean (1961–64) of McGill University law faculty, Chairman of the C.C.F. (Socialist Party) in Canada (1942–50). With A. J. M. Smith* he was a moving force in the emergence of modern Canadian poetry; his work is noted for brilliant wit, sensitivity to social justice and keen satire.

Overture (1945); Events and Signals (1954); Eye of the Needle (1957); Signature (1964); Selected Poems (1966).—St-Denis-Garneau and Anne Hébert (tr.; 1962).—PROSE: Canada Today (1938); Canada and the United States (1941).

R. Skelton, 'Poet of the middle slopes' and A. J. M. Smith, 'F. R. S. and some of his poetry' in Canad. Lit., XXXI (1967). R.Su.

Scott, GABRIEL (*Leith, Scotland 8 III 1874; ∞[2nd] 1918 Birgit Gabrielsen; †Arendal 9 VII 1958), Norwegian novelist, poet and playwright. A prolific writer, who has become especially identified with Sørlandet (southern Norway), Scott is noted for his historical novels, Jernbyrden (1915) and Enok Rubens levnedsløb (1917). In Kilden his idyllic quality, which elsewhere is rather pale and facile, is expressed in lyric prose of a high order. A mystical-religious element is also apparent in much of Scott's production, especially in the historical novel Helgenen (1936; rev. 1946). It also includes excellent short stories and novels of folk life and very popular children's stories.

VERSE: Digte (1894); Siv (1903); Sverdliljer (1912); Arringer (1945).—PLAYS: Himmeluret (1905); Babels taarn (1910).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Jagt journalen (1901); Tante Pose (1904); Hollænder-Jonas (1908); Kari kveldsmat (1913); Kari: A Story of Kari Supper From Lindeland, Norway, tr. A. Barstad, 1931; Jernbyrden (1915; rev. 1945); The Burden of Iron, tr. K. Mielthe and W. Katzin, 1935; Kilden (1918); Markus, the Fisherman, tr. S. and R. Bateson, 1931; Vindholmens beskrivelse (1919); Det gyldne evangelium (1921); The Golden Gospel, tr. W. Worster, 1928; Hyrden (1927); Stien eller Kristofer med kvisten (1925; rev. 1946); Sven morgendugg (1926; rev. 1946); Fant (2 vols, 1928–30); Josefa (1930); Barkefletteren (1931); Alkejægeren (1933); Skipper Terkelsens levnedsløb (1935); Helgenen (1936; rev. 1946); Ferdinand (1937); De vergeløse (1938); En drøm om en drøm (3 vols, 1940–47); Fergemennene (1952).—Utvælgte romaner (8 vols, 1961–62).

A. Beisland, G. S.: En Sørlands dikter (1949).
R.G.P.

Scott, MICHAEL (*Cowlairs, Glasgow 30 X 1789; ∞1818 Margaret Bogle; †Glasgow 7 XI 1835), Scottish journalist. Scott sought his fortune in Jamaica in 1806 and returned to Glasgow in 1822. He contributed 'Tom Cringle's Log', a tale of the Caribbean, to Blackwood's Magazine in 1829–33; and 'The Cruise of the Midge' to the same journal in 1834–35. Both were republished in 1836.

Sir G. Douglas, The Blackwood Group (1897).
J.K.

Scott, SIR WALTER (*Edinburgh 15 VIII 1771; ∞1797 Charlotte Margaret Carpenter [†16 V 1826]; †Abbotsford 21 IX 1832), Scottish novelist, poet and historian. Scott was educated at the High School and University, Edinburgh, and called to the Bar in 1792. In the next years he made many journeys into the Borders collecting ballads and legends; and in 1799 was made Sheriff of Selkirkshire. In 1812 he went to live at Abbotsford, Melrose, where he gradually developed a farm-house into a small mansion. He was created baronet in 1819. Ballantyne's printing business, in which he had been a partner since 1809, crashed in 1826; and for the rest of his life Scott worked with great courage to clear his heavy debts. In the collection of texts, critical and historical introductions, and the erudite commentary of the Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border

(3 vols, 1802–03; ed. T. F. Henderson, 1902), Scott laid the foundations of ballad scholarship; he produced a valuable edition of Swift (1814), and his Dryden (1808) remains the most delightful if not the most reliable edition; in his Lives of the Novelists there is much first-rate criticism. Despite verbal and structural faults, his narrative poems contain much beautiful description of nature, fine sentiment, and above all the flash and spirit of battle action; some of the introductory verse epistles in Marmion are excellent in their kind; and he reaches greatness in his lyrics, particularly those in the novels. Scott is pre-eminent among British novelists in the range of his sympathies, in his blend of realistic character-sketch and high adventure, in a powerful historical imagination firmly based on immense learning, in a capacity for exciting action, in the supernatural and macabre, pathos and kindly humour. He inherited the machinery and character-conventions of the 18th century; his plots are often clumsy and confused; his type-figures are bloodless and uninteresting offspring of the romance and the sentimental novel. But in the delineation of eccentrics and comic characters, and the men and women of the Scottish peasantry, he is brilliantly successful in both description and dialogue. Scott created the historical novel, strongly affected historical writing and approach at home and influenced 19th-century French fiction. His best work is in the literary re-creation of the 17th- and 18th-century Scottish scene.

The Chase; William and Helen (tr. from Bürger; 1796); Goetz of Berlichingen (tr. from Goethe; 1799); Apology for Tales of Terror (1799); The Eve of St John (1800); The Lay of the Last Minstrel (1805); Ballads and Lyrical Pieces (1806); Marmion; A Tale of Flodden Field (1808); The Lady of the Lake (1810); Don Roderick (1811); Rokeby (1813); The Bridal of Triermain (1813); Waverley (1814); Border Antiquities of England and Scotland (1814–17); essays on 'Chivalry' and 'Romance' contrib. to Encyclopædia Britannica (1814, 1822); Guy Mannering (1815); The Lord of the Isles (1815); Paul's Letters to his Kinsfolk (1815); The Antiquary (1816); The Black Dwarf (1816); Old Mortality (1816); Harold the Dauntless (1817); Rob Roy (1818); The Heart of Midlothian (1818); The Bride of Lammermoor (1819); A Legend of Montrose (1819); Ivanhoe (1820); The Monastery (1820); The Abbot (1820); Miscellaneous Poems (1820); Kenilworth (1821); Lives of the Novelists (Ballantyne's Novelists' Lib., 1821–24; repr. World's Classics, 1906); The Pirate (1822); The Fortunes of Nigel (1822); Peveril of the Peak (1822); Halidon Hill (1822); Quentin Durward (1823); Redgauntlet (1824); St Ronan's Well (1824); The Betrothed (1825); The Talisman (1825); Woodstock (1826); The Highland Widow, Two Drovers, and The Surgeon's Daughter (Chronicles of the Canongate, I, 1827); The Life of Napoleon Buonaparte (1827); Miscellaneous Prose Works (1827); Tales of a Grandfather (4 vols, 1828-30); St Valentine's Day; or The Fair Maid of Perth (Chronicles of the Canongate, II, 1828); Anne of Geierstein (1829); History of Scotland (1829-30); Letters on Demonology and Witchcraft (1830); Essays on Ballad Poetry (1830); Count Robert of Paris (1832); Castle Dangerous (1832); Poems (1854).—Standard ed. of the Waverley Novels is perhaps the Border Edition (with intro. and notes by Andrew Lang, 48 vols, 1892-94).—Journal (ed. D. Douglas, 2 vols, 1890; re-ed. J. G. Tait, 3 vols, 1939-46, 1 vol. 1950; ed. E. Anderson, 1972).—Letters (ed. H. J. C. Grierson et al., 12 vols, 1932-37; centenary ed.); corresp. with Maturin (ed. F. C. Ratchford and W. H. McCarthy, 1937).—Biblio. of the poems in Trans. Edinburgh Biblio. Soc. (1937); J. C. Corson, Bibliography of Sir W. S. (1943).

James Hogg, The Domestic Manners and Private Life of Sir W. S. (1834); J. G. Lockhart, Memoirs of the Life of Sir W. S., Bart (7 vols, 1837-38); Andrew Lang, Life of Sir W. S. (1906); A. Caplan, The Bibliography of Sir W. S. (1928).—Some recent criticism: G. Lukács, The Historical Novel (Eng. tr. 1961); D. Davie, The Poetry of Sir W. S. (1961); I. Jack, English Literature 1815-1832 (1963); C. O. Parsons, Witchcraft and Demonology in S.'s Fiction (1964); A. M. Clark, Sir W. S.: The Formative Years (1969); A. O. J. Cockshut, The Achievement of W. S. (1969); R. C. Gordon, Under Which King? . . . The Scottish Waverley Novels (1969). J.K.

Scribe, AUGUSTIN EUGÈNE (*Paris 24 XII 1791; †ibid. 20 II 1861), French dramatist, elected to the French Academy in 1854. Working mostly in collaboration, Scribe turned out plays and opera libretti on a wholesale scale. By creating the 'well-made play', constructing plot and organizing action to perfection (though sometimes at the expense of character), often using contemporary themes and always well-written, up-to-date dialogue, Scribe exercised a widespread influence on European drama by providing playwrights with a formula adaptable to many different subjects.

PLAYS: Une nuit de la garde nationale (1815); Une chatte (1842); Un verre d'eau (1842); Adrienne Lecouvreur (in collab. with Legouvé; 1849); Bertrand et Raton (1849).—OPERA LIBRETTI: La muette de Portici (1828); Fra Diavolo (1830); Robert le Diable (1831); La Juive (1835); Les Huguenots (1836).—Œuvres complètes (76 vols, 1874-85).

E. Legouvé, E. S. (1874); L. Allard, La comédie de mœurs en France au XIXe siècle, I: De Picard à S. (1923); N. C. Arvin, E. S. and the French Theatre (1924). T.W.

Scriviarius, PETRUS (*Haarlem 12 I 1576; †Leiden

30 IV 1660), Dutch scholar and poet in Latin and Dutch, friend of Heinsius*, lived as a man of leisure at Leiden. He edited classical authors and translated poetry by Heinsius (for whose Nederduytsche Poëmata he wrote the introduction). He was a purist in language and his influence on the younger generation was great.

Saturnalia (Lat. eulogy on tobacco; 1630); Beschrijvinghe van Oud-Bataviën (1612); Laure-Kranz voor Laurens Koster v. Haarlem (incl. in S. Ampzing, Lof der stad Haarlem, 1628); Het oude Goudsche Kronyksken (1663).

S. Doeksen, Gedichten van P. S. (with biog.; 1738). A.M.B.W.

Scudéry, GEORGES DE (*Le Havre 22 VIII 1601; †Paris 14 V 1667), French writer. The elder brother of Madeleine de Scudéry*, he wrote independently light love-poetry, an epic poem (Alaric), and numerous plays, including pastorals, comedies, tragedies, and tragi-comedies, nearly all mediocre. His Observations sur le Cid (1637) criticized Corneille's* play in the name of Aristotle* and verisimilitude and led to the intervention of the French Academy in the discussion.

PLAYS: La comédie des comédiens (1632); La Mort de César (1635); L'Amour tyrannique (1639); Arminius (1644).—VERSE: Poésies diverses (1649); Alaric, ou Rome vaincue (1654).—Apologie du théâtre (crit.; 1639).

C. Clerc, Un Matamore des lettres, G. de S. (1929). G.B.

Scudéry, MADELEINE DE (*Le Havre 1607; †Paris 2 VI 1701), French novelist. Of upper middle-class origin, she became a social force towards 1650, when she succeeded Mme de Rambouillet as the leading Parisian literary hostess. Her multi-volume novels, with their pseudo-historical characters, refined still further the cult of sentimental analysis established by d'Urfé* in L'Astrée; they were also popular for the veiled portraits of contemporaries which they contained. Her brother Georges, under whose name they appeared, collaborated in them to an undetermined extent; but the dominant hand was certainly Madeleine's.

Ibrahim ou L'illustre Bassa (4 vols, 1641); Artamène ou le Grand Cyrus (10 vols, 1649-53); Clélie, histoire romaine (10 vols, 1654-60); Isabelle Grimaldi (n.d.; ed. E. Seillière, 1923).

M. Magendie, Le roman français au 17e siècle (1932); C. Aragonnès, M. de S. reine du Tendre (1934); A. Adam, Histoire de la littérature française au XVIIe siècle, II (1951). G.B.

Scully, WILLIAM CHARLES (*Dublin 29 X 1855; †Kimberley 1943), South African poet, novelist and short-story writer. Scully went to South Africa in 1867 and was successively shepherd, diamond digger, civil servant and magistrate. His work, which has never been adequately appreciated, shows deep understanding of the complex structure of South Africa.

VERSE: The Wreck of the 'Grosvenor' (Lovedale, 1886); Poems (1892).—SHORT STORIES: Kafir Stories (1895); The White Hecatomb (1897); By Veldt and Kopje (1907).—NOVELS: Between Sun and Sand (1898); A Vendetta of the Desert (1898); The Harrow (1921); Daniel Vananda (1923).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Reminiscences of a South African Pioneer (1912); Further Reminiscences of a South African Pioneer (1913).—Lodges in the Wilderness (travel; 1914).
E.R.S.

Scylitzes: see John Scylitzes.

Sdan, formerly Stock, Dov (*Brody, Galicia 1902), Hebrew author. He started writing in Polish but soon changed to Hebrew. He published a collection of Hebrew songs in 1921. He is an authority on Yiddish and Yiddish literature. His first prose book Mimkhas Hayaldut (1938) became a classic.

Bemaagal Haneurim (1946); Avnei Bochan (essays; 1951); Avnei Safah (1957); Al Shay Agnon (1959); Galgai Hamoadim (1964).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Seafarer: see Exeter Book.

Sealsfield, CHARLES, pseud. of KARL ANTON POSTL (*Poppitz nr Znaim, Moravia 3 III 1793; †nr Solothurn, Switzerland 26 V 1864), German novelist. Giving up his vocation as a priest, he left for America in 1823 and there adopted his new name. Sealsfield's well-written 'ethnographical' novels and travel books present an accurate picture of American life before the Civil War from a consistently democratic point of view.

NOVELS: Der Legitime und die Republikaner (1833; tr. 'The Americans and the Aborigines' in Blackwood's Mag., LIX, 1846); Der Virey und die Aristokraten (1834; tr. 'The Viceroy and the Aristocracy', ibid., LVII, 1845); Pflanzerleben (1836; tr. ibid., LIV, 1843); Die deutsch-amerikanischen Wahlverwandtschaften (1839; tr. Rambleton, 1844); Das Kajütenbuch (1841; tr. The Cabin Book, 1844).—VARIOUS: The United States of North America As They Are . . . (1827); The Americans As They Are . . . (1828).—Gesammelte Werke (18 vols, 1844–46).

A. B. Faust, C. S. . . . His Influence Upon American Literature (1892); B. A. Uhlendorf, 'C. S., ethnic and national problems in his works' in Jahrb. Dt.-Amer. hist. Ges. Illinois, XX–XXI (1920–21); W. P. Dallmann, The Spirit of America as Interpreted in the Works of C. S. (1935); O. Heller and Th. H. Leon, C. S.: Bibliography (1939); E. Castle, Der grosse Unbekannte, das Leben von C. S. (1952).
E.R.

Se'ami MOTOKIYO: see Ze'ami MOTOKIYO.

Sebastian, MIHAIL (*Brăila 1907; †Bucharest 1945), Rumanian dramatist and novelist. After studies in France he returned to Rumania and engaged in journalism. His first comedy was performed in 1938. Of Jewish family, he was forbidden to publish during the war years and worked as a schoolmaster. His early death in a motor accident deprived Rumanian literature of its most promising dramatic talent since Caragiale*. In his plays fantasy illuminates reality and the dreamers possess a wisdom denied to the worldlings.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Oraşul cu salcimi (1931); Femei (1931); Fragmente dintr-un carnet găsit (1932); De două mii de ani (1934); Cum am devenit huligan (1935); Accidentul (1940).—PLAYS: Jocul de-a vacanţa (1936); Steaua fără nume (1943); Insula (unfinished; 1944); Ultima oră (1944); Nopti fără lună (based on John Steinbeck's The Moon is Down; 1945).

B. Elvin, Teatrul lui M. S. (1955); V. Mindra, intro. to Opere alese (1962); C. Baltazar, Contemporan cu ei (1962).
F.J.B.

Sebillet (less correctly Sibilet), THOMAS (*?Paris 1512; †ibid. 1589), French critic and translator, notably of the Iphigenia at Aulis of Euripides* (1549). His chief work, an Art Poétique expounding the literary doctrines of Marot* and his generation, was attacked in Du* Bellay's Deffence et Illustration de la langue française.

Art Poétique François (1548; ed. F. Gaiffe, 1910, 1932); H. de Noo, T. S. et son Art Poétique François rapprochés de la Deffence et Illustration (Utrecht, 1927).
G.B.

Secundus, JANUS, or JOANNES NICOLAI or EVERARDI (*The Hague 14 XI 1511; †Doornik 24 IX 1536), neo-Latin poet, son of Nicolaas Everardi (from 1528 President of the Great Council at Malines) and Elisabeth de Blioul. He read law at Bourges and was secretary first to Cardinal Joannes Tavera, Archbishop of Toledo, and later to George van Egmond, Bishop of Utrecht. He wrote Elegiae, Basia, Epigrammata, Odae, Epistolae, Funera, Silvae and a travelogue, Itineraria. His most famous work is Basia, translated into many tongues; the incomparable passionate love-lyric has fascinated everyone anew through the ages.

J.J.M.

Opera omnia (ed. P. Burman Sr and P. Bosscha, 2 vols, 1821); Eng. ed. of Basia F. A. Wright (with other love poems; 1930).

D. Crane, J. S. (1931); G. Ellinger, Geschichte der neulateinischen Lyrik in den Niederlanden (1933); J. P. Guépin, In een moeilijke houding geschreven (1969).—Biblio. by K. Jacoby in Philobiblon, VIII (1935).
J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Sedaine, MICHEL (*Paris 4 VII 1719; †17 V 1797), French dramatist and poet. After working as a stonemason he succeeded as a dramatist and librettist, particularly for the light operas of Monsigny and Grétry. His Le philosophe sans le savoir (1765), a modern drama of family life, was almost the only successful example of the drame bourgeois.

Poésies fugitives (verse; 1750).—La Gageure imprévue (play; 1768).—LIBRETTI: Rose et Colas (1764); Les Sabots (1768); Le Déserteur (1769); Richard Cœur de Lion (1784).—Œuvres (1826).

L. Günther, L'œuvre dramatique de S. (1908); G. Gaiffe, Le drame en France au XVIIIe siècle (1910); R. Niklaus, A Literary History of France: The XVIIIth Century (1970). G.B.

Sedley, SIR CHARLES (*London III 1639; ∞ibid. 9 II 1657 Katherine Savage; †Hampstead VIII 1701), English courtier-poet and dramatist, noted as a 'wit'. His manner of life made him notorious after the Restoration, but he later reformed. In Parliament from 1668, he was first of the Court party but became a Whig. Sedley's comedies show the grace which marks his lyrics, where as a metrist he is outstanding. His translations are often superb. B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

The Mulberry Garden (1668); Antony and Cleopatra (1677; facs. 1969; rev. as Beauty the Conqueror, 1702); Bellamira (1687); The Grumbler (1719).—The Poetical and Dramatic Works (ed. V. de S. Pinto, 2 vols, 1928).

V. de S. Pinto, Sir C. S. (1927).

J.R.B. (H.N.D.)

Sedulius, 5th-century Christian Latin poet. The Carmen Paschale, in hexameters, is a version of the history of the New Testament. The diction is simple and vivid, in contrast to the prose version, the Paschale opus. Also extant are two hymns in honour of Christ.

Opera omnia (ed. J. Huemer in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., X, 1885).

J. Huemer, De Sedulii poetae vita et scriptis (1878); F. J. E. Raby, Christian Latin Poetry (1927; corr. ed. 1953); F. Corsaro, La lingua di Sedulio (1949). A.J.D.

Sedulius Scottus, 9th-century Irish scholar, settled in Liège in 848 under the patronage of Bishop Hartgar, founding an Irish colony which had great cultural importance. His occasional poems show his Irish humour and love of good things. He became a kind of court poet to the Emperors Lothar and Charles the Bald. For the former he wrote his Liber de rectoribus Christianis in verse and prose. F.J.E.R.

S. Hellmann, S. S. (1906); Monumenta Germaniae historica, Poeti Latini aevi Carolini, III, 1 (1886).—J. F. Kenney, Sources for the Early History of Ireland (1929); R. Düchting, S. S.: seine Dichtungen (1968). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Seeberg, PETER EJNAR LAURITZEN (*Skrydstrup 22 VI 1925; ∞1952 Hanne Ellen Ludvigsen), Danish novelist. His first novel reflects his own wartime experience in a German concentration camp. Samuel Beckett* is an important influence in his later works.

NOVELS: Bipersonerne (1956); Fugls Føde (1957); Hylder (1970).—Eftersøgningen og andre Noveller (stories; 1962).

Th. Bredsdorff, Sære Fortællere (1957). E.B.

Seeböhm, FREDERIC (*Bradford 22 XI 1833; ∞1857 Mary Exton; †Hitchin 6 II 1912); English historian, interested in social organization.

The Oxford Reformers (1867); The English Village Community (1883); The Tribal System in Wales (1895); Tribal Custom in Anglo-Saxon Law (1902). R.M.H.

Seedorff Pedersen, HANS HARTVIG OTTO (*Aarhus 12 VIII 1892; ∞1919 Karen Else Gøthe Voeler), Danish poet, one of the first generation of post-war poets. The elegant grace and charm of many of his poems made him much more generally known and beloved than most of the others, but there is often also a certain superficiality and sometimes versification seems to come too easily to him. Eros and Bacchus are his gods, and Drachmann* and Aarestrup* his prophets.

Vinløv og Vedbend (1916); Hyben (1917); Fra Danmark til Dvina (1918); Mod fremmede Stjerner (1919); De syngende Palmer (1921); Stjærneskud (1921); I Dagningen (1927); Sorgenfris Viser (1928); En lystelig Visebog (1930); Sorgenfri synger (1932); Udvalgte Digte (3 vols, 1942; new ed. 1952).—Gennem Barndommens Gade (memoirs; 1958).

A. Hjort-Mouritzen, H. H. S. Digter og Troubadour (1950). E.B.

Seeley, SIR JOHN ROBERT (*London 10 IX 1834; ∞1869 Mary Phillott; †Cambridge 13 I 1895), English political historian and author of Ecce Homo (1865; pub. anon.) which, presenting only the humanity of Christ, profoundly stirred religious circles.

Life and Times of Stein (1878); Natural Religion (1882); The Expansion of England (1883); Growth of British Foreign Policy (2 vols, 1895; with memoir by G. W. Prothero). R.M.H.

Seemann, AUGUST (*Gross-Roge, Mecklenburg 14 IX 1872; †Yser canal 2 VII 1916), Low German lyrical poet. He tried, often successfully, to adapt the forms of Symbolism and Expressionism to the Low German language.

Heitblicken (1902); Andäü (1905); Tweilicht (1907); Vierblatt (1909); Hänn'n (1910); Bevernadeln (1913); Dreieinigkei (1915). G.C.

Seferis, GIORGOS (*Smyrna 29 II 1900; ∞1941

Maria Zannou; †20 IX 1971), Greek poet and critic. Nobel prize for literature 1963. Greek Ministry of Foreign Affairs 1926–62 (ambassador to Great Britain 1957–62). One of the major poets of his generation, Seferis in his early poems experimented with a kind of 'pure' poetry in the manner of Valéry*, and it was only with Mythistorema (1935), after absorbing the influences of Pound* and Eliot*, that he found his mature voice with a freer, more natural mode of expression, simple, undecorated and direct. It is a richly traditional voice in which Heraclitan and Stoic undertones combine with images and echoes from all phases of Greek history, ancient, Byzantine and post-Byzantine to give an ever-deepening comment on the human predicament among the inhuman conditions of the modern world. In addition to his poetry Seferis has also written a number of essays, mostly on literary themes, in which his wide learning is matched by rare critical acumen and sensibility.

Poemata 1924–1955 (1965); Tria kryfa poimata (1966); Dokimes (essays; 1962).—Poems (tr. R. Warner, 1960); Collected Poems 1924–1955 (tr. E. Keeley and P. Sherrard, 1969); Three Secret Poems (tr. W. Kaiser, 1969); On the Greek Style (essays; tr. R. Warner, 1966); Poesie (Ital. tr. F. M. Pontani, 1963); Poèmes (tr. J. Lacarrière, 1964).

A. Karantonis, O poitis G. S. (1931); Yia ton Seferi (ed. G. P. Savidis, 1961); G. K. Katsimbalis, Vivliografia G. S. (1961). P.O.A.S.

Ségalen, VICTOR (*Brest 14 I 1878; †Huelgoat 21 V 1919), French poet and novelist. A ship's doctor, he spent his short life in the Pacific and the Far East, and fell under their spell. He was also influenced by Nietzsche*, the Symbolists, and modern art. His writing is closely textured, concise, with a note of originality and reserve which transcends its framework of exoticism and introduces us to the depths of an inner world. Although his poems are more hermetic than those of Claudel* or Saint-John* Perse, Stèles (64 free-verse poems; pub. Peking, 1912; crit. ed. 1963) tends to place him on their level.

POETRY: Peintures (1916; 1929); Odes (1926; followed by Tibet, 1963).—NOVELS: Les immémoriaux (1907; 1956); René Leys (1921; 1950); Équipe, voyage au pays du réel (1929); Lettres de Chine (1967).

Cahiers du Sud, special no. (1948); H. Bouillier, V. S. (1961); J. L. Bédouin, V. S. (1964). M.G.

Šegedin, PETAR (*Zrnovo, Korčula 8 VII 1909), Croatian novelist and prose writer. Šegedin studied at Dubrovnik and Zagreb and held a number of responsible literary positions before the war. He spent some time in Paris after the war as Yugoslav cultural attaché. He began publishing before the war in Krlježa's* journal Pečat under the pen name of PETAR KRUŽIĆ, but his main works were his two post-war novels which marked a new direction for Croatian prose in the short but bleak era of socialist realism. Both are impressive psychological studies, one of a young boy's religious fanaticism, the other of loneliness, and they also show the author's deep understanding of his native Dalmatia with the traditions and the backwardness of its society. Šegedin has also written some war stories and some dealing with the hidden traumatic after-effects of war on individuals, but nothing as penetrating as his two early novels.

NOVELS: Djeca bozja (1946; 1960); Osamljenici (1947; 1961).—STORIES: Mrtvo more (1953); Proza (1953); Na istom putu (1963); Orfej u maloj bašti (1964).—ESSAYS: Na putu (1953; 1962); Eseji (1956); Susreti (1962). B.J.

Segher Dengotgaf, Flemish poet who, early in the 13th century, adapted two episodes from the Roman de Troie by Benoît* de Sainte Maure (Tpaerlement van Troyen and Die Sevenste Strijf) and added an introduction, Tprieel van Troyen.

Oudvlaemsche Gedichten (ed. J. P. Blommaert, 1838); ed. N. de Pauw and E. Gailliard in J. van Maerlant's Istorie van Troyen, III–IV (1890); Tprieel van Troyen (ed. G. C. de Waard and G. C. Dupuis, 2nd ed. 1966).

J. A. N. Knuttel in De Gids (1938); W. P. Gerritsen and F. C. van Gestel in Handelingen 28. Nederl. Filologencongr. (1964). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Seghers, ANNA, pseud. of NETTY RADVANYI (*Mainz 19 XI 1900), German novelist and short-story writer. Since her return from exile in 1947 she has lived in East Berlin. Always a politically engaged writer, her theme is human suffering, persecution and the political upheavals of our time. Her novel Das siebte Kreuz (1942; Eng. tr. J. A. Galston, 1943) describes the flight of seven prisoners from a German concentration camp and the death of six of them on crosses on recapture. Another important novel, Transit (1943; tr. idem, 1945), describes the plight of German refugees.

NOVELS: Die Rettung (1937); Die Toten bleiben jung (1949; Eng. tr. 1950); Die Entscheidung (1959); Das Vertrauen (1968).—Die Kraft der Schwachen (9 stories; 1965).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesammelte Werke (8 vols, 1951); Der Bienenstock (short stories; 3 vols, 1963).

P. Rilla, 'Die Erzählerin A. S.' in Sinn und Form, II (1950); W. Merklin, 'A. S.' in Frankfurter Hefte, VII (1952); J. Scholz, A. S. Leben und Werk (1960); S. Hermlin, 'A. S.' in Sinn und Form, XII (1960); F. Albrecht, Die Erzählerin A. S. 1926–32 (1965); I. Diersen, S.-Studien: Interpretationen von Werken aus den Jahren 1926–35 (1965); M. Triesch, 'Martyrdom and Everlasting Life: two stories by A. S.' in Studies in Short Fiction, III (1966); Kurt Batt, 'Unmittelbarkeit und Praxis. Zur ästhetischen Position von A. S.' in Positionen (ed. W. Mittenzwei, Leipzig, 1969). F.M.K.

Segni, BERNARDO (*Florence 1504; †ibid. 13 IV 1558), Italian historian. From 1535 he worked for the Medici. A classical scholar, he made several translations from Aristotle* and is remembered for his Istorie Fiorentine 1527-55 and his Vita di Niccolò Capponi (1547)—first published together in 1723.

M. Lupo-Gentile, 'Studi sulla storiografia fiorentina alla corte di Cosimo, I' in Annali della Reale Scuola Normale Superiore di Pisa, XIX (1905).
B.R.

Segrals, JEAN REGNAULT DE (*Caen 22 VIII 1624; †ibid. 24 III 1701), French writer. He translated Virgil* and wrote pleasant pastoral poetry. While secretary to the Duchess of Montpensier (1648-72) he collected the character-sketches composed in her salon, so helping to launch the vogue of 'portraits'. He signed Mme de La* Fayette's novel, Zafde, in which he perhaps collaborated. His short story Floridon (1657) told the story of Bajazet 15 years before Racine*.

VERSE: Athis (1653); Poésies diverses (1658); Œuvres diverses (Amsterdam, 1723).—PROSE: Nouvelles françaises (1657); Histoire romanesque de Don Juan d'Autriche (1659); ed., Divers portraits (1659) and La Galerie des peintures (1663; ed. E. de Barthélemy, 1860); Segraisiana (1721).
W. T. Tipping, J. R. de S. (1933). G.B.

Segura, MANUEL ASCENSIO (*Lima 1805; †ibid. 1871), Peruvian playwright, author of a dozen light plays in the comedy of manners style. Segura's first play was staged in 1839. Eleven are contained in Artículos, poesías y comedias (1886). Two others were written in collaboration with Ricardo Palma*.
E.Sa.

Sei SHŌNAGON, pseud. (*966 or 967; †?after 1013), Japanese writer and poet. The daughter of a poet, Kiyohara no Motosuke (her personal name may have been NAKIKO), in 991 she entered the service of the Empress Sadako (†1000). Her Makura no sōshi (c. 1000-15) is a miscellany which was the first of many works of Japanese literature known as zuihitsu or 'following the pen'; it is an account of impressions and events of the years 991 to 1000, sometimes in diary form, sometimes grouped by subject. Details of her subsequent life are not recorded, though it is believed that she retired to a Buddhist nunnery.

Sei Shōnagon was familiar with Chinese literature, and her book shows a keen intellect, strong personality, epigrammatic wit and clearly-defined opinions. The wide range of the subjects mentioned gives a clear picture of contemporary court life, even though matters outside the court are rarely included. The style of the book is flexible, lively, vivid and poetical.
E.B.C.

The Pillow Book of S. S. (complete tr. I. I.

Morris, 2 vols, 1967); The Pillow-Book of S. S. (sel. tr. A. Waley, 1928; extracts in Anthology of Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1955); The Sketch Book of the Lady S. S. (diff. sel. tr. N. Kobayashi, 1930); Les notes de chevet de Sei S. (complete tr. A. Beaujard, 1934; repr. 1966); Das Kopfkissenbuch (tr. M. Watanabe, 1952).

A. Beaujard, Sei S., son temps et son œuvre (1934); I. I. Morris, The World of the Shining Prince (1964).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Seidel, HEINRICH (*Perlin, Mecklenburg 25 VI 1842; †Grosslichterfelde nr Berlin 7 XI 1906), German novelist. Originally an engineer, he began writing in 1874 and made it his profession in 1880. The hero, Leberecht Hühnchen, first appeared in a story in 1882 and proved such a success that he became the central figure of many new stories which finally were integrated into one novel, a work of humour, human kindness and naive optimism.

Leberecht Hühnchen (1900; Eng. tr. A. Werner-Spanhoofd, 1913-15).—Gesammelte Schriften (20 vols, 1888-1907); Gesammelte Werke (5 vols, 1925).
R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Seidel, INA (*Halle 15 IX 1885; ∞Heinrich Wolfgang Seidel), novelist and poet, the representative Protestant woman writer in German. Her sufferings through illness impelled her to write poetry and inspired her best work—the novel Das Wunschkind (1930; The Wish Child, tr. G. Dunning-Gribble, 1935), a moving portrait of womanhood.

Das Labyrinth (1922; tr. O. Williams, 1932); Sterne der Heimkehr (1923); Der Weg ohne Wahl (1933); Lennacker (1938); Gesammelte Gedichte (1937); Das unverwesliche Erbe (1954); Gedichte (poems 1905-55; 1955); Michaela (1959).

C. di San Lazzaro, I. S. (1938); K. A. Horst, I. S., Wesen und Werk (with biblio.; 1956); W. Dress, Das Problem des Protestantismus: Zu I. S.s Büchern (1958).
R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Seifert, JAROSLAV (*Prague 23 IX 1901), Czech poet. From his early 'proletarian' poetry Město v slzách ('A City in Tears'; 1920) Seifert passed to the 'poetistic' school of Nezval*, Na vlnách T. S. F. ('On Wireless Waves'; 1925), only to show a maturer style in the melodious personal lyrics of Ruce Venušiny ('Hands of Venus'; 1936). A new and deeper note came into his poetry with the impact of the Czech national tragedy after 1938 (Zhasněte světla, 1938; Světlem oděná, 1940). In 1965, after ten years' silence, Koncert na ostrově expressed acceptance of the tragic reality of life.

Dilo (1956 ff.).

R.A.

Sekulić, ISIDORA (*Mošorin, Bačka 16 II 1877; †Belgrade 5 IV 1958), Serbian writer, esteemed particularly for the realistic and aesthetic value of her critical essays.

Saputnici (1913); Pisma iz Norveške (1914); Hronika palanačkog groblja (1940).—ESSAYS: Anali-tički trenuci i razmišljanja (3 vols, 1941–43); Mir i nemir (1957); Eseji (2 vols, 1961); Teme (1962).
S. Marković, I. S. (1969). V.J.

Obras (13 vols, 1882–94).—Flores y espinas (1883); La manzana de oro (serial novel; 6 vols, 1872).

E. Díaz de Revenga, Estudio sobre S. (1915).
R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Selander, NILS STEN EDVARD (*Stockholm 1 VII 1891; †ibid. 8 IV 1957), Swedish poet, journalist and naturalist; literary and dramatic critic to Svenska Dagbladet since 1936. Best known for his lyrics, which render moods and themes from daily life in realistic, almost conversational idiom.

VERSE: Vers och visor (1916); Vår Herres hage (1923); Sommarnatten (1941); Dikter från 25 år (1945); Avsked (1957).—PROSE: Mark och männis-kor (1937); Den gröna jorden (1941).—ESSAYS: Pegaser och Kåpphästar (1950); Det levande landskapet i Sverige (1955); Mark och rymd (post-humous work; 1958).

S. Lindroth, 'Humanisten S.' in Presens (1936); O. Hedberg, S. S. Inträdestal i Svenska akademien (1957).
B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Selby, HUBERT, JR (*Brooklyn, N.Y. 23 VII 1928), American novelist. He served from 1944 to 1946 in the U.S. Merchant Marine, where he undoubtedly encountered much of the toughness to be found in his first novel, Last Exit to Brooklyn (1964). This book was prosecuted for obscenity in both the U.S.A. and England where it was at first not recognized that Selby's holding a mirror up to nature entailed much of his squalid circumstance and degraded language.
D.E.Mo.

Selden, JOHN (*Salvington 16 XII 1584; †London 30 XI 1654), English antiquary and constitutional lawyer. Selden was educated at Chichester School and Hart Hall, Oxford, and became a Bencher of the Inner Temple. He entered Parliament in 1623 and took part in many debates on constitutional matters. He won considerable renown as an Oriental scholar, particularly as an expositor of rabbinical law. His vigorous and delightful Table Talk, collected during the last 20 years of his life by his secretary Richard Milward, was published in 1689.
G.K.H.

Titles of Honour (1614); De Diis Syris (1617); History of Tithes (1618); Marmora Arundeliana (1624); Mare Clausum (1635); De Jure Naturali (1640).—Opera omnia (ed. D. Wilkins, 3 vols, 1726); Table Talk (ed. Sir F. Pollock, 1927).
G.K.H. (C.B.)

Selgas y Carrasco, José (*Lorca, Murcia 1822; †Madrid 1882), Spanish writer. He had to abandon his studies for priesthood in order to support his family. A good journalist and a mediocre novelist, it is for his poetry that he is remembered. Primavera (1850) and Estío (1882) show a reaction against exaggerated Romanticism and there is considerable delicacy of treatment in his poems.
R.M.N.

Selimović, MEHMED (*Tuzla 26 IV 1910), Serbian novelist and prose writer. Before the war Selimović studied in Belgrade and worked as a teacher in Tuzla. He fought with the Partisans during the war and in 1944 was a member of the Belgrade War Crimes Committee. From 1947 he taught at the University of Sarajevo, was drama director of the Bosnian National Theatre there and since then has been chief editor with the Svjetlost publishing house. He began publishing war stories in 1951 and a novel, Tišine, followed in 1961, but by far his greatest achievement is the novel Derviš i smrt (1966). It is an admirable account of a strong man obsessed with death and vengeance and corrupted at last by power. It offers a fearsome insight into the declining Turkish administrative and religious systems in Sarajevo, and a startling psychological analysis of the workings of the Muslim mind. Like Andrić's* novels, its thematic references to death, vengeance, oppression and the corruption of power go far outside the novel's concrete setting.

STORIES: Prva četa (1951); Tudja zemlja (1962); Magla i mjesečina (1965).
B.J.

Sel'vinsky, ILYA (*Simferopol 1899), Soviet poet and one-time leader of the 'constructivist' school of literature which aimed at organizing the pattern of a poem exclusively in accordance with its subject.

Ulyalayeveshchina (1927); Zapiski poeta (1928); Pushtorg (1929); Pao-Pao (1932); Deklaratsiya prav (1933); Rytsar' Ioann (1939); Liriki i drama (1947); Izbrannye proizvedeniya (1953).
J.L.

Selvon, SAMUEL (DICKSON) (*San Fernando, Trinidad 20 V 1923; ∞1947 Draupadi Persaud, ∞1963 Althea Nesta Daroux), West Indian novelist and perhaps the most popular short-story writer in Trinidad in the 1940s. He migrated to England in 1950, and his work gained in significance by being set partly in the West Indies and partly in London. His work is popular for the genial humour that allows him to interpret compassionately the peasant and illiterate levels of West Indian life. But he is equally important for the perceptiveness of that interpretation and his complete mastery of West Indian Creole as the ideal narrative medium, as shown in his first novel, A Brighter Sun (1952). This is a tender evocation of the emergence of a married teenage rural East Indian couple into adult life in a suburban cosmopolitan society shaken by traumatic events.

The Lonely Londoners (1956); Ways of Sunlight (1957); The Housing Lark (1965); The Plains of Caroni (1970).
A.D.Dr.

Semadeni, JON (*Vna 30 V 1910), Ræto-Romansch author. Founder (1944) of the theatrical company La culissa and the most important Romansch dramatist. Beginning with realistic plays he has turned, like Eliot* and Anouilh*, to recreating the past in terms of contemporary human problems. His prose poem, La jürada (with Ger. tr., 1967), daringly blends the real and the fantastic. He was joint-founder with Biert* and Rauch* of the satirical cabaret La panaglia (1953).

PLAYS: La famiglia Rubar (1941); Chispar Rentsch (1944); La s-chürdüm dal sulai (1949); Ün quader chi nu quadra (1959); Il bal da la schocca cotschna (1960); L'uman derschader (1962).

R.R.B.

Sembène OUSMANE (*Zinguinchor, Senegal 8 I 1923), Francophone African novelist. Sembène has had a varied career as fisherman in Senegal, soldier during the Second World War, and docker and trade-union leader in Marseilles. His novels reflect his experiences and, rare among Francophone African writers, evoke the lives of Africans caught up in the urbanization and industrialization of Africa.

Le docker noir (1956); O pays, mon beau peuple (1957); Les bouts de bois de Dieu (1960); God's Bits of Wood, tr. F. Price, 1962; Voltaïque (1962); L'Harmattan (1964); Vehi-Ciosane, suivi du Mandat (1965); The Money-Order, with White Genesis, tr. C. Wake, 1972).

J. I. Gleason, This Africa (1965); A. C. Brench, The Novelists' Inheritance in French Africa (1967). C.W.

Semënov, SERGEY ALEXANDROVICH (*1893), Soviet author of proletarian origin, writing documentary narratives and novels. His best-known works are Golod and Natalya Tarpova (1927), the portrait of an active Communist woman against the background of the NEP period.

Golod (1922); La faim, tr. B. Parain, 1927; Edinitsa v millione (1922); Da, vinoven (1925); Rasprava (1929). J.L.

Semonides, Greek iambic poet (late 7th century B.C.), born in Samos, lived in Amorgos. The surviving fragments have a deeply pessimistic tone; the longest compares different types of women to different animals, sow, vixen, bitch, she-ass, mare, ape, bee.

J. M. Edmonds, Elegy and Iambus, II (1931; with tr.). J.T.H.

Semper, JOHANNES (*Tuhalaane, Viljandimaa 22 III 1892; †Tallinn 21 II 1970), Estonian poet, novelist and playwright. After studies in St Petersburg and Moscow Semper spent several years abroad. Having voiced anti-German views in the 1930s he had to flee to Russia in 1941 to escape the Nazi occupation. He returned after the war an exponent of Socialist Realism and held senior posts in the Estonian Writers' Union. The influence of French and Russian Symbolism evident in his early poetry never wholly disappeared, and his treatment of the problems experienced by intellectuals both in their own social sphere and outside reveals a subtle appreciation of psychology. Semper's travelogues, verse and prolific translations introduced many Western European ideas into Estonian literature during the years between the two World Wars.

VERSE: Pierrot (1917); Jäljed liival (1920); Viis meelt (1926); Päike rentsliis (1930); Tuuleratas (1936); Ei vaikida saa (1943); Kuidas elaksid? (1958).—SHORT STORIES AND NOVELS: Hiina kett (1918); Armukadedus (1934); Kivi kivi pääle (1939); Punased nelgid (1955); Rote Nelken, tr. A. Baer, 1960).—PLAYS: Murrang (1949); Inimesed rist-tuultes (1960).—TRAVEL: Risti-rästi läbi Euroopa (1935); Lõuna Risti all (1937).—Matk minevikku (memoirs, 1969).—Valitud teosed (sel. works; 8 vols, 1962–70).

A. Mägi, Estonian Literature (1968); E. Nirk, 'J. S.' in Estonian Literature (1970). M.A.B.

Sempill of Beltrees, a family of Scottish poets. SIR JAMES (*1566; †1626) was an intimate of James* VI, a pupil of George Buchanan*, and Scottish ambassador to England (1599) and France (1601); he is the author of three tracts and a verse dialogue, The Packman's Paternoster, or A Picktooth for the Pope.

His son ROBERT (c. 1595–c. 1665), who fought on the Royalist side in the Civil War, is the author of the celebrated elegy on Habbie Simson, The Piper of Kilbarchan, a spirited early example of a semi-humorous Scots genre.

Robert's son FRANCIS (c. 1616–82) lived a colourful life as a laird and completed the family's poetic record with a number of merry and vigorous ballads, including Maggie Lauder, She Rose and Let Me In, Hallow Fair and The Blythsome Bridal.

The S. Ballads (ed. J. Paterson, 1849). J.K.

Šem Tob ibn Arduziel ben Isaac, RABBI: see Santob de Carrión.

Senancour, ÉTIENNE PRIVERT DE (*Paris 16 XI 1770; †Saint Cloud 10 I 1846), French writer. Senancour was a spiritual child of the 18th-century 'enlightenment'. On the outbreak of the Revolution he fled to Switzerland; after an unfortunate marriage he returned in 1804 to Paris where he led an obscure existence as a journalist. His best-known book is Obermann, a novel written in the form of letters, which describes, in lyrical vein, a mood of Weltschmerz no less deep, though more intellectually lucid, than that of Chateaubriand's* René.

Rêveries sur la nature primitive de l'homme (1799; crit. ed. J. Merlant, 1910); Obermann

(1804; enlarged 2nd ed., 1833; crit. ed. G. Michaut, 1910; prec. by Journal intime d'Obermann, crit. ed. A. Monglond, 3 vols, 1948); Observations sur le génie du Christianisme (1816); Aldomen (ed. A. Monglond, 1925); De l'amour (1925).

J. Merlant, S. (1907); G. Michaut, S., ses amis et ses ennemis (1909); A. Monglond, Vies pré-romantiques (1925), Le mariage et la vieillesse de S. (1933) and Le journal intime d'Obermann (1947); A. Finot, S. ou le myopathique (1947).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Sendebar (Libro de los engaños e los asayamientos de las mugeres; 1253), Spanish collection of fabliaux: 26 very humorous tales of female deceptions, set in a frame-story. The book was translated from the Arabic by order of Prince Fadrique, brother of Alfonso* X of Castile. There are later versions in Spanish and other European languages. (See also Johannes* de Alta Silva).

Versiones castellanas del S. (ed. A. González Palencia, 1946); Libro de los engaños (ed. J. E. Keller, Chapel Hill, N.C., 1959; The Book of the Wiles of Women, tr. idem, ibid., 1956).

D. Comparetti, Researches Respecting the Book of Sindibad (London, 1882); G. T. Artola, 'Sindibad in medieval Spanish' in Mod. Lang. Notes, LXXI (1956); B. E. Perry, 'The origin of the Book of Sindbad' in Fabula, III (1959-60).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Sender, RAMÓN (*Huesca 1902), Spanish writer. He interrupted his studies of law in favour of a literary career and fought in the Civil War as a Republican, going afterwards to America. With Imán (1930)—a vivid chronicle of the Moroccan campaign—he scored a great success, repeated in several subsequent books. A vigorous, realistic writer, sensitive to social problems and to their impact on man, he enjoys abroad a greater reputation than in his own country. R.M.N.

Imán (1930; Earmarked for Hell, tr. J. Cleugh, 1934); El problema religioso en México (1928); El Verbo se hizo sexo (1931); Siete domingos rojos (1932; Seven Red Sundays, tr. P. C. Mitchell, 1936); Mr Witt en el Cantón (1935; Mr Witt Among the Rebels, tr. idem, 1937); Contraataque (1938; Counter Attack in Spain, tr. idem, 1937); The War in Spain (tr. idem, 1937); El lugar del hombre (1939); Epitalamio del prieto Trinidad (1942; Dark Wedding, tr. E. Clark, 1943); La Jornada (novel in 4 parts), I: Crónica del alba (1942; Chronicle of Dawn, tr. W. R. Trask, 1945), II: Hipogrifo violento (1956), III: La quinta Julieta (1957), IV: Los laureles de Anselmo (1958); El rey y la reina (1947; tr. The King and Queen, 1949); La esfera (1947; The Sphere, tr. F. Giovanelli, 1950); El verdugo afable (1952; The Affable Hangman, tr. F. Hall, 1954).

F. Carrasquer, 'Imán' y la novela histórica de R. J. S. (Zaandijk, 1968; 2nd ed., London, 1970). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Seneca the Elder (*Corduba, Spain, c. 55 B.C.; †A.D. 37/41), Roman rhetorician, father of Seneca* the philosopher, and grandfather of Lucan*. Towards the end of his life he wrote down from memory a collection of brilliant extracts from famous rhetoricians on standard school themes with his own observations on the speakers. Seneca is valuable not only as an interesting and incisive literary critic, but as a source of information on the rhetorical schools. His style is strong and manly, showing a transitional stage between Ciceronian orotundity and Silver-Age sententiousness.

Eds: A. Kiessling (1872; repr. 1967); H. J. Müller (1887; repr. 1963); Suasoriae (ed. with tr. and comm. W. A. Edward, 1928).

H. Bornecque, Les déclamations et les déclamateurs d'après Sénèque le père (1902; repr. 1967); A. Gwynn, Roman Education From Cicero to Quintilian (1926); S. F. Bonner, Roman Declamation (1949). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Seneca, LUCIUS ANNAEUS, the Younger, son of the elder Seneca (*Corduba c. 4 B.C.; †A.D. 65). He studied rhetoric and philosophy in Rome, became quaestor under Caligula, but was banished to Corsica by Claudius in 41 for suspected complicity in the adultery of Julia Livilla. Recalled in 49, he was made praetor and entrusted with the education of Nero. For the first five years of Nero's reign he exercised a salutary restraint on the young emperor, but intrigues of his enemies brought about his dismissal (62). Being accused of complicity in Piso's conspiracy, he committed suicide. Seneca's works comprise (1) ten prose works transmitted to us under the inappropriate title of Dialogi, (2) some other longish prose works, (3) 124 Epistulae morales to Lucilius, (4) the Apocolocyntosis ('Pumpkinification' of Claudius), (5) nine tragedies. Of the first group the Consolatio ad Marciam is the most readable; of the second, the De beneficiis is the most imposing, although tediously detailed. The Naturales quaestiones, probably from Stoic sources, deals with striking natural phenomena and is unique in this genre in Latin literature. In the third group Seneca directs a young friend's philosophizing. The Apocolocyntosis is a skit upon Claudius' deification written to please Nero. The tragedies exhibit unnatural sentiment expressed in frigid bombast and are enlivened by scenes of exaggerated suffering and slaughter. Their influence upon Renaissance tragedy was paramount. It is easy to condemn Seneca for his inconsistencies—a millionaire who praises the simple life, a busy politician who praises retirement. But there is much in his character that claims esteem, and the hazards of life as Nero's prime minister made philosophic consistency difficult. J.A.W.

Dialogorum libri XII (ed. E. Hermes, 1905, repr. 1969; Bks 10-12 ed. with comm. J. D. Duff, 1915; Moral Essays, tr. J. W. Basore, 3 vols, 1932-35);

De beneficiis and De clementia (ed. C. Hosius, 2nd ed. 1914, repr. 1969; tr. J. W. Basore, op. cit.); Naturales quaestiones (ed. A. Gercke, 1907, repr. 1967; Physical Science in the Time of Nero, tr. with comm. J. Clarke and A. Geikie, 1910); Epistulae morales (eds. L. D. Reynolds, 2 vols, 1965; O. Hense, 2nd ed. 1914; Select Letters, ed. with comm. W. C. Summers, 1910; tr. R. M. Gummere, 3 vols, 1917–25; S.: Letters From a Stoic, sel. tr. R. Campbell, 1969); Apocolocyntosis (ed. F. Bücheler and W. Heraeus, with Petronius*, 6th ed. 1922, repr. 1958; trs. A. P. Ball, with comm., 1902; W. H. D. Rouse, 1913); tragedies (eds. R. Peiper and G. Richter, 2nd ed. 1902; H. Moricca, 3 vols, 1947; Three Tragedies of S., ed. with comm. H. M. Kingery, 1905, repr. 1966; tr. F. J. Miller, 2 vols, 1916–17; S.: Four Tragedies and Octavia, tr. E. F. Watling, 1966).

F. Holland, S. (1920); A. Bourgerie, Sénèque prosateur (1922); C. W. Mendell, Our S. (1941; repr. 1968); P. Grimal, Sénèque, sa vie, son oeuvre, avec un exposé de sa philosophie (1948; 3rd ed. rev. 1966).—A. D. Godley, Senecan Tragedy (1912); F. L. Lucas, S. and Elizabethan Tragedy (1922).
J.A.W. (J.D.)

Senghor, LÉOPOLD SÉDAR (*Joal, Senegal 9 X 1906), Francophone African poet, essayist and statesman. Educated in Dakar, at the Lycée Louis Le Grand in Paris and at the Sorbonne, where he obtained his agrégation in 1935, Senghor was mobilized at the outbreak of war in 1939 and was subsequently a prisoner-of-war. In 1945, he published his first volume of poetry and entered politics, rapidly rising to a position of leadership, both as député in the French Parliament and as leader of the majority party in Senegal. For Senghor the writing of poetry and political commitment were interdependent, the one activity constantly illuminating and justifying the other. Also linked with his career as poet-politician was the promotion of the concept of NEGRIITUDE. In 1960 Senghor became the President of the independent Republic of Senegal, and in 1961 he published his last volume of poems to date, all written before 1960.

Senghor has dominated the Francophone African literary scene since 1945. To some extent this has been due to his role as political leader and to the notoriety of his concept of Négritude, but there can be no doubt about the outstanding quality of his poetry. The theme of the new African culture with its roots in the cultural traditions of Africa runs through all his work, but his poetry is held together primarily by the figure of the poet as the spokesman of his people. Senghor seems to have found his style from the outset, adopting the Biblical verset line favoured by Paul Claudel* and Saint-John* Perse, but it has grown in suppleness and assurance as Senghor himself has become more confident in his double role as poet and political leader. His imagery is strongly visual, often surrealistic in effect, drawing freely on the African past and the African natural environment. Critics have often noted the combination of rhetoric and sensuality in his poetry. Senghor does not seem to have had many imitators, but his moral influence on contemporary African literature has been considerable.

VERSE: Chants d'ombre (1945); Hosties noires (1948); Chants pour Naëtt (1950); Ethiopiennes (1956); Nocturnes (1961; tr. J. Reed and C. Wake, 1969).—Ed., Anthologie de la nouvelle poésie nègre et malgache (1948).—Poèmes (coll.; 1964).—Liberté I. Négritude et Humanisme (prose; 1964).—Selected Poems (tr. J. Reed and C. Wake, 1964); Prose and Poetry (tr. idem, 1965).

A. Guibert, L. S. S. (1961); G. Moore, Seven African Writers (1962); L. Kesteloot, Les écrivains noirs de langue française (1962); H. de Leusse, L. S. S. l'Africain (1967); S. O. Mezu, L. S. S. et la défense et illustration de la civilisation noire (1968); E. Milcent and M. Sorde, L.-S. S. et la naissance de l'Afrique moderne (1969); I. L. Markowitz, S. and the Politics of Négritude (1970).
C.W.

Senkovsky, OSIP IVANOVICH, occasional pseud. BARON BRAMBEUS (*1800; †1859), Russian journalist, editor and critic of the unscrupulous time-serving variety. From 1834 he edited the important Biblioteka dlya chteniya ('Library for Reading'). In his lack of principles he was matched by his two confrères, Bulgarin* and Grech*—a triumvirate responsible for many an unsavoury feature of Russian journalism.

Sobranie sochineniy (9 vols, 1858–59).

V. Kaverin, Istoriya Osipa Senkovskogo (1929).
J.L.

Šenoa, AUGUST (*Zagreb 14 XI 1838; †ibid. 13 XII 1881), Croatian poet, novelist, critic, dramatist. He studied in Prague and Zagreb, devoting himself in the latter city to the theatre, journalism and literature. He became an influential mouthpiece of middle-class liberalism, Croat nationalism and Slav brotherhood, and of the belief in education and progress, but his literary authority was challenged towards the end of his life by writers of the 'young' school. He played an important part in the formative period of Croatian literature, striving to free the theatre from German influence and develop national themes and style. His best works are his historical novels, through which he sought to arouse national consciousness, and which give a vivid picture of medieval and 18th-century Croatia.

NOVELS: Zlatarevo zlato (1872); Seljačka buna (1876); Prosjak Luka (1879).—Sabrana djela (coll. works; 20 vols, 1931–35).
V.J.

Senryū: see Karai SENRYŪ.

Sepúlveda, JUAN GINÉS DE (*Pozoblanco, nr Córdoba 11490; †ibid. 11573), Spanish humanist. He studied at Córdoba, Alcalá and Bologna. His Latin was excellent and he wrote histories of Charles V and the early years of Philip II. Besides translating Aristotle's* Politics, he had a famous controversy with Las* Casas. He also attacked Erasmus*. His minor works include many letters to other humanists.

Opera (4 vols, 1780); 'Democrates alter' (ed. and tr. M. Menéndez y Pelayo in Boletín de la Real Acad. de la Historia, XXI, 1892).

A. F. G. Bell, J. G. de S. (1924). E.M.W.

Serafimovich, ALEXANDER, pseud. of ALEXANDER SERAFIMOVICH POPOV (*1863; †1949); Russian author of Cossack origin and one-time member of Gorky's* Znanie group of writers. He specialized in stories, but his present reputation rests mainly on his novel, Zhelezny potok (1924; The Iron Flood, tr. anon., 1935), dealing with the Civil War in the Caucasus. The book has become a Soviet classic.

Sochineniya (6 vols, 1911-13); Gorod i stepi (1923); Rasskazy (1935); Voyemnye rasskazy (1936); Izbrannye priozvedeniya (1947); Sobranie sochineniy (10 vols, 1940-48).

A. Kurilenkov, A. S. (1950). J.L.

Serao, MATILDE (*Patras, Greece 7 III 1856; †Naples 24 VII 1927), Italian journalist and novelist who wrote about 40 novels besides founding and directing a newspaper—Il Giorno—at Naples and contributing to many others. Her output was vast but uneven, and the execution slipshod. Some of the best novels are Il romanzo della fanciulla (1886), La ballerina (1899), Suor Giovanna della Croce (1901) and Il paese di Cuccagna (1890), where the subject-matter is drawn mainly from the humbler walks of Neapolitan life.

M. S. (anthol.; ed. with good intro. P. Pancrazi, 2 vols, 1944).

P. Pancrazi, Scrittori italiani dal Carducci al D'Annunzio (1937); A. Banti, M. S. (1965).—A. Vallone, 'Bibliografia di M. S.' in Quadribo (1939). N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Sercambi, GIOVANNI (*Lucca 18 II 1348; †ibid. 27 V 1424), Italian writer, soldier and politician. Sercambi wrote the Chroniche delle cose di Lucca (1164-1423) and the Monito, a programme for political, military and economic government addressed to the Guinigi signoria. He also composed 155 realistic, fabulous and licentious novelle set in a framework suggested by the Decameron and varying in style between a colloquial and a literary idiom.

Chroniche (ed. S. Bongi, 3 vols, 1892); Novelle (ed. R. Renier, 1889); Prosatori volgari del Quattrocento (ed. C. Varese, 1955; with biblio);

G. Beretta, Contributo all'opera novellistica di G. S. con il testo di 14 novelle inedite (1968).

L. Di Francia, La novellistica (1924); G. Petrocchi, 'Il novelliere medievale del S.' in Convivium, I (1949); L. Russo, 'Ser Giovanni Fiorentino e G. S.' in Belfagor, XI (1956).

M.W.

Sardini, SIMONE, called IL SAVIOZZO (*Siena c. 1360; †Toscanello c. 1420), Italian poet. Leaving Siena in 1389, Sardini passed a wretched life of service at various Italian courts; he committed suicide in prison. He composed love lyrics, political adulations addressed to the Visconti, bitter disperate cursing fortune (Le 'nfastidite labbia) and moralistic poems. These abound in mythological comparisons and reminiscences of the Divina Commedia; at times there is a psychological artfulness derived from Petrarch*.

Rime (crit. ed. E. Pasquini, 1965); Rimatori del tardo Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1967).

G. Volpi, 'La vita e le rime di S. S.' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XV (1890). M.W.

Sereni, VITTORIO (*Luino 27 VII 1913), Italian poet and critic, a member, albeit very independent, of the second generation of 'hermetic' poets. Formerly a schoolteacher, he now works for the publishing house of Mondadori. He became known with Diario d'Algeria (1947), mostly written while a prisoner of war in North Africa.

Poesie (1942); Gli immediati dintorni (1962); Gli strumenti umani (1965). B.M.

Sergeyev-Tsensky, SERGEY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1876; †Crimea 1945), Russian author. In his early narratives he tackled the irrational side of existence in a style full of mannerisms and verbal ornamentation. After 1917 he became more direct and disciplined, especially in his ambitious but unfinished series of novels entitled Preobrazhenie ('Transfiguration'), a magnificent series of 17 novels and narratives describing the eve of the First World War, the war and the period after 1917. He also wrote an excellent historical novel about the Crimean War, Sevastopol'skaya strada (3 vols, 1939-40).

Sad (1906); Chudo (1923); Valya (1926); Michel Lermontov (1933); Mayak v tumane (1935); Iskat', vsegda iskat' (1935); Slovo o polkakh tsarskikh (1935); Brusilovskiy proryv (1944); Brusilov's Breakthrough, tr. H. Altschuler, (1945); Pushki vydvigayut (1944).—Izbrannoe (1957); Sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1967).

S.-T. v zhizni i tvorchestve (ed. A. V. Pryamkov, 1963). J.L.

Sérgio, ANTÓNIO (*Damão, Portuguese India 1883), Portuguese critic, historian and essayist. In his essays he brings a penetrating, well-disciplined mind to bear on a large variety of subjects: history, literature, education, political economy etc. A humanist and a liberal, his balanced judgement and clarity of thought and expression are in strong contrast with the vagueness and misplaced lyricism that vitiated so much Portuguese criticism until very recently.

Rimas (1908); Notas sobre Antero de Quental (1909); Ensaíos (8 vols, 1920–58); O desejado (1924); Bosquejo da história de Portugal (1923); A Sketch of the History of Portugal, tr. C. J. dos Santos, (1928).

V. Magalhães de Vilhena, A. S. e a filosofia (1961) and A. S. (1964). T.P.W.

Seriman, ZACCARIA ANGELO (*Venice 9 XI 1709; †ibid. 21 X 1784), Italian prose writer, poet, publisher and man of letters. Of wealthy Armenian merchant family settled in Venice since the 17th century; educated at the Collegio dei Nobili, Bologna. Seriman wrote the Viaggi di Enrico Wanton (1749–64), a witty and perceptive satire of the contemporary scene cast, in the manner of Swift* and Desfontaines, in the popular literary form of an imaginary voyage to the Paese delle Scimie and the Regno dei Cinocefali, situated in the uncharted regions of the Terra Australis Incognita. His other works, all published anonymously, include a prose translation from Pope* (Saggio sopra l'uomo, 1765), libretti for the opera seria (Caio Marzio Coriolano, 1747) and the opera buffa (Il matrimonio per astuzia, 1771), a cantata (La Reggia de Calipso, 1769), satirical almanachs (Almanacco ad uso de' Pedanti, 1767; Almanacco erudito, 1783), and the philosophical poem Aristipppo (1744), concerning the nature of happiness and spiritual tranquillity.

Viaggi di Enrico Wanton (4 vols, 1764; ed. B. Gamba, 6 vols, 1824–25).

D. M. White, Z. S. (1961).—G. B. Marchesi, Romanzieri e romanzi italiani del Settecento (1903); G. Ortolani, Voci e visioni del Settecento veneziano (1926); M. Parenti, Un romanzo italiano del Settecento: Saggio bibliografico su Z. S. (1948).

M.W.

Serlo of Bayeux (*1050; †1113–22), French canon of Bayeux and Avranches, monk of Mont-St-Michel, was a noted writer of satiric epigrams and invectives.

Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets (ed. T. Wright, 2 vols, 1872).

W. B. Sedgwick, 'The textual criticism of medieval Latin poets' in Speculum, V (1930); M. Manitius, Geschichte der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters, III (1931); J. de Ghellinck, L'essor de la littérature latine au XIIe siècle, II (1946); F. J. E. Raby, History of Secular Latin Poetry in the Middle Ages, II (1957).

R.R.R.

Serra, NARCISO SÁENZ DÍEZ (*Madrid 1830;

†ibid. 1877), Spanish playwright. After failing at the military academy he lived a gay, bohemian life. His production oscillated between Romanticism, plays of historical reconstruction, such as El reloj de San Plácido, and portrayal of contemporary characters and customs as in El amor y la Gaceta, ¡Don Tomás! and, above all, La calle de la Montera (1859).

Leyendas, cuentos y poesías (1877).

N. Alonso Cortés, 'N. S.' in Rev. de la Biblioteca, Archivo y Museo del Ayuntamiento de Madrid (1930) and Quevedo en el teatro y otras cosas (1930). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Serra, RENATO (*Cesena 5 XII 1884; †Podgora 20 VII 1915), Italian critic and essayist. He contributed to La Voce, in which was published in IV 1915 his celebrated Esame di coscienza di un letterato. Serra was an independent critic who preferred to describe himself as 'a reader'.

Scritti (2 vols, 1938); Epistolario (1934).

E. Raimondi, Il lettore di provincia, R. S. (1964); S. Briosi, R. S. (1968). B.M.

Service, ROBERT WILLIAM (*Preston, Eng. 16 I 1874; ∞1913 Germaine Bourgois; †11 IX 1958), Canadian novelist and verse writer. His rough frontier verses gained him immense popularity.

VERSES: Songs of a Sourdough (1907); Rhymes of a Rolling Stone (1912); Ballads of a Bohemian (1920); Songs of a Sun-Lover (1949).—Complete Poetical Works (5 vols, 1927).—NOVELS: The Pretender (1914); The Roughneck (1923); The House of Fear (1927). H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Servius (MAURUS S. HONORATUS) (late 4th century A.D.), Latin grammarian whose commentary on Virgil* is the most valuable exegetical work of antiquity that has been preserved. The commentary exists in a long and a short form; the material found only in the former being known as the Daniel Servius, after its first editor. The Daniel Servius is too learned to come from the pen of a 7th-century monk (the theory of Thilo) and is explained by Rand as being selected from the commentary of Aelius Donatus*. Servius shows wide and varied learning, and writes a clear, although not perfectly classical, Latin. J.A.W.

Ed. G. Thilo and H. Hagen (3 vols, 1878–1902; repr. 1961); ed. E. K. Rand et al. (Harvard ed.), in progr.: II (Aeneid, 1–2; 1946; reviewed E. Fraenkel in Jour. Roman Stud., XXXVIII–XXXIX, 1948–49), III (Aeneid, 3–5; 1965).

H. Georgii, Die antike Aeneiskritik aus den Scholien und anderen Quellen hergestellt (1891). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Settembrini, LUIGI (*Naples 17 IV 1813; †ibid. 4 XI 1876), Italian patriot and man of letters. He held several Chairs of literature, the one at Naples from 1861 until his death. A liberal, he spent many years in Bourbon gaols, where (before being spectacularly rescued) he translated Lucian*, whom he saw as a kindred free-thinking spirit.

Passionately and admirably high-minded, he does not emerge as a profound thinker either in his political pamphlets or in his Lezioni di letteratura italiana (3 vols, 1866-72; ed. G. Innamorati, 2 vols, 1964), dominated by his concept of a continual duel between enlightened free-thinkers and religious, especially Jesuit, obscurantism. Nevertheless, Settembrini's observations on literature are often illuminating. His warmth and directness are evident in all his works, but nowhere more so than in his autobiography, Ricordanze della mia vita, and in his private letters.

Protesta del popolo delle Due Sicilie (1847); Opere di Luciano volate in italiano (3 vols, 1861-62); Il Novellino di Masuccio Salernitano (1874); Ricordanze della mia vita (2 vols, 1879-80; ed. with other Scritti autobiografici, with good intro. and biblio. M. Themelly, 1961); Lettere dall'ergastolo (ed. idem, 1962).

A. Omodeo, 'L. S.' in Figure e passioni del Risorgimento italiano (1945). J.G.-R.

Settle, ELKANAH (*Dunstable 1 II 1647/48; ∞London 28 II 1673/74 Mary Warner; †London 12 II 1723/24), English poet, pamphleteer and dramatist whose clash with Dryden* brought him as Doeg into Absalom and Achitophel, and who is ridiculed in various places by Pope*. His Cambyzes and Empress of Morocco won him a reputation for heroic tragedy equal to Dryden's, but with a transference of Rochester's* patronage he gradually lost ground. Joining the Whigs, Settle wrote The Female Prelate, a well-written play as such, though outrageous in its invective. Settle is a playwright who, despite his bombast and exuberant style, understood the theatre, especially the use of machines and scenery. It was probably he who adapted Shakespeare's* A Midsummer Night's Dream for Henry Purcell as The Fairy Queen (1692; facs. 1969).

B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Cambyzes, King of Persia (1671); The Empress of Morocco (1673; in Five Heroic Plays, ed. B. Dobrée, 1960); Ibrahim, The Illustrious Bassa (1677; 'Preface to Ibrahim', ed. H. MacDonald, repr. 1947); Absalom Senior; or Achitophel Transpos'd (against Dryden; 1682); Notorious Imposter and Diego Redivivus (1692; ed. S. Peterson, 1958); The Complete Memoirs of... Will Morrell (1694; ed. idem in The Counterfeit Lady Unveiled, 1961).

F. C. Brown, E. S.: His Life and Works (1910); E. G. Fletcher, 'Biblio. of E. S.' in Notes and Queries, CLXIV (1933); R. E. Moore, Henry Purcell and the Restoration Theatre (1961).

J.R.B. (H.N.D.)

Seume, JOHANN GOTTFRIED (*Poserna nr Weissenfels 29 I 1763; †Teplitz 13 VI 1810), German writer. While a student, Seume was kidnapped into the Hessian forces leased to England for the American war. On his return he deserted, narrowly escaping execution (1783). He served in the Russian army (1793-96) and then made walking tours in Europe, the descriptions of which are his chief works.

Gedichte (1801); Spaziergang nach Syrakus (1802); Mein Sommer im Jahre 1805 (1807).—Werke (12 vols, 1826); Prosaschriften (ed. W. Kraft, 1962).

O. Plauer and C. Reissmann, J. G. S. (1898); K. A. Findeisen, J. G. S. (1938). H.B.G.

Seuse, HEINRICH (*Überlingen c. 1295; †Ulm 1366), Dominican mystic, author of the first German prose autobiography (completed c. 1362): a stylized account of his 'progress' and ascetic practices. More influential was his Büchlein der ewigen Weisheit (1328; tr. with modifications as Horologium Sapientiae, c. 1333): a dialogue between eternal wisdom (Christ) and the servant, of which hundreds of copies exist. His rhapsodic prose and vivid imagery (from minnesang and the Canticle) mitigate the gross sentimentality of some of his outpourings.

Deutsche Schriften (ed. K. Bihlmeyer, 1907, repr. 1961; modernized W. Lehmann, 1911); Horologium Sapientiae (ed. K. Richstätter, 1929).—The Life of the Servant and Little Book of Eternal Wisdom (tr. J. M. Clark, 1952 and 1953).

W. Preger, Geschichte der dt. Mystik im MA., II (1893); H. Wichgraf, 'Suso's Hor. Sap. in England' in Archiv f. d. Studium d. neueren Sprachen, CLXIX (1936); J. M. Clark, The Great German Mystics (1949); E. Colledge in Dominican Stud., VI (1953). F.P.P.

Séverin, FERNAND (*Grand-Manil 4 II 1867; ∞1904 Edith Luytens; †Ghent 4 IX 1931), Belgian poet, critic and Jeune Belgique writer; Professor of literature at Ghent University. His poetry, largely classical in form, is imbued with a gentle melancholy. Nature, seen through a haze of mysticism and sentimentality, is his principal inspiration.

VERSE: Le lys (1888); La solitude heureuse (1904); La source au fond des bois (1924); Poèmes (1930).—Théodore Weustenraad (crit.; 1914).

P. Champagne, Essai sur la poésie de F. S. (1923). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Severyanin, IGOR, pseud. of IGOR VASILYEVICH LOTAR'EV (*1887; †1942), Russian modernist poet and self-styled 'ego-futurist' whose volume, Kubok gromokipyashchii ('The Thunder-Seething Goblet'; 1913), was a poetic best-seller of the period. Gifted with rhythm and melody, he tried to create a genre of his own, called poeza. After a period of intense popularity just before 1914, his talent declined. He died in exile.

Zlatolira (1914); Crème de violettes (1919); Tragediya Titana (1923); Klassicheskie rozy (1931). J.L.

Sévigé, MARIE DE RABUTIN-CHANTAL, MARQUISE DE (*Paris 5 II 1626; ∞1644 Henri, Marquis de Sévigé; †Grignan 17 IV 1696), French letter-writer. She was the grand-daughter of Jeanne de Chantal, later canonized. Her unsatisfactory marriage ended with her husband's death in a duel (1651), and she was left, relatively impoverished, to bring up her children, the improvident Charles and the intelligent Françoise-Marguerite, who married (1669) the Comte de Grignan, Lieutenant-General of Provence. Partly for economy, partly through taste, Mme de Sévigé spent much time in the country—either at Libry with her beloved uncle, the Abbé Christophe de Coulanges, or with her daughter in Provence, or on her own estate at Les Rochers, Brittany. When in Paris she lived, after 1677, in the Hôtel Carnavalet. Cultured, vivacious, with an underlying seriousness, she belongs to the second rank of the aristocracy, having access to the court, though little influence there. Most of her letters, of which some 1,500 survive, were written to her relatives, particularly Mme de Grignan, and to such friends as De Retz*, Pomponne and Mme de La* Fayette. They form a fascinating running commentary on public and private life in the grand siècle, and are written with a warm spontaneity which only lacks a certain finesse.

Lettres (ed. L. Monmerqué and P. Mesnard, 14 vols and album, 1862–67; ed. G. Gailly, 3 vols, 1953–57).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Portraits de femmes (1829); J. Aldis, Mme de S. (London, 1907); A. Hallays, Mme de S. (1921); J. Lemoine, Mme de S., sa famille et ses amis (1927); Mme Saint-René Taillandier, Mme de S. et sa fille (1938). G.B.

Sewall, SAMUEL (*Bishopstoke, England 28 III 1652; ∞1675 Hannah Hull, ∞1719 Mrs Abigail Tilley, ∞1722 Mary Shrimpton; †Boston 1 I 1730), American diarist and merchant, the 'Puritan Pepys', who kept a diary recording petty gossip as well as important affairs.

Proposals Touching the Accomplishment of Prophecies (1713); Diary of S. S. (1878–82).

N. H. Chamberlain, S. S. and the World He Lived In (1897); O. E. Winslow, S. S. of Boston (1964). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Seward, Anna (*Eyam, Derby. 12 XII 1747; †Lichfield 25 III 1809), 'the swan of Lichfield', English versifier and letter-writer, friend of Mrs Piozzi* and Hayley*. R.M.H.

Poetical Works (ed. Walter Scott, 3 vols, 1810);

Letters (6 vols, 1811).—Louisa: a poetical novel (1784); Variety: a collection of Essays (1788); Memoir of Dr Darwin (1804).

H. Wickham, Journal and Correspondence of T. Sedgwick Whalley (2 vols, 1863); E. V. Lucas, A Swan and Her Friends (1907); M. Ashmun, The Singing Swan (her acquaintance with Johnson and Boswell; 1931); H. Pearson, The Swan of Lichfield (1936). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Sewall, ANNA (*Yarmouth 30 III 1820; †IV 1878), English author whose one work, Black Beauty (1877), autobiography of a horse, is a widely translated children's classic.

M. Bayly, Life and Letters of Mrs S. (mother of Anna; 1889). R.M.H.

Sewer: see Maciejowski, IGNACY.

Sexton, ANNE HARVEY (*Newton, Mass. 9 XI 1928; ∞1948 Alfred Sexton), American poet. Like Sylvia Plath*, she is largely a confessional poet and her poetry covers a similar area of mental breakdown and recovery in hospital. Her use of autobiographical detail and family history reflects the use of a similar technique by Robert Lowell* and W. D. Snodgrass*.

To Bedlam and Part Way Back (1960); All My Pretty Ones (1962); Live or Die (1966); Love Poems (1969). G.A.K.

Sextus Empiricus (late 2nd century A.D.), Greek doctor and Sceptical philosopher. His Outlines of Pyrrhonism gives an account of Scepticism, with criticisms of other systems: the criticisms are enlarged in Against the Dogmatists and Against the Schoolmasters (Adversus Mathematicos). His own philosophy is unimportant, but he provides useful evidence on the philosophies he discusses.

Ed. R. G. Bury (with tr.; 4 vols, 1933).

C. Stough, Greek Skepticism (1969). D.J.F.

Seyfullina, LYDIA NIKOLAYEVNA (*1889; †1954), Soviet author whose novels Pravonarushitell (1921), Peregrinoy (1923) and Virineya (1924), dealing with the various effects of the Revolution, made a strong impression in the early phase of Soviet fiction. She is a good observer of village poverty, but with melodramatic propensities and a taste for erotic realism.

Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1926–31); Izbrannoye (1948). J.L.

Shaaban Robert (*1911 Tanga [Tanzania]; †ibid. 20 VI 1962), Swahili poet, essayist and novelist (Shaaban was his personal name, Robert his father's name). He was a railway official in the East African Railways and Harbours until 1961; member of the Interterritorial Swahili Committee for Tanganyika from 1948 and chairman from 1961; secretary of the Society for the Promotion of the Swahili Language from 1951; O.B.E. (1961). Although his father was a Christian, Shaaban returned to Islam, the religion of his Yao ancestors. He was liked by all who met him for his wisdom and courtesy. All his works are strongly philosophical in content, even his fiction.

POETRY: Marudi Mema ('Good Return'; 1952); Insha na Mashairi ('Essays and Poems'; Tanga, 1959); Almasi za Afrika (Diamonds of Africa, with Eng. tr. John Allen, Nairobi, 1960); Pambo la Lugha ('Ornament of the Language'; Johannesburg, 1960); Utenzi wa Vita vya Uhuru ('The Epic of the War of Freedom'; 1967); Ashiki Kitabu Hiki ('Love This Book'; 1968); Mwafrika Aimba ('The African Sings'; 1969).—NOVELS: Kusadikika ('To be Believable'; Edinburgh, 1951; repr. 1960); Adili na Nduguze ('Just and His Brothers'; 1961); Kufikirika ('Conceivability'; 1967); Siku ya Watenzi Wote ('The Day of All the Actors'; 1968); Utubora Mkulima ('Mr Excellence, the Farmer'; 1968).—ESSAYS: Masomo Yenye Adili ('Lessons of Righteousness'; Nairobi, 1959); Kielezo cha Insha ('Introduction to Essay Writing'; Johannesburg, 1961).—Maisha Yangu ('My Life'; autobiog.; 1949); Siti Binti Saad (biog.; Tanganyika, 1958).—Omar Khayyam (tr. of FitzGerald's tr.; 1952). J.Kn.

AL-Shābbi, ABU'L-QĀSIM (*Tozeur, Tunisia 1909; †Tunis 1934), Tunisian Arab poet. Educated at the traditional Islamic Zaitūna mosque, he knew no European language, but through translations and the writings of the American Arab authors he absorbed much of the spirit of Western Romanticism. His poetry, some of which is of rare beauty, is intensely personal and rich in imagery.

Aghāni al-hayāt (verse; 1955).

A. J. Arberry, Modern Arabic Poetry (1950); M. F. Ghazi, 'Le milieu zitounien et la formation d'A. S.' in Cahiers de Tunisie, VII (1959); A. Ghedira, 'Essai d'une biographie d'A. S.' in Arabica, VI (1959); M. A. Khouri and H. Algar, 'Modern Arabic poetry' in Jour. Arabic Lit., I (1970). M.M.B.

Shabistari, MAHMŪD, SHAIKH (*Shabistar; †nr Tabriz 1320), Persian mystic and poet. Little of his life is known. His best-known work, Gulshan-i Rāz (1317), a concise but comprehensive expression of his mystical doctrine, was composed in reply to a series of 15 questions on Sufism.

Gulshan-i Rāz (Pesth, 1838; The Rose Garden of Mystery, ed. and tr. E. Whinfield, 1880; The Dialogue of the Gulshan-i Rāz, verse tr. E. A. Johnson, 1887; F. Lederer, The Secret Rose Garden, 1920). E.Y.

Shadbolt, MAURICE FRANCIS RICHARD (*Auckland 1932), New Zealand short-story writer, novelist. A journalist and free-lance writer, he also worked for a time in documentary films as a director and script writer. Applauded at first for his sense of scene, he was slow to develop the most successful part of his talent, comedy. This, for a country short of tradition in comedy and still short of writers with such a sense, could be a most healthy development.

The New Zealanders (1959); Summer Fires and Winter Country (1963); Among the Cinders (1965); The Presence of Music (3 novellas; 1967); This Summer's Dolphin (1969); An Ear of the Dragon (1971).—TRAVEL: New Zealand: Gift of the Sea (with Brian Brake; 1963); Isles of the South Pacific (with Olaf Ruhen; 1968). K.Sm.

Shadwell, THOMAS (*Santon Hall, Norfolk 1641/42; †1663/67 Anne Gibbs; †London 19 XI 1692), English dramatist. He went from Bury St Edmunds to Gonville and Caius, Cambridge, and to the Middle Temple (1658) without a degree. After travel abroad he lived in London, becoming acquainted with literary figures of Restoration society such as the Howards*, whom he satirizes in The Sullen Lovers (1668). Shadwell claimed, with some justification, to write in the comic tradition of Ben Jonson*, ridiculing idiosyncrasy as well as flaying vice. His plots are well constructed, his characters realistic; while a lesser dramatist, his work could have more immediate effect than Jonson's owing to the small society supporting the stage, in which an object of satire could be personally identified. Dryden* disliked The Virtuoso (1676) and his satire of Shadwell in MacFlecknoe (1682, but wr. earlier) not only led to a bitter literary feud, but has also prejudiced posterity against the alleged poet of dullness. Shadwell translated and adapted Molière*, adapted Shakespeare* and was something of a musician. He was interested in opera and experimented with theatrical machinery. In 1688 he succeeded his rival as poet laureate and Historiographer Royal and wrote odes which do more to justify Dryden's allegations.

Complete Works (ed. M. Summers, 5 vols, 1927).—Epsom-Wells (1673) and The Volunteer (1693; both ed. D. M. Walmsley, 1930); The Tempest (from the Dryden-Davenant adapt. of Shakespeare; 1674; facs. 1969; repr. in C. Spencer, Five Restoration Adaptations of Shakespeare, 1965); The Virtuoso (1676; ed. M. H. Nicolson and D. Rodes, 1966); The Libertine (1676; in The Theatre of Don Juan, ed. O. Mandel, 1963).

A. S. Borgmann, T. S.: His Life and Comedies (1928); M. W. Alssid, T. S. (1967).

B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Shaftesbury, EARL OF: see Cooper, ANTHONY ASHLEY.

Shaginyan, MARIETTA SERGEYEVNA (*1888), Soviet author. During the NEP period she tried to introduce the 'ideological' detective novel, and her most interesting work of this kind is K. i K. (1929), about a vanished Soviet Commissar. Her Hydrocentral (1931) is one of the convincing Five-Year-Plan novels, about the building of collective enterprise.

Orientalia (1922); Izbrannye rasskazy (1927); Dnevnik (1932); Sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1935); Taras Shevchenko (1946); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1956). J.L.

Shāh Abdul Latīf, OF BHIT IN SIND (*1689; †1752), the leading poet in the Sindhi language. He draws his inspiration from Persian sources, and his Risālo has been described as a classic of imaginative literature.

H. T. Sorley, S. A. L. of Bhit (1940).

H.G.R. (C.S.)

Shahar, DAVID (*Jerusalem 1926), Hebrew novelist. He excels in both the short-story and the novel form. He was an innovator in both style and themes in the late 1950s.

Al Halomot (1955); Yereah Hadevash Vehazahav (1959); Keisar (1960); Magid Atidoth (1966); Heichal Hakelim Hashevurim (1969). L.Y.

Shāh-Nāma (SHĀH-NĀMEH) ('Book of the Kings'), the Persian national epic, written by the poet Firdausi* and consisting of about 60,000 verses in couplet form. Shāh-Nāma, for its antiquity, purity of language and outstanding literary merit, is considered the greatest monument of the Persian language, and its author the unrivalled epic poet of Persia. Shāh-Nāma deals with the rise of the first legendary dynasty of the Persian empire, the golden age under Jamshid, 1,000 years of cruel rule by the tyrant Zakhak, the restoration of national sovereignty under Firidūn, the protracted struggle between Iran and Turan, the exploits and herculean feats of Rustam the Persian national hero, the invasion of ALEXANDER THE GREAT, the subsequent disintegration of the country and, finally, the rise and fall of the national Sasanian empire. The latter part of Shāh-Nāma, dealing with the Sasanian empire (A.D. 224–652), is of great value to the historian. Shāh-Nāma has enjoyed unbroken popularity among Persians for about 1,000 years, and owing to the poetical genius of Firdausi has completely overshadowed numerous previous and subsequent attempts to compose a work of its kind.

Eds: T. Macan (Calcutta, 1829); J. Mohl (Paris, 1813–68); A. Vullers (Leiden, 1877–84); Borukhim (Tehran, 1943–46); E. Bertels et al. (8 vols, Moscow, 1961–72; in progr.).—Book of the Kings (tr. J. Atkinson, 1832); metrical tr. A. G. and E. Warner (9 vols, 1905–24); The Epic of the Kings (abr. prose tr. R. Levy, 1967); Le livre des rois (tr. J. Mohl, 7 vols, 1876–78).

F. Wolff, Glossar zu Firdosis Schahname;

Verskonkordanz der Schahname (2 vols, 1935); I. Afshar, Kitāb-shināst-yi Firdausi (1968).

E.Y.

Shahnon Ahmad: see INDONESIAN AND MALAYSIAN LITERATURES.

Shahriyār, MUHAMMAD HUSAIN (*Tabriz 1904), Persian lyric poet, originally studied medicine but finally entered the civil service in Tehran. His poems, tender and plaintive, are remarkable for their sincerity and depth of feeling.

Divān (4 pts, 1949–58).

E.Y.

Shakespeare, WILLIAM (~Stratford-upon-Avon 26 IV 1564; ∞ibid. after 27 XI 1582 Anne Hathaway; † ibid. 23 IV 1616), English actor, poet and dramatist. Son of a glover who, before falling into debt, became high bailiff of Stratford. Possibly educated at the Grammar School in Stratford. Daughter Susanna was baptized 26 V 1583, followed by twins Hamnet and Judith 2 II 1585. Nothing more is known until the playwright Robert Greene* immoderately attacked Shakespeare for supposed plagiarism as an 'upstart crow' (Groatsworth of Wit, 1592), confirming Shakespeare's position in London as actor and playwright. From 1594 he wrote and acted for the Chamberlain's Men at The Theatre, and when its timbers were pulled down to build the Globe on the Bankside in 1598, Shakespeare was made a shareholder. The company became the King's Men on the accession of James* I, and took over the private Blackfriars' theatre in 1608. Shakespeare lodged, apparently without his family, at various addresses in London, while making substantial purchases of property in and around his native town (New Place, second largest dwelling in Stratford, was bought in 1597). His personal life was marred by the deaths of his son (1596), his father (1601), and his mother (1608), but his elder daughter made a good marriage to Dr John Hall in 1607. Shakespeare may have retired to Stratford about 1610, continuing to write until 1613. The cause of his death in 1616 is unknown.

The exact canon and chronology of the works is problematic. Thirty-seven plays, two narrative poems and a sonnet collection are confidently ascribed. Venus and Adonis (1593) and The Rape of Lucrece (1594), both dedicated to Henry Wriothesley, 3rd Earl of Southampton, were composed during the closure of the theatres for plague between 1592 and 1594, and the Sonnets (published, probably without Shakespeare's consent, in 1609) may also date from this period. Twenty plays were first published in cheap quarto editions: six in a textually corrupt form; 12 with relatively good texts, printed perhaps from Shakespeare's 'foul papers' or a scribal copy; and two plays (Romeo, Hamlet) first in a bad, then in a good quarto version. Except for Pericles (1609), these and 17 others previously unpublished were included by Heminge (Heming*) and Condell in the posthumous First Folio of 1623. Malone* (1778) tried to establish an order of composition using Meres*'s list in Palladis Tamia (1598) and the pre-publication entries in the Stationers' Register. Subsequent attempts suggest an experimental phase from perhaps 1584 to 1594 (Comedy of Errors, Taming of the Shrew, Two Gentlemen of Verona, Love's Labour's Lost; 1, 2, 3 Henry VI, Richard III; Titus Andronicus); a preponderance of English histories and romantic comedies from 1594 to 1599 (Midsummer Night's Dream, Merchant of Venice, Merry Wives of Windsor, Much Ado about Nothing, As You Like It; Richard II, King John, 1, 2 Henry IV, Henry V; Romeo and Juliet); mainly tragedies and Roman histories between 1599 and 1608 (Twelfth Night, Troilus and Cressida, Measure for Measure, All's Well that Ends Well; Julius Caesar, Hamlet, Othello, Timon of Athens, King Lear, Macbeth, Antony and Cleopatra, Coriolanus); and the so-called 'romances' between 1608 and 1613 (Pericles, Cymbeline, The Winter's Tale, The Tempest, Henry VIII).

As there is no evidence that Shakespeare prepared any of his plays for publication, a primary task has always been to establish an authentic text for each play, as close as possible to what the author wrote. The process was begun by Nicholas Rowe* in his edition and life (6 vols, 1709), using the derivative Fourth Folio (1685) but achieving many successful emendations and setting a pattern of modernization for many of his 18th-century successors, notably Theobald* (7 vols, 1733), who first seriously consulted the quartos and investigated Shakespeare's sources in Holinshed* and Plutarch*; Capell (10 vols, 1768), who established the principle that the earliest surviving text should, where possible, provide the basis for an edition; and Malone (10 vols, 1790), whose detailed research into contemporary records is still a foundation for modern scholarship. This essentially eclectic tradition was continued into the 19th century with three Variorums (1803, 1813, 1821) culminating in H. H. Furness's New Variorum (1871- ), and in the Cambridge edition of Wright, Clark, and Glover (9 vols, 1863-66) with its standard one-volume offspring, the Globe (1864). The increasing precision of bibliographical studies in this century, particularly in elucidating the process of transmission from MS to print, has led to a greater editorial reliance on the good quartos, as instanced by the separate volumes of the New Cambridge edition (1921-66), the New Arden (1951- ), and Peter Alexander's one-volume edition of the complete works (1951). Hinman's remarkable analysis of the printing and proof-reading of the First Folio (1963) has enabled recent editors to ascertain more accurately the degree of compositorial intervention in that text (see MECHANICAL AIDS TO LITERARY CRITICISM).

The theatrical tradition of performing adapted versions, especially following the Restoration in 1660, itself threatened the text. Davenant* added 'operatic' witches to Macbeth (1663); Dryden* and Davenant gave Miranda a sister in The Tempest (1667); Tate* ended King Lear happily (1681); Cibber* incorporated material from other histories into Richard III (1700). Not until the restorations made by Macready and Phelps in the middle of the 19th century was this practice seriously halted. Actors dominated the representation of Shakespeare and became identified with particular roles: Garrick* with Richard III; Edmund Kean with Othello; Sarah Siddons with Lady Macbeth. The taste for spectacle was satisfied by Charles Kean's elaborate historical reconstructions between 1852 and 1859, and later (until 1905) by Henry Irving. The return early in this century to a platform stage and simplicity of decor (started by Poel with the Elizabethan Stage Society in 1894) has since been succeeded by a plethora of experimental reinterpretations, often in terms of currently fashionable theatrical theories, such as the Epic, the Cruel, the Absurd. The attendant growth of directorial responsibility has led not only to brilliant revivals of neglected plays and the exploitation of Shakespeare as an instrument of cultural prestige, but occasionally to renewed textual distortion.

Most earlier critics (including Ben Jonson*, Dryden, Dr Johnson*) acknowledged Shakespeare's inventive genius and his truthfulness to nature while noticing defects of construction, verbal excess, or lack of clear moral purpose in his plays. Only the rigid application of neo-classical rules (as in Rymer's* Short View, 1693) resulted in total condemnation. Isolated essays such as Morgann's* on Falstaff (1777) and Whiter's* on imagery (1794) anticipate modern investigations, but the prevailing tone of 19th-century criticism (even as exemplified by Coleridge*, Lamb* or Hazlitt*) is eulogistic, praising Shakespeare's poetic power and psychological insight rather than his theatrical skill. Dowden (1875) began the attempt, since partly discredited, to trace Shakespeare's mental development from within the plays. There has been a reaction against Bradley's Shakespearean Tragedy (1904) for its supposed treatment of plays as novels, and characters as real people; Granville-Barker* based his Prefaces (1927-47) firmly upon theatrical experience; E. E. Stoll (Art and Artifice in S., 1933) stressed purely dramatic conventions. The primacy of language, above all of imagery and metaphor, has been asserted by critics as disparate as L. C. Knights (How Many Children Had Lady Macbeth?, 1933), Caroline Spurgeon (Shakespeare's Imagery and What It Tells Us, 1935), and G. Wilson Knight (The Wheel of Fire, 1930), while T. S. Eliot* (Selected Essays, 1932) affirmed the aesthetic unity and continuity of all Shakespeare's work. There is now an explosion of professional academic criticism, preoccupied with critical methodology, increasingly detailed and specialized, applying to the plays a knowledge of Elizabethan life and culture, extrapolating from unrelated studies such as myth or psycho-analysis. The particular emphasis changes—recent critics have revalued the comedies—but the original concerns remain: Shakespeare's concentration upon relatively few basic situations (usurpation, male friendship and heterosexual jealousy, social order attacked by psychopathic behaviour, the division and reconciliation of families); the tension between his spontaneous creativity and literary artifice; his profound knowledge of human character and the apparent absence of moral or didactic intentions; his associative linguistic virtuosity, encompassing lyric sublimity and bawdy; the synthesizing quality of his imagination, selecting materials from many sources, integrating them into dramatic patterns of human and cosmic order; the elusiveness of the artist's personality. Scholars have effectively documented his place in his own age; laymen continue to respond to him as to a contemporary, a mirror of permanent truths.

BIOGRAPHY: E. K. Chambers, W. S.: A Study of Facts and Problems (2 vols, 1930); E. I. Fripp, S., Man and Artist (2 vols, 1938; reissued 1964); S. Schoenbaum, S.'s Lives (1970).—Gen. intros incl.: J. D. Wilson, The Essential S. (1932); A. Nicoll, S. (1952); M. M. Reese, S.: His World and His Work (1953); P. Quennell, S.: The Poet and His Background (1963); A. L. Rowse, W. S. (1963); P. Alexander, S. (1964); J. Wain, The Living World of S. (1964).

AUTHORSHIP: The S. Apocrypha (ed. C. F. T. Brooke, 1908); B. Maxwell, Studies in the S. Apocrypha (1956); W. F. and E. S. Friedman, The Shakespearean Ciphers Examined (1957); K. Muir, S. as Collaborator (1960); H. N. Gibson, The S. Claimants (1962).

BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND REFERENCE WORKS: W. Jaggard, S. Bibliography (1911); W. Ebisch and L. L. Schücking, A S. Bibliography (1931; supp. 1937); G. R. Smith, A Classified S. Bibliography 1936–1958 (1963); R. Berman, A Reader's Guide to S.'s Plays (1965); S. W. Wells, S., A Reading Guide (1969).—E. A. Abbott, A Shakespearean Grammar (1869); J. Bartlett, A New and Complete Concordance (1894); C. T. Onions, A S. Glossary (1911); F. G. Stokes, A Dictionary of the Characters and Proper Names (1924); E. H. Sugden, A Topographical Dictionary to the Works of S. and His Fellow Dramatists (1925); E. Partridge, S.'s Bawdy (1947; rev. 1968); W. H. Thomson, S.'s Characters: A Historical Dictionary (1951); H. Kökeritz, S.'s Names: A Pronouncing Dictionary (1959); S., The Writer and His Work (gen. ed. B. Dobrée, 1964); F. E. Halliday, A S. Companion (1964); A S. Encyclopædia (ed. O. J. Campbell and E. G. Quinn, 1966); M. Spevack, A Complete and Systematic Concordance (6 vols, 1968–70); T. H. Howard-Hill, Oxford S. Concordances (1969–); A New Companion to S. Studies (ed. K. Muir and S.

Schoenbaum, 1971).—Periodicals incl.: S.-Jahrbuch (since 1964 in an East and West Ger. ed.); S. Survey; S. Quarterly; The S. Newsletter; S. Studies.

EDITIONS: Facs. incl.: S. Quartos in Collotype Facsimile (ed. W. W. Greg and C. Hinman, 1939–); S.'s Poems . . . A Facsimile of the Earliest Editions (with pref. L. Martz and E. M. Waith, 1964); The Norton Facsimile, The First Folio of S. (prep. C. Hinman, 1968).—The poems and some quarto plays are available from the Scolar Press; adaptations and stage versions repr. Cornmarket Reprints (gen. ed. H. N. Davies, 1969–).—Crit. ed. ser. incl. The New Variorum (ed. H. H. Furness, H. H. Furness, Jr, et al., 1871–); The New Cambridge (ed. Sir A. T. Quiller-Couch, J. D. Wilson, et al., 1921–66); The New Arden (gen. eds U. Ellis-Fermor, H. F. Brooks and H. Jenkins, 1951–); The London S. (ed. J. J. Munro, intro, G. W. G. Wickham, 6 vols, 1958); The Signet Classic S. (gen. ed. S. Barnet, 1963–68); The New Penguin S. (gen. ed. T. J. B. Spencer, 1967–).—One-vol. eds; G. L. Kittredge (1936); P. Alexander (1951); H. Craig (1951); C. J. Sisson (1954); The Pelican S. (gen. ed. A. Harbage, 1969).

TEXTUAL PROBLEMS: A. W. Pollard, S.'s Fight With the Pirates (1917; reissued with S.'s Hand in the Play of Sir Thomas More, 1967); R. B. McKerrow, Prolegomena for the Oxford S. (1939); W. W. Greg, The Editorial Problem in S. (1942; rev. 1951, 1954) and The S. First Folio (1955); A. Walker, Textual Problems of the First Folio (1953); F. Bowers, On Editing S. and the Elizabethan Dramatists (1955) and Bibliography and Textual Criticism (1964); C. J. Sisson, New Readings in S. (2 vols, 1956); C. Hinman, The Printing and Proof-Reading of the First Folio of S. (2 vols, 1963); E. A. J. Honigsmann, The Stability of S.'s Text (1965); F. P. Wilson, S. and the New Bibliography (ed. H. Gardner, 1970); T. H. Howard-Hill, Shakespearean Bibliography and Textual Criticism. A Bibliography (1971).

BACKGROUND: J. D. Wilson, Life in S.'s England (1911; 1968); S.'s England (ed. S. Lee and C. T. Onions, 2 vols, 1916); H. Craig, The Enchanted Glass (1936); T. W. Baldwin, W. S.'s Petty School (1943) and W. S.'s Small Latine and Lesse Greeke (2 vols, 1944); E. M. W. Tillyard, The Elizabethan World Picture (1943); J. B. Bamforth, The Little World of Man (1952); The Age of S. (ed. B. Ford, 1955).

SOURCES: W. G. Boswell-Stone, S.'s Holinshed (1896; ed. I. Gollancz, 1907); H. R. D. Anders, S.'s Books (1904); R. M. Noble, S.'s Biblical Knowledge (1935); E. C. Pettet, S. and the Romance Tradition (1949); V. K. Whitaker, S.'s Use of Learning (1953); F. P. Wilson, Marlowe and the Early S. (1953); G. Bullough, Narrative and Dramatic Sources of S. (7 vols, 1957–72); K. Muir, S.'s Sources (1957); T. W. Baldwin, On the Literary Genetics of S.'s Plays 1592–1594 (1959); R. Hosley, S.'s Holinshed (1968); T. J. B. Spencer,

S.'s Plutarch (1964) and Elizabethan Love Stories (1968); J. W. Velz, S. and the Classical Tradition (1968); G. W. G. Wickham, S.'s Dramatic Heritage (1969); R. A. Brower, Hero and Saint: S. and the Graeco-Roman Heroic Tradition (1971); K. F. Thompson, Modesty and Cunning: S.'s Use of Literary Tradition (1971).

THEATRE: G. C. D. Odell, S.—From Betterton to Irving (2 vols, 1920); E. K. Chambers, The Elizabethan Stage (4 vols, 1923); H. Spencer, S. Improved (1927); A. Harbage, S.'s Audience (1941); A. C. Sprague, S. and the Actors (1944) and Shakespearean Players and Performances (1953); C. B. Hogan, S. in the Theatre 1701–1800 (2 vols, 1952–57); C. W. Hodges, The Globe Restored (1953; rev. 1968); I. Smith, S.'s Globe Playhouse (1956) and S.'s Blackfriars Playhouse (1964); A. Nagler, S.'s Stage (1958); L. Hotson, S.'s Wooden O (1959); B. Beckerman, S. at the Globe: 1599–1609 (1962); B. Joseph, Acting S. (1962); G. W. G. Wickham, Early English Stages, II: 1576–1660 (1963–72); G. W. Knight, Shakespearean Production (1964); J. C. Trewin, S. on the English Stage 1900–1964 (1964); C. H. Shattuck, The S. Prompt-books (1965); Five Restoration Adaptations of S. (ed. C. Spencer, 1965); J. R. Brown, S.'s Plays in Performance (1966); J. L. Styan, S.'s Stagecraft (1967).

SPECIALIST STUDIES: C. W. Scott-Giles, S.'s Heraldry (1950); P. A. Jorgensen, S.'s Military World (1956); W. M. Merchant, S. and the Artist (1959); R. M. Frye, S. and Christian Doctrine (1963); A. A. Falconer, S. and the Sea (1964); N. N. Holland, Psychoanalysis and S. (1966); G. W. Keeton, S.'s Legal and Political Background (1967); I. I. Edgar, S., Medicine and Psychiatry (1970); R. Manvell, S. and the Film (1971).

CRITICISM: Hists incl.: J. Munro, The S. Allusion-Book (2 vols, rev. E. K. Chambers, 1932); A. Ralli, A History of Shakespearean Criticism (2 vols, 1932); L. Marder, His Exits and His Entrances (1964); A. M. Eastman, A Short History of Shakespearean Criticism (1968); P. Murray, The Shakespearean Scene: Some Twentieth-Century Perspectives (1969).—Ser. offering a range of crit.: Barnes and Noble Focus Books; Discussions of Literature (gen. ed. J. H. Summers, n.d.); Stratford-upon-Avon Stud. (gen. eds M. Bradbury and D. J. Palmer, 1969– ); Stud. in Eng. Lit. (gen. ed. D. Daiches, 1961– ); Twentieth Century Views (gen. ed. M. Mack, 1962– ); The Penguin S. Library (gen. ed. T. J. B. Spencer, 1964– ); The Casebook Series (gen. ed. A. E. Dyson, 1968– ).—Other anthols incl.: D. N. Smith (ed.), Eighteenth Century Essays on S. (1903; rev. 1963) and S. Criticism: A Selection (1916); A. Ridler (ed.), S. Criticism: 1919–1935 (1936) and S. Criticism: 1935–1960 (1963); S. and His Critics (ed. F. E. Halliday, 1949; 1958); S.: Modern Essays in Criticism (ed. L. F. Dean, 1957; rev. 1967); S. in Europe (ed. O. Le Winter, 1963; 1970);

Studies in S. (ed. P. Alexander, 1964); S. in a Changing World (ed. A. Kettle, 1964); Approaches to S. (ed. N. Rabkin, 1964); His Infinite Variety: Major S. Criticism Since Johnson (ed. P. N. Siegel, 1964); Four Centuries of Shakespearean Criticism (ed. F. Kermode, 1965).—Gen. crit. incl.: M. Morgann, Essay on the dramatic character of Sir John Falstaff (1777; ed. D. A. Fineman, 1972); W. Whiter, A Specimen of a Commentary on S. (1794; ed. A. Over and M. Bell, 1967); W. Hazlitt, The Characters of S.'s Plays (1817); A. B. Jameson, S.'s Heroines (1832); E. Dowden, S.: A Critical Study of his Mind and Art (1875); L. L. Schücking, Character Problems in S.'s Plays (1922); H. Granville-Barker, Prefaces to S. (5 ser., 1927–47; paper, 4 vols, 1963); Coleridge's Shakespearean Criticism (ed. T. M. Raysor, 2 vols, 1930; rev. 1960); T. Spencer, S. and the Nature of Man (1942); O. J. Campbell, S.'s Satire (1943); E. A. Armstrong, S.'s Imagination (1946); T. W. Baldwin, S.'s Five-Act Structure (1947); M. Joseph, S. and the Arts of Language (1947); S. L. Bethell, S. and the Popular Dramatic Tradition (1948); D. A. Stauffer, S.'s World of Images (1949); J. I. M. Stewart, Character and Motive in S. (1949); M. C. Bradbrook, S. and Elizabethan Poetry (1951); W. H. Clemen, The Development of S.'s Imagery (1951); A. Sewell, Character and Society in S. (1951); B. I. Evans, The Language of S.'s Plays (1952); A. Harbage, S. and the Rival Traditions (1952); H. Kökeritz, S.'s Pronunciation (1953); P. Cruttwell, The Shakespearean Moment (1954); F. E. Halliday, The Poetry of S.'s Plays (1954); M. M. Mahood, S.'s Wordplay (1957); J. Vyvyan, The Shakespearean Ethic (1959); U. Ellis-Fermor, S. the Dramatist (ed. K. Muir, 1961); A. P. Rossiter, Angel With Horns (1961); H. M. Hulme, Explorations in S.'s Dramatic Language (1962); A. Richter, S. and the Idea of the Play (1962); Shaw on S. (ed. E. Wilson, 1962); N. Coghill, S.'s Professional Skills (1964); J. Kott, S. Our Contemporary (1964; rev. 1967); P. J. Seng, The Vocal Songs in the Plays of S. (1967); P. W. Edwards, S. and the Confines of Art (1968); Dr Johnson on S. (ed. A. Sherbo, 2 vols, 1968); D. Traversi, An Approach to S. (2 vols, 1968–69); B. Vickers, The Artistry of S.'s Prose (1968); E. Jones, Scenic Form in S. (1971); F. Kermode, S., Spenser, Donne (1971).—On the early comedies: E. Welsford, The Fool (1935); H. B. Charlton, Shakespearean Comedy (1938); G. Gordon, Shakespearean Comedy (1944); J. Palmer, Comic Characters of S. (1946); T. M. Parrott, Shakespearean Comedy (1949); L. Hotson, S.'s Motley (1952); R. H. Goldsmith, Wise Fools in S. (1955); J. R. Brown, S. and His Comedies (1957; enl. 1962); C. L. Barber, S.'s Festive Comedy (1959); B. Evans, S.'s Comedies (1960); J. D. Wilson, S.'s Happy Comedies (1962); R. G. Hunter, S. and the Comedy of Forgiveness (1965).—On the middle comedies: W. W. Lawrence, S.'s Problem Comedies (1931); E. M. W. Tillyard, S.'s Problem Plays

(1950); E. Schanzer, The Problem Plays of S. (incl. 2 Roman plays; 1963); W. B. Toole, S.'s Problem Plays (1966).—On the later comedies: E. M. W. Tillyard, S.'s Last Plays (1938); G. W. Knight, The Crown of Life (1947); D. Traversi, S.: The Last Phase (1954).—Eng. histories: E. M. W. Tillyard, S.'s History Plays (1944); J. Palmer, Political Characters of S. (1945); L. B. Campbell, S.'s Histories: Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947); I. Ribner, The English History Play in the Age of S. (1957; rev. 1965); D. Traversi, S. From Richard II to Henry V (1957); M. M. Reese, The Cease of Majesty (1961).—Roman histories: M. W. MacCallum, S.'s Roman Plays and Their Background (1910); G. W. Knight, The Imperial Theme (1931); M. Charney, S.'s Roman Plays (1961); D. Traversi, S.: The Roman Plays (1963).—The tragedies: C. Lamb, On the Tragedies of S. (1811); A. C. Bradley, Shakespearean Tragedy (1904); L. B. Campbell, S.'s Tragic Heroes (1930); J. D. Wilson, What Happens in Hamlet (1935); H. B. Charlton, Shakespearean Tragedy (1948); J. F. Danby, S.'s Doctrine of Nature: A Study of King Lear (1949); E. Jones, Hamlet and Oedipus (1949); W. Farnham, S.'s Tragic Frontier (1950); C. Leech, S.'s Tragedies (1950); H. N. Paul, The Royal Play of Macbeth (1950); D. G. James, The Dream of Learning (1951); P. Alexander, Hamlet Father and Son (1955); R. Speaight, Nature in Shakespearean Tragedy (1955); G. R. Elliot, Dramatic Providence in Macbeth (1958); B. Spivack, S. and the Allegory of Evil (1958); H. Levin, The Question of Hamlet (1959); I. Ribner, Patterns in Shakespearean Tragedy (1960); W. Rosen, S. and the Craft of Tragedy (1960); J. Holloway, The Story of the Night: Studies in S.'s Major Tragedies (1961); M. Rosenberg, The Masks of Othello (1961); F. W. Sternfeld, Music in Shakespearean Tragedy (1963); M. Mack, King Lear in Our Time (1965); M. Weitz, Hamlet and the Philosophy of Literary Criticism (1965); W. R. Elton, King Lear and the Gods (1966); N. Frye, Fools of Time: Studies in Shakespearean Tragedy (1967); N. Brooke, S.'s Early Tragedies (1968); D. Bartholomeusz, Macbeth and the Players (1969); N. Alexander, Poison, Play and Duel (1971).—Poems: T. W. Baldwin, On the Literary Genetics of S.'s Poems and Sonnets (1950); E. Hubler, The Sense of S.'s Sonnets (1952) and The Riddle of S.'s Sonnets (1962); G. W. Knight, The Mutual Flame (1955); J. W. Lever, The Elizabethan Love Sonnet (1956); J. B. Leishman, Themes and Variations in S.'s Sonnets (1961); W. H. Matchett, The Phoenix and the Turtle (1965); B. Stirling, The S. Sonnet Order: Poems and Groups (1968).

T.P.M.

Shakhovskoy, PRINCE ALEXANDER ALEXANDROVICH (*24 IV 1777; †22 I 1846), Russian playwright, a prolific author of comedies, satires and farces. Written exclusively for the stage, they were of no great literary merit.

M. Paushkin, Stary russkiy vodevil' (1937).
J.L.

Shalom, SH(APIRO) (*Poland 19 XII 1905), Hebrew poet, was educated in Germany and went to Palestine in 1922. He wrote poems, short stories, plays and literary criticisms, of which the most successful were his symbolic poems.

Yoman Ba-Galil (1932; Storm Over Galilee, tr. B. Rabin, 1967); Sefer Hashirim Ve-Hasoneitot (1940); On Ben Peleh (Eng. facing Heb.; 1963); Sefer Hai Roi (1963); Machteret Hashir (1971).—Tr., Shakespeare's sonnets (1943).—Coll. works (9 vols, 1971).
Y.H. (M.Ge.: Y.F.)

Shamir, MOSHE (*Safed 1921), Hebrew novelist and playwright; a member of kibbutz Mishmar Ha-emek (1941–47); was in the Palmach (1944–46). His first novel, Hu Halach Basadoth (1948), won him a place amongst the young guard of Hebrew writers, and his position was further strengthened by the appearance of his historical novel, Melech Basar Vedam (1954; tr. The King of Flesh and Blood, 1958). His novel Bemo Yadav (1951) portrays a realistic and autobiographical situation, while his Hayai Im Yishmael (1969; tr. My Life With Ishmael, 1970) is a political statement justifying his sympathy with the Greater Israel movement.

Kivsath Harash (historical novel; 1957).

L.Y.

AL-Shanfara (c. 600), pre-Islamic Arabic poet. He was an outlaw and one of the 'swift runners' of the Arabs. Most famous is his splendid Lāmiyat al-'Arab ('The Poem Rhymed in l, of the Arabs'), where he describes the hardships of his solitary life in the desert.

G. Hughes, Lamijāt ul-Arab (1896). S.M.S.

Shao YUNG (□Fan-yang 1011; †Lo-yang 1077), Chinese philosopher and poet. Shao never accepted public office but lived humbly as a teacher. His influence upon contemporary politics and philosophy was considerable; he numbered Ssü-ma* Kuang, Chang* Tsai, Ch'êng* Hao and Ch'êng* I among his pupils and friends. He propounded a numerical explanation of phenomena, built upon the I-ching. His poetry is also mainly philosophical in content.

Huang-chi ching-shih shu (tr. W.-T. Chan in A Source Book in Chinese Philosophy, 1963).—I-ch'uan chi-jang chi (coll. verse; pref. dated 1066).

Fung Yu-lan, A History of Chinese Philosophy, II (tr. D. Bodde, 1953).
A.R.D.

Shapiro, KARL (*Baltimore, Md. 10 XI 1913), American poet and critic. A teacher at Johns Hopkins and California Universities, editor of Poetry (1950–56), Shapiro in his own verse and criticism has done much to re-stress the technical aspects of creating poetry.

VERSE: Poems (1935); Person, Place and Thing (1942); Essay on Rime (1945); Poems of a Jew (1958).—CRITICISM: Prose Keys to Modern Poetry (1962); A Prosody Handbook (1964). D.E.Mo.

Shapiro, KONSTANTIN, also ASHER or ABBA (*Grodno 1 XII 1839; †St Petersburg 1900), Hebrew poet. Quarrelling with his father, he ran away penniless to St Petersburg, where he finally became the photographer of the Tsarist court. He published, in Russian, an album of Russian writers with biographies. He accepted the Russian Orthodox creed, a step which he bitterly regretted. It greatly influenced his lyrics in which is felt all the despair and longing for a lost world. His best-known poem is Birkat Hanairot.

Sel. poems (ed. J. Fichman, Warsaw, 1911).
S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Shapiro, LAMED (*Rshimtslev, Ukraine 1878; †New York 1948), Yiddish novelist and essayist. A modernist in style, his powerful eye-witness descriptions of the Tsarist pogroms caused a stir. He introduced to Yiddish literature sea-stories and stories describing immigrant life in the U.S.A. He translated into Yiddish works by Hugo*, Scott*, Dickens* and Kipling*.

Der tselem (1909); Oifn' yam (1910); New-Yorkish etc.—The Jewish Government and Other Stories (tr. Curt Leviant, New York, 1970).
J.S.

Sha'rani, 'ABD-AL-WAHAB (*1492; †Cairo 1565), Muslim Arab theologian, earned his living as a weaver and witnessed the Ottoman occupation of Egypt, which he deplored. He wrote on many subjects, his best-known works being an epitome of Ibn* al-'Arabi's 'Meccan Revelations'; a biographical history of the Sufis; and an autobiographical work describing his many personal virtues 'ad maiorem Dei gloriam'. His main thesis was the compatibility of mysticism with dogmatic theology. Often childishly credulous, his style was simple and his spirit one of humanity and toleration.

Lawāqih al-Anwar fi Tabaqat al-Akhyar (1881); Kitāb al-Kibrīt al-Aḥmar fī Bayān 'Ulūm al-Shaikh al-Akbar (1888); Laṭā'if al-Mīnān w' al-Akhlāq (1903); al-Mizān al-Kubrā (1940).

C. Field, Mystics and Saints of Islam (1910); J. Schacht, 'Al-Sha'rani' in Encyclopaedia of Islam, IV (1934); A. J. Arberry, Sufism (1950).
W.A. el K. (R.W.J.A.)

Sharar, ABDUL HALĪM (*1860; †1926), pioneer of the Urdu historical novel, extolling the past glories of Islam (e.g. Flora Florinda, 1899); he also wrote social novels, including one attacking the purdah system (Badr un Nisā ki Musibat, ?1897), and tales exposing iniquities of the rulers of the Indian princely states; and he was one of the pioneers of modern popular journalism. A famous series of his articles paints an unrivalled picture of old Lucknow (Guzashta Lakhnāu, 1914–16).

R.R.

Sharp, WILLIAM: see Macleod, FIONA.

Sharpham, EDWARD (*Colehanger, East Allington, Devon VII 1576; †London 1608), English dramatist. His Fleire, very like Marston's* Parasitaster, was written for the Children of Blackfriars. Sharpham writes good theatrical prose dialogue, entertaining and fluid.

The Fleire (1607; ed. H. Nibbe in Bang's Materialen, XXXVI, 1912); Cupid's Whirligig (1607; ed. A. Nicoll, 1926).

M. W. Sampson, 'The plays of E. S.' in Studies in Language and Literature in Celebration of J. M. Hart (1910); C. Leech, 'The plays of E. S.' in Rev. Eng. Stud., XI (1935). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Sha Ting, pseud. of YANG T'UNG-FANG (*An-hsien, Szechwan 1905), Chinese novelist and short-story writer, began his career in the League of Left-Wing Writers (1931), and continued to publish throughout the post-1949 period until denounced in the Cultural Revolution (1966). With the Szechwanese countryside as the characteristic background of his fiction, he can be regarded as a successful regional novelist.

Sha Ting hsüan-chi (sel. short stories; 1959; 5 stories tr. in Chinese Lit., 1957, No. 2, 1961, No. 6 and 1964, No. 10).
A.R.D.

Shauqi, AḤMAD (*Cairo 1868; †13 X 1932), Egyptian Arab poet, dramatist and novelist. Born of noble parents, he spent most of his life in government service and was close to the court. From 1914 to 1919 he was banished from Egypt and lived at Barcelona. His poetry is in strict classical taste and language, often moving in extravagant hyperbole; most of it is of a patriotic character. In his plays he imitated Corneille*. His novels are historical romances. C.R.

VERSE: Al-Shauqiyyāt (3 vols, 1898–1936); Duwal al-'Arab (1933; tr. Poème historique . . . , 1895).—PLAYS: Alī bek al-Kabīr (1894); Majnūn Layla (1916; Eng. tr. A. J. Arberry, 1933); Maṣra' Kliyubāṭra (1929); Qambīz (1931); 'Antarah (1932); Amīrat al-Andalus (1932).—NOVELS: 'Adhrā' al-Hind (1897); Dall wa-Taimān (1899; based on G. Ebers, Eine ägyptische Königstochter); Waraqāt al-'Āṣ (1914).

H. Pérès, 'A. S.' in Annales de l'Institut d'Études Orientales, Algiers, II (1936); A. J. Arberry, 'Ḥāfiẓ Ibrāhīm and S.' in Jour. Roy. Asiat. Soc. (1937); A. Z. Abushady, 'S., Ḥafiz and Matran, the three leading neo-classical poets of contemporary Egypt' in Middle Eastern Affairs, III (1952);

S. Dayf, S., shā'ir al-'asr al-ḥadīth (1953); J. M. Landau, Studies in the Arab Theater and Cinema (1958); S. Dahan, 'Descriptive and erotic themes in the poetry of S.' in Rev. de l'Acad. arabe de Damas, XXXIV (1959); M. M. Badawi, 'Al-Hilāl, moon or poet' in Jour. Arabic Lit., II (1971).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Shaw, GEORGE BERNARD (*Dublin 26 VII 1856; ∞1898 Charlotte Payne-Townshend [†1944]; †Ayot Saint Lawrence, Herts 3 XI 1950), Irish dramatist, novelist and propagandist. He was educated at Wesley College, Dublin, and received some training in music and painting at home; emigrated to London 1876; nine years of hackwork and of unsuccessful novel-writing followed. He began to come into prominence as a music critic ('Corno di Bassetto'), drama critic and book-reviewer and as an enthusiastic propagandist for socialism. In 1884 he founded the Fabian Society. He began play-writing about 1892; about 1904 his plays began to be acted regularly and from 1910 to draw large audiences in London and New York. In 1925 he was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. He wrote almost to the end of his days and left his fortune to set up a fund charged with investigating the establishment of a new alphabetical system.

In his plays and their renowned prefaces Shaw was a brilliantly stimulating writer, gifted with a Swiftian irony and a mastery of clear and witty prose. Chiefly interested in 'the struggle between human vitality and the artificial system of morality', he at once overturned old conventions and suggested new ideals. He regarded himself as a tragic writer perpetually tripped up by a comic one and deliberately concentrated upon remediable human suffering, a fact which may impair the lasting power of all but his greatest plays.

R.McH.

PLAYS: Plays Pleasant [Arms and the Man; Candida; The Man of Destiny; You Never Can Tell] and Unpleasant [Widowers' Houses; The Philanderer; Mrs Warren's Profession] (1898); Three Plays for Puritans [The Devil's Disciple; Caesar and Cleopatra; Captain Brassbound's Conversion] (1900); Man and Superman (1901-03); John Bull's Other Island (1904); Major Barbara (1905); The Doctor's Dilemma (1906); The Shewing-up of Blanco Posnet (1909); Fanny's First Play (1910); Androcles and the Lion (1911); Overruled and Pygmalion (1912); Heartbreak House (1913-16); Back to Methusalem (1921); St Joan (1923); The Apple Cart (1929); On the Rocks (1933); Geneva (1938); In Good King Charles's Golden Days (1939).—NOVELS: An Unsocial Socialist (1884); Cashel Byron's Profession (1885-86); The Irrational Knot (1885-87); Love Among the Artists (1887-88).—VARIOUS: The Quintessence of Ibsenism (1891); Our Theatre in the Nineties (dramat. crit.; 1895-98; 3 vols, in Col- lected Works, 1932); The Perfect Wagnerite (1898); The Intelligent Woman's Guide to Socialism (1928); The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God (1932); Everybody's Political What's What (1944).—LETTERS: Ellen Terry and B. S.: A Correspondence (ed. C. St John, 1931); Correspondence Between S. and Mrs Patrick Campbell (ed. A. Dent, 1952); B. S.'s Letters to Granville-Barker (ed. C. B. Purdom, 1956); Collected Letters (ed. Dan H. Laurence, 1965-72).—COLLECTIONS: S. on Theatre (ed. E. J. West, 1958); S. on Shakespeare (ed. E. Wilson, 1961); The Matter With Ireland (ed. D. H. Green and Dan H. Laurence, 1962); Platform and Pulpit (ed. Dan H. Laurence, 1962).—Collected Works (33 vols, 1931-34); Complete Plays (1 vol., 1965); Complete Prefaces (1 vol., 1965).

H. Pearson, B. S. (1942; rev. ed. 1961); C. E. M. Joad, S. (1949); E. Bentley, B. S. (1950; 2nd ed. 1967); D. MacCarthy, S. (1951); A. C. Ward, B. S. (1951); S. and Society (ed. C. E. M. Joad, 1953); G. B. S.: A Critical Survey (ed. L. Kronenberger, 1953); A. Henderson, G. B. S.: Man of the Century (1956); M. Meisel, S. and the 19th-Century Theatre (1963); G. B. S. (ed. R. J. Kaufman, 1965); A. M. Gibbs, S. (1969).

R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Shaw, HENRY WHEELER, wrote under pseud. JOSH BILLINGS (*Lanesboro, Mass. 21 IV 1818; ∞1845 Zilpha Bradford; †Monterey, Calif. 14 X 1885), American humorist. He is best in his 'affurisms', blending folk wisdom with mellow irony. He lectured with great success, using a deadpan technique.

Josh Billings: His Sayings (1865); Farmer's Allminax (annually, 1869-80); Josh Billings: His Works, Complete (1888).

C. Clemens, Josh Billings: Yankee Humorist (1932).
H.C.L. (I.W.)

Shcherbatov, PRINCE MIKHAIL MIKHAILOVICH (*1733; †1790), Russian historian and didactic author. His Istoriya rossiyskaya (7 vols, 1771-74), is of much smaller interest than his pamphlet, Povrezhdenie nraov v Rossii ('On the Decline of Morals in Russia')—a virulent attack on Peter's* reforms and on the corruption they brought into Russia, beginning with the lewd Empresses after Peter's reign. He can be regarded as a forerunner of the Slavophiles.

Raznye sochineniya (1860).—Über die Sittenverderbnis in Russland (ed. K. Stählin and S. Jakobson, 1925).

M. D., Russkiy sotsial'ny roman XVIII veka (1900).
J.L.

Shcherbina, NIKOLAY FÉDOROVICH (*Don province 2 XII 1821; †10 V 1869), Russian poet who found his principal inspiration in classical Greece. A Parnassian by nature, he cared only for art and his own ideal of beauty at a time when utilitarian civic poetry was in demand.

Stikhotvoreniya (2 vols, 1857); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (1873); Al'bom ipokhondrika (1929). J.L.

Shchipachov, STEPAN PETROVICH (*1899), Soviet poet mainly of the 'engaged' school, whose excellent epic poem Pavlik Morozov (1951) enhanced his fame, as did his Domik v Sushenskoy, about the cottage in which Lenin* lived during his exile in Siberia.

V. V. Dementyev, S. S. (1951). J.L.

Sheffield, JOHN, EARL OF MULGRAVE, MARQUIS OF NORMANBY, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM AND NORMANBY (*London 7 IV 1648; ∞18 III 1686/87 Ursula Stawel, ∞12 III 1698/99 Katherine Noel, ∞7 II 1713/14 Catherine Annesley; †London 24 II 1720/21), English poet, soldier, Jacobite statesman, friend and patron of Dryden* and Pope*. In his Essay on Poetry (1682; ed. J. E. Spingarn, Critical Essays of the 17th Century, II, 1908-09) he gave expression to the new Augustan literary standards, and in his rewriting Julius Caesar as two plays, Julius Caesar and Marcus Brutus (repr. M. Wilding, 1970), he regularized Shakespeare* according to the neo-classic unities and decorum. His verse Essay on Satire (1689; wr. 1675) gives a satirical account of contemporary satirists.

Works (ed. A. Pope, 2 vols, 1723); sel. in Miscellanea (1933) and V. de S. Pinto, Restoration Carnival (1954).

T. Cibber, Lives of the Poets, III (1753); S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets, II (1779-81); G. Sherburn, The Early Career of Alexander Pope (1934); J. H. Wilson, The Court Wits of the Restoration (1948). R.M.W.

Shehu, THE: see Usman dan Fodio.

Sheller-Mikhailov, ALEXANDER KONSTANTINOVICH (*St Petersburg 30 VII 1838; †ibid. 21 XI 1900), Russian novelist with a radical turn of mind, partly influenced by Dickens* and Thackeray*. Although not a great creative artist, he helped to shape the younger generation of his period in the progressive spirit of the 1860s.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (15 vols, 1894). A. I. Faresov, A. K. S. (1901). J.L.

Shelley, MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT, née GODWIN (*Somers Town 30 VIII 1797; ∞1816 Percy Bysshe Shelley*; †London 1 II 1851), English writer. In 1814 she eloped with Shelley, and in 1816, when he was freed by the death of his wife, they married. After his death in 1822 she returned to England and devoted her time to the editing of Shelley's literary remains. Frankenstein, her best-known work, is an extraordinary cross between the novel of terror and a Godwinian tract. B.H.

Frankenstein or the Modern Prometheus (1818; anon.); The Last Man (3 vols, 1826); Tales and Stories by M. W. S. (ed. R. Garnett, 1891).—Letters of M. S. (ed. F. L. Jones, 2 vols, 1944); M. S.'s Journal (ed. idem, 1947).

M. Spark, Child of Light (1951); E. Nitchie, M. S. (1953); E. Bigland, M. S. (1959). B.H. (K.W.)

Shelley, PERCY BYSSHE (*Field Place, nr Horsham 4 VIII 1792; ∞1811 Harriet Westbrook, ∞1816 Mary Godwin; †[drowned] Gulf of Spezia 8 VII 1822), English poet. Shelley's career as author and revolutionary began with the publication of The Necessity of Atheism when he was an undergraduate at Oxford. After being expelled for refusing to deny his share (with Hogg*) in the authorship Shelley's next rash act was his marriage. This came to an end when he left England with Mary Godwin in 1814, and he spent most of his remaining years abroad, mainly in Italy. He and Edward Williams sailed to Leghorn to welcome Leigh Hunt* in the summer of 1822 and on the return journey the Ariel was lost in the Gulf of Spezia. Shelley's body was washed up at Viareggio and cremated.

His poems, like his life, contain a strange blend of the practical and the mystical: his many visions of the millennium, for instance, are set out partly in terms of a community of perfect love, partly in terms of republicanism and vegetarianism. Another result of Shelley's practical sense was his adoption of plain style and crude caricature when he wrote the vigorous political hymns which were intended for a popular audience. But his poetic power lies in the impassioned lyricism which sustains his magnificent odes and which relieves the didactic and analytical material of Epipsychidion or The Triumph of Life. The roots of Shelley's claim that poets are the unacknowledged legislators of the world are poignantly revealed in his own poetry. 'Poetry makes immortal all that is best and most beautiful in the world' he writes; and 'Poetry redeems from decay the visitations of the divinity in man'. And the power of his poetry to fill the mind with exaltation, with a 'wondrous sympathy' and a sense of the 'interpenetration of a diviner nature' carries conviction of the absolute moral good on which all legislation for mankind must rest.

VERSE: Queen Mab, a Philosophical Poem (1813); The Cenci, A tragedy in five acts (Italy, 1819); Prometheus Unbound (1820); Epipsychidion (1821); Adonais (Pisa, 1821).—The Works of P. B. S. (ed. Mary W. Shelley, 2 pts, 1847); The Complete Works of P. B. S. (ed. R. Ingpen and W. E. Peck, 10 vols, 1926-30).—PROSE: The Prose Works of P. B. S. (ed. H. B. Forman, 4 vols, 1880); S.'s Prose (ed. D. L. Clark, 1954); Letters of P. B. S. (ed. F. L. Jones, 2 vols, 1964).

R. Browning, Essay on S. (orig. pref. to The Letters of P. B. S. [mainly spurious], 1852); T. J. Hogg, The Life of S. (2 vols, 1858); E. J. Trelawny, Recollections of the Last Days of S. and Byron (1858; ed. E. Dowden, 1906); T. L. Peacock, Memoirs of S. (Works [1934], VIII); J. A. Symonds, S. (1878); H. Read, In Defence of S. and Other Essays (1936); N. I. White, S. (2 vols, 1940); E. Blunden, S.: A Life Story (1946); C. Baker, S.'s Major Poetry (1948); N. Rogers, S. at Work (1956); D. King-Hele, S. His Thought and Work (1960).

B.H. (K.W.)

Shemtob Palquiara: see Falaguera, SHEMTOB.

Shên CHI-CHI (□Wu-hsien 8th century), Chinese short-story writer. Shen followed a normal and largely undistinguished official career. He was appointed a compiler in the History Office (c. 784) and compiled the official records for the period 780-783. His short stories stand at the beginning of a great advance in T'ang fiction; Chên-chung chi and Jên-shih chuan are among the best Chinese tales of the marvellous.

Chên-chung chi ('The Magic Pillow', tr. C. C. Wang in Traditional Chinese Tales, 1944); Jên-shih chuan (tr. idem, ibid.). A.R.D.

Shên Fu (□Yüan-ho 26 XII 1763), Chinese writer. Shên worked mainly as a secretary, although at times he sought a livelihood from business or painting (for which he had some reputation). He is known solely for his sensitive part-autobiographical, part-reflective Fu-shêng liu-chi, of which only the first four chapters are extant.

Fu-shêng liu-chi (1877; 'Six Chapters of a Floating Life', tr. Lin Yutang in T'ien Hsia Monthly, I, 1935, repr. in The Wisdom of China, 1942). A.R.D.

Shên Tê-CH'ÏEN (□Ch'ang-chou, Kiangsu 24 XII 1673; †6 X 1769), Chinese poet and literary critic. Shên gained his doctorate late in life (1739), but thereafter enjoyed the favour of Emperor Ch'ien-lung. In opposition to Yüan* Mei he maintained that poetry should have a moral purpose and that formal strictness was important. He compiled Ku-shih yüan (1725) and other anthologies to illustrate his views.

Shih-shuo tsui-yü (literary criticism; 1731).—Kuei-yü shih-wên ch'ao (coll. works; 1767).

A.R.D.

Shên Ts'UNG-WÊN (*Fêng-huang, Hunan 1903), Chinese writer, had a military and rural background which colours many of his works. After going to Peking to study (1922) he established himself as a writer and was accepted into the ranks of the Crescent Society. At the same time he was a close friend of Ting* Ling and her husband Hu Yeh-p'in. A prolific writer, his works ran to some 35 volumes by 1935. Though the most successful portrayer of the common people in rural China, he published no fiction after 1949.

14 short stories tr. Ching Ti and R. Payne, The Chinese Earth (1947).

C. T. Hsia, A History of Modern Chinese Fiction 1917-1957 (1961; incl. biblio. of Shên's works). A.R.D.

Shên YÜEH or SHÊN Yo (□Wu-k'ang 441; †513), Chinese scholar and poet. Shên served under the Sung and Ch'i dynasties, and was a supporter of Hsiao Yen who became first Emperor of the Liang dynasty (502), receiving noble rank and high office from him. Although he compiled histories of the Chin, Sung and Ch'i dynasties, only his Sung history (Sung-shu) has survived. The section on music in this work is of great importance for the history of the yüeh-fu (poetry written to music). He was particularly interested in musical and poetical theory and is supposed to have been the first to formulate the distinction of 'tones' in Chinese sounds and to indicate certain tonal combinations to be avoided in poetry. Of his own poetry much has been lost.

Tr. of Shên's works preserved in the anthology Wên-hsüan in E. von Zach, Die chinesische Anthologie (2 vols, Harvard, 1958). A.R.D.

Shenhar, formerly Shenberg, YITZCHAK (*Proskurov 21 II 1902; †Jerusalem 18 IV 1957), Hebrew author, went to Palestine after the First World War. He wrote short stories on the life of the Jews in Russia before and during the Revolution. His Israeli stories are mostly shrewd psychological analyses of those who cannot adjust themselves to the new life. His sensitive and lucid style combines introspection with an Imagist precision of expression. He was one of the best translators from European literature into Hebrew.

Beshiva Derachim (1954); Sipurei Y. S. (3 vols, 1960). C.K. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Shenstone, WILLIAM (*Hales Owen, Worcs; ~13 XI 1714; †Leasowes 11 II 1763), English poet and essayist. Johnson's* contemporary at Oxford, Shenstone early retired to his little estate, Leasowes, to cultivate his gardens, friendships and poetry. In Dodsley* he found a publisher for The Schoolmistress (1742), Pastoral Ballad (1755) and other poems, and his essays on poetry, the inconvenience of a small fortune and the function of 'ruinated structures' in landscape gardening. Though daringly artless at times and of a fresher sentiment for nature than is usual in his age, Shenstone's poetic impulse lacked the vitality to break with contemporary poetic artifices.

R.M.H.

Poems on various occasions (1737); Judgment of

Hercules (1741).—Works in Verse and Prose (2 vols, 1764; III, Letters, ed. R. Dodsley with Life, 1769; ed. G. Gilfillan, with Life, 1854); Shenstone's Miscellany, 1759–63 (ed. I. A. Gordon, 1952).

A. Hazeltine, A Study of W. S. and His Critics (1918); M. Williams, W. S.: A Chapter in 18th Century Taste (1935) and Letters (1939); A. R. Humphreys, W. S. (1937); D. Mallon, Letters (1939).
R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Shepard, THOMAS (*Towcester, Eng. 5 XI 1605; ∞1632 Margaret Touthville, ∞1637 Joanna Hooker, ∞1647 Margaret Boradel; †Cambridge, Mass. 25 VIII 1649), American theologian. He used homely metaphors in the Puritan manner; his The Sincere Convert (1640) ran through 20 editions.

New Englands Lamentation for Old Englands Present Errors (1645); The Clear Sun-shine of the Gospel (1648).—The Autobiography of T. S. (ed. N. Adams, 1832).

J. A. Albro, The Life of T. S. (1847).

H.L.C.

Sherburne, SIR EDWARD (*London 18 IX 1618; †ibid. 4 IX 1702), English Roman Catholic poet and translator. He became clerk to the ordinance in 1642, was imprisoned and then joined the Royalist army, becoming missionary general at Oxford till 1646. Sherburne regained his office in 1660. He was a very capable translator.

B.L.J.

Poems (1651; ed. A. Chalmers in The Works of the English Poets, VI, 1810; as Miscellaneous Poems, 1819; ed. F. J. van Beeck, 1961).—The Tragedies of L. Annaeus Seneca (tr.; 1701).

B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Sheridan, RICHARD BRINSLEY (*Dublin 30 X 1751; ∞13 IV 1773 Elizabeth Linley, ∞1795 Esther Ogle; †London 7 VII 1816), Irish dramatist and orator. Educated at Dublin and Harrow; his family's residing at Bath gave him an early opportunity of studying the behaviour of polite society. He settled in London (1774) with his wife, whom he had married after a romantic courtship, involving an elopement and two duels with a rival. He studied law but left it to write for the stage, on which his success was rapid. He became a shareholder in Drury Lane Theatre 1776; manager 1776–1809. Sheridan entered English public life as M.P. for Stafford 1780; became Under-Secretary of State 1782, Privy Councillor and Treasurer of the Navy 1799. His speeches on Irish affairs and on the impeachment of Warren Hastings were especially notable.

Sheridan's brilliant comedies The Rivals (1775) and The School for Scandal (1777) are classics of the stage, full of witty dialogue, excellent situations and immortal characters. With Goldsmith*, Sheridan marks a return to real humour and life and a reaction against moralizing and sentimental comedy.

R.McH.

PLAYS: St Patrick's Day (1775); The Critic (1779); Pizarro (1798); The Stranger (1798).—The Duenna (comic opera; 1775); A Trip to Scarborough (adapt. from Vanbrugh; 1777).—Plays and Poems of R. B. S. (ed. R. Crompton Rhodes, 3 vols, 1928).—Speeches of S. (1798).

T. Moore, Memoirs of S. (5th ed., 2 vols, 1827); R. C. Rhodes, Harlequin S. (1933); L. Gibbs, S. (1947); O. Sherwin, Uncorking Old Sherry (1960); J. Dulck, Les comédies de R. B. S. (Paris, 1962).

R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Sherira Gaon, otherwise SHERIRA BEN HANINA (*Pumbeditha c. 900; †ibid. c. 1000), Iraqi Hebrew religious writer and historian; gaon (head of the Talmudical college) of Pumbeditha 968–998. Many of his responsa (replies to legal questions) in Arabic, Hebrew and Aramaic are preserved. A letter of his, recounting the history of Talmudic scholarship, is the chief source for the period.

Iggeret R. Sherira (1566; ed. B. Lewin, 1921; Épître historique de R. Scherira Gaon, tr. L. Landau, 1904).
C.R.

Sherwood, MARY MARTHA, née BUTT (*Stanford, Worcs 6 V 1775; ∞1803 Henry Sherwood; †Twickenham 22 IX 1851), English philanthropist, writer of tracts and moral stories, the best-known being History of the Fairchild Family (3 pts, 1818–47).

M. Tabor, Pioneer Women, III (1925); N. G. Royde-Smith, The State of Mind of Mrs S. (1946).
R.M.H. (K.W.)

Sherwood, ROBERT EMMET (*New Rochelle, N.Y. 4 IV 1896; ∞1922 Mary Brandon [o/o 1934], ∞1935 Madeline Connelly; †14 XI 1955), American playwright. Sherwood first attracted attention with his historical comedy The Road to Rome (1927) and in the 1930s won a Pulitzer prize twice. Idiot's Delight (1936) is the best example of Sherwood's compassionate irony as he investigates the behaviour of a group of differing personalities under the threat of approaching war and the passing of a social order.

This Is New York (1931); Reunion in Vienna (1932); The Petrified Forest (1935); Abe Lincoln in Illinois (1939); There Shall Be No Night (1941); Small War on Murray Hill (1957).

J. M. Brown, Two on the Aisle (1938) and The Worlds of R. E. S. (1965); W. L. Dusenberry, The Theme of Loneliness in Modern American Drama (1960); J. Gassner, Theatre at the Crossroads (1960); R. Shuman, R. E. S. (1964).

G.A.K.

Shestov, LEV, pseud. of LEV ISAAKOVICH SCHWARZ-MANN (*1866; †1938), Russian philosopher and author. Influenced by Dostoyevsky* and Nietzsche*, he became a Mephistophelian opponent of all idealistic systems from Socrates* to Kant*. From 1916 onwards, and especially during his exile in France, he became interested in religion. Yet the god he sought was—not unlike Franz Kafka's* god—beyond all human standards of good and evil. His early phase was noted for three books: Dobro v uchenii Tolstogo i Nietzsche ('The Good in the Teaching of T. and N.'; 1900), Dostoyevsky i Nietzsche: filosofiya tragedii (1901) and Apofoez bezpochvennosti ('An Apotheosis of Rootlessness'), also for his earlier onslaught on Brandes* à propos of Shakespeare*. In his subsequent books Shestov came close to 'existentialist' thought, and one of his last works was a study of Kierkegaard* (1939).

Shakespeare i ego kritik Brandes (1898); Vlast' klyuchey (Potestas Clavium) (1923); Na vesakh Iova (1929).—Anton Chekhov and Other Essays (tr. S. Koteliansky and J. M. Murry, 1915); All Things Are Possible (tr. S. Koteliansky, 1920); In Job's Balance (tr. C. Coventry and C. A. Macartney, 1932); Athènes et Jérusalem (tr. B. Schloetzer, 1938). J.L.

Shevchenko, TARAS (*Morinty 9 III 1814; †St Petersburg 10 III 1861), Ukrainian poet. A serf by birth, he had a singularly unhappy childhood. At the age of 17 he came in his master's retinue to St Petersburg, and a year later was apprenticed to an artisan, where, by accident, his artistic talent was discovered. The painter Bryullov and the poet Zhukovsky* bought his freedom, and he entered the Academy of Art in 1838. While studying painting, he discovered his poetic gift, and his first book of verse, Kobzar ('The Minstrel'), appeared in 1840. There followed numerous poems in which he combined his own poetic genius with that of his people whose mouthpiece he became. In 1846 he joined the secret 'Brotherhood of Cyril and Methodius' advocating a free and democratic union of all Slavs. The next year the Brotherhood was denounced, and he was sentenced for his unpublished works, such as the anti-Tsarist anti-imperialist poems Son ('A Dream'; 1844) and Kavkaz (1845), to penal army service in Central Asia, whence he returned only ten years later. Undaunted by his trials, he continued to write, and when he died he was the acknowledged national poet of the Ukraine.

Povne zibrannya tvoriv (10 vols, incl. paintings, 1939–64; 6 vols, 1963–64); The Poet of Ukraine (tr. and intro. C. Manning, 1945); 'Autobiography' in Ukr. Rev., VIII (1961); Song out of Darkness (tr. with biblio. V. Rich, 1961); Selected Works (incl. prose; Moscow, 1964); Poetical Works (tr. C. Andrusyshen and W. Kirkconnell, 1964).

A. Jensen, T. Sh. Ein ukrainisches Dichterleben (1916); I. Franko, 'T. Sh.' in Slavon. Rev., III (1924); D. Doroshenko, T. Sh. (pref. R. Seton-Watson, Prague, 1936); W. K. Matthews, T. Š. (1951); G. S. N. Luckyj, 'Sh. studies one century after the poet's death' in Amer. Slavic Rev., XXI (1962); T. Š. 1814–1861. A Symposium (ed. V. Mijakovskij and G. Y. Shevelov, The Hague, 1962); T. Sh.: The Bard of People's Freedom (1962); I. Z. Boiko et al., T. Sh. Bibliografiya literatury pro zhyttya i tvorchist' 1839–1959 (2 vols, 1963); M. Rylsky and A. Deitch, T. Sh. A Biographical Sketch (Kiev, 1964); O. Kravchenyuk, 'Sh. biblio. in Eng.' in Suchasnist', IV (1964); T. Š. Sein Leben und sein Werk (ed. J. Bojko and E. Koschmieder, with biblio., 1965); and arts by various authors in: Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XXXIV (1955), XL (1961); Ukr. Quart., I (1945), V (1949), XII (1956), XVI (1960); Ukr. Rev., VIII (1961), IX (1962), XI (1964). V.S.

Shiels, GEORGE (*Co. Antrim 1886; †ibid. 1949), Irish dramatist; from 1921 over 20 of his plays were produced at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin. One of Ireland's most popular playwrights, he specialized in the comedy of Irish small-town life.

Paul Twynning (1922); Professor Tim (1925); The New Gossoon (1930); The Passing Day (1936); The Rugged Path (1940). E.T.W.

Shiga NAOYA (*Ishinomaki, Miyagi 20 II 1883; †21 X 1971), Japanese author. His early efforts were not outstanding, and in 1913 he gave up literary activity. Persuaded in 1917 by Mushanokōji* Saneatsu to resume it, he soon became famous for a succession of novels and short stories. His literary prominence was due partly to his lucid and clear style, which was imitated by later writers, and partly to his approach which, while not avoiding a realistic presentation of unpleasant facts or complex psychological situations, dealt with them in a spirit of humanitarian idealism. He was regarded as one of the most brilliant Japanese writers of the early 20th century.

Aru asa (1908); Kamisori (1910; 'The Razor', tr. F. Mathy in Monumenta Nipponica, XIII.3–4, 1957); Han no hanzai (1913; 'Han's Crime', tr. I. I. Morris in Japan Quart., II, 1955, Harper's Bazaar, Nov. 1956, and Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956; 'Le crime du jongleur', tr. S. Elisséev in Neuf nouvelles japonaises, 1924); Seibei to hyōtan (1913; 'The Artist', tr. I. I. Morris in Japan Quart., II, 1955, and Modern Japanese Stories, 1961); Wakai (1917; summary in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Kinosaki nite (1917; 'At Kinosaki', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Keene, op. cit.); Kozō no Kamisama (1920; tr. M. Y. Matsudaira in The Heart Is Alone, ed. R. N. McKinnon, 1957); An'ya kōro (1922; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); other trs in: S. Élisée, Le jardin des pivaines (1927); A. L. Sadler, Selections From Modern Japanese Writers (Sydney, 1942); S. G. Brickley, The Writing of Idiomatic English (Tokyo, 1951); other refs in Modern Japanese Stories (ed. I. I. Morris, 1961).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Shiki: see Masaoka SHIKI.

Shikibu: see Murasaki SHIKIBU.

Shikitei SAMBA, pseud. of KIKUCHI HISANORI, also called KIKUCHI TAISUKE (*Edo [= Tokyo] 1776; †ibid. 28 I 1822), Japanese novelist and humorous writer. Apprenticed in a bookshop in his youth, he showed, in spite of a poor education, great interest in books. His first book was published in 1794 when he was only 18, and from then onwards he became a fluent writer. No fewer than 138 works are credited to him. He had a cheerful and convivial personality, and his premature death was ascribed to his addiction to drink. Among his writings by far the most famous is Ukiyoburo, a series of humorous dialogues between people attending a public bath-house. The book was regarded by his contemporaries as one of the 'Four great books of Japan', the other three being Bakin's* Hakkenden, Tanehiko's* Nise Murasaki inaka Genji, and Jippensha's* Ikku's Hizakurige (on the last of which it is to a certain extent modelled).

E.B.C.

Ukiyoburo (1809–11; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948); summary and discussion in B. Lewin, Japanische Chrestomathie, 1965; Shijūhachi kuse (1811); Ukiyodoko (1811–12); Kokon hyakubaka (1812).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Shimazaki Tōson, pseud. of SHIMAZAKI HARUKI (*Kamiasaka, Nagano 17 II 1872; ∞1899 Hata Fuyuko [†1911], ∞1928 Katō Shizuko; †22 VIII 1943), Japanese poet, novelist and essayist. A schoolteacher by profession, he became interested in new literary movements and in 1897 published a collection of poetry which attracted favourable attention. Giving up poetry, he turned to novel-writing, in which he gained very great success. He was prominent among modern Japanese writers, showing a steadily developing outlook through his long literary life, moving from Romantic poetry to Naturalist and finally to autobiographical novel-writing.

VERSE: Wakanashū (1897; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948).—G. Bonneau, Lyrisme du temps présent (1935); Modern Japanese Literature (ed. D. L. Keene, 1956); T. Ninomiya and D. J. Enright, The Poetry of Living Japan (1957); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964).—NOVELS: Hakai (1906; 'The Broken Commandment', extract tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956); Haru (1908); Ie (1909–11; summary of this and two prec. in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Arashi (1926); Yoake mae (1929–35; summary of this and prec. in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939).

J. Roggendorf, 'S. T., a maker of the modern Japanese novel' in Monumenta Nipponica (1951); E. McClellan, 'The novels of S. T.' in Harvard Jour. Asiat. Stud., XXIV (1962–63) and Two Japanese Novelists: Sōseki and T. (1969).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Shimoni (SHIMONOWITZ), DAVID (*Bobroisk 28 VIII 1886; †Tel Aviv 10 XII 1956), Hebrew poet, emigrated to Palestine. He wrote elegies, ballads, fables and satires, but he is most noted for his Israeli Idylls in the manner of Toernichowsky's* Crimean Idylls. Sadness, shrewdness and a gentle love for people, landscapes and animals are the characteristic features of his poetry.

Bahashai (1945); Poems (1952–54); Idylls (Eng. facing Heb. text; Jerusalem, 1957).

Y.H. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Shinkokinshū ('The New Kokinshū'), Japanese poetical anthology, ordered in 1201 by the Emperor Gotoba, compiled in 1206 by Fujiwara* no Sadaie and five others, and revised in 1210 and subsequently. It is usually considered the most significant of the 20 imperially-commissioned anthologies after Kokinshū*, and it was the largest up to that date, containing 1,975 tanka poems. Their technique is highly developed and refined, their style often sensuous and symbolistic; a common mood evoked is one of loneliness, with overtones of sadness but an effect of great beauty.

Sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry, I (1936); Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature (1948); R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (with outstanding crit. assessment; 1961); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Shirinsky-Shikhmatov, PRINCE SERGEY (*1783; †1837), Russian poet who resisted Karamzin's* reforms of literary language and clung to the ornately archaic style in which he wrote his principal work, the 'lyrical epic', Pëtr Velikiy ('Peter the Great'; 1810).

J.L.

Shirley, JAMES (*London 18 IX 1596; ∞1623 Frances; †ibid. 29 X 1666), English poet and dramatist, educated at Merchant Taylors' School, Oxford and Cambridge. He took Orders, but was converted to Roman Catholicism and became a schoolmaster. He came to London about 1625 and began writing plays. In the Civil War he was a Royalist; he and his wife died as a result of shock and exposure in the Great Fire of London. Shirley wrote about 40 plays and is one of the best and best-known of the Caroline dramatists. He has a light touch in comedy, and in tragedy retains the Elizabethan gift of rising on occasion to powerful dramatic poetry.

Poems (1646).—The Wittie Faire One, A Comedie (1633); The Bird in A Cage, a comedie (1633); The Traytor, a Tragedie (1635); The Maides Revenge, a Tragedie (1639); The Constant Maid, a Comedie (1640); The Cardinal (1652; wr. 1641).—Dramatic Works and Poems (ed. W. Gifford and A. Dyce, 1833).

A. H. Mason, J. S., Dramatist (1915).

J.B.B.

Shirley, JOHN (*c. 1366; †21 X 1456), English 'anthologist' of the important works of Chaucer*, Lydgate*, Trevisa* etc., who apparently lent (or hired) out his anthologies or 'commonplace books'.

H. S. Bennett, Chaucer and the 15th Century (1947).

R.W.B.

Shishkov, ADMIRAL ALEXANDER SEMENOVICH (*1754; †1841), Russian author and leader of the conservative group of poets, Beseda lyubiteley russkogo slova ('The Colloquy of the Lovers of Russian Speech'). He was the principal opponent of Karamzin's* modernization of the literary language. Karamzin's adherents, young Pushkin* included, formed in 1815 the literary circle Arzamas with the special purpose of ridiculing the Shishkovites.

Razsuzhdenie o starom i novom sloge (1803); Zapiski, mneniya i perepiska Adm. A. S. Shishkova (1870).

J.L.

Shishkov, VYACHESLAV YAKOVLEVICH (*1873; †1945), Russian author. His reputation began to rise in 1923 when his novel Vataga appeared. His most ambitious and vivid book is, however, Emelyan Pugachov (1943–44), a historical novel about the rising of the Ural Cossacks against Catherine* II.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1927–29); Ugrym reka (1933); Izbrannoye (1947).—Children of Darkness (tr.; 1936); La Horde (tr. A. Beucier, 1938).

M. G. Maizel', V. S. (1935); V. M. Bakhmetyev, V. S. (1947); A. A. Bogdanova, V. S. (1953).

J.L.

Shishmanov, DIMITUR (*Sofia 11 VI 1889; †ibid. 2 II 1945), Bulgarian author. His European travels gave him a range of cosmopolitan and urban themes unusual in Bulgarian literature. A gifted realist writer and admirer of the Greek classical heritage, he was executed as an anti-Communist.

Deputat Stoyanov (1920); 'High Life' (1920); Buntovnik (1921); Stranni hora (1924); Koshmarut (1927); Panair v Starodol (1930); Blyanove kray Akropola (1937); Zograf Pavel (1939). V.P.

Shishmanov, IVAN (*Svishtov 22 VI 1862; †Oslo 22 V 1923), Bulgarian literary scholar and historian. Educated in Vienna, Geneva and Leipzig, he became Professor of literature at Sofia University in 1894 and Minister of Education 1903–07, having founded in 1889 that unique corpus of Bulgarian lore, Sbornik za narodnite umotvorenia. In this and the Academy Sbornik he published his many fine monographs which gave Bulgarian humanities a European standing. Few have done more to encourage writers and promote education and literature in Bulgaria.

Stari putuvaniya prez Bulgaria (1891); Pessenta za murtviya brat (1894); Slavyanski selishta v Krit (1897); Proizhoda na prabulgarite (1900); Bratya Miladinovi (1912); Paissy (1914); T. Shevchenko (1914); Bulgarskoto vuzrajdanie (1916); Rakovski (1918); Novi studii (1926); I. Vazov: spomeni i dokumenti (1930).

M. Arnaudov, Sbornik v chest na I. S. (1920). V.P.

Shklovsky, VICTOR BORISOVICH (*1893), Soviet author, critic, literary theoretician and supporter of the 'formalist' school which regarded a poem as but a sum of stylistic devices. A great admirer and champion of Sterne*, he wrote his own 'sentimental journey' (Sentimental'noye puteshestvie, 1923), describing his experiences during the Revolution and the Civil War.

Pushkin i Sterne (1923); Khod konya (1923); Zoo ili pis'ma ne o lyubvi (1923); O teorii prozy (1925); Materialy i stil' v romane L'va Tolstogo 'Voyna i mir' (1928); O Mayakovskom (1940); O masterakh starinnykh (1953); Zametki o proze russkikh Klassikov (1953). J.L.

Shlonsky, AVRAHAM (*Krukov 6 III 1900), Hebrew poet, went to Palestine in 1921. His poems (Gilboa, 1927) sing ecstatically of soil, fertility, work, and the budding body of man. In 1925 he co-edited with Steinman* a literary periodical which was the first revolt in modern Hebrew literature. His Avnei Bohu revolutionized Hebrew poetry. Shlonsky has translated from Pushkin*, Shakespeare*, De* Coster, Romain Rolland* and modern Russian poetry.

Shirim (2 vols, 1954); Avnei Gevil (1965); Mi-Shirei Ha-Prozdor Ha-Aroch (1968). C.K. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Shmel'ev, IVAN SERGEYEVICH (*1875; †1950), Russian author whose first great success was a pathetic narrative about an old waiter and his family, Chelovek iz restorana (1910). After the Revolution he lived abroad where he was active in literature. One of his novels in particular, Solntse mērtvykh (1923; The Sun of the Dead, tr. C. J. Hogarth, 1927), gives a well-nigh apocalyptic picture of the Civil War in the Crimea.

Rasskazy (8 vols, 1910–16); Eto bylo (1923); Neupivayemaya chasha (1924); Istoriya lyubovnaya (1929); Bogomolye (2nd ed. 1948); Leto Gospodne (1948).—That Which Happened (tr. C. J. Hogarth, 1924). J.L.

Shne'ur Zalman of Ladi or Ladier (*Lyozna 1747; †Pyen 28 XII 1812), Russian Hebrew mystical writer. A follower of the Hasidic movement founded by the Ba'al Shem Tov, he objected to its cult of miracle-workers and neglect of Talmudic learning. He founded the Habad sect, with a systematized pantheistic doctrine and 'scientific' mysticism, achieved by a re-interpretation of the CABBALAH as taught by Isaac Luria*. He also composed a system of Jewish law and ritual, a counterpart to Joseph Karo's* Shulchan 'Arukh. The Habad sect still exists and is headed by descendants of Shne'ur Zalman.

Tanya (1796; tr. N. Mindal, 1962).

J. Unna, 'R. Senior Salman aus Ladi' in Festschrift ... D. Hoffmann (1914); S. A. Horodezky, Leaders of Hassidism (1928); S. M. Dubnow, Geschichte des Chassidismus, II (1931); G. G. Scholem, Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism (1946); M. Buber, Hasidism (1948). C.R.

Shofman, GERSHON (*Orsha 28 II 1880), Hebrew writer. After three years' service in the Russian army he lived in Austria, and after the Nazi annexation went to Palestine. His characters are refugees, the miserable and the sick, all yearning for love. His shrewd and unromantic approach was a great innovation in Hebrew literature, and it helped his generation to interpret its own chaos. C.K. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Kol Kitvei S. (4 vols, 1960). M.Ge.; Y.F.

Shoham, MATITYAHU (M. POLIAKEWITCH) (*Warsaw 1890; †ibid. 4 VII 1937), Hebrew author. Little is known of his life. His early lyrics drew the attention of the foremost Hebrew critics; his poems are noted for their pure Biblical language and spirit. He also wrote plays on Biblical subjects.

Balaam (1934); Yericho (1934); Elohy Barzel Lo Taashelach; Tzor Yerushalayim. S.A.

Sholem Aleichem, pseud. of SHOLEM RABINOVITCH (*Poltava, Ukraine 18 II 1859; †New York 13 V 1916), Yiddish humorous writer; with Mende* and Peretz*, a classic of modern Yiddish literature. At 21 he became a rabbi, but after two years devoted himself entirely to writing. He moved to Kiev, inheriting a great fortune from his father-in-law, which he spent in speculative shares and in publishing and encouraging young writers. In 1905 he left Russia and, for health reasons, lived in Switzerland, making extensive lecture tours in Europe and in America, where he settled in 1914. He contrasts the earth- and tradition-bound Jew with the luft-mentch ('the man who lives on thin air'). The successful musical Fiddler on the Roof is based on some of the stories of his major character, Tevye der Milchiker ('the milk-man'). Many of his stories take the form of monologues, rich in idiom often lost in translation. He is widely anthologized and translated into European and Asian languages.

Stempeniu (1888; Eng. tr. H. Berman, 1913); Der freilekher seder—a zamlung humoreskes, lider un funkn (1913); S. A.'s verk (14 vols, 1908–14).—Khaye-Odom (autobiog.; 3 vols, 1920).—Jewish Children (tr. H. Berman, 1920); The Old Country (tr. J. and F. Butwin, 1946); Inside Kasrilevke (tr. I. Goldstick, 1949); Tevye's Daughters (tr. F. Butwin, 1949); Wandering Star (tr. idem, 1952); Adventures of Mottel, the Cantor's Son (tr. T. Kahane, 1953); The Great Fair (tr. idem, 1955); The Bewitched Tailor (tr. B. Isaacs, Moscow, 1956); Stories and Satires (tr. C. Leviant, 1959); Collected Stories (2 vols, 1965); Old Country Tales (ed. and tr. C. Leviant, 1966).

S. A. Panorama (anthology and essays; ed. M. W. Grafstein, 1948). J.S.

Sholokhov, MIKHAIL ALEXANDROVICH (*1905), Soviet author whose novel Tikhii Don (3 vols, 1928–33, additional vol., 1940; I and II, And Quiet Flows The Don, tr. S. Garry, 1934; III and IV, The Don Flows Home to the Sea, tr. idem, 1940) written in the tradition of Tolstoy's* War and Peace, sold over five million copies. His next novel, Podnyataya tselina (1932–33; Virgin Soil Uplifted, tr. S. Garry, 1935), deals with the same Cossacks during the collectivization of the village farming. In one of his later books, Oni srazhalis' za rodinu ('They Fought for Their Country'; 1944), we see them again during the trials of the German invasion. Sholokhov's portraiture is sure and vivid, his language is fluent, and in spite of his tendency towards sensationalism, his observation is reliable enough to confer to his writings considerable documentary value. He is among the most popular writers of Soviet Russia, and was awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1965.

Sobranie sochineniy (7 vols, 1956–59); Slovo o rodine (1966).

V. Goffenshefer, M. S. (1940); I. G. Lezhnev, M. S. (1948) and Realizm Sholokhova (1948); E. J. Simmons, Russian Fiction and Soviet Ideology (1958). J.L.

Shorthouse, JOSEPH HENRY (*Birmingham 9 IX 1834; ∞1857 Sarah Scott; †ibid. 4 III 1903), English novelist whose one notable novel gave the High Anglicanism, mysticism and royalism of the Tractarians a 17th-century setting.

John Inglesant (privately pr. 1880; 2 vols, 1881); Life, Letters and Literary Remains (ed. S. Short-house, 2 vols, 1905). R.F.

Shōyō: see Tsubouchi SHŌYŌ.

Shtencil, AVROM NUCHEM (*Celadysz [Poland] 1897), Yiddish poet, essayist and editor of a literary monthly, Loshn un Lebn ('Language and Life'). He lived in Germany for some years before settling in England (1935). His early poetry showed originality in form and imagery, his later work became more traditional and nostalgic.

Der Kreis fun Saturn (1932); Dos Fisherdorf (1933); Fun der vait (1934); Fun der heym (1936); Epl (1937); Londoner Sonetn (1937); Hakn-krait (1938); Di royte army (1942); Yiddish (1942); Yerushalayim (1948). J.S.

Shtern, SHOLEM (*Tischewitz [Poland] 1906), Yiddish poet and essayist. Living in Canada from 1927, he introduced Canadian motifs into Yiddish poetry, along with the long narrative poem.

Noentkayt (1929); Es likhtiky (1941); Inderfri (1945); In Kanada (1953). J.S.

Shukri, 'ABD-AL-RAHMĀN (*Port Said, Egypt 1886; †Alexandria 1958), Egyptian Arab poet, strongly influenced by English Romanticism. In his poetry, which represents a transition from neo-classicism to Romanticism, and in his book of Confessions published under a pseudonym (1916) he expresses the malaise of the Egyptian intellectual early in the century.

Diwān A. S. (verse; 1960).

Muhammad Mandūr, al-Shi'r al-misri ba'da Shauqi (1955); A. M. K. al-Zubaidi, 'The Diwan school' in Jour. Arabic Lit., I (1970). M.M.B.

Shunzei: see Fujiwara NO SHUNZEI.

Sibbes, RICHARD (*Tostock, Suffolk 1577; †London 5 VII 1635), Puritan divine. Educated at Bury St Edmunds Grammar School and St John's College, Cambridge, he became Master of St Catherine's Hall in 1626. He was celebrated for the sermons he gave as preacher of Gray's Inn, and also wrote verse.

The Saints Cordials (1629); The Bruised Reed and Smoaking Flax (1630); The Churches Visitation (1634).—Complete Works (ed. A. B. Grosart, 6 vols, 1862–63). J.B.B.

Sidgwick, HENRY (*Skipton 31 V 1838; ∞1876 Eleanor Balfour; †Terling 28 VIII 1900), English writer on philosophy, political economy and politics, Professor of moral philosophy at Cambridge 1883–1900. R.M.H.

Ethics of Conformity and Subscription (1870); Principles of Political Economy (1883); Scope and Method of Economic Science (1885); Outlines of History of Ethics (1886); Elements of Politics (1891).

A. S. and E. M. Sidgwick, Memoir (1906); F. H. Hayward, Ethical Philosophy of S. (1901); W. C. Harvard, H. S. and Later Utilitarian Political Philosophy (1959). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Sidney, MARY: see Herbert, MARY, COUNTESS OF PEMBROKE.

Sidney, SIR PHILIP (*Penshurst 30 XI 1554; ∞20 IX 1583 Frances Walsingham; †Arnhem, Holland 17 X 1586), English soldier, diplomat, courtier, prose-writer, critic and poet. Educated at Shrewsbury School (1564) and Christ Church, Oxford (1568–71), he travelled in France, Germany, Hungary, Italy and the Netherlands (1572–75). Presented to the Queen at Kenilworth (VII 1576), he won favour, became ambassador to the Emperor and Elector Palatine (1577), and wrote The Lady of May to entertain Elizabeth at Wanstead (1578). Retiring to Wilton after his quarrel with Oxford* (1579) and an unfortunate memorandum on the projected marriage with Anjou (1580), Sidney wrote The Arcadia (1590) for his sister. Knighted in 1583, he became governor of Flushing in 1585, and was mortally wounded at Arnhem after his courtier's sense of honour had led him to doff his leg-armour. Sidney's Defence of Poesie (1595) expresses the traditional Renaissance honouring of an art which can inspire and delight by creative imagining. His Arcadia, long regarded as an epic, contributes to the development of the prose of Congreve* and Jane Austen*; in his verse, particularly the sonnets of Astrophel and Stella (1591), a fine imagination works through a perfect technique of language.

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

The Prose Works of Sir P. S. (ed. A. Feuillerat, 4 vols, 1912, 1962); The Poems of Sir P. S. (ed. W. A. Ringler, 1962).—An Apologie for Poetrie (1595; ed. G. T. Shepherd, 1965).

Fulke Greville, Life of Sir P. S. (1652; ed. N. Smith, 1907); M. W. Wallace, Life of Sir P. S. (1915); M. Wilson, Sir P. S. (1931); M. S. Goldman, Sir P. S. and the Arcadia (1934); K. O. Myrick, Sir P. S. as a Literary Craftsman (1935, 1965); J. F. Danby, Poets on Fortune's Hill (1952); J. Buxton, Sir P. S. and the English Renaissance (1954, 1964); J. A. Van Dorsten, Poets, Patrons and Professors (1962); W. R. Davis and R. A. Lanham, S.'s Arcadia (1965). J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Sidonius Apollinaris, GAIUS SOLLIUS MODESTUS (*Lyons c. 430; †Auvergne c. 488), Christian Latin writer. Of noble family, Sidonius succeeded in retaining the favour of three successive Emperors, Avitus, Majorian and Anthemius, upon each of whom he pronounced a panegyric. As Bishop of Auvergne he opposed the Goths, but after 475 found favour with King Euric. His works (principally letters and poems) have little literary merit, although they are invaluable for the sketch they draw of contemporary manners and customs.

Eds: C. Lütjohann in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Auctores antiquissimi, XVIII (1887; with biog. by T. Mommsen); P. Mohr (1895); trs of letters: W. B. Anderson (with poems; 2 vols, 1936-65); O. M. Dalton (freely tr.; 2 vols, 1915).

C. E. Stevens, S. A. and His Age (1933); A. Loyer, Sidoine Apollinaire et l'esprit précieux en Gaule (1943). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Sienkiewicz, HENRYK (ADAM ALEKSANDER PIUS), pseud. LITWOS (*Wola Okrzejska 5 V 1846; †Vevey 15 XI 1916), Polish author. Of country gentry, he finished his University studies of literature and history in 1870; in 1876-78 he travelled in the U.S.A. and in 1905 he was awarded the Nobel prize.

He started his literary career in 1869 by writing critical articles in the Positivist spirit; but in his short stories (from 1875) and later in his novels he gave more voice to the emotions. In his historical trilogy (Ogniem i mieczem, Potop, Pan Wołodyjowski), the subject of which was taken from 17th-century Poland, by means of the colourful plot, vividness of the narrative and some patriotic pride he at once conquered Polish readers, though he met some Positivist criticism. His historical novel Quo Vadis? (3 vols, 1896; Eng. tr. J. Curtin, 1898) gained him international fame, whereas his psychological novel with a contemporary subject, Bez dogmatu (1891), made him known in European intellectual circles and must be considered his most important literary achievement. Most of his short stories, sketches and letters are masterpieces of their kind. In everything he wrote Sienkiewicz was a master of composition and a good stylist. Though not deep, he makes easy and entertaining reading.

NOVELS: Na marnie (1872; In Vain, tr. J. Curtin, 1889); Ogniem i mieczem (4 vols, 1884; With Fire and Sword, tr. idem, 1895); Potop (6 vols, 1886; The Deluge, tr. idem, 2 vols, 1895); Pan Wołodyjowski (3 vols, 1887-88; Pan Michael, tr. idem, 1895); Bez dogmatu (1891; Without Dogma, tr. I. Young, 1893); Rodzina Polanieckich (3 vols, 1895; Children of the Soil, tr. J. Curtin, 1895); Krzyżacy (4 vols, 1900; The Teutonic Knights, Eng. tr., 1943); Na polu chwały (1906; On the Field of Glory, tr. J. Curtin, 1906); Wiry (2 vols, 1910; Whirlpools, tr. M. A. Drezmal, 1910); W pustyni i w puszczy (2 vols, 1911; In Desert and Wilderness, tr. idem, 1912, repr. 1945); Legiony (1913-14, unfinished; Die Legionen, tr. A. von Guttry, 1917).

SHORT STORIES: Stary sługa (1875); Hania (1876);

Selim Mirza (1876); Szkice węglem (1877); Z pamiętnika poznańskiego nauczyciela (1879); Janko Muzykant (1879); Niewola tatarska (1880); Z chlebem (1881); Przez stepy (1882); Bartek zwycięzca (1882); Latarnik (1882); Sachem (1883); Jamioł (1893); Dwie łąki (1908).—Eng. trs in Yanko the Musician and Other Stories (tr. J. Curtin, 1893) and Tales From H. S. (ed. M. M. Gardner, 1931).—FEUILLETONS: Listy z podróży (1876-78); Listy z Afryki (1892); Reisebriefe aus Afrika und Amerika, tr. S. Płaczek, 1927).

Pisma (81 vols, 1899-1906; ed. J. Krzyżanowski, 1950 ff.); Pisma zapomniane i niewydane (ed. I. Chrzanowski, 1922); Dziela (60 vols, 1948-55).

S. Lam, H. S. Cechy i elementy twórczości (1924); Wiadomości Literac., XLIII (1924); M. M. Gardner, The Patriot Novelist of Poland, H. S. (1926); K. Czachowski, H. S. Obraz twórczości (1931); I. Chrzanowski, H. S. Szkice literackie (1933); K. Wojciechowski, H. S. (3rd ed. 1935); K. W. Zawodziński, Stulecie trójcy powieściopisarzy (1947); W. Lednicki, H. S. (1946; Eng. tr., New York, 1948) and H. S. A Retrospective Synthesis (The Hague, 1960); J. Krzyżanowski, H. S. Kalendarz życia i twórczości (1956) and H. S. Żywot i sprawy (1966); A. Stawar, Pisarstwo H. S. (1960); Marya Kosko, Un 'best-seller' 1900. Quo Vadis? (Paris, 1960). S.S. (P.H.)

Sieroszewski, WACŁAW, pseud. SIRKO and K. BAGRYNOWSKI (*Wólka Kozłowska 21 VIII 1858; †Warsaw 20 IV 1945), Polish author, and ethnographer. After some technical education he was imprisoned and sent to Siberia for his participation in workers' activity; there he stayed till 1900. In 1902-03 he travelled in Japan and in 1905, again imprisoned, fled abroad. He served with the Polish legions and participated in the 1920 campaign against the Bolsheviks. In 1933 he became the president of the Polish Academy of Literature.

He started to write when still in Siberia. Later he used material from Tibet (Dalaj Lama), Korea (Ol-Soni Kisań), Japan (Miłość samuraja), China (Powieści chińskie), Caucasus (Risztaw), Madagascar (Beniowski and its sequel Ocean). In Pan Twardost-Twardowski (2 vols, 1930) he draws from the Polish folk-tales. His talent, enthusiasm, deep humanitarian feeling and sympathy for the dispossessed give his exotic novels and short stories great charm.

NOVELS: Na kresach lasów (1894; Sur la lisière des forêts, tr. M. de Rakowska, 1929); Risztaw (1899); Ucieczka (1904; A Flight From Siberia, Eng. tr. 1909); Ol-Soni-Kisań (1906; La danseuse coréenne, tr. J. Faury-Doguisné and J. A. Teslar, 1938); Zamorski diabeł (1909; Yang-Hun-Tsy, le diable étranger, tr. B. Kozakiewicz, 1909); Beniowski (1916); Ocean (1917); Miłość samuraja (1926; L'amour du Samourai, tr. A. Morzkowska, 1932); Dalaj Lama (2 vols, 1927; Ger. tr. J. M. Schubert, 1928).—SHORT STORIES: W matni (1897); Brzask

(1900; pub. as Dno nędzy, 1904; 'Im tiefsten Elend', tr. M. Sutzern in Sibirische Erzählungen, 1903); Powieści chińskie (1903); Małżeństwo (1909; Amours d'exilés, tr. G. de Nussac and S. Duval, 1923); Nowele (1914).—VARIOUS: Korea (1905; Ger. tr. S. Goldenring, n.d.); Za kręgiem polarnym (1926; 'Au delà du cercle polaire', tr. in À travers le désert blanc, n.d.); Wśród kosmatych ludzi (1926; 'Chez les Aïnos poilus', tr. ibid.); Cejlon (1930); Wrażenia z Anglii (1931).—Pisma (14 vols, 1922–26); Dzieła (20 vols, 1958–63).

Z. Dębicki, 'W. S.' in Portrety, I (1927); Z. L. Zaleski, 'V. S.' in Attitudes et destinées (1932); K. Czachowski, W. S. Życie i twórczość (1938).

S.S. (P.H.)

Siete Infantes de Lara: see SIETE INFANTES DE LARA.

Sigea, LUISA: see FORGERIES, LITERARY.

Sigebert of Gembloux (*after 1030; †5 X 1112), monk at Metz and Gembloux. Besides biographies, lives of saints and a history of the monastery of Gembloux, he wrote a long world chronicle (381–1112) and a De viris illustribus up to his own time and including a notice of his own career.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CLX (1854); Chronographia sive Chronica (ed. L. C. Bethmann in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Scriptores, VI, 1844); Gesta abbatum Gemblacensium (ed. G. H. Pertz, ibid., VIII, 1848). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Sigogne(s), CHARLES-TIMOLÉON DE BEAUXONCLES DE (*1560; †Dieppe 16 IV 1611), French poet. A political intriguer, often in trouble, he fought in the wars of religion, procured a mistress for Henri IV, and became Governor of Dieppe. His satirical verse, published in contemporary anthologies, was directed against contemporaries and marked by exuberant verbal fantasy and outspoken coarseness.

Œuvres satyriques (ed. F. Fleuret and L. Perceau, 1920).

A. Adam, Histoire de la littérature française au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle, I (1949). G.B.

Sigonio, CARLO (*Modena c. 1520; †Ponte Basso 28 VIII 1584), Italian historian and humanist. His most interesting work is a history of Italy from 570 to 1200, De regno Italiae (1574).

Opera omnia (1732; with life by L. A. Muratori). C.Dr.

Sigourney, LYDIA, née HUNTLEY (*Norwich, Conn. 1 IX 1791; ∞1819 Charles Sigourney; †Hartford, Conn. 10 VI 1865), American poet and journalist. Her poems were a blend of sentimentality, propriety and elegance. She was the most widely read American poet before Longfellow*.

Moral Pieces in Prose and Verse (1815); Poems, Religious and Elegiac (1841); Pleasant Memories of Pleasant Lands (1842); Letters of Life (autobiog.; 1866).

G. S. Haight, Mrs S., The Sweet Singer of Hartford (1930). H.L.C.

Sigüenza, FRAY JOSÉ DE (*Sigüenza ?1544; †El Escorial 1606), Spanish historian and religious writer. He became a Hieronimite Friar in 1567, succeeded Arias* Montano as librarian at the Escorial and was Prior there when he died. The first part of his history of his Order consists of the life of St Jerome*, the second of later history, including a long account of the building and furnishing of the great monastery. It is a model of Spanish prose and contains much material of importance for the religious and artistic history of Spain. He also wrote a life of Christ.

Historia de la Orden de San Jerónimo (Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., VIII, XII); La historia del Rey de los reyes (ed. L. Villalba Muñoz, 3 vols, 1917).

Américo Castro, Aspectos del vivir hispánico (Santiago de Chile, 1949). E.M.W.

Sigüenza y Góngora, CARLOS DE (*Mexico City 1645; †ibid. 1700), Mexican scholar and writer. He made contributions to the science and historiography of his day, but as a writer his interest lies in his chronicles and in his Infatigables de Alonso Ramírez, which approaches the boundary of narrative fiction. His poetry is of the late, debased Gongorist school; he was related to the Spanish poet and was a contemporary and friend of Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz*.

Primavera indiana (1668; 1683); Triumpho parthenico (1683); Oriental planeta (1700).—Obras (with stud. F. Pérez Salazar, 1927); Relaciones históricas (ed. Romero de Terreros, 1940; cont. biog. of Alonso Ramírez and extract from his chronicle); E. Abreu Gómez, C. de S., Poemas (Madrid, 1931; text and stud.).

I. A. Leonard, Don C. de S., a Mexican Savant (Berkeley, 1929). E.Sa.

Sigurjónsson, JÓHANN (*Laxamýri 19 VI 1880; ∞1912 Ingeborg Blom; †Copenhagen 31 VIII 1919), Icelandic dramatist. Of wealthy family, Sigurjónsson was educated at Reykjavík Grammar School and Copenhagen University, where he broke off his studies to become a dramatist. He achieved great success with his Bjærg-Ejvind, which caused some critics to rank him amongst the greatest Scandinavian dramatists. With the exception of the early Dr Rung (1905), his themes are Romantic-historical, and he wrote almost entirely in Danish. His qualities include a keen sense of the dramatic, a profound grasp of psychology and a polished style.

VERSE: Smaadigte (1920).—PLAYS: Bóndinn á Hrauni (1908; 'The Hraun Farm'); Bjærg-Ejvind og hans Hustru (1911; 'Eyvind of the Hills', this and prec. tr. H. K. Schanche in Modern Icelandic Plays, 1916); Ønsket (1915; Lofstur, tr. J. Young and E. Arkwright, 1939; 'The Wish', tr. E. Haugen in Fire and Ice, 1967); Løgneren (1917); Rit (ed. G. Gunnarsson, 2 vols, 1940–41).

K. Albertsson, 'J. S.' in Skirnir, XCIV (1920); A. Møller, 'Islandsk Digting i nyeste Tid og Danmark' in Hovedtræk av Nordisk Digting i Nytiden (ed. E. Skovrup, 1921); C. M. Woel, 'J. S.' in Litterære Tidsbilleder, I (1930); H. Toldberg, J. S. (1965). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Sikelianos, ANGELOS (*Levkada 15 III 1884; ∞1906 Eva Palmer, ∞1940 Anna Karamani; †Athens 19 IV 1951), Greek poet. Sikelianos combined great sensitivity and response to natural beauty with an austere visionary power, and already his early work, Alafroiskiotos ('The Seer'; 1909), a long lyrical poem celebrating the world of his native island, is imbued with what might be called a deep mythological sense of human life and destiny. He sought for the roots of his visionary outlook first in the folk tradition of modern Greece and then, behind this, in the Platonic and Neo-Platonic tradition, in Orphic theology and in the spiritual literature of ancient India, although in later years particularly he was to rediscover this traditional wisdom in the Orthodox Christian tradition. With the help of his first wife, Eva Palmer (1874–1952), he initiated the Delphic Idea, a movement intended to promote an intellectual revival in Greece and beyond; and it was as part of the programme of this movement that together they organized two Delphic Festivals (1927, 1930). Sikelianos' later poetry, as exemplified in such poems as Iera odos ('The Sacred Way') and Agrafon ('Unwritten'), is increasingly sombre, even tragic in tone, although he never lost his faith in the possibility of man's spiritual rebirth, and his lyrical gift remained with him to the end.

VERSE: Prologos sti zoi (4 vols, 1915–18); Stikhi (1920); To Pascha ton Ellinon (1922); O diithyramvos tou rodou (1932); Akritika (1942); Antidoro (1943); Lyrikos vlos (3 vols, 1946–47).—Thymeli (plays; 3 vols, 1950–55).—PROSE: Auguste Rodin (1911); Periklis Giannopoulos (1922); Anoikto gramma sto Vasilia (1922); Delfiki ekklesi (1927); To Delfiko panepistimio (1929); I Delfiki enosi (1932); Kostis Palamas (1943).

G. K. Katsimbalis, Vivliografia A. S. (1946; supp., 1952); E. P. Papanoutsos, Palamas, Kavafis, S. (1949); P. Sherrard, The Marble Threshing-Floor (1956). P.O.A.S.

Silfverstolpe, GUNNAR MASCOLL (*Stora Åsby 21 I 1893; †1942), Swedish poet and critic; civil servant, art and literary critic to Stockholm Tidning 1926; member of Swedish Academy 1941.

Like his friend Selander*, he rendered moods of everyday life, but country rather than town moods, in traditional language and rhythms.

Arvet (1919); Vardag (1926); Efteråt (1932); Hemland (1940).—Samlade dikter (1942).

En bok om G. M. S. (1944); S. Kjersén, G. M. S. (1943). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Silius Italicus, TIBERIUS CATIUS ASCONIUS (*c. A.D. 25; †Naples c. 101), Latin epic poet. His conduct as consul under Nero (68) tarnished his good name, which was, however, restored after his proconsular administration of Asia (77) under Vespasian. His years of retirement on his estates in Campania, devoted to literary pursuits, were terminated by his suicide by starvation to escape an incurable disease.

His epic, the Punica, in which he is indebted to Virgil* and Livy*, embellishes the Second Punic War with all the traditional epic machinery. It is commonly described as the longest and worst poem of Latin literature, but many of his similes and shorter passages show Silius to have been not entirely devoid of poetic skill.

Punica (ed. with comm. N. E. Lemaire, 2 vols, 1823; tr. J. D. Duff, 2 vols, 1934).

H. E. Butler, Post-Augustan Poetry (1909); J. Nicol, The Historical and Geographical Sources Used by S. I. (1936); M. von Albrecht, S. I.: Freiheit und Gebundenheit römischer Epik (1964).

A.J.D.

Silkiner, BENJAMIN NACHUM (*Wileika, Lithuania 1 II ?1882; †U.S.A. 6 XI 1933), Hebrew poet and lexicographer. Emigrating in his early youth to the U.S.A., he was influenced by America, though his songs are distinguished by a tone of his own. He translated Shakespeare* into Hebrew.

Mul Ohel Timora (1910).—Coll. poems (1927). S.A.

Sillanpää, FRANS EEMIL (*Hämeenkyrö 16 IX 1888; ∞1916 Sigrid Maria Salomäki, ∞1939 Ann Armia von Hertzen; †Helsinki 3 V 1964), Finnish novelist and short-story writer. He studied natural science at Helsinki University for several years, then turned to literature and published his first stories in the press. Elämä ja aurinko (1916; La vie et le soleil, tr. J.-L. Perret, 1943), his first novel, attracted attention by its qualities of style and approach. The great novels Meek Heritage and Fallen Asleep While Young illustrate these at a mature level. Sillanpää was an idealist as well as a realist, and though his bias was mainly biological, he was a good psychologist. The poetic element in his make-up is most evident in his stories, which are also formally more finished than his novels. He was awarded the Nobel prize in 1939.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Ihmislapsia elämän saatossa

(1917); Hurskas kurjuus (1919; Meek Heritage, tr. A. Matson, 1938); Enkelten suojatit (1923); Hiltu ja Ragnar (1923); Maan tasalta (1924); Töllinmäki (1925); Kiitos hetkistä, Herra... (1929); Nuorena nukkunut (1931); Fallen Asleep While Young, tr. A. Matson, 1933); Miehen tie (1932; Eines Mannes Weg, 1966); Ihmiset suviyössä (1934; People in the Summer Night, tr. A. Blair, 1966); Viidestoista (1936); Elokuu (1941); Ihmisen ihannus ja kurjuus (1945; Schönheit und Elend des Lebens, tr. A. Kaestlin-Burjam, 1947).—MEMOIRS: Poika eli elämänsä (1953); Päivä korkeimmillaan (1956).—Kootut teokset (coll. works; 12 vols, 1932–50).

T. Vaaskivi, F. E. S. (1937); A. Matson, Romaanitaide (1947); E. Linkomies, F. E. S. (1948); R. Koskimies, F. E. S. (1948); S. Sihvola, F. E. S:n teosten käännökset (1956); A. Ojala, Kohlaton toteuttaminen (1959). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Silone, IGNAZIO (*Pescina dei Marsi, Abruzzi I V 1900; †1944 Darina Laracy), Italian novelist and journalist. Silone helped found the Italian Communist party in 1921, but left it in 1930. During the 1930s his anti-Fascist novels, written in exile, won him fame in Europe and America, but they made little impact when published in Italy after the war. Silone played an active part in post-war Italian politics for a time, and edited the daily Avanti! and the review Tempo presente. He has only recently won recognition in Italy. In recent works he has explored the concept of community; the inspiration of his works is moral and religious as well as political.

NOVELS: Fontamara (Zürich, 1930, in Ger.; 1st Ital. ed. 1934; tr. G. David and E. Mosbacher, 1934); Brot und Wein (Zürich, 1937; Bread and Wine, tr. idem, 1937; pub. as Vino e pane, 1955, Bread and Wine, tr. H. Fergusson, 1964); Der Samen unterm Schnee (Zürich, 1940; pub. as Il seme sotto la neve, 1945; The Seed Beneath the Snow, tr. F. Frenaye, 1946); Una manciata di more (1952; A Handful of Blackberries, tr. D. Silone, 1954); Il segreto di Luca (1956; tr. The Secret of Luca, 1959).—DRAMA: Ed egli si nascose (Zürich, 1944; And He Did Hide Himself, tr. D. Laracy, 1946); L'avventura di un povero cristiano (1968).—GENERAL: Der Fascismus: seine Entstehung und seine Entwicklung (Zürich, 1934); La scelta dei compagni (1954); Uscita di sicurezza (1965; tr. Emergency Exit, 1969). B.M.

Silva, ANTONIO DE: see Bermúdez, JERÓNIMO.

Silva, ANTÓNIO JOSÉ DA (*Rio de Janeiro 1705; †Lisbon 17 X 1739), Portuguese playwright. He achieved repute as a writer of comedies for a popular Lisbon theatre. The literary merit of his plays—often based on mythological subjects and performed by puppets—is not high, but the action is quick and varied and the dialogue often amusing.

Silva's celebrity is partly due to the tragic circumstances of his death: arrested by order of the Inquisition in 1737 on a charge of practising Judaism, he was later strangled and his body burnt at an auto-da-fé.

Vida do grande D. Quixote e do gordo Sancho Pança (1733; ed. J. Mendes dos Remédios, 1905); Encantos de Medeia (1736); Variedades de Proteu (1737); Guerras do Alecrim e Mangerona (1737; ed. J. Mendes dos Remédios, 1905).—Theatro de António José (O Judeu) (ed. J. Ribeiro, 4 vols, Rio de Janeiro, 1911); Obras completas (4 vols, 1957–59).

T. Braga, O Poeta Judeu e a Inquisição (1901); J. L. de Azevedo, 'A. J. da S.' in Portugália, I (1925–26); C. H. Frèches, 'Introduction au théâtre du Judeu' in Bull. d'Hist. du Théâtre Portugais, I (Lisbon, 1950; see also II, 1951).

T.P.W.

Silva, FELICIANO DE (*Ciudad Rodrigo ?1492; †?ibid. ?1558), Spanish novelist and romance writer. A skilled exploiter of literary fashions, who wrote several continuations of the adventures of the AMADÍS family: Lisuarte de Grecia (1514), Amadís de Grecia (1530), Don Florisel de Niquea (1532–51), and an autobiographical Sueño, which describes a love-affair with a Jewish girl. His imitation of La Celestina* is his best work. Cervantes* mocked his absurd style.

Segunda comedia de Celestina (ed. J. A. de Balenchena, 1871).

H. Thomas, Spanish and Portuguese Romances of Chivalry (1920); N. Alonso Cortés, 'F. de S.' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Esp., XX (1933).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Silva, JOSÉ ASUNCIÓN (*Bogotá 27 XI 1865; †24 V 1896), Colombian poet. Of extreme sensibility, he excelled in the expression of subtle states of feeling in verse of unusually delicate rhythm. The most famous are the 'Nocturnes' which are remarkable for their musicality. He was greatly influenced by French poets and felt himself isolated in the narrow society and limited horizons of his own country. He had an unfortunate career and died by his own hand. Despite the smallness of his output he must be reckoned one of the most outstanding lyrical poets in the Spanish language in the 19th century.

Poesías (Bogotá, 1886; ed. M. de Unamuno, Barcelona, 1908); Poesías completas: seguidas de prosas completas (Madrid, 1952). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Silva, LUÍS AUGUSTO REBELO DA (*1822; †1871), Portuguese novelist and historian. He cultivated the historical novel in the manner of Alexandre Herculano* and, like the latter, turned later in life to history proper. William Beckford* is the chief character of the novel Lágrimas e tesouros (1863).

NOVELS: Rausso por Homizão (1842-43); Odio velho não cansa (1848); A última corrida de touros em Salvaterra (1848); The Last Royal Bull-Fight at Salvaterra, tr. E. Prestage, 1909; A Mocidade de D. João V (1852).—HISTORY: História de Portugal nos séculos XVII e XVIII (5 vols, 1860-71); Varões Ilustres (1870).—Obras completas (28 vols, 1907-09).

T. Braga, 'R. da S.' in As modernas ideias na literatura portuguesa (1892). T.P.W.

Silvestre, GREGORIO (*Lisbon ?1520; †Granada 1569), Spanish poet. He was protected by the Feria family and became organist at Granada Cathedral, where he was a friend of Barahona* de Soto. At first he upheld the national metres against Garcilaso*; later he adopted the Italian ones. His poems include two interesting fables, old-fashioned love poems, a gloss on Jorge Manrique's* Coplas and some good religious verse.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXII, XXXV; Poesías (ed. A. Marín Ocete, 1938). A. Marín Ocete, G. S. (1939). E.M.W.

Simard, JEAN (*Quebec City 17 VIII 1916; †1955 Céline Chartier), Canadian novelist, essayist, dramatist and translator. He has been on the editorial committee of the journal Liberté, radio producer for six years and a Professor at the École des Beaux-Arts of Montreal since 1940. His satires against Canadian bourgeois values are rich in wit and allusion, and his essays reveal wide intellectual and cultural interests.

Félix (1947); Hôtel de la Reine (1949); Mon fils pourtant heureux (1956); Les sentiers de la nuit (1959).—L'ange interdit (drama; 1961).

L.-P. Cormier, 'J. S. et la satire du milieu canadien' in Culture, XIX (1958). R.Su.

Simenon, GEORGES JOSEPH CHRISTIAN, pen-name of GEORGES SIM (*Liège 13 II 1903; †1950 Denise Quimet), Belgian-born novelist. A precursor of the 'Absurde' school, he revised the entire approach to the detective story. He has published 200 volumes of which 74 are devoted to the police officer Maigret, a series translated into 45 languages.

NOVELS: Au Pont des Arches (1920); L'affaire Sainte Flacre (1932); Chez les Flamands (1932); Maigret (1934); Les Pitard (1935); Les demoiselles de Concarneau (1936); Le testament Donadieu (1937); L'homme qui regardait passer les trains (1938); Les nouvelles enquêtes de Maigret (1944); Le fils (1957); The Son, tr. D. Woodward, 1958; Le train (1960); Trains, tr. R. Baldick, 1961).—Le roman de l'homme (essay; 1960).—Œuvres complètes (Lausanne, 1967 ff.).

A. Parinaud, Connaissance de G. S. (1957); B. de Fallois, S. (1961). J.C.D.; M.G.

Simić, NOVAK (*Vareš 14 I 1906), Croatian novelist and prose writer. An economics graduate of Zagreb, Simić is an editor of the journal Republika. He began publishing as early as 1927 and his first writing dealt with contemporary Sarajevo, its atmosphere, traditions and nostalgia for the grandeur of the past. Later he wrote of the war and the occupation in Miškovci and finally an urban novel attempting to treat some of the social problems of an industrial society. He has a gift for both lyrical atmosphere-description and direct narration but he is far more at home in dealing with his native Bosnian background than with the evils of a dehumanizing society or with character study on a grand scale. For this reason his most authentic writing is to be found in his short stories.

NOVELS: Vočnjak (1938; reworked in 1948 and 1956 eds as Brkići iz Bara); Miškovci (1949); Druga Obala (1952); Braća i kumiri (1955).—STORIES: Nepoznata Bosna (1936); Suton Tašlihana (1937); Isa zavjesa (1946); Zakoni i ognjevi (1947); Proljeće (1952); Ljubav Stjepana Obrdalfa (1958). B.J.

Simion, ȘTEFAN (*?; †1656), Metropolitan of Transylvania. He supervised the first complete translation of the New Testament into Rumanian, which was printed at Alba Iulia in 1648. The preface, signed by Ștefan, stresses the need for a standard written Rumanian, and the translation itself is one of the first attempts to satisfy this need.

G. F. Țepelea, 'Cîteva precizări în legătură cu izvoarele și glosele Noului Testament de la Beograd' in Limba română, III (1963); G. Ivașcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1969). D.J.D.

Simms, WILLIAM GILMORE (*Charleston, S.C. 17 IV 1806; †1826 Anna Giles, †1836 Cheville Roach; ibid. 11 VI 1870), American poet, critic and novelist. During his boyhood he became familiar with the heroic legends of the Frontier and the revolution in the South, which provided material for his later romantic novels. His most popular work, The Yemassee (1835), relates an exciting South Carolina 'border romance' and gives a fictional study of the Indian less idealized than Cooper's* portraits.

VERSE: Atalantis (1832); Areytos; or, Songs of the South (1846).—NOVELS: Guy Rivers (1834); The Partisan (1835); Mellichampe (1836); Charlemont (1856).—Works of W. G. S. (20 vols, 1853-66); The Letters of W. G. S. (ed. M. C. S. Oliphant, A. T. Odell and T. C. D. Eaves, 5 vols, 1952-56); The Writings of W. G. S. (ed. J. C. Guilds and J. B. Meriweather, 1969- ).

W. P. Trent, W. G. S. (1892); E. W. Parks, W. G. S. as a Literary Critic (1962).

H.L.C. (I.W.)

Simocattes: see Theophylact Simocattes.

Simon, CLAUDE (*Tananarive 10 X 1913), French novelist. Simon's work has evolved as a footnote to history, ancient, modern or imaginary (Le route des Flandres, 1960; Eng. tr. R. Howard, 1962), but these events are solely a basis for long analyses which aim at conveying the passage of time. Influenced by Marcel Proust*, having affinities with the NOUVEAU ROMAN in his amassing of concrete details and minute observation, his work, despite its deliberate 'literary-ness', is conscious of the tragedy of, and questions the purpose of human destiny.

NOVELS: Le tricheur (1946); Gulliver (1952); Le sacre du printemps (1954); L'herbe (1958; Eng. tr. R. Howard, 1961); Le palace (1962; Eng. tr. idem, 1964); Histoire (1967; Eng. tr. idem, 1969); La bataille de Pharsale (1969).—La séparation (plays; 1963).—Orion aveugle (essays; 1970).

L. Janvier, Une parole exigeante (1964); R. Jean, La littérature et le réel (1965); V. Mercier, 'C. S.: Order and disorder' in Shenandoah, XVII.4 (1966). M.G.

Simon Duran: see Duran, SIMEON BEN ZEMAH.

Simoni, RENATO (*Verona 5 IX 1875; †Milan 5 VII 1952), Italian playwright and dramatic critic. Although the author of only four plays (tragicomedies and tragedies written in the Veneto dialect and acted in the 1900s), Simoni is important as a precursor of the psychological drama of the 20th century, and in particular of Pirandello*. With G. Adami he wrote the libretto for Puccini's Turandot. As a dramatic critic he relies more on his innate sense of theatre than on any critical system.

PLAYS: La vedova (1906); Congedo (1912); Tramonto (1914); Carlo Gozzi (1914).—Trenta anni di cronaca drammatica (criticism; 5 vols, 1951–60). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Simonides, Greek poet from Ceos (c. 556–468 B.C.) of great versatility. His choral lyrics comprise epinicia (songs for athletic victors) of the kind later composed by Bacchylides* and Pindar* and threnoi (dirges), including a eulogy of the Greeks who died at Thermopylae. He also wrote drinking-songs and a large number of epigrams.

D. L. Page, Poetae melici Graeci (1962); J. M. Edmonds, Lyra Graeca, II (1924; with tr.).—U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, Sappho und S. (1913); C. M. Bowra, Early Greek Elegists (1938) and Greek Lyric Poetry (2nd ed., 1961); B. Gentili, Simonide (1959). J.T.H.

Simonides, SIMON: see Szymonowicz, SZYMON.

Simonov, KONSTANTIN (KIRILL) MIKHAILOVICH (*1915), Soviet author. He made his mark during the Second World War with his patriotic and love poetry, as well as with his Stalingrad novel, Dni i nochii (1944; Days and Nights, tr. J. Fineberg, 1945; tr. J. Barnes, New York, 1945), describing the horrors of the siege. His Voyennyye dnevniki ('War Diaries'; 1945) show an amazing variety of experiences. As dramatist he scored his greatest success with his war play, Russkie lyudi (1942; The Russians, tr. G. Shelley, 1944). Among his later works, his Stalingrad novel Soldatami ne rozhdayutsya (1966) aroused considerable attention.

Izbrannoe (1948); Stikhi. Pyesy. Rasskazy (1949); Pyesy (1954); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1966–68).—The Whole World Over (tr. T. Schnee, 1947).

L. Lazarev, Dramaturgiya K. Simonova (1952). J.L.

Simons, JOZEF (*Oelegem 21 V 1888; †Turnhout 20 I 1948), Flemish novelist and poet. He mainly wrote novels of country life, inspired by the simple folk of the 'Kempen', but also produced a nationalist novel, Eer Vlaanderen vergaat (1927; Flanders stirb nicht, tr. U. Zierow, 1937), which became very popular.

NOVELS: Bonifacius Suykerbuyck (1919); Dientje Goris (1935).—SHORT STORIES: De laatste flesch (1930); Kerle und Köpfe, tr. Fr. Fromme, 1940; Harslucht (1933); Résines, tr. A. Van de Putte, 1937).—Bonte garve (verse; 1943).—Verzamelde werken (10 vols, 1963).

L. Sourie, J. S. (1947); M. Verheeecke, J. S., verteller, zanger, Kempenaar (1963). R.F.L.

Simović, LJUBOMIR (*Titovo Užice 2 XII 1935), Serbian poet. A graduate of Belgrade, Simović now works for television. He began publishing poetry while still a student in journals like Delo and Vidici and he wrote both humorous and direct poetry as well as satire. He is perhaps the most consistent of the third post-war generation in Belgrade and recently he has begun to experiment with a more philosophical style which, like Popa* and Pavlović*, derives from a profound interest and involvement in his country's past.

VERSE: Slovenske elegije (1958); Veseli grobovi (1961); Poslednja zemlja (1964); Šlemovi (1967). B.J.

Simund de Freine (*1145; †1217), Anglo-Norman poet. Canon of Hereford, he addressed Latin verses to his friend, Giraldus* Cambrensis. His Roman de Philosophie renders freely Boethius* Consolatio, while his Vie de Saint Georges contains some new material.

Œuvres (ed. J. E. Matzke, 1909). M.F.L.

Šimunović, DINKO (*Knin 1 IX 1873; †Zagreb 3 VIII 1933), Croatian writer. His novels and short stories are lyrical in style, local in spirit and themes, and have psychological interest.

Mrkodol (1909); Tudjinac (1911); Porodica Vnčić (1923).—Sabrana djela (coll. works; 2 vols, 1930). V.J.

Şinasi, İBRAHİM (*Istanbul 1826; †ibid. 13 IX 1871), Turkish author and pioneer of Western culture. Son of an army officer, he entered the artillery office and was later sent to France for five years. On his return, he devoted himself to journalism and wrote articles on political, economic and social problems. The founder of the Western school of literature (Tanzimat), he inspired and greatly encouraged Namık Kemal*. He made the first verse translations from French poets, wrote the first Turkish play and pioneered private journalism. His style is simple and to the point.

VERSE: Tercüme-i Manzume (1858, 1860); Müntahabat-ı Eş'ar (1862, 1870); Divan-ı Ş. (3rd ed. 1885).—Şair evlenmesi (plays; 1860).—VARIOUS: Durub-ı Emsal-i Osmaniye (1863; 3rd ed. with Ebüzziya's adds, 1885); Müntahabat-ı Tasvir-i Efkâr (3 vols, 1885–94).

Ahmed Rasim, Ş. (1926); Mehmet Kaplan, 'Şinasi'nin Türk şiirinde yaptığı yenilik' in Türk dili ve edebiyatı dergisi, II (1947); Ahmet Hamdi Tanpınar, XIX asr Türk edebiyatı tarihi (2nd ed. 1956); Ömer Faruk Akün, 'Ş.' in İslam Ansiklopedisi, XII (1968); Hikmet Dizdaroglu, Ş. (1970). F.İ.

Şincai, GHEORGHE (*1754; †1816), Transylvanian historian and philologist, one of the leading members of Şcoală ardeleană (the Transylvanian school). He studied theology at Blaj, Rome and Vienna and between 1782 and 1794 was director of primary education in Transylvania. During his studies abroad he collected a vast amount of material and for 34 years he worked on his Hronica Românilor. This seeks to establish beyond doubt the Latin origin of the Rumanians and was published posthumously in 1853.

Hronica Românilor, I (1967), II and III (1969). M. Tomuş, G. Ş. (1965); G. Ivaşcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1969). D.J.D.

Sinclair, LISTER (*Bombay 9 I 1921; ∞1942 Alice Mather), Canadian playwright, mainly known through radio drama.

A Play on Words and Other Radio Plays (1948); The Blood Is Strong (1956); Socrates (1957). M.H.M.M. (R.Su.)

Sinclair, UPTON BEALL (*Baltimore, Md. 20 IX 1878; ∞1900 Meta Fuller [o/o 1911], ∞1913 Mary Kimbrough; †25 XI 1968), American novelist. The Jungle (1901), written after an investigation of the Chicago stockyards, became a best-seller and provoked reform in the meat-packing industry. His many propagandist novels and documentary studies dramatically exposed the evils in various aspects of American life; his series of Lanny Budd novels give a Marxian interpretation of events from the First World War to the aftermath of the Second. An active reformer as well as critic, he is one of America's most read authors abroad.

NOVELS: The Metropolis (1908); The Money-changers (1908); King Coal (1917); The Story of a Patriot (1920); Oil! (1927); Co-op: A Novel of Living Together (1936); World's End (1940); Dragon's Teeth (1942); Presidential Agent (1944); A World to Win (1946); Presidential Mission (1947); O Shepherd, Speak! (1949).—POLITICAL AND SOCIAL STUDIES: The Industrial Republic (1907); The Profits of Religion (1918); The Brass Check: A Study of American Journalism (1919); The Goose-Step: A Study of American Education (1923); Money Writes! (1927); The Book of Love (1934).—American Outpost: A Book of Reminiscences (autobiog.; 1932).—U. S. Anthology (1947).

F. Dell, U. S.: A Study in Social Protest (1927). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Singer, ISAAC BASHEVIS (*Radzymin [Poland] 14 VII 1904), Yiddish novelist and short-story writer. The younger brother of the novelist I. J. Singer*, he started writing in Hebrew but later became a journalist for the Yiddish daily press. In 1935 he emigrated to the U.S.A. where he continued as a journalist while publishing short stories and long novels. He also translated several European works into Yiddish including Thomas Mann's* The Magic Mountain. His short stories combine the exotic with the eccentric, old-world imagery with modernistic symbolism, creating an atmosphere of ambiguity and doubt. His style is concise and realistic but his appeal for Yiddish readers is lessened by his lack of social motivation. His longer novels, in the form of family chronicles, are outstanding for their skilful narrative and sense of history. He also wrote some children's stories.

NOVELS: The Family Moskat (tr. A. H. Gross, 1950); Satan in Goray (tr. J. Sloan, 1955); The Magician of Lublin (tr. E. Gottlieb and J. Singer, 1961); The Slave (tr. I. B. S. with C. Hemley, 1962); The Fearsome Inn (tr. I. B. S. with E. Shub, 1967); The Manor (tr. J. Singer and E. Gottlieb, 1968); The Estate (tr. E. Shub et al., 1970).—SHORT STORIES: The Spinoza of Market Street (1962); Gimpel the Fool (tr. Saul Bellow et al., 1966); Selected Short Stories (ed. I. Howe, 1966); The Seance and Other Stories (1970); A Friend of Kafka (1972).—In My Father's Court (autobiog.; tr. C. Kleinermann-Goldstein et al., 1966). J.S.

Singer, ISRAEL JOSHUA (*Biłgoraj [Poland] 30 XI 1893; †Los Angeles 10 II 1944), Yiddish novelist, a leader of the 'moderns'. Of an orthodox rabbinical family, he left his father's house, aged 18, to work as a machinist and a clerk in Warsaw, at the same time studying Polish, Russian and German. After the Russian Revolution (1917) he began writing in Kiev. In 1921 he returned to Warsaw, and during the inter-war years became an important novelist. In 1933 he emigrated to the U.S.A. He wrote several massive social and historical novels, some of which have been successfully dramatized. In his novels he introduced into Yiddish story-telling verbal economy combined with well-defined structure. His work has been widely translated into Hebrew and several other languages.

Erd-vey (1922); Perl un andere dertseilungen (1922); Leym-groobn (1922); Oif nayer erd (1923); Oif fremder erd (1925); Shtool un aizm (1927); Blood Harvest, tr. M. Carr, 1935; Yoshe Kalb (1932); The Sinner, tr. M. Samuel, 1933, reissued as Yoshe Kalb, intro. Isaac Bashevis S., 1965; Di brider Ashkenazi (novel in 3 pts, 1936; 1936); The Brothers Ashkenazi, tr. M. Samuel, 1936; Khaver Nakhmen (1938; dramat. by I. J. S.; East of Eden, tr. M. Samuel, 1939). J.S.

Singh, KHUSHWANT (*1915), Indian novelist, historian and editor of The Illustrated Weekly of India. He was educated in Delhi, Lahore and London where he was called to the Bar. A frequent contributor to newspapers and journals, he wrote several scholarly works about the Sikhs, notably A History of the Sikhs (I, 1963; II, 1966), and has written of the tragedy resulting from the partition of India in his novel Train to Pakistan (1956). C.D.N.

Sinisgalli, LEONARDO (*Montemurro, Potenza 9 III 1908), Italian poet and essayist. He trained as an electrical engineer and has worked in advertising. As a poet he belongs to the later generation of the 'hermetic' group (HERMETICISM); he evokes childhood and his native Lucania.

POETRY: 18 poesie (1936); Vidi le muse (1943); La vigna vecchia (1952); Poesie di ieri (1931-56) (1966).—PROSE: Furor mathematicus (1944; enlarged ed. 1950); Belliboschi (1948); Archimede, i tuoi lumi, i tuoi lemmi (1968). B.M.

Siôn Cent (fl. c. 1400-30), Welsh poet. Most of the 18 poems in cywydd metre now ascribed to him are on religious themes such as the vanity of this world, the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death and judgment. The scepticism which informs his work was directly opposed to the dominant heroic tradition of medieval Welsh poetry.

Cywyddau Iolo Goch ac Eraill (ed. H. Lewis, T. Roberts and I. Williams, 1925).

Saunders Lewis, Braslun o Hanes Llenyddiaeth Gymraeg, I (1932). B.Re.

Sipihri, SUHRĀB (*Qum 1928), Persian poet and artist. His strongly imagist poems combine a tender lyricism and a serene, almost mystical delight in simple things.

Marg-i Rang (1951); Zindagi-yi Khabha (1953); Āvār-i Āftāb (1961); Siday-i Pāy-i Āb (1965); Hajm-i Sabz (1967).

R. Barahini, Tala dar Mes (2nd ed. 1968); E. N. 'Ala', Suvar va Asbāb . . . (1969). E.Y.

Sisenna, LUCIUS CORNELIUS (*c. 120; †67 B.C.), Roman historian, wrote a history of the Social and Civil Wars, probably up to the death of Sulla. His work, written in an old-fashioned style, abandoned the annalistic method. He also translated the Milesiaca of Aristides of Miletus.

Fragments in H. Peter, Historicorum Romanorum reliquiae, I (2nd ed. 1914; repr. J. Kroymann and W. Schaub, 1967, with biblio. from 1900).—C. Cali, 'La vita e le opere di L. Cornelio S.' in Studi letterari (1898); Latin Historians (ed. T. A. Dorey, 1966). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Sismondi, SISMONDO GIAN CARLO LEONARDO (DE) (*Geneva 9 V 1773; †Hanley, England 25 VI 1842), Swiss historian, scholar and economist who adopted the name and nationality of his supposed Italian ancestors. A close friend of Mme de Staël*, and also of Vieusseux* and Capponi*, he promoted Romantic ideas in his Histoire des littératures du midi de l'Europe (4 vols, 1813) and the idea of Italian freedom in the Histoire des républiques italiennes au moyen âge (16 vols, 1807-18), which provoked Manzoni* into countering his criticisms of the Church. He married an Englishwoman on his second visit to England in 1818-19. What he saw of the Industrial Revolution there led him to abandon laissez-faire notions in his Nouveaux principes d'économie politique (1819), where he made recommendations far ahead of his time for legislation to protect the workers.

Epistolario (ed. C. Pellegrini, 4 vols, 1933-54); Opuscoli politici (ed. U. Marcelli, 1954); Recherches sur les constitutions des peuples libres (ed. M. Minerbi, 1965).

J. R. De Salis, S., 1773-1842: la vie et l'œuvre d'un cosmopolite philosophe (1932); R. Jeandeau, S., précurseur de la législation sociale contemporaine (1913); F. Bariola, Un amico dell'Italia e degli Italiani (1921); H. Grossman, S. de S. et ses théories économiques (Warsaw, 1924); Mao-Lan Tuan, S. de S. as an Economist (1927); R. Ramat, S. e il mito di Ginevra (1936); Studi su S. G. C. L. S. per il primo centenario della sua morte (1945); A. Omodeo, several essays on S. in Il senso della storia (1955); C. Cordié, 'S.' in Cultura e scuola, V (biblio. raisonnée; 1966). J.G.-R.

Sitwell, EDITH (*Scarborough 7 IX 1887; †London

9 XII 1964), English poet and critic. Fearlessly taking gay images from contemporary life, Edith Sitwell in her first phase was fanciful, inventive, mischievous, musical, enchanting in her verse. In her second phase she began to respond to the more grave realities of life, and the grim and the terrible break into her fancy (as in Gold Coast Customs, 1929). In her third phase came a broadening of sympathy, a deepening of imagination, a power of poetic vision made significant by reflection—with no loss of brilliant imagery or verbal felicity. Her poems were recited concurrently with the playing of William Walton's Façade in the 1930s.

VERSE: The Mother (1915); Clowns' Houses (1918); The Wooden Pegasus (1920); Elegy on Dead Fashion (1926); The Canticle of the Rose (1949); Façade and Other Poems (1950).—Collected Poems (1957).—CRITICISM: Poetry and Criticism (1925); Aspects of Modern Poetry (1934); A Notebook on William Shakespeare (1948).—BIOGRAPHY: Alexander Pope (1930); The English Eccentrics (1933; 1958); Victoria of England (1936); Fanfare for Elizabeth (1946).—Taken Care Of (autobiog.; 1965).

Celebrations for E. S. (ed. J. G. Villa, 1948); G. Singleton, E. S. (1960); E. Salter, The Last Years of a Rebel: A Memoir of E. S. (1967); J. Lehmann, A Nest of Tigers (1968).—Biblio. by R. Fifoot (1963; 1971). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Sitwell, SIR OSBERT, BT (*London 6 XII 1892; †Italy 4 V 1969), English man of letters, brother of Edith and Sacheverell. With every social and intellectual opportunity to become a dilettante, Sir Osbert avoided it by sound taste and hard work. His novels and stories are elegant, brilliant in observation of character and scene, and of a delicate satirical wit. His series of autobiographical books vividly recreate the people and scenes of his past.

SHORT STORIES: Triple Fugue (1924); Open the Door! (1941); Collected Stories (1953).—NOVELS: Before the Bombardment (1926); The Man Who Lost Himself (1929); Miracle on Sinai (1933).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Left Hand, Right Hand! (1944); The Scarlet Tree (1946); Great Morning (1947); Laughter in the Next Room (1948); Noble Essences (1950).—Collected Satires and Poems (verse; 1931).

R. Fulford, O. S. (1951); J. Lehmann, A Nest of Tigers (1968).—Biblio. by R. Fifoot (1963; 1971). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Sitwell, SIR SACHEVERELL, BT (*Scarborough 15 XI 1897; ∞1925 Georgia Doble), English novelist and prose writer. His poetry, reflective, descriptive, personal, in traditional metres, was an agreeable and elegant contribution to the literature of the 1920s. The best of his prose is likely to be more memorable, revealing a fine sensibility to architecture and the historic atmosphere of European places visited by him. His book The Gothick North (3 vols, 1929–30) had qualities of the medieval tapestry it described.

POEMS: The People's Palace (1918); The Hundred and One Harlequins (1922); The Cyder Feast (1927); Canons of Giant Art (1933).—Collected Poems (1936).—PROSE: Southern Baroque Art (1924); German Baroque Art (1927); Far From My Home (1931); Liszt (1934); Dance of the Quick and the Dead (1936); Edinburgh (with Francis Bamford; 1938); Splendours and Miseries (1943); The Hunters and the Hunted (1947); Journey to the Ends of Time, I (1959); Monks, Nuns and Monasteries (1965); Southern Baroque Revisited (1967); Gothic Europe (1969).

J. Lehmann, A Nest of Tigers (1968).—Biblio. by R. Fifoot (1963; 1971). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Siwertz, SIGFRID (*Stockholm 24 I 1882), Swedish poet, dramatist and prose writer. The pessimism of his early poems was modified by the influence of Bergson's* philosophy, and the flâneur types found in his stories become 'activists', as in Eldens återsken (1916). His weightiest novel, Selams (1920; Downstream, tr. E. Classen, 1922), deals with a war-profiteering family in Stockholm. He is a very popular and lucid writer.

VERSE: Gatans drömmar (1905); Ekotemplet (1930); Minnas (1937); Samlade dikter (1944).—PROSE: Margot (1906); Det gamla (1909); Målarpirater (1911); En flånör (1914); Det stora varuhuset (1926; Goldman's, tr. E. Gee Nash, 1929); Jonas och draken (1928); Det skedde i Liechtenstein (1961); Minnets kapriser (1963); Episodernas hus (1968).—PLAYS: Trions bröllop (1930); Två tidsdramer (1933).

S. Stolpe, S. S. (1933); I. Soivio, Symbolerna i S. S.s prosa (1966).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Six, JAN (*14 I 1618; ∞Margarite Tulp; †28 V 1700), Dutch playwright and patron of Vondel* and Rembrandt; Burgomaster of Amsterdam in 1691. Vondel wrote a poem on Six's marriage. What little Six wrote shows him as a man of taste who produced beautiful poetry in Verscheide Nederduytsche Gedichten (2 vols, 1651–53; II dedicated to Six by the publisher, G. Brandt*).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

PLAYS: Medea (with etching by Rembrandt; 1648); Onschuld (1662).

G. Penon, Bijdragen tot de geschiedenis der Nederl. letterkunde (2 vols, 1881); J. F. M. Sterck, Oorkonden over Vondel en zijn kring (1918).

A.M.B.W.

Sixtinus, SUFFRIDUS, or SJOERD SYTZES (†Amsterdam 1649), Dutch playwright, wrote an allegorical play with which Coster* in 1617 inaugurated his academy (Apollo, 1617) and a tragi-comical sequel to Hooft's* Geeraert van Velsen, Geraert van Velsen lijdende (1628).

Jan Wagenaar, Amsterdam, II (1760-67); C. N. Wybrands, Het Amsterdamsch Tooneel 1617-1772 (1873); J. A. Worp, Geschiedenis van den Amsterdamschen Schouwburg 1496-1772 (1920).

A.M.B.W.

Six van Chandelier, JOHAN (*Amsterdam 1 III 1620; †ibid. 14 II 1695), Dutch poet. As a spice merchant he travelled extensively through Italy, France, Spain, England. His poetry, which includes love poems, occasional poems, and travel impressions, is predominantly realistic and descriptive, and shows a subtle sense of humour and irony.

Poësy (1657).

G. A. van Es, Poësy van J. S. van Ch. (anthol. with intro. and notes; 1953); L. C. Michels, 'Nader commentaar op S. van Ch.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXXIV (1956); P. Minderaa, 'Beedelmusyk te Thoulouse' in Opstellen en voordrachten uit mijn hoogleraarstijd (1964).

R.P.M.

Sjöberg, BIRGER (*Vänersborg 6 XII 1885; †Växjö 30 IV 1929), Swedish poet, novelist and composer. He began as assistant in an ironmonger's shop, then worked as a journalist (Stockholms Tidningen; Hälsingborgs-Posten) 1906-25. His first and most famous book of poetry, Fridas bok (1922), contains ironic idylls of Swedish provincial life, the songs set to music by the poet himself. His novel, Kvartetten som sprängdes (1924), also treats of provincial life. The later collection of poetry, Kriser och kransar (1926), reveals a tense and pessimistic attitude to life.

Fridas bok, II (1929); Minnen från jorden (1940).—Skrifter (ed. F. Böök, 5 vols, 1929); Samlade dikter (1946).

R. Malm, Diktavärld och verklighet hos B. S. (1930); G. A. Nilsson, B. S. och Frida (1943); A. Hallström, Lilla Paris' kulisser (1955); H. af Petersen, Om B. S. (1956); G. Axberger, Lilla Paris' undergång (1960).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Sjöberg, ERIK, pseud. VITALIS (*Ludgo 14 I 1794; †Stockholm 4 III 1828), Swedish poet. Born in poor circumstances, he struggled his way to a good education and published his first poems in 1819. He was a Romantic idealist, who nevertheless refused to associate with the 'Fosforister' and proudly rejected offers of help. Himself sick and poor, he cultivated a dream-world in his poetry, but also wrote satire and polemics.

Samlade dikter (ed. E. Geijer, 1828); Samlade skrifter (ed. A. Werin, 2 vols, 1926-32); Dikter i urval (ed. B. Risberg, 1929).

V. Palmblad in Svenskt biografiskt lexicon, XIV (1847); C. L. Östergren, Om V., hans liv och diktning (1869); G. Ljunggren, Skalden V. (1875); F. Böök, Svensk vardag (1922) and Fem porträtt (1929).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Skabichevsky, ALEXANDER MIKHAYLOVICH (*1838; †1910), Russian literary historian and journalist with the radical outlook of the 1860s and 1870s. His works on Russian literature, censorship and the evolution of Russian social ideas enjoyed great popularity among the intellectuals.

Belletristyy-narodniki (1888); Istoriya noveyshey russkoy literatury (1891); Ocherki po istorii russkoy tsenzury (1892); Literaturnye vospominaniya (1928).

J.L.

Skalbe, KÄRLIS (*Vecpiebalga canton 7 XI 1879; ∞1905 Lizete Erdmane; †Stockholm 14 IV 1945), Latvian poet and short-story writer. The supreme attraction of Skalbe's writing is in the purity and simplicity of his language, which is in complete accord with the delicacy of his intuitions and the moral clarity of his outlook.

W.K.M.

VERSE: Cietumnieka sapni (1901); Kad ābeles zied (1904); Zemes dūmos (1906); Veļu laikā (1906); Emigranta dziesmas (1909); Sirds un saule (1911); Sapni un teikas (1912); Daugavas vilņi (1918); Pēclaiķā (1923); Vakara ugunis (1926); Zāles dvaša (1931).—STORIES: Ziemas pasakas (1914); Pasaka par vecāko dēlu (1924); Manu bērības dienu mēnesis (1926); Mātes legenda (1928); Mulķa laime (1932); Gara pupa (1937).—Kopotī raksti (coll. works; ed. P. Ērmanis, 10 vols, 1938-39; ed. Lizete Skalbe, 1952 ff.).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Tricolour Sun (1936); Pussy's Water Mill (tr. idem, 2nd ed. 1952).

J. Veselis, Pārdomu grāmata (1936); R. Egle, K. S.s. dzejas māksla (1939); J. Sudrabkalns, K. S. pasakas (1959).

W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Skalla-Grimsson, EGILL (fl. 10th century; ∞Ásgerður Bjarnardóttir), Icelandic poet. Egill was born and brought up in Iceland, but lived abroad on his poetry and his weapons for some time; he was in the service of King Athelstan of Wessex about the year 937. In Norway he fell foul of King Eric Blood-axe but later, when Eric was King in York and had the poet at his mercy, Egill placated him with a poem in his honour (Hofuðlausn, 'Head-redemption'). The Saga of Egill is an exciting narrative in unassuming but polished prose, with citation of much verse by Egill. The saga, obviously unreliable as a historical source, is thought by most people nowadays to have been written by Snorri Sturluson*. Egill's poetry is distinguished by powerful imagination and individually creative kennings (SCALDS). His Sonatorrek, on the death of a young son by drowning, offers a self-revelation unique in Norse literature.

F. Jónsson, Skjaldedigtning, I (1912); Egils saga Skalla-Grimssonar (ed. S. Nordal, 1933); L. M. Hollander, The Scalds (1945; with Eng. tr.); E. A. Kock, Skaldediktningen, I (1946); Egil's Saga (tr. Gwyn Jones, 1960). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Skarbek, FRYDERYK, COUNT (*Toruń 15 II 1792; †Warsaw 25 IX 1866), Polish novelist. The leading Polish economist of his day, he also wrote comedies and historical works. His main literary achievement, however, is his novels which renew the traditional 18th-century Polish novel by introducing contemporary Western European elements often borrowed from Scott* and Sterne*.

NOVELS: Podróży bez celu (1824); Damian Ruszczyk (1827); Życie . . . Faustyna Feliksa Dodońskiego (1838).

W. Szubert, Studia o F. S. jako ekonomistcie (1954); K. Bartoszyński, O powieściach F. S. (1963). P.H.

Skarga (orig. POWĘSKI), PIOTR (*Grójec 1536; †Cracow 27 IX 1612), Polish writer. Of a burgher family, he became a Jesuit in 1569. From 1571 his time was devoted to teaching (in 1579 as head of the academy of Vilna) and charity. In 1588 he became a court preacher and had great political influence as an ardent and exceedingly intolerant proponent of the Counter-Reformation. In his devotional and other writings his magnificent language rises to its peak in Kazania Sejmowe (which in their present form were never spoken), full of patriotism, criticism of social and political abuses and prophetic warnings; these later made him a legendary patriotic figure.

Żywoty Świętych (1579); Kazania na niedziele i święta (1595); Kazania Sejmowe (1597; Les sermons politiques [Sermons de Diète, 1597], tr. A. Berga, 1916; ed. S. Kot, 1925).—Wybór pism (ed. A. Januszewski, 1912); Pisma wszystkie (4 vols, 1923–26).

A. Berga, Un prédicateur à la cour de Pologne sous Sigismond III, Pierre S. (1916); Ks. A. Otwinowski, Dziela X. P. S. Spis bibliograficzny (1916); T. Mitana, Religijność X. P. S. (1922); S. Windakiewicz, P. S. (1925). S.S. (P.H.)

Skeat, WALTER WILLIAM (*London 21 XI 1835; †Cambridge 6 X 1912), English philologist, Professor of Anglo-Saxon at Cambridge, founder of the English Dialect Society.

Standard eds of Piers Plowman (1867–85), Anglo-Saxon Gospels (1871–87), Ælfric's Lives of the Saints (1881–1900), Chaucer (1894–97).—Etymological Dictionary (rev. ed. 1910).

M.V.D. (M.A.)

Skeel, MOGENS (*Tryggevælde 15 VII 1650; ∞1679 Baroness Helle Helene Rosenkrantz; †Lingen, Westphalia 5 VIII 1694), Danish poet and playwright. He was Danish minister in Brandenburg, Paris and London, where he protested against Robert Molesworth's Account of Denmark (1694). He is remembered as the author of a satirical play, directed against the newly created nobility in Denmark, and influenced by Molière*.

Grevens og Friherrens Komædie (1675).

S. Birket-Smith, Studier paa det gamle danske Skuespils Omraade (1883). E.B.

Skelton, JOHN (*c. 1460; †Westminster 21 VI 1529), English poet. Skelton entered the service of Henry VII in 1488 as poet and panegyrist. From 1497 till 1502 he was tutor to the future Henry* VIII. He was official apologist for the King by 1512, though resolute in opposition to Wolsey, against whom many of his satires are directed. He was the most considerable poet of his day, but the value of his verse is difficult to assess, perhaps because of its transitional qualities, at once medieval and modern. The rhythmic vitality of his work makes it tremendously effective as poetical pamphleteering. G.K.H.

Magnificence (1533; ed. R. L. Ramsay, 1908); Phyllyp Sparowe (c. 1545).—Poetical Works (ed. A. Dyce, 2 vols, 1843; ed. P. Henderson, mod. spelling, 1931).

L. J. Lloyd, J. S. (1938); H. L. R. Edwards, S. The Life and Times of an Early Tudor Poet (1949); A. R. Heiserman, S. and Satire (1961). S. E. Fish, J. S.'s Poetry (1965); W. O. Harris, S.'s Magnificence and the Cardinal Virtue Tradition (1965). J.R.B. (C.B.)

Skinner, JOHN (*Birse 3 X 1721; ∞1741 Grace Hunter; †Aberdeen 16 IV 1807), Scottish poet. From 1742 a priest of the Episcopal Church, Skinner was a victim of Hanoverian pillaging after the 1745 rebellion. He wrote An Ecclesiastical History of Scotland (1788) and a number of spirited songs in the vernacular, of which the best known is Tullochgorum.

Poems (1809).

J.K.

Skitalets, pen-name of STEPAN GAVRILOVICH PETROV (*1868; †1941), Russian author and member of Gorky's* Znanie group. Writing about the village and the decaying intelligentsia (after 1905), he reached his maturity round 1910. After 1917 he wrote some interesting memoirs and reminiscences.

Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1916–19); Dom Chernovykh (1935); Etapy (1937); Izbrannye rasskazy (1939).—Publican and Serf (tr. J. K. M. Shirazi, 1905); The Czar's Charter (tr. P. L., 1907).—Vospominaniya (1923). J.L.

Skjoldborg, JOHAN MARTINUS (*Øsløs 27 IV 1861; ∞1883 Mariana Dorteia Nielsen, ∞1902 Louise Eleonore Christiane Abenth; †Aalborg 22

II 1936), Danish poet, novelist and short-story writer. He was the son of a Jutland smallholder. In 1875 he went to a teachers' training college, and for some years he was a village schoolmaster, until he finally settled as a writer. Both in his poetry and in his prose he expresses the feelings and sentiments of the Danish smallholder.

NOVELS: En Stridsmand (1896); Kragehuset (1899); Gyldeholm (1902); Bjerregaarden (1904); Sara (1906); Per Holt (1912); Nye Mænd (1917).—SHORT STORIES: I Skyggen (1893); Almue (1900); Ensomme Folk (1909); Skyer og Solglint (1923).—Romaner og Fortællinger (4 vols, 1921); Udvalgte Fortællinger (2 vols, 1921).—Dynes-Digte (verse; 1915).—ESSAYS: Udmarksfolkene (1912); Arbejdets Personlighedsværdi (1920); Brydningstider (1934).—Min Mindebog (memoirs; 2 vols, 1934–35).

K. K. Nicolaisen, J. S. (1918); V. Bitsch, J. S. (1936); Ejnar Thomsen, J. S. (1937); A. F. Schmidt, J. S. (1938). E.B.

Skobelev, ALEXANDER SERGEYEVICH: see Neverov, ALEXANDER.

Skrām, (BERTHA) AMALIE, née ALVER (*Bergen 22 VIII 1846; ∞[2nd] 1884 Erik Skram; †Copenhagen 15 III 1905), Norwegian novelist. An unhappy childhood and an early and unsuccessful marriage to a sea-captain provided much of the background for her later literary work which, apart from some articles and short stories, she inaugurated with the novel Constance Ring (1885). Its criticism of male sexual mores and the intimacy of its depiction of female sexuality caused it to be stamped as immoral. In later novels the intensely confessional nature of her work became even more marked; as did her frankness in depicting the problems of the emotionally frigid woman. However, the pessimism and determinism which always hangs over her work (she was much influenced by the Danish writer J. P. Jacobsen*) achieve monumental proportions in the cycle of novels Hellemysersfolket (4 vols, 1887–98), the gloomy but passionately told saga of a family doomed to go under. Her literary style lacks polish and is often ponderous and grey, but at her best she had considerable descriptive talent, especially for depicting life in Bergen and at sea, and a capacity for fluent narrative.

PLAYS: Fjældmennesker (with E. Skram; 1889); Agnete (1893).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Lucie (1888); Børnefortællinger (1890); Kjærlighed i Nord og Syd (1891; cont.: Bøn og Anfægtelse, 1885; Knud Tandberg, 1886; Fru Inés, 1891); Forraadt (1892; cont.: Madam Højers Lejefolk, 1883; Karens Jul, 1885; In Asiam profectus est, 1890; Forraadt, 1892); Professor Hieronimus (1895; Eng. tr. A. Stronach and G. B. Jacobi, 1899); Paa Sct. Jørgen (1895); Sommer (1898); Julehelg (1900); Mennesker (1905).—ARTICLES: Om 'Albertine' (1887); Landsforrædere (1901).—Mellem slagene

(letters; ed. E. Kielland, 1955).—Samlede verker (6 vols, 1946).

A. Tiber, A. S. som kunstner og menneske (1910); B. Krane, A. S. og kvinnens problem (1951) and A. S.s diktning (1961). R.G.P.

Škvorecký, JOSEF (*Náchod 27 IX 1924), Czech novelist. His novel Zbabělci (wr. 1949; pub. 1958) is a portrayal of the end of the Second World War in a Czech provincial town which in its starkly realistic tone and language, making much use of slang and vulgarisms, ran counter to official taste and was for a time withdrawn from circulation. A similar mode of disenchantment pervades his later work, especially Konec nylonového věku (1967), which deals with young people in Prague after 1948. R.A.

Sládek, JOSEF VÁCLAV (*Zbiroh 27 X 1845; †ibid. 28 VI 1912), Czech poet. After studying in Prague he spent two years in the U.S.A. (1868–70) and then became a teacher of English in Prague. In the struggle between 'national' and 'cosmopolitan' schools in the Czech literary world of the late 19th century Sládek occupies a conciliatory position. In the aims of his poetry and in its traditional simplicity of form he belonged to the national school; but his stay in the English-speaking world gave him a profound appreciation of English literature which he introduced to his compatriots, notably in his translation of the majority of the plays of Shakespeare*.

Básnické dílo (ed. A. Vyskočil, 5 vols, 1945).—Trs of Shakespeare (6 vols, 1959–64).

F. Střežek, J. V. S., jak žil, pracoval a trpěl (2nd ed. 1948).—J. Polák, J. V. S., básník domova (1945). R.A.

Sládkovič, ANDREJ, pseud. of ONDREJ BRAXATORIS (*Krupina 30 III 1820; †Radvaň 20 IV 1872), Slovak poet. A contemporary and disciple of Štúr*, Sládkovič wrote the first representative poems in the new standard Slovak that Štúr had established. His Marína (1846), a love-story whose idealized heroine owes something to Kollár's* Mína, is indebted in form and style to Pushkin's* Evgeny Onegin. For modern readers the incidental descriptions of Slovak life are the most attractive element in the poem. In its time it was a remarkable achievement for a young poet writing in a language without a tradition. His historical epic Detvan (1853) is less striking.

Dielo (ed. C. Kraus, 2 vols, 1961). C. Kraus, A. S. (1962). R.A.

Slamnić, IVAN (*Metković 1930), Croatian poet and prose writer. Slamnić lectures in comparative literature at Zagreb University and translates from English, French and Russian. His poetry shows evidence of the influence of Anglo-Saxon writers of the 1950s in its directness and clarity of expression, and its use of colloquial language. He is characterized by his anti-poetic, semi-humorous, semi-pathetic treatment of historic moments and events which are seen as ordinary everyday happenings.

POETRY: Odrón (1956); Aleja posle svečanosti (1956); Naronska siesta (1963); Monografije (1965); Limb (1968).—STORIES: Neprijatelj (1959); Povratnik s mjeseca (1964). B.J.

Slataper, SCIPIO (*Trieste 14 VII 1888; †Podgora 3 XII 1915), Italian writer. He contributed to La Voce and Il resto del Carlino a series of articles on literary, but also political, questions, especially Irredentism, on which he also published I confini necessari all'Italia (1915). His best-known piece of creative writing is the autobiographical tale Il mio Carso (1912).

Scritti letterari e critici (1920); Gli scritti politici (1925); Epistolario (1950). A. M. Mutterle, S. S. (1965). B.M.

Slater, FRANCIS CAREY (*nr Alice, Cape Province 15 VIII 1876; †Cape Town 3 IX 1958), South African poet, novelist, short-story writer and anthologist. The great-grandson of an 1820 settler, most of his working life was spent in the service of a South African bank. He grew up with an intimate knowledge of the Xhosa of the Eastern Cape and in the lyrics of Dark Folk (1936) gave the best interpretation of their life yet written. The Karroo (1924), Drought (1929) and The Trek (1938) are also well-constructed, imaginative accounts of aspects of South African life.

VERSE: Footpaths Thro' the Veld (1905); From Mimosa Land (1910); Calls Across the Sea (1917); Settlers and Sunbirds (1919); Selected Poems (1947); Veld Patriarch (1949).—STORIES: The Sunburnt South (1908); The Secret Veld (1931).—The Shining River (novel; 1925).—ANTHOLOGIES: The Centenary Book of South African Verse (1925); The New Centenary Book of South African Verse (1945). E.R.S.

Slauerhoff, JAN JACOB (*Leeuwarden 15 IX 1898; ∞Darja Collin [o/o]; †Hilversum 5 X 1936), Dutch poet and novelist. In a deliberately unadorned, often irritable and ironical style, he wrote on romantic subjects: sea travels, and risky adventures in unknown territories. At the same time, however, there is a conscious longing for protection and security. Thus his work shows an uncommon tension between 19th-century Romanticism and modern psychological insight.

PROSE: Het lente-eiland (1930); Schuim en asch (1930); Het verboden rijk (1932).—Archipel (verse; 1923); Jan Pietersz Coen (play; 1931).—Coll. works: Gedichten (3 vols, 1940–41); Proza (4 vols, 1941–54).

E. du Perron, Tegenonderzoek (1933) and

Verzameld werk, II (1955); Groot-Nederland, special no. (1936); C. van Wessem, S.-herinneringen (1938) and S., een levensbeschrijving (1940); G. H. 's-Gravesande, Bibliografie (1940); Proloog, special no. (1946); F. C. Terborgh, S., herinneringen en brieven (1949); Arthur Lehning, Brieven van S. (1955); H. van den Bergh, Schip achter het boegbeeld (1958); C. J. Kelk, Het leven van S. (1959); Schrijvers prentenboek, VI (1961); S. Vestdijk, Gestalten tegenover mij (1961); L. J. E. Fessard, J. S. (1898–1936), l'homme et l'œuvre (1964). J.J.O.

Slaveykov, PENCHO (*Tryavna 27 IV 1866; †Como Brunate, Italy 28 V 1912), Bulgarian poet and literary figure, son of Petko Slaveykov*. Inspired by Heine* in his early lyrics 'Maiden's Tears' (Momini sulzi, 1885–88), he joined A. Konstantinov* in translating Russian poetry. He studied in Leipzig (1892–98), composing there 'epic songs' in which inter alia he sought the essence of European genius through such figures as PROMETHEUS, Beethoven, Michelangelo*, Shelley* and Lenau*. His learning and literary acumen combined with Krustev*'s to create the journal Missul and its circle of 'individualist' writers. To seek European standards beyond Bulgarian national terms of reference (within which Vazov* and his predecessors mostly worked) marked a new era in Bulgarian literature. A disciple of Nietzsche*, whose philosophy influenced his poem 'Shadow of the Superman' and his allegorical autobiographical anthology 'On the Isle of the Blessed' (Na ostrova na blajenite, 1910), he rejected Zola*'s Naturalist emphasis on 'the beast in man' in favour of the quest for humanity that he admired in Pushkin* and the Russian 19th-century novelists. He was equally eloquent in his rejection of publicist and 'party' writing as being, even when not distorted, a restricted glimpse of the grand variety of human life to be found directly and splendidly presented in folk literature. This last inspired his poem 'The Carollers' (Koledari), ballads and the folk-song anthology 'Book of Songs' (Kniga za pesnite, 1917). Though attacked for using foreign themes, he expressed profound spiritual patriotism in his unfinished epic 'Song of Blood' (Kurvava pessen, 1913) on the April 1876 rising. The criticism that his poetry was weighed down by philosophy has some truth but ignores such lyrics as 'A Dream of Happiness' (Sun za shtastie, 1907). He also wrote on Bulgarian literature, folk-lore and German poetry with refreshing candour and insight. He was crippled for life by an accident in youth, and physical pain combined with private anguish to make him a martyr-poet in a Bulgarian tradition he himself recognized in his poems 'Bacho Kiro' and 'Poet'. His life and works remain an inspiration to Bulgarian writers.

Epicheski pesni (2 vols, 1896–98); Blyanove

(1898).—Coll. works (ed. B. Penev, 7 vols, 1929; 8 vols, 1958–59).

K. Krustev, Mladi i stari (1907); A. T. Balan, P. S. (1913); B. Yotsov, P. S. (1919); M. Belcheva, Begli spomeni (1923); T. Minkov, Poeziata na P. S. (1936); M. Nikolov, P. S. (1939); S. Slaveykov, P. S. biograficheski ocherk (1955); Yubileen sbornik: 100 godini P. S. (1966). V.P.

Slaveykov, PETKO (*Turnovo 17 XI 1828; †Sofia 1 VII 1895), Bulgarian poet and journalist. As a Bulgarian teacher hounded by Greek clergy he began collecting Bulgarian folk-lore and material of all kinds to be used in his calendars, songbooks and various journals, notably his newspapers Gayda (1863–67) and Makedonia (1866–73). Through these he built up a new Bulgarian reading public and marshalled its support in the anti-Phanariot struggle for an independent Bulgarian Church. In 1862 he was commissioned by the American Bible Society to translate the New Testament; his use of the vernacular of central and eastern Bulgaria proved an important step in standardizing the modern literary language. He was the first considerable poet of modern Bulgarian literature. He escaped from Stara Zagora in 1876, losing his library and priceless collection in the holocaust there. After the liberation (1878) he helped found the Democratic Party and opposed the policies of Prince Alexander of Battenberg, editing newspapers, notably Turnovska Konstitutsia (Plovdiv, 1884).

Smesna Kitka (Bucharest, 1852); Vesselushka (1857); Pesnopoyka (Istanbul, 1870); Pesni (Turnovo, 1879); 'Avtobiografia' in Bulgarski pregled (Aug. 1895).—Complete works (2 vols, 1954–55; 10 vols, 1963– ).

P. P. Slaveykov, Pisma na P. S. (1909); Y. Trifonov, P. S. (1915); R. Slaveykov, P. S. 1827–1927 (1927); S. Russakiev, P. S. i ruskata literatura (1956); P. Dinekov, P. R. S.—tvorcheski put (1956); S. Slaveykov, Dyado S. (1957) and P. S. biografichen ocherk (1958). V.P.

Slaviček, MILIVOJ (*Čakovec, nr Medjimurje 24 X 1929), Croatian poet and critic. Slaviček graduated in Zagreb (1954) and worked as a teacher and a librarian before turning to literature. He is essentially a lyric poet in a modern humanist vein, marked by a restrained tone and a conciseness of expression which is a break with earlier Croatian lyric tradition.

VERSE: Zaustavljena pregrst (1954); Daleka pokrajina (1957); Modro veče (1959); Predak (1963); Noćni autobus ili naredni dio cjeline (1964); Između (1965). B.J.

Slavici, IOAN (*Șiria 1848; †Panciu 1925), Romanian writer. He studied at Budapest and then Vienna where he became a friend of Eminescu*, who introduced him to the literary circle Junimea.

Together with Eminescu and Caragiale* he worked for the paper Timpul and in 1884 edited Tribuna, in which he advocated popular realism in literature based on peasant life. His short story Popa Tanda, an example of this, is set in Transylvania and relates how a priest solves the economic problems of his village. The stories collected in the volumes Nuvele din popor (1881) and Pădureanca (1884) are all episodes from rural life. His most successful novel Mara (1894) is a love drama which takes place in a provincial town and presents a faithful tableau of contemporary urban society.

Ger. tr. of short stories in M. Kremnitz, Rumänische Märchen (1882).—P. Marcea, I. S. (1967); D. Vatamaniuc, I. S. (1968), I. S. și lumea prin care a trecut (1968) and I. S.: Opera literară (1970). D.J.D.

Sleeckx, JAN LAMBRECHT DOMIEN (*Antwerp 2 II 1818; †Liège 13 X 1901), Flemish novelist, short-story writer, playwright and essayist, one of the founders of the newspaper Vlaamsch België (1844), leader of the realistic movement opposing the idealizing tendency of Romanticism. His novels on life among sailors and his animal stories are conspicuous for their observation and humour. In his mature novels, Tybaerts en Cie (1867) and De plannen van Peerjan (1868), he portrays narrow-minded small-town people and greedy peasants.

In 't Schipperskwartier (1861); Dirk Meyer (1864).—Op 't Eksterlaer (essay; 1863).—PLAYS: De Kraankinders (1852); Grétry (1862).—Volledige werken (17 vols, 1877–85).

F. van Veerdeghe, Levensbericht (1902); L. Baekelmans, Vier Vlaamsche prozaschrijvers (1931). R.F.L.

Sleidan, JOHANN PHILIPSON (*Schleiden 1506; †Strasbourg 31 X 1556), German historian, educated mainly in France, which he left in 1542 because of his Reforming sympathies. He was an accomplished Latin writer; his two main works were both popular and influential.

De Statu Religionis et Reipublicae Carolo Quinto Caesare Commentarii (1555; best ed. J. G. Boehm, 3 vols, 1785–86); De Quatuor Summis Imperiis ... libri tres (1556).

W. Friedensbourg, J. S. (1935). D.H.

Sleptsov, VASILY ALEKSEYEVICH (*Voronezh province 1836; †Serdobsk 1878), Russian author of fine realistic stories about peasant life. He was a follower of Chernyshevsky*, under whose influence he wrote his own radical novel, Trudnoye vremya (1865 and 1922).

Sochineniya (2 vols, 1932–33). J.L.

Slepushkin, FÉDOR NIKIFOROVICH (*Yaroslav province 1783; †1848), Russian peasant-poet. His first volume of poems appeared in 1826 and contained some excellent pictures of village life and of nature. He became known as the 'Russian Theocritus' and, although his talent deteriorated, he found followers among the peasants.

Dosugi sel'skago zhitelya (1826); Chetyre vremeni goda russkago poselyamina (1830); Novye dosugi sel'skago zhitelya (1834).
I. S. Remezov, F. N. S. (1884). J.L.

Slessor, KENNETH (*Orange, New South Wales 27 III 1901; †Sydney 29 VI 1971), Australian poet. The development of his sensuous pictorial intellectuality, previously manifested in period-costume themes, is exemplified in 'Five Visions of Captain Cook', and its sceptical philosophic outcome appears most notably in the elegy, Five Bells (1939). His various lyrical experiments use modern elements with originality to vivify the older technique.
F.T.M.

Poems (2nd ed. 1962); Bread and Wine (essays; 1970). A.M.G.

Slonimski, ANTONI, pseud. PRO-ROK (*Warsaw 15 X 1895), Polish author. He studied painting, was co-founder of the 'Skamander' group and began as a writer of Expressionistic poetry. A gifted poet, under the influence of the great Romanticists, and a vitriolic foe of bigotry and obscurantism, he is a master of form and style.

VERSE: Sonety (1918); Parada (1920); Alarm (1940; 5th ed. Wiek kłeski); Popiół i wiatr (London, 1942); Wiersze 1958-63 (1963).—NOVELS: Teatr w więzieniu (1922); Dwa końce świata (1937).—COMEDIES: Rodzina (1934); Murzyn warszawski (1935).—VARIOUS: Moja podróż do Rosji (1932); Misère et grandeur de la Russie rouge, tr. M. Rakowska, 1935; Mętne łby (1928); Wspomnienia warszawskich (1957); Załatwione odmowne (2 vols, 1962-64).

M. Dąbrowska, 'O A. S. słów kilka' in Wiadomości Liter., CXXXIV (1926); K. W. Zawadzinski, 'A. S.' in Przegląd Warsz., CXVII (1932); A. Kowalczykowa, Liryki S. 1918-35 (1967).
S.S. (P.H.)

Slonimsky, MIKHAIL LEONIDOVICH (*St Petersburg 1897; †1972), Soviet author; his first collection of stories appeared in 1922. His novel Lavrov (1926) describes the fate of two intelligentsia families during the war and revolution. Foma Kleshnev (1931) is a continuation of the same theme.

Sochineniya (4 vols, 1930-33); Sredniy prospekt (1927); Povesti i rasskazy (1937); Pervye gody (1949); Izbrannye proisshedeniya (2 vols, 1958).
N. Lugovtsov, M. S. (1966). J.L.

Sloves, CHAIM (*Białystok [Poland] 1905), Yiddish playwright and essayist. He participated in the revolutionary movement in pre-war Poland and, during the Second World War, in the French Resistance; has lived in Paris since 1926. He obtained a doctorate of law at the Sorbonne and has written a three-volume work on international law. His plays deal mainly with historical themes and have been performed in several languages. He edited for a time a French literary quarterly, Domaine Yidich (Paris, 1958- ).

Nekome-nemmer (1947); Homon's mapoole (1947); Di Yonah's un der valfish (1952); Der ksav fun rekhts oif links (1954); Baroukh fun Amsterdam (1956); Di milkhome fun Got (1963); Tsen brider zainen mir geven (1965); In un aroom (essays; 1970).
J.S.

Slovo o Polku Igoreve (THE LAY OF IGOR'S CAMPAIGN), the finest poetic monument of Old Russian literature. Its subject is the unfortunate expedition of Prince Igor Svyatoslavich against the nomadic tribe of the Polovtsy in 1185, his defeat, captivity and escape. Written in fine rhythmical prose after the Byzantine pattern, it is full of poetic beauty. Some passages have the magic and freshness of folk-songs. The work represents a mixture of Christian and pagan elements, of a spontaneous feeling of nature and also of political harangues imbued with a valiant patriotic spirit. It must have been written by one of the Prince's warriors some time about 1187. The MS (early 16th century) was discovered by Count A. I. Musin-Pushkin and first published in 1800. The original MS perished in the Moscow conflagration (1812), but a copy of it made for Catherine* II remains. There have been some doubts as to Slovo's authenticity (the most recent from A. Mazon). Authoritative opinion is now decidedly in favour of its genuineness (but see FORGERIES, LITERARY).

Slovo o polku Igoreve (ed. N. K. Gudziy and P. Skosyrëv, 1938); La Geste du Prince Igor (text and trs into Fr, mod. Russ., Eng. and Polish, made and comm. by H. Grégoire, R. Jakobson and M. Szeftel, New York, 1948); The Tale of the Armament of Igor (text and [not always reliable] Eng. tr. L. A. Magnus, 1915).

E. V. Barsov, S. o p. I. (3 pts, 1887-89); V. N. Perets, K izucheniyu Slova o polku Igoreve (1926; with biblio.); A. Mazon, Le S. d'Igor (1940); S. o p. I. (ed. S. K. Shambinago, 1940); S. o p. I. (ed. L. A. Dmitriev, Acad. of U.S.S.R., 1954).
J.L.

Słowacki, JULIUSZ (*Krzemieniec 4 IX 1809; †Paris 3 IV 1849), Polish author. The son of a cultured family, he was brought up in feminine surroundings and quite early fell deeply in love with a girl much older than himself. After the failure of the November revolution of 1831 he stayed in Switzerland (1832-36), toured Italy, Greece and the Middle East (1836-38) and in 1839 went to Paris where he renewed his acquaintance with A. Mickiewicz* though they finally fell out. In 1842 he became a follower of a mystic, A. Towiański, who exerted great influence on him and his literary work. On 28 VI 1927 his body was brought from France and buried in Cracow cathedral.

A born poet, Słowacki gave a genuine poetic imprint to everything he wrote in verse or in prose. Sensitive to many literary influences, to several of his poems (Hugo [1830], Żmija, Jan Bielecki, Mnich, Arab) he gave the Byronic imprint and his Podróż do Ziemi Świętej and Beniowski recall Don Juan in character. W Szwajcarii is an unsurpassed love poem and Ojciec zadziwionych a brilliant psychological study of paternal suffering. His greatest poem Król Duch (unfinished) is conceived in the spirit of a messianic mysticism and based on the belief in metempsychosis. His lyrics are masterpieces. Several of his poetic dramas show the influence of Shakespeare* (Maria Stuart, Kordian, Balladyna, Mazepa, Lilla Weneda, the last of which is one of the best European Romantic dramas) or, after 1842, of Calderón* (Książę Marek, Sen srebrny Salomei). His prose works (Anelli, Genesis z ducha, letters, in particular those written to his mother) read like poems in prose. Słowacki's achievements made him a model for poets of the 'Young Poland' and their successors.

VERSE: Poezye (3 vols, Paris, 1832–33); Poema Piasta Dantyszka . . . o piekle (ibid., 1839); Trzy poemata (ibid., 1839); Beniowski (Leipzig, 1840; Fr. tr. V. Gasztowtt, 1907; ed. with intro. and comm. J. Kleiner, 1929); Król Duch (1847; crit. ed. with comm. J. G. Pawlikowski, 2 vols, 1925); Do autora trzech psalmów (1848; crit. ed. with comm. as Odpowiedź na psalmy przyszłości, M. Kridl, 1928); Podróż do Ziemi Świętej z Neapolu (crit. ed. idem, 1924).—PLAYS: Mindowe (1833; in Poezye, II); Maria Stuart (1833); Kordian (Paris, 1834; Ger. tr. A. Berson, 1887); Balladyna (ibid., 1839; Fr. tr. V. Gasztowtt, 1894); Mazepa (ibid., 1840; Mazeppa, tr. C. Dolenga Wells et al., 1930; ed. with intro. and comm. B. Gubrynowicz, 1924); Lilla Weneda (Paris, 1840; Fr. tr. J. Mien, 1878); Książę Marek (ibid., 1843; Le père Marek, tr. V. Gasztowtt in Bull. Polon., CCXXV–CCXXXVI, 1907–08); Sen Srebrny Salomei (Paris, 1844; Le songe d'argent de Salomé, tr. idem, in J. S. Œuvres, 1911; ed. with intro. and comm. S. Turowski, 1923); Agezyłaus (ed. J. H. Rychter, 1884); Samuel Zborowski (crit. ed. H. Biegeleisen, 1903; ed. with intro. and comm. S. Cywinski, 1928); Zawisza Czarny (crit. ed. A. Gorski, 1906); Beatryks Cenci (1909; Fr. tr. Z. Rulikowski, n.d.); Fantazy (1909); Horsztyński (1909); Złota Czaszka (1909).—VARIOUS: Anelli (Paris, 1838; Eng. tr. D. P. Radin, 1930); Genesis z ducha (1874; La genèse par Esprit, tr. J. Dunin Karwiczki, 1926; crit. ed. W. Lutosławski, 1903); Le Roi de Ladawa (crit. ed. M. Kridl, 1924).—Dzieła (crit. ed. B. Gubrynowicz and W. Hahn, 10 vols, 1909; ed. M. Kridl and L. Piwiński, 24 vols, 1930–31; ed. J. Krzyżanowski, 14 vols, 1952); Œuvres complètes (prose tr. V. Gasztowtt, 2 vols, 1870, 3rd vol. 1911); Œuvres choisies (tr. J. Mien, 2 pts, 1875).—Dzieła (14 vols, 1959).—Pamiętnik (memoirs; crit. ed. H. Biegeleisen, 1901).—CORRESPONDENCE: Listy (ed. L. Meyet, 2 vols, 1899, III, 1915, ed. M. Kridl; new ed. L. Piwiński, 3 vols, 1931–32); Korespondencja J. S. (2 vols, 1962–63).

J. Kleiner, J. S. Dzieje twórczości (4 vols, 1919–27; the best book on S.); J. Matuszewski, S. i nowa sztuka (1903); G. Sarrazin, 'J. S.' in Les grands poètes romantiques de Pologne (2nd ed. 1920); G. Maver, Saggi critici su Julio S. (1925); W. Lednicki, Jules S. (1927); G. Bychowski, S. i jego dusza. Studium psychoanalityczne (1930); J. Krzyżanowski, 'J. S.' in Polish Romantic Literature (1930); E. Krakowski, 'S.' in Trois destins tragiques . . . (1931); G. Maver, 'J. S.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XXVIII (1949); J. S. (1809–49) Księga zbiorowa w stulecie zgonu (London, 1951; a collective work); M. Kridl, The Lyric Poems of J. S. (The Hague, 1958); J. Bourilly, La vie et les œuvres de J. S. (Paris, 1960); E. Sawrymowicz, Kalendarz życia i twórczości J. S. (1960); T. Sivert, S. na scenach polskich (1963); B. Zakrzewski, Sądy współczesnych o twórczości S. 1826–62 (1963). S.S. (P.H.)

Sluchewsky, KONSTANTIN KONSTANTINOVICH (*1837; †1904), Russian poet whose introspective and philosophic turn of mind was rather indifferent to the 'civic' slogans of the day. He became duly appreciated (by the Symbolists) only towards the end of his life, but as his creative talent was not always matched by an adequate poetic technique, he has been called the 'torso of a genius'. Apart from poetry he wrote stories and polemical articles.

Sochineniya (6 vols, 1898–99); Pesni iz ugolka (1902). J.L.

Sluyter, WILLEM (*Neede 22 III 1627; †1662 Margaretha Sybille Hoornaerts; †Zwolle XII 1673), Dutch religious poet, studied theology under Voetius at Utrecht, parson at Eibergen. His fluent poetry, glorifying country life, was very popular. In the second year of his marriage his wife died when only 24 years old. This he described in Christelijke Doodsbetrachting (1667). A.M.B.W.

Psalmen, Lofsangen en geestelijke liedekens (1661); Gesangen van Heylige en Godvruchtige Stoffe (1661); Eensaem Huysen Winterleven (1668); Lofsangh der Heilige Maegd Maria and Triumpheerende Christus (1669); Buytenleven (1670; ed. F. C. Kok, 1958); Jeremia's Klaegliederen op dicht- en sangmate (1672).

J. J. Thomson, Religieuse poëzie (1915); H. W.

Heuvel, W. S. van Eibergen (1919); K. Heeroma, 'De datering van S.'s gedichten' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., LXXIII (1955); K. Heeroma, 'S.'s Buitenleven' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LII (1959); L. Strenght, 'S. imitator', ibid., LIII (1960); C. Blokland, W. S. (1965).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Smart, CHRISTOPHER (*Shipbourne, nr Tunbridge 11 IV 1722; ∞1753 Anna Maria Carnan; †Kings Bench 21 V 1771), English poet. Helped by the generosity of the Duchess of Cleveland, Smart eventually became a Fellow of Pembroke Hall, Oxford, then turned to journalism. He was handicapped by poverty and madness but anticipated the general verdict when he saw 'shivers of genius' in his poetry. B.H.

A Song to David (1763); Hymns for the Amusement of Children (1775); Poems, etc. (2 vols, 1791); A Song to David, and Other Poems (ed. E. Blunden, 1924); The Collected Poems of C. S. (ed. N. Callan, 2 vols, 1949); Jubilant Agno (ed. W. H. Bond, 1954).

K. A. Mackenzie, C. S., Sa vie et ses œuvres (1925); E. G. Ainsworth and C. E. Noyes, C. S. (1943); C. Devlin, Poor Kit S. (1961); A. Sherbo, C. S., Scholar of the University (1967); M. Dearnley, The Poetry of C. S. (1968). B.H. (M.Bu.)

Smectymnuus, pseudonym, derived from their initials, under which Stephen Marshal, Edmund Calamy, Thomas Young, Matthew Newcomen and William Spurstowe published their tract attacking episcopacy (1641). Bishop Hall's* reply was met by Milton's* Animadversions upon the Remonstrant's Defence against Smectymnuus (1641) and his Apology against a pamphlet . . . (1642).

Smedley, FRANCIS EDWARD (*Great Marlow 4 X 1818; London 1 V 1864), English novelist whose works, rich in comedy, are permeated by a love of sports and the open air.

Frank Fairleigh: or Scenes from the Life of a Private Pupil (1850; 2nd ed. illus. Cruikshank); Lewis Arundel: or the Railroad of Life (1852; illus. Phiz); Harry Coverdale's Courtship (1855); Mirth and Metre, by two Merry Men (1855; with Edmund Yates); Gathered Leaves (1865, with pref. E. Yates). R.M.H.

Smeken, JAN, alias JAN DE BAERTMAEKER (*c. 1450; †1517), Dutch poet in the REDERIJKER tradition, from 1485 town poet of Brussels. He was a prolific writer of mediocre topical works, including a play on the birth of Charles V in 1500, a poem on the snow statues at Brussels in 1511 and a description of the festival of the Golden Fleece in 1516. His seven plays on the Seven Sorrows, written in collaboration with Jan Pertcheval*, are lost. J.J.M.

Dwonder van claren tijse en snee (ed. R. Pennink and D. Th. Enklaar, 1946); the Golden Fleece poem (ed. G. Degroote, 1946).—Ascribed to him are 4 poems on Margaret of Austria, and Philip the Handsome (1496–97), the Joyeuse Entrée of Charles V at Bruges (1515) and the plays Hoe Mars en Venus tsaemen boeleerden and Vanden H. Sacramente vander Nyeuwervaert.

J. J. Mak in Jaarboek van de Fontaine (1950); A. Maas in Levende Talen (1970).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Smilansky, MOSHE (*Ukraine 1874; †Tel Aviv 6 X 1953), Hebrew author, went to Palestine in 1890. His stories include descriptions of the early days of Jewish settlement, and remain a literary monument to the pioneering spirit. He also wrote picturesque, romantic and legendary stories about the Arabs, under the pen-name HAWAJA MUSA.

Bnei Arav (1911; 1964); Ba-Aravah (1947); Bahar Ubagai (1948); Mishpahat Ha-Adamah (1953).—Palestine Caravan (London, 1935).

C.K. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Smiles, SAMUEL (*Haddington 23 XII 1812; ∞1843 Sarah Holmes; †London 16 IV 1904), English social reformer, author of biographies and works designed to promote working-class education, of which Self-help achieved phenomenal success.

Lives of the Engineers (5 vols, 1874); Men of Invention and Industry (1884).—Self-help, with illustrations of Character and Conduct (1859); Character (1871); Thrift (1875); Duty (1880); Life and Labour (1887).—Autobiography (ed. T. Mackay, 1905).

Sarah Tytler, Three Generations (1911).

R.M.H.

Smil Flaška z Pardubic a Rychmburka (*before 1350; †1402), Czech poet. Smil, a Bohemian nobleman, was the writer of an allegorical poem, 'The New Council' (Nová rada), probably written in 1378 and revised in 1394, in which a 'parliament' of birds and beasts is used to support the cause of the Bohemian feudal magnates against the Crown. Some scholars attribute other didactic poems to Smil.

Nová rada (ed. J. Daňhelka, 1950); Staročeské satiry Hradeckého rukopisu a Smilovy školy (ed. J. Hrabák, 1962).

J. B. Čapek, 'Die Ironie des S. F.' in Slavische Rundschau, X (1936); J. Hrabák, Smilova škola (1941). R.A.

Smirnenski, HRISTO, pseud. of H. IZMIRLIEV (*Kukush, Macedonia 30 IX 1898; †Gorna Banya hosp. 18 VI 1923), Bulgarian poet. He wrote some memorable Symbolist verse, but is better known as Bulgaria's first considerable Communist poet. With D. Polyanov he edited and contributed to left-wing and comic periodicals after the First World War, notably Bulgaran, Baraban, Cherven smyakh, Rabotnicheski vestnik and his own Maskarad (1922–23). He died from tuberculosis.

Raznokalibreni vuzdishki (1918); Da bude den (1922); Zimni vecheri (1923).—Coll. works (4 vols, 1958–60).

Sbornik spomeni H. S. (1955); N. Izmirliiev, H. S. letopis (1961). V.P.

Smith, ADAM (*Kirkcaldy 5 VI 1723; †Edinburgh 17 VII 1790), Scottish political economist. Educated at Glasgow University and Balliol College, Oxford, Smith was appointed Professor of logic at Glasgow in 1751 and Professor of moral philosophy in 1752. He travelled to France as tutor to the 3rd Duke of Buccleuch in 1763–65. He was a member of Dr Johnson's* literary club in London, and was elected Rector of Glasgow University in 1787. He made some contributions to ethics, but his major work was The Wealth of Nations. He isolated facts and treated them scientifically for the first time; he emphasized the importance of natural liberty in the acquisition of wealth, as opposed to the artificial restriction of trade by government; and laid the basis of the system of free trade.

The Theory of Moral Sentiments . . . to which is added a Dissertation on the Origin of Languages (1759); An Inquiry into the Nature and Causes of the Wealth of Nations (2 vols, 1776; ed. E. Cannan, 1904); Essays on Philosophical Subjects (with memoir by Dugald Stewart, 1795); Lectures on Justice, Police, Revenue and Arms . . . reported by a student in 1763 (ed. E. Cannan, 1896); Lectures on Rhetoric and Belles Lettres . . . reported by a student in 1762–63 (ed. J. M. Lothian, 1963).—B. Franklin and F. Cordasco, A. S.: A Bibliographical Checklist . . . 1876–1950 (1950).

W. R. Scott, A. S. as Student and Professor (1937, 1966); C. R. Fay, A. S. and the Scotland of His Day (1956); J. Rae, Life of A. S. (1965).

J.K.

Smith, ALEXANDER (*Kilmarnock 31 XII 1830; ∞1857 Flora Macdonald; †Wardie, Midlothian 5 I 1867), Scottish poet, essayist, journalist and secretary to Edinburgh University. He was one of the group of poets nicknamed 'Spasmodic'.

Poems (1853); Sonnets on the War (with S. Dobell; 1855); City Poems (1857); Edwin of Deira (1861).

G. Gilfillan, Galleries of Literary Portraits, I (1856); T. Brisbane, The Early Years of A. S. (1869); H. B. Grimsditch, 'A. S., poet and essayist' in London Mercury, XII (1925); 'A. S.' in Times Lit. Supp. (25 Dec. 1930). B.H. (M.A.)

Smith, ARTHUR JAMES MARSHALL (*Montreal 8 XI 1902; ∞1927 Jean Robins), Canadian poet, scholar, anthologist and Professor of English. With F. R. Scott*, he is a chief motivating force in the development of modern Canadian poetry; his work is marked by careful craftsmanship, intellectual depth and effective use of imagery and symbolism.

News of the Phoenix (1943); A Sort of Ecstasy (1954); Collected Poems (1962); Poems New and Collected (1967).—ANTHOLOGIES: Book of Canadian Poetry (1943); Seven Centuries of Verse (1947); Blasted Pine (with F. R. Scott; 1957); Oxford Book of Canadian Verse (1960); Masks of Fiction (1961).

E. Birney et al., 'Salute to A. J. M. S.' in Canad. Lit., XV (1963). R.Su.

Smith, CHARLOTTE, née TURNER (*London 4 V 1749; ∞1765 Benjamin Smith; †Tetford 28 X 1806), English poet and novelist. R.M.H.

Elegiac Sonnets and other Essays (1784); Emmeline, the Orphan of the Castle (4 vols, 1788); Celestina (4 vols, 1792); The Old Manor House (4 vols, 1793; ed. A. H. Ehrenpreis, 1969); Conversations introducing poetry (for the use of children; 2 vols, 1804).

A. K. Elwood, Memoirs of the literary ladies of England, I (1843); Life of M. R. Mitford (ed. A. G. L'Estrange, 1870); J. M. S. Tompkins, The Popular Novel, 1770–1800 (1932); F. Hilbush, C. S., Poet and Novelist (1941).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Smith, EDMUND (*?Hanley or ?Tenbury 1672; †Hartham, Wilts VII 1710), English poet and dramatist, educated at Westminster and Christ Church, Oxford. Handsome but careless of dress he was nicknamed 'Captain Rag', and although academically brilliant, delivering the Bodley oration in 1701, he was sent down for misconduct. Smith's tragedy Phaedra and Hippolitus was praised by the critics despite failure with the audience.

The Works . . . of Mr. Smith (1714; 1719; 1729).—Samuel Johnson, Lives, II (ed. G. Birkbeck Hill, 1905). B.L.J.

Smith, HENRY (*Withcote, Leics 1550; †Husband's Bosworth 4 VII 1591), Puritan divine. Smith was educated at Lincoln College, Oxford and became lecturer at St Clement Danes (1587). A celebrated preacher, he drew large congregations until ill-health compelled him to retire.

Collected Sermons (1592); Selection From the Sermons (ed. John Brown, 1908). J.B.B.

Smith, HORACE, baptized HORATIO (*London 31 XII 1779; ∞1810, ∞1818 Miss Ford; †Tunbridge Wells 12 VII 1849), English humorist and novelist, co-author with his brother JAMES (1775-1839) of Rejected Addresses, a series of parodies of contemporary poets writing on the reopening of Drury Lane Theatre.

Poetical Works (2 vols, 1846).—Rejected Addresses, or the new Theatrum Poetarum (1812); Horace in London by the Authors of Rejected Addresses (1813).

A. H. Beavan, James and H. S. (1899).

R.M.H.

Smith, IAIN CRICHTON (*Isle of Lewis 1 I 1928), Scottish poet and novelist, using both Gaelic and English, a versatile and prolific writer, who observes closely and unerringly the details of ordinary life and then intuitively and imaginatively transmutes them so that they become symbols of a wider reality.

Thistles and Roses (1961); The Law and the Grace (1965); From Bourgeois Land (1969).—Selected Poems (1970).—NOVELS: Consider the Lilies (1968); The Last Summer (1969).—Survival Without Error (short stories; 1970).—Ben Dorain (tr.; 1969). W.R.A.

Smith, JOHN (*Willoughby, Eng. 1579/80; †Plymouth, Mass. 21 VI 1631), American annalist and romancer. An Elizabethan soldier of fortune, he relates his famous rescue by Pocahontas in the Generall Historie of Virginia, New England, etc. (1624).

A True Relation of . . . Virginia (1608); New England Trials (1620).—Travels and Works of Captain J. S. (ed. E. Arber, 1884).

J. G. Fletcher, J. S.—Also Pocahontas (1928); P. L. Barbour, The Three Worlds of Captain J. S. (1964). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Smith, PAULINE (*Oudtshoorn, Cape 2 IV 1882; †Broadstairs, Kent 29 I 1959), South African short-story writer and novelist, who spent her early years in the Little Karroo, around the small town of Oudtshoorn, once famous as the centre of the ostrich-farming industry. Later, in England, she won the friendship of Arnold Bennett*. Her output is small but of high quality. Of her exquisite stories of Afrikaner life, The Pain, which first gained notice for her, is pre-eminent.

STORIES: The Little Karroo (1925); Platkops Children (1935).—The Beadle (novel; 1926); A[mold] B[ennett] (biog.; 1933).

G. Haresnape, P. S. (1970). E.R.S. (U.La.)

Smith, STEVIE (*Hull 1903; †Ashburton, Devon 7 III 1971), English poet and novelist. She contributed poems, short stories and book criticism to many literary journals and some of her poems have been set to music by Elisabeth Lutyens and by Stanley Bates. Her Novel on Yellow Paper (1936), shrewd, caustic, comic, solemn, written in the half-formed style of a sophisticated child, instantly attracted and deserved attention. Her poems, for all this cheekiness, are astonishing apostrophes to life and the universe.

NOVELS: Over the Frontier (1938); The Holiday (1949).—POEMS: A Good Time Was Had by All (1937); Tender Only to One (1938); Mother, What Is Man? (1942); Harold's Leap (1950); Not Waving but Drowning (1957); Selected Poems (1962); The Frog Prince (1966). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Smith, SYDNEY, canon of St Paul's (*Woodford 3 VI 1771; ∞1800 Catherine Pybus; †London 22 II 1845), English clergyman, co-founder of Edinburgh Review, and famous for exuberantly humorous talk. As PETER PLYMLEY he urged the cause of Roman Catholic emancipation.

Letters of Peter Plymley, Essays and Speeches (with intro. by H. Morley, 1886); Works (4 vols, 1839-40); The Letters of S. S. (ed. N. C. Smith, 2 vols, 1953); Selected Writings of S. S. (ed. W. H. Auden, 1956).

Lady Holland, Memoir (ed. Mrs Austin, 1855); Hesketh Pearson, The Smith of Smiths (1948); G. Bullett, S. S. A Biography and a Selection (1951). R.M.H. (K.W.)

Smith, SYDNEY GOODSIR (*Wellington, New Zealand 26 X 1915; ∞1938 Marion Elise Welsh), Scottish poet and critic. He writes verse in 'Lallans' (the synthetic language of the Scottish renaissance) but also explores the universal range of subject and emotion. His novel Carotid Cornucopius (1947; rev. 1964) is a 'Rabelaisian-cum-Joycean extravaganza'.

VERSE: Skail Wind (1941); The Wanderer (1943); The Deevil's Waltz (1946); Under the Eildon Tree (1948); So Late Into the Night (1952); Cokkils (1953); Orpheus and Eurydice (1955); Figs and Thistles (1959); Kynd Kittock's Land (1965).—The Wallace (play; 1960).—A Short Introduction to Scottish Literature (1951).

H. MacDiarmid, S. G. S. (1963); Akros, X (1969). G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

Smith, SIR THOMAS (*Saffron Walden 23 XII 1513; †Theydon Mount, Essex 12 VIII 1577), English scholar and statesman. At Cambridge, Smith wrote tracts on linguistics. His Commonwealth of England (1586) is a concise, detailed and unemotional account of the law and government of the land in 1565.

De recta et emendata linguae Graecae pronuntiatione (1568); De recta et emendata linguae Anglicae scriptione dialogus (1568); De republica Anglorum. The manner of government . . . of England (1583; ed. L. Alston and F. W. Maitland, 1906).

M. Dewar, Sir T. S. (1964). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Smith, WENTWORTH (fl. 1601–23), English dramatist. He is known from Henslowe's diary to have collaborated in many plays. One surviving play (by 'W. Smith') is regularly attributed to him.

The Hector of Germany (1615). G.K.H.

Smith, WILLIAM (fl. 1596), English poet, an avowed disciple of Spenser*. A sonnet of his was included in The Phoenix-nest (1595) and the poem Corins Dreame in England's Helicon (1600; 1614).

Chloris (1596; sonnets; ed. Sir S. Lee, Elizabethan Sonnets, II, 1904). B.L.J.

Smits, DIRK (*Rotterdam 20 VI 1702; ∞Kornelia Kloribus; †Hellevoetsluis 25 IV 1752), Dutch poet, wrote melodious topographical and arcadian verse; typical exponent of the unsophisticated poetry of the Dichtgenootschappen.

Israëls Baalfegorsdienst of gestrafte wellust (play; 1737).—VERSE: Gedichten (1740); De Rottestroom (1750); Nagelaten gedichten (3 vols, with biog. N. Versteeg, 1753–64).

A. de Jager, D. S. herdacht (1852); W. Kloos, Een daad van eenvoudige rechtvaardigheid (1909); A. Schillings, 'D. S.' in Rotterdams Jaarboekje (1920). J.W.W.

Smolenskin, PEREZ (*Monastyrshchina 25 II 1842; †Meran 1 II 1885), Hebrew author and leader of the Jewish National Progressive Movement. He wandered restlessly throughout Russia, and in Odessa he started publishing essays and stories in the weekly Ha-Melitz. He finally settled in Vienna as a proof reader and manager of a great Hebrew printing works. There he founded his famous periodical Ha-Shachar ('the Dawn'). In this he published serially his great novel Hatohe Bedarke Hachayim (3 vols, 1868–70; 2nd ed., 4 vols, 1876), a kind of veiled autobiography, and also besides novels and literary criticism, his two great treatises Am Olam and Et Lataat. His last novel, Kevurat Chamor ('The Burial of an Ass'), is regarded as his best.

Sifrei P. ben M. S. (ed. L. Rosenthal, 1887 ff.).

R. Brainin, P. S. (2 vols, 1896); C. H. Freundlich, P. S., Life and Thought (New York, 1965). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Smollett, TOBIAS GEORGE (*Dalquhurn III 1721; ∞1747 Anne Lascelles; †Leghorn 17 IX 1771), Scottish novelist. Educated at Glasgow University, Smollett was apprenticed to an apothecary; qualified in medicine in London, 1739; served as a ship's surgeon; and settled in London in 1743 as medical man, journalist and novelist. He spent 1763–65 abroad and left England finally, an invalid, in 1768. His early life, his travels and his experiences at sea, provided him with a rich variety of scenes and characters for his novels. A master of the picaresque, Smollett throws together a host of eccentrics, rakes, knaves, buffoons, fools and 'originals', draws them out in strong, vivid lines which often run to hilarious caricature, and thrusts them into adventure after adventure with a zest and a disregard for probability which make him one of the greatest comic novelists in English. He is a story-teller of inexhaustible invention and wit, ranging in style from the grand to the familiar, drawing for comic effect on dialect, and excellent in the ludicrous and the macabre. Observant, malicious, and a fine prose writer, Smollett is often a keen satirist of men, manners and fashions. His faults are coarseness, excessive ferocity and prejudice, shallowness in characterization and a defective sense of literary form.

Advice (1746) and Reproof (1747; verse satires); The Adventures of Roderick Random (1748); tr. of Lesage, Gil Blas (1749); The Adventures of Peregrine Pickle (1751; ed. J. L. Clifford, 1964); Ferdinand, Count Fathom (1753); tr. of Don Quixote (1755); parts of An Universal History (44 vols, 1759–66); contrib. to The Critical Rev. (1756–59); The Compleat History of England ... to 1748 (4 vols, 1776–58); The Reprisal: A Comedy (1757); ed., The Works of M. de Voltaire: Translated (38 vols, 1761–74); The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves (1762); ed., The Briton (1762–63); Travels through France and Italy (1766; ed. T. Seccombe, 1907); The History and Adventures of an Atom (1769); The Expedition of Humphry Clinker (1771; ed. L. M. Knapp, 1966).—Coll. works (8 vols, 1776–58); 6 vols, 1790; ed. R. Anderson, 6 vols, 1796; ed. G. Saintsbury, 12 vols, 1895).—Letters (ed. E. S. Noyes, 1926).

Lewis Melville, Life and Letters of T. S. (1926); L. L. Martz, The Later Career of T. S. (1942); G. M. Kahrl, T. S. Traveler-Novelist (1945); F. W. Boege, S.'s Reputation as a Novelist (1947); L. M. Knapp, T. S., Doctor of Men and Manners (1949); M. A. Goldberg, S. and the Scottish School (1959); D. Bruce, Radical Doctors (1964); A. Parreaux, S.'s London (1965). J.K.

Smrek, JÁN, pseud. of JÁN ČIETEK (*Zemianske Lieskovo 16 III 1898), Slovak poet; one of the leading Slovak poets after 1918. As editor of the journal Elán (Prague 1930–38, Bratislava 1939–47) he decisively influenced and encouraged young Slovak writers. His own work, showing some influence of Symbolism (Krasko*, Ady*), expresses a vitalistic optimism, strongly marked by eroticism. The experience of the war brought a darker note into his poems. Silent for some years after 1945, he returned to literary activity with poems of mature reflection, still dominated by the life of the senses. His translations, especially those from Ady (1950), are among his finest work.

Coll. poems: Knihy snečné, Knihy noci planých (1963); Knihy podjesenné (1964). R.A.

Smuul, JUHAN (*Muhu 18 II 1922; ∞D. Vaarandi; †13 IV 1971), Estonian poet and playwright. Returning to Estonia from Russia after the war, Smuul became a professional writer and from 1953 was chairman of his country's Writer's Union. The first Estonian to abandon Socialist Realism, his style is free and colourful. He rejects Communist ideology as the solution to all problems, and even characters transgressing official policy receive sympathetic treatment. Especially important is his play Lea (1960) which is about a Communist sheltered from the Germans by a religious girl. As the author of travelogues Smuul is the successor of F. Tuglas*.

VERSE: Karm noorus (1946); Tormi poeg (1947); Et õunapuud õitseksid (1951); Luuletused. Poemid (1953); Mere ja taeva vahel (1959).—PROSE: Kirjad Sõgedate külast (1955); Muhulaste imelikud juhtumised Tallinna juubelilaulupeol (1957); Jäine raamat (1959); Antarctica Ahoy!, tr. D. Skvirsky, (1963); Polkovniku lesk (1968).—PLAYS: Atlandi ookean (1957); Kihnu Jõnn ehk metskapten (1965); Der wilde Kapitän, tr. J. Elperin and K. Eiden, (1967).

E. Nirk, 'J. S.' in Estonian Literature (1970).
M.A.B.

Sneedorff, JENS SCHELDERUP (*Sorø 22 VIII 1724; ∞1752 Inger Andrea Lous, ∞1757 Øllegaard Vilhelmine Thestrup; †Copenhagen 5 VI 1764), Danish essayist. His essays, letters, scholarly publications and translations are among the best of the period of Enlightenment in Danish literature. From 1761 he edited Den patriotiske Tilskuer, in which he discussed contemporary social, political and aesthetic questions. His prose style has had a considerable influence in Danish literature.

Om den borgerlige Regiering (1757); Fortsettelse af Babues Syn (1759); Breve (1759); Smaa Skrifter (2 vols, 1770).—Samtlige Skrifter (9 vols, 1775–77).

K. F. Plesner, J. S. S. (1930).

E.B.

Snellman, JOHAN VILHELM (*Stockholm 12 V 1806; †Kirkkonummi 4 VII 1881), Finnish-Swedish philosopher and statesman. He went to Finland in 1813, became lecturer in philosophy at Helsingfors 1835 and a member of Runeberg's* 'Lördagssällskap'. He worked in Sweden and Germany and was, in philosophy, identified with the Hegelian left. He was headmaster at Kuopio (1843–49) and campaigned vigorously in the press for the use of the Finnish language. In 1856 he became Professor of ethics at Helsingfors, and in 1863 head of the Finnish Treasury. His vigorous Finnish (not Swedish) nationalism had much influence on the policy of the Finnish party, and his name is still revered.

Filosofisk elementarkurs (3 vols, 1837–40); Versuch einer spekulativen Entwicklung der Idee

der Persönlichkeit (1841); Läran om staten (1842); Tyskland (1842); Fyra giftermål (1842; short stories).—Samlade arbeten (10 vols, 1892–98).

T. Rein, J. V. S. (1904).

B.M.E.M.

Snieders, AUGUST (*Bladel 8 V 1825; †Borgerhout 19 XI 1904), Flemish novelist and short-story writer, was editor of the Handelsblad van Antwerpen, the leading journalist of his time. He was a rival of Conscience* in the field of the historical novel; he wrote novels of country life which are still read; well-constructed, fascinating novels in an Antwerp setting, spiced with humour and satire; and excellent sketches.

His brother JAN RENIER (*Bladel 22 XI 1812; †Turnhout 9 IV 1888) wrote country novels in the style of Conscience.

NOVELS: De gasthuisnon (1855; Isidora, la sœur hospitalière, tr. G. Lebrocquy, 1878); Op den toren (1869; Les Sans-Culottes, tr. G. Lebrocquy, 1871; Auf dem Thurme, tr. F. Schnettler, 1872); De Speelduivel (1870); Alleen in de wereld (1880; Ger. tr. Alleen in der Welt, 1883); De nachtraven (1884).—SHORT STORIES: Jan Scharesliep (1867); Sneeuwvlokske (1878); Fata Morgana (1887); Dit zijn Snideren (1893).—Volledige werken (20 vols, 1876–86; 49 vols, 1924–34).

J. Persyn, A. S. en zijn tijd (3 vols, 1925–26); R. Sterkens, De letterkunde in de Antwerpsche Kempen van 1830 tot 1900 (1935).

R.F.L.

Snodgrass, WILLIAM DEWITT (*Wilkesburg, Pa. 5 I 1926), American poet. One of the American poet-academics (he has taught at Cornell, Wayne, Syracuse and other Universities), Snodgrass has much in common with his elders, Lowell* and Berryman*. Like theirs his verse is intricate, sometimes even elegant, and yet finds its driving force from the cataloguing of the disasters of the poet's personal life.

Heart's Needle (1959); After Experience (1968).

D.E.Mo.

Snoilsky, CARL JOHAN GUSTAF, COUNT (*Stockholm 8 IX 1841; †ibid. 19 V 1903), Swedish poet and diplomat. A member of 'Namnlösa Sällskapet' at Uppsala, he published his first poetry under a pseudonym in 1861. His work as diplomat stimulated him to write colourful lyric poetry in elegant form about Italy, Spain etc. As a result of his divorce he left the diplomatic service in 1879 and settled abroad (first Florence, then Dresden). His second marriage called forth a second creative period in his poetry. He returned to Sweden in 1889 and became head librarian in the royal library, Stockholm. His earlier liberal sympathies had by that time changed into staunch conservatism. Snoilsky, like Heidenstam*, at one time hoped to become the Swedish national poet.

Sånger och berättelser (under pseud. Sven Tröst; 1863); Dikter (1869); Sonetter (1871); Nya dikter, 1879–1880 (1881); Dikter, tredje samlingen (1883); Svenska bilder (1886); Dikter, fjärde samlingen (1887).—Samlade dikter (5 vols, 1903–04); Minnesteckningar och andra uppsatser (1904); Snoilsky, ett dikturval (ed. H. Olsson, 1942); C. Snoilsky och hans vänner (2 vols, 1917–18; letters).

K. Warburg, C. S. (1905); O. Levertin, Diktare och drömmare (1898) and Svenska gestalter (1903); F. Böök, 'S.'s sociala diktning' in Svenska studier (1913) and H. Larsson's reply in Forum (1916); E. Gosse, 'C. S. and some recent Swedish poets' in Portraits and Sketches (1918); H. Olsson, Den unge S. (1941). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Snorri Sturluson: see Sturluson, SNORRI.

Snow, CHARLES PERCY, LORD SNOW (*Leicester 15 X 1905; ∞1950 Pamela Hansford Johnson), English scientist and novelist, writes with intellectual passion of the problems of power and morality in contemporary society. Eleven of his novels, from Strangers and Brothers (1940) to Last Things (1970), form a sequence offering an almost documentary presentation of English social history from 1925; perhaps the best are The Masters (1951), The Affair (1960) and Corridors of Power (1964). The Two Cultures and the Scientific Revolution (1959) was a controversial pamphlet which provoked a notable rejoinder from F. R. Leavis* (1962).

F. R. Karl, C. P. S.: The Politics of Conscience (1963); J. Thale, C. P. S. (1964); R. Rabinovitz, The Reaction Against Experiment in the English Novel, 1950–60 (1967). W.R.A.

Snyder, GARY SHERMAN (*San Francisco 8 V 1930; ∞1967 Masa Uehara), American poet. His interest in mythology and his experience of forestry work are both echoed in his poetry. 'The Rhythms of my poems follow the rhythms of the physical work I'm doing', he commented, and his best work yokes together rugged images of rituals involved with the felt life of a locale.

Riprap (1959); Myths and Texts (1960); Six Sections From Mountains and Rivers Without End (1965); A Range of Poems (1966); The Back Country (1968); Earth House Hold (1969).

G.A.K.

Sobol', ANDREY MIKHAILOVICH (*1888; †1926), Russian author. His most typical book was his collection of stories, Oblomki (1923), a weird mixture of the fantastic and the real on the part of a sensitive mind who, for all his will, was unable to believe in the Revolution. There are interesting psychological dissections in his works, some of which were influenced by L. Andreyev*. He committed suicide.

Sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1926–27). J.L.

Sobolev, LEONID SERGEYEVICH (*1898; †II 1971), Soviet author, writing mainly about sailors and naval operations.

Kapital'ny remont (1933); Storm Warning, tr. A. Freemantle, 1935; Morskaya dusha (1943); The Soul of the Sea, tr. N. Orloff, 1946; Dorogami pobed (1944).

V. Vishnevsky, 'Korni tvorchestva L. Soboleva' in Znamya, I (1934). J.L.

Socrates (*Athens 469; ∞Xanthippe; †ibid. 399 B.C.), Greek philosopher. He was the son of Sophroniscus, a sculptor, and Phaenarete, a midwife. He earned a reputation for hardness and courage in battle, but took no more part than he could help in Athenian public life. He wrote nothing himself; all our knowledge of him and his teaching depends on conflicting reports in the dialogues of his pupils Plato* and Xenophon* and other sources.

Socrates had no systematic doctrine to teach, but sought conversations with others, particularly young men, in order to exhibit the unsure foundations on which current notions of morality and society were built, and to point the way towards more adequate standards. 'Virtue is knowledge'; he did not claim to have this knowledge himself but tried to show the need for knowledge by revealing his own and others' ignorance.

He was put on trial for introducing new deities and corrupting the young, and was executed. His influence on Plato and the noble ideas for which he was prepared to die make him one of the great figures of Greek philosophy.

W. D. Ross, Aristotle's Metaphysics (1924); A. Diès, Autour de Platon, I (1927); G. C. Field, Plato and His Contemporaries (1930); R. Hackforth, The Composition of Plato's Apology (1933); R. W. Livingstone, Portrait of S. (1940); O. Gigon, S., sein Bild in Dichtung und Geschichte (1947); V. de Magalhães-Vilhena, Le problème de S. (1952) and S. et la légende platonicienne (1952); C. J. de Vogel, 'The present state of the Socratic problem' in Phronesis, I (1955); L. Versényi, Socratic Humanism (1963); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, III (1969; best intro.); The Philosophy of S. (ed. G. Vlastos, 1971). D.J.F.

Socrates Scholasticus (*Constantinople; fl. first half 5th century), Greek historian. His Ecclesiastical History, in seven books, continues the history of Eusebius* from 305 to 439. A sober and honest historian, who usually names his sources, Socrates preserves many valuable documents.

The Ecclesiastical History of S. (ed. R. Hussey, re-ed. W. Bright, 1893; tr. A. C. Zenos, 1891).—F. Geppert, Die Quellen des Kirchenhistorikers S. S. (1898). R.B.

Sodenkamp, ANDRÉE *Brussels 18 VI 1906; ∞12

II 1938 Camille Libotte); of Dutch ancestry, this most typical French-speaking woman poet became a Belgian citizen in 1923. Her slow harmonious verse and rich colourful images reveal a feminine approach to the masterpieces of Flemish painting and an intimate communion with fauna, flora and soil of Brabant.

Des oiseaux à tes lèvres (1950); Sainte Terre (1954); Les Dieux obscurs (1959); Femmes des longs matins (1965); A riverderci Italia (1965).

J.C.D.

Söderberg, HJALMAR (*Stockholm 2 VII 1869; †Copenhagen 14 X 1941), Swedish writer. He began as a civil servant, then tried journalism, and turned author in 1895, when he published a novel, Förvillelser, the frankness of which shocked his contemporaries. With the masterly short stories Historietter (1898), and the partly autobiographical novel Martin Bircks ungdom (1901; Martin Birck's Youth, tr. C. W. Stork, 1930), he established his reputation as a prose writer of boldness but of great elegance. In Doktor Glas (1905; Doctor Glas, tr. P. Britten Austin, 1963) he takes up the controversial subject of the right to kill for altruistic purposes: the story, like nearly all Söderberg's work, is set in Stockholm, which he describes with lyrical beauty. His prose style reflects the influence of Anatole France*, Herman Bang* and J. P. Jacobsen*. He is a sceptical, pessimistic, but ironic writer: in his later work (essays) he becomes more and more critical of Christianity. Of his plays, Gertrud (1906) is the most successful. He settled in Copenhagen in 1917, his second wife being Danish.

Den allvarsamma leken (novel; 1912).—Selected Short Stories (tr. C. W. Stork, 1935).—PLAYS: Aftonstjärnan (1912); Ödestimmen (1922).—Hjärtats oro (diary-aphorisms; 1909).—ESSAYS: Jesus Barabbas (1928); Den förvandlade Messias (1932); Sista boken (1942).—Samlade verk (ed. H. Friedländer and T. Söderberg, 10 vols, 1943–44).

H. Friedländer, En H. S.-bibliografi (1944); S. Stolpe, H. S. (1934); L. Kjellberg, Stildrag i H. S:s Förvillelser och Martin Bircks ungdom (1937); B. Bergman, H. S. (Svenska Akademiens Minnesteckningar, 1951); S. Ruin, H. S:s Gertrud (1962); B. Holmbäck, Det lekfulla allvaret (1969). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Södergran, EDITH IRENE (*Leningrad 4 IV 1892; †Raivola 24 VI 1923), Finnish-Swedish poet and prose writer. She was educated in a German school at Leningrad, German being the first language in which she attempted verse-making. At the age of 16 she developed consumption—the disease which eventually killed her. In 1918, as a result of the Russian Revolution, her family lost their fortune, and she spent the last five years of her life with her mother at Raivola (Karelia), in growing poverty and weakness but in surprising poetic and intellectual activity. With her first volume, Dikter (1916), she introduced Expressionism into Finnish-Swedish (and Swedish) literature and was, to begin with, generally misunderstood by the critics. The influence of Nietzsche* (spurring her to proud self-assertion) is very marked in her bold, passionate writing up to 1920 (Septemberlyran, 1918); from 1920 to 1922 she was silent, after having turned from Nietzsche, in search of a metaphysical faith, towards Christianity. Her last lyrics, published posthumously, attained a new, limpid, but intense harmony. Södergran has been the greatest single native influence on Finnish-Swedish literature since Runeberg*.

VERSE: Rosenaltaret (1919); Framtidens skugga (1920); Landet som icke är (ed. H. Olsson, 1925).—Brokiga Iakttagelser (aphorisms; 1919).—Min lyra (sel. poems; intro. J. Hemmer, 1929); Samlade dikter (intro. H. Olsson, 1940); Samlade dikter (ed. G. Tideström, 1949); Dikter 1906–1909 (with intro. and comm. O. Enckell, 1961).—Seven Swedish Poets (sel. poems tr. F. Fleischer, 1963).

O. Enckell, Esteticism och nietzscheanism i E. Södergrans lyrik (1949); G. Tideström, E. S. (1949; new ed. 1960). B.M.E.M. (I.S.)

Söderhjelm, JARL WERNER (*Viipuri 26 VII 1859; †Helsinki 16 I 1931), Finnish-Swedish scholar, critic and diplomat, became Professor at Helsingfors of Romance philology (1889), of Germanic and Romance philology (1898) and of comparative literature (1913). When Finland became a republic, Söderhjelm was appointed Finnish minister in Sweden (1919–29). As critic he exercised considerable influence on both Swedish and Finnish literature.

K. A. Tavastjerna (1900); J. L. Runeberg (2 vols, 1904–06); Italiensk renässans (with his brother; 1907); O Levertin (2 vols, 1914–17); Åboromantiken (1915); Utklipp om böcker (3 vols, 1916–20); Skrifter (10 vols, 1924–25).

G. Castrén, 'Minnestal över W. S.' in Finska Vetenskaps societetens årsbok (1934).

B.M.E.M.

Soffici, ARDENGIO (*Rignano sull'Arno 7 IV 1879; †Forte dei Marmi 1964), Italian painter, poet and critic. After living in Paris (1903–07), where he met Apollinaire*, Picasso and Max Jacob* and participated in the Cubist movement, Soffici became an ardent supporter of Marinetti's* FUTURISM and in 1913 helped Papini* to found the Florentine review Lacerba. Later he adopted a more traditional approach to art. In 1932 he was awarded the Mussolini prize for painting. Although his work is full of extravagance (especially during the Futurist period), it is redeemed by flashes of brilliance and great vitality. Giornale di bordo (1915) is often considered his best work.

VERSE: Bi&szf;+18—Simultaneità—Chimismi li-

rici (1915; a typical Futurist title); Marsia e Apollo (coll. poems; 1938).—CRITICISM: Statue e fantocci (1919); Ricordi di vita artistica e letteraria (1931); L'ultimo tempo (1939).—GENERAL: Lemmonio Boreo (1912); Kobilek (1918); Salzi nel tempo (1940).—Autoritratto d'artista italiano nel quadro del suo tempo (autobiog.; 4 vols, 1951–55).—Opere (7 vols, 1959–68).

M. Richter, La formazione francese di A. S. 1900–1914 (1969). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Sofrony Vrachanski (BISHOP SOFRONY OF VRATSA; orig. STOYKO VLADISLAVOV) (*Kotel c. 1739; †?Bucharest c. 1813), Bulgarian literary pioneer. He upheld Bulgarian culture against Greek incursions, first by copying and disseminating Paissy's Istoria, then in his translation miscellanies and pedagogical work. Life under the Turks is vividly portrayed in his 'Life' (Jitie), a milestone in the transition from traditional hagiography to personal autobiography and secular literature. In 1803 he fled to Bucharest, where he compiled his 'Sunday Homilies', soon widely enjoyed as the 'Sofronie', Bulgarian literature's first printed book.

Pouchenia (1802); Jitie i stradanja greshnago Sofroniya (Bucharest, 1804; 1st pr. 1861); Kiriakodromion ili Nedelnik (= 'Sofronie'; Rimnik, 1806); Teatron politikon (1809). V.P.

Sōgi, pseud. of IDA, personal name unknown (*1421; †1502), Japanese poet. A Zen priest, like his master Shinkei, he was the most famous writer of renga, 'linked verse', in which successive half-tanka were composed by different poets. A classic example of 'linked verse' (which was established as a serious art-form by Nijo* Yoshimoto) is the Minase sangin hyakuin, a 100-link sequence composed at Minase in 1488 by Sōgi and two of his pupils, Sōchō and Shōhaku. E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Minase sangin hyakuin (complete tr. K. Yasuda, 1956; first half tr. D. L. Keene in Anthology of Japanese Literature, 1955; discussion in B. Lewin, Japanische Chrestomathie, 1965).—W. Naumann, Shinkei in seiner Bedeutung für die japanische Kettendichtung (1967). D.E.M.

Søilberg, HARRY (*Ringkøbing 13 VI 1880; ∞1909 Inger Marie Jensen Ipsen, ∞1913 Helene Storm; †Copenhagen 2 I 1954), Danish novelist and short-story writer. Apprentice to a book-binder at Aarhus, he was an eager socialist agitator. His novels contain faithful and reliable descriptions of Jutland peasants and fishermen, with whose milieu and way of thinking he is thoroughly familiar.

NOVELS: Under Kampen (2 vols, 1907–08); Folket ved Havet (1908); Lykkebarnet (2 vols, 1911–12); Hjemlig Jord (1914); Foran Livets Port (1916); Lyset (1918); De Levendes Land (1920); Søkongen (3 vols, 1926–30; The Sea King, tr.

E. Björkman, 1928); En Kvindes Kamp (2 vols, 1938); En Børneflokk vokser op (1949); På Vej mod Tiden (1952).—SHORT STORIES: Øde Egne (1906); Af Jordens Slægt (1910, 1945); Savn (1921); Fra Hjertets Krinkelkroge (1932); Mange Slags Folk (1943).

R. Gandrup, H. S. (1955).

E.B.

Sōin, pseud. of NISHIYAMA TOYOKAZU (*Yatsushiro, Higo 1605; †Osaka 5 V 1682), Japanese poet. One of the predecessors of Bashō* in haiku and haikai poetry, he broke away from the style of Matsunaga* Teitoku and started a new school (called the Danrin school), using a free and loose style and a wide vocabulary, though apt to descend into vulgarity.

Sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, An Anthology of Haiku (1932); R. H. Blyth, A History of Haiku, I (1963). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Sōkan, pseud. of SHINA NORISHIGE, also known as YAMAZAKI SŌKAN (*Ōmi 1465; †7 XI 1553), Japanese haiku poet. A Buddhist hermit, Sōkan was the first to develop the opening poems (hokku) of linked-verse sequences into the independent form later called haiku. His poems are mostly witty and humorous.

Shinsen inu tsukuba shū (c. 1539; discussion in B. Lewin, Japanische Chrestomathie, 1965); sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, An Anthology of Haiku (1932); R. H. Blyth, A History of Haiku, I (1963). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Sokolow, NAHUM (*Wyszogrod nr Płock 10 I 1859; †London 18 V 1936), Hebrew critic and biographer. As a boy of ten, he was already famous as a great Talmudist, and in his 'teens he wrote articles in several languages. He compiled an English grammar in Hebrew for Jewish immigrants to America. His first book was Sinat Olam le-Am Olam (1878). He contributed frequently to all the important Hebrew and Jewish periodicals all over the world. A noted publicist and journalist, he wrote many books, but his masterpiece is Ishim, portraits of Hebrew writers and national leaders (3 vols, 1935; new ed., 3 vols, 1958–61). He also edited the literary journals Ha-Asif, Ha-Zefirah, Ha-Olam and Sefer Hashanah, and a bibliographical dictionary of Hebrew writers. S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Soler, FREDERIC (*Barcelona 1839; †ibid. 1895), Catalan dramatist. Under the pseudonym SERAFÍ PITARRA, he started writing as a hobby, in the tradition of the popular theatre, parodies of Romantic drama, in which he mocked the group of poets of the Jocs Florals and used, in opposition to their archaizing language, the dialect of the Barcelonense common people. Their success made him take up writing as a profession. He soon sensed the great demand, from the rising Catalan bourgeoisie, for a 'cultural' theatre in its own language and wrote Les joies de la Roser (1866). The play's success was decisive: the anti-Romantic parodist Serafi Pitarra was transformed into the serious dramatist Frederic Soler. For over 25 years, until the advent of Guimerà*, he monopolized the Catalan theatre with many typically Romantic historical dramas and comedies, thus becoming the father of modern Catalan bourgeois theatre and one of the most representative figures of that conservative Renaixença he had so wittily mocked.

Teatre selecte (1954).

J.L.M.

Solger, KARL WILHELM FERDINAND (*Schwedt 28 XI 1780; †Berlin 25 X 1819), German philosopher, influenced by Spinoza*, Schelling*, the mystics and Fichte; he became Professor of philosophy, Berlin (1811), specializing in aesthetics. His critical powers were recognized by Goethe*, and his ideas influenced the Romantics. His concept of irony is still relevant today.

Erwin, vier Gespräche über das Schöne und die Kunst (1815); Philosophische Gespräche (1817); Nachgelassene Schriften und Briefwechsel (ed. L. Tieck and F. von Raumer, 2 vols, 1826); Vorlesungen über die Ästhetik (ed. K. W. L. Heyse, 1829); Briefwechsel mit L. Tieck (ed. P. Matenko, New York, 1933).

J. Heller, S.s Philosophie der ironischen Dialektik (1928); M. Boucher, S., esthétique et philosophie de la présence (1934); R. Wildbolz, Der philosophische Dialog als literarisches Kunstwerk (1952).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Solger, REINHOLD ERNST FRIEDRICH KARL (*Stettin 17 VII 1817; ∞19 II 1848 Adèle Marie Bémère; †Washington 11 I 1866), distinguished German-American author. He also took a prominent part in Republican politics under Lincoln.

Anton in Amerika (novel; 1862; ed. E. Ebermayer, 1928).—VARIOUS: The States System of Europe (ed. P. R. Willans, 1854); Memorial of the Schleswig-Holstein Question (1862).

A. E. Zucker in Dictionary of American Biography, XVII (1935).

E.R.

Solinus, GAIUS JULIUS, 3rd-century Latin encyclopaedist, whose Collectanea rerum memorabilium is a compilation of geographical information from Pliny's* Natural History and from Pomponius Mela*. Although an unprincipled plagiarist, Solinus was popular in the Middle Ages for his brevity.

Ed. T. Mommsen (2nd ed. 1895; repr. 1958); C. Salmasius, Exercitationes Pliniana in C. J. Solini Polyhistora (1629; often repr., last at Leipzig, 1777; still of value).—The Excellent and Pleasant Worke of C. J. Solinus (tr. A. Golding, 1587; facs. ed. intro. G. Kish, 1955).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Solís, ANTONIO DE (*Alcalá de Henares 1610; †Madrid 19 IV 1686), Spanish poet, dramatist and historian. He studied at Salamanca and later became a secretary to the Count of Oropesa. He took Orders when he was 56. His poetry is minor: imitations of Góngora*, burlesque fables, occasional verses. He wrote 12 full-length plays and a number of interludes; his dramatic talent was considerable, though not of the first rank. His history of the conquest of Mexico is more famous for its prose style than for any other quality.

Plays in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLVII; Historia de la conquista de México (ibid., XXVIII; tr. T. Townsend, 1724); Amor y obligación (ed. E. Juliá Martínez, 1930); Varias poesías sagradas y profanas (ed. M. Sánchez Regueira, 1968).

L. Arocena, A. de S. Cronista indiano (1963).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Šoljan, ANTUN (*Belgrade 1 XII 1932), Croatian novelist, prose writer, poet and critic. One of the foremost figures of the Zagreb middle generation, Šoljan graduated in English and German and has translated widely from these languages. His own poetry is close to that of Slamnig* and Mihalić* but more personal, more emotionally involved and less tinged with irony. His prose is in the modern American mould, written in simplified, colloquial language, modernist in technique and preoccupied with the theme of the inner life of the individual contrasted with the demands and contradictions of modern society. He writes mainly of the restlessness and ennui of the young post-war generation but he can also produce fine lyrical prose full of atmosphere and evocative association. He is a regular critical reviewer of new books, and has been an editor of the journals Medjutim, Krugovi and Književnik.

VERSE: Na rubu svijeta (1956); Izvan fokusa (1957); Garlić za čas kratiti (1965); Gazela i durge pjesme (1970).—NOVELS: Izadajice (1961, 1963); Kratki izlet (1965).—STORIES: Specijalni izaslanici (1957); Deset kratkih priča za moju generaciju (1966).—ESSAYS: Književnost i publika (1961); Trogodišnja kronika poezije srpske i hrvatske (1967).—ANTHOLOGIES: Američka lirika (with Slamnig; 1952); Suvremena engleska poezija (with idem; 1956); 100 najvećih djela svjetske književnosti (1962); Antologija hrvatske poezije (with N. Miličević; 1966); Antologija hrvatske poezije XX stoljeća (with S. Mihalić and J. Pupčić; 1966); 100 odbranih novela svjetske književnosti (1967); 100 najljepših svjetskih bajki (1969).

B.J.

Sollogub (SOLLOHUB), COUNT VLADIMIR ALEXANDROVICH (*St Petersburg 8 VIII 1813; †Homburg 5 VII 1882), Russian author of narratives, vaudevilles and valuable literary reminiscences. His Tarantas (1845; Eng. tr. F. von Rosenstrauch, 1850), partly modelled on Gogol's* Dead Souls, was a great success. So was his satirical comedy Chinovnik (1856).

Sochineniya (5 vols, 1855–56); Vospominaniya (1887); Sobachka (1933). J.L.

Sologub, FÉDOR, pseud. of FÉDOR KUZ'MICH TETERNIKOV (*St Petersburg 1863; †ibid. 1927), Russian poet, playwright and novelist of the decadent-Symbolist school. His mother was a servant, but he obtained some education and became a teacher in a provincial town the atmosphere of which he rendered in his two early novels, Tyazhëlye sny (1896) and Melkiy bes (1907), as well as in a number of his stories. A perfect craftsman in poetry and prose, Sologub was essentially a gloomy neo-Romantic decadent who rejected the visible world as ugly and vulgar, always opposing it to the world of beauty of man's imagination. Sologub's Manichaean aversion to reality, combined with a somewhat perverted eroticism, took the shape of a morbid aesthetic fantasy in his trilogy in prose, Tvorimaya legenda, whose hero Trirodov is both a satanist and a modern Prospero. After the Revolution he became an internal emigré and, judging by his last novel, Zaklinatel'nitsa zmey (1921), lost much of his former creative power.

Sobranie sochineniy (19 vols, 1913–14).—The Sweet-Scented Name (ed. S. Graham, 1915); The Old House and Other Tales (tr. J. Cournos, 1915); The Created Legend (tr. idem, 1916); Little Tales (tr. idem, 1917); The Little Demon (tr. idem and R. Aldington, 1916).

Y. M. Steklov, O tvorchestve Sologuba (1908); A. A. Izmailov, Literaturny Olimp (1911). J.L.

Solomon ben Isaac: see Rashi.

Solomos, DIONYSIOS (*Zante IV 1798; †Corfu 21 II 1857), Greek poet. Son of an Italianate Count and a Greek servant-girl, he was educated in Italy (1808–18) and wrote his earliest poems in Italian. On returning to Zante he was persuaded by Spyridon Trikoupi (1788–1873) to write in the spoken tongue of Greece (1822). His patriotic Ymnos eis tin eleftherian ('Hymn to Liberty') followed in 1823 and a long ode on the death of Byron* in 1824–25. On his migration to Corfu (1828) his patriotic fervour gave place to an attempt to express a religious vision of life in which the leading idea is that spiritual enlightenment and inner freedom are achieved only through a process of self-surrender which is likened to death. At the same time, under the influence of German writers like Schiller*, he sought to deepen his understanding of poetic form. The poetry in which he tried to express his mature thought consists of a number of unfinished works. The finest of these, Eleftheroi poliorkimenoí, was modelled three times over during a period of 20 years (up till 1844) and exists only in fragments.

His dramatic power is displayed in the also fragmentary Lambros, partly published in 1833; and his lyrical gift in Kritikos (1833). In the end his passion for perfection of form and expression, combined with habitual intemperance, proved too much for him; and in his last years he wrote little but Italian prose summaries of ideal poems which he never composed. Only Porfyrras (1849), which was once complete, deserves mention for the symbolism and music of individual lines.

Solomos was the first great poet of modern Greece. Combining with his studies in Italian literature an increasing love for and knowledge of Greek folk-poetry and Cretan Renaissance literature, he possessed also a musical ear and a lyrical fancy of the first order. He established the demotic as the poetic language of modern Greece; and the little which he left has enormously influenced Greek poetry from his own day to ours.

VERSE: Ta evriskomena (ed. I. Polyas, 1859); Ta Italika poiemata (ed. with Greek tr. G. Kalogouros, 1921); Gynaika tis Zakynthos (ed. L. Politis, 1944); Apanta, A: Poiemata (ed. idem, 1948).—LETTERS: Grammata tou Solomou kai tis miteras tou (ed. L. Politis in Nea Estia, XXIX–XXX, 1941); Anekdotika keimena tou Solomou (ed. idem in Anglo-Hellenike Epitheoresis, IV, 1949).—Apanta, B: Italika (poiemata kai peza) (ed. L. Politis, 1955).

Gyro sto Solomo (essays by various hands; 2 vols, 1925–27); Ph. Michalopoulos, D. S. (1931); N. Tomadakis, Vivliografia Dionysiou Solomou (1934); R. Jenkins, D. S. (1940); P. Sherrard, The Marble Threshing-Floor (1956); L. Politis, Gyro sto Solomo (1958). R.J.H.J. (P.O.A.S.)

Solon, Athenian poet and statesman (7th century B.C.). The poems, some in elegiacs, some in iambs, of the great reformer and legislator are intimately bound up with his political life. In the longest extant poem, Solon broods on the true blessings of life and the relationship of gods to men.

J. M. Edmonds, Elegy and Iambus, I (1931; with tr.); T. Hudson-Williams, Early Greek Elegy (1926; with comm.).—I. Linforth, S. the Athenian (1919); C. M. Bowra, Early Greek Elegists (1938); W. Jaeger, Paideia, I (4th ed. 1959). J.T.H.

Solovyëv, EVGENY ANDREYEVICH, also wrote under the pseud. ANDREYEVICH (*1863; †1905), Russian critic and literary historian with a sociological approach. Besides some articles and literary monographs (on Belinsky*, Herzen*, Gorky*, Goncharov*, Turgenyev*, Chekhov*, Tolstoy*), his most valuable book is Opyt filosofii russkoy literatury (1905; 2nd ed. 1922), which still deserves to be recommended to any serious student of the subject. J.L.

Solovyëv, SERGEY MIKHAYLOVICH (*Moscow 5 V

1820; ibid. 4 X 1879), Russian historian, father of the philosopher and poet Vladimir Solovyev*.

Istoriya Rossii s drevneyshikh vremën (29 vols, 1851–79, another vol. 1882); Kurs russkoy istorii (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1898).

P. V. Bezobrazov, S. M. S. (1894); N. L. Rubinstein, Russkaya istoriografiya (1941). J.L.

Solovyev, VLADIMIR ALEXANDROVICH (*1907), Soviet playwright. His first play, Lichnaya zhizn', appeared in 1934. He came into his own, though, during the Second World War when his two patriotic historical plays, one about Kutuzov, Fel'dmarshal Kutuzov (1940), and the other about Ivan* the Terrible, Velikiy Gosudar' (1945), won two consecutive Stalin prizes.

Pyesy (1950).

J.L.

Solovyev, VLADIMIR SERGEYEVICH (*Moscow 16 I 1853; †nr Moscow 31 VII 1900), Russian philosopher and poet, strongly idealistic and with mystical propensities. Influenced by Western philosophy, Christian thought and certain gnostic elements, he tried to reconcile philosophic, scientific and religious thought in an organic synthesis which would 'bring all elements of human existence—individual and social—into the right relation with the ultimate principle of all life, and through it and in it also to a harmonious relation with each other'. He first became a lecturer in philosophy at Moscow University, but in 1877 he left for St Petersburg where he lectured until 1881. Suspended for his liberal views, he continued his activities as a free-lance philosopher, poet and pamphleteer. He was moreover a champion of the reunion of the Churches to which effect he wrote La Russie et l'Eglise universelle (1889). He can be considered a link between Dostoyevsky* and the Russian modernists. Thinkers such as Berdyayev*, Bulgakov* and others were profoundly affected by Solovyev's thought. And as for modern Russian poetry, both Bely* and Blok* bear the stamp of Solovyev's visionary nature.

Stikhotvoreniya (1891; 1921); Pis'ma (4 vols, 1908–11); Sobranie sochineniy (10 vols, 1911–14).—Stikhotvoreniya (1902).—The Justification of the Good (tr. N. Duddington, 1915); War, Progress and History (tr. A. Bakshy, 1915); Plato (tr. R. Gill, 1935); Godmanhood (tr. P. Zouboff, 1944); The Meaning of Love (tr. J. Marshal, 1946); Russia and the Universal Church (tr. H. Rees, 1948); A Solovyev Anthology (tr. N. Duddington, 1950).

E. L. Radlov, V. S. (1913); E. Trubetskoy, Mirosozertsanie Solovyeva (1913); d'Herbigny, V. S. (1918; 1934); G. Sacke, Solowjews Geschichtsphilosophie (1929); A. Kozhevnikov, Die Geschichtsphilosophie W. Solowjews (1930); D. Stremoukhov, V. Soloviev et son œuvre messianique (1935); N. M. Zernov, Three Russian Prophets (1944); F. Muckermann, W. S. (1945); V. V. Zen'kovsky, Istoriya russkoy filosofii (1948); K. V. Mochul'sky, V. S. (1951). J.L.

Solzhenitsyn, ALEXANDER ISAYEVICH (*1918), Soviet author who, in 1945, was arrested for his criticism of Stalin and spent years in labour camps until his release after Stalin's death. His documentary narrative, Odin den' v zhizni Ivana Denisovicha (One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich, tr. R. Parker and R. Hingley, 1963), describes his personal suffering in one such camp. His next two documentary novels, V krug pervom (The First Circle, tr. M. Guybon, 1968) and Rakovy korpus (Cancer Ward, tr. N. Bethell and D. Burg, 1968) are also based on personal experiences. The first is a description of a labour camp for specialist scientists who work under strict supervision, but whose ordeals are slightly milder than those of the ordinary prisoners—like the ordeals in the first circle of Dante's* Inferno which gives the novel its name; it abounds in fine portraits and also in critical passages, including a satirical sketch of Stalin. The second novel is a magnificent account of the author's stay as a cancer patient in a town in Russian Asia. Neither of these two novels was published in Russia, but both were printed in Milan and translated into several languages. His latest novel Av gust chetyrnadtsatogo ('August 1914', Pt 1) was also banned in the Soviet Union and appeared abroad (Paris, 1971). It deals with the inefficiency of the Tsarist army command and the first Russian defeat in East Prussia. Solzhenitsyn, winner of the Nobel prize (1970), now enjoys international fame as a representative of Russian realism at its best.

Dva rasskaza (1963).—For the Good of the Cause (tr. D. Floyd and M. Hayward, 1964); August 1914 (tr. M. Glenny, 1972). J.L.

Somaize, ANTOINE BAUDEAU DE (fl. 1660), French dramatist and wit, long considered as a source-historian of the Précieuses. His two Dictionnaires describe précieuses personalities and list their favourite expressions. His works, contemporary with Molière's* Précieuses Ridicules, are now seen to contain much exaggeration and parody.

Le Grand Dictionnaire des Précieuses (1660; 1661); Les Véritables Précieuses (1660; comedy).—Œuvres (ed. C. L. Livet, 2 vols, 1856).

R. Bray, La préciosité et les précieux (1948). G.B.

Somerén, JOHANNES CORNELIS VAN (*Dordrecht 3 VII 1622; †1648 Elisabeth Vervoorn [†1657]; ibid. 12 XII 1676), Dutch poet, one of the foremost of the Dordrecht circle round Cats*. He wrote four dramas in Cats' manner. His poetry was collected in Uytspanning der Vernuft (1660).

H. Smilde, Jacob Cats in Dordrecht (1938).

A.M.B.W.

Somerville, EDITH (ANNA) ÆNONE (*Corfu 2 V 1858; †Castle Townshend, Co. Cork 8 X 1949), Irish novelist. Her earlier pseudonym was 'Geilles Herring'. In 1886 she began collaborating in story-writing with her cousin VIOLET MARTIN (pseud. MARTIN ROSS; *Ross House, Co. Galway 11 VI 1862; †Cork 21 XII 1915), after whose death she retained their joint pseudonym of 'Somerville and Ross'. Of their numerous works, the most popular was Some Experiences of an Irish R.M. (1899); the best was The Real Charlotte (1894).

SOMERVILLE AND ROSS: An Irish Cousin (1889); Naboth's Vineyard (1891); Through Connemara in a Governess Cart (1893); The Silver Fox (1897); All on the Irish Shore (1903); Some Irish Yesterdays (1906); Further Experiences of an Irish R.M. (1908).

Maurice Collis, S. and R. (1968); Violet Powell, The Irish Cousins (1970). R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Somerville or Somerville, WILLIAM (*Colwich, Staffs 2 IX 1675; ∞1708 Mary Bethell; †Edstone 17 VII 1742), English poet whose works on country joys include a long blank-verse treatise on hunting with loyal and Oriental digressions.

R.M.H.

The Two Springs. A Fable (1725); The Chace, a Poem (1735); Hobbinol, or the Rural Games (1740); Field Sports (1742); The Wicker Chair, a Burlesque Poem (1802).—Poetical Works (2 vols, 1766).

S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets, III (1781); E. Sanford, Life (pref. to Works, 1819).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Somner, WILLIAM (~Canterbury 5 XI 1598; ∞3 times; †ibid. 30 III 1669), English historian, medievalist and Anglo-Saxon scholar. Somner was one of the great 17th-century founders of historiography.

The Antiquities of Canterbury (1640; 1703); A Treatise of the Roman Ports and Forts in Kent (ed. J. Brome, with notes by E. Gibson and Life by W. Kennett, 1693); A Treatise of Gavelkind (1660; 1726, with Kennett's Life).—Dictionarium Saxonico-Latino-Anglicum (1659; ed. with adds T. Benson et al., 1701).

D. Douglas, English Scholars (2nd ed. 1951).

B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Somoza Muñoz, José (*Piedrahita, Ávila 20 X 1781; †ibid. 4 X 1852), Spanish poet and essayist; friend of the famous Duchess of Alba, of Meléndez* Valdés, Quintana* and Jovellanos*. In 1829 he retired to his family castle. He wrote some very fine sonnets in pre-Romantic style and excellent prose descriptions of 18th-century Spain, many of them masterpieces of their kind.

Obras en prosa y verso (ed. J. R. Lomba, 1904); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXVII.

E. Ochoa, Apuntes para una biblioteca de escritores españoles contemporáneos (Paris, 1840). R.M.N.

Sønderby, KNUD (*Esbjerg 10 VII 1909; ∞1940 Ingeborg Marie Johansen; †Thy 8 VIII 1966), Danish essayist, novelist and playwright. His first book concerns a young group of sophisticated, promiscuous bourgeois; but behind this anti-sentimental façade they are sensitive and embarrassed. Being a remarkably fine stylist he cultivated the artistic essay, writing some of the finest Danish prose of his generation. Among his plays En Kvinde er overflødig (1942; 'A Woman Too Many', tr. A. I. Roughton in Contemporary Danish Plays, 1955) is particularly outstanding.

NOVELS: Midt i en Jazztid (1931); To Mennesker mødes (1932); En Kvinde er overflødig (1935); De kolde Flammer (1940); Den usynlige Hær (1945).—ESSAYS: Grønlandsk Sommer (1941); Forsvundne Somre (1946); Hvidtjørnen (1950); Gensyn med Havet (1958); Samlede Essays (1961); De blå Glimt (1964); De danske Havne (1969); Danmarkskortet (1970).—PLAYS: Krista (1947); Hjertets Renhed (1949); Kvindernes Oprør (1955); Gardin for åbent Vindue (1969).

Tingene. K. S. in memoriam (1966).

E.B.

Šop, NIKOLA (*Jajce 19 VIII 1904), Croatian poet and classical scholar. His earlier works include translations of Latin classics and of poems in Latin by early Croatian poets. His intimate, subjective lyrics, sometimes introducing Jesus as a simple man in everyday life, have great appeal. Among his more recent works are longer 'space poems' describing people living and drifting in space, and dramas which have been successfully broadcast.

Pjesme siromašnog sina (1926); Isus i moja sjena (1934); Tajanstvena prela (1943); Kućice u svemiru (1957; 'Cottages in Space', tr. B. Brusar and W. H. Auden in Encounter, 1969); Astralife (1961); Nedohod (1969).

A. Buttler-Moscon, 'N. Š., ein Dichter aus Bosniens Königstadt' in Neue Ordnung, CLXIX (1944). V.J.

Sophocles (*Athens 497/496; †ibid. 406/405 B.C.), Athenian tragic poet. He wrote 123 plays and won 18 victories at the City Dionysia, the festival at which three tragedians competed annually presenting four plays each. The fourth play was normally a satyr play; papyrus fragments of half a Sophoclean satyr play, Ichneutai, were discovered in 1907. Seven tragedies survive complete and short fragments of many other plays. Sophocles also wrote paeans and elegies, and a prose treatise On the Chorus. He won his first tragic victory in 468 with Triptolemus. Of the extant plays Ajax and Antigone are probably the earliest; Philoctetes (409) and Oedipus Coloneus (produced posthumously in 401) are the latest. Trachiniae and Oedipus Tyrannus may be placed between 435 and 425, and Electra some years later. Sophocles increased the actors in tragedy from two to three and the chorus from twelve to fifteen. All the extant plays are complete in themselves, but Sophocles probably wrote at least one connected trilogy, Telepheia, in his earliest period. He served as general with Pericles in 441/440, and as treasurer of the Athenian empire; he was intimately involved in the cult of the medical god Asclepius and honoured as a hero of the cult after his death. Neither Aeschylus* nor Euripides* played such a prominent part in civic life; Sophocles, who came from a wealthy family, was at home among the leading statesmen and intellectuals of the Athenian enlightenment. By his contemporaries he was judged to be a man of serene temperament, and modern scholars have often held that his work displays a conservative attitude, especially towards religion. His characters rarely express ideas as challenging as those favoured by Euripides, but his plays display a subtle and sometimes sympathetic awareness of new beliefs about man and society. Oracles provide part of the dramatic framework in many of the plays. But the gods almost never speak or interfere directly. Sometimes Sophocles poses a fundamental moral dilemma, as in Antigone where the heroine's principles conflict with the laws of the state, or in Philoctetes which raises sharply a problem of bad means employed for good ends. Such issues, in Sophoclean tragedy, arise directly from the dramatic situation in which he places his leading characters, outstanding and passionate individuals like Oedipus and Electra, who are too proud and high-principled to accept the security which weaker personalities offer them. Sophocles' characters are a little larger than life-size, as Aristotle* said the tragic hero should be, but they are more recognizable as people than those of Aeschylus, and the chorus plays a much less significant part. Sometimes it gives a lyrical commentary on the preceding action, heightening an atmosphere of fear or hope; it may overtly side with the main character (Electra, Ajax) or change sides in the course of the play (Antigone). The structure and outcome of the plays vary considerably. In Antigone, Ajax and Trachiniae the chief character dies long before the end and the remaining action is devoted to the fortunes of characters responsible in some way for the heroine's death. Oedipus Tyrannus slowly reveals the downfall of a great man who dominates the action throughout. In the remaining plays the main characters defeat their enemies before the final outcome but the trials through which they have to pass make the audience fear for their well-being which is assured only after it seemed impossible. Pathos, pessimism, human folly and grandeur, the terrifying network of destiny, and circumstances only imperfectly understood by men, these are the attitudes and material of Sophocles' tragedies. They are works of the highest art, expressed in a poetic style which is refined, deeply moving and perfectly adapted to the thought. Sophocles' dramatic greatness has never been questioned, and in the 20th century he has inspired the work of Cocteau*, Anouilh* and Stravinsky.

EDITIONS: A. C. Pearson (1923); A. Mazon and P. Dain (1955-60; with Fr. tr.); A. C. Pearson, The Fragments of S. (1917; with comm.); D. L. Page, Greek Literary Papyri (1942).—COMMENTARY: R. C. Jebb (1896-1908; with tr.).—TRANSLATIONS: In The Complete Greek Tragedies (ed. R. Lattimore and D. Grene, 1959); G. G. A. Murray (1911-48); E. F. Watling (1947-53).

C. M. Bowra, Sophoclean Tragedy (1944); K. Reinhardt, S. (1948); C. H. Whitman, S. (1951); A. J. A. Waldock, S. the Dramatist (1952); G. M. Kirkwood, A Study of Sophoclean Drama (1958); B. Knox, The Heroic Temper (1963); A. A. Long, Language and Thought in S. (1968); T. B. L. Webster, An Introduction to S. (2nd ed. 1969).

A.A.L.

Sophon (fl. Syracuse, second half 5th century B.C.), Greek mime-writer, whose 'Men's Mimes' and 'Women's Mimes' in rhythmical prose established a literary form for presenting scenes and characters from everyday life. He was widely read in antiquity and much admired by Plato*; his literary influence, though attested for Theocritus*, remains indeterminable.

G. Kaibel, Comicorum Graecorum fragmenta, I (1899; repr. with adds 1958); A. Olivieri, Frammenti della commedia greca, II (2nd ed. 1947; with Ital. comm.); D. L. Page, Greek Literary Papyri, I (3rd ed. 1950).

G. Norwood, Greek Comedy (1931); M. Pinto Colombo, Il mimo di Sofrone e di Senarco (1934); A. S. F. Gow, Theocritus (2nd ed. 1952).

E.W.H.

Sophronius (*Damascus; †638), Patriarch of Jerusalem (634), Byzantine hagiographer, poet and and homilist; friend of John* Moschus whose work he completed and published. He wrote against the Monotheletes, as well as sermons and poetry for Church festivals. The Vita Mariae Aegyptiacae appears to have been wrongly attributed to him. His Vita SS. Cyri et Ioannis survives.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXXXVII. 3 (1860; with Lat. tr.); B. Altaner, Patrologie (Freiburg, 1960).

Th. Nissen, 'Sophronios-Studien' in Byzantinische Zeitschrift, XXXVII (1937) and XXXIX (1939).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Sorbul, MIHAIL, pseud. of M. SMOLSKY (*Botoșani 1885; †Bucharest 1966), Rumanian playwright, author of over 20 plays, the best of which are Letopișeti (1908), a historical play in verse,

Patima roșie (1916), a somewhat sensational drama whose heroine spurns one lover out of wounded pride and shoots another to assert her superiority over him, and Dezertorul (1919), a tragi-comedy of marital honour set in the petit-bourgeois world of the Bucharest periphery, and precariously poised between dignity and farce. The plays are well constructed and theatrically effective. Sorbul also wrote novels, which are negligible.

Teatru (2 vols, intro. Fl. Tornea, 1956).—E. Lovinescu, Critice, III and IV (rev. eds 1927, 1928); T. Vianu, Jurnal (1961). F.J.B.

Sordel(lo) di Goito (fl. c. 1225–70), Provençal troubadour, born near Mantua of an impoverished noble Italian family. Compromised by his abduction of Countess Cunizza da Romano, the wife of his own overlord, the Duke of San Bonifazio, he fled to Treviso, then to Spain and Portugal. In Provence he won the favour of Blacatz and of Barral de Baux, the Lords of Marseilles; finally of Charles of Anjou, whom he followed in 1266 to Italy and who granted him a fief in the Abruzzi. His poetry is as varied as his career. His cansos d'amor have little of the originality of his sirventes and of the famous, impassioned and deeply moving planh on the death of Blacatz, whom the poet reckons amongst the bravest hearts. Dante* made Sordel the immortal symbol of Italian patriotism (Purg., 6).

C. De Lollis, Vita e poesie di S. di G. (1896; 2nd ed. 1969); G. Bertoni, 'Nuove rime di S. di G.' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XXXVIII (1901) and I trovatori d'Italia (1915); M. Boni, S., Le poesie (1954).

G. Bertoni and A. Jeanroy, 'Un duel poétique au XIIIe siècle' in Annales du Midi, XXVIII (1916); J. Salvat, 'S., troubadour italien du XIIIe siècle' and 'L'ort dels trobaires, Le "Planh" de S.' in Le Gai Saber, CCXCVII (1961).

R.R.B. (K.R.)

Sorel, CHARLES, SIEUR DE SOUVIGNY (*Paris c. 1600; †ibid. 77 III 1674), French novelist, distinguished by the humorous realism of his work, which easily turned to parody. His Histoire comique de Francion is a picaresque novel, describing often fantastic adventures in low society. His Berger extravagant (1627) parodies d'Urfé's* L'Astrée; in this early 'burlesque' work a young Parisian merchant, novel-sated and love-sick, turns shepherd on the banks of the real Seine. The influence of Don Quixote is perceptible.

La vraie histoire comique de Francion (1623; ed. E. Roy, 4 vols, 1924–31).

E. Roy, C. S. (1891); A. Adam, Histoire de la littérature française au XVIIe siècle, I (1949); F. E. Sutcliffe, Le réalisme de C. S. (1965).

G.B.

Sorel, GEORGES (*Cherbourg 2 XI 1847; †Boulogne-sur-Seine 30 VIII 1922), French political writer. An engineer who devoted all his intellectual strength to extolling the working class in contrast to the decadent bourgeoisie, Sorel was at first Marxist, but later split away from the parties of the Left which he condemned for their 'reformism' and preached revolutionary violence. His Réflexions sur la violence (1908; Eng. tr. T. E. Hulme, 1916; with intro. by E. A. Shils, 1950) had some influence upon political extremists, notably Mussolini*, who recognized Sorel as his master, and even Lenin*.

La ruine du monde antique (1898); Introduction à l'économie moderne (1903); Les illusions du progrès (1908); La décomposition du Marxisme (1908; tr. in I. L. Horowitz, Radicalism and Revolt Against Reason, 1961); Matériaux pour une théorie du prolétariat (1919).

G. Pirou, G. S. (1927); P. Lasserre, G. S.: théoricien de l'impérialisme (1928); R. Humphrey, G. S. (1951); P. Andreu, Notre maître Monsieur S. (1953); M. Curtis, Three Against the Third Republic (1959); I. L. Horowitz, Radicalism and Revolt Against Reason (1961); G. Goriely, Le pluralisme dramatique de G. S. (1962); J. H. Meisel, The Genesis of G. S. (1966). M.G.

Sørensen, VILLY (*Frederiksberg 13 I 1929), Danish short-story writer and essayist. He studied philosophy and psychology at Copenhagen and Freiburg and is influenced by Andersen*, Kierkegaard*, Nietzsche* and Kafka*—and has written about all of them. He has written three volumes of highly original tales.

SHORT STORIES: Sære Historier (1953; Strange Stories, tr. M. Neiiendam, 1956); Ufarlige Historier (1955); Formynderfortællinger (1964).—ESSAYS: Digiters og Dæmoner (1959); Hverken eller (1961); Nietzsche (1963); Kafkas Digning (1968); Mellem Fortid og Fremtid (1969).

Th. Bredsdorff, Sære Fortællere (1967). E.B.

Sorescu, MARIN (*Bulzești 1936), Rumanian poet. After reading philology at Iași University he joined the staff of the review Luceafărul and then went to work as a script-writer in the film industry. The cynicism, sarcasm and macabre humour of his verse, with its blunt and forthright style, conveys the stark reality of modern life and makes him one of the most original, if controversial, figures in post-war Rumanian poetry.

Singur printre poeți (1964); Poeme (1965); Moartea Ceasului (1966); Tineretea lui Don Quijote (1968); Unde fugim de acasă (1968); Tușiți (1970); O aripă și un picior (1970).—N. Manolescu, 'Cronica literară' in Contemporanul (21 Aug. 1970); G. Călinescu, 'Cronica optimismului', ibid. (23 Oct. 1970). D.J.D.

Sorge, REINHARD JOHANNES (*Berlin-Rixdorf 29 I 1892; †Ablaincourt on the Somme 20 VII 1916), German playwright and poet. Enthusiasm for the philosophy of Nietzsche* and the plays of Strindberg* led him, aged 19, to write the first drama of German literary EXPRESSIONISM—Der Bettler, eine dramatische Sendung (1912). It was a prototype in its humanistic pathos, use of character types, loose structure. He believed in the poet as prophet and the stage as pulpit. Mystic visions led in 1913 to his conversion to Catholicism. The war and his death cut short his preparation for the priesthood and experiments in religious drama.

Werke (3 vols, 1962–67).

M. Rockenbach, R. J. S. (1923); S. M. Sorge, R. J. S., Unser Weg (1927); H. Grossrieder, S.s. 'Bettler' (1939); E. Kawa, R. J. S. (1949); W. Hüllen, 'Der Expressionismus und R. J. S.' in Begegnung, V (1950). K.P.

Sōseki: see Natsume SŌSEKI.

Soto de Rojas, PEDRO (*Granada 1585; †ibid. 1658), Spanish poet. He was a canon at Granada cathedral. He admired Góngora*, under whose influence he wrote a poem called 'Paradise shut to the many, gardens open to the few' (1652). His earlier works are less bizarre. He was the most talented of Góngora's imitators.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLII; G. Diego, Antología poética en honor de Góngora (1927); Obras (ed. A. Gallego Morell, 1950).

A. Gallego Morell, P. S. de R. (1948); E. Orozco Díaz, Introducción a un poema barroco granadino (De las 'Soledades' gongorinas al 'Paraiso' de S. de R.) (1955). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Souda Lexicon: see Suidas.

Soupault, PHILIPPE (*Chaville 2 VIII 1897), French poet and novelist. Soupault was one of the founders of SURREALISM. In collaboration with Breton* he wrote Les champs magnétiques (1920), and, later, on his own, a number of poems, influenced by Apollinaire*, in which he made use of a technique based on dream-fantasy. His novels, which are traditional in form, describe the social and moral disintegration of the years 1920–30.

VERSE: Westwego (1922); Géorgia (1924); Poésies complètes (1937).—NOVELS: Les frères Durandau (1924); Le grand homme (1929).—ESSAYS: Labiche (1946); Lautréamont (1946).

H. J. Dupuy, P. S. (1957). M.G.; J.P.R.

Souster, RAYMOND (*Toronto, Ontario 15 I 1921; ∞1947 Rosalia Lena Geralde), Canadian poet and editor, whose best work is characterized by epigrammatic and often ironic observations on aspects of urban life.

Dream That Is Dying (1945); City Hall Street (1951); Walking Death (1954); Local Pride (1962); Colour of the Times (1964).

L. Dudek, 'Groundhog among the stars' in Canad. Lit., XXII (1964). R.Su.

Soutar, WILLIAM (*Perth 28 IV 1898; †ibid. 15 X 1943), Scottish poet. He joined the Navy in 1916, but was at Edinburgh University 1919–23. Spinal trouble, the result of war-time food poisoning, confined him to bed for the rest of his life. He wrote extensively in Scots and English. His most characteristic poems are those in Scots for children; they combine simple rhythm, a full-blooded dialect and quaint humour.

Seeds in the Wind (1933; rev. 1943); The Solitary Way (1934); Brief Words (1935); Poems in Scots (1935); A Handful of Earth (1936); Riddles in Scots (1937); In the Time of Tyrants (1939); But the Earth Abideth (1943); The Expectant Silence (1944).—Collected Poems (ed. H. MacDiarmid, 1948); Poems in Scots and English (ed. W. R. Aitken, 1961).—Diaries of a Dying Man (ed. A. Scott, 1954).

A. Scott, Still Life (1958).

G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

South, ROBERT (*London 4 IX 1634; †ibid. 8 VI 1716), English preacher. Less urbane than Tillotson*, South in his 'witty' preaching smoothes away nevertheless much of the turgid 'wit' of his Renaissance predecessors.

W. F. Mitchell, English Pulpit Oratory (1932); I. Simon, Three Restoration Divines (1967); James Sutherland, English Literature of the Late 17th Century (1969). G.K.H.

Southern, TERRY (*Alvarado, Texas I V 1928; ∞1958 Carol Kaufman), American novelist. Best known for his parody of a pornographic novel Candy (1958), and his effective screenplay Dr Strangelove (1963). His black comedy shows a professional glibness and lack of depth, to borrow his own phrase, mere Flash and Filigree (1958).

FICTION: The Magic Christian (1959).—SCREENPLAYS: The Loved One (1963; with Christopher Isherwood); Easy Rider (1968); End of the Road (1968).—Writers in Revolt (anthol.; ed., with Alexander Trocchi; 1960). G.A.K.

Southerne, THOMAS (*Oxmanstown, Dublin 1660; †London 26 V 1746), Irish dramatist. He was educated at Dublin and Oxford Universities; studied law in London, where he met Dryden*, who encouraged him and wrote the prologue for his first play. Among his plays are The Fatal Marriage (1694) and Oronoko (1696), adapted from the novel by Mrs Aphra Behn*. These are generally shallow, though they were very successful in their day.

Plays (3 vols, 1774).—J. W. Dodds, T. S.: Dramatist (1933). E.T.W.

Southey, ROBERT (*Bristol 12 VIII 1774; ∞1795 Edith Fricker, ∞1839 Caroline Bowles; †Keswick 21 III 1843), English poet and prose-writer who, after sharing Coleridge's* early Pantisocratic ardours at Oxford, settled at Greta Hall, Keswick, to a life of literary hard labour. In 1813 he was made poet laureate. A daring metrical experimenter in his day, he wrote long narrative poems in unrhymed or intricately-rhymed stanzas and in blank verse. His laureate Vision of Judgement (1821) provoked Byron's* satire of the same title.

Poetical Works (coll. by himself; 10 vols, 1837–38).—NARRATIVE VERSE: Thalaba the Destroyer (2 vols, 1801); Madoc (2 vols, 1805); Curse of Kehama (1810).—PROSE: Letters from England: by Don Manuel Alvarez Espriella (3 vols, 1807); Life of Nelson (2 vols, 1813); Life and Correspondence (ed. C. Southey, 6 vols, 1849–50); New Letters of S. (ed. K. Curry, 2 vols, 1965).

E. Dowden, S. (1874); J. Simmons, S. (1945); G. D. Carnall, S. and His Age (1960).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Southwell, ROBERT (*1561; †Tyburn 1595), English poet. Studying abroad, Southwell became a Jesuit (1578) and a priest (1584). After practising as a priest in England (1586–92), he was executed as a traitor. Southwell's devotional prose is somewhat mannered, but the simple diction and bold conceits of his best poetry anticipate the Metaphysical style, especially that of Crashaw*.

Saint Peters Complaynt (1595); Mæoniæ (1595); A Foure-Fould Meditation of the foure last things (1606; ed. C. Edmonds, 1895); S. Peters Complaint and Saint Mary Magdalens Funerall Teares (St. Omer, 1616).—Poetical Works (ed. W. B. Turnbull, 1856); Complete Poems (ed. A. B. Grosart, 1872); The Book of R. S. (ed. C. M. Hood, 1926); The Poems of R. S. (ed. J. H. Macdonald and N. P. Brown, 1967).—PROSE: Marie Magdalens funerall teares (1594); The Triumphs over Death (1595); An Humble Supplication to Her Majestie (1595); A short Rule of Good Life (?London, 1598); An Epistle of Comfort (Paris, ?1604).—Prose Works (ed. W. J. Walter, 1828).

A. Possoz, Vie du Père S. (1866); M. Praz, 'R. S.'s St Peter's Complaint and its Italian source' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XIX (1924); R. A. Morton, An Appreciation of R. S. (1929); P. Janelle, R. S. the Writer (Clermont-Ferrand, 1935); C. Devlin, The Life of R. S., Poet and Martyr (1956). W.A.A.

Sova, ANTONÍN (*Pacov 26 II 1864; †ibid. 16 VIII 1928), Czech poet and novelist. One of the foremost Czech poets of the early 20th century, Sova replaced the rhetorical style of Vrchlický* and Čech* by lyrical poetry of a subtler texture, using both free and stanzaic metrical structures to convey the impressions of an intense personal experience. His contribution to the development of the Czech poetic language was considerable.

Spisy (20 vols, 1936–38; crit. ed. 1959 ff.).

L. N. Zvěřina, A. S., studie jeho básnického vývoje (1919); F. X. Šalda in Duše a dílo (1913). R.A.

Sower, CHRISTOPH(ER): see Sauer, CHRISTOPH.

Soya, CARL ERIK MARTIN (*Copenhagen 30 X 1896; ∞1919 Esther Sættem, ∞1925 Agnes Augusta Zaar), Danish playwright, novelist and short-story writer. He is a prolific and versatile writer of witty short stories, of satirical plays, and of one important novel, Min Farmors Hus (1943; Grandmother's House, tr. C. Hansen, 1966). His best achievement is the dramatic trilogy which he wrote between 1940 and 1944, in which, like Ibsen*, he poses the problems without solving them. But it is his technique and his dialogue which are fascinating, very rarely his ideas.

PLAYS: Parasitterne (1929); Hvem er jeg? (1932); Den leende Jomfru (1934); Lord Nelson lægger Figenbladet (1934); Umbabumba (1935); Chas (1938); Brudstykker af et Mønster (1940); To Traade (1943; 'Two Threads', tr. P. N. Furbank and E. Bredsdorff in Contemporary Danish Plays, 1955); 30 Aars Henstand (1944); Trois nocturnes (1946); Efter (1947); Frit Valg (1948); Løve med korset (1950; 'Lion With Corset', tr. B. Knudsen in Five Modern Scandinavian Plays, 1971); I den lyse Nat (1956); Petersen i Dødsriget (1957); Vraggods (1965); Brevet—et Levnedsløb (1966); To Komedier (1966); Familien Kristensen (1970).—NOVELS: En Gæst (1941); Syften (3 vols, 1953–54; Seventeen, tr. C. Malmberg, 1961).—SHORT STORIES: Ganske almindelige Mennesker (1930); Jeg kunde nemt ta' 100 Kroner (1931); Smaa venlige Smaafisk (1940); Hvis Tilværelsen keder Dem (1952); Blodrødt og Blegdrødt (1955); Fra mit Spejlkabinet (1956); Vintergækken (1956); Trylledøren (1957); Tilgnet Boccaccio (1959); Potteskår (1970).

O. Lundbo, S. (1944); Festskrift til S. (1946); N. B. Wamberg, S. (1966). E.B.

Soyinka, WOLE (*Abeokuta, Nigeria, 13 VII 1934), Nigerian dramatist, poet and novelist. Soyinka graduated from University College, Ibadan, and Leeds University. He worked with the Royal Court Theatre, returned to Nigeria in 1960, formed two theatre groups, was imprisoned during the civil war, and is now Director of drama, Ibadan University.

An inventive and exuberant writer, his African themes and adaptations of Yoruba speech have brought him world-wide recognition as a dramatist who owes as much to African as to European traditions in his analysis of man's relationship with his fellows, the past, and life and death, as in The Road and the poem Idanre. Soyinka's earnest social commitment has shown both in his actions and in his plays, poems, and the angry, but sprawling, novel The Interpreters (1965).

PLAYS: Three Plays (1963); Five Plays (1964); The Road (1965); Kongi's Harvest (1967); Madmen and Specialists (1971).—Idanre and Other Poems (1967); The Forest of a Thousand Daemons (1968; tr. of D. O. Fagunwa's* novel Ogboju oḍe ninu igbo irumale, 1938). A.R.

Sozomenus, SALAMANES HERMEIAS (*Bethelia nr Gaza; fl. first half 5th century), Greek historian, advocate in Constantinople. He wrote two works on Church history, of which only the second, treating events from 324 to 425, survives. Largely dependent on Socrates* Scholasticus, Sozomenus is less critical and gives much space to anecdote and legend.

The Ecclesiastical History of S. (ed. R. Hussey and J. Barrow, 3 vols, 1860); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXVII (1859; with Lat. tr.).—Tr. C. D. Hartranft (1891).

G. Schoo, Die Quellen des Kirchenhistorikers S. (1911). R.B.

Spaak, PAUL (*Brussels 5 VII 1870; ∞1894 Marie Janson; †ibid. 8 V 1936), Belgian dramatist, poet and critic. Love of Flanders pervades all his work. His lyric masterpiece, Kaatje (1908), is a stage transposition of Flemish genre painting.

PLAYS: À Damme en Flandre (1912); Baldus et Josina (1912).—VERSE: Voyages vers mon pays (1907); Poèmes (1937).—CRITICISM: L'histoire littéraire (1902). B.M.W.

Spagnoli, GIOVAN BATTISTA: see Mantovano, BATTISTA.

Spangenberg, CYRIACUS (*Nordhausen 7 VI 1528; †Strasbourg 10 II 1604), German moralist and poet. Lutheran pastor, friend of Luther* and Melancthon*, he wrote moralizing tracts, sermons and chronicles. His hymns and dramas are still read with interest and respect.

Formularbüchlein (1555; ed. H. Rembe, 1897); Christliches Gesangsbüchlein (1568); Mansfeldische Chronica (1572; ed. E. Leers and C. Rühlmann, 2 vols, 1912–13); Von dem Cananeischen Weiblein (play; 1589); Briefwechsel (ed. H. Rembe, 1887).

J. G. Leuckfeld, C. S. (1712); W. Herrmann, 'Die Lutherpredigten des C. S.' in Mansfelder Blätter, XXXIX (1935). D.G.D.

Spark, MURIEL (*Edinburgh 1918; ∞1937 [o/o]), novelist and critic, who writes with a wry wit and a cool detached air. After a number of critical studies—Mary Shelley*, Emily Brontë*, John Masefield*—and editions of the letters of the first two (partly in collaboration with Derek Stanford), the novels began with Memento Mori (1959).

Collected Poems, I (1967).—The Ballad of Peckham Rye (1960); The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie (1961); The Girls of Slender Means (1963); The Public Image (1968).

D. Stanford, M. S. (1963); K. Malkoff, M. S. (1968). W.R.A.

Spedding, JAMES (*Mirehouse, Cumberland 26 VI 1808; †London 9 III 1881), English man of letters whose devoted labours in re-evaluating Bacon's* life and editing his works were described by Carlyle* as the 'hugest and faithfulest bit of literary navy work in this generation'.

Evenings with a Reviewer (an examination of Macaulay's essay on Bacon; with Life by G. S. Venables, 1848); ed., Bacon's Works (7 vols, 1857–59); Bacon's Letters and Life (7 vols, 1861–74).

H. K. Baker, Bacon's Vindication (1939; on J. S.'s Evenings with a Reviewer). R.M.H.

Speed, JOHN (*Farringdon, Cheshire 1552; ∞1582 ?Susanna; †London 28 VII 1629), English historian and cartographer. Speed was brought up as a tailor, but about 1608 began to publish maps of various counties in England and Wales. He was encouraged by Camden*, Cotton* and others of the Society of Antiquaries, of which he became a member, to write The Historie of Great Britaine (1611).

Theatre of the Empire of Great Britaine (maps; 1611); Genealogies recorded in Sacred Scripture (n.d. [1640]). J.B.B.

Spee von Langenfeld, FRIEDRICH (*Kaiserwörth 25 II 1591; †Trier 17 VIII 1635), German poet, entered the Society of Jesus in 1610. He was appointed confessor to persons convicted of witchcraft in the diocese of Würzburg (1627) and in two years had to escort to the stake 200 persons of whose innocence he was convinced. On leaving Würzburg he published anonymously his Cautio Criminalis (1631), the first successful work against the persecution of witches. He is one of the few Jesuit poets of the period who have not left a single drama. His work was lyrical and his Trutznachtigall (pub. 1649), with its sincere mystical piety, its spiritual pastoral game with the 'spouse of Jesus' and its popular and neat, though un-Opitzian, rhythms, has both charm and power. It appealed to Friedrich Schlegel* and Clemens Brentano*.

Cautio criminalis (Ger. tr. J. F. Ritter, 1939); Trutz-Nachtigall (crit. ed. G. O. Arlt, 1936); Göldenes Tugendbuch (1649; crit. ed. A. Weinrich, 1908); Sämliche Schriften (ed. E. Rosenfeld, 3 vols, 1960 ff.).

O. Hölscher, F. S. von L. (1871); H. Cardauns,

F. von S. (1884); J. B. Diel, F. von S. (1901); J. Julian, Dictionary of Hymnology (rev. ed. 1907); J. Schoenberg, Die Metrik S.s (diss. Marburg, 1911); W. Kosch, F. S. (1921); I. Mårtens, 'Die Natur in den Dichtungen S.s' in Euphoriön, XXVI (1925); V. Moser, 'S.s Lautlehre' in Zschr. für dt. Philol., XLVI (1914); A. Heusler, Deutsche Versgeschichte, III (1927); E. Schröder, 'S.s Cautio Criminalis' in Literaturwiss. Jahrb. der Görresgesellschaft, III (1928); H. Zwetsloot, F. von S. und die Hexenprozesse (1954); Eric Jacobsen, Die Metamorphosen der Liebe (1954); P. Reilly, 'Notes on F. S.'s Cautio Criminalis' in Mod. Lang. Review, LI (1956); Emmy Rosenfeld, F. S. von L. (1958) and Neue Studien zur Lyrik F. von S. (1963); J. B. Neveux, 'F. von S. et la société de son temps' in Études Germaniques, XIX (1964). L.W.F.

Spiegel, HAKVIN (*Ronneby 14 VI 1645; †Uppsala 17 IV 1714), Swedish Archbishop, poet and scholar. After travelling abroad, Spiegel was made court preacher in 1671. In 1685 he became Bishop of Skara, in 1691 of Linköping, and in 1711 Archbishop of Sweden. He wrote many hymns and much religious poetry, as well as religious history, and was a well-known philologist.

Guds verk och hwila (1685; religious epic); Thet öppna och tillslutna Paradiset (1705), Thet återvundna Paradiset (1711; both paraphrases of Milton); Glossarium Sveogothicum (1712).—Åtskilliga poetiska skrifter (ed. C. F. Broucman, 1745; incomplete).

H. W. Tottie, S. som kateket och homilet (1890); J. Helander, H. S.'s liv och gärning intill 1693 (1899); B. Olsson, S.'s Guds Werk och Hwila (1963). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Spelman, SIR HENRY (*Congham, Norfolk 1564; ∞14 IV 1590 Eleanor L'Estrange; [London 14 X 1641], English ecclesiastical lawyer, historian, M.P. and antiquary. He was interested particularly in Church history and the history of legal terms.

De non temerandis ecclesiis (1613); Concilia, Decreta, Leges, Constitutiones, in Re Ecclesiarum orbis Britannici (1639; 1664); Of the Law Terms (1684). J.B.B.

Spence, JOSEPH (*Kingsclere 25 IV 1699; †Byfleet 20 VIII 1768), English anecdotist and man of letters. A friend of Pope*, he recorded conversation of him and his circle and left a collection, Anecdotes, used by Johnson*, Malone* and others before its publication in 1820 by John Murray and S. W. Singer simultaneously (Singer's, with a memoir, is the better). R.M.H.

An Essay on Pope's Odyssey: in which some particular Beauties and Blemishes of that work are considered (1726); Polymetis: or an Enquiry concerning the agreement between the Works of the Roman Poets and the Remains of the Antient

Artists (1747).—Observations, Anecdotes and Characters of Books and Men (ed. J. M. Osborn, 2 vols, 1966).

O. Ruffhead, Life of Pope (1769); A. Wright, J. S. A Critical Biography (1950).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Spencer, HERBERT (*Derby 27 IV 1820; †Brighton 8 XII 1903), English philosopher whose main work, A System of Synthetic Philosophy (1862), aimed at co-ordinating in one vast design, animated by a single first principle, the complete knowledge of his age. A railway engineer by early training, with short periods at other professions, Spencer's appointment in 1848 as sub-editor of The Economist gave scope to his real bent. The extreme individualism of his Social Statics (1851) brought him fame that was considerably widened by his Education (1861), advocating the claims of science in schools. In 1860 he issued the programme of his Synthetic Philosophy, the separate works of which, on biology, sociology, psychology and ethics took him until 1896. Attuned to the evolutionary outlook of the later 19th century, his philosophy was acclaimed by the English-speaking world.

Essays, scientific, political and speculative (3 vols, 1858–74); Principles of Biology (2 vols, 1864–67); Principles of Psychology (2 vols, 1870–72); Principles of Sociology (3 vols, 1876–96); Principles of Ethics (2 vols, 1879–93); The Man versus the State (1884); Factors of Organic Evolution (1887); Autobiography (2 vols, 1904).

D. Duncan, Life and Letters of H. S. (with full biblio.; 1908).—J. A. Thomson, H. S. (1906); E. Ferri, Socialisme et science positive (1934); J. Rumney, H. S.'s Sociology (with biblio.; 1934); R. C. K. Ensor, Some Reflections on H. S.'s Doctrine (1946); J. Burrow in Evolution and Society (1966). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Spender, STEPHEN (*London 28 II 1909; ∞1936 Agnes Marie Inez Pearn, ∞1941 Natasha Litvin), English poet. In the 1930s he was one of the 'modern poets', who, professing Communism, set out to revitalize the form and substance of poetry. His humanity, tender percipience and delicate imagery have given a poignant beauty to much of his early and more mature verse, and his development continues.

VERSE: Twenty Poems (1930); Poems (1933); Vienna (1934); Poems for Spain (1939); The Still Centre (1939); Ruins and Visions (1942); Poems of Dedication (1947); The Edge of Being (1949); The Generous Days (1971).—FICTION: The Burning Cactus (1936); The Backward Son (1940).—CRITICISM: The Destructive Element (1935); The Creative Element (1953); The Struggle of the Modern (1963); The Year of the Young Rebels (1969).—World Within World (autobiog.; 1951).

Dilys Powell, Descent From Parnassus (1934);

R. A. Scott-James, Fifty Years of English Literature, 1900-1950 (1951); A. Ross, Poetry 1945-1950 (1951).
R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Spengler, OSWALD (*Blankenburg 29 V 1880; †Munich 8 V 1936), German philosopher. His major work, The Decline of the West, is an attempt to present a universal history; according to it all civilizations have a life-cycle corresponding to any other living organism. They are born, they mature, and they must die. With a wealth of illustration from the past Spengler tries to prove his case. In spite of glaring inaccuracies and exaggerations the book has undoubtedly an imaginative scope of vast dimensions so that he has been the foremost and most influential of German philosophers in modern Europe. In his later writings he laboured the point that Man has become the slave of his mind, and what he would prefer to intellectual solutions of our predicament is a relapse to simpler, more primitive forms of life. In Man and the Machine Age he urges men to resemble as much as possible 'the beast of prey' as being the highest form of free life. It has nothing to do with reason or expediency and still less with sentiments of pity or a desire for peace. The whole content and meaning of life derives from danger and war, and this constitutes the highest human activity. In his last book he prophesied two centuries of world wars and stated once again his view of history: a play of forces in which one factor alone remains decisive—power; the rest is talk, morality, day-dreaming, ideology.

Der Untergang des Abendlandes (2 vols, 1919-22; Eng. tr. C. F. Atkinson, 1926-28); Preussentum und Sozialismus (1920); Der Mensch und die Technik (1931; Eng. tr. C. F. Atkinson, 1932); Jahre der Entscheidung (1933); The Hour of Decision, tr. idem, 1934; Urfragen (1965); Frühzeit der Weltgeschichte (incl. biblio.; 1966); Selected Essays (1967).

H. S. Hughes, O. S. (New York and London, 1952); E. Stutz, O. S. als politischer Denker (1958); A. Baltzer, O. S.s Bedeutung für die Gegenwart (1959).
K.W.M.

Spenser, EDMUND (*London c. 1552; †?1579 Machabyas ?Chylde, †1594 Elizabeth Boyle; †ibid. 13 I 1599), English poet. Spenser's literary career began early with translations from Petrarch* and Du* Bellay, and at Cambridge (1569-76) he found in Gabriel Harvey* a stimulating, if pugnacious, critic with whom he discussed his projects and first drafts of poems. Most of his life, after a brief period in the household of the Earl of Leicester, was spent in government service in Ireland where he first went in 1580 as secretary to Lord Grey, Elizabeth's Deputy. He settled at Kilcolman, returning finally when his estate was overrun in Tyrone's rebellion (1598). Spenser's friends included Sidney* and Raleigh* whose visit to him and their voyage together to England is recorded in Colin Clouts Come home againe (1595).

Spenser's first independent work, The Shepherdes Calender (1579), has great historical significance since it established the new ideas of European poetry in the vernacular. More important, it established a new poet, whose mastery of harmonious versification was to carry him far beyond the limitations of the pastoral form he here adopted. The introduction of archaisms and dialect in it was strongly criticized by Sidney but they are justified by the nature of Spenser's mind and art. His later sonnets, lyrics and satirical and narrative verse develop along the lines foreshadowed in the 1579 volume, Epithalamion being the most distinguished fulfilment of its promise. In The Faerie Queene, his most ambitious work, Spenser expressed a many-sided conception of the Renaissance virtue of 'magnificence' through the allegorical use of chivalric romance; though unfinished and curiously remote in material and manner, the poem yet celebrates the Elizabethan world and reflects its intellectual, moral, religious and political preoccupations. Spenser was a poet by nature; his inexhaustible pictorial richness and rhythmical subtlety have proved a continuous source of imaginative inspiration to later poets and readers.

VERSE: A Theatre, wherein be represented the miseries and calamities that follow the Voluptuous Worldings (cont. anon. trs by S.; 1569); The Faerie Queene, Bks I-III (1590); Complaints (1591); Daphnaida (1591); Amoretti and Epithalamion (1595); The Faerie Queene, Bks I-VI (2 vols, 1596); Fowre Hymnes (1596); Prothalamion (1596); The Faerie Queene, Bks I-VI and a fragment of Bk VII (1609).—PROSE: Three Proper, and wittie, familiar Letters (by Gabriel Harvey and E. S.; 1580); A View of the Present State of Ireland (1633).—COLLECTIONS: Poetical Works (ed. J. C. Smith and E. de Selincourt, 3 vols, 1909-10); Works (omits Faerie Queene; ed. W. L. Renwick, 4 vols, 1928-34); Works (ed. E. Greenlaw, C. G. Osgood, and F. M. Padelford, Variorum ed., 9 vols, 1932-49).

T. Warton, Observations on The Faerie Queene (1754); W. Hazlitt, Lectures on the English Poets (1818); R. W. Church, S. (1879); W. L. Renwick, E. S. (1925); E. Legouis, E. S. (1926); P. Henley, S. in Ireland (1928); H. S. V. Jones, A S. Handbook (1930); E. Greenlaw, Studies in S.'s Historical Allegory (1932); B. E. C. Davis, E. S. (1933); Janet Spens, S.'s Faerie Queene, an Interpretation (1934); H. Stein, Studies in S.'s Complaints (1934); C. S. Lewis, The Allegory of Love (1936) and English Literature in the 16th Century (1954); J. W. Bennett, The Evolution of the Faerie Queene (1942); A. C. Judson, The Life of E. S. (1945); L. Bradner, E. S. and The Faerie Queene (1948); J. Arthur,

On the Poetry of S. and the Form of Romances (1956); A. C. Hamilton, The Structure of Allegory in the Faerie Queen (1961); R. Freeman, E. S. (1957; rev. 1962) and The Faerie Queen: A Companion for the Reader (1970); G. Hough, A Preface to the Faerie Queen (1962); T. T. Rushe, The Kindly Flame (1964); K. Williams, S.'s Faerie Queen (1966); D. Cheney, S.'s Image of Nature (1966); P. J. Alpers, The Poetry of the Faerie Queen (1967) and ed., E. S. A Critical Anthology (1969); M. Evans, S.'s Anatomy of Heroism: A Commentary on the Faerie Queen (1970). R.F.

Sperber, MANÈS (*Zablotov, Galicia 12 XII 1905), Franco-German writer now resident in Paris. He joined the Communist party soon after the First World War but left it in 1937. During this period he had studied psychology under Alfred Adler. Between 1940 and 1951 he wrote his famous trilogy Wie eine Träne im Ozean consisting of Der verbrannte Dornbusch (1949), Tiefer als der Abgrund (1950) and Die verlorene Bucht (1953). It first appeared in France, and then, in 1961, in Germany. It shows the development of European Communism via the Spanish Civil War, the collapse of France to the post-1945 Stalin era and the tragic fate of those who possess a political conscience.

Die Achillesferse (essays; 1960).

J. Bloch-Michel, 'Interview mit M. S.' in Der Monat, XI.130 (1958-59); E. W. Herd, 'Wie eine Träne im Ozean' in Ger. Life and Letters, new ser., XVI (Jan. 1963). D.E.

Speroni, SPERONE (*Padua 1500; †1588), Italian humanist and critic. His contemporaries regarded Speroni above all as an orator and philosopher; today his work as a critic is considered more interesting. He spent most of his life at Padua where he had studied under Pomponazzi* and is one of the chief representatives of the Aristotelian school of philosophy and criticism which flourished there. He wrote numerous dialogues including one on language, Delle lingue (1542), in which he followed Bembo's* ideas on the importance of the vernacular. It was extensively used by Du* Bellay in his Deffense et Illustration de la langue françoise (1549). His tragedy Canace (1542) in which he tried to follow the Aristotelian precepts of arousing pity and horror gave rise to a literary controversy which lasted until the end of the century. C.Dr.

I dialoghi (Aldus, 1542); Dialoghi delle lingue e dell'invenzione (ed. G. De Robertis, 1912); Opera (5 vols, 1740; with life by M. Forcellini).

F. Neri, La tragedia italiana nel Cinquecento (1904); P. Villey, Les sources italiennes de la Deffense de Du Bellay (1908); A. Fano, S. S. (1909, I, cont. life; II never pub.); F. Cammarosano, La vite e le opere di S. S. (1920); G. Toffanin, La fine dell'umanesimo (1920); B. Weinberg, A History of Literary Criticism in the Italian Renais- sance (1961); M. Marti, 'S. retore e prosatore' in Dal certo al vero (1962); F. Bruni, 'S. S. e l'Accademia degli Infiammati' in Filologia e letteratura, XIII (1967). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Spervogel (12th century). The earliest collection of German didactic poetry is transmitted under this name, which covers certainly two poets, a generation apart. The 'Elder Spervogel' or 'Spervogel Anonymous' (or 'Herger' or 'Kerling'—names taken from stanzas in which the minstrel probably refers to himself in the third person) treats the hazardous life of the itinerant poet, the bounty of patrons (amongst whom Walther von Hausen—see Friedrich* von Hausen); he has also a series of admonitory fables and simple religious stanzas. The younger poet is less rugged; he favours gnomic worldly wisdom, generalizations on morality. Both precede the period of court literature. In all: about 50 poems of one stanza (seven lines extended to eight by the younger poet).

Des Minnesangs Frühling (ed. K. Lachmann and C. von Kraus, 1950); Der deutsche Minnesang (ed. H. Fromm in Wege der Forschung, XV, 1966).

O. Grütters, 'Der Anonyme Sp.-Herger' in Paul und Braunes Beiträge, LXV (1942). F.P.P.

Speusippus (†339 B.C.), Greek philosopher, Plato's* nephew and successor as head of the Academy. He was more interested than Plato in natural science, and wrote on biology; works of his on mathematics and ethics are also mentioned. There are very few surviving fragments of his large output.

F. W. A. Mullach, Fragmenta philosophorum Graecorum (1860-81).

E. Zeller, Plato and the Older Academy (1888); P. Lang, De Speusippi Academici scriptis (1911); W. D. Ross, Aristotle's Metaphysics, I (1924); H. Cherniss, The Riddle of the Early Academy (1945). D.J.F.

Sphrantzes: see George Phrantzes.

Spiegel, HENRIC LAURENS (*Amsterdam 11 III 1549; ∞1 X 1578 Brechtje ten Berg, ∞14 VIII 1602 Dieuwertje van Marken; †Alkmaar 4 I 1612), Dutch poet, prose writer and playwright (device: 'Deugd verheugt'), dedicated his life to literature as a man of leisure. In his country house, Meerhuizen, on the Amstel he gathered his art-loving friends among whom Roemer Visscher*, Coornhert* and Jan van Hout* took first place. He was a member and for a short time leader of the EGELANTIER and the principal author of Twe-spraeck (1584; with preface by Coornhert), a Dutch grammar, soon followed by an ars rhetorica; he also collaborated on Dousa's* edition of Melis Stoke's* Rijmkroniek. In his youth he wrote poetry in the REDERIKER tradition (e.g. Lof van het Dansen), after 1578 his poetry is exclusively in the new metre (preferably alexandrines). This more mature work includes the drama Numa ofte Amptsweijgheringe (after Plutarch*), Zeegbaaks Lofsang (on the defeat of the Armada in 1588), Lieden op 't Vader Ons and his main work Hertspiegel, monistic ethics written in a spirit anticipating Spinoza* (pr. 1694).

H. L. S.'s Hertspiegel en andere zedeschriften (ed. P. Vlaming, 1723); latest ed. of the first three songs of the Hertspiegel, A. C. de Jong (1930); juvenilia in Roemer Visscher's Brabbeling (1614, 1669); Numa (ed. F. A. Stoett in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., XXI, 1902; ed. N. van der Laan in Noordnederlandse Rederijkersspelen, 1941); Zeegbaaks Lofsang (ed. G. Kalf in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., VI, 1886); Twe-spraak (ed. K. Kooiman, 1913; with Ruyghbewerp, Kort begrip and Rederijck-Kunst, ed. W. J. H. Caron, 1962); Lieden op 't Vader Ons (ed. G. Degroote, 1956).

A. Verwey, H. L. S. (1919); J. P. Buisman, De ethische denkbeelden van H. L. S. (1935); P. Minderaa, Opstellen en voordrachten uit mijn hoogleraarstijd (1964); K. Kooiman in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXXXIII (1967).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Spielhagen, FRIEDRICH (*Magdeburg 24 II 1829; †Berlin 25 II 1911), German novelist and critic. An actor, teacher, journalist and active partisan in the democratic movements who lived as a writer in Berlin. His voluminous novels attempted what Fontane*, Schnitzler* and Thomas Mann* later on achieved—the realistic portrayal of ideas as represented by people. He failed to realize that the new subjects could not be treated in classical prose and that problems and ideas cease to be interesting when not closely interwoven with the narrative.

. NOVELS: Problematische Naturen (4 vols, 1861; Eng. tr. M. S. De Vere, 1869); Durch Nacht zum Licht (4 vols, 1862; Eng. tr. idem, 1870); Hammer und Amboss (5 vols, 1869; Eng. tr. W. H. Browne, 1870); Sturmflut (3 vols, 1877; Eng. tr. S. E. A. Stephenson, 1877).—CRITICAL WORKS: Beiträge zur Theorie und Technik des Romans (1883, 1967); Neue Beiträge zur Theorie und Technik der Epik und Dramatik (1898).—Finder und Erfinder (autobiog.; 2 vols, 1890).—Sämtliche Romane (29 vols, 1895–1904).

M. Geller, S.s Theorie und Praxis des Romans (1917); E. Mensch, Er lebt noch immer! (1929).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Spieß, HENRY (*Geneva 12 VI 1876; †ibid. 27 I 1940), Swiss poet. His strong lyrical temperament enabled him to make his own the influence of the PARNASSIANS (as in Rimes d'audience, 1903; augmented ed. 1917), of Verlaine* (as in Le Silence des heures, 1904; defn. ed. 1913), and above all of such Symbolists as Jammes*, Maeterlinck* and Rodenbach*. His works express the alternating joys and anxieties of the poet and have a musicality and evocative power new to his country. With Simplement (1922) and Chambre haute (1928) Spiess turned from the disappointments of human love to divine love and afterwards fell silent.

Le visage ambigu (1915); L'Amour offensé (1917); Saison divine (1920).

R.-L. Piachaud, Trois poètes, Tavan, Duchosal, S. (1917); Vahé Godel, H. S. poète survivant (1963).
J.P.I. (G.G.)

Spinoza, BARUCH, from 1656 BENEDICTUS (*Amsterdam 24 XI 1632; †The Hague 21 XI 1677), Jewish-Dutch philosopher. Son of Portuguese-Jewish parents, he was educated in the rabbinical school at Amsterdam where Manaruch ben Israel and Morteira were the leading teachers. He proved a brilliant pupil, but soon came to adopt heretical opinions, and in 1656 the Synagogue banned him, and Morteira, in conjunction with the Protestant ministers, induced the town council to banish him from Amsterdam. He soon returned and gathered around him a circle of friends and disciples from among the younger Mennonites and the liberal Protestant sect of Collegianten. In 1660 he went to live in Rijnsburg and later lived at Voorburg and The Hague. He had some private means but preferred to live a simple though by no means ascetic life. He and some of his circle were politically sympathetic to the party of Jan de Witt, from whom Spinoza received a pension, and the Tractatus Theologico-Politicus, published anonymously in 1670, was written in support of their views. In this book Spinoza supported religious toleration and advocated the use of critical, rationalistic methods in the study of the Bible. Spinoza's authorship of this heterodox work soon became known, and after the murder of the brothers de Witt it was suppressed. Spinoza corresponded with leading thinkers of the age and received (but refused) a call to the Chair of philosophy at Heidelberg University. Yet he was a devout man; the 'Amor intellectualis Dei' is the highest felicity: the Deity loves itself in us.

Dissatisfied with Descartes* metaphysics, in which a transcendent creator was regarded as the source of two radically different types of substance, thinking substance and extended substance, Spinoza claimed to prove that there can only be one substance, that this substance is God, that God is immanent in nature, that thought and extension are not substances but those two of the infinite attributes of God accessible to human understanding, and that what seem to be particular minds and bodies are modes of God. These views, along with his account of how the few may attain salvation by self-knowledge and knowledge of their dependence on 'Deus sive Natura', at first gained for Spinoza the epithet of 'atheist'. A change in this estimate of him was effected by Lessing*, Herder* and Goethe*. The last-named was aware of a spiritual kinship with Spinoza, as were also the Dutch poets Verwey* and Van Eyck*.

Spinoza's leading work, the Ethics, was not published until after his death. The Short Treatise on God, Man and Human Welfare, a very early work (probably written between 1658 and 1660 in admirably plain, clear Dutch prose of a surprisingly modern style), was not discovered and published until 1852.

Opera posthuma (ed. Lodewijk Meyer, 1677; cont.: Ethica; De intellectus emendatione; Tractatus politicus; approx. 80 Epistolae); Opera quotquot reperta sunt (ed. J. Van Vloten and P. Land, 2 vols, 1882-83; cont., in addition to the above: Renati Descartes Principia Philosophiae; Cogitata Metaphysica; Stelkonstige reeckening van den Regenboog; Reeckening van Kanssen; Korte verhandeling van God, de Mensch en deszelfs Welstand).—S.'s Short Treatise on God, Man and His Well-Being (tr. A. Wolf, with comm. and life, 1910); The Correspondence of S. (tr. idem, 1928); S. The Chief Works (tr. and intro. R. H. M. Elwes, 2 vols, 1951); The Political Works (ed. A. G. Wernham, 1958).

H. H. Joachim, A Study of the Ethics of S. (1901) and S.'s Tractatus de Intellectus emendatione, a Commentary (1940); R. MacKeon, The Philosophy of S. (1928); Leon Roth, S. (1929); H. F. Hallett, Aeternitas. A Spinozistic Study (1930) and Benedict de S. (1957); H. A. Wolfson, The Philosophy of S. Unfolding the Latent Processes of His Reasoning (2 vols, 1934); D. Bidney, The Psychology and Ethics of S. (1940); E. Sérouya, S., sa vie, sa philosophie (1947); S. Hampshire, S. (1956); W. R. Valentiner, Rembrandt and S. (1957); L. Balet, Rembrandt and S. (1962); A. S. Oko, The S. Bibliography (1964); L. S. Feuer, S. and the Rise of Liberalism (1964). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Spitteler, CARL, pseud. CARL FELIX TANDEM (*Liestal 24 IV 1845; †Lucerne 29 XII 1924), Swiss poet and essayist. He appears as a Nietzschean rebel in the hymnic prose epic Prometheus und Epimetheus (1881; tr. J. F. Muirhead, 1931); as a Romantic poet in Glockenlieder (1906); as a satirical journalist in Lachende Wahrheiten (1898; Eng. tr. J. F. Muirhead, 1927); as a strict Naturalist in the novel Conrad der Leutnant (1898); and as all these blended together in Olympischer Frühling (2 vols, 1900-10). The latter is a weird Iliad of the 20th century, in which men populate Olympus and the gods become Swiss citizens. The creator of some magnificent verse, he received the Nobel prize in 1919.

Sämtliche Werke (ed. G. Bohnenblust, H. Altwegg and R. Faesi, 11 vols, 1945-58).

R. Gottschalk, S. (1928); R. Faesi, S.'s Weg und Werk (1933) and S. als Seher und Zeitgenosse (1945); J. Fränkel, S. (1945); G. Bohnenblust,

C. S. (1946); W. Stauffacher, S.'s Lyrik (1950); K. Loosli, Erinnerungen an C. S. (1956); P. Baur, Zur Bewertung von S.'s Poesie (1964).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Spolverini, GIAMBATTISTA (*Verona 25 VI 1695; †1733 Savina Trissino; †ibid. 24 XI 1762), Italian poet. Of noble family, Spolverini devoted himself largely to the wise administration of his country estates at Campeggio and to the composition of La coltivazione del riso (1758), a long didactic poem in endecasillabi inspired by Luigi Alamanni* and the Georgics of Virgil*.

Ed. I. Casarotti (1810); ed. V. Mistruzzi (1929).

L. M. Zina, Della poesia didascalica a Verona nel Settecento (1907); V. Mistruzzi, 'Intorno a La coltivazione del riso' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., C (1932). M.W.

Sponde, JEAN DE (*Mauléon, Basses Pyrénées 1557; †Bordeaux 18 III 1595), French humanist and poet. He was a Protestant converted to Roman Catholicism. He edited Aristotle* and Hesiod* and translated Homer* into Latin. His slender poetic production (sonnets on love and death, songs, religious poems) well represents early French baroque verse.

Méditations sur les Psaumes, avec un essai de poèmes chrétiens (1588; ed. A. Boase, 1953); Poésies (ed. F. Ruchon and A. Boase, 1949). G.B.

Sprat, THOMAS (*Beauminster 1635; †Bromley 20 V 1713), English divine, apologist for the scientific movement and wit. Sprat is said to have assisted Buckingham in the composition of The Rehearsal. Much quoted is the passage in his History demanding a 'close, naked, natural way of speaking'—words which (like much else in Sprat's life) look forward to the Enlightenment.

Observations on M. de Sorbier's Voyage into England (with Evelyn; 1665); History of the Royal Society of London (1667). G.K.H.

Spurgeon, CHARLES HADDON (*Kelvedon, Essex 19 VI 1834; †1856 Susannah Thompson; †Mentone 31 I 1892), English preacher of such popularity that the Metropolitan Tabernacle was built to house his vast congregation.

The Saint and his Saviour (1857); John Ploughman's Talks (1869); My Sermon Notes (1884-87); Autobiography (4 vols, 1897-98); Letters (ed. by his son, 1923).

H. J. Cowell, C. S. (1950); D. Kyles, The Story of C. S. (1934). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Šrámek, FRAŇA (*Sobotka 19 I 1877; †Prague 1 VII 1952), Czech poet and novelist. Šrámek's genius was essentially lyrical; and his most characteristic and successful poetical work is to be found in a number of collections published during and after the First World War: Splav (1916); Básně (1926); Nové básně (1928). The sensuous vitality that characterizes these poems also pervades the novels that many consider his best work; most noteworthy are Stříbrný vítr (1910) and Tělo (1919).

Spisy (10 vols, 1951–60).—J. Knap, F. Š. (1937); F. Buriánek, Národní umělec F. Š. (1960).

R.A.

Sremac, STEVAN (*Senta 11 XI 1855; †Soko-Banja 12 VII 1906), Serbian novelist, fought in the 1876–78 campaign against the Turks; became a schoolmaster in Niš and Belgrade. His diverting novels and short stories are based on shrewd observation of national types, sensitivity to regional differences, and sympathy with endearing individual idiosyncrasies. His best works are masterpieces of kindly satire. In undistinguished semi-historical stories he reveals a conservative and traditionalist outlook.

Ivkova slava (1895); Limunacija na selu (1896); Pop Ćira i pop Spira (1898); Vukadin (1903); Kir Geras (1908); Iz knjiga starostavnihi (short stories; 1903–09).—Celokupna dela (coll. works; 7 vols, 1935). V.J.

Ssü-k'ung T'u (□Yü-hsiang 837; †908), Chinese poet and essayist. Ssü-k'ung gave up his official career (begun c. 870) after the capture of the capital by rebels (880) and thereafter remained in retirement. He is chiefly remembered for his 'Twenty-Four Modes of Poetry' (Erh-shih-ssü shih-p'in; tr. H.-Y. and G. Yang in Chinese Lit., 1963, No. 7), which is regarded as an important document in the history of criticism.

Ssü-k'ung Piao-shêng wên-chi (coll. works).

A.R.D.

Ssü-ma Ch'ien (*Lung-mên ?145; †?86 B.C.), Chinese historian. Ssü-ma set out in his 20th year on a tour of central and eastern China, which was of great importance for his later historical work. He visited the sites connected with the legendary early emperors and inspected the relics of Confucius* in Lu. In 108 he succeeded his father, Ssü-ma T'an, as grand scribe (responsible for the calendar), and took a leading part in the calendar reform of 104. He aroused the emperor's anger (98) by defending the defeated general Li Ling, and suffered castration. Later, however, he was given the important post of chief palace secretary.

Ssü-ma wrote the first comprehensive history of China from the earliest times to his own day. (The work had been begun by his father.) The form which he adopted, with some slight modifications by Pan* Ku, became standard for the later dynastic histories. He has been criticized for the inclusion of much that was legend or fictional history. However, since in many cases he compiled directly from written sources (including poetry) he has preserved much early literature. Indeed his work deserves to be considered as literature as much as history. For later 'old' style (ku-wên) writers his Shih-chi was a most important model.

Shih-chi (orig. title, T'ai-shih kung shu; Chs 1–47 tr. E. Chavannes, Les mémoires historiques de Se-ma Ts'ien, 5 vols, 1895–1905; 65 chs tr. B. Watson, Records of the Grand Historian of China, 2 vols, 1961).

B. Watson, Ssu-ma Ch'ien: Grand Historian of China (1958). A.R.D.

Ssü-ma HSIANG-JU (*Ch'êng-tu c. 179; †Mao-ling 117 B.C.), Chinese poet. Ssü-ma first served at the court of Emperor Ching (157–141) but left to join Mei* Shêng at the court of Liang. After King Hsiao's death (144) he went to Lin-ch'ung, Szechwan, where he eloped with Cho Wên-chün, daughter of a rich merchant. He later received a court post from Emperor Wu (141–87) on account of his literary fame.

Of Ssü-ma's work much is lost. Of 29 fu-poems known to have existed, only six remain; four prose pieces complete his extant works. His fu-poems exerted great influence on later fu-poetry and prose by their immense vocabulary, stylistic parallelism and extended subject range. Though the richness of his language presents great difficulties to the translator, he must be reckoned among China's greatest poets.

Tzū-hsü fu, Shang-lin fu, Al Ch'in-êrh-shih fu, Ta-jên fu and prose pieces contained in Shih-chi, ch. 117, tr. in B. Watson, Records of the Grand Historian of China, II (1961); E. von Zach, Die chinesische Anthologie (2 vols, Harvard, 1958).

Y. Hervouet, Un poète de cour sous les Han: Sseu-ma Siang-jou (1964). A.R.D.

Ssü-ma KUANG (□Hsia-hsien 17 XI 1019; †K'ai-fêng 11 X 1086), Chinese historian. Ssü-ma, who had, as a scholar, an influential position at court, was a prominent opponent of the reforms of Wang* An-shih. From 1071 he lived in retirement at Lo-yang. He was recalled in 1085 and spent the last year of his life in rescinding all Wang's measures. Tzū-chih t'ung-chien, a chronological history from 403 B.C. to A.D. 959, was compiled with a few collaborators over a period of 19 years. It was intended as an 'aid' to government. Both stylistically (it is written in a direct, unornamented prose) and in presentation it is among China's finest historical writings. Besides studies of the classics and other ancient books, he left a small unfinished mystical treatise (Ch'ien-hsü) on the model of Yang* Hsiung's T'ai-hsüan ching.

HISTORY: Tzū-chih t'ung-chien (completed 1084; Chs 58–68 tr. R. de Crespigny, The Last of the Han, 1969; Chs 69–78 tr. A. Fang, The Chronicle of the Three Kingdoms, 220–265, 2 vols, 1952–65).—Ssu-ma Wen-kung wen-chi (coll. lit. works).

E. G. Pulleyblank, 'Chinese historical writing: Liu Chih-chi and Ssu-ma Kuang' in Historians of China and Japan (ed. with W. G. Beasley; 1961).

A.R.D.

St-: see Saint-.

Stabili, FRANCESCO, called CECCO D'ASCOLI (*?Ascoli 1269; †Florence 16 IX 1327), Italian poet. A member of the medical school at Bologna University, he was expelled for heresy (1324) and later burned by the Inquisition. Stabili wrote Latin astrological works (De principiis astrologiae) and an incomplete Italian poem, the Acerba. In this didactic encyclopaedic compilation of natural science and moral philosophy Stabili denigrates the Divina Commedia and substitutes his 'science' for the 'vanities' of Dante*.

L'Acerba (ed. A. Crespi, 1927).—M. Alessandrini, C. d'A. (1955). M.W.

Stadler, ERNST MARIA RICHARD (*Colmar, Alsace 11 VIII 1883; †Zandvoorde, nr Ypres 30 X 1914), German poet, with Heym* and Trakl* the most significant early Expressionist poet. His poetry of revolt in the name of life, Der Aufbruch (1914), contrasts starkly with his early lyrics imitating Hofmannsthal* and George*, Präludien (1905). His critical work, 1910–14, documents the rise of the new literary movement, while his translations of the French Catholic poets, Péguy* and Jammes*, introduced their work to Germany. At the outbreak of war he was Professor-elect of German at Toronto.

Dichtungen (2 vols, with biblio., 1954).

H. Naumann, E. S. (1920); D. W. Schumann, 'E. S. and German Expressionism' in Jour. Eng. and Germanic Philol., XXIX (1930); K. L. Schneider, Der bildhafte Ausdruck in den Dichtungen G. Heyms, G. Trakls and E. S.s (1961); K. Edschmid, 'E. S.' in Dt. Akad. für Sprache und Dichtung Jahrb. (1964). K.P.

Staël, MADAME DE, née GERMAINE NECKER (*Paris 22 IV 1766; ∞1786 Baron de Staël-Holstein [o/o 1797], ∞1811 Albert de Rocca [†1818]; †Paris 14 VII 1817), French writer. Madame de Staël was the daughter of Louis XVI's finance minister, Necker. She lived through the Revolution, maintained a salon in the Rue du Bac (1795) and made a name for herself as critic, philosopher and novelist. In 1803, as the result of a quarrel with Bonaparte, she had to leave Paris. She lived at Coppet, in Switzerland, travelled in Germany between 1803 and 1808, and in Italy on two separate occasions (1804–05 and again in 1816). Napoleon prevented her from publishing De l'Allemagne in 1810. In 1812 she fled to England by way of Austria, Russia and Sweden. She was for a long time closely associated with Benjamin Constant* and secretly contracted a second marriage with a young Swiss officer.

Her novels are rapturous and passionate (Delphine, 1802; Corinne, 1817) and have a strong feminist tinge. Her critical work, De la littérature (1800), sets out to explain literary production in terms of climate and social background. De l'Allemagne (1813), highly sympathetic to German idealism, revealed the writers of Germany to a French audience and paved the way to French Romanticism.

Lettres sur les écrits et le caractère de J.-J. Rousseau (1788; tr. 1789); Dix ans d'exil (1821; ed. P. Gautier, 1904).—Œuvres complètes (17 vols, 1820–21); Œuvres complètes (ed. Didot, 3 vols, 1836).

Lady Blennerhassett, Madame de S. et son temps (Ger., Berlin, 1887–89; Fr. tr. 1890); D. G. Larg, Mme de S.: Her Life as Revealed in Her Work (1926) and Mme de S. (2 vols, 1926–28); P. Gautier, Mme de S. et Napoléon (1903 and 1933); J. Mistler, Mme de S. et Maurice O'Donnell (1926); Comtesse J. de Pange, Auguste Schlegel et Mme de S. (1938); P. Kohler, Mme de S. et ses amis (1952); R. Escarpit, L'Angleterre dans l'œuvre de Mme de S. (1954); J. C. Herold, G. N. de S. (1962); Germaine Andrews, A Portrait of Mme de S. (1964). M.G.; J.P.R.

Staff, LEOPOLD (*Lwów 14 XI 1878; †Skarzysko-Kamienna 31 V 1957), Polish poet and playwright. His diversified poetry was first influenced by the Symbolists, expressing a Nietzschean affirmation of life. Later he expressed a philosophical poetic 'theory of beauty' in polished neo-classical verse which made him the older master for the young Skamander group in the 1920s. His subsequent 'Franciscan' affirmation of life was reflected in a simpler, more colloquial manner of writing which is also seen in his post-war work. He has greatly influenced modern Polish poetry. P.H.

VERSE: Sny o potędze (1901); Ptakom niebieskim (1905); Uśmiechy godzin (1910); Ucho igielne (1928); Wysokie drzewa (1932); Martwa pogoda (1946); Willkna (1954); Dziewięćmuz (1957).—PLAYS: Skarb (1904); Ło samo (1912).—Pisma (20 vols, 1931–34); Poezje (sel. ed. M. Jastrun, 3 vols, 1949–50); Poezje zebrane (2 vols, 1967).

W. Borowy, 'L. S.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XI (1932); Księga pamiątkowa ku czci L. S. (ed. J. W. Gomulicki and J. Tuwim, 1949); I. Maciejewska, L. S. Lwowski okres twórczości (1965); J. Kwiatkowski, U podstaw liryki L. S. (1966).

S.S. (P.H.)

Staffeldt, ADOLPH WILHELM SCHACK VON (*Rügen 28 III 1769; †Slesvig 26 XII 1826), Danish poet. Although descended from a German family he felt a burning love for Denmark. The first poet of the Romantic school in Denmark, he was completely isolated and had very little appreciation in his own time, possibly because he was comparatively unsuccessful in introducing German Romanticism into Danish soil. The abstract and metaphysical character of much of his poetry makes it unreadable today, but a handful of sensitive and beautiful poems remain.

Digte (1804); Nye Digte (1808).—Samlede Digte (2 vols, 1843).

C. Molbech, Digteren A. W. S. S. (1851); Samlinger til S.'s Levnet (ed. F. L. Liebenberg, 2 vols, 1847–51); H. Stangerup, S. S. (1940).

E.B.

Stagnelius, ERIK JOHAN (*Gårdslösa, Öland 14 X 1793; †Stockholm 3 IV 1823), Swedish poet and dramatist. Son of the Bishop of Kalmar, Stagnelius became a civil servant. In 1814 he began to suffer from a heart disease: to mitigate its effects he drank and probably drugged, and led a solitary, manic-depressive life in Stockholm. Beginning (while a schoolboy) as a Gustavian poet soaked in the classics, he became a Romantic who wrote opera, tragedy, lyric and epic poetry. Under the influence of theosophy and German Romantic philosophy he developed mystical religious views; then, in the tragedy Bacchanterna (1822), he revealed a humanist, Christian Hellenism, couched in the most emotional terms. He was perpetually torn between idealism and sensual eroticism, but the conflicts were expressed with a lucidity and mastery of language which distinguished him among the Swedish Romantic writers and made him the most influential of them on succeeding generations.

Wladimir den store (1817; epic); Liljor i Saron och Martyrerna (1821; lyric poems and drama); Sigurd Ring (1816 or 1817; drama); Wisbur (prob. 1818; drama); Samlade skrifter (ed. L. Hammarsköld, 3 vols, 1824–26, rev. C. Eichhorn, 6th ed. 1868; ed. F. Böök, 5 vols, 1911–19).

A. Nilsson, Svensk romantik (1916) and Kronologien i S. diktning (1926); F. Böök, S. (1919) and S. än en gång (1942); S. Cederblad, Studier i Stagnelius romantik (1923); O. Holmberg, Sex kapitel om S. (1941); S. Malmström, Studier över stilen i S.s lyrik (1961); S. Bergsten, En Stagnelius-bibliografi (1965) and Erotikern S. (1966).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Stamatov, GEORGI (*Tiraspol 25 V 1869; †Sofia 9 XI 1962), Bulgarian writer. Brought up in Russia, he read law in Geneva. As a Bulgarian judge he opposed capital punishment. His 'naturalist' stories are ironical, often bitter pictures of town life.

Izbrani ocheritsi (1905); Skitsi (1915); Paladini (1924); Razkazi (2 vols, 1929–30); Prashinki (1934).—Coll. works (2 vols, 1961).

I. Meshekov, G. S. (1936).

V.P.

Stamm, KARL (*Wädenswil 29 III 1890; †ibid. 21 III 1919), Swiss poet. Like so many other Swiss writers he was a schoolteacher. His style shows some affinities with Expressionistic lyrics and he has been called the only Swiss Expressionist of distinction. But one cannot overlook the more subdued tones of his poems, a tender feeling for the wonders of nature and a deeply personal involvement in problems of religion and metaphysics.

Das Hohelied (1913); Der Aufbruch des Herzens (1919).—Dichtungen. Gesamtausgabe (ed. E. Gubler, 2 vols, 1920).

W. Günther, 'K. S.' in Dichter der neueren Schweiz, II (1968).

H.B.

Stampa, GASPARA (*Padua c. 1523; †Venice 23 IV 1554), Italian poet. Her father, a rich jewel merchant, died when Gasparina was still a child and she left Padua with her sister Cassandra and her brother Baldassare and went to Venice. A talented trio in both music and poetry, they soon secured an entry into Venetian society. From then on the story of Gasparina's tragic life is related in her Canzoniere. The great passion of her life was for a cultured nobleman, Collaltino di Collalto, who deserted her after three years. She tried to console herself with other lovers but never really recovered from the blow. Critics dispute as to whether Gasparina were a courtesan or not but whatever she was there is no denying the passionate and sensual sincerity of her love poems and the anguish of her grief when Collaltino left her. There is little of the professional prostitute in her touching abandon nor in the fact (which stands out so clearly) that Collaltino was the only man she ever really loved. Her style is inspired from Petrarch* but PETRARCHISM with her is not an artifice but the natural medium for expressing her tormented feelings.

Rime (1554; crit. ed. A. Salza, 1927).

G. A. Cesareo, G. S., donna e poetessa (1920); L. Pompilj, Gasparina (1936); G. Toffanin, Il Cinquecento (1960; with biblio.).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Stancu, ZAHARIA (*Salcia, nr Roşiorii de Vede 1902), Rumanian novelist, publicist and poet. The son of poor peasants, he had a hard upbringing, which he draws on extensively in his books. He has cultivated a rhythmical prose style based largely on repetition and echoes, which either charms or exasperates. He has also written pleasing verse.

Poeme simple (coll. verse; 1957).—NOVELS: Dinamita (1933); Desculţ (1948 and 1960); Dulăi (1952); Florile pământului (1954); Jocul cu moartea (1962); Rădăcinile sînt amare (5 vols, 1958–59); Pădurea nebună (1963).—Zile de lagăr (memoirs; 1945).

D. Micu and N. Manolescu, Literatura română de azi (1965). F.J.B.

Stănescu, NICHITA (*1933), one of the most promising of the post-war Rumanian poets.

Sensul iubirii (1960); O viziune a sentimentelor (1964); Dreptul la timp (1965); II Elegii (1966); Oul și sfera (1967); Alfa (1967); Laus Ptolomei (1968); Necuvintele (1969); În dulcele stil clasic (1970).—Poezii (sel.; 1970). F.J.B.

Stanev, EMILIAN (*Turnovo 19 II 1907), Bulgarian writer. Fondness for wild life and hunting is often reflected in his stories. Kradetsut na praskovi (1948; 'The Peach Thief', tr. R. Pridham and Jean Morris in The Peach Thief and Other Bulgarian Stories, 1968), a tragic vignette of Bulgarian malaise at the close of the First World War, has been effectively filmed.

Primamlivi blyassutsi (1938); Vulchi noshti (1943); Delnitsi i praznitsi (1945); Kogato skrejut se topi (1950); Sled lova (1954); Ivan Kondarev (1958); Legenda za Sibin (1968); Antichrist (1970).—Sel. works (1957; 1959). V.P.

Stanković, BORISAV (*Vranje 22 III 1876; †Belgrade 22 X 1927), Serbian novelist and dramatist. Studied law in Belgrade and entered the civil service. His works are concerned with the period of transition, in South Serbia, from the 'Turkish' times (Vranje was liberated from Turkish rule in 1878) to the new conditions; his nostalgia for the semi-Oriental past colours his writing and explains the erotic element in his psychological studies. His novel Nečista krv, the tragedy of a woman, secretly passionate and proud, yet submissive, sacrificed to the greed of men, is an outstanding work in Serbian literature.

Božji ljudi (stories; 1902); Koštana (drama; 1907); Stari dani (stories; 1911); Nečista krv (1911); Sophka, tr. A. Brown, 1932).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 6 vols, 1966). V.J.

Stanley, ARTHUR PENRHYN (*Alderley 13 XII 1815; †1863 Lady Augusta Bruce; †London 18 VII 1881), English clergyman, Dean of Westminster, disciple of Thomas Arnold* and writer in the cause of liberal theology.

Memorials of Canterbury (1854); Sinai and Palestine (1856); Essays (1870); Christian Institutions (1881).—Life and Correspondence of Thomas Arnold (2 vols, 1844).

G. G. Bradley, Recollections of A. P. S. (1883); R. E. Prothero, Life and Correspondence of Dean S. (1893) and Letters and Verses of Dean S. (1895); H. H. Bolitho, A Victorian Dean (1930).

R.M.H.

Stanley, THOMAS (*Cumberlow 1625; †8 V 1648 Dorothy Enyron; †London 12 IV 1678), English poet and patron of poets, who went to Pembroke Hall, Cambridge in 1639, aged 13. An excellent classical scholar and modern linguist, he translated from Latin and edited Aeschylus*. Stanley's History of Philosophy (1655–62) was long a standard work.

Poems and Translations (1647, etc.; ed. G. M. Crump, 1962). B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Stănoiu, DAMIAN (*1893; †1956), Rumanian author of novels and tales relating with humour and erudition the human frailties of monks.

Călugări și ispite (tales; 1928); Necazurile părintelui Ghedeon (1928); Duhovnicul maicilor (1929); Alegere de stareță (1932); Ucenicii sf.-lui Antonie (1933); Demonul lui Codin (1934); Eros în mănăstire (1935); Furtună în iad (tales; 1942); Amintiri din mănăstire (1962).—Perpessicius, Mențiuni critice, II and V (1934, 1946); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române (1941). F.J.B.

Stanyhurst, RICHARD (*Dublin 1547; †1578 Jane Barnewall, †1584 Helen Copley; †Brussels 1618), English scholar, historian and poet. Although of some importance as a historian of Ireland, Stanyhurst is only remembered for his attempt to translate Virgil* into English quantitative metre.

The first foure Bookes of Virgil his Aeneis (Leiden, 1582); A Treatise Conteyning a plaine and perfect description of Ireland (in Holinshed's Chronicles, II, 1577); De rebus in Hibernia gestis (Antwerp, 1584); De vita S. Patricii Hybernicae Apostoli (ibid., 1587). J.B.B.

Stanyukovich, KONSTANTIN MIKHAYLOVICH (*Sebastopol 1844; †1903), Russian naval officer who turned author and wrote narratives and novels in the radical spirit of the 1860s and 1870s.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (13 vols, 1904; 12 vols, 1906–07); Morskije rasskazy (6 vols, 1940–43).—Man Overboard (tr. A. M. Williams, 1945). J.L.

Stapleton, SIR ROBERT (*Carlton by Snaith, Yorks ?1605; †London VII 1669), English playwright and translator. Trained abroad as a Benedictine, Stapleton deserted the cloister for the court of Charles I. He wrote his very competent translations during enforced retirement under the Commonwealth and his four plays—baroque fantasies in the heroic manner—in the years 1653–69.

TRANSLATION: Juvenals Sixteen Satyrs (1647).—PLAYS: The Slighted Maid (1663); The Tragedy of Hero and Leander (1669).

M. Summers, The Playhouse of Pepys (1935). G.K.H.

Staring, ANTONIE CHRISTIAAN WYNAND (*Gendringen 24 I 1767; †1791 Everdine M. van Löben Sels, ∞1798 Johanna A. Ch. van der Muelen; †De Wildenborch 8 VIII 1840), Dutch poet. For 50 years he devoted himself to studying economics, agriculture and literature at his country estate De Wildenborch. His first poems had the sentimental pathos of the period; like all his work, they were later altered and improved. The influence of Feith* and German poets was succeeded by that of Huygens*, and Staring became the most terse and witty narrative poet of the age with few but pure nature lyrics. J.W.W.

VERSE: Mijn eerste proeve in poëzij (1786); Dicht-oeffening (1791); Gedichten (2 vols, 1820); Nieuwe gedichten (1827); Winterloof (1832); Gedichten (4 vols, 1836–37).—PROSE: Schetsen (1816); Kleine verhalen (1837).—Brieven van Mr. A. C. W. S. (ed. G. E. Opstelten, 1916).

E. J. Potgieter in Kritische Studien, I (1875); C. Busken Huet in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, I (1881); J. Koopmans, 'S.'s Christendom' in Taal en Letteren, X (1900); A. Zijdeveld, De romancepoëzie in Noord-Nederland van 1780 tot 1830 (1915); C. S. Jolmers, S. als verhalend dichter (1918); Tj. Sterringa, 'S. als navolger van Wieland' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XIX (1925); J. Haantjes, 'S. en de Belgische Opstand', ibid., XXXVII (1943); G. Kalff, 'Brieven van S.' in Vragen des Tijds, XLII (1932); J. M. de Vries, Teksten en Varianten van A. C. W. S. (1958).

J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Stark, FREYA MADELINE (*Paris 31 I 1893; ∞1947 Stewart Perowne), English author of travel books. A linguist, interested in archaeology but more in people and adventure, she made many journeys unaccompanied by Europeans in little-known parts of Persia and Arabia, and has described them with energy, sensitiveness and humour.

The Valleys of the Assassins (1934); The Southern Gates of Arabia (1936); Seen in the Hadhramaut (1938); A Winter in Arabia (1940); Letters From Syria (1942); East Is West (1945); Perseus in the Wind (1948); Traveller's Prelude (1950); Beyond Euphrates (1951); The Coast of Incense (1953); Ionic (1954); Dust in the Lion's Paw (1961); Rome on the Euphrates (1966); The Zodiac Arch (1968); The Minaret of Djam (1970).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Starkey, JAMES SULLIVAN, pseud. SEUMAS O'SULLIVAN (*Dublin 1879; †ibid. 1958), Irish poet. He was prominent during the Irish literary revival, wrote for The Irish Homestead and The United Irishman and acted with early Irish theatre-groups. Editor of Tower Press booklets, he founded and edited the Dublin Magazine from 1923; he has gone on quietly adding to his poems, whose delicate, wandering rhythms, communicating a subtle, mystical vision, are the result of a very deliberate craft. He is also a notable essayist.

R.McH.

VERSE: Collected Poems (1940); Dublin Poems (1946).—ESSAYS: Impressions (1912); Mud and Purple (1917); Essays and Recollections (1944).

Alan Denson, 'Checklist' in Dublin Mag. (1968). E.T.W.

Starowolski, SZYMON (*Starowola 1588; †IV 1656), Polish-Latin writer. As a young man and then as a tutor of aristocrats he travelled in western Europe; later he became a priest and preacher in Cracow cathedral. He was a savant, a patriot and a man of common sense in politics. He wrote the first survey of the history of Polish literature.

Scriptorum Polonicorum Hecatonias . . . (1625); De claris oratoribus Sarmatiae (1628); Declamatio contra obtrectatores Poloniae (1631); Polonia . . . (1632); Lament utrapionej matki Korony Polskiej (c. 1650; ed. K. Turowski, 1859).

H. Piętka, Poglądy filozoficzno-prawne S. S. (1925). S.S. (P.H.)

Starter, JAN JANSZ (*London or Amsterdam 1594; ∞Nieske Heynisdr; †Germany 1626), Dutch poet, lived at Amsterdam between 1607 and 1614, where he was a member of the EGELANTIER, then at Leeuwarden, where he founded a Chamber of Rhetoric; the Protestant minister Bogerman made his life in the town impossible. He studied at Franeker and was a soldier in Mansfeld's army, wrote two tragi-comedies, Timbre de Cardoue (1618) and Daraide (1618), which almost equal Brederode*, a number of fair farces, Klucht van een advocaat en een boer (1618), Klucht van Jan Soetekauw (1621), and many songs, partly after English examples: De friesche Lusthof (1621; ed. J. H. Brouwer, 1966), and finished Brederode's Angeniet. He is a master of the impersonal community song; his technique is of great virtuosity.

H. E. Moltzer, 'S.'s tooneelspele' in Studiën en Schetsen (1881); A. E. H. Swaen, 'De Engelsche invloed op S.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., XVI (1897), XXI (1902), XXIV (1905), XXV (1906); XXIX (1910), LVII (1938); M. M. Kleerkooper, 'Engelsche gedichten door S. nagevolgd' in Taal en Lett., XII (1902), 'S.'s laatste levensjaren', ibid., XIII (1903) and Bibliographie van S.'s werken (1911); W. A. P. Smit, 'Een aanvulling op de bibliografie van Breeroo's en S.'s werken' in Het Boek (1927); F. R. Coers, Liederen van Groot-Nederland (1930); G. Schreiner, 'J. J. S.' in De Gids, XCIX (1936); J. H. Brouwer, J. J. S. (with complete biblio.; 1939); J. H. Kruizinga, 'Het avontuurlijk leven van J. J. S.' in Haagsch Maandblad (1944); W. J. C. Buitendijk, 'Het zedelijk en godsdienstig level van J. J. S.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., LXX (1952); A. G. H. Bachrach, 'J. S., Engeland en Nederland in 17e eeuw' in Levende Talen (1957); J. de Kruys, 'Rondom S.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LIV (1961). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Stašek, ANTAL, pseud. of ANTONÍN ZEMAN (*Stanové 1843; †Prague 1931), Czech novelist and poet. His best-known work is contained in his novels, many of which deal with the national and social struggles of 19th-century Bohemia.

V temných věrech (3 vols, 1900); Na rozhraní (2 vols, 1908); Vybrané spisy (10 vols, 1955–64).
K. Polák, O A. S. (1951). R.A.

Staszic, STANISŁAW WAWRZYNIEC (*Piła c. 6 XI 1755; †Warsaw 20 I 1826), Polish political writer and poet. Of burgher family, he became a priest but without vocation. After three years' scientific study in Germany and France he became tutor to the sons of Zamojski and travelled with them to Vienna and Italy. In his political treatises he showed himself a wise democrat and a realistic and progressive politician. His work O ziemiorództwie Karpatów (1815) is the first important geological work in Polish. His huge poem Ród ludzki treats the evolution of mankind in a typically rationalistic way.

Uwagi nad życiem Zamojskiego (1787; ed. S. Czarnowski, 1926); Przestrogi dla Polski (1790; Warnungen für Polen, Ger. tr. 1794; ed. S. Czarnowski, 1926).—VERSE: Ród ludzki, poema dydaktyczne (3 vols, 1816–20, in Dzieła, VII–IX).—Dziennik podróży . . . 1771–91 (ed. A. Kraushar, 2 vols, 1903); Dziennik podróży . . . 1789–1805 (crit. ed. Cz. Leśniewski, 1931).—Dzieła (9 vols, 1816–20).

W. Hahn, S. S. żywot i dzieła (1926); Cz. Leśniewski, S. S. Jego życie i ideologia w dobie Polski niepodległej (1926); S. S. Księga zbiorowa (ed. Z. Kukulski, 1926–28); B. Szacka, O historiozofie S. S. (1964); S. S. (1966). S.S. (P.H.)

Statius, PUBLIUS PAPINIUS (*Naples c. A.D. 45; †ibid. c. 96), Latin poet. Much of Statius' life is known through the five books of occasional poems, published at intervals from 92 onwards, the Silvae. Settling at Rome, he married Claudia, a widow with one daughter: their only adopted son died young. Through his public recitations he became known and was finally admitted to the court of Domitian. Later he retired to his native city.

The 32 poems of the Silvae, in hexameters with the exceptions of six pieces in lyric metres, show considerable fluency and polish; perhaps the finest is the short address to Sleep. Twelve years were devoted to the composition of the Thebais, an epic poem in 12 books (pub. c. 92) on the legendary fratricidal strife of Oedipus' sons Polynices and Eteocles. Statius adheres closely to the traditional epic structure and constant use is made of divine intervention. Virgil* is imitated both in language and incident. There is much mythological lore, and his rhetorical tendency is sometimes excessive. His bold use of language is effective and he has outstanding pictorial and descriptive powers. In the Middle Ages the poem was held in high esteem.

Another epic poem, the Achilleis, was cut short in the second book by the poet's death: an epic on Domitian's campaigns is among his lost works.

Achilleis (ed. with comm. O. A. W. Dilke, 1954); Silvae (ed. with comm. F. Vollmer, 1898; repr. in prep.); Thebais (ed. H. W. Garrod, 1906).—Opera omnia (ed. A. Klotz, 3 vols, 1908–26; tr. J. H. Mozley, 2 vols, 1928).

L. Legras, Étude sur la Thébaïde de Stace (1905); H. E. Butler, Post-Augustan Poetry (1909); W. R. Hardie, 'Virgil, S. and Dante' in Jour. Roman Stud. (1916); W. Schetter, Untersuchungen zur epischen Kunst des S. (1960); H. Cancik, Untersuchungen zur lyrischen Kunst des . . . S. (1965). A.J.D.

Stavenhagen, FRITZ (*Hamburg 18 IX 1876; †ibid. 9 V 1906), Low German playwright. Originally influenced by the naturalism prevailing on the Berlin stage, later impressed by the Vienna fairy-tale comedy and probably also by Wedekind*, he finally evolved a native realism of his own which made him the creator of the modern Low German drama. His first plays—Jürgen Piepers and Der Lotse (both 1901)—are tragedies dealing with the problem of youth v. old age: Mudder Mews (1904), technically his most naturalistic play, is based on the tragic conflicts resulting from a narrow concept of honour. Blunt realism is mixed with symbolic and fairy-tale features in De dütsche Michel (1905); here as in Stavenhagen's last play, De ruge Hoff (1906), social problems are resolved in a healthy laughter. He also wrote Grau und golden: Hamburger Geschichten und Skizzen (1904).

A. Bartels, F. S. (1907); J. Plate, F. S. als niederdeutscher Dramatiker (diss. Münster, 1923); C. Stolle, F. S. 'Mudder Mews' (diss. Marburg, 1926); A. Becker, S. und seine Stellung in der Entwicklung des deutschen Dramas (1927); W. J. Schröder, F. S. Bauernkomödie 'De dütsche Michel' (1935) and F. S., Leben und Werk (1937); H. Quistorf and G. H. J. Scholz, Richard Ohnsorg und die Niederdeutsche Bühne Hamburg (1948); J. Arp, Der Mensch in der niederdeutschen Komödie (1964). G.C.

Stead, CHRISTINA ELLEN (*Rockdale, New South Wales 17 VII 1902), Australian novelist. She went to Europe in 1928, and, married to an American novelist, William Blake (W. J. Black), in 1937 settled in the U.S.A. Her connection with Australia is apparent only in Seven Poor Men of Sydney (1934) and the earlier part of For Love Alone (1944). Both books typify a somewhat psychologically fantastic and even occasionally rhetorical elaboration. F.T.M.

House of All Nations (1938); The Man Who Loved Children (1941); Letty Fox, Her Luck (1946); A Little Tea, A Little Chat (1948); Cotter's England (1967); The Puzzleheaded Girl (1967).

R. G. Geering, C. S. (1969).
F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Stecchetti, LORENZO, pseud. of OLINDO GUERRINI (*Forlì 4 X 1845; †Bologna 21 X 1916), Italian poet. Provocatively macabre and outrageous in Postuma (1877), and entertaining in his parody of Rapisardi's Globbe (1882) and other burlesques, Stecchetti's talent is superficial, and in his more realistic verse, sensual or emotional, he masters a smooth matter-of-factness ideally calculated to appeal to the contemporary reading public. He wrote an important monograph La vita e le opere di G. C. Croce (1879).

Polemica e Nova polemica (1879); Rime di Argia Sbolenti (1897); Rime (1903).

L. Lodi, L. S. (1881); B. Pinchetti, La lirica italiana dal Carducci al D'Annunzio (1928).
J.G.-R.

Steele, SIR RICHARD (*Dublin 12 III 1672; †1705 Margaret Stretch, †1707 Mary Scurlock; †Llangunnor 1 IX 1729), essayist. Educated at Charterhouse and Oxford, he served in the British army and was knighted for political services in 1715. Of fluctuating fortunes and temperament, he was wild and careless but generous and humane. He had some slight success as a playwright. He founded The Tatler, 1709; with Addison* edited The Spectator from 1711. The essays by which he is best remembered were written for these papers. Steele, who was essentially a moralist, regarded the periodical essay as an instrument of ethical instruction. The reform of taste which he helped to effect was largely due to his engagingly humorous and manly style, excellent observation and live character-sketches.

R.McH.

ESSAYS: The Tatler (1709–11; ed. G. G. Aitken, 4 vols, 1898–99); The Spectator (1711–12; ed. D. F. Bond, 5 vols, 1965); The Englishman (1713–15; ed. R. Blanchard, 1955); Periodical Journalism, 1714–16 (ed. idem, 1959); The Theatre (1720; ed. J. Loftis, 1962).—MISCELLANEOUS: The Christian Hero (1701; ed. R. Blanchard, 1932); Tracts and Pamphlets (ed. idem, 1944); Occasional Verse (ed. idem, 1952).—PLAYS: The Funeral (1701); The Lying Lover (1704); The Tender Husband (1705); The Conscious Lovers (1722).—Correspondence (ed. R. Blanchard, 1968).

William Hazlitt, English Comic Writers (1819); J. Loftis, S. at Drury Lane (1952); A. R. Humphreys, S., Addison and Their Periodical Essays (1959); C. Winton, Captain S.: The Early Career of R. S. (1964); R. P. Bond, The Tatler (1972).

E.T.W.

Steele, WILBUR DANIEL (*Greensboro, N.C. 17 III 1886; †1913 Margaret Thurston, †1932 Mrs Norma Mitchell Talbot; †26 V 1970), American short-story writer and playwright. He intended to be a painter, but began writing and won high recognition for his short stories. He has written several plays with his second wife.

NOVELS: Storm (1914); Isles of the Blest (1924); Diamond Wedding (1950).—SHORT STORIES: Land's End (1918); The Man Who Saw Through Heaven (1927); Tower of Sand (1929).—PLAYS: The Terrible Woman (1925); Post Road (with N. Mitchell, 1934); How Beautiful With Shoes (with A. Brown, 1935).
H.L.C.

Steendam, JACOB (*Knipphausen 1615; †Jakarta 1673), Dutch colonial poet, lived in New Netherland and the Dutch East Indies. In Amsterdam he belonged to Jan Zoets*' circle. He was influenced by Cats*. He is reputed to be the earliest poet of the U.S.A. and the Dutch East Indies.

De distelvink (1650); Klacht van Nieuw-Amsterdam in Nieuw-Ned. tot haar Moeder (1659); 't Lof van Nieuw-Ned. (1661); Lofdicht op de stad Batavia (1670).

H. C. Murphy, Anthology of New-Netherland (1865) and J. S., a Memoir of the First Poet in New-Netherland, With His Poems Descriptive of the Colony (1861); S. Kalf, 'Over J. S.' in Indische Gids (1907); J. Koopmans, 'J. S.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XIII–XIV (1919–20).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Steevens, GEORGE (*London 10 V 1736; †Hampstead 22 I 1800), English scholar who sought to restore a sound Shakespearean text by reprinting quartos and, encouraged by Johnson*, annotated editions of Shakespeare* in 1773 and 1778. He later worked with Isaac Reed*, to whom he bequeathed his unpublished notes.

R.M.H.

Reprints of twenty Shakespeare quartos (4 vols, pr. 1766); Shakespeare's Works (10 vols, 1773); Six Old Plays on which Shakespeare founded his Measure for Measure, Com. of Errors, Taming, King John, Henry IV and V, King Lear (2 vols, 1779).
R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Stefani, MARCHIONNE: see MARCHIONNE DI COPPO DI STEFANO BUONAIUTI.

Stefánsson, DAVÍÐ (*Fagriskógur, Eyjafjörður 21 I 1895; †Akureyri 1 III 1964), Icelandic poet and dramatist. He was much abroad in his youth, but settled in Akureyri, where he was a librarian, from 1925. He is probably the most popular of 20th-century Icelandic poets. His inspiration is often Icelandic folk-lore. Originality of thought, mastery of form, and a simple, personal style characterize his best work. He discarded much of the traditional trappings of Icelandic verse. Apart from his lyric poetry, the novel Sólon Íslandur (2 vols, 1940) and the play Gullna hliðið (1941) are his most significant works.

VERSE: Svartar fjaðrir (1919); Kvæði (1922); Kvæður (1924); Ný kvæði (1929); Í byggðum (1933); Að norðan (1936); Kvæðasafn (3 vols, 1943); Ný kvæðabók (1947); Ávarp fjallkonunnar (1954); Ljóð frá liðnu sumri (1956); Í dögun (1960).—PLAYS AND PROSE: Munkarnir á Möðruvöllum (1925); Gullna hliðið (1941; 'The Golden Gate', tr. G. M. Gathorne-Hardy in Fire and Ice, Three Icelandic Plays, intro. E. Haugen, 1967); Vopn guðanna (1944); Landið gleymda (1956); Mælt málið (1963).

S. Guðmundsson, 'D. S. fimmtugur' in Heiðnar hugvekjur og mannaminni (1946); K. Eldjárn, 'D. S.' in Skírnir, CXXIX (1955).

R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Stefánsson, JÓN: see GJALLANDI, ÞORGILS.

Steffen, ALBERT (*Murgenthal 10 XII 1884; †Dornach 13 VII 1963), Swiss dramatist, novelist and essayist. He studied natural sciences in Lausanne and philosophy and history at the Universities of Zürich, Berlin and Munich. A follower of Rudolf Steiner and his anthroposophy, he became, after the death of Steiner in 1925, the leader of the movement, which has its headquarters in Dornach, Switzerland. He made his prolific literary activity serve the development of theosophy, emphasizing its belief in the spiritual essence of human existence and the capability of men to leaven all social and political institutions with the ethics of mutual understanding and brotherly love.

PLAYS: Der Auszug aus Aegypten (1916); Die Manichäer (1916); Das Viergetier (1924); Der Chef des Generalstabs (1927); Der Sturz des Antichrist (1927); Friedenstragödie (1936); Pestalozzi (1939); Alexanders Wandlung (1953).—NOVELS: Ott, Alois und Werelsche (1907); Die Bestimmung der Roheit (1912); Sibylla Mariana (1917); Sucher nach sich selbst (1931); Oase der Menschlichkeit (1954).

R. J. Hofrichter, 'A. S.' in Three Poets and Reality (1942); F. Hiebel, A. S. Die Dichtung als schöne Wissenschaft (1960). H.B.

Steffens, HENRICH (*Stavanger 2 V 1773; ∞1803 Hanna Reichardt; †Berlin 13 II 1845), Danish-Norwegian philosopher. He went to school in Denmark and studied at Copenhagen. He became acquainted with Goethe* and the Jena Romantics in Germany and preached the new ideas in 1802 in Copenhagen, where he was mainly responsible for the conversion of Oehlenschläger*. Steffens lived permanently in Germany after 1804, as Professor of Halle, Breslau and (from 1832) Berlin, and his many philosophical and religious works are written in German.

PHILOSOPHY: Beyträge zur innern Naturgeschichte der Erde (1801); Indledning til filosofiske Forelæsninger (1803); Grundzüge der philosophischen Naturwissenschaft (1806); Ueber die Idee der Universitäten (1809); Die gegenwärtige Zeit (2 vols, 1817); Anthropologie (2 vols, 1832); Polemische Blätter (2 vols, 1829–35); Christliche Religionsphilosophie (2 vols, 1839); Nachgelassene Schriften (1846).—NOVELS: Die Familien Walseth und Leith (3 vols, 1827); Die vier Norweger (4 vols, 1928).—MEMOIRS: Was ich erlebte (10 vols, 1840–45); The Story of my Career, tr. W. L. Gage, 1863).

M. Tietzen, Zur Erinnerung an H. S. (1871); R. Petersen, H. S. (1881); F. Karsen, S.s Romane (1908); H. Beyer, Henrik Wergeland og H. S. (1920); E. Huesmann, S. in seinen Beziehungen zur deutschen Frühromantik (1930); E. Achterberg, H. S. und die Idee des Volkes (1938); I. Möller, H. S. (1948). E.B.

Stehr, HERMANN (*Habelschwerdt 16 II 1864; †Oberschreiberhau 11 IX 1940), German novelist. He was about 50 before he retired from being a village schoolmaster and devoted himself entirely to writing. At the age of 53 he published his masterpiece, one of the great novels of modern German literature, Der Heiligenhof (2 vols, 1918)—Silesian mysticism reinterpreted, a search for divine harmony in a world of dissonance, described in realistic rustic language.

Gesammelte Werke (12 vols, 1927–36).

H. S. (ed. W. Meridies, 1924); Das H.-S.-Buch (ed. H. C. Kaergel, 1934); W. Milch, H. S. (1934); W. Baumgart, H. S. (1941; 3rd ed. 1943); W. Meridies, H. S. (1964) and Wege zu H. S. (1964); H. S. (ed. F. Richter, 1964).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Stein, GERTRUDE (*Allegheny, Pa. 3 II 1874; †Paris, France 27 VII 1946), American writer. She studied psychology and medicine in America before settling in Paris where she met Picasso, Matisse and their contemporaries. A wealthy art-collector, she transferred theories of abstract art to her writing. Three Lives caught the rhythms of three nearly inarticulate minds by its simplicity of language and subtle repetition of phrases to accent emotional experience. If her own later experimental writing is often turgid and monotonous, she had a marked influence on the writing of younger American expatriates to whom she gave the name 'lost generation'. The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas (1933) tells her own life story through the fictionalized persona of her companion, who later gave her own account.

Three Lives: Stories of the Good Anna, Melantha, and the Gentle Lena (1909); Tender Buttons: Objects, Food, Rooms (1914); The Making of Americans (1925); Matisse, Picasso, and G. S., with Two Shorter Stories (1933); Four Saints in Three Acts (1934); Everybody's Autobiography

(1937); Brewsie and Willie (1946); Four in America (1947).—Selected Writings (ed. C. Van Vechten, 1946); Unpublished Writings of G. S. (8 vols, 1951–58).

B. Imbs, Confessions of Another Young Man (1936); E. Wilson, Axel's Castle (1931); E. Sprigge, G. S.: Her Life and Work (1957); J. M. Brinnin, The Third Rose: G. S. and Her World (1959); A. B. Toklas, What Is Remembered (1963); A. Stewart, G. S. and the Present (1967).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Steinbeck, JOHN ERNST (*Salinas, Cal. 27 II 1902; ∞1930 Carol Henning [o/o 1943], ∞1943 Gwyn Conger; †20 XII 1968), American novelist and short-story writer. He depicted the life in his native California in varying tones; the picaresque story of Monterey paisanos, Tortilla Flat (1935), was followed by the grim novel of a labour strike, In Dubious Battle (1936). His concern with migratory farm labourers led to The Grapes of Wrath (1939), the epic of a family from the dust bowl seeking work and human dignity in California. Steinbeck felt strongly for those excluded from American prosperity, sometimes, as in Cannery Row (1945), being led to an adulation of the idyllic communal life led by bums and prostitutes. Nevertheless his novels provide a powerful testament to the suffering and endurance of the poor during the Depression Years.

NOVELS: Cup of Gold (1929); The Pastures of Heaven (1932); To a God Unknown (1933); Of Mice and Men (1937); The Moon Is Down (1942); The Wayward Bus (1947); East of Eden (1952); Sweet Thursday (1954); The Short Reign of Pippin IV (1957).—The Long Valley (stories; 1938).

Warren French, J. S. (1961).

D.E.Mo.

Steinberg or Steinbarg, ELIEZER (*Lipkany, Bessarabia 1880; †Czernowitz 1932), Yiddish poet, a highly original author of rhymed fables. He lived for a time in the Argentine, returning to his home country as leader of a Yiddish cultural and educational centre in Czernowitz after the First World War. He founded a theatrical studio there and wrote and directed plays for children.

Alef-Bays (1921); Di maaselekh fun Bereyshis (1923); Durkh di briln (1928). J.S.

Steinberg, YAAKOV (*Byelaya Tserkov, Ukraine 1887; †Tel Aviv 22 VI 1947), Hebrew poet, novelist and essayist. He left his native town very early for Odessa, to ask Bialik* for guidance and encouragement. His first book of poems (Warsaw, 1904) had been praised by the Hebrew critics, who saw in Steinberg a new and original poet. His style is Biblical. He also wrote in Yiddish.

Complete works (Tel Aviv, 1937 ff.).

S.A. (M.G.; Y.F.)

Steinberg, YEHUDA (*Lipkany 1863; †Odessa 10 III 1908), Hebrew novelist and fabulist. He distinguished himself as a Hebrew grammarian and wrote a grammar for Hebrew schools. For his school in Lipkany he wrote a collection of fables and parables, Bayir u-Bayaar (1896) and soon became the most sought-after contributor to all important Hebrew periodicals. His short stories are unique both for their language and powers of description. His best books are the two collections of stories and dialogues of the Hassidim, and the tale of a Jewish conscript of the time of Nicholas I.

Bayamim Hahaim (In Those Days, tr. G. Jeshurun, Philadelphia, 1915); The Breakfast of the Birds (tr. E. Solis-Cohen, Jr, ibid., 1917); Kol Kitvei Y. S. (1959). S.A. (M.G.; Y.F.)

Steiner, GEORGE (*Paris 23 IV 1926), American scholar and short-story writer (naturalized 1944). A man intimate with many cultures and scholastic techniques, Steiner showed in his Anno Domini (1964) a talent as a short-story writer equal to his scholarship. (See also ANTHOLOGIES.)

CRITICISM: Tolstoy or Dostoyevsky (1959); The Death of Tragedy (1961); Language and Silence (1967). D.E.Mo.

Steingrímsson, JÓN (*Þverá, Blönduhlíð 10 IX 1728; ∞1753 Þórunn Hannesdóttir; †Prestbakki á Síðu 11 VIII 1791), Icelandic autobiographer. After being educated at the Cathedral School at Hólar and living through hard years as a farmer and fisherman, he became parson and rural dean in Skaftafellssýsla in south Iceland. He lived through the devastating eruptions of 1783 and the following years of hardship, and left descriptions of them both in a separate monograph and in the autobiography for which he is chiefly remembered as a literary figure. This graphic account of his life, at once frank, humorous and pious, is of great psychological and historical interest.

Ævisaga J. S. (1913–36; 1945).

P.G.F.

Steinhöwel, HEINRICH (*1412; †Ulm 1482), German humanist; studied in Vienna and Padua; medical practitioner in Ulm and Esslingen. He translated, modifying freely, inter alia: Geoffrey [Godfrey*] of Viterbo's Appolonius (1461), Boccaccio's* De claris mulieribus (1473) and (Aretino's Latin version [Francesco Accolti*]) Guiscardo e Sigismunde (1473). His Aesop (fables from Avianus*, Rumicius, anecdotes of Petrus* Alfonsi, Bracciolini*-Poggio, etc.; 1476; ed H. Osterley, 1873) is his most successful work.

Complete list of works in A. von Keller, S.s. Decameron (wrongly ascribed to S.; 1860); De claris mulieribus (ed. K. Drescher, 1865); Aesop (ed. E. Vouillème, 1922).

Keller's intro. is substantial; see also M. O'C. Walshe, Medieval German Literature (1962).

F.P.P.

Steinman, ELIEZER (*Podolia 1892; †1970), Hebrew writer. As a child he studied in Kishinev and learnt both Russian and Hebrew. He was close to the Hasidic movement, to which he devoted much of his later writing. He began writing for Hebrew journals around 1909, and also published translations of world literature. He lived periodically in Odessa, the centre of Hebrew literature. He was unique amongst his contemporary Hebrew writers in heralding the Revolution and in seeking a synthesis of Communism and Hebraism. But he left Russia disillusioned in 1920, and finally settled in Palestine in 1924. He started the Hebrew periodical Kethubim with the poet A. Shlonsky* in 1926. He published an enormous number of stories, memoirs, autobiographical and critical works, and anthologies of Rabbinic and Hasidic thought.

Gam ha-hasiduth (adapted anthol.; 1959); Ha-har ha-yaroq (stories, 1965); Be-er na Talmud (adapted anthol.; 1965-67).

L.Y.

Steinmar, VON KLINGNAU, BERTHOLD (fl. 1270-80), Swiss poet, ministerialis to Walther von Klingen. Some of his 14 songs are latter-day minnesang; in others, more drastic travesty of its conventions than in Hadlaub*, with cheerfully earthy homage to sturdy wenches followed through the fields or into the loft. His 'hayseed' Dawn Song is a gem. He also wrote verses in praise of autumn gluttony and drinking.

K. Bartsch, Die schw. Minnesänger (1886); H. Maschek, Lyrik des späten M.A.s (1939); Olive Sayce, Poets of the Minnesang (1967).—R. Meissner, B. St. von Kl. und seine Lieder (1886).

F.P.P.

Steinn Steinarr, pseud. of AÐALSTEINN KRISTMUNDSSON (*Laugaland, Ísafjarðarsýsla 13 X 1908; †25 V 1958), Icelandic poet. After a poor childhood in the country, he came to Reykjavík in the Depression, scraped a living and became a Communist. His first poems were fiercely political and idealistic, but his succeeding work showed deepening pessimism and increasing preoccupation with form. His nihilism and his departure from the traditions of Icelandic verse have had a very strong influence on younger poets.

Rauður loginn brann (1934); Ljóð (1937); Spor í sandi (1940); Ferð án fyrirheits (1942); Tíminn og vatnið (1948); Kvæðasafn og greinar (ed. K. Karlsson, 1964).

P.G.F.

Stendhal, pseud. of MARIE-HENRI BEYLE (*Grenoble 23 I 1783; †Paris 22 III 1842), French novelist. His dislike of provincial society was the beginning of his revolt against all social classes which had a decisive influence on his life and work. He went to Paris in 1799 intending to enter the École Polytechnique, but found the preparation for the examination too much trouble. Through the influence of his cousin, Pierre Daru, he obtained a commission in the dragoons. He took part in Napoleon's second Italian campaign, but in spite of his enthusiasm for the army it has been established that he was never a combatant. He soon resigned his commission, but returned to the army as a non-combatant officer during the Russian campaign. He lived in Italy from 1814 to 1821, when he was made to leave by the Austrian police because of his relations with the Italian patriots. He was appointed French consul at Civitavecchia in 1830 and held the post until his death.

The principal factors in his make-up were logique—a love of mathematics and the philosophers of the Enlightenment—and espagnolisme, the passionate temperament that he claimed to have inherited from Italian ancestors. It is precisely the combination of acute psychological insight with a remarkably delicate sensibility which gives his work its enduring appeal. His three greatest novels are all studies of the political situation from different angles. The heroes, who are partial portraits of the novelist, are all 'outsiders' at odds with society. In them he created a new psychological type which altered the whole perspective of the European novel.

NOVELS: Armance (1827; Eng. tr. C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, 1928); Le Rouge et le Noir (1830; Scarlet and Black, tr. idem, 1926); La Chartreuse de Parme (1839; The Charterhouse of Parma, tr. idem, 1926); Lamiel (1889; tr. T. W. Earp, 1951); Lucien Leuwen (1894, 1926-27; I: The Green Huntsman, II: The Telegraph, tr. H. L. R. Edwards, 1951).—NOUVELLES: L'Abbesse de Castro (1839; enlarged ed., Nouvelles inédites, 1855; The Abbess of Castro and Other Stories, tr. C. K. Scott-Moncrieff, 1926); Romans et nouvelles (1854).—MISCELLANEOUS: Vies de Haydn, de Mozart et de Métaïstase (1814; tr. and ed. R. N. Coe, 1972); Histoire de la peinture en Italie (1817); Rome, Naples et Florence (1817, 1826; tr. R. N. Coe, 1959); De l'Amour (1822; On Love, tr. V. Holland, 1928); Racine et Shakespeare (1823, 1825); Vie de Rossini (1823; tr. R. N. Coe, 1970); Promenades dans Rome (1829; A Roman Journal, tr. and ed. H. Chevalier, 1959); Mémoires d'un touriste (1838); Voyage dans le Midi de la France (1854, 1927; tr. E. Abbott, 1971); La vie de Henri Brulard (1894; tr. C. A. Phillips, 1925); Souvenirs d'égotisme (1892; Memoirs of an Egotist, tr. T. W. Earp, 1949); Journal (5 vols, 1923-34; The Private Diaries of S., tr. and ed. R. Sage, 1955); Napoléon (1929).—Œuvres complètes (ed. H. Martineau, 79 vols, 1927-37).

D. Gunnell, S. et l'Angleterre (1909; Selected

Journalism From the English Reviews by S. With Translations of Other Critical Writings, tr. and ed. G. Strickland, 1959); L. Blum, S. et le Beylisme (1914); P. Arbelet, La Jeunesse de S. (2 vols, 1919); J. Prévost, La Création chez S. (1942; 1951); H. Martineau, L'Œuvre de S. (1945, 1966); M. Josephson, S. or the Pursuit of Happiness (1946); M. Bardèche, S. romancier (1947); M. Turnell, The Novel in France (1950) and The Art of French Fiction (1959); A. Caraccio, S. l'homme et l'œuvre (excellent manual; 1951, 1963; Eng. tr. D. Bagley, 1965); J. P. Richard, Littérature et sensation (1954); G. Blin, S. et les problèmes du roman (1954) and S. et les problèmes de la personnalité (1958); R. M. Adams, S. Notes on a Novelist (1959); S. A. Collection of Critical Essays (1962); F. W. J. Hemmings, S. (1964); V. Brombert, S.: Fiction and the Themes of Freedom (1968).

M.T.

Stephan, 'MAGISTER' (fl. Dorpat [Tartu] c. 1360–70), Low German didactic poet; probably teacher at the cathedral school. His adaptation of Jacobus de Cessolis' Book of Chess is more independent than any other German version (Konrad* von Ammenhusen). Although addressed to the nobility, it pays special attention to the middle class, with whom it still found favour a century later (1st pr. Lübeck c. 1499). His adaptation of the *Disticha* Catonis* also shows originality.

Dat schakspil to düde (c. 1499; new ed. W. Schlüter, 1889); Mittelniederdeutscher Cato (ed. P. Graffunder in Niederdt. Jahrb., XXIII and XXV, 1898–99).

P. Zimmermann, 'Meister S.s Schachbuch' in Niederdt. Korrespondenzbl., IX (1884); C. T. Saul, Studien zu Meister S.s Schachbuch (diss. Münster, 1926); W. Mitzka, 'Die deutschen Catodichtungen des Mittelalters' in Zeitschrift für deutsche Philol., LIV (1929).

G.C.

Stephansson, STEPHAN GUÐMUNDSSON (*Kirkjuból, Skagafjörður 3 X 1853; ∞ Helga Jónsdóttir; †Markerville, Canada 10 VIII 1927), Icelandic-Canadian poet. Of poor parents, he emigrated with his family to America in 1873 and finally settled in Alberta where he lived as a farmer for the rest of his life. His poems touch a wide range of subjects, personal and political, domestic and international. His vast vocabulary and thoroughly individual outlook make him in some ways a 'difficult' poet. Throughout he appears as an upright man whose passionate feelings, even when bitter, never affect his uprightness.

VERSE: Úti á víðavangi (1894); Á ferð og flugi (1900); Andvökur (6 vols, 1909–38; 2nd ed. 1953–58); Kolbeinslag (1914); Heimleiðis (1917); Víglóði (1920); Andvökur. Úrval (ed. S. Nordal, 1939); Úrvalsljóð (ed. Hulda, 1945).—PROSE: Bréf og ritgerðir (4 vols, 1938–48).

W. Kirkconnell, 'Canada's leading poet' in Univ. Toronto Quart., V (1936); F. S. Crawley, 'The greatest poet of the Western world: S. G. S.' in Scand. Stud. and Notes, XV (1938–39); S. Nordal, S. G. S. Maðurinn og skáldið (1959).

R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Stephen, SIR JAMES FITZJAMES (*London 3 III 1829; ∞ 1855 Mary Cunningham; †Ipswich 11 III 1894), English judge and writer on legal subjects, contributor to the Pall Mall Gazette and Saturday Review.

General View of the Criminal Law (1863); Liberty, Equality, Fraternity (1873); History of the Criminal Law of England (1883); The Story of Nuncomar and the Impeachment of Sir Elijah Impey (2 vols, 1885); Horae Sabbaticae (1892; contribs to Saturday Review).

Sir Leslie Stephen [brother], Life of Sir J. F. S. (1895); L. Radzinowicz, Sir J. F. S. (1957).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Stephen, SIR LESLIE (*London 28 XI 1832; ∞ 1867 Harriet Thackeray, ∞ 1878 Julia Duckworth; †ibid. 22 II 1904), English man of letters and mountaineer, first editor of The Dictionary of National Biography. See BLOOMSBURY GROUP.

Peaks, Passes and Glaciers (2 vols, 1861–62); Playground of Europe (1871); Essays on Free Thinking and Plain Speaking (1873); Hours in a Library (1874, 1876, 1879); History of English Thought in the Eighteenth Century (2 vols, 1876); The Science of Ethics (1882).—Johnson (1878); Pope (1880); Swift (1882).

F. W. Maitland, Life and Works of L. S. (1906); J. D. Wilson, L. S. and Matthew Arnold as Critics of Wordsworth (1939); N. G. Annan, S. (1951); J. Gross, Rise and Fall of the Man of Letters (1969).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Stephens, JAMES (*Dublin 1882; †London 26 XII 1950), Irish poet and novelist. He was born of poor parents and was self-educated. When a clerk in Dublin he was discovered by George William Russell*. After the success of his two best books The Crock of Gold (1912) and Deirdre (1923) he lectured in the U.S.A. in 1925 and 1935. A writer of the greatest originality, his fiction is a curious blend of realism and fantasy in which gods and tinkers, children and talking animals, philosophers and policemen rub shoulders. His own philosophy is mystical and pantheistic, full of naïve and subtle wisdom. His lyrics, often based on Irish originals, are mostly spontaneous and charming. In his later years he was a successful broadcaster with the B.B.C.

VERSE: Collected Poems (1926; 2nd ed. 1954).—NOVELS AND STORIES: The Charwoman's Daughter (1912); Here Are Ladies (1913); The Demi-Gods (1914); Irish Fairy Tales (1920); In the Land of Youth (1924); Etched in Moonlight (1928).—

VARIOUS: The Insurrection in Dublin (1916).—J. S.: A Selection (ed. L. Frankenbey, 1962); James, Seumas, Jacques (ed. idem, 1964).

B. Bramsback, J. S. (Uppsala, 1959); Hilary Pyle, J. S. (1965; incl. biblio.). E.T.W.

Stephens, JOHN (fl. 1615), English satirist and lawyer, who shows sharpness of observation in his book of essays and character-sketches (the third in English), a work mainly concerned with brief comments on current vices.

Satirical essays, characters and others, or accurate and quick descriptions, fitted to the life of their subjects (1615).

B. Boyce, The Theophrastan Character in England (1947). G.K.H.

Stepney, GEORGE (*Westminster 1663; †Chelsea 15 IX 1707), English diplomat, member of the Kit Kat Club, called 'one of the finest poets of his time' by Sir Erasmus Phillips. Very learned and admired by Addison*, Stepney produced a translation of Juvenal's* eighth satire for Dryden's* 1693 translation.

Poems (1701; ed. Johnson, XII; Anderson, VI; Chalmers, VIII).

H. T. Swedenberg, Jr, 'G. S., My Lord Dorset's Boy' in Huntington Libr. Quart. (1946).

B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Stepnyak or Stepniak, S., pseud. of SERGEY MIKHAYLOVICH KRAVCHINSKY (*1852; †1895), Russian terrorist who fled abroad and wrote—mostly in English—about the conditions and the revolutionary movement in his country.

La Russia sotterranea (in Ital. 1882; in Eng. 1883; in Russ. 1893); Andrey Kozhukhov (in Eng. as The Career of a Nihilist, 1889; in Russ. 1898, 1921); Russia under the Tsars (2 vols, 1885); The Russian Peasantry (2 vols, 1895); King Stork and King Log (stud. of contemporary Russia; 2 vols, 1895).

L. G. Deich, S. M. K. (1919). J.L.

Stere, CONSTANTIN (*Cerepău, Bessarabia 1865; †Bucov, nr Ploiești 1936), Rumanian publicist and novelist. After a prolonged period of exile in Siberia imposed by the Tsarist government, he fled to Rumania in 1892 and created the Poporanist movement, dedicated to the welfare of the peasantry. In 1906 he was co-founder of the review Viața românească. His novel În preajma revoluției (8 vols, 1931–36), a thinly disguised account of his life and times, is a moving document influenced in manner by the Russian masters.

L. Leoneanu, Portrete literare și politice (1935); E. Lovinescu, Istoria literaturii române contemporane, 1900–1937 (1937); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române (1941). F.J.B.

Sterling, GEORGE (*Sag Harbor, N.Y. 1 XII 1869; ∞1896 Caroline Rand [o/o 1915]; †San Francisco, Calif. 17 XI 1926), American poet. A San Francisco bohemian, he was strongly influenced by Ambrose Bierce* and wrote flamboyant poems of the West.

The Testimony of the Suns and Other Poems (1903); A Wine of Wizardry (1909); The House of Orchids and Other Poems (1911); Thirty-Five Sonnets (1917); After Sunset (1939).—Selected Poems (1923).—Robinson Jeffers: The Man and the Artist (1926). H.L.C.

Sterne, LAURENCE (*Clonmel, Co. Tipperary 24 XI 1713; ∞30 III 1741 Eliza Lumley; †London 18 III 1768), English novelist. He was the son of an English army officer stationed in Ireland; was educated in Halifax, Yorks, and at Cambridge University; worked as a parson in Sutton and Coxwold, where he completed his novel Tristram Shandy. In 1762 he travelled in France, the result being his Sentimental Journey (1768). He also published several volumes of sermons. His literary importance rests mainly on Tristram Shandy, a novel of excellent character-drawing and cultivated eccentricity, in which the narrative technique both parodies and reflects post-Lockean theories about the process of thought. Its deliberate irrelevancy and oddity give Sterne's narrative style a very individual stamp. Both novels, with their emphasis upon sentiment, initiated a reaction against the intellectuality of the Augustans. Modern writers influenced by his style include James Joyce*; it has a certain affinity with that of Rabelais*; but the quality of Sterne's humour, which is prurient, is very different.

The Life and Opinion of Tristram Shandy (9 pts, 1760–67; ed. I. Watt, 1965, and G. Petrie, 1967); Sentimental Journey (2 vols, 1768; ed. G. D. Stout, 1967; ed. I. Jack, 1968); Letters from Yorick to Eliza (1773); Sterne's Letters to his Friends on Various Occasions (1775); Letters of L. S. to his most intimate friends (1775); Original Letters never before published (ed. W. D. Cooper, 1844); Unpublished Letters of L. S. (ed. J. Murray, 1856).—Works (ed. W. L. Cross, 12 vols, 1904); Letters (ed. L. P. Curtis, 1934).

W. M. Thackeray, 'S. and Goldsmith' in The English Humorists (1853); P. Fitzgerald, Life of L. S. (2 vols, 1864); W. L. Cross, Life and Times of L. S. (1909; rev. 1925 and 1929); W. Sichel, S. (to which is added Journal to Eliza; 1910); L. Melville, Life and Letters of L. S. (2 vols, 1911); P. Quennell, Four Portraits (1945); E. N. Dilworth, Unsentimental Journey of L. S. (1948); J. Traugott, L. S.'s World (1954); H. Fluchère, L. S. (in Fr. 1961; tr. B. Bray, 1965); L. Hartley, L. S. in the 20th Century (annotated biblio.; 1966).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Sternheim, CARL (*Leipzig 1 IV 1878; †Brussels 3

XI 1942), German dramatist and prose writer, a Jewish banker's son. He rejected his early experiments in Naturalist, neo-Romantic and Symbolist drama, and in Die Hosen (1910) and the series of virulently anti-bourgeois plays which rapidly followed produced satirical chronicles of the smugly materialist, brutally rationalist and weakly conformist society of Wilhelminian Germany, written in terse, unpoetic language and elegantly plotted in a way that parodied the well-made play. The best of these comedies are: Die Kasse (1911), Bürger Schippel (1913), Der Snob (1914), 1913 (1915), Tabula Rasa (1916) and Das Fossil (1922)—all later collected as Aus dem bürgerlichen Heldenleben (tr. Scenes From the Heroic Life of the Middle Classes, ed. J. M. Ritchie, 1970, incl. 'The Bloomers', 'Paul Schippel, Esq.', 'The Snob', '1913' and 'The Fossil'; tr. of Die Kasse, 'The Strong Box' in An Anthology of German Expressionist Drama, ed. W. H. Sokel, 1963). Sternheim's plays lead directly to Brecht*. Dandy and scourge of conventional society, he saw himself in Stendhal* and Wilde*, and in others whose works he adapted for the stage—Molière*, Prévost*, Klinger*, Diderot*, Maupassant* and Flaubert*. From 1930 until his death he lived in a palace near Brussels, a prey to nervous depression. His works were banned in Germany in 1933. In the 1960s he has been rediscovered as the German Molière, a title he always claimed.

Die Schule von Uznach, oder Neue Sachlichkeit (plays; 1926; origin of 'New Objectivity' as a term to describe German literature of the mid-1920s).—Gesammelte Werke (6 vols, 1962–65); Gesamtwerk (8 vols, 1963–).

W. Paulsen, 'C. S.: Das Ende des Immoralismus' in Akzente, III (1956); R. Beckley, 'C. S.' in German Men of Letters, II (ed. A. Natan, 1963); H. Karasek, C. S. (1965); W. Wendler, C. S.: Weltvorstellung und Kunstprinzipien (1966); M. Sebald, C. S. (1969). K.P.

Sternhold, THOMAS (*?Southampton; †23 VIII 1549), English writer and M.P., famous for his metrical versions of the Psalms, which had great popularity and established COMMON MEASURE (the metre of Chevy Chase) as a conventional verse-form for psalms and hymns. He held a minor position at the court of Henry* VIII.

Certainne Psalmes chosen out of the Psalter of David (1549). J.B.B.

Stery, PETER (*London IX 1613; ∞11 1641 Frances Asheworth; †ibid. 19 XI 1672), English divine of great imaginative power and learning, whose sermons have been acclaimed for their warmth and strength as prose. First a Cambridge Platonist, but latterly more mystical in his doctrine of will, Stery sat in the Westminster assembly (1643) and was chaplain to Cromwell.

A Discourse of the Freedom of the Will (1675).

V. de Sola Pinto, P. S., Platonist and Puritan (with sel., incl. verse tr. of Boethius, De Consolatione Philosophiae, III, ix; 1934).

B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Stesichorus, Greek lyric poet from Sicily (prob. 6th century B.C.), wrote choral songs narrating legendary incidents, often connected with the Trojan War or the exploits of Heracles: e.g. a Palinodia ('Recantation'), which asserts that HELEN did not go to Troy after all, and a Geryoneis.

D. L. Page, Lyrica Graeca selecta (with new frags of Geryoneis in the Addenda; 1968); J. M. Edmonds, Lyra Graeca, II (1924; with tr.).—C. M. Bowra, Greek Lyric Poetry (2nd ed. 1961). J.T.H.

Stethatus: see Nicetas Stethatus.

Stevens, WALLACE (*Reading, Pa. 2 X 1879; †Hartford 2 VIII 1955), American poet. He was educated at Harvard and afterwards led an unusual double life working for an insurance company in Hartford, Conn. and writing a poetry both jewelled and exact. Although his poems began appearing in 1913, he was reluctant to publish a volume until ten years later. Harmonium (1923) is a surprisingly mature yet inventive first book. It combines short 'dandified' Imagistic poems with wittily ironic exercises based on Elizabethan blank verse and with lengthy verse meditations, such as the famous 'Sunday Morning', in the Wordsworthian tradition. Later works such as Ideas of Order (1936) and The Man With the Blue Guitar (1937) gained more acclaim, and Stevens had made a reputation as a handler of exotic images in diction decidedly French in its origins. But this was no mere trifling with aesthetic values, and a concern with the complex relations of art to life marries style and meaning in his best work. Notes Toward a Supreme Fiction (1942), finally linking an individual use of symbol with abstract but penetrative language, has claims to be the most achieved long poem in English of recent times. Stevens' feeling for modern man, alienated from religious meaning and myth while seeking validity for his intimations of lasting beauty, gives his work a metaphysical force undiminished in his last poems. His essays, influenced by Paul Valéry*, are equally taut and perceptive in their analyses of the interdependence of reality and the imagination.

POETRY: Parts of a World (1942); Transport to Summer (1947); The Auroras of Autumn (1950); Collected Poems (1954).—PROSE: The Necessary Angel (1951); Opus Posthumous (1957); Letters of W. S. (ed. Holly Stevens, 1966).

W. V. O'Connor, The Shaping Spirit, A Study of W. S. (1950); R. Pack, W. S., An Approach to His Poetry and Thought (1958); F. Kermode, W. S. (1960). D.E.Mo.

Stevenson, ROBERT LOUIS BALFOUR (*Edinburgh 13 XI 1850; †1880 Fanny Van de Grift; †Samoa 3 XII 1894), Scottish man of letters. He was called to the Scottish Bar in 1875, but turned to writing, and made a reputation early with miscellaneous essays contributed to The Cornhill Magazine (1876–82). Ill-health and a natural wanderlust took Stevenson much away from home in his 20s and 30s; in 1888 he set out for the South Seas, where he settled and died.

A man of burning energy and enthusiasm, he applied himself unsparingly to a great variety of literary tasks. He was, despite a somewhat obtrusive morality, a good lyric poet, especially in nostalgic moods. He assiduously developed one of the most graceful, varied and resilient of English prose styles; and yet he is never merely a stylist. His essays have all the charm of a rich, generous, humorous personality openly displayed; and in criticism he is lively, penetrating and refreshingly unacademic. His most popular work is his adventure fiction; in Treasure Island (1883; serial 1881–82), Catriona (1893) and The Master of Ballantrae (1889) he gave a new artistic quality and depth to a minor type of novel. In The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde (1886) and the eloquent vernacular Thrawn Janet he made notable contributions to the supernatural tale; and in the unfinished Weir of Hermiston (1896), with its assured handling of Scots, its sense of atmosphere and setting, and its appreciation of the Scots mind and heart, there is the unfulfilled promise of a great national novelist. There a fine style and an artistic sympathy are at last applied to a worthy theme.

An Inland Voyage (1878); Picturesque Notes on Edinburgh (1878); Travels with a Donkey in the Cevennes (1879); Virginibus Puerisque (1881); Familiar Studies of Men and Books (1882); New Arabian Nights (2 vols, 1882); The Silverado Squatters (1883); Prince Otto (1885); More New Arabian Nights (1885); A Child's Garden of Verses (1885); Kidnapped (1886); The Merry Men, and other Tales (1887; incl. 'Thrawn Janet'); Memories and Portraits (1887); Underwoods (1887); Memoir of Fleeming Jenkin (1888); The Black Arrow (1888; serial 1883); The Wrong Box (with Lloyd Osborne; 1888); Father Damien: an Open Letter (1890); The South Seas (1890); Ballads (1891); Across the Plains, with other Memories and Essays (1892); The Wrecker (with Osborne; 1892); Three Plays (with W. E. Henley; 1892); Island Nights' Entertainments (1893); The Ebb Tide (with Osborne; 1894); Vailima Letters (1895); Fables (1896); Songs of Travel (1896); St Ives (completed by A. T. Quiller-Couch, 1897); Collected Poems (ed. J. A. Smith, 1951); Our Samoan Adventure (ed. C. Neider, 1955).—Letters (ed. Sidney Colvin, 2 vols, 1899); Letters to Charles Baxter (ed. J. De L. Ferguson and M. Waingrow, 1956).—Works (Edinburgh ed., 28 vols, 1894–98; Vailima ed., 26 vols, 1922–23; Tusitala ed., 35 vols, 1923).—W. F. Prideaux, A Bibliography of the Works of R. L. S. (1903; rev. 1917); G. L. McKay, A S. Library (6 vols, 1951–65).

Graham Balfour, The Life of R. L. S. (2 vols, 1901).—Sir Walter Raleigh, R. L. S. (1895); J. A. Steuart, R. L. S., Man and Writer (2 vols, 1924); D. Daiches, R. L. S.: A Revaluation (1947); M. Elwin, The Strange Case of R. L. S. (1950); J. Hampden, The S. Companion (1950); R. Aldington, Portrait of a Rebel (1957); E. N. Caldwell, Last Witness for R. L. S. (1960); R. Kiely, R. L. S. and the Fiction of Adventure (1964). J.K.

Stevenson, WILLIAM (*Hunswick, Durham IX 1546; †Durham 1575), English playwright. Stevenson is the most likely of several claimants to the authorship of Gammer Gurtons Needle—the first English comedy in which classical influence is completely digested. G.K.H.

A right pithy, pleasant and merry comedy: entitled Gammer Gurtons needle. Played in Christ's College in Cambridge. Made by Mr. S. Mr. of Art (1575; ed. H. F. B. Brett-Smith, 1920).

B. Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958); F. P. Wilson, The English Drama 1485–1585 (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Stevin, SIMON (*Bruges 1548; †Leiden or The Hague 1620), Dutch physicist, mathematician, civil and military engineer. In 1592 he became Prince Maurice's adviser, head of civil works and quartermaster general, and earned great fame with various inventions (sailing wagon, inclined plane, parallelogram of forces, law of communicating vessels, decimal fractions, etc.). As the author of a number of treatises on these subjects he contributed greatly to the improvement of Dutch as a scientific and technical language.

Dialectike ofte Bewijsconst (1585); Vita politica (1590); Wisconstighe gedachtenissen (1605–08; Lat. tr., Hypomnemata mathematica; incomplete Fr. tr., Mémoires mathématiques).—Œuvres mathématiques (ed. A. Girard, 2 vols, 1634); The Principal Works of S. S. (ed. E. Crone, E. J. Dijksterhuis, R. J. Forbes et al., 6 vols, 1955–66).

W. van der Woude and P. J. Blok in Nieuw Nederlandsch Biografisch Wordenboek, V (1921); H. Bosmans in Biographie Nationale de Belgique, XXIII (1921–24); G. Sarton in Isis (1934); J. and A. Romein, Erflaters van onze beschaving, I (1938); E. J. Dijksterhuis, S. S. (1943); D. J. Struik, Het land van S. en Huygens (1958). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Stewart, DOUGLAS ALEXANDER (*Eltham, New Zealand 6 V 1913), Australian poet and dramatist; literary editor of the Sydney Bulletin (1940–61).

His lyrical versatility includes legendary themes such as those used with colourful effect in his verse plays.

The Flesh and the Spirit (essays; 1948); Collected Poems, 1936-67 (1967).—PLAYS: Four Plays (1958); Fisher's Ghost (1960).

J. McAuley, 'D. S.' in The Literature of Australia (ed. G. Dutton, 1964); N. Keesing, D. S. (1965). A.M.G.

Stewart, DUGALD (*Edinburgh 22 XI 1753; ∞1783 Helen Bannatyne, ∞1790 Helen D'Arcy; †ibid. 11 VI 1828), Scottish philosopher. With his father, joint Professor of mathematics at Edinburgh, 1775; appointed Professor of moral philosophy in 1785. He resigned in 1820. He exercised a strong influence on Scottish thought in his day. He was, philosophically, a disciple of Reid*. Despite a clear and eloquent prose style, his work has now only a historical interest, since he applied himself to current philosophical controversies.

Elements of the Philosophy of the Human Mind (1792); Outlines of Moral Philosophy (1794); Account of the Life and Writings of Thomas Reid (1802); Philosophical Essays (1810); The Philosophy of the Active and Moral Powers (1828).—Works (ed. Sir W. Hamilton, 11 vols, 1854-60).

S. A. Grave, The Scottish Philosophy of Common Sense (1960). J.K.

Sthen, HANS CHRISTENSEN (*Roskilde 25 XI 1544; ∞1567 ?, ∞1602 Elline Olufsdatter, ∞1607 Kirstine Andersdatter; †Malmö 1610), Danish poet. He was headmaster of the grammar school at Elsinore, and later clergyman at Malmö. He is the author of one school-play, Kortvending, and of various edifying leaflets, but it is for his religious poetry that he is remembered.

En liden Haandbog (1578); En liden Vandrebog (1588).

C. J. Brandt, Salmedigteren H. C. S. (1888); C. S. Petersen and H. Brix, H. C. S., af hans Vandrebog (1914); E. Frandsen, H. C. S. (1932). E.B.

Stieler, KASPAR VON (*Erfurt 1 III 1632; †ibid. 24 VI 1707), German poet. After much wandering he served in the Brandenburg army in the Swedish war, but left in 1657 for further travelling. He returned in 1661, occupied several administrative posts and retired in 1689 to settle in Erfurt and practise law. He is chiefly known for his brilliant volume of youthful poems, Geharnschte Venus (1660). Published under the name of FILIDOR DER DORFFERER, it was long attributed to the Holstein parson JACOB SCHWIEGER, though it has the spontaneity and formal grace of the English Cavalier lyrics. On attaining rank and respectability, Stieler produced works of piety and manuals of official correspondence. His Teutsche Sekretariatskunst (1673) determined the form of German correspondence for two generations. His Sprachschatz aspired to be a dictionary parallel to J. G. Schottel's* German grammar.

Die Geharnschte Venus von Filidor dem Dorfferer (1660; repr. 1968; crit. ed. T. Raehse [ascribed to Jacob Schwieger], 1880); Dichtkunst des Spaten (1669; extracts pub. J. Bolte, 1926); Der Teutsche Advokat (1678); 10 works of piety, e.g. Der bussfertige Sünder (1679); Bellemperie (drama based on a Dutch version of T. Kyd's Spanish Tragedy; 1680); Willmuth (allegorical comedy; 1680); Der Teutschen Sprache Stammbaum und Fortwachs oder Teutscher Sprachschatz (1691; repr. as Vol. I of coll. works, ed. S. Sonderegger, 1968).

A. Köster, Der Dichter der Geharnschten Venus (1897; brilliant); C. Höfer, Die Rudolstädter Festspiele 1665-7 und ihr Dichter (with biblio. of K. S.; 1904); W. Eiermann, 'S. als Dichter der Geharnschten Venus' in Zschr. für dt. Philol., XLII (1910); H. Günter, 'S. in Danzig' in Mitteilungen des Westpreussischen Geschichtsvereins, XI (1912); B. Marckwardt, Geschichte der deutschen Poetik, I (1937); G. Ising, Die deutsche Sprache in den Wörterbüchern M. Kramers und K. S. (1956); H. Zeman, K. S., Versuch einer Monographie (diss. Vienna, 1965). L.W.F.

Stiernhielm, GEORG, originally OLOFSSON, took name of LLIA in 1614, ennobled as S. 1631 (*Wika 7 VIII 1598; †22 IV 1672), Swedish poet, philosopher, philologist, scientist and lawyer. He wrote lyrics, sonnets, and ballets for court presentation, but is particularly remembered for his vigorous didactic epic in hexameters, Hercules (wr. 1647; pr. 1658). He did a great deal to raise the profession of poet in popular esteem and has been called 'the father of the Swedish art of poetry'. In philosophy he was a Platonist and an adversary of Aristotle*: he was influenced, too, by Stoicism and German mysticism (Paracelsus*). He was also much concerned with theology and comparative philology.

Heroisk Fägnesång (1643); Heroisk Jubelsång (1644); Then fängne Cupido (1649), Fredsaff (1649), Parnassus triumphans (1651; these last 3 are ballets); Musae Suethizantes (2 vols, 1668); Samlade skrifter (ed. J. Nordström and P. Wieselgren, 1924 ff.); Hercules (crit. ed. E. Noreen, 1936); Stiernhielms filosofiska fragment (ed. J. Nordström, 1924).

S. Ek, 'Till frågan om Hercules två versioner' in Samlaren (1915); A. Friberg, Den svenske Hercules (1945); P. Wieselgren, G. S. (1948); C. I. Ståhle, 'Språk teori och ordval i S.s författarskap' in Arkiv för nordisk filologi (1951).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Stiernstedt, MARIKA (*Stockholm 12 I 1879; †Tyringe 25 X 1954), Swedish novelist. Stiernstedt's upper-class background dictated some of her themes, but social and political interests greatly expanded her range. This is specially noticeable in von Sneckenströms (1924), describing the situation of a Roman Catholic family in Protestant Sweden, and even more in the complex problems of Fröken Liwin (1925). Though not very profound, Stiernstedt has considerable narrative skill and a perceptive grasp of her subject.

Samlade romaner (12 vols, 1934–35); Spegling i en skärva (1936); Attentat i Paris (1942); Banketten (1947); Bland människor (sel. short stories; 1954).

S. Ahlgren, Orfeus i folkhemmet (1938).

C.H.K. (I.S.)

Stifter, ADALBERT (*Oberplan, Bohemia 23 X 1805; ∞1837 Amalie Mohaupt; †Linz 28 I 1868), Austrian writer. The son of a linen-weaver, he studied law in Vienna, but was more interested in painting—he was an accomplished landscape-painter—mathematics and natural science. Timidity preventing his taking the final examinations, he gave lessons in the best houses (Metternich's etc.) and met Grillparzer*, Lenau* and Grün*. Becoming a school inspector in Linz, 1850, he longed for Vienna and after prolonged suffering from ill-health finally committed suicide. Der Kondor owed its publication to chance, a friend's child having removed the manuscript from his pocket; but soon he took his mission with extreme seriousness: few writers reached his exacting standard of moral worth. He held that the quietest virtues (resignation) and the humblest destinies were the most heroic, and in nature too the unspectacular was the truly great. Art must be intimate if it is to be a personally meaningful possession; what is intimidating cannot be lived with. The value of his work lies in its style, his descriptions of nature, and the rendering of the harmony between man and landscape. Characterization is simple, but details of life and of natural beauty are described with emotional intensity.

Studien (6 vols, 1844–50; 2 vols, 1968; sel. tr. M. Norman, Rural Life in Austria and Hungary, 1850); Bergkristall (1845; Eng. tr. E. Mayer and M. Moore, 1945).—Historisch-kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. A. Sauer, G. Wilhelm et al., 24 vols, 1901–60); Unveröffentlichtes (ed. M. von Sellner and L. Franz, 1940); Erzählungen in der Urfassung (ed. M. Stefl, 3 vols, 1952).—Ausgewählte Briefe (ed. M. Enzinger, 1947).

J. Aprent, A. S. (1869, 1955); W. Kosch, A. S. und die Romantik (1905; 3rd ed. 1946) and A. S. als Mensch, Künstler, Dichter und Erzieher (1952); U. Roedel, A. S. (1936, 1958); E. Staiger, S. als Dichter der Ehrfurcht (1943, 1967); K. Privat, A. S. Sein Leben in Selbstzeugnissen, Briefen und Berichten (1946); A. Blackall, A. S. A Critical Study (1948); A. S. Leben und Werk in Briefen und Dokumenten (ed. K. G. Fischer, 1962); E. Frank, Liebe zu S. (1968).—E. Eisenmeier, A. S.-Bibliographie (1964).—A. S.-Almanach (2 vols, 1947, 1953); S.-Jahrb. (1949 ff.); Vierteljahrschrift des A. S.-Instituts (1952 ff.).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Stigen, TERJE (*Kjelvik 28 VI 1922; ∞1947 Inger Gihbsson), Norwegian novelist. A prolific writer with a straightforward and engaging narrative style whose production includes richly characterized and humorously told tales of Norwegian folk life, an exciting novel of the Occupation of Norway (Timer i grenseland, 1966), and novels with a historical setting. He is at his best in the four connected short stories Vindstille underveis (1956), and the novel Det flyktige hjerte (1967). Stigen's narrative verve is often combined with an engaging lyrical quality which goes deepest when he is dealing with an inhibited or corrupted emotional life.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: To døgn (1950); Skygger på mitt hjerte (1952); Nøkkel til ukjent rom (1953); For solnedgang (1954); Frøde Budbæreren (1957); Åsmund Armodsons saga (1958); Stjernøy (1959); Elskere (1960); Kjærlighet (1962); Glasskulen (1963); Til ytterste skjær (1964); Krystallstjernen (1965); De tente lys (1968).

O. Øyslebø in Etterkrigsprofiler (1957).

R.G.P.

Stigliani, TOMMASO (*Matera 1573; †Rome 1651), Italian poet. He led the polemic against Marino's* Adone. His epic poem Il Mondo Nuovo (about the discovery of America) has no great poetic qualities.

Rime (1601–23); Il Mondo Nuovo (unfinished, 1617; complete ed. 1628); L'Occhiale (1627).

M. Menghini, T. S. (1892); F. Croce, Tre momenti del barocco letterario italiano (1966).

U.L.

Stijl, SIMON (*Harlingen 25 II 1731; †ibid. 24 V 1804), Dutch physician, historian, poet and playwright; chairman of the committee for the constitution in the national council. Stijl was a good stylist, musician, amateur actor and orator.

VERSE: Lierzang aan Melpomene (1769); Op den algemeenen vrede (1802); Nagelaten gedichten en toneelpoëzy (1835); Mengelpoëzy (2 vols, 1837).—PROSE: Opkomst en bloei der Vereenigde Nederlanden (1774); 'Leven van Jan Punt' in Levensbeschrijving van eenige voornaame meest Nederl. mannen en vrouwen (1782).—PLAYS: De vryer naar de kunst (1753); Krispijn filosoof (1754; ed. Cath. Ypes, 1955); De Mityleners (1768).

C. Busken Huet, 'De patriotten en S. S.' in Litt. Fantasiën en Kritieken, IX (1881–88); C. Bake, 'S. S. en zijn De opkomst' in Vragen van den Dag, XLVII (1932).

J.W.W.

Stijns, REIMOND (*Mullem 10 V 1850; †Brussels 12 XII 1905), Flemish novelist and short-story writer. In collaboration with ISIDORE TEIRLINCK (1851–1934) he wrote romantic sketches, short stories, plays and a political, anti-Catholic novel Arm Vlaanderen (1884), showing occasional flashes of Naturalism. In the stories and novels which he later wrote independently there is a stronger emphasis on Naturalism. His masterpiece Hard labour (1904) is a purely Naturalistic novel.

NOVELS: Ruwe liefde (1887); In de ton (1891).

L. Baekelmans, Vier Vlaamsche prozaschrijvers (1931). R.F.L.

Stillfried, FELIX, pseud. of ADOLF BRANDT (*Fahrbinde, Mecklenburg 26 IX 1851; †Rostock 5 VI 1910), Low German writer who, in the wake of Reuter*, gave good descriptions and characterizations of rural life in Mecklenburg.

De Wilhelmshäger Kösterlud (2 pts, 1887–88); Ut Sloss un Katen (1890; new ed. Dürten Blanck, 1903); Hack un Plück (1900).—In Lust un Leed (1896; poems).

E. Brandes, 'F. S.' in Mitteilungen Quickborn, V (1911); H. Klenz, F. S. (1911); G. Ballschmieter, A. B. (diss. Rostock, 1921). G.C.

Stilo Praeconinus, LUCIUS AELIUS (*c. 150; †c. 70 B.C.), the first great Roman grammarian, wrote on the Carmina Saliorum, on the language of the Twelve Tables and on Ennius*, Lucilius* and Plautus*. He drew up a canon of 25 authentic Plautine plays, out of 130 then current. Varro* and Cicero* were among his students.

H. Funaioli, Grammaticorum Romanorum fragmenta (1907; repr. 1969). J.A.W.

Stinde, JULIUS (*Kirchnüchel, Holstein 28 VIII 1841; †Olsberg, Westphalia 5 VIII 1905), German writer and playwright. He began with Low German comedies and short stories, but his reputation rests on his High German novels centred on the typical Berlin family of Buchholz.

COMEDIES: Hamburger Leiden (1875); Die Nachtigall aus dem Bäckergang (1875); Tante Lotte (1875).—Ut'n Knick (short stories; 1894).—NOVELS: In eiserner Faust (1874); Buchholzens in Italien (1883); Die Familie Buchholz (3 pts, 1884–86); Frau Wilhelmine Buchholz' Memoiren (1895). G.C.

Stirling, SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF (*Alva c. 1567; ∞1604 Janet Erskine; †London 12 IX 1640), Scottish poet. Knighted in 1609; received Nova Scotia from James* VI, 1621; Secretary of State 1626; raised to the peerage 1630. Stirling was a writer of conventional love-lyrics, moral and reflective poems, and undramatic tragedies.

Recreations with the Muses (coll. poems; 1637; repr. 3 vols, 1870); Anacrisis (1711); Register of Royal Letters (ed. with memoir by C. Rogers, 1885); Poetical Works (ed. L. E. Kastner and H. B. Charlton, 2 vols, 1921–29).

T. H. McGrail, Sir W. A.: A Biographical Study (1940). J.K.

Štítný, TOMÁŠ: see Tomáš ze Štítného.

Stobaeus, JOHN, 5th-century (?) Greek anthologist. His work consists of extracts on various topics, mainly philosophical, and was much used by medieval scholars. It was originally arranged in four books, but was later regrouped into the Eclogae and the Florilegium. It preserves citations from earlier literature no longer extant.

Ed. T. Gaisford (Eclogae, 1822; Florilegium, 1850); ed. C. Wachsmuth and O. Hense (1884–1912). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Stock, DOV: see Sdan, DOV.

Stodola, IVAN (*Liptovský Sv. Mikuláš 10 III 1888), Slovak dramatist. His satirical social comedies, in particular, were very successful in the inter-war period.

Náš pán minister (1926); Jožko Pučík a jeho kariéra (1931); Cigánča (1933).—Divadelné hry (coll. plays; 2 vols, 1956–57). R.A.

Stoke, MELIS, 13th-century Dutch chronicler, clerk in the treasury and chancery of Count William III. He probably wrote Rijmkroniek, a verse chronicle of the county of Holland, 689–1305, partly (up to 1205) adapted from Chronicon Egmundunum.

First ed. J. v. d. Does and H. Lz. Spiegel (1591); latest ed. W. G. Brill in Werken van het Hist. Genootschap, new ser., XL, XLII (1885).

J. te Winkel, 'Het karakter en de staatkundige denkbeelden van M. S.' in Hist. Avonden, I (1896) and Ontwikkelingsgang d. Nederl. Lett., I (2nd ed. 1922); S. Hofker, De Taal van M. S. (1908); J. Romein, Geschiedenis van de Noord-nederlandsche geschiedschrijving in de Middeleeuwen (1932); H. C. Peeters, De Rijmkroniek van Holland, haar auteur en M. S. (1966); H. Bruch in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXXXIV (1968). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Stolberg-Stolberg, CHRISTIAN, GRAF ZU (*Hamburg 15 X 1748; †Eckernförde 18 I 1821), German poet. With his brother Friedrich Leopold, Christian Stolberg was educated at Halle and Göttingen, where he joined the HAINBUND. In 1775 the brothers toured Switzerland with Goethe*. Christian spent his life after 1777 in the administration of Schleswig and Holstein. Beginning as a revolutionary and an adherent of STURM UND

DRANG, he later became a classicist, translating Greek authors.

Gedichte (with Friedrich; 1779); Der Brüder C. und F. Stolberg gesammelte Werke (20 vols, 1820–25).

E. Schmidt, 'C. Stolberg' in Allgemeine deutsche Biographie, XXXVI (1893). H.B.G.

Stolberg-Stolberg, FRIEDRICH LEOPOLD, GRAF ZU (*Bramstedt 7 XI 1750; †Osnabrück 5 XII 1819), German poet, brother of Christian. The more exuberant of the two brothers, Friedrich moved from angry denunciation of tyrants to extreme clerical reaction after he became a Roman Catholic in 1800.

Freiheitsgesang aus dem 20. Jahrhundert (1775); Reise in Deutschland, der Schweiz, Italien und Sizilien (1794).

J. Janssen, F. L. S. (2 vols, 1877); W. Keiper, F. L. Stolbergs Jugendpoesie (1893); H. Cardauns, F. L. Graf zu S. (1920); O. Hellinghaus, F. L. Graf zu S. (1920). H.B.G.

Storer, THOMAS (*London 1571; †ibid. XI 1604), English poet. Storer is known only for his verse life of Cardinal Wolsey, in 241 seven-line stanzas, based on Cavendish* and Holinshed*.

The Life and Death of Thomas Wolsey, Cardinall (1599). J.B.B.

Storm, EDVARD (*Vaage 21 VIII 1749; †Copenhagen 29 IX 1794), Danish-Norwegian poet. After education in Norway, he settled in Denmark, becoming a headmaster in Copenhagen. Among the pupils he influenced was Oehlenschläger*. Storm's early poems are in Norwegian dialect, but he later became an imitator of Ewald*. Herr Sinclair is his best-known poem.

Brøger (1774); Adskilligt paa Vers (1775); Indfødsretten (1778); Samlede Digte (1785).—Digte (ed. A. E. Boye, 1832).

F. Nygaard, Efterslægtsselskabet og E. S. (1886). E.B.

Storm, THEODOR WOLDSSEN (*Husum 14 IX 1817; ∞1846 Constanze Esmarch [†1865], ∞1866 Dorothea Jensen; †Hademarschen 4 VII 1888), German poet and writer of NOVELLEN. A Husum patrician, Storm studied law at Kiel where he became the friend of Theodor and Tycho Mommsen, with whom he published his first poems; he then settled as a lawyer in Husum (1843), but was exiled for his sympathies in the Schleswig-Holstein risings. He was a legal official in Potsdam and Heiligenstadt (1853–64), returning after the Prussian victory over the Danes to Husum, where he became provincial governor. His works were singularly unified. He believed that lyrics should speak straight to the heart, not the head, and his earlier stories are lyrical in mood: nostalgically reminiscent, they tell of personal, particularly family, relationships in Husum. After 1870, though his range was unaltered, the stories strengthened and deepened as he explored their tragic and universal potentialities. Immensee (1852; Eng. tr. H. Clark, 1863) is typical of his first manner, Der Schimmelreiter (1888; Eng. tr. J. Wright, 1964) of his second.

Aquis Submersus (1877; Eng. tr. J. Millar, 1910); Eekenhof (1880; tr. idem, 1908).—Briefwechsel mit Keller (ed. A. Köster, 1904); Kritische Ausgabe (ed. idem, 8 vols, 1919–20); Briefe (ed. G. Storm, 4 vols, 1915–17); Briefwechsel mit Mörike (ed. H. W. Rath, 1921); S.s. Leben in Briefen (ed. B. Loets, 1945).

G. Storm, T. S. (2 vols, 1912); F. Stuckert, T. S., der Dichter in seinem Werk (1940; 3rd ed. 1966) and T. S. (1955); E. O. Woolley, Studies in S. (1942); L. Prinzivalli, T. S. (Palermo, 1958); C. A. Bernd, T. S.'s Craft of Fiction (1963, 1966); E. A. McCormick, T. S.'s Novellen: Essays on Literary Technique (1964); P. Goldammer, T. S. (1968).—H.-E. Teitge, T. S. Bibliographie (1967).—Schriften der T. S.-Gesellschaft (1952 ff.).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Storni, ALFONSINA (*Ticino, Switzerland 29 V 1892; †Buenos Aires 11 V 1938), Argentinian poet. Her verse-form and her emotional approach are fully in the MODERNISTA tradition. But apart from the novelty of a feminine psychology expressed in that particular poetic mode, she gives, by means of extreme intelligence, a fresh twist to the well-worn sentiments of love and desolation.

E.Sa.

La inquietud del rosal (1916); El dulce daño (1918; new ed. 1920); Irremediabilmente (1919); Languidez (1920); Ocre (1925; new ed. 1927).—Obra poética (1952). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Story, WILLIAM WETMORE (*Salem, Mass. 12 II 1819; ∞1843 Emelyn Eldredge; †Vallombrosa, Italy 7 X 1895), American poet and essayist, who became a sculptor.

Roba di Roma (1862); Vallombrosa (1881); Excursions in Art and Letters (1891).

Henry James, W. W. S. and His Friends (2 vols, 1902). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Stout, REX TODHUNTER (*Noblesville, Ind. 1 XII 1886; ∞1916 Fay Kennedy [o/o1933], ∞1933 Pola Hoffman), American detective-story writer. He invented the sleuth Nero Wolfe and his 'leg-man' Archie Goodwin. Wolfe's activities are seen in more serious light in The Doorbell Rang (1966) when he tangles with the F.B.I.

Fer-de-Lance (1934); The President Vanishes (1934); The Hand in the Glove (1937); Some Buried Caesar (1939); Double for Death (1939); Black Orchids (1942); Before Midnight (1955);

If Death Ever Slept (1957); Gambit (1962); Trio for Blunt Instruments (1964); Death of a Dude (1969).
H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Stow, JOHN (*London ?1525; ∞Elizabeth; †ibid. 6 IV 1605), English historian and antiquarian. Stow was brought up as a tailor, but from 1560 onwards devoted himself to collecting documents and compiling records. He is the best known of the Elizabethan antiquaries.

The Workes of Geoffrey Chaucer (1561); Summarie of Englyshe Chronicles (1565); The Chronicles of England (1580); A Survey of London (1598; ed. C. L. Kingsford, 2 vols, 1908–27).
J.B.B.

Stow, (JULIAN) RANDOLPH (*Geraldton, Western Australia 28 XI 1935), Australian novelist and poet; brought up on a station near Geraldton. His writings reflect his wide experience as a University teacher, mission station worker in northern Western Australia, and an anthropologist in New Guinea. In his novels, landscape is intimately interwoven with the emotional and spiritual condition of the human characters. A recurrent concern is the predicament of isolated individuals seeking love, permanence and religious truth amid the chaos of violent human passions. His poems range in form from the satire to the reflective lyric.

NOVELS: A Haunted Land (1956); The Bystander (1957); To the Islands (1958); Tourmaline (1963); The Merry-go-round in the Sea (1965); Midnite (children's book; 1967).—VERSE: Act One (1957); Outrider (1962); A Counterfeit Silence (1969).

G. Dutton 'The search for permanence in the novels of R. S.' in Jour. Commonwealth Lit. (1965); W. H. New, 'Outsider looking out: the novels of R. S.' in Critique, IX.1 (1967).

A.M.G.

Stowe, HARRIET, née BEECHER (*Litchfield, Conn. 14 VI 1811; ∞1836 Calvin Stowe; †Florida 1 VII 1896), American novelist. Daughter of a New England clergyman, she was raised under strict Puritan discipline. Her first novel Uncle Tom's Cabin (1852) became world-famous not for its artistic qualities but for its vivid humanitarian message against slavery. Dred, a subsequent anti-slavery novel, did not have the same popular appeal. Her novels of the mind and manners of New England village folk show her capacity for sharp genre painting.

Dred: A Tale of the Great Dismal Swamp (1856); The Minister's Wooing (1859); The Pearl of Orr's Island (1862); Oldtown Folks (1869); Lady Byron Vindicated (1870); Sam Lawson's Oldtown Fireside Stories (1872); Pogonuc People (1878).—The Writings of H. B. S. (16 vols, 1896).

C. Gilbertson, H. B. S. (1937); F. Wilson, Crusader in Crinoline: The Life of H. B. S. (1941);

C. H. Foster, The Rungless Ladder: H. B. S. and New England Puritanism (1954); J. R. Adams, H. B. S. (1963); E. Wagenknecht, H. B. S.: The Known and the Unknown (1965); A. C. Crozier, The Novels of H. B. S. (1969).
H.L.C. (I.W.)

Stoyanov, LYUDMIL, pseud. of GEORGI ZLATAREV (*Dospat 6 II 1888), Bulgarian author. With Trayanov* he edited the Symbolist monthly Hyperion till 1923. Always opposed to Tsar Ferdinand, he then joined the 'proletarian' writers, the turning-point on his 'road to realism' being Milosurdieto na Marsa (1923). A productive and versatile writer, he has published, besides his verse stories, novels, biographical novels, some literary criticism and autobiography. Since the Second World War he has been a chairman of the Writers' Union and an Academician.

Videnia (1914); Mech i slovo (1917); Apolon i Midas (1923); Gibelta na Rakovitsa (1924); Pramayka (1925); Svyataya svetih (1926); Bich boji (1927); Jenski dushi (1929); Levski (1930); Benkovski (1930); Stamboliyski (1931); Holera (1935); Mehed Sinap (1935); Zazoryavane (1945); Jultata zvezda (1957).—Sel. works (6 vols, 1954–55).

Yubileen sbornik L. S. (1944).

V.P.

Stoyanov, ZAHARY (*Kotel 4 VI 1851; †Paris 2 IX 1889), Bulgarian biographer and memoirist. He spent his nomadic youth among Dobruja shepherds and later with Bulgarian revolutionaries preparing the 1876 uprising. The heroic legend of this owes much to his 'eye-witness accounts' and biographies.

Benkovski (1882); Levski (1883); L. Karavelov and Chetite v Bulgaria (1885); H. Botev (1888); Zapiski po bulgarskite vustaniya (3 vols, 1884–92).

S. Zaimov, Minaloto (1895); A. Balabanov, Edin klassik (1927).
V.P.

Strabo (*Amaseia, Pontus c. 63 B.C.; †c. A.D. 19), Greek geographer, travelled widely, accompanying Aelius Gallus on his Arabian expedition in 24 B.C. His Geography is a systematic description of the then known world, with historical and mythological digressions. Careful though Strabo was in using his sources, his work marks a serious retrogression from the mathematical geography of Eratosthenes*; but it is a mine of information on the life of the Hellenistic and Roman world.

A. Meineke, Strabonis geographica (3 vols, 1852–53; repr. 1915–25); H. C. Hamilton and W. Falconer, S.: The Geography (3 vols, 1854–57; repr. 1892–93, 1912); H. L. Jones, S.: Geography (with tr.; 8 vols, 1917–33); F. Lasserre, Strabon: Géographie (in progr.; 1966–).

E. H. Warmington, Greek Geography (1934); H. F. Tozer, History of Ancient Geography (2nd ed. M. Cary, 1935); J. O. Thomson, History of Ancient Geography (1948); C. Aujac, Strabon et la science de son temps (1966). R.B.

Strachey, GILES LYTON (*London 1 III 1880; †Ham Spray House, nr Hungerford 21 I 1932), English biographer and critic. Having produced some balanced studies of French literature and English 18th-century literature, he discovered his métier in biography. To be brief; to exclude the redundant; to concentrate on essentials; to produce a work of art—that, for him, was biography, and in his hands it was lucid, subtle, elegant, ironic, disillusioning.

Landmarks in French Literature (1912); Eminent Victorians (1918); Queen Victoria (1921); Books and Characters, French and English (1922); Elizabeth and Essex (1928); Portraits in Miniature (1931); Characters and Commentaries (1933); Ermyntre and Esmeralda: an Entertainment (1969).

J. K. Johnstone, The Bloomsbury Group (1954); C. R. Sanders, L. S.: His Mind and Art (1957); M. Holroyd, L. S. (2 vols, 1967–68).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Strakhov, NIKOLAY NIKOLAYEVICH (*Belgorod 1828; †St Petersburg 1896), Russian critic, a friend of Tolstoy* and the earliest biographer of Dostoyevsky*. Although sympathizing with the aesthetic trend, he yet avoided the 'art for art's sake' dogma. As a critic he was more acute than consistent.

Vospominaniya o Dostoyevskom (1883); Kriticheskie statyi (2 vols, 1901–02). J.L.

Strandberg, CARL VILHELM AUGUST, pseud. TALIS QUALIS (*Stigtomta 16 I 1818; †Stockholm 5 II 1877), Swedish poet and journalist. He published his first poems in 1835 and became especially known for his rhetorical odes in support of 'Scandinavianism' in the 1840s; later his poems, though still patriotic and liberal in sentiment, became more realistic in tone. He translated Byron's* Don Juan and other works, and Young German writers.

Nyare tysk lyrik i svensk översättning (2 vols, 1844); Sånger i pansar (1845); Vilda rosor (1848); Dikter (1854–61); Samlade Vitterhetsarbeten (5 vols, 1877–78); Samlade Vitterhetsarbeten (ed. R. G. Berg, 6 vols, 1917–20).

P. Hallström, C. V. A. S. (1915); B. Tarschys, Talis Qualis, studentpoeten. Miljö- och idéhistoriska studier (1949). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Straparola, GIANFRANCESCO (*c. 1480/1500; †after 1557), Italian prose writer. His popular collection of short stories Le piacevoli notti (1550–53; crit. ed. G. Rua, 1927) is interesting for its introduction of fairy stories. He also produced a mediocre Canzoniere (1508).

G. Boscardi, 'Le novelle di G. F. S.' in Rassegna Lucchese (1952); G. Bárberi Squarotti, 'Problemi di tecnica narrativa cinquecentesca: lo S.' in Sigma, V (1965). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Strashimirov, ANTON (*Varna 15 VII 1872; †Sofia 7 XII 1937), Bulgarian author. As a village teacher he started writing stories on peasant life and always retained his interest in Bulgarian ethnography and sociology, e.g. Kniga za bulgarite (1917). He actively espoused the Macedonian cause in his journals Reformi (1900) and Kulturno edinstvo (Salonica, 1908) and plays Orvud (1906) and Robi (1929); in 1911 he became an M.P. He edited various periodicals, e.g. Nablyudatel (1910), Nashi dni (1921) and Vedrina (1926–27), and collaborated in others, notably Demokratičeski pregled (with Vlaykov*), always encouraging young writers. His sense of drama and the picturesque is sometimes marred by roughness of style, but his versatility and literary vitality are undeniable. He finally published biographies of P. Karavelov (Reformatorut, 1934), of S. Stambolov (Diktatorut, 1935) and of himself (Tvorchestvo i život, 1930).

Smyakh i sulzi (1897); Smutno vreme (1899); Vampir (1902); Essenni dni (1902); Na krustoput (1904); Sreshita (1904); Svekurva (1907); Voyni i osvoboždenie (1913).—Antologia A. S. (Min. of Educ., 1922); coll. works (7 vols, 1961–63).

Yubileen sbornik A. S. (1931); D. B. Mitov, A. S. (1959). V.P.

Strauss, EMIL (*Pforzheim 31 I 1866; †Freiburg im Breisgau 10 VIII 1960), German novelist. The tragic school story Freund Hein (1902) had a sensational success; the historical novel Der nackte Mann (1912) and the novel of peasant life Das Riesenspielzeug (1934) were widely acclaimed. But his short stories deserve first place, especially Der Schleier (1931).

SHORT STORIES: Menschenwege (1898); Hans und Grete (1909); Der Spiegel (1918); Dreiklang (1949).—Vaterland (play; 1924).—Gesammelte Werke (1949 ff.).

F. Endres, E. S. (1936); B. von Heiseler, E. S. zum 85. Geburtstag (1951). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Streuvelds, STIJN, pen-name of FRANK LATEUR (*Heule 3 X 1871; †Ingooigem 15 VIII 1969), Flemish novelist and short-story writer, one of the great masters of Dutch prose, a nephew of Guido Gezelle*. His tales are set in the West Flanders countryside and villages, but his imagination often gives a visionary quality to the simple, monotonous life. Initially, under the influence of the Russians and the Scandinavians, he experienced a sombre period (from Lenteleven to Langs de wegen): man, a primitive creature, bound to the earth, is at the mercy of the whims of formidable nature. Gradually man assumes greater importance in Streuvels' work and in his masterpiece, De vlaschaard, a certain equilibrium between nature and man is attained: the role of nature remains considerable but man in his turn becomes a source of action and drama. After De vlaschaard Streuvels concentrated on character-drawing and on psychological conflict, with less happy results. A second masterpiece is his short story Het leven en de dood in den ast, a tale interweaving reality and dream, a pinnacle in his extensive production of short stories among which De oogst, Het woud, De bomen, Het kerstekind were already remarkable. Possessing creative talent on a grand scale, he enriched literature with monumental lyrical frescos, epic descriptions of man's struggle with the elements of nature and with fate, and various silhouettes of children and sturdy peasants. He has succeeded in synthesizing a cosmic and sometimes visionary world of his own in which man and nature are welded into an intimate unity.

NOVELS: Langs de wegen (1902; Old Jan, tr. E. Crankshaw, 1936); Minnehandel (1904; Liebespiel in Flandern, tr. A. Valetton, 1936); De vlaschaard (1907; filmed 1942; Le champ de lin, tr. J. de Zangré and J. Borginon, 1943); Dorpslucht (1914-15); Prutske (1922; Poucette, tr. B. Colin, 1934); De teleurgang van den Waterhoek (1927; Le déclin du Waterhoek, tr. idem, 1943); Alma met de vlassen haren (1931); Levensbloesem (1937; Des Lebens Blütezeit, tr. H. P. Kövari, 1949).—SHORT STORIES: Lenteleven (1899; The Path of Life, tr. A. Teixeira de Mattos, 1915); Zomerland (1900); Zonnerij (1900; incl. 'De oogst', L'août, tr. G. Knopff, 1928); Doodendans (1901); Dagen (1903); Dorpsgeheimen (1904); Openlucht (1905); Stille avonden (1905); Het uitzicht der dingen (1906); Najaar (1909); Het kerstekind (1911; L'enfant de Noël, tr. G. d'Ys, 1935); Het glorierijke licht (1912); Werkmensen (1926; incl. 'Het leven en de dood in den ast', Die Männer am feurigen Ofen, tr. W. Ackermann, 1936); Kerstwake (1928; Letzte Nacht, tr. H. Schmülling, 1933).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Heule (1942); Avelghem (1946); Ingooyghem (1951, 1957); In levenden lijve (1966).

A. de Ridder, S. S. (2nd ed. 1908); Das S.-Buch (ed. A. Spemann, 1941); F. de Pillecyn, S. S. (2nd ed. 1943) and S. S. (1958; 5th ed. 1964); E. Janssen, S. S. en zijn Vlaschaard (1946); A. Demedts, S. S. (1955); H. Speliers, Omtrent S. (1968). R.F.L.

Stribling, THOMAS SIGISMUND (*Clifton, Tenn. 4 III 1881; ∞1930 Luella Kloss; †8 VII 1965), American novelist. He writes of Southern life with a bitterly realistic touch. The Store, second in his historical trilogy of an Alabama country town, won the Pulitzer prize in 1932.

Teeftallow (1926); Bright Metal (1928); The Forge (1931); Unfinished Cathedral (1934); These Bars of Flesh (1938). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

DER Stricker (fl. 1215-50), Rhenish itinerant poet, sometime in Austria. Early works are an attempt at Arthurian romance (Daniel von dem blühenden Tal, c. 1215) and an extremely popular modernization of the Rolandslied of Pfaffe Konrad* (more than 40 MSS). More characteristic (and influential) are his realistic tales, e.g. of a parson turned trickster (Pfaffe Amis, some of whose exploits Till Eulenspiegel* inherits). He also wrote parables (bispiel), and monitory tales including Die Gauhühner, defending the oppressed peasantry.

Karl der Grosse (ed. K. Bartsch, 1857; rev. D. Kartschoke, 1965); Der Pfaffe Amis (ed. H. Lambel in Erzählungen und Schwänke, 1872, 1883); Daniel (ed. G. Rosenhagen, 1894); for Bispiel and Sprüche see C. von Kraus, Mittelhochdt. Übungsbuch (1926); various colls ed. in Altdt. Textbibliothek, XXXV (1934), LIII-LIV (1960).

Clair Baier, Der Bauer in der Dichtung des S. (1938); exhaustive treatment in H. de Boor, Die dt. Lit. im späten MA. (1962). F.P.P.

Stricker, JOHANN (*Grobe, Holstein c. 1540; †Lübeck 23 I 1598), Low German dramatist. A Lutheran pastor, he wrote De Düdesche Schlömer (1584), an 'Everyman' play directed against the excesses of the Holstein aristocracy. Dramatically effective, with excellent characterization and deep religious feeling, it is an outstanding Reformation drama.

Geistliche Comödie vom erbärmlichen Falle Adams und Evae (Low German version 1570, lost; High German tr. 1602); De Düdesche Schlömer (ed. J. Bolte, 1889; ed. A. E. Berger in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, VI, 1936).

K. Goedeke, Everyman, Homulus und Hekastus (1865); R. Sprenger, 'Zu J. S.' in Niederdt. Jahrb., XV (1890). D.G.D.

Strindberg, JOHAN AUGUST (*Stockholm 22 I 1849; †ibid. 14 V 1912), Swedish dramatist, novelist, short-story writer, poet and critic. Son of a steamship agent and a woman who had at one time been a waitress (a fact which obsessed him and led him to entitle his main autobiographical work Tjänstekvinnans Son, 1886; The Son of a Servant, tr. E. Sprinchorn, 1966). Strindberg passed an unhappy childhood. He studied intermittently at Uppsala, but never took a degree; financial troubles drove him to take up schoolmastering, tutoring and then journalism (1872-74). In 1874 he became an assistant in the Royal library at Stockholm and in the following year he met Siri von Essen, wife of Captain Wrangel of the Swedish Guards; on 31 XII 1877 he married her. The marriage, though based on passionate love, was stormy and ultimately catastrophic, and ended in a divorce, initiated by Strindberg, in I 1891. Already before his marriage Strindberg had begun publishing his first literary works: the first worth mention was the prose-drama Fritänkaren (1870). The historical drama Mäster Olof (1st version 1872; Master Olof, tr. C. D. Locock and J. Bulman, 1931), influenced by Ibsen's* Brand and by Shakespeare*, is, however, his first really mature production, and opens a new epoch in Swedish drama: but the work which really made his name was the novel Röda Rummet (1879; The Red Room, tr. E. Sprigge, 1967), a series of satirical impressionistic episodes exposing the rackets in contemporary Stockholm. Det Nya Riket (1882), an even fiercer satire, had a great succès de scandale, and in 1883 Strindberg and his wife quitted Sweden for six years, during which they led a wandering life on the Continent. In 1884, however, Strindberg was obliged to return temporarily, for a passage in one of his short stories, Giftas (1884; Married, tr. E. Schleussner, 1913), led to his being prosecuted for blasphemy: he was acquitted but the episode greatly increased his already existing tendency to mental instability; he imagined, inter alia, that there was a conspiracy against him of feminists, who had won Siri over to their side. His preoccupation with the conflict between the sexes recurs in work after work of the following years such as the naturalistic dramas Fadren (1887; The Father), Fröken Julie (1888; Miss Julie) and Fodringsägare (1889; Creditors, all tr. M. Meyer in A. Strindberg, The Plays, I, 1964), the second volume of Giftas (1886) and the autobiographical Le Plaidoyer d'un Fou (1887–88; The Confessions of a Fool, tr. E. Schleussner, rev. E. Sprinchorn, 1967). Strindberg's second novel, Hemsöborna (1887; The People of Hemsö, tr. E. Harley Schubert, 1959), one of his best works, though little known outside Sweden, deals with life in the Stockholm archipelago, one of his happiest sources of inspiration. Strindberg returned to Sweden, after an extraordinarily productive but most unhappy period in his life, in 1889; dogged by financial cares, tormented by the loss of his children after the divorce, he became even more miserable, and in 1892 managed to get abroad again, this time to Berlin. Here he met his second wife, the young Austrian journalist Frieda Uhl, whom he married in IV 1893. This marriage was even more disastrous than the first, and ended, in I 1895, in another divorce. During this period Strindberg persistently occupied himself with scientific and alchemical studies: in Paris (1894–96) he experienced the worst of all his mental upheavals, the so-called 'Inferno crisis', which he described in Inferno (1897; Inferno, tr. M. Sandbach, 1962) and Legender (1898; Legends: Autobiographical Sketches, tr. anon., 1912). He returned to Sweden in the autumn of 1896. The works which he now produced, of which the most important is the symbolical play Till Damaskus (I and II, 1898; III, 1904; To Damascus I, II and III, tr. A. Paulson, 1965) reflect his preoccupation with religion and reveal a strong tendency to Swedenborgian-coloured mysticism: his new conception of God and Man inspired, too, his new series of historical plays, of which he wrote four in the one year 1899. In 1901 he married for the third (and last) time: his new wife was a young Norwegian actress, Harriet Bosse. This marriage, too, was unsuccessful and was dissolved in XI 1904; it did, however, lead to a new period of creative activity, out of which emerged the plays Dödsdansen (1901; The Dance of Death, tr. E. Sprigge, 1960), Kronbruden (1902; The Bridal Crown, tr. E. Björkman, 1916), Drömspelet (1902; A Dream Play, tr. V. Anderson, 1964), as well as the charming lyrical little autobiographical work Ensam (1903). He also wrote historical short stories and the two scurrilous novels Götiska Rummen (1904) and Svarta Fanor (1904; pub. 1907). Then came his 'Kammerspel', written for 'Intima Teatern', an enterprise begun by Strindberg and August Falck in partnership: of the chamber plays, the Maeterlinckian Ovåder (1907; The Storm) and Spöksöndagen (1907; The Ghost Sonata, both tr. M. Meyer in A. S., The Plays, I, 1964), Strindberg's most fantastic work (and one of his most disillusioned), are the most notable. He spent the last years of his life in a flat in Drottninggatan, which he named 'Blå Tornet' ('The Blue Tower') and where he lived in great and deliberate isolation. He continued to pour out writings of the most various kinds, the most important being the aphoristic Blåa Böcker (1907–12), and his last, autobiographical-symbolical play Stora Landsvägen (1909; 'The Great Highway', tr. A. Paulson in Modern Scandinavian Plays, 1954). He died of cancer, greatly mourned by the people of Sweden (who saw him as a champion of freedom and radical ideas) and, throughout his life, ignored by the Swedish Academy. Though not Sweden's only great writer (as he is so often considered outside that country), he is undoubtedly the most remarkable of all: in Europe he has exercised great influence as a bold experimenter with dramatic forms, while to Swedes he appears especially notable for his phenomenal vitality and vigour, and for his brilliant use of language. B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Samlade skrifter (ed. J. Landquist, 55 vols, 1911–21); Skrifter av A. S. (ed. G. Brandell, 1945–46); Brev (ed. T. Eklund, 1948 ff.); Det sjunkande Hellas (ed. E. Gamby, 1960); Ur Ockulta dagboken (sel. from unpub. diary; ed. T. Eklund, 1963); From an Occult Diary. Marriage with H. Bosse, ed. with intro. idem, tr. M. Sandbach, 1965); Klostret (ed. C. G. Bjurström, 1966); The Cloister, tr. M. Sandbach, 1969).—For details of Eng. trs. see N. Afzelius, Books in English on Sweden (Stockholm, 1951) and Suecana Extranea 1900—(Swed. Inst.).

C. L. Schleich, Erinnerungen an S. (1917); E. Hedén, S., en Ledtråd vid studiet av hans verk

(1921); K. Jaspers, S. und Van Gogh (1922); M. Lamm, S.s Dramer (2 vols, 1924-26), S. och makterna (1936) and S. (2 vols, 1940-42); W. L. Dahlström, S.'s Dramatic Expressionism (1930); J. Mortensen, S. som jag minnes honom (1931); A. Jolivet, Le théâtre de S. (1931); J. Bulman, S. and Shakespeare (1933); G. Ollén, S.s 1900-talslyrik (1941) and S.s dramatik (1948; rev. 1961 and 1966); W. Berendsohn, Strindbergsproblem (1946), S.s sista levnadsår (1948) and A. S.s skärgårds och Stockholmskildringar (1962); H. Jacobsen, S. og hans første Hustru (1946); T. Eklund, Tjänstekvinnans son (1948); M. Gravier, S. et le théâtre moderne (1949); E. Sprigge, The Strange Life of A. S. (1949); B. Mortensen and B. W. Downs, S. an Introduction to His Life and Work (1949; new ed. 1965); G. Brandell, S.s Infernokris (1950); A. Hagsten, Den unge S. (2 vols, 1951); H. Lindström, Hjörnarnas kamp (1952); C. R. Smedmark, Mäster Olof och Röda rummet (1952); N. Norman, Den unge S. och väckelserörelsen (1953); D. Norrman, S.s skilsmässa från Siri von Essen (1953); S. Ahlström, S.s erövring av Paris (1956); S.-G. Edquist, Samhällets fiende. En studie i S.s anarkism till och med Tjänstekvinnans son (1961); B. G. Madsen, S.s Naturalistic Theatre (1962); K.-Å. Kärrnoll, S.s bildspråk (1962); E. Poulenard, A. S. Romancier et nouvelliste (1962); W. Johnson, S. and the Historical Drama (1963).—G. Lindström, 'S. Studies' in Scandinavica (1963); S. Rinman, 'Tio års Strindbergforskning' in Meddelanden från Strindbergsällskapet (1968; good biblio.). I.S.

Stringer, ARTHUR JOHN ARBUTHNOTT (*Chatham, Ontario 26 II 1874; ∞1900 Jobyna Howland, ∞1914 Margaret Stringer; †1950), prolific Canadian writer of popular lyrics and light fiction, much of which is set in the prairie West.

Hephaestus and Other Poems (1902); Prairie Wife (1915); The Prairie Omnibus (1920); City of Peril (1923); The Mud Lark (1932); The Life of Rupert Brooke (1948).

V. Lauriston, A. S. (1941). M.H.M.M.

Stritar, JOSEF (*Podsmreka, Carniola 6 III 1836; †Rogaška Slatina, Styria 25 XI 1923), Slovene poet, novelist and critic. In poetic theory and practice an anachronistic representative of the Romantic agony, combining the views of Rousseau* and Schopenhauer* he proclaimed the role of poetry as both herald and healer of universal grief. In Dunajski soneti ('Viennese Sonnets'; 1872), Prešernova pisma iz Elizije ('Prešeren's Letters From Elysium'; 1872) and his novel Sodnikovi (1878) he came near to critical realism; in his novel Zorin (1870) he created a Slovene variant of Goethe's* Werther, and in Gospod Mirodolski (1876) a Slovene Vicar of Wakefield. Later, fearing a world-wide social upheaval, he devoted himself to popular education and literature for young people.

Pesmi (1869); Pasji pogovori (1870); Triglavan s Posavja (1870); Dunajske elegije (1876); Raja (1876); Rosana (1877); Pod lipo (1895); Zimski večeri (1902); Lešniki (1906).—Zbrano delo (coll. works; 10 vols, 1953-57).

I. Prijatelj, S.jeva antologija (1919); J. Pogačnik, S.jev literarni nazor (1963). A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Strittmatter, ERWIN (*Spremberg 14 VIII 1912), East German novelist, dramatist and short-story writer. His numerous professions included that of a baker, waiter, stable-boy, chauffeur and factory worker, and he draws on his experiences in his novels. His first play Katzgraben (1952) was produced by Brecht*. He has been awarded many prizes in East Germany for his novels on workers and peasants and their acceptance of the new order.

NOVELS: Ochsenkutscher (1950); Tinko (1954); Der Wandertäter (1957); Ole Bienkopp (1963).—Die Holländerbraut (plays; 1960).—SHORT STORIES: Schulzenhofer Kramkalender (1966); Ein Dienstag im September (1970).

R. Andrews, 'Re-education through literature: S.'s Tinko' in Ger. Life and Letters, new ser., XIV (Apr. 1961); Schriftsteller der Gegenwart, III (double vol., on Adam Scharrer and S.; 1962); U. Roisch, 'Zu S.s Ole Bienkopp' in Deutsch als Fremdsprache, II.3 (1965). D.E.

Strode, WILLIAM (*Plympton, Devon 1602; †Oxford 11 III 1645), English poet and dramatist. Educated at Westminster School and Christ Church, Oxford, Strode took Holy Orders and pursued an academic career. His one play was performed before Charles I and his Queen at Oxford on 29 VIII 1636, with music by Henry Lawes.

The Floating Island (pr. 1655).—Poetical Works (ed. B. Dobell, 1907). J.B.B.

Strong, LEONARD ALFRED GEORGE (*Plymouth 1896; ∞1926 Dorothea Tryce; †17 VIII 1958), Irish novelist and poet; settled in London in 1933. He has written clear, perceptive novels, several based upon his youth in England and Ireland. R.McH.

Selected Poems (1931).—NOVELS: Dewey Rides (1929); The Garden (1931); Sea Wall (1933).—STORIES: The English Captain (1929); Tuesday Afternoon (1935); The Travellers (1945).

E.T.W.

Stroupežnický, LADISLAV (*Cernohice 6 I 1850; †Prague 11 VIII 1892), Czech dramatist, best remembered for his play of South Bohemian peasant life, 'Our Swaggers' (Naši furlanti, 1887). R.A.

Strozzi, ERCOLE (*Ferrara ?1473; †ibid. 5/6 VI 1508), Italian poet, son of Tito Vespasiano Strozzi*.

His Latin elegies show an extraordinary facility and command of language. Married to the beautiful Barbara Torelli*, he was mysteriously murdered.

Strozzi poetae pater et filius (pub. Aldus, 1513).
C.Dr.

Strozzi, TITO VESPASIANO (*Ferrara 1424; †ibid. 30 VIII 1505), Italian poet and administrator. His family came to Ferrara from Florence early in the 15th century. He had a distinguished career under three Este princes but is remembered for his Latin poetry, especially his exquisitely elegant elegies.

R. Albrecht, T. V. S. (1891).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Strubberg, FRIEDRICH ARMAND (*Kassel 18 III 1806; ∞5 VI 1866 Antoinette Sattler; †Gelnhausen 3 IV 1889), German novelist. He stayed in the United States from 1837 and led a stormy life of adventure. He returned to Europe in 1854 and embarked upon a fertile but still stormy career as a writer of entertaining novels embodying a liberal point of view; they form valuable source material for American history.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Amerikanische Jagd- und Reiseabenteuer aus meinem Leben in den westlichen Indianergebieten (1858); Bis in die Wildniss (4 vols, 1858); Aus Armand's Frontierleben (3 vols, 1867); Friedrichsburg, die Colonie des deutschen Fürstenvereins in Texas (2 vols, 1867).—NOVELS: Scenen aus den Kämpfen der Mexikaner und Nordamerikaner (1859); Sklaverei in Amerika oder Schwarzes Blut (3 vols, 1862); In Süd-Carolina und auf dem Schlachtfelde von Langensalza (4 vols, 1869); Der Krösus von Philadelphia (4 vols, 1870).—Ausgewählte Romane (7 vols, 1894–96).—Die Quadronne (play; 1885).

P. A. Barba, Life and Works of F. A. S. (1913); L. A. Woodson, American Negro Slavery in the Works of F. S., Friedrich Gerstäcker, and Otto Ruppius (1949).
E.R.

Strug, ANDRZEJ, pseud. of TADEUSZ GALECKI (*Konstantynówka 28 XI 1871; †Warsaw 9 XII 1937), Polish novelist. For his early social and political work he was exiled to Archangel; after his return he participated in the 1905–06 revolution, fled to Paris and from 1914 served with Polish legions. A consistent Socialist, he protested against the 1926 coup d'état of Piłsudski. His characters are real and he portrays them with psychological insight. In Pieniądz (1921) and Miliardy (1933) he depicted the pressure of capitalism. His style is simple and unrhymed.

NOVELS: Ludzie podziemni (3 series, 1908–09); Ze wspomnień starego sympatyka (1909); Jutro (1909); Dzieje jednego pocisku (1910); Geschichte einer Bombe, tr. E. Frisch, (1912); Portret (1913);

Znak za wierną służbę (1920); Mogiła nieznanego żołnierza (1922); Kronika Świeciechowska (1923); Fortuna kasjera Spiewankiewicza (1928); Żółty krzyż (1932–33).—SHORT STORIES: Klucz otchłani (1929).—Pisma (20 vols, 1930–31; ed. H. Szyper, 1947).

Z. Dębicki, 'A. S.' in Portrety, I (1927); Z. L. Zaleski, 'A. S.' in Attitudes et destinées (1932); Wiadomości Literac., X (1938); S. Sandler, A. S. wśród ludni podziemnych (1959); Wspomnienia o A. S. (1965).
S.S. (P.H.)

Strykowski, JULIAN (*Stryj 27 IV 1905), Polish novelist. His major works are concerned with the old-fashioned Jewish communities in the small towns of Galicia before the First World War and continue the tradition of the documentary Polish novel dealing with Jewish themes. They may be considered the finest and at the same time the final achievement of this genre.

NOVELS: Bieg do Fragałà (1951); Der Lauf nach Fragałà, tr. A. and R. Flierl, Berlin, (1953); Głosy w ciemności (1956); Les voix dans les ténèbres, tr. V. Acherès, Paris, (1957); Czarna róża (1962); Austeria (1966); The Inn, tr. C. Wieniewska, (1972).—Imię własne (short stories; 1961).—Pożegnanie z Italią (essays; 1954).

P.H.

Styrye, JOHN (*Houndsditch 1 XI 1643; ∞Susanah Lowe; †Hackney 2 XII 1737), English historian and biographer; he was educated at St Paul's School and Jesus College, Cambridge, and took Holy Orders. He accumulated many documents from the Elizabethan age, on which he based his lives, and also continued the work of Stow*.

Memorials of Thomas Cranmer (2 pts, 1694; ed. P. E. Barnes, 2 vols, 1853); The History of the Life and Acts of Edmund Grindal (1710); The Life and Acts of Matthew Parker (1710); The Life and Acts of John Whitgift (1718); A Survey of the Cities of London and Westminster by John Stow, Corrected, Improved . . . and brought down from the year 1633 to the present time (1720); Annals of the Reformation in England (3 vols, 1735–37).
J.B.B.

Stub, AMBROSIVS CHRISTOFFERSEN (*Gummerup 1705; ∞1735 Mette Cathrine Schousboe; †Ribe 15 VII 1758), Danish poet. He was a fine lyric poet, unrecognized in his own lifetime, whose tragic fate it was to become jester to the wealthy squires of Denmark. The fraction of his poems that have survived are mainly religious and moralizing arias or occasional pieces, witty improvised epigrams, or drinking songs. In many ways his poetry is suggestive of Robert Herrick*. Stub died in utter poverty.

Behind the 18th-century artificiality of metaphors and similes and other stylistic finery, there is a genuine love of nature in Stub's poetry, a sense of personal experience, and a vivacious, graceful tone which has kept alive the best of his poems.

Digte (ed. K. Elfelt, 1941); Samlede Digte (ed. H. Fonsmark, 1961).

H. Brix, A. S. (1960).

E.B.

Stubbs or Stubbes, PHILIP (*c. 1555; ∞London 6 IX 1586 Katherine Emmes; †c. 1610), English Puritan pamphleteer, who was at Oxford and Cambridge but took no degree. After traversing a great deal of the country he published The Anatomy of Abuses which successfully went into four editions between 1583 and 1595, and involved him in the Marprelate controversy. Even more popular was A Crystal Glass for Christian Women (1591).

The Anatomie of Abuses (1583; repr. F. J. Furnivall, 1877-79); The Second Part (1583; repr. idem, 1882); A Christal Glasse for Christian Women (1591; partially repr. idem, 1879).

T. P. Pearson, 'The composition and development of P. S.'s Anatomie of Abuses' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LVI (1961).

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Stubbs, WILLIAM, Bishop of Oxford (*Knaresborough 21 VI 1825; ∞1859 Catherine Dellar; †Cuddesdon 22 IV 1901), English historian, Regius Professor of modern history at Oxford.

Select Characters and other illustrations of English Constitutional History (1866); Constitutional History of England (3 vols, 1873-78); Letters of W. S. (ed. W. H. Hutton, with full biblio., 1904); Historical Introductions to the Rolls Series (ed. A. Massall, 1902).

J. G. Edwards, W. S. (1952). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Stubenberg, JOHANN WILHELM VON (*Nové Město/Neustadt an der Mettau 22 IV 1619; †Vienna 15 II 1663), Austrian poet and Protestant country gentleman, member of a close-knit circle including Wolfgang von Hohberg*, in contact with Catharina Regina von Greiffenberg*, the Nürnberg poets, especially Birken* and Harsdörffer*, and a member of the Fruchtbearbeitende Gesellschaft. His translations from French (Mme de Scudéry's* Clélie, 1664), Italian (three works by G. F. Loredano, two by G. B. Marino*) and English (two works by Francis Bacon*) authors were important.

Egon Cohn, Gesellschaftsideale und Gesellschaftsroman des 17. Jahrhunderts (1921); O. Brunner, Adeliges Landleben und europäischer Geist (1949); Martin Bircher, J. W. von S. und sein Freundeskreis (with biog., biblio.; 1968).

L.W.F.

Stuckenberg, VIGGO HENRIK FOG (*Vridsløselille 17 IX 1863; ∞1887 Ingeborg Pamperin, ∞1904

Clara Holbøll; †Frederiksberg 6 XII 1905), Danish poet. In his student years he became acquainted with Jørgensen* and Claussen*, and, with his first wife, became the centre of the Danish Symbolist poets of the 1890s. He was influenced by Maeterlinck*, and in his prose tales by Turgenev* and Dostoyevsky*. His chief inspirations are his love for his mother and his wife and his feeling for nature. His stories and tales are mostly forgotten now, but his poems have a subtle beauty.

VERSE: Digte (1886); Den vilde Jæger (1894); Flyvende Sommer (1898); Sne (1901); Aarsens Tid (1905); Sidste Digte (1906); Udvalgte Digte (1954).—STORIES: I Gennembrud (1888); Messias (1889); Fagre Ord (1895); Valravn (1896); Sol (1897); Hjemfalden (1898); Asmadæus (1899); Vejbred (1899); By the Wayside, tr. U. Hook, 1917.—Breve (ed. J. Andersen, 1946).

C. C. Lassen, V. S. (1923); J. Andersen, V. S. og hans Samtid (2 vols, 1944).

E.B.

Stukalov, NIKOLAY FÉDOROVICH: see Pogodin, NIKOLAY.

Stúñiga, LOPE DE: see Estúñiga, LOPE ORTIZ DE.

Stuparich, GIANI (*Trieste 4 IV 1891; †Rome 7 IV 1961), Italian short-story writer, poet and novelist. After serving as an officer in the First World War, Stuparich became a schoolmaster. His early fiction is introspective and autobiographical; his most mature work belongs to the 1940s: L'Isola (1942) is considered to be his best work.

FICTION: Racconti (1929); Donne nella vita di Stefano Premuda (1932); Nuovi racconti (1935); Ritornellano (1941); Notte sul porto (1942); Simone (1953).—VERSE: Poesie (1956).—GENERAL: Colloqui con mio fratello (1925); Guerra del '15 (1931); Trieste nei miei ricordi (1948); Ricordi istriani (1961).

J.F.C. (B.M.)

Štúr, L'UDOVÍK (*Uhrovec 29 X 1815; †Modra 12 I 1856), Slovak philologist, critic and poet. Štúr, the founder of the modern Slovak literary language, became a leading figure in the intellectual life of Slovakia even in his student days at Bratislava where he enthusiastically propagated the 'Slavonic idea' in the spirit of Kollár*. After two years at Halle (1838-40), where he eagerly assimilated the philosophy of Hegel*, he returned to Bratislava and took up the struggle for the Slovak language and culture against the official policy of Magyarization. In collaboration with his friends J. M. Hurban* and M. M. Hodža* he elaborated a literary language based on the dialects of central Slovakia. The first article in the new language appeared in the periodical Nitra in 1844; and its theoretical basis was provided in an important treatise Nárečja slovenskua alebo potreba písanija

v tomto nárečí ('The Slovak Dialect or the Necessity of Writing in That Dialect') and a grammar, Náuka reči slovenskej, both published in 1846. Štúr spent the years after 1849 in seclusion and was pessimistic as to the future of the language he had propagated; nevertheless, it soon gained acceptance and in most essentials the standard Slovak of today is based on it.

Dielo (6 vols, 1954–59).

L'. Š.: Život a dielo 1815–1856 (1956).—J. V. Ormis, Bibliografia L'. Š. (1958). R.A.

Sturluson, SNORRI (*1178; ∞1199 Herdís Bessadóttir, ∞1233 Hallveig Ormsdóttir; †23 IX 1241), Icelandic saga writer and poet, the most distinguished figure in the Norse literary world, celebrated for his sagas of the Norwegian Kings, Heimskringla, and as author of the prose Edda (EDDA). His father was a minor chieftain, and on his mother's side he was descended from the scalds Egill Skalla-Grimsson* and Markús Skeggjason. He was adopted by the powerful Jón Loftsson, whose home at Oddi in south Iceland was the principal centre of learning and culture in the country. Here Snorri learnt much of the Norwegian Kings and their history. A marriage at the age of 20 brought him riches and power which, urged on by ambition, he developed and extended until he became one of the most powerful men in Iceland. In 1218 and 1237 he visited Norway. During his first visit he appears to have dissuaded Duke Skúli from an attack on Iceland by promising to act as his agent on his return. He did nothing, however, and, at the time of his second visit, strife amongst the Icelandic chieftains had made his position very difficult. Finally he became involved in Skúli's rebellion which occurred shortly after he had left Norway; King Hákon had him killed by his enemies in Iceland.

Snorri was a man of complex personality and wide learning. He was twice Law Speaker of Iceland, and his knowledge of Norse mythology, history and poetry was probably unique. In addition to the works mentioned above, the authorship of Egill Skalla-Grimsson's saga is plausibly attributed to him. As a saga writer Snorri's work is distinguished by a high degree of objectivity, rationalism and, although his reliability must always be carefully tested, a critical use of the sources available. His literary qualities include a polished style, lively and dramatic characterization and an effective use of conversation.

Heimskringla. Nóregs konunga sögur (ed. F. Jónsson, 4 vols, 1893–1901; ed. B. Aðalbjarnarson in Íslenzk fornrit, XXVI–XXVIII, 1941–51; Eng. trs: S. Laing, 3 vols, 1844, rev. ed., 3 vols, 1961–64; W. Morris and E. Magnússon, 4 vols, 1893–1905; E. Monsen and A. H. Smith, 1932).

S. Nordal, S. S. (1920); F. Paasche, S. S. og Sturlungerne (1922). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Sturm, JOHANNES (*Schleiden 1507; †Strasbourg 1589), German educationist; convert to Lutheranism, founded the Gymnasium at Strasbourg (1539). His public lectures on rhetoric and dialectic and his sponsorship of the classical ideal led to the foundation of the University.

Charles Schmidt, La vie et les travaux de J. S. (1855); G. Meyer, Die Entwicklung der Strassb. Univ. (1926); Classicae Epistolae (ed. with tr. J. Rott, 1938). F.P.P.

Sturzen-Becker (before 1855 STURTZENBECHER), OSCAR PATRIK, pseud. ORVAR ODD (*Stockholm 28 XI 1811; †Hälsingborg 16 II 1869), Swedish poet and prose writer. He worked with extreme energy for the causes of democracy and 'Scandinavianism', lived in Paris (1838–39), and in Copenhagen (1844–47 and 1854–63), edited Öresunds Posten (1847–55) in Hälsingborg, where he spent the last years of his life, and contributed over many years to Aftonbladet. He had a witty and elegant style, much influenced by Heine* and by French causeurs.

PROSE: Tre septemberdagar i Stockholm (1834); Ur Stockholmslifvet (1844); Hinsidan Sundet. Danska epistlar (1846); Den skandinaviska frågan . . . af Arnliot Gellina (1856); La Veranda, Valda feuilletoner (1861); Samlade ax (1868).—VERSE: Min fattiga sångmö, Poetiska försök (1844).—Valda skrifter (ed. G. Ljunggren, 3 vols, 1880–82).

A. Blanche, Minnesbilder (1870–76); R. Sturzen-Becker, O. P. S.-B. (2 vols, 1911–12); O. Sylwan, 'S.-B. och Skandinavismen' in Studier tillägnade K. Warburg (1912) and O. S.-B.'s författarskap (1919). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Styron, WILLIAM (*Newport News, Va., 11 VI 1925; ∞1953 Rose Burgunder), American novelist. Lie Down in Darkness (1951) has a certain kinship with Faulkner's* As I Lay Dying, but lacks the taut power of The Long March (1953). The recognition of horror, waste and evil in the more gothic Set This House on Fire (1960) is further exemplified by his fictional re-creation of Nat Turner's slave rebellion in The Confessions of Nat Turner (1967). G.A.K.

Su CHĚ (*Mei-shan 1039; †Yin-chang 25 X 1112), Chinese poet, essayist and scholar. Su received his first important post in the financial bureau set up (1069) to implement the reform policy of Wang* An-shih, but soon became critical of the latter and was transferred from the capital. He returned to prominence after 1085, becoming a member of the grand council (1091). He was banished (1097) after the restoration of Wang's party, but pardoned in 1100. Though a major writer, Su is overshadowed as a poet by his brother Su* Shih, and as a prose-writer by both his brother and his father Su* Hsün. He is more austere and academic than either.

COLLECTED LITERARY WORKS: Luan-ch'êng chi (1091); Luan-ch'êng hou-chi (1106); Luan-ch'êng san-chi (1111).—Lin Yutang, The Gay Genius (1947). A.R.D.

SU HSÜN (□Mei-shan 1009; †K'ai-fêng 1066), Chinese essayist. He failed to pass the state examinations but late in life (1060) obtained a minor official post at the capital through his writings. Later he was appointed to assist in the compilation of a history of the emperors of the reigning Sung dynasty. Like his two sons, Su* Shih and Su* Chê, he was among those writers through whose influence the 'old-style' (ku-wên) prose, modelled on classical and Han period authors, achieved dominance. His strength lies in discursive essays on historical and political subjects in which he often evinces a vigorous partisanship.

Chia-yu chi (coll. works; sel. tr. G. Margouliès in Le Kou-wen chinois, 1925).—Lin Yutang, The Gay Genius (1947). A.R.D.

SU MAN-SHU. Man-shu is the religious name of SU CHIEN (*Yokohama 28 IX 1884; †Shanghai 2 V 1918), Chinese poet, novelist and essayist. Su's mother was a Japanese and the problems of his mixed parentage made him attempt to build a legend of himself in his autobiographical 'Lone Swan'. From 1902 he associated with leading revolutionaries and contributed to revolutionary newspapers. He was an early translator of Western poetry and besides 'Lone Swan' wrote five other short novels, poems and works on Buddhist subjects. He became a monk in 1904.

NOVEL: Tuan-hung ling-yen chi (first pub. in Shanghai newspaper, 1912; The Lone Swan, tr. G. K. Leung, Shanghai, 1924; Der wunde Schwan, tr. A. von Rottauscher, 1947).—Su Man-shu ch'üan-chi (coll. works; 5 vols, 1930–31).

H. McAleavy, Su Man-shu: a Sino-Japanese Genius (1960). A.R.D.

SU SHIH, or SU TUNG-P'O (*Mei-shan 8 I 1037; †Ch'ang-chou 24 VIII 1101), Chinese poet and essayist. Su's official career and his whole life were greatly affected by his membership of the group which opposed the reform measures of Wang* An-shih. His opposition eventually caused his banishment to Huang-chou (1080–84). With the reversal of Wang's policies, Su returned to court and intermittently occupied important posts. After the restoration of the reform party by Emperor Chê-tsung he was banished to Hui-chou (1094) and later to Hainan (1097), but pardoned in 1100.

Su was not only an outstanding literary figure but also a great calligrapher and painter. The number of his extant works is very great, both in prose and verse of all types. His finest poems have an effortless diction (he did not hesitate to use vernacular words); their imagery is simple but strongly evocative. He made an especial contribution to tz'ü-poetry by widening its subject range. In prose, while he composed excellent descriptive or reflective essays, he also wrote powerfully upon current political and religious controversies.

Tung-p'o chi (coll. works); sel. trs: C. D. Le Gros Clark, Selections From the Works of Su Tung-p'o (1931) and The Prose Poetry of Su Tung-p'o (1935); Ch'u Ta-ko, Chinese Lyrics (1937); B. Watson, Su Tung-p'o (1965).

Lin Yutang, The Gay Genius (1947); K. Yoshikawa, An Introduction to Sung Poetry (tr. B. Watson, 1967). A.R.D.

SUÁREZ, FRANCISCO (*Granada 1548; †Lisbon 1617), Spanish theologian and political theorist. He studied at Salamanca, became a Jesuit and taught in Spanish Universities and at Rome. His philosophy was Thomistic. In his Defensio catholicae fidei he attacked the notion of the divine right of kings.

Opera (26 vols, Paris, 1856–61); Selections (ed. J. B. Scott, 1944).

O. Gierke, Natural Law and Theory of Society (1934); R. Wilensius, The Social and Political Theory of F. S. (1963). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

SUÁREZ DE FIGUEROA, CRISTÓBAL (*Valladolid ?1571; †Lecce ?1631), Spanish poet, prose-writer and novelist. He was a disgruntled lawyer who attacked many of his literary contemporaries. He wrote an epic about Roncesvalles [CHARLEMAGNE] and a pastoral novel and translated Guarini*. His best book, El pasagero, recounts the animated conversation of four travellers about many aspects of early 17th-century life.

El pasagero (ed. F. Rodríguez Marín, 1913).

J. P. Wickersham Crawford, The Life and Works of C. S. de F. (1907). E.M.W.

SUCHENWIRT, PETER (fl. c. 1350–95), Austrian itinerant poet (as his name advertises), finally awarded a house in Vienna. His versified obituaries, chronicle of Albrecht III's Prussian campaign (an unconscious indictment), heraldic, moral-didactic, allegorical and religious poems are dull reading now.

Ed. E. Primmer (1827); selections in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XI and XII (1882–89); more recent identifications in G. Ehrismann, Gesch. der dt. Lit. . . . des M.A.s (1935).—F. Kratochwil, Der österr. Didaktiker P. S. (1871); O. Weber, P. S. (1937). F.P.P.

SUCKLING, SIR JOHN (*Twickenham II 1608/09; †Paris 1642), English courtier poet and dramatist, renowned for his grace and esprit as man and writer. He was abroad from ?1628 to 1632, accompanied the Marquess of Hamilton with the armies of Gustavus Adolphus and was knighted on his return. Suckling's work was popular at court. In 1637 he wrote his prose Account of Religion by Reason. Raising a troop at his own expense against the Scots in 1639, he sat for Bramber in the Long Parliament (1640), took part in the plot to free Strafford (1641) and fled to France, either committing suicide or becoming the victim of a contrived accident.

The Complete Works of Sir J. S. (ed. A. H. Thompson, 1910; repr. 1964); Sir J. S.'s Poems and Letters From MS (ed. H. Berry, 1960).

B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Suda Lexicon: see Suidas.

Sudermann, HERMANN (*Matziken, East Prussia 30 IX 1857; †Berlin 21 XI 1928), German playwright and novelist. From his first play, Die Ehre (1890; Eng. tr. H. R. Baukhage, 1915), he dominated the German stage for nearly 20 years; a clever and effective literary craftsman, he was equally successful in his novels.

PLAYS: Heimat (1893; Magda, tr. C. Sykes, 1907; also filmed); Schmetterlingsschlacht (1895; Eng. tr. A. H. Schwarz, 1914); Glück im Winkel (1896); The Vale of Content, tr. W. E. Leonard, 1915); Die drei Reiherfedern (1899; Eng. tr. H. T. Porter, 1900); Johannisfeuer (1900; Eng. tr. C. and H. T. Porter, 1904).—NOVELS: Frau Sorge (1887; tr. B. Overbeck, 1891); Der Katzensteg (1890; Regine, tr. H. E. Miller, 1894); Der tolle Professor (1926; Eng. tr. I. Leighton and O. P. Schinnerer, 1928); Die Frau des Steffen Tromholt (1928; Eng. tr. E. and C. Paul, 1929).—Dramatische Werke (6 vols, 1923); Romane und Novellen (10 vols, 1930).

K. Busse, H. S., sein Wesen und sein Werk (1927); I. Leux, H. S. (1931); H. S. (ed. T. Duglor, 1958).
R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Sūdṛaka, a Hindu prince, the reputed author of the Sanskrit drama, Mṛcchakaṭikā, about a merchant's love for a courtesan. An outstanding play, it gives vivid pictures of town life in ancient India.
J.E.B.G.

Sue, EUGÈNE JOSEPH MARIE (*Paris 20 I 1804; †Annecy 3 VIII 1857), French novelist. A former naval surgeon, Sue first won fame and fortune by his serial novels with a seafaring background, but his greatest successes were Les mystères de Paris (1842–43) and Le Juif errant (1844–45), in which he championed Socialism and anti-clericalism through his startling accounts of the underworld of Paris.

Plick et Plock (1831); Les sept péchés capitaux (1847–49); Les mystères du peuple (1849–56).

E. de Mirecourt, E. S. (1855); P. Ginisty, E. S. (1929); N. Atkinson, E. S. et le roman feuilleton (1930); J. L. Bory, E. S., le roi du roman populaire (1962).
T.W.

Suetonius (GAIVS S. TRANQUILLVS) (*c. 70; †c. 140), Roman historian, for some time a pleader, afterwards Hadrian's* confidential secretary. His later life was spent in retirement. His works were mainly grammatical and biographical. The greatest extant is De vita Caesarum, 12 imperial biographies from Julius Caesar* to Domitian, drawn from good sources and uniformly arranged, each life ending with an account of the person and character of its subject. The style of Suetonius is unpretentious and often pedestrian. The scandalous character of many of the anecdotes has caused Suetonius to be considered a man of prurient mind; but he wrote conscientiously what he found in his sources. A great collection of literary biography (De viris illustribus) survives only in fragments, although the notes on writers in Jerome's* Chronicon are largely drawn from it. A long list of other works of Suetonius is given in Suidas*.

Eds: De vita Caesarum (M. Ihm, 1933; repr. 1967); other works (A. Reifferscheid, 1860); De grammaticis et rhetoribus (G. Brugnoli, 1963).—Eds of Lives with comm.: Julius (H. E. Butler and M. Cary, 1927); Augustus (E. S. Shuckburgh, 1896; M. Adams, 1939); Vespasianus (A. W. Braithwaite, 1927); Bks VII and VIII (Galba to Domitian; G. W. Mooney, with comm. and tr., 1930).—Trs: J. C. Rolfe, De vita Caesarum (2 vols, 1914); R. Graves, S.: The Twelve Caesars (1957).

A. Macé, Étude sur Suétone (1900); D. R. Stuart, Epochs of Greek and Roman Biography (1928); W. Steidle, Sueton und die antike Biographie (1951); Latin Biography (ed. T. A. Dorey, 1967).
J.A.W. (J.D.)

Suger (*c. 1081; †1151), French prelate, diplomat and historian, Abbot of St Denis from about 1122. During the Second Crusade he acted as regent of the kingdom and on several occasions was sent to Rome by Louis VI. His works include a panegyric on Louis and two treatises describing the rebuilding of St Denis, which are of exceptional importance for the history of medieval architecture.

Œuvres complètes (ed. A. Lecoy de la Marche, 1867); On the Abbey Church of St-Denis and Its Art Treasures (ed., tr. and annot. E. Panofsky, 1946).—M. Aubert, S. (St Wandrille, 1951).

R.R.R.

Suhravardī, YAḤYĀ, SHIHĀB-AL-DĪN (*1153–55; †Aleppo 1191), Persian philosopher and mystic, put to death by orthodox Muslims. He wrote engagingly in Arabic and Persian. His metaphysics of light has influenced Middle Eastern mystical thought.

Ḥikmat al-Ishrāq (Tehran, 1898); Risālat al-'Ishq (intro. O. Spies, Stuttgart, 1934); Three Treatises on Mysticism . . . (text and Eng. tr. idem and S. K. Khatak, ibid., 1935); As Suhraṣavadi opera metaphysica et mystica (ed. H. Corbin, I, Istanbul, 1945; II, Tehran, 1952); Ahvāl al-Tufūliyya and Rūzi bā Jama'at-i Sūfiān (Tehran, 1937).

C. de Vaux, 'La philosophie illuminative d'après S.' in Jour. Asiatique, IX (1902); M. Iqbal, The Development of Metaphysics in Persia (1908); H. Corbin, Les motifs zoroastriens dans la philosophie de S. (Tehran, 1946); S. H. Nasr, Three Muslim Sages (1964). E.Y.

Suidas, the name given to a Greek Lexicon probably compiled about 1000 by one or more authors. It is thought that the work was originally called 'The Suda' (hē Souda). There is at present no agreed interpretation of the meaning of 'Suda'. The work is an invaluable mine of information on ancient history and literature, particularly for its citations from Greek works now lost.

Lexicon Suidae (ed. A. Adler, 5 vols, 1928-38). F. Dölger, 'Zur Souda-Frage' in Byzantinische Zeitschrift, XXXVIII (1938). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Suits, GUSTAV (*Võnnu 30 XI 1883; †Aino Thauvõn; †23 V 1956), Estonian poet, critic and scholar; Professor of Estonian and comparative literature at Tartu University from 1921 to 1944, when he fled to Stockholm on the eve of the second Soviet annexation of Estonia, and joined the staff of the Nobel Institute.

Suits was active in both poetry and literary criticism, but the exacting standards he set himself severely limited his production. He began his career early this century as the leading spirit of the 'Young Estonia' movement and the protagonist of European culture, and he attracted attention and applause with the technical brilliance and patriotic fervour of Elu tuli ('The Fire of Life'; 1905). There is a loss of fervour, but considerable gain in experience and verbal skill in the later volumes, which culminate in the intricacies and wisdom of Tuli ja tuul (1950; Flames on the Wind, tr. W. K. Matthews, 1953). As a critic Suits was scrupulous, scholarly, pungent and discriminating.

VERSE: Tuulemaa (1913); Ohvisuits (1920); Lapse süüd (1922); Kõik on kokku unenägu (1922); Aastate aknal (1933); Kogutud luuletused (coll. poems; 1938).—ESSAYS: Noor-Eesti nõlvakult (1931).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Anthology of Modern Estonian Poetry (1953).

W. K. Matthews, 'The background and poetry of G. S.' in Amer. Slavic and E. Eur. Rev., IX (1905); A. Thauvõn-Suits, G. S.:u noorus (1964). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Sukhovo-Kobylin, ALEXANDER VASILYEVICH (*Moscow province 1817; †1903), Russian playwright. His three plays, the picaresque comedy Svad'ba Krechinskogo (1855), Delo (1869) and Smert'

Tarelkina (1869), are remarkable for their condensed plot and consummate stage-craft. All three plays are permanent favourites with Russian audiences.

Trilogiya (1927); Pis'ma (1934).

L. P. Grossman, Prestuplenie Sukhovo-Kobylyna (1927); V. Grossman, Delo Sukhovo-Kobylyna (1936). J.L.

Süleyman Çelebi (*Bursa; †ibid. 1422), Turkish poet. The son of a vizier, he remained in his home town and was imam of the Great Mosque. His only work, the Mevlid, is an unrivalled masterpiece of religious literature in Turkish. It relates the birth of the Prophet, his miracles, heavenly journey and his death. Written in a simple and sincere style, permeated with strong religious emotion, it became a classic and is recited upon ritual occasions, especially to commemorate the dead. Though reminiscent in form, metre and sometimes expression of the works of Sultan Veled and Aşık Paşa, it differs from these in its strict orthodoxy. Several poets attempted panegyrics inspired by this work, but without success.

Musahhah Mevlid-i şerif (ed. Rıza, 1902; The Mevlidi Sherif, tr. F. Lyman MacCallum, 1937; Süleyman Tschelebi's Lobgedicht auf die Geburt des Propheten, tr. I. Engelke, 1926); Vesiletü'n-necat (ed. Ahmet Ateş, 1954).

Neclâ Pekolcay, İslamî Türk edebiyatı (1967) and 'S. Ç.' in İslam Ansiklopedisi, XI (1967).

F.I.

Sully Prudhomme, pseud. of RENÉ FRANÇOIS PRUDHOMME (*Paris 16 III 1839; †Chatenay 7 IX 1907), French poet and essayist. Prudhomme's early studies in science were cut short by eye trouble. After a Parnassian phase as a poet, he discovered his true medium to be that of the short philosophical, didactic and symbolic poem, inspired by the spirit of positivism. The simplicity and neatness of his conceptions brought him immense popularity and the Nobel prize (1901). In his last years, darkened by paralysis, he wrote a number of critical and philosophical essays.

VERSE: Stances et poèmes (1865); Les épreuves (1866); Les solitudes (1869); Les destins (1872); La France (1874); La justice (1878); Le prisme (1886); Le bonheur (1888); Épaves (1908).—ESSAYS: Testament poétique (1901); La vraie religion selon Pascal (1905); Psychologie du libre arbitre (1907).—VARIOUS: De la nature des choses (tr. from Lucretius; 1869); Journal intime (1922).

E. Zyromski, S. P. (1907); H. Morice, L'esthétique de S. P. (1920); E. Estève, S. P. poète sentimental (1925); P. Flottes, S. P. (1930).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Sulpicia, two Latin woman poets: (1) Niece and ward of Messalla (64 B.C.–A.D. 8), author of six short charming and unaffected elegies (= Tibullus 4. 7-12) on her passion for Cerinthus. These are unique in their reflection of the freedom enjoyed by young women of the upper classes at Rome in the Augustan age.

In eds of Tibullus*.—P. Rasi, Una poetessa del secolo di Augusto (1913); G. Luck, The Latin Love-Elegy (2nd ed. 1969).

(2) Wife of Calenus, praised by Martial* as an author of chaste love. Only one fragment of her love poetry is extant; the hexameter satire which laments the state of Rome under Domitian is wrongly attributed to her.

W. Morel, Fragmenta poetarum Latinorum (1927; repr. 1963); A. Baehrens, Poetae Latini minores, V (1883). A.J.D.

Sumarokov, ALEXANDER PETROVICH (*Finland 4 VI 1718; †Moscow 1 IX 1777), Russian playwright in the French pseudo-classic tradition. Having begun with fables, satires and paraphrases of folk-songs, he wrote (from 1749 onwards) nine tragedies which now have mainly historical value. He even adapted Shakespeare's* Hamlet to the pseudo-classic style and gave it a respectable and happy ending. His comedies, too, were imitations of French models. With the actor Fëdor Volkov he established in St Petersburg in 1756 the first permanent theatre in Russia, whose director he became. Vain and jealous of his fame, he was the first Russian to live by his pen.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (10 vols, 1781).—Demetrius the Impostor (tr. 1806).

N. N. Bulich, S. i sovremennaya emu kritika (1854); V. I. Pokrovsky, A. P. S. (1911); P. N. Berkov, A. P. S. (1949). J.L.

Sumbatov, PRINCE ALEXANDER IVANOVICH (*1857; †1927), Russian dramatist whose plays—mostly on topical social themes and problems—followed the realistic tradition of Ostrovsky* and the satirical indictments of Gogol*. His theatrical name was YUZHIN.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (3 vols, 1901); Vospominaniya (1941).

P. N. Sakulin, Teatr Sumbatova (1927); E. M. Beskin, A. I. Yuzhin-S. (1936). J.L.

Sundman, PER OLOF (*Stockholm 4 IX 1922; ∞1948 Ulla-Britt Jansson), Swedish novelist. Sundman is a behaviourist, showing the reactions of isolated characters in a dramatic situation. His method is evocative but inconclusive: he investigates a situation, reporting objectively characters' actions and gestures, but leaves the reader to draw his own conclusions.

Jägarna (1957); Undersökningen (1958); Expeditionen (1962; The Expedition, tr. M. Sandbach, 1967); Sökarna (1963); Två dagar, två nätter (1965; Two Days, Two Nights, tr. A. Blair, 1969); Ingenjör Andréas luftfärd (1967; The Flight of the Eagle, tr. M. Sandbach, 1970). I.S.

Sunesen, ANDERS (*c. 1167; †Ivø 24 VI 1228), Danish poet. He belonged to one of the most important noble families of Denmark, studied for several years abroad (Paris, Bologna, Oxford) and was for a time Royal Chancellor. In 1201 he succeeded Absalon as Archbishop at Lund, until he retired in 1223. He is remembered for his impressive Latin poem, Hexaëmeron, in which he described the Creation and the ecclesiastical dogmas in more than 8,000 hexameters.

Andreae Sunonis filii archiepiscopi Lundensis Hexaëmeron libri XII (ed. M. C. Gertz, 1892).

P. E. Müller, Vita Andreae Sunonis (1830); F. Hammerich, En Skolastiker og Bibeltheolog fra Norden (1865); A. Kabell, Om A. S.'s Sekvenser (1958). E.B.

Sung Ch'ī (□An-lu 998; †1061), Chinese scholar, prose-writer and poet. Sung had a major share in the compilation of the 'New History of the T'ang Dynasty' (1045-60). He was an excellent ku-wên prose stylist and contributed to the success of the northern Sung ku-wên movement. He also wrote some fine tz'ü-poetry.

Sung Ching-wên chi.

A.R.D.

Sung CHIH-WÊN (□Fên-chou 7656; †Kuei-chou 712), Chinese poet. Sung was an adherent of Empress Wu's favourite Chang I-chih. He was banished when the latter lost power (705) but secretly returned to the capital and got a new appointment by intrigue. He was later charged with bribery and forced to commit suicide. He is associated with Shên Ch'üan-ch'ī (7650-7714), who was also a member of Chang I-chih's party, as co-founder of the 'regulated' verse-form, lǚ-shih. A.R.D.

Sung LIEN (□P'u-chiang 1310; †Nanking 1381), Chinese essayist and scholar. Sung enjoyed great favour from Emperor T'ai-tsu (1368-98) and his heir-apparent, and held many important official academic posts. He was considered the foremost man of letters of his time and became a model for later prose writing.

Sung Hsüeh-shih ch'üan-chi (coll. works); Sung Ching-lien wei-k'o chi (supp.; 1655). A.R.D.

Sung YÜ (fl. 3rd century B.C.), Chinese poet. Sung, a native of the state of Ch'u, is said to have been a pupil of Ch'ü* Yüan and, like him, a minister of Ch'u. He seems to be little more than a name to which certain poems could be conveniently ascribed. The few statements about his life are perhaps only an echo of the 'Ch'ü Yüan' legend.

The ascribed poems, some of which are excellent if exotic, show no homogeneity. The Chiu-pien and Chao-hun (contained in the anthology Ch'u-tz'ü) are distinct in form from the fu-poems, and also from each other. Nor are the fu-poems of a kind.

ASCRIBED POEMS: Chiu-pien; Chao-hun (both tr. D. Hawkes in Ch'u Tz'ü: The Songs of the South, 1959); Fêng fu ('Sung Yu's Defence', tr. A. Waley in The Temple, 1923); Kao-t'ang fu (tr. idem, ibid.); Ta-yen fu ('Big Words', part. tr. idem, ibid.); Têng-t'u-tz'ü hao-sê fu ('Master Têng-T'u', part. tr. idem in 170 Chinese Poems, 1918); Fêng fu ('The Man-Wind and the Woman-Wind', tr. idem, ibid.); Shên-nü fu ('The Song of the Goddess', tr. E. Erkes in T'oung pao, XXV, 1927).

A.R.D.

Sung YÜN (6th century A.D.), Chinese Buddhist monk. Sung was sent by Empress Hu in 518 with other monks to study and collect Buddhist scriptures in India. An account of the journey, drawn from his own records, is preserved in Lo-yang chia-lan chi, Ch. 5 (547).

'Voyage de Song Yun dans l'Udyāna et le Gandhāra', tr. E. Chavannes in Bull. École française d'extrême-orient, III (1903); tr. S. Beal in Buddhist Records of the Western World, I (1906).

A.R.D.

Sun-tz'ü, title of SUN WU (6th century B.C.), traditional author of the Chinese military classic Sun-tz'ü. The problem of authorship and date is very complex. In the 1st century B.C. there appear to have been extant two works, one ascribed to Sun Wu and the other to Sun Pin, a general of the 4th century B.C. The relation of the present book to either is not clear but its contents may date from the 3rd century B.C.

Trs: L. Giles, Sun Tz'ü on the Art of War (1910); S. B. Griffith, Sun Tzu: the Art of War (1963).

A.R.D.

Supervielle, JULES (*Montevideo 16 I 1884; †Paris 17 III 1960), French author. Supervielle was educated in Paris. His later life was divided between France and South America, where during the war he wrote his very beautiful Poèmes de la France malheureuse (1939–41). He was at first much influenced by Symbolist theory, but, with the publication of Gravitations (1925), developed a highly personal gift. The climate of his mind was one of acceptance and flickering tenderness. He sings of the body and the inner life of the spirit, and of the unity of both with the cosmos. He has also written some delightful stories for children and several fairy plays.

VERSE: Brumes du passé (1900); Les poèmes de l'amour triste (1919); Le forçat innocent (1930); Les amis inconnus (1934); La fable du monde

(1938); Choix de poèmes (1947); Oublieuse mémoire (1949); Naissance (1951).—NOVELS AND STORIES: L'homme de la pampa (1923); Le voleur d'enfants (1926); The Colonel's Children, tr. A. Pryce Jones, 1950; L'enfant de la haute mer (1931); The Ox and Ass at the Manger, part. tr. D. Starke, 1932; L'arche de Noé (1938); Premiers pas de l'univers (1950).—PLAYS: La belle au bois (1932); Bolivar (1936); Shéhérazade (1939); Le voleur d'enfants (1949); Robinson (1963).

C. Sénéchal, J. S. (1939); C. Roy, S. (1949); R. Étiemble, S. (1960); J. A. Hiddleton, L'univers de S. (1965).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Surkov, ALEXEY ALEXANDROVICH (*1899), Soviet poet of peasant origin. His poetry—mostly 'engaged'—became very popular during the Second World War.

Izbrannye stikhi (1936; new ed. 1947); Rossiia karayushchaya (1944); Miru-mir! (1951); Sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1965–66).

J.L.

Surrey, EARL OF: see Howard, HENRY.

Surtees, ROBERT Smith (*Durham 1803; †1841 Elizabeth Fenwick; †Brighton 16 III 1864), English writer of novels of sporting life, rich in comic dialogue and odd human types lending themselves to illustration by Cruikshank, Phiz etc. In 1831 Surtees started The New Sporting Magazine, in which Mr Jorrocks, a type of Cockney sportsman, first appeared.

Jorrocks' Jaunts and Jollities, or the Hunting, Racing, Driving, Sailing, Eating, Eccentric and Extravagant Exploits of that renowned Sporting Citizen, Mr John Jorrocks of St Botolph Lane and Great Coram Street, with illustrations by Phiz (1838; with Life, 1869); Hillingdon Hall, or the Cockney Squire (1845); Hawbuck Grange (1847); Mr Sponge's Sporting Tour (1853); Handley Cross, or Mr Jorrocks' Hunt (1854); Ask Mamma: or the Richest Commoner in England (1858); Plain or Ringlets? (1860); Mr Romford's Hounds (1865).—Novels (10 vols, 1930).

F. Watson, R. S. S.: a Critical Study (1933); A. Steel, Jorrocks's England (1932); R. L. Collins, A Jorrocks Handbook (1964).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Suso: see Seuse, HEINRICH.

Sussaneau, HUBERT (*Soissons 1512), French philologist and neo-Latin poet.

POEMS: Perona obsessa (1536; on the siege of Péronne); Epigrams (1536); Ludorum libri (1538).—GRAMMATICAL WORKS: Connubium adverbiorum (?); De ratione componendorum carminum (1534); Dictionarium Ciceronianum (1536).

F.W.

Sutcliffe, ROSEMARY (*1920), one of Britain's best writers of historical novels, intended for young people, but attractive to all ages. She has written of various periods, but particularly of Romano-British society, as in The Eagle of the Ninth (1954). In her books historical and indeed archaeological accuracy is joined to a deep imaginative sympathy for her characters and a slightly mannered but very readable style.

FOR YOUNG READERS: The Queen Elizabeth Story (1950); The Lantern Bearers (1959); The Mark of the Horse Lord (1965); A Circlet of Oak Leaves (1968).—FOR OLDER READERS: Lady in Waiting (1956); The Rider of the White Horse (1959); Sword at Sunset (1963); The Flowers of Adonis (1969).—Rudyard Kipling (criticism; 1960).
M. Meek, R. S. (1962). W.R.A.

Suttner, BERTHA VON, née COUNTESS KINSKY (*Prague 9 VI 1843; ∞1876 novelist Arthur Gundaccar, Freiherr von Suttner; †Vienna 21 VI 1914), Austrian novelist. She strove to promote peace, and shocked her contemporaries by her novel Die Waffen nieder. It was, however, the impact of this novel which caused Alfred Nobel to devote part of his fortune to founding the Nobel prize for peace which Bertha von Suttner herself was the first to receive in 1905.

NOVELS: Die Waffen nieder (2 vols, 1889; 'Lay down your arms', the Autobiography of Martha v. Tilling, tr. T. Holmes, 1892; best tr.); Einsam und arm (2 vols, 1896).—Der Kampf um die Vermeidung des Weltkrieges, ges. Aufsätze (ed. A. H. Fried, 2 vols, 1917).

A. H. Fried, B. von S. (1908); E. Key, Florence Nightingale und B. von S. (1919); I. Reicka, B. von S. (1952). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Sutzkever, ABRAHAM (*Smargon, Lithuania 1913), Yiddish poet and essayist. He spent his early childhood in Siberia as a war evacuee, and his youth in Vilno, where he became a leader of the 'Young Vilno' group of Yiddish writers. He lived through the Nazi occupation of the city and joined the Partisans; after the war he settled in Israel. He became editor of the Yiddish literary magazine, Di Goldene Keyt ('The Golden Chain'), founded 1949. His poetry reflects both the destruction of Jewish life in Eastern Europe and its rebirth in Israel, and blends traditional with highly personal imagery while at the same time preserving the rigid structure of classical Slavonic patterns.

Lieder (1937); Valdigs (1940); Di festung (1945); Lieder fun geto (1946); Yiddishe gass (1948); Di geheym-shtet (Tel Aviv, 1948); In fayer vogn (1952); Siberia (Jerusalem, 1953; also in Heb.; Eng. tr. J. Sonntag, illus. Marc Chagall, 1961); Fun drai veltn (anthology; Buenos Aires, 1953); Ode tsu der toib (1955); Oazis (1963); Firkantike oisies un mofsim (1968); Lieder fun yam hamoves (1968); Tsaitike peynemer (1970).—Poetishe verk (2 vols, 1963).

Yoivel-bukh (essays by 29 authors; Tel Aviv, 1963). J.S.

Suvorin, ALEXEY SERGEYEVICH (*Voronezh province 1833; †1911), Russian author, playwright, publisher, founder and editor of the conservative daily Novoye Vremya. Although not a prominent writer, he was important because of his contacts with, and the help he offered to, other writers, e.g. Chekhov* and V. Rozanov*. His most valuable work is his Dnevnik ('Diary'; 1917, 1923).

D. I. Abramovich, Pis'ma russkikh pisateley k A. S. Suvorinu (1927); Journal intime de A. S. (tr. M. Lichnevsky, 1927). J.L.

Švantner, FRANTIŠEK (*Bystrá 29 I 1912; †1950), Slovak novelist. One of the most promising post-war Slovak novelists, Švantner's career was prematurely cut short. The somewhat lyrical style of his first novel Nevesta hól' (1946) gave way to a somewhat more realistic manner in his chronicle of 20th-century Slovakia Život bez konca (1956). R.A.

Svensson, JÓN STEFÁN (*Möðruvellir, Hörgárdalur 16 XI 1857; †Cologne 16 X 1944), Icelandic story writer. Svensson, offered a free education by Roman Catholic missionaries in Iceland, studied at Amiens, and at Universities in France, Belgium and Holland. Subsequently he taught and preached in Denmark. In 1912, after an illness, he gave up teaching and produced the first of a long series of Nonni books, written in German and containing memories of his youth. Subsequently translated into many languages, they became extremely popular with boys all over the world.

Et Ridt gennem Island (1908); Nonni. Erlebnisse eines jungen Isländers (1913); Nonni og Manni (1914); Lost in the Arctic, tr. M. Bodkin, 1927; Sonnentage (1915); Die Stadt am Meer (1922); Récits Islandais (1924); Abenteuer auf den Inseln (1927); Auf Skipalón (1928); Die Feuerinsel im Nordmeer (1933); Nonni Erzählt (1936).

H. Hannesson, 'Nonni Áttæður' in Eimreiðin, XLIII (1937). R.G.P.

Světlá, KAROLINA, pseud. of JOHANNA MUŽÁKOVÁ, née ROTOVÁ (*Prague 24 II 1830; †ibid. 7 IX 1899), Czech novelist. Born of a nationally mixed family and brought up amid the Germanized Prague bourgeoisie, Světlá actively accepted Czech nationality only after her marriage. Her early writings show the influence of the ideas of the Young Germany movement, especially as regards the emancipation of woman. Her best work, however, is contained in the novels that describe the countryside of north Bohemia from which her family originated.

Vesnický román (1867); Kříž u potoka (1868);

Kantârčice (1869).—Vybrané spisy (8 vols, 1954–59).

J. Špičák, K. S. (1962).

R.A.

Svevo, ITALO, pseud. of ETTORRE SCHMITZ (*Trieste 19 XII 1861; ∞1896 Livia Veneziani; †Motta di Livenza 13 IX 1928), Italian novelist. Svevo's first novels, Una vita (1892; A Life, tr. A. Colquhoun, 1963) and Senilità (1898; As a Man Grows Older, tr. B. De Zoete, 1932), went unnoticed, and it was not until the 1920s, through the good offices of James Joyce*, who knew Svevo in Trieste, and Montale*, that Svevo achieved any sort of recognition. He is now considered to be Italy's finest psychological novelist.

Svevo has great insight and a remarkable gift for analysis and irony, both verbal and situational. His first novel relates the life and suicide of a young bank clerk who fails to adjust to the realities of life, his second the story of a man who tries to impose on life his own day-dreams. After a gap of 25 years, Svevo published La coscienza di Zeno (1923; Confessions of Zeno, tr. B. De Zoete, 1930), a comic masterpiece in which Zeno Cosini tells his own story, but in such a way as to reveal to the reader his capacity for self-deception. This novel is one of the first to make direct use of Freudian theories. The concepts of health, illness and the inability to establish personal relationships are the recurrent themes of Svevo's work; Svevo himself is the detached, ironical observer, moving from condemnation in his early work to indulgent comprehension in his later fiction.

Svevo also wrote plays, not however considered his best work, essays and short stories.

Opera omnia (5 vols, 1966–69).

P. N. Furbank, I. S. The Man and the Writer (1966; best intro. in Eng.); B. Maier, La personalità e l'opera di I. S. (rev. ed. 1965); S. Maxia, Lettura di I. S. (1965); Essays on I. S. (ed. T. Staley, 1969). B.M.

Swaanenburg, WILLEM VAN (*Goes c. 1675; †Amsterdam 1728), Dutch poet, prose writer and landscape painter; a remarkable artist in his day who endeavoured to break away from both the intellectual and the burlesque poetry of his time.

Parnas of de zanggodinnen van een schilder (1724); De herboore Oudheit (1725); Arlequin Distelateur of de overgehaalde Nouvelles (1725); De vervrolijkende Momus (1727).

C. H. P. Meyer, Pieter Langendijk (1891); E. A. Serrarens, 'W. van S.' in De Gids, XCIV (1936). J.W.W.

Swaen, MICHIEL DE (*Dunkirk 29 I 1654; ∞1678 Anna Damart; †ibid. 3 V 1707), Flemish poet, surgeon at Dunkirk. In his youth fond of the stage, he later wrote mainly devotional poetry: Het Leven en de Dood van onzen Saligmaker Jezus

Christus (1684; pr. 1767); Zedelycke Rymwercken en Christelycke Gedachten (1722). He also wrote a theoretical work on poetry, Neder-Duitsche Digtkonde (c. 1700). He was influenced by Cats* and Poitiers* and admired Vondel* whom he imitated, but he modelled his plays on the French classics. His play, De verheerlyckte Schoenlapper ofte de gecroonde Leersse (perf. 1688; pr. 1718), is still stageable. Further plays: two translations of Corneille's* Le Cid; a Mystery play, De Mensch-Wording (1686); Martely ende doot van de H. Maget Martelaresse Catharina (1702); De Zedelycke Doodt van Keyzer Carel den Vyfden (1707) and in De Heliconsche Echo (tournament of 1700, sponsored by the Drie Santinnen at Bruges).

Werken (ed. V. Celen, 6 vols, 1928–34).

M. Sabbe, Het leven en de Werken van M. de S. (1905); V. Celen, 'Een Tijdgenoot van Vondel' in Liber Amicorum B. H. Molkenboer (1939); W. J. C. Buitendijk, Het Calvinisme in de Spiegel v. d. Zuidnederl. Litt. der Contra-Reformatie (1942); V. Celen, 'M. de S., de dichter van De Mensch-Wording?' in Hand. Zuidnederl. Maatsch. v. Taal, Lett. en Gesch., III (1948–49); J. F. Vanderheyden, 'M. de S.'s Digtkonde, A. Dacier en P. Corneille: Een bronnenonderzoek' in Versl. en Med. Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. (1954); V. Celen, 'M. de S.' in De Tafelronde, II (1955). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Swedberg, JESPER (*nr Falun 28 VIII 1653; †Skara 26 VII 1735), Swedish Bishop, hymn-writer and philologist. He became court preacher to Charles XI and in 1692 Professor of theology at Uppsala. He was largely responsible for the hymn-book of 1694 (which was suppressed) and that of 1695. He wrote a number of original hymns and translated many others. In 1702 he became Bishop of Skara. He played some part (as a traditionalist) in politics and was partly responsible for sending Swedish clergy to Delaware in 1696–97. He also worked for a reformed spelling of Swedish and wrote a Swedish grammar as well as a vivid autobiography.

Schibboleth. Svenska språkets rymt och riktighet (1716); Grammatica suecana, en svensk grammatica (1722); Psalmerna av S. in P. Hanselli, Samlade vitterhetsarbeten av sv. författare, XV (1871); Levernesbeskrivning (ed. G. Wetterberg, 1941; 1st pub.).

H. W. Tottie, J. S.'s lif och verksamhet (2 vols, 1885–86); M. Lamm, Swedenborg (1915); E. N. Tigerstedt, 'J. S. som satiriker' in Nordisk Tidskrift (1948). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Swedenborg, EMANUEL (*Stockholm 29 I 1688; †London 29 III 1772), Swedish scientist, mathematician, philosopher and mystic. Son of Bishop J. Swedberg* of Skara, Swedenborg—as he was called after being ennobled in 1719—was educated at Uppsala and in 1710 travelled to England and other countries. Returning to Sweden in 1714, he became assessor at the Bergskollegium (department of mines) in 1716 and wrote a large number of scientific and mathematical works. He spent much time abroad, and in 1734 produced his Opera philosophica et mineralia, in which he developed a sort of spiritualism, quite new in his writings. Between 1743 and 1745 he experienced a mental and religious crisis, left the Bergskollegium in 1747 and subsequently led a lonely life, travelling much, partly for the purpose of getting his books published, as this could not be done in Sweden. In his crisis he saw visions of angels and believed he was in direct contact with the spiritual world; and above all, in 1745, while in London, he 'saw' Christ, who commanded him to write and interpret the Bible's true spiritual content. His subsequent works, while containing many elements derived from his scientific training, are prophetic and mystical. Among the most important of them are: Arcana coelestia (1749–56), Vera christiana religio (1771) and Doctrina vitae pro Nova Hierosolyma (1763). Swedenborg had nothing to do with the subsequent foundation of the Swedenborgian Church, which was set up by his followers.

A. H. Stroh and G. Ekelöf, Kronologisk Förteckning över E. Swedenborgs skrifter (1910; supp. by A. Holmberg, 1937); Urval av Swedenborgs religiösa skrifter (orig. Latin texts tr. into Swed. H. Bergstedt, ed. M. Lamm, 1925); Sex minnesvärda berättelser ur vishetens förnjölse (1948).

A. Sundelin, Swedenborgianismens historia i Sverige (1886); M. Lamm, S., en studie över hans urveckling till mystiker och andeskådare (1915) and Upplysningstidens Romantik (1918–20; this deals especially with S. as literary artist and visionary); E. Kleen, S. (2 vols, 1917–19; incl. biblio. of crit. works on S.); R. Lagerborg, Fallet S. (1924; psycho-pathological point of view); A. Viatte, Les sources occultes du romantisme (2 vols, 1928); H. de Geymüller and H. Driesch, S. und die übersinnliche Welt (1936; psychological); E. Briem, 'Från skilda tider' in Studier tillägnade H. Holmquist (1938); E. Benz, 'Immanuel [sic] S. als geistiger Wegbahner des deutschen Idealismus und der deutschen Romantik' in Deutsche Vierteljahrschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte (1941) and S. in Deutschland (1947); S. Toksvig, E. S. (1948; popular biog. in Eng.); F. Horn, Schelling und S. (1954); I. Johnson, S.s skapelsediktt De cultu et Amore Dei (1961). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Sweet, HENRY (*London 1845; ∞1887 Mary Birch; †Oxford 30 IV 1912), English phonetician and comparative philologist, Reader in phonetics at Oxford.

History of English Sounds from the Earliest Period (1874); Anglo-Saxon Reader (1876); Handbook of Phonetics (1877); The Oldest English

Texts (1885); A New English Grammar (1892); The History of Language (1890); The Sounds of English (1908). R.M.H.

Świętochowski, ALEKSANDER, pseud. WŁADYSŁAW OKOŃSKI (*Stoczek 18 I 1849; †Warsaw 25 IV 1938), Polish author. He preached POSITIVISM in his weekly Prawda for 20 years (from 1881) as well as in his literary works. Defender of democratic ideals and human rights, he believed in eternal progress of mankind through love (Duchy). Because the majority of his literary works are vehicles for his doctrines they are too bookish and their characters anaemic, but his language and style are masterly and the dialogues vivid and rich in antitheses.

NOVELS: Drygałowie (1914); Nalęcze (1929); Twinko (1936).—PLAYS: Nieśmiertelne dusze (1876); Duchy (1909).—SHORT STORIES: Damian Capenko, Chawa Rubin, Karl Krug (1879, in O życie; Ger. tr. A. Weiss in Pölnisches Novellenbuch, 1906).—VARIOUS: Utopie w rozwoju historycznym (1910); Źródła moralności (1912); Historia chłopów polskich (2 vols, 1925–28).—Pisma (8 vols, 1896–1900); Pisma wybrane (1951).

H. Galle, A. S. jako beletrysta (1902); Z. Dębicki, 'A. S.' in Portrety, I (1927); Z. Szwejkowski, 'A. S.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XIX (1939–40); J. Rudzki, S. (1963).

S.S. (P.H.)

Swift, JONATHAN (*Dublin 30 XI 1667; †ibid. 19 X 1745), Irish novelist, satirist, poet and pamphleteer. Educated at Kilkenny School and at Trinity College, Dublin, in 1689 he became secretary to Sir William Temple*; he was Anglican curate at Kilroot, Co. Antrim and at Laracor, Co. Meath and became Dean of St Patrick's (1713–45). He first rose to fame as a writer on literary, political and religious affairs. His tract The Conduct of the Allies (1711) marked the transfer of his allegiance from the Whigs to the Tories and, by helping to overturn the Whig ministry, won him great political influence in England. Cut off from power by Queen Anne's death (1714), Swift wrote on Irish affairs; his Drapier Letters (1724) defeated the project of 'Wood's halfpence' and made Swift a popular idol, posthumously identified with Irish nationalism and the policy of Sinn Féin.

Swift was the master prose-satirist of his century. He was Dryden's* cousin and the friend of Pope* and other fellow-members of the Scriblerus Club. Gulliver's Travels (1726), his famous satire upon mankind, and all his work is characterized by originality, clarity and incisive force.

The riddle of Swift, his exact relationship with Esther Johnson (Stella), the natural daughter of his patron, Sir William Temple, who left her in his charge, and Esther van Homrigh (Vanessa), his pupil who was in love with him, is reflected in his Journal to Stella and in his poem Cadenus & Vanessa, but remains unsolved. R.McH.

Prose Works (ed. Hubert Davis, 14 vols, 1939–68); Poems (ed. Harold Williams, 3 vols, 1937; 2nd ed. 1958); Correspondence (ed. idem, 5 vols, 1963–65).—L. A. Landa and J. E. Tobin, J. S.: A List of Critical Studies 1895–1945 (1945); J. J. Stathis, Bibliography of S. Studies 1945–65 (1967).

W. B. Ewald, The Masks of J. S. (1954); L. A. Landa, S. and the Church of Ireland (1954); R. Quintana, S.: An Introduction (1955); I. Ehrenpreis, The Personality of J. S. (1958) and S. the Man, His Works and the Age (2 vols, 1962, 1967); D. Johnston, In Search of S. (1959); E. Rosenheim, S. and the Satirist's Art (1963); H. J. Davis, J. S. (1964); M. Voigt, S. and the 20th Century (1964); Fair Liberty Was All His Cry (ed. A. N. Jeffares, 1967); D. Donoghue, J. S. (1969). E.T.W.

Swinburne, ALGERNON CHARLES (*London 5 IV 1837; †Putney 10 IV 1909), English poet. He was educated at Eton and Balliol but had to leave both for unsatisfactory conduct, though he retained the friendship of Jowett*, the famous Master of Balliol. In 1860 he came to London and joined the circle of William Morris* and D. G. Rossetti*. Atalanta in Calydon (1865) roused great expectations but Poems and Ballads (1866) revealed an obsession with sexual passion which was thought to be the result of imagination rather than experience. A diversionary attempt by friends to interest him in Mazzini's* republican ideals led to Songs before Sunrise (1871). Eight years later, his health undermined by fits and solitary drinking bouts, he was taken into the house of Theodore Watts-Dunton at Putney, restored to health and for the rest of his life protected and cherished.

Though he wrote much prose and many plays—three, of which Chastelard (1865) is the best, were inspired by Mary Queen of Scots—it is the lyrics that fashioned Swinburne's reputation. Unfortunately when they no longer shocked they ceased to charm, and neglect followed. But, despite diffusion and occasional monotony, he remains secure among the inspired singers and, though he sometimes walked in dark places, he left brightness behind.

The Queen Mother and Rosamond. Two Plays (1860); Poems and Ballads (1866); William Blake (prose; 1868); Bothwell (1874); George Chapman: A Critical Essay (1875); Essays and Studies (1875); Poems and Ballads, 2nd ser. (1878); Mary Stuart (1881); Tristram of Lyonesse (1882); Poems and Ballads, 3rd ser. (1889); Astrophel (1894); Autobiographical Notes (1920).—Works (ed. E. Gosse and T. Wise, 20 vols, 1925–27; for the biblio. see J. Carter and G. Pollard, An Enquiry, etc., 1934); Hyperion, etc. (ed. G. Lafourcade, 1927).—Letters (ed. C. Y. Lang, 1959–62).

E. Gosse, S. (1917); G. Lafourcade, A Literary Biography (1932); H. Nicolson, S. and Baudelaire (1930); J. O. Fuller, S. (1968); S.: The Critical Heritage (ed. C. K. Hyder, 1970).

M.V.D. (M.A.)

Sylvain, GEORGES: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

Sylvanus Urban: see Cave, EDWARD.

Sylvester, JOSHUA (*?Medway region of Kent 1563; ∞?Mary; †Middleburg, Holland 28 IX 1618), English poet and translator of Du* Bartas and other scriptural epics; secretary in the service of the Merchant Adventurers from 1613. His translation of Du Bartas had a pervasive influence during the 17th century.

The Complete Works of J. S. (ed. A. B. Grosart, 2 vols, 1880; repr. 1967). G.F.S. (A.N.W.)

Symeon Magistros and Logothetes is the name under which a Byzantine world chronicle 901–948 is sometimes found. Symeon Logothetes was probably one of a number of historical compilers and continuators working on an anonymous chronicle known as the Epitome. J.M.H.

Chronographia (under Leo Grammaticus' name): ed. I. Bekker (1842; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CVIII (1863; with Lat. tr.).

G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Symeon Metaphrastes (fl. end of 10th–11th century), Byzantine hagiographer. He compiled a collection of hagiographical material, much of which he rewrote in a more rhetorical style to suit the fashion of his day.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXIV–CXVI (1864; with Lat. tr.). J.M.H.

Symeon the New Theologian (*949; †1022), Byzantine mystic. This monk and Abbot exercised great influence in his own day over both laymen and monks, but was not popular among the secular clergy. His sermons on monastic reforms have survived together with his ascetical and mystical writings and his poems in popular accentual verse, all of which were much used in the Greek and Slavonic Orthodox Churches and still are. His life was written by Nicetas* Stethatus.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXX (1864; incomplete; Lat. only of some works); Orationes (ed. and tr. J. M. Hussey and B. Krivocheine, 1954); Chapitres théologiques, gnostiques et pratiques (ed. J. Darrouzès, 1957; with Fr. tr.); Catéchèses (ed. B. Krivocheine, 3 vols, 1963–65; with Fr. tr.); Traité théologique et éthique (ed. J. Darrouzès, 2 vols, 1966–67; with Fr. tr.).

J. M. Hussey, Church and Learning in the Byzantine Empire (1937). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Symmachus, QUINTUS AURELIUS (*c. 340; †c. 402), Roman orator and letter-writer, was the last great champion of paganism. As urban prefect (384-385) he led the pagan party unsuccessfully in a struggle against the influence of Ambrose*; but the success of the Christian party did not drive Symmachus out of public life. He became consul in 391 and spent the remaining years of his life in literary activity. Extant works are letters in ten books, and fragments of speeches.

Eds: Migne, Patrologia Latina, XVIII (1848); O. Seeck in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Auctores antiquissimi, VI (1883).

T. R. Glover, Life and Letters in the 4th Century (1901); D. M. Robinson, 'An analysis of the pagan revival of the late 4th century, with special reference to S.' in Trans. and Proc. Amer. Philol. Assoc. (1915). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Symonds, JOHN ADDINGTON (*Bristol 5 X 1840; ∞1864 Janet North; †Rome 19 IV 1893), English poet, critic and historian of the aesthetic school. His diffuse gifts respond best to the discipline of translation.

TRANSLATIONS: Sonnets of Michael Angelo and Campanella (1878); Benvenuto Cellini (1888); Wine, Women and Song (medieval Latin students' songs; 1884).—History of the Italian Renaissance (7 vols, 1875-86).—VERSE: Many Moods (1878); New and Old (1880); Animi Figura (1882).—CRITICISM: In the Key of Blue (1893); Essays, speculative and suggestive (2 vols, 1890; with pref. H. F. Brown, 1907); Sketches and Studies in Italy and Greece (ed. idem, 3 vols, 1898).

H. F. Brown, Life of J. A. S. (1895); A. Symons, J. A. S.: Studies in Prose and Verse (1904); E. M. Brahm, Die italienische Renaissance in dem englischen Geistesleben des 19. Jahrhunderts, insbesondere bei J. Ruskin und J. A. S. (1932); P. M. Grosskurth, S. (1964). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Symons, ARTHUR (*Wales 28 II 1865; ∞1901 Rhoda Bowser; †Wittersham 22 I 1945), English critic and poet, a member of the Rhymers' Club and editor of The Savoy (1896). A student of French Symbolism, influenced by Walter Pater*, he did not fulfil the promise of his early poems, but wrote books of criticism which, on congenial subjects, revealed his discriminating taste and sensitive response to impressions.

CRITICISM: An Introduction to the Study of Browning (1886); Studies in Two Literatures (1897); Aubrey Beardsley (1898); The Symbolist Movement in Literature (1899); William Blake (1907); The Romantic Movement in English Poetry (1909); Charles Baudelaire (1920).—Collected Poems (2 vols, 1902).

T. E. Welby, A. S. (1925); R. Lhombreaud, A. S. (1963). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Syncellus: see George the Syncellus.

Synesius (*Pentapolis, Cyrenaica c. 370; †c. 414), Greek writer, of an eminent pagan family, studied Neo-Platonic philosophy at Alexandria under Hypatia and also at Athens: married a Christian wife in Alexandria; about 410, after much hesitation, he allowed himself to be consecrated Bishop of Ptolemais, though not yet baptized. Author of 156 letters, of a number of philosophical and historical treatises, and of ten hymns showing a strange blend of Neo-Platonism and Christianity.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXVI (1859; with Lat. tr.); R. Hercher, Epistolographi Graeci (1873); N. Terzaghi, Synesii Cyrenensis hymni (1939) and Synesii Cyrenensis opuscula (1944).—A. Fitzgerald (tr.), The Letters of S. (1926) and The Essays and Hymns of S. (2 vols, 1930).

J. C. Pando, The Life and Times of S. of C. (1940); C. Lacombrade, S. de C., hellène et chrétien (1951); H. I. Marrou in The Conflict Between Paganism and Christianity (ed. A. D. Momigliano, 1963). R.B.

Synge, JOHN MILLINGTON (*Rathfarnham, Co. Dublin 16 IV 1871; †Dublin 24 III 1909), Irish dramatist and poet. He came of Anglo-Irish Wicklow stock and graduated at Trinity College, Dublin in 1892. Interested in natural history and in a musical career, he travelled in Germany and France. While studying French literature in Paris, where he was for a time secretary to the French mythologist, de Joubainville, he met W. B. Yeats*, who urged him to seek inspiration in the Aran Islands. It was mainly from Aran, Wicklow and Kerry that Synge drew the material for his notebooks, articles and plays. His plays, first produced at the Abbey Theatre 1903-10, established him as Ireland's leading dramatist. He died of cancer before he could complete the revision of his last play, Deirdre of the Sorrows (1909).

Synge worked close to the realities of Irish speech, whether Gaelic or Irish-English, and of the Irish imagination, handling both with insight and a fine sense of form and colour. From the stark simplicity of Riders to the Sea (1904) to the high comedy of The Playboy of the Western World (1907) and the natural poetic dignity of Deirdre, he displays the variety and range of a great dramatic poet with a continuous preference for the imaginative element in life. His prose writings and his renderings of Petrarch* into Irish-English help towards an understanding of his artistic method.

PLAYS: In the Shadow of the Glen (1903); The Well of the Saints (1905); The Tinker's Wedding (1908).—VARIOUS: The Aran Islands (1907); In Wicklow and West Kerry (1908); Poems and Translations (1909).—Collected Works (4 vols, ed. R. Skelton et al., 1962-68).

W. B. Yeats, J. M. S. and the Ireland of His

Time (1911); Daniel Corkery, S. and Anglo-Irish Literature (1931); A. D. Estill, The Sources of S. (1939); J. Setterquist, Ibsen and the Beginnings of Anglo-Irish Drama, I: J. M. S. (1951); U. Ellis-Fermor, The Irish Dramatic Movement (2nd ed. 1954); D. H. Green and E. M. Stephens, J. M. S. (1959); Alan Price, S. and Anglo-Irish Drama (1961); E. Coxhead, J. M. S. and Lady Gregory (1962); Sunshine and the Moon's Delight (ed. S. B. Bushrui, 1972). R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Syrokomla, WŁADYSŁAW, pseud. of LUDWIK KONDRATOWIEZ (*Smolhów 29 IX 1823; †Wilno 15 IX 1862), Polish poet and playwright. A prolific writer, he gained great popularity with his realistic poetry which at times contained biting satire and criticism of the harsh treatment of the poor, serf-bound peasants. His posthumous cycle of poems Melodie z domu obłąkanych (Poezje ostatniej godziny, 1862) has great literary value, but probably most important are his translations of the Renaissance Polish Latin poets, Przekłady poetów polsko-lacińskich epoki zygmunto-wskiej (6 vols, 1851–53). P.H.

Wrodzony Jan Dęboróg (1854; ed. J. Kryzanowski, 1925); Margier (1855); Kęs chleba (1856); Janek Cmentarnik (1857); Hans von Friedhof, tr. M. Morgenroth, 1897); Ulas (1858); Gawędy i rymy ulotne (6 vols, 1853–61).—Poezje (ed. W. Korotyński, 10 vols, 1872).

T. Pini, W. S. i jego utwory (1901); S. Cywiński, S. człowiek i twórca (1923; offprint from S.'s Wybór poezji, 3 vols, 1923). S.S. (P.H.)

Syv, PEDER PEDERSEN (*Syv, nr Roskilde 22 II 1631; †1664 Karen Andersdatter Hoff; †Hellested 17 II 1702), Danish linguist and grammarian. He was a headmaster, later a clergyman, and was appointed Philologus regius linguae Danicae. One of the founders of the scholarly study of the Danish language, especially with his Nogle Betænkninger om det Cimbriske Sprog (1663) and his Danish grammar, he collected two volumes of proverbs and 100 previously unprinted medieval ballads.

Den danske Sprog-Kunst eller Grammatica (1685); Prøve paa en Dansk og Latinsk Ord-Bog (1692).—COLLECTIONS: Almindelige Danske Ord-Sproge og korte Lærdomme (2 vols, 1682–88); 200 Viser om Konger, Kemper oc Andre (1695).

F. Winkel Horn, P. S. (1878). E.B.

Szabó, DEZSŐ (*Kolozsvár 10 VII 1879; †Budapest 5 I 1945), Hungarian novelist, short-story writer and publicist. Szabó's Az elsodort falu (1919), a highly emotional novel on the tragic fate of the Hungarian race, made him a prophetic figure between the two World Wars. His romantic views of the peasants and racial theories were couched in a powerful rhetorical style which had great influence in Hungary.

NOVELS: Segítség! (1925); Miért (1939).—S. D. összegyűjtött munkái (coll. works, 16 vols, 1926); Az egész látóhatár (3 vols, 1939).

L. Fülepp, 'S. D. regénye' in Nyugat (1919); J. Reményi, 'D. S.' in Slavon. Rev., XXIV (1946); P. Nagy, S. D. (1964). G.F.C.

Szabó, LŐRINC (*Miskolc 31 III 1900; †1921 Klára Mikes; †Budapest 3 X 1957), Hungarian poet. Szabó elevated everyday language to a poetic level and combined with this a strict economy of style. Noted for his intellectual approach to verse, he wrote a highly individual verse autobiography (Tücsökcse, 1947), and was a brilliant translator.

Örök barátaink (translations; 2 vols, 1941–48).—S. L. összegyűjtött versei (1960).

L. Németh, 'S. L.' in Nyugat (1931); G. Halász, 'S. L.', ibid. (1933, 1935, 1938); J. Reményi, 'L. S., contemporary Hungarian poet' in The Western Rev., XIV (1950); L. Kabdebó, S. L. lázadó évtizede (1970). G.F.C.

Szaniawski, JERZY (*10 II 1886), Polish author. He began by writing short stories in 1912. In his dramas based on internal conflicts there is a high idealism, symbolism and economy in the use of words.

PLAYS: Murzyn (1917); Papierowy kochanek (1920); Ewa (1921); Ptāk (1923); Lekkoduch (1923); Żeglarz (1927); Adwokat i róże (1929); Fortepian (1931); Most (1933).—SHORT STORIES: Miłość i rzeczy poważne (1924); Łgarze pod Złotą Kotwicą (1928).—MEMOIRS: W pobliżu teatru (1956).—Dzieła zebrane (3 vols, 1958).

H. Drzewiecki, 'S. jako nowelista' in Wiadomości Literac., CCXVII (1928); J. Lorentowicz, 'J. S.' in Współczesny teatr polski, II (1935). S.S. (P.H.)

Szarzyński, MIKOŁAJ SEP (*nr Lwów c. 1550; †1581), Polish poet. Little is known about his short life. He left one collection of poetry published posthumously which has established him as a leading lyrical poet. In many respects akin to the work of the English Metaphysical poets, his verses are intellectual and some religious poetry almost mystical. His syntax is deliberately complex, imitating Latin. He is considered a precursor of the Polish Baroque for the artificial but also dynamic qualities of his style and the obsessiveness of certain motifs.

Rytmy albo wiersze polskie... (1601; ed. T. Sinko, 1928; ed. J. Sokołowska, 1957).

T. Sinko, 'Pogańskie i chrześcijańskie wzory M. S. S.' in Echa klasyczne w literaturze polskiej (1923); J. Błoński, M. S. S. a początki polskiego baroku (1967). S.S. (P.H.)

Szép, ERNŐ (*Huszt 30 VI 1884; †Budapest 2 X 1953), Hungarian poet, playwright and novelist.

In his lyric verse, Szép views the world with childlike wonder. Romantic and often sentimental, he uses simple and frequently colloquial language to achieve his effect. His novels and plays also incline to impressionism.

VERSE: Versek (1902); Énekeskönyv (1911).—PLAYS: Május (1920); In May, tr. J. Szebenyei, 1925; Azra (1930); Szívdobogás (1936).—Add a kezéd (coll. verse; 1957).

A. Karátson, 'E. S. et l'émerveillement impressioniste' in Le Symbolisme en Hongrie (1969).

G.F.C.

Szerb, ANTAL (*Budapest 1 V 1901; †Balf 27 I 1945), Hungarian essayist, critic and novelist. One of the outstanding essayists of his generation, Szerb had an encyclopaedic knowledge of literature. His justly renowned Magyar irodalomtörténet (1934) was a history of Hungarian literature based on sociological divisions, a thought-provoking work of brilliant portraits and sound aesthetic judgements which broke away from the narrow positivism of his predecessors. His novels and short stories are largely experiments in these genres, ranging from a mystical detective story A Pendragon legenda (1934; The Pendragon Legend, tr. L. Halápy, 1964) to a psychological study Utas és holdvilág (1937) and a brilliant satire VII. Olivér (1966).

ESSAYS: Gondolatok a könyvtárban (1946, 1971); A varászló eltört pálcaját (1948).—A világirodalom története (3 vols, 1941).

I. Sőtér, 'S. A.', intro. to Magyar irodalomtörténet (1958 ed.); Gy. Poszler, S. A. pályakezdése (1965).

G.F.C.

Szyborska, WISŁAWA (*Bnin 2 VII 1923), Polish poet. Her very skilful and concise poems have established her as the leading contemporary Polish woman poet. She employs abundant and sophisticated irony in her intellectual and philosophical poetry as well as in her love poetry, which represents a renewal of this genre in Polish literature.

Dlaczego żyjemy (1952); Wolanie do Yetti (1957); Sól (1962); Sto pociech (1967).—Wiersze wybrane (1964).

P.H.

Szymonowicz (SIMONIDES), SZYMON (*Lwów 24 X 1558; †Czarnięcin 5 V 1629), Polish and Latin poet, playwright and translator. Of burgher origin, he was knighted in 1590, took the name BENDOŃSKI and in 1593 organized Zamojski's academy. His writings in Latin (two dramas among others) gained him European fame, but his importance for Polish literature is in his collection of idylls, Sielanki (1614), modelled on Theocritus* and Virgil*. Here he introduced into Polish vernacular literature a genre which became very popular. Some of the idylls give surprisingly realistic pictures of everyday village life.

PLAYS: Castus Joseph (1587); Penthesilea (1618; ed. W. Hahn, 1895).—VERSE: Sielanki (1614; sel. poems tr. J. Bowring in Specimens of Polish Poetry, 1821; crit. ed. J. Łoś, 1914, 1921).—Opera omnia (1772; Lat. works only); Sielanki i pozostałe wiersze polskie (ed. J. Pelc, 1964).

L. Szyperski, De S. S. vita, ingenio, poesi dissertatio (1865); K. J. Heck, S. S. Jego żywot i dzieła (3 pts, 1901–03).

S.S. (P.H.)

T

Ta'abbata Sharran (fl. c. 600), pre-Islamic Arabic poet, was counted as one of the 'swift runners' of ancient Arabia, like al-Shanfara*, whom he resembles in his character.

C. Lyall, 'Four poems by T. S., the brigand poet' in Jour. Roy. Asiat. Soc. (1918). S.M.S.

AL-Ṭabari, ABU JA'FAR MUḤAMMAD IBN JARĪR (*Amul ?839; †Baghdad 16 II 923), Arab historian and theologian. He travelled and studied in Egypt and Syria and in Mesopotamia, particularly in the schools of Basra and Kufah. He wrote Koranic exegesis (tafsir) and was a fiercely independent interpreter of Muslim law, though his attempts to found an independent 'rite' (madhhab) proved without effect after his death. His fame rests on an annalistically arranged universal history, the first comprehensive one of its kind to survive. He covers events between the Creation and A.D. 915, sometimes recording contradictory accounts. With its peculiar accuracy, it is an indispensable source for early Islamic history.

Ta'rikh al-Rusul w-al-Mulūk (ed. M. J. de Goeje et al., 15 vols, Leiden, 1879–1901; Chronique d'about Djafar Mohamamad Tabari, I, tr. L. Bubeux, 1836; Chronique de Tabari, Bal'ami's Persian summary tr. H. Zotenberg, 4 vols, 1867–74); Jāmi' al-Bayān fi Tafsir al-Qur'ān (30 vols, 1904–10).

G. Sarton, Introduction to the History of Science, I (1927); H. A. R. Gibb, 'Ta'rikh' in A Shorter Encyclopaedia of Islam (Leiden, 1953). G.T.S.

Tablada, JUAN JOSÉ (*1871; †1945), Mexican poet. His first book appeared in 1899, an example of MODERNISM; thereafter he passed through every new movement of poetic fashion that took place in Spanish poetry.

El florilegio (1891–1897) (1899; Paris, 1904); Al sol y bajo la luna (1918); Un día (1919); Li-Po y otros poemas (1920); El jarro de flores (1920); La feria (1928). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Tablic, BOHUSLAV (*Česká Brezová before 6 IX 1769; †Kostolné Moravce 23 I 1832), Slovak poet and historian. His moralizing and patriotic poems, written in Czech, were of some importance in the Slovak national revival. He was one of the earliest translators of English literature into Czech (Shakespeare's* Hamlet, Pope*, Goldsmith*, etc.).

Poezje (4 vols, 1806–12); Anglické múzy v československém oděvu (1831). R.A.

Tacitus, PUBLIUS CORNELIUS (*c. 55; †?120), Roman historian. He was praetor in 83 and consul suffectus in 97. His Dialogus de oratoribus, concerned with the decline in oratory from Republican standards, concludes that democracy is the only breeding-ground of eloquence. The Vita Agricola is a laudatory account of the character and achievements of his father-in-law. The De origine et situ Germaniae describes the simplicity and stern morality of the Germans, with severe reflections upon Roman luxury. The Historiae narrates in detail the history of the principate from the death of Nero. In the surviving four and a half books we have a picture of civil strife incomparable in narrative power and portrayal of character. Yet even here Tacitus has not reached the height of his powers. His last work, the Annales, from 14 to 68, in 16 books (of which Bks 7 to 10 are lost and 16 is incomplete), shows a mastery of style and method unsurpassed among historians. Tacitus spares no detail of crime or suffering, yet for all his gloom he is no misanthrope: his heart warms to an example of courage or fidelity in a society inimical to virtue. His style is compressed and epigrammatic, with striking and unusual expressions on every page. His debt to Virgil* is great without being obvious. Yet the outstanding feature is the moral earnestness and elevation of his work, which gives him a unique place among Roman historians.

J.A.W.

EDITIONS: C. D. Fisher, Annales (1906) and Historiae (1911); H. Furneaux, Opera minora (1900; Germania and Agricola rev. J. G. C. Anderson, 1938); E. Koestermann, Annales (1965), Historiae (1969) and Opera minora (1964).—With comm.: H. Furneaux, Annales, I–VI (2nd ed. 1896) and, with H. F. Pelham and C. D. Fisher, XI–XVI (1907); W. A. Spooner, Historiae (1891); A. Gudeman, Dialogus (2nd ed. 1914); J. G. C. Anderson, Germania (1938); R. M. Ogilvie and Sir Ian Richmond, Agricola (1967).—TRANSLATIONS: Loeb Libr. (Dialogus, W. Peterson, 1914; Germania and Agricola, M. Hutton, 1914; Historiae, C. H. Moore, 1926–31; Annales, J. Jackson, 1936); H. Mattingly, T.: On Britain and Germany (1948); M. Grant, T.: The Annals of Imperial Rome (1956); K. Wellesley, T.: The Histories (1964).

G. Boissier, Tacite (1903; 4th ed. 1923; T. and Other Roman Studies, tr. W. G. Hutchinson, 1906); B. Walker, The Annals of T. (1952; 2nd ed. 1960); C. W. Mendell, T.: The Man and His Work (1957); E. Löfstedt, 'T. as an historian' and 'The style of T.' in Roman Literary Portraits (1958); Sir Ronald Syme, T. (2 vols, 1958) and Ten Studies in T. (1970); D. R. Dudley, The World of T. (1968); T. (ed. T. A. Dorey, 1969). J.D.

Tadijanović, DRAGUTIN (*Rastušje, nr Slavonski Brod 4 XI 1905), Croatian lyric poet, of peasant origin. Studied forestry, but turned to the study of literature and to writing and editing, and was appointed director of the Institute of Literature of the Yugoslav Academy in Zagreb. His poems are subjective, sensitive and sincere, often betraying nostalgia for the life and people of his village childhood; they are simple and rhythmical, and have a direct appeal.

Lirika (1931); Sunce nad oranicama (1933); Dani djetinjstva (1937); Pjesme (1951); Intimna izložba crteža iz Raba (1955).—Blagdan žetve (coll. poems; 1956); Srebrne svirale (sel. poems; 1960); Prsten (sel. poems; 1965).

Umberto Urbani, 'Le poesie di Dr. T.' in Il Corriere di Trieste (12 Mar. 1957); Jure Kaštelan, 'Vizija harmonije. O pjesničkom djelu Dragutina Tadijanovića' in Kolo, VII.10 (1969); Ljerka Matutinović, Pjesnička riječ Dragutina Tadijanovića (1970). V.J.

Tafur, PERO (*?Seville before 1410; †Cordoba c. 1480), Spanish travel-writer. He fought on the frontier against the Moors. From 1436 to 1439 he travelled in Europe and the Mediterranean. His account of his journeys, written long afterwards, is lively and includes some amusing local legends.

Las andanças e viajes (ed. J. M. Ramos, 1934; Travels and Adventures 1435-1439, tr. M. Letts, 1926).

J. Vives, 'Andanças e viajes de un hidalgo español...' in Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Kulturgeschichte Spaniens, VII (1938); F. Meregalli, Cronisti e viaggiatori castigliani del Quattrocento (Milan-Varese, 1957). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Tagore, SIR RABINDRANATH (*Calcutta 7 V 1861; †ibid. 7 VIII 1941), poet, dramatist and novelist. He was the son of Maharshi Devendranath Tagore. The Tagores were a famous family of religious and social reformers, artists and musicians. Rabindranath was brought up in a literary atmosphere, his favourite reading being the old Vaishnava poets of Bengal, and Shelley* and Keats* in English. In 1877 he paid a short visit to England. He began writing Bengali lyrics at a very early age, and in 1890 he published his first volume of poetry, Mānasi ('The Mind's Embodiment'). From 1891 to 1895 he was the chief contributor to Sādhana, a prominent Bengali literary journal. To the same period belongs his earlier group of dramas, Chitrāngadā (1892), Sacrifice, King and Queen, and Mālinī, and two collections of lyrics entitled Chitrā ('Beauty'; 1895), and Sōnār Tari ('Golden Boat'; 1895). Chitrā contains some of his finest work; Edward Thompson considers 'Urbasi', an enchanting poem whose theme is the heavenly nymph who dances before the gods and is the ideal of eternal beauty, to be not only the most perfect in Bengali literature, but one of the world's masterpieces. Volumes of verse followed regularly, though they did not command the approval of the pundits, who preferred the cumbrous and Sanskritized style of the 19th century to Tagore's chalit bhāshā or colloquial Bengali. In 1901 he founded at Bolpur his famous retreat Shantiniketan ('The Abode of Peace') where Indian youths could be educated according to traditional ideals. Gorā (1908) is a powerful novel which has been compared with Kipling's* Kim. In 1909 he published a collection of lyrics under the title Gitānjali ('Handful of Songs'), and in the following year The King of the Dark Chamber, a profoundly moving drama. In 1912 he again visited England, taking with him an English translation of Gitānjali. Its greatness was at once recognized by W. B. Yeats* and William Rothenstein, and on its appearance (1913) it took Europe and America by storm. Tagore received the Nobel prize in 1913 and was knighted in 1914. In 1914 appeared Bālāka ('A Flight of Wild Cranes'), which many critics prefer to the more famous Gitānjali, and in 1916 another novel, Home and the World. Tagore spent much of the latter half of his life in travel, in the course of which he visited the United States and nearly every country in Europe and Asia. He essayed almost every form of poetry, but he will go down to posterity mainly as a lyric poet. In this sphere he stands with Kālidāsa* and Kabīr*, but fully to appreciate him, he must be read in his original Bengali rather than in his somewhat banal English versions of his poems.

VERSE: The Gardener (1912); The Crescent Moon (1912).—DRAMAS: The Post Office (1912); Phālguni ('Cycle of Spring'; 1915); Mukta Dhāra ('Free Current'; 1922).

E. J. Thompson, R. T. His Life and Work (1921) and R. T., Poet and Dramatist (rev. ed. 1948); E. Rhys, R. T. (1915); Marjorie Sykes, R. T. (1943); J. C. Ghosh, Bengali Literature, ch. 5 (1948); K. R. Kripalani, R. T., a Biography (1962). H.G.R. (B.N.M.)

Tāhā, 'ALĪ MAḤMŪD (*Manṣūra, Egypt 1902; †Cairo 1949), Egyptian Arab romantic poet whose work is marked by its lyricism and suggestive imagery.

VERSE: al-Mallāh al-tā'ih (1934); Layālī al-mallāh al-tā'ih (1941); Arwāh wa ashbāh (1942); Zahr wa khamr (1943); al-Shauq al-'ā'id (1945); Sharq wa gharb (1947).

A. J. Arberry, Modern Arabic Poetry (1950); Suhayl Ayyūb, A. M. T., shi'r wa dirāsa (Damascus, 1962). M.M.B.

Tāhā Ḥusain (*nr Maghāgha, Upper Egypt 14 XI 1889), Egyptian Arab novelist, essayist and literary historian. Of farming stock, he became blind in childhood. He went to al-Azhar University at the age of 13 and subsequently studied in Cairo and Paris. In 1925 he became Professor of Arabic literature at Cairo University, in 1942 Rector of Alexandria University, and in 1950 Minister of Education. He is the foremost humanist and modernist in contemporary Egypt. In his literary studies he propounds a critical approach to tradition. His novels are partly symbolic, partly romantic presentations of the early history of Islam. C.R.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Al-Ayyām (pt 1, 1929, An Egyptian Childhood, tr. E. H. Paxton, 1932; pt 2, 1939, The Stream of Days, tr. H. Waymont, 1943); Fi'l-Ṣaif (1933); Min ba'id (1935); Mudhakkirāt T. H. (1967).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Adib (1935); Adib, ou aventure occidentale, tr. A. and M. Taha Husein, 1960; Al-qasr al-mashūr (1936); 'Alā hāmish as-sirah (3 vols, 1937–46); al-Hubb al-Dā'i (1937–38); Du'ā' al-karawān (1941); L'appel du Karaouan, tr. R. Francis, 1947; Ahlām Shahrāzād (1943); Shajarat al-bu's (1944); L'arbre de la misère, tr. G. Wiet, 1946; Al-Wa'd al-haqq (1950; filmed 1951); Jannat al-hayawān (1950); Al-Mu'azzabūn fi'l-arḍ (Sidon, 1950).—LITERARY HISTORY AND CRITICISM: Dhikrā Abi'l-'Alā (1914); Qaḍāt al-fikr (1925); Leaders of Thought, tr. H. A. Lutfi, Beirut, 1932; fi'l-Shi'r al-Jāhili (1926); Al-Adab al-Jāhili (1927); Ma' al-Mutanabbī (2 vols, 1936); Mustaqbal al-thaqāfah fi Miṣr (2 vols, 1939–44); The Future of Culture in Egypt, tr. S. Glazer, 1954; Saut Bārīs (2 vols, 1943); Alwān (1952); 'Alī wa banūhu (1953); Khisām wa naqd (1955); Naqd wa Islāh (1956); Rihlat al-rabi' wa'l-Ṣaif (1957); Min adabnā al-mu'āṣir (1958); mir'āt al-Islām (1959); Min laghw al-ṣaif (1959); Aḥādith (1959); al-Shaikhān (1960).—Étude analytique et critique de la philosophie d'Ibn Khaldoun (1919); 'Tendances religieuses dans la littérature égyptienne d'aujourd'hui' in L'Islam et l'Occident (1947).

R. Francis, T. H. romancier (1945); F. Gabrieli, 'Taha Husein, umanista egiziano' in Oriente Moderno, XXX (1950); P. Cachia, T. H. His Place in the Egyptian Literary Renaissance (1956); A. H. Hourani, Arabic Thought in the Liberal Age: 1798–1939 (1962); T. H. (pub. Istituto Universitario Orientale, Naples, 1964); Dar al-Hilal, T. H. kamā ya'rifu kuttāb 'aṣrihi (n.d.).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Tahureau, JACQUES (*Le Mans 1527; †1555), French poet. He was one of the most promising of Ronsard's* group of young poets and excelled particularly in light love poetry. His sceptical Dialogues show another aspect. Had he lived, a considerable name might have been added to the PLÉIADE.

Premières poésies (1554); Sonnets, Odes et Mignardises de l'Admiree (1554; ed. P. Blanchemain, 1870); Oraison au roi (1555); Les Dialogues (1595).

H. Chardon, Vie de T. (1885); E. Besch, 'J. T.' in Rev. du 16e siècle (1919). G.B.

Tai CHÊN (□Hsiu-ning 19 I 1724; †Peking 1 VII

1777), Chinese scholar and philosopher. In spite of numerous attempts Tai never succeeded in passing the final state examination. However, as a scholar of established reputation, he was appointed (1773) a compiler of the Ssü-k'ü ch'üan-shu (Chi* Yün). His interests lay chiefly in textual criticism, phonetics and mathematics. Unlike most other Ch'ing dynasty scholars he proceeded from his studies to propound a rationalist philosophy in violent opposition to orthodox Confucian thought. This attracted little attention until the present century.

PHILOSOPHICAL WORKS: Yüan-shan (wr. 1776; Tai Chên's Inquiry Into Goodness, tr. Cheng Chung-ying, 1971); Mêng-tzū tzü-ih-shu-chêng (first title Hsü-yen, wr. c. 1770; re-ed. c. 1776; sel. tr. W.-T. Chan in A Source Book in Chinese Philosophy, 1963).—CRITICAL AND OTHER STUDIES: K'ao-kung chi t'u-shu (1755); Ch'ü Yüan fu chu (1760); Shêng-yün k'ao (1769); Shêng-lei piao (1777); Fang-yen shu-chêng (c. 1777).—COLLECTED WORKS: Tai-shih i-shu (c. 1777–79); Tai Tung-yüan chi (1792); Tai Tung-yüan hsien-shêng-ch'üan-chi (1936).

Biblio. of Tai's philos. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969). A.R.D.

Taiheiki ('Chronicle of the Great Pacification'), Japanese military novel describing the period 1318–67, a time of civil war between the imperial court, supported by the general Kusunoki Masashige, and the Kamakura shogunate. Its authorship is generally ascribed to a priest, Kojima (†13 VI 1374); a first version (or perhaps another work of the same name) seems to have existed before 1352, but the present version may be ascribed to between 1367 and 1374. Apparent insertions and inconsistencies suggest later revisions by other hands. This is highly likely, since the work was commonly recited for public entertainment. It was very popular, and its stories and characters often appear in later literature. Its style, although containing some rhetorical ornamentation, is usually straightforward, lucid and vigorous and has been much imitated. It sometimes has a rhythmical form similar to poetry.

Small part tr. W. G. Aston in A History of Japanese Literature (1907); major part tr. in H. C. McCullough, The T.: A Chronicle of Medieval Japan (1959); partial Ger. tr. K. Koike, 'Kusunoki Masashige, Auszüge aus dem T.' in Monumenta Nipponica, IV (1941). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Tailor, ROBERT (fl. 1614), English dramatist. He is the author of The Hog hath lost his Pearl (1614), said to have suggested the plot of The Orphan to Otway* and thought to have been a lampoon on the then Lord Mayor of London. G.K.H.

Taimür, MAHMÜD (*Cairo 16 VI 1894), Egyptian

Arab short-story writer and dramatist. He continues the genre, created by his brother MUHAMMAD (1892-1921), of stories from the life of the Egyptian lower classes and fellaheen. These stories are of great social interest. He wrote also numerous plays and novels.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: 6 stories tr. G. Widmer in Die Welt des Islams, XIII (1926); Les amours de Sâmî (1938); La fille du Diable (tr. G. Wiet, 1942); Le courtier de la mort et autres contes égyptiens (Paris, 1951); Nidā'al-Majhūl (The Call of the Unknown, tr. H. Horan, 1964); Tales From Egyptian Life (tr. D. Johnson-Davies, Cairo, n.d.).—PLAYS: Al-Makhba' raqm 13 (1941); Qanābil (1943); al-Yaum Khamr (1949); Ashfar min Iblis (1953).—LITERARY CRITICISM: Malāmīh wa-ghuḍūn (1950); Dirāsāt fi'l-qīssa wa'l masrah (n.d.).

K. Schoonover, 'Contemporary Egyptian authors, III: M. T. and the Arabic short story' in Muslim World, XLVII (1957); J. M. Landau, Studies in the Arab Theatre and Cinema (1958).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Taine, HIPPOLYTE ADOLPHE (*Vouziers 21 IV 1828; †Paris 9 III 1893), French philosopher and essayist. Taine had a brilliant career at the École Normale Supérieure, but found that, as a result of his unorthodox views, all University doors were closed to him. He submitted a thesis, however (La Fontaine et ses fables), and received his doctorate. He travelled much in Europe, became famous and was appointed Professor at the École des Beaux Arts (1864-83). Taine's determinist and sensationalist philosophy took a backward leap, across the intervening period of Romanticism, to join hands with the French and English thinkers of the 18th century (Locke*, Hume*, Condillac*). It set itself up in strong opposition to the eclectic spiritual doctrines of Victor Cousin* and reduced the life of 'consciousness' to a sequence of sensations and images. Applying these views to the history of literature and of the fine arts, Taine found a universally applicable explanation in his theory of race, environment, the historic moment and the dominant ability, or faculté maîtresse. He was a writer of powerful, if abstract and somewhat over-formalized, intellect, and his influence on the positivist generation—in particular, on Zola*—was profound. He was also the author of a pessimistic and reactionary history of France in recent times (Les origines de la France contemporaine, 1875, 1894).

PHILOSOPHY, ETC.: Essai sur Tite-Live (1856); Les philosophes classiques du XIXe siècle en France (1857); La Fontaine et ses fables (1860); Histoire de la littérature anglaise (5 vols, 1864-69; Eng. tr. H. van Laun, New York, 1879); Philosophie de l'art (1865); De l'Idéal dans l'art (1867); De l'Intelligence (2 vols, 1870).—VARIOUS: Voyage aux

Pyrénées (1855); Vie et opinions de M. François Thomas Grindorge (1868); Notes sur l'Angleterre (1872; Eng. tr. E. Hyams, 1957); Carnets de voyage (1896); Correspondance (4 ser., 1903-07).—Life and Letters of H. T. (tr. R. L. Devonshire, 3 vols, 1902-08).

J. Monod, Les maîtres de l'histoire (1894); F. C. Roe, T. et l'Angleterre (1924); V. Giraud, H. T. (1928); A. Chevrillon, T., formation de sa pensée (1932); M. Leroy, T. (1933); K. de Shaepdryver, T., essai sur l'unité de sa pensée (1938); G. Léotard, L'erreur de T. (1949); F. Melin, Les idées politiques de T. (1949); A. Cresson, H. T. sa vie, son œuvre, sa philosophie (1951); S. J. Kahn, Science and Aesthetic Judgement. A Study in T.'s Critical Method (1953). M.G.; J.P.R.

Takeda IZUMO, pseud. of TAKEDA KIYOSADA (*Osaka 1691; †ibid. 25 XI 1756), Japanese dramatist and producer (son of TAKEDA IZUMO the elder, 1647-1727, well-known puppet-operator, also known as IZUMO NO JŌ and ŌMI NO JŌ, who in 1705 became manager of the Takemoto puppet-theatre company). On the death of Chikamatsu* Monzaemon in 1725, Takeda succeeded him as playwright for the Takemoto company. Of 33 jōruri (puppet) plays he wrote, only 11 were entirely his own work, the remainder being written in collaboration with others, notably with Miyoshi Shōraku and Namiki* Senryū (or Sōsuke); but his share clearly predominated. Many of his plays were so popular that they were later produced as kabuki for the regular theatre. His play Sugawara denju tenarai kagami had a very long run, but was eclipsed by his Chūshingura (probably the most famous of all Japanese plays), a version in eleven acts of the story of the notorious vendetta of the '47 Rōnin' (a theme taken by John Masefield* for his play The Faithful). Although his style of composition is less effective than Chikamatsu's, his technique and construction are superior.

Sugawara denju tenarai kagami (1746; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948; 'The House of Sugawara', tr. E. Ernst in Three Japanese Plays From the Traditional Theatre, 1959; partial tr. M. C. Marcus, The Pine-Tree, 1916; 4th act tr. J. Inouye, Terakoya [The Village School], 1889; 4th act tr. K. Florenz in Japanische Dramen, 1900); Yoshitsune sembonzakura (1747; summary in Z. Kincaid, Kabuki, the Popular Stage of Japan, 1925); Kanadehon chūshingura (1748; Chūshingura, or the Loyal League, tr. F. V. Dickins, 1930; [more accurate] Chūshingura, or Forty-Seven Rōnin, tr. J. Inouye, 1937); detailed summaries of all these plays in: A. S. and G. M. Halford, The Kabuki Handbook (1956); F. Bowers, Japanese Theatre (1952).

S. Shiōya, Chūshingura: An Exposition (1940). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Taketori Monogatari, also called Taketori no okina no monogatari ('The Story of the Bamboo-Gatherer'), is perhaps the earliest extant work of Japanese fiction. Both its authorship and date are uncertain, but most scholars ascribe a date between 850 and 920. Its plot resembles a fairy story, telling of the unsuccessful efforts of five noblemen and, later, the emperor himself, to woo a beautiful maiden, who finally proves to be no mortal, but a maiden from the moon, whither she returns. Many of the ideas in the story come from Chinese and Buddhist sources. The style is undeveloped and simple, in contrast to the polished elegance of compositions of a century later, but is nevertheless attractive for its very straightforwardness. The author's treatment is lively and humorous. The book is still very popular in Japan. It was followed in the 10th century by other stories containing fairy-tale or fantastic elements, such as *Utsubo* monogatari*.

'T. M.: The Tale of the Bamboo Cutter', tr. D. L. Keene in Monumenta Nipponica, XI (1956; best Eng. tr.); tr. F. V. Dickins in Jour. Roy. Asiat. Soc., new ser., XIX (1887; rev. and improved in Primitive and Medieval Japanese Texts, 1906); tr. E. R. Miller (1889); 'Le conte du coupeur de bambous', tr. R. Seiffert in Bull. Maison Franco-Japonaise, new ser., II (1952); 'Der Bambussammler', tr. M. Shimada and E. W. Mohr in Nippon, I.2 (1935).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Takizawa BAKIN: see Bakin.

Takuboku: see Ishikawa TAKUBOKU.

Talavera, ARCHPRIEST OF: see Martínez de Toledo, ALFONSO.

Talev, DIMITUR (*Prilep, Macedonia 4 IX 1898; †Sofia 20 X 1966), Bulgarian historical novelist. At first mainly a story-writer, he concentrated after the Second World War on re-creating the life and times of his 19th-century forebears in a series of novels which follow a Prespa family's fortunes. In them he did for Macedonia what Vazov* did for Bulgaria in establishing a national mystique, receiving for this high literary honour. He wrote on other Bulgarian historical themes such as Palssy*, the Miladinovs*, Tsar Samuil, and the Chiprovtsi Catholic rising, but never with quite the same success.

Usilni godini (1928–30); Razkazi (1935; 1937; 1938; 1942); tetralogy, I: Jelesniyat svetilnik (1952), II: Ilinden (1953), III: Prespanskite kam-bani (1954), IV: Glassovete vi chuvam (1966); Chiprovtsi vustana (1953); Samuil (1958); Bratyata ot Struma (1962).—Razkazi i povesti 1927–1960 (1962).—'The Last Journey', tr. in R. Pridham and Jean Morris, The Peach Thief and Other Bulgarian Stories (1968). V.P.

Talfourd, SIR THOMAS NOON (*Reading 26 V 1795; ∞1822 Rachel Rutt; †Stafford 13 III 1854), English judge, critic and dramatist, author of a successful tragedy, Ion, and devoted friend and literary executor of Lamb*. The Copyright Act of 1842 was due to his initiative, being based upon measures (subsequently amended) which he had introduced when M.P. in 1837.

Letters of Charles Lamb (with life; 1837); Final Memorials of Charles Lamb (1848).—Ion, a Tragedy in Five Acts (1835); Athenian Captive (1838); Glencoe (1840).—Dramatic Works of Sir T. N. T. (1852).

C. Dickens, 'The late Mr Justice T.' in Household Words (25 Mar. 1854); R. Newdick, The First Life and Letters of C. Lamb: A Study of T. N. T. as Editor and Biographer (1935).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Taliesin (fl. middle or late 6th century), Welsh poet. A note in the Historia Britonum of Nennius* names him as a 6th-century British poet, while the poets of medieval Wales regarded him as their great exemplar. The Book of Taliesin, a manuscript of the 14th century, includes poems which have been interpreted as parts of a saga with Taliesin as its hero and also 12 poems—eulogies and elegies—which seem to be the authentic work of a 6th-century author.

Canu T. (ed. Ifor Williams, 1960); The Poems of T. (Eng. ed. J. E. C. Williams, 1968).

J. Morris-Jones, 'T.' in Y Cymmrodor, XXVIII (1918). B.Re.

Talvj, pseud. of THERESE ALBERTINE LOUISE ROBINSON, née VON JAKOB (*Halle 26 I 1797; ∞7 VIII 1828 Edward Robinson; †Hamburg 13 IV 1870), German-American novelist and historian who must be singled out for her originality.

NOVELS: Life's Discipline (1850); Heloise or The Unrevealed Secret (1850); Die Auswanderer (1852); The Exiles, 1853).—Gesammelte Novellen (ed. Mary Robinson, 1874).—VARIOUS: Volkslieder der Serben (1825–26); Versuch einer Charakteristik der Volkslieder Germanischer Nationen, mit einer Übersicht der Lieder aussereuropäischer Völkerschaften (1840); 'Popular Poetry of the Teutonic Nations' in North Amer. Rev., 1836; Die Unächtheit der Lieder Ossians und des Macpherson'schen insbesondere (1840); Geschichte der Colonisation von Neu-England (1847; tr. W. Hazlitt, 1852); Historical View of the Languages and Literature of the Slavic Nations (1850).

I. E. Voigt, 'Life and works of Therese Robinson' in Jahrbuch Dt.-Amer. hist. Ges. Illinois, XIII (1913); E. A. Kubler in Dictionary of American Biography, XVI (1935). E.R.

Tamási, ÁRON (*Farkaslaka 20 IX 1897; †Budapest 26 V 1966), Hungarian novelist, short-story writer and playwright. Born and bred a Székely, Tamási created the Székely type in his Ábel series. Hints of the folk-tale and myth occur frequently in his works, all of which bear the mark of his own local genius.

NOVELS: Ábel a rengetegben (1932; Ábel Alone, tr. M. Kuttina, 1966); Ábel az országban (1933); Ábel Amerikában (1934); Zöld Ág (1948); Bölcső és bagoly (1953); Vadrózsza ága (1967).—Összegyűjtött novellái (2 vols, 1967).

E. Katona, 'Á. T.' in Nouvelle Rev. de Hongrie (1934); G. Féja, T. Á. (1967); J. Izsák, T. Á. (1969). G.F.C.

Tamayo y Baus, MANUEL (*Madrid 15 IX 1829; †Amalia Máiquez; †ibid. 20 VI 1898), Spanish dramatist; of a family of distinguished actors. In 1870 he ceased writing, became director of the national library and permanent secretary of the Royal Academy. Post-Romanticism, enriched by a good knowledge of European drama, inspired his historical plays, of which La locura de amor (1855) and La ricahembra (1854) were the most successful. Less important are his plays on religious and moral themes. Tamayo's masterpiece, however, is his striking Un drama nuevo (1867). Set in Elizabethan England and the Shakespeare stage, the 'play within the play' technique is here used as a superb device, closer to Pirandello* than to his predecessors.

Obras (4 vols, 1898–1900); Obras completas (1947).—A New Drama (tr. G. D. Fitzgerald and T. H. Guild, New York, 1915).

B. de Tannenberg, Un dramaturge espagnol. M. T. y B. (1898); N. Siscars y Salvadó, Don M. T. y B. Estudio crítico-biográfico (1906); N. H. Taylor, Las fuentes del teatro de T. y B. (1959); R. Esquer Torres, El teatro de T. y B. (1965) and Un aspecto desconocido de T. y B.; su obra lírica (1968). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Tamenaga SHUNSUI, pseud. of SASAKI SADATKA (*Edo [= Tokyo] 1789; †ibid. 11 II 1844), Japanese novelist. At first a bookseller, he became a pupil of Shikitei* Samba. His first book was published in 1821, but he did not gain prominence until his Shunshoku umegoyomi appeared in 1832–33. Among his numerous novels the best-known is Iroha bunko, a version of the story of the 47 Rōnin. Although much of his material was pornographic (he was imprisoned in 1842 for this reason), his plots are natural and realistic.

Shunshoku umegoyomi (summary and discussion in B. Lewin, Japantsche Chrestomathie, 1965); Iroha bunko (1836–41; The Loyal Ronins, An historical Romance, tr. E. Greey and S. Saito, 1880). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Tamminga, DOUWE ANNES (*Winsum 22 XI 1909), Frisian writer, the most distinguished poet of his generation, a 'word magician' with a fine command of Frisian idiom in his lyrics and ballads; staff-member of the Frisian Academy at Leeuwarden, member of the editorial board of De Tsjerne, the leading literary periodical (1946–68). Tamminga has translated some of Andersen's* fairy tales, Poe's* 'The Raven' and Dylan's 'A Winter's Tale' (in De Tsjerne, 1961).

VERSE: Brandaris (1939); Balladen en Lieten (1942); It griene jier (1943); Nije Gedichten (1945); Floedmerk (1965); In Memoriam (1968).

A. Wadman, Frieslands Dichters (1949); E. Howard Harris, The Literature of Friesland (1956); J. Piebenga, Koarte Skiednis fan de Fryske Skriftekennisse (2nd ed. 1957); Nôt oan skeaven. Ta de 60ste jierdei fan D. A. T. (1969). K.D.

Tammsaare, A. H., pen-name of ANTON HANSEN (*Albu canton 30 I 1878; †Tallinn 1 III 1940), Estonian novelist, short-story writer and playwright. Having been schooled locally and in Tartu, Tammsaare first worked on newspapers, then studied law at Tartu University. In 1911 he fell ill of consumption, and after a slow recovery applied himself to literature. As an author he began with naturalistic stories of village life in 1907, but soon turned to impressionistic psychological studies of the intelligentsia. He extended the scope of his studies into the near past and by degrees produced his masterpiece, Tõde ja õigus ('Truth and Justice'; 5 vols, 1926–33), in which romanticism and realism are blended in a unified style. His standpoint is naturalistic and his basis is biological rather than psychological. In his analyses of character he prefers the exceptional to the typical. This is true also of his Biblical play Juudit ('Judith'; 1921). The strongest influences on him have come from the Scandinavian and the Russian novel, which have given him his taste for large canvases, character studies and social problems. As a writer of short stories Tammsaare shows himself master of a spirited and flexible style, rather more disciplined than that of his novels. He ably translated G. B. Shaw* and Joseph Conrad*.

NOVELS: Kõrboja peremees (1922; Der Bauer von Kõrboja, tr. A. Graf, 1958); Elu ja armastus (1934); Ma armastasin sakslast (1935).—SHORT STORIES: Raha-auk (1907); Uurimisel (1907); Pikad sammud (1908); Noored hinged (1909); Üle piiri (1910); Varjundid (1917); Kärbes (1917); Jutused (3 vols, 1959–62).—PLAY: Kuningal on külm (1936).—MINIATURES: Vanad ja noored (1913); Poiss ja liblik (1915); Põialpoiss (1923); Der Däumling, 1936).—ESSAYS: Keelest ja luulest (1915); Sõjamõtted (1919); Sic transit (1924).

F. Tuglas, A. H. T. (1919); M. Sillaots, A. H. T. looming (1927); K. Mihkla, A. H. T. elutee ja looming (1938); E. Judas, Russian Influences on Estonian Literature (1941); H. Siimisker, A. H. T. (1962); H. Puhvel, A. H. T. elu ja loomingu varasem periood (1966). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Tammuz, BINYAMIN (*Ukraine 1919), Hebrew novelist and journalist; at present literary editor of Ha-aretz; an outstanding personality in the group of Ratosh's* Turim. His intimate and authentic stories, Holot zahav (1950), deal mainly with early childhood impressions; some are also reproving in tone. His later stories, Began Naul (1957), uncover the defects and deficiencies of the Bohemian society. His trilogy, Hayei Elyakum, Besof Ma-arav and Elyakum, and Sefer Hahazayoth (1969) is an account in the first person of the wayward behaviour and disturbed consciousness of a particular individual in flight from himself and his environment.

Ya'akob and Ha-pardes (novels; 1971). L.Y.

T'an Ssü-t'UNG (□Liu-yang 10 III 1865; †Peking 28 IX 1898), Chinese reformer, was a leader, in Hunan, of the late 19th-century reform movement (K'ang* Yu-wei). He served in the Grand Council during the last days of the 'Hundred Days' reform and was executed when Empress Tz'ü-hsi resumed power. He was later honoured as a martyr. In his philosophical Jên-hsüeh (1898) he drew upon Confucian, Buddhist and Christian doctrines.

T'an Liu-yang ch'üan-chi (complete works; 1925).—Biblio. of Jên-hsüeh in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969). A.R.D.

Tanehiko: see Ryūtei TANEHIKO.

T'ang HSIEN-TSU (*Lin-ch'uan 24 IX 1550; †ibid. 29 VII 1616), Chinese dramatist. T'ang, after gaining his doctorate in 1583, rose by 1589 to be a secretary in the Board of Ceremonies but was degraded in 1591 to a minor provincial post in Kwangtung, because of an address to the throne which offended. From 1593 he was a district magistrate in Chekiang, and in 1598 he retired. As a romantic dramatist, however, he achieved great success and influence. Four of his five surviving plays draw their plots from T'ang-dynasty short stories but the fifth, Huan-hun chi (often entitled Mu-tan t'ing, 'Peony Pavilion'), seems to have been originally conceived. It gained a popularity which has endured until the present day. He also left very extensive verse and prose works (definitive ed. 1962).

Tz'ü-hsiao chi (c. 1578; 2nd version, Tz'ü-ch'ai chi, c. 1587); Huan-hun chi (1598; Die Rückkehr der Seele, tr. V. Hundhausen, 1937; part tr. H.-Y. and G. Yang in Chinese Lit., 1960, No. 1); Nan-k'o chi (1600); Han-tan chi (1601). A.R.D.

Taniguchi BUSON: see Buson.

Tanizaki JUN'ICHIRO (*Tokyo 24 VII 1886; ∞IV 1931 Furukawa Tomiko; †Yugawara 30 VII 1965), Japanese novelist and dramatist. In 1908 he entered Tokyo Imperial University but left in 1910 before graduating, having already made a mark by his maiden novel Shisei. This and the numerous novels which followed showed a uniform tendency, which gained him great popularity, to arrest the reader's attention by presenting scenes which stimulated by their beauty, originality or ugliness. Following the example of Baudelaire*, Wilde* and Poe*, he went to every extreme of sensuality, grotesqueness, mystery and violence to provide gripping themes. From 1922 to 1925 he turned to play-writing, but then returned to fiction. His style developed a richness and fluency akin to that of classical texts; he devoted many years to composing and later revising a much-admired version in modern Japanese of Genji monogatari by Murasaki* Shikibu. He was not interested only in the Heian period, however; indeed, the perfect symbol of the traditional Japan which he valued is the Tokugawa-period puppet theatre described at length in his Tade kuu mushi, a novel which beautifully illustrates the ambivalence of the modern Japanese, uncertain whether to favour the old or the new. For Tanizaki, the year 1923 was in a sense a turning-point, for after the great earthquake in Tokyo he moved to West Japan, the home of the old culture. (This is the scene of his long novel Sasameyuki, an account of an old-established merchant family written during and after the war as a nostalgic evocation of a way of life dear to Tanizaki's heart and now gone.) To some extent, after his move from Tokyo, Tanizaki's plots became more mellow and his treatment more subdued. Yet the propensity to shock remained; his short novel Kagi (1956) created a national sensation with its startling frank account in diary form of the relations between an elderly man, who fears the onset of impotence, and his wife. (This preoccupation with sex is found throughout Tanizaki's work, a common underlying motive in his stories being a man's search for or fascination with some unattainable femme fatale.) It was widely anticipated that Tanizaki would be the first Japanese to win the Nobel prize for literature, but in the event it was Kawabata* Yasunari, three years after Tanizaki's death.

NOVELS: Shisei (1909; 'Tattoo', tr. I. I. Morris in Modern Japanese Stories, 1961; 'The Tattooer', tr. H. Hibbett in Seven Japanese Tales, 1963; Fr. tr. S. Élisée in Neuf nouvelles japonaises, 1924); Himitsu (1910; Fr. tr. S. Élisée in Le jardin des pivoines, 1927); Otsuya-goroshi (1915; A Spring-time Case, tr. Z. Iwado, 1927); Chijin no ai (1924; summary in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Tade kuu mushi (1929; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939; Some Prefer Nettles, tr. E. G. Seidensticker, 1955); Ashikari (1932); Shunkinshō (1933; tr. with prec. R. Humpherson and Y. Okita, The Story of Shunkin, 1936; 'A Portrait of S.', tr. H. Hibbett, op. cit.; tr. with prec. Kikou Yamata, Deux amours cruelles, c. 1960; 'Der Frühlingsharfe', tr. W. Donat in Die fünfstockige Pagode, 1960; Sasameyuki (1943-48; The Makioka Sisters, tr. E. G. Seidensticker, 1957; Quatre sœurs, tr. G. Renondeau, 1964; Die Schwestern Makioka, tr. S. Yatsushiro and U. Hengst, 1964); Shōshō Shigemoto no haha (1950; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959; 'The Mother of Captain Shigemoto', extract tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956); Kagi (1956; The Key, tr. H. Hibbett, 1961; La confession impudique, tr. G. Renondeau, 1963); Fūten rōjin nikki (1962; Diary of a Mad Old Man, tr. H. Hibbett, 1965; Journal d'un vieux fou, tr. G. Renondeau, 1967; Tagebuch eines alten Narren, tr. O. Benl, 1966).—PLAYS: Ai sureba koso (1922; Puisque je l'aime, tr. C. Jacob, 1925); Eien no gūzō (1922; Fr. tr. J. Maruyama, 1928); Mumyō to Aizen (1924; Fr. tr. idem, 1928).—ESSAY: In'ei raisan (1934; 'In Praise of Shadows', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Japan Quart., I.1, 1954, and Atlantic Monthly, Jan. 1955). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Tannahill, ROBERT (*Paisley 3 VI 1774; †ibid. 17 V 1810), Scottish poet, who turned out a large number of songs and ballads from a weaver's workshop. Some of these, insipid and sentimental in tone, remain popular in rural Scotland.

Poems and Songs (1807; ed. D. Semple, 1876). J.K.

Tanner, THOMAS, Bishop of St Asaph (*Market Lavington, Wilts 25 I 1674; ∞1707 Rose Moore, ∞Frances Preston, ∞1733 Elizabeth Scottowe; †Oxford 14 XII 1735), English antiquary whose reluctance to publish his own notable researches extended to Wood's* deathbed gift of the continuation of Athenae Oxonienses (eventually incorp. in 2nd ed. 1721). His extensive Wiltshire collections (still unpub.) were presented to the Bodleian Library (1751), to which he had bequeathed books and MSS (incl. Sancroft's Irish materials: The Tanner Letters, ed. C. MacNeill, 1943).

Notitia monastica (1695); Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica (posth. ed. David Wilkins, 1748).

D. Douglas, English Scholars 1660-1730 (2nd ed. 1951). J.B.-B.

DER Tannhäuser (fl. 1230-70), professional minnesinger and hero of a legend. His identity is still debated—there are several Tannhausen. After successes in Austria (with Duke Frederick II 'der Streitbare') he had to take to the road. He wrote mainly Tanzlieder and -leiche, a characteristic feature of which is a sudden transition from a serious half (encomium of a patron, for example) to a ballade, with the fun, but not the bitterness, of Neidhart*. Some songs satirize amour courtois, Zest, humour, virtuosity—one penitent song caused the 13th-century Venusberg legend to be fathered on him: he deserved better. The legend is roughly the same as in Richard Wagner's* opera; there are German ballad versions from the mid-14th century.

Ed. S. Singer (1922); ed. J. Siebert (with ample comm., incl. the 'Busslieder' attrib. to T., and texts to illustrate the growth of the legend; 1934).

Ph. S. Barto, T. and the Mount of Venus (1916); F. Rostock, Dichterheldensage (1925); J. Meier, Dr. Balladen, I (Dr. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, 1935); H. de Boor, Die höfische Lit. 1170-1250 (1953). F.P.P.

Tansillo, LUIGI (*Venosa 1510; †Teano 1 XII 1568), Italian poet. He saw action against the Turks in the service of the Viceroy of Naples and later became Capitano di Giustizia at Gaeta. A prolific writer of lyrical genius, his love sonnets, pervaded by a sentiment akin to romanticism, are outstanding in their inspiration. Feeling for nature permeates his 'Vendemmiatore' and 'Clorinda'; his 'Stanze', narrating the hazards of the sea, and his 24 Capitoli are rich in personal experience. La Balia and Il Podere are classical in aspiration, but Le lagrime di San Pietro (1585) is an unsuccessful attempt to create a great Christian epic.

Capitoli giocosi e satirici di L. T. editi ed inediti (ed. S. Volpicella, 1887); L'egloga e i poemetti di L. T. (ed. F. Flamini, 1893); Il Canzoniere edito ed inedito (ed. E. Percopo, 1926); Il Podere (ed. D. Massetani, 1958); La Balia (Eng. tr. W. Roscoe, 1798); Poemeti (ed. C. Capuccio, 1954).

G. Rosalba, Nuovi documenti sulla vita di L. T. (1903); M. Tansillo, L. T. nella vita e nella poesia (1939); D. Coppola, Profilo di L. T. (1939); B. Croce, Poesia popolare e poesia d'arte (3rd ed. 1952). P.McN.

T'ao CH'EN or T'ao YÜAN-MING (□Ch'ai-sang 365; †ibid. 427), Chinese poet and essayist. T'ao became associated in popular imagination with a hatred (which he certainly had) of the constraint of an official career and its speedy abandonment, through his famous Kuei-ch'ü-lai tz'ü ('Return Home!'). He appears, however, to have been for a number of years in other posts before giving up his magistracy at P'êng-tsê after only 80 days' tenure (405). Thereafter he declined public appointments and lived a simple rural life.

His surviving works consist of some 150 poems and a few prose pieces. (Like most famous early Chinese authors he has had a number of later works fathered upon him.) A large number of his poems can be approximately dated and the bulk of these fall within the last 20 years of his life. His finest poems are in the five-word metre, in which he wrote with great simplicity and spontaneity. His intellectual position was neither completely

Confucian nor completely Taoist. He was deeply moved by nature, which aroused in him a sense of mystery. His was one of the most profound influences in Chinese poetry. Of his prose works, T'ao-hua yüan chi ('Tale of the Peach-Blossom Spring') and his autobiographical Wu-liu hsien-shêng chuan ('The Gentleman of the Five Willows') are among the most famous Chinese prose-pieces, though their extreme brevity must make them appear slight to a Western reader.

T'ao Ching-chieh chi (coll. works); The Poetry of T'ao Ch'ien (tr. J. R. Hightower, 1970).—J. R. Hightower, 'The fu of T'ao Ch'ien' in Harvard Jour. Asiat. Stud., XVII (1954). A.R.D.

Tarasov-Rodionov, ALEXANDER IGNATYEVICH (*1888), Soviet author whose novel Shokolad (1922; Chocolate, tr. C. Malamuth, 1933) aroused much controversy by its theme: the shooting of an innocent Party member in order to placate the opinion of the masses. His next big novel, Fevral' 1917 (1928; February 1917, tr. W. Drake, 1931), was the first part of a trilogy about the Revolution; soon after its publication the author became silent.

Tyazhëlye shagi (1927–33). J.L.

Tarchetti, IGINO UGO (*S. Salvatore, Monferrato 29 VI 1841; †Milan 25 III 1869), Italian writer of the SCAPIGLIATURA, an outsider on the fringe of society both in his style of life and in his miserable death through tuberculosis. Army life turned him to anti-militarism, expressed in the novel Una nobile follia (1867). Both this and his unfinished novel Fosca, his short stories and the poems of Disjecta (1879) are often unearthly and macabre, but their style is often crude.

Tutte le opere (ed. E. Ghidetti, 2 vols, 1967).
R. Scaglia, Bibliografia di I. U. T. (1927); E. Ghidetti, T. e la Scapigliatura lombarda (1968). J.G.-R.

Tarkington, NEWTON BOOTH (*Indianapolis, Ind. 29 VII 1869; ∞1902 Laurel Fletcher [o/o 1911], ∞1912 Susannah Robinson; †ibid. 19 V 1946), American novelist. Many of his writings have a Hoosier setting. His humorous novels, especially Penrod (1914) and Seventeen (1916), remain popular as juvenile fiction.

The Gentleman from Indiana (1899); Monsieur Beaucaire (1900); Alice Adams (1921); Growth (trilogy, 1927: The Turmoil, 1915; The Magnificent Ambersons, 1918; The Midlander, 1923); Little Orvie (1934).

A. D. Dickinson, B. T. (1926). H.L.C.

Tarlé, EVGENY VIKTORIVICH (*1874, †1955), Soviet historian whose essentially patriotic trend in the treatment of Russian history was substituted for the former trend represented by M. N. Pokrovsky (1868–1932) which was based exclusively on the class struggle.

Zapad i Rossiya (1918); Krymskaya voyna (1944; new ed. 2 vols, 1950); Chesmenskiy boy i pervaya russkaya ekspeditsiya v Arkhipelag 1769–74 (1945); Admiral Ushakov na Sredizemnom more (1948); Talleyrand (1948).—Bonaparte (tr. J. Cournot, 1937); Napoleon's Invasion of Russia 1812 (tr. G. M., 1942). J.L.

Tárrega, FRANCISCO AGUSTÍN (*Segorbe ?1554; †Valencia 1602), Spanish dramatist. He studied at Salamanca and was canon of Valencia cathedral from 1584. His ten surviving plays include religious and historical dramas and comedies of intrigue. He used plots like those of Italian novelle. His theatre represents a half-way house between Virués* and that of Lope de Vega* and Guillén de Castro*.

E. Juliá Martínez, Poetas dramáticos valencianos, I (1929; incl. texts).

H. Mérimée, L'art dramatique à Valencia (1913); R. Foldi, L. de V. y la formación de la comedia (1968). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Tarsia, GALEAZZO DI (*Naples c. 1520; †1553), Italian poet. Lord of Belmonte, he wrote conventional verse for Vittoria Colonna*, but wooed and lamented Camilla Carafa in sonnets of originality and feeling.

Il Canzoniere di G. di T. (ed. F. Bartelli, 1888); Rime (ed. D. Ponchirolì, 1951).

F. Bartelli, Note biografiche: G. di T. (1906); E. Bonora, 'Rime di G. di T.' in Belfagor, VI (1951); L. Baldacci, 'Sul testo di G. di T.' in Convivium (1952); B. Croce, Poesia popolare e poesia d'arte (3rd ed. 1952). P.McN.

Tasso, BERNARDO (*Bergamo 11 XI 1493; ∞Porzia de' Rossi; †Ostiglia 5 IX 1569), Italian poet. In the course of an unsettled life he served Ferrante Sanseverino, Prince of Salerno, whom he followed into exile in 1552; adorned the court of Guidobaldo II, Duke of Urbino; and died, governor of Ostiglia, in the service of Guglielmo Gonzaga, Duke of Mantua. Bembo's* influence is appreciable in his lyrics, which are Petrarchistic with a difference; his Odi (1560) and Salmi (1560) are Horatian, his Favolo di Piramo e Tisbe Ovidian; the letters which he published are of considerable interest. His most pretentious work is the epic Amadigi di Gaula (1560), based on Garci Ordóñez de Montalvo's* prose Amadís de Gaula. Attempting to accommodate Ariosto's* practice to Aristotle's* theory, it is vast, serious and unreadable. But Bernardo's greatest gift to literature is his son, Torquato, who finished and published Floridante (1587), an amplification of an episode from Amadigi.

Rime (1560; ed. P. A. Serassi, 2 vols, 1749); Ragionamento della poesia (1562); Lettere (ed. A. F. Seghezzi, 2 vols, 1733; 3rd vol. ed. P. A. Serassi, 1751); Amadigi (ed. idem, 2 vols, 1755; ed. G. Antonelli, 3 vols, 1832); Lettere inedite (ed. G. Ravelli, 1889); Floridante (ed. M. Catalano, 1931).

P. D. Pasolini, I genitori di Torquato Tasso (1895); F. Foffano, 'Il Floridante di B. T.' in Archivio storico lombardo, XX (1895) and 'L'Amadigi di Gaula di B. T.' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XXV (1895); F. Pintor, Delle liriche di B. T. (1899); E. Williamson, B. T. (1951); G. Cerboni Baiardi, La lirica di B. T. (1966).

P. McN.

Tasso, TORQUATO (*Sorrento 11 III 1544; †Rome 25 IV 1595), Italian poet. Son of Bernardo Tasso*, he received his early education from the Jesuits at Naples, joining his exiled father at Rome in 1554, and in 1557 at Pesaro, where he first manifested poetic genius. Sent to study at Padua, he neglected law for literature and published his first epic, Rinaldo (1562). Three years later he entered the brilliant world of Ferrara, first in the service of Cardinal Luigi d'Este (in whose suite he visited Paris in 1570) and later as court poet to the Cardinal's brother, Alfonso II. Torquato's talents and gallantry captivated the Estes, whom he charmed with Aminta (1573; pub. 1580) and immortalized in Gerusalemme Liberata (1575). But the sunshine of success was short-lived; hardly was his epic completed before an uneasy conscience working upon an unstable mind wrought the first shadow of insanity. In 1577 an act of violence earned him mild detention. Escaping by night, he trudged to his sister's house in Sorrento; but in 1579 the lure of Alfonso's court brought him back to Ferrara, where, after a frenzied outburst, he was incarcerated in the hospital of St Anne. Here he remained for seven years of mental torment, hallucination and feverish literary activity. In 1580 the conditions of his confinement were relaxed and in 1586 he was released. Retiring to Mantua, he published Torrismondo (1587); but although his industry was unflagging, the vein of his inspiration had run out. His restless spirit dragged him across Italy: from Loreto to Rome, from Rome to Naples, and from Naples back to Rome. Here he enjoyed Papal protection and laboured at the revision of his masterpiece: Gerusalemme Conquistata appeared in 1593. But madness waxed as genius waned, and he died in the monastery of Sant'Onofrio on the Janiculum.

In its carefree scepticism, Aminta mirrors Tasso's happiest mood. Since Virgil* and Theocritus* no purer pastoral idyll had been conceived than this drama of Aminta's love for Silvia. The very simplicity of its plot heightens the warmth and freshness of its inspiration. Here, as in all Tasso's poetry, the essential theme is love; an elemental sensuousness pervades Arcadia, and nature herself is described in erotic verse both imaginative and musical.

It was Tasso's aim to give Italy an epic conceived in the classical manner yet retaining the enchantment of the materia cavalleresca. Of such an epic Rinaldo is the earnest and Conquistata the ghost. An unsuccessful compromise between Aristotle's* theory and Ariosto's* practice, Rinaldo combines unity of hero with multiplicity of action; but the unity achieved is less poetic than literary, and the interest lies in the lyrical episodes which abound. In Conquistata, a suicidal revision undertaken to salve the conscience and appease the academies, the finest flower of his fancy lies crushed between Aristotle and the Inquisition.

Tasso's aim is achieved in Gerusalemme Liberata, the greatest poem of the Counter-Reformation, and for long the most popular work of Italian literature. His subject, the recovery of Jerusalem in the First Crusade, is both historical and Christian; but neither history nor Christianity provides the dominating motive of his poetry. It is from the stress of human emotions, impotent against destiny, that Tasso's genius creates the world of lyrical sentiment in which his heroes and heroines slay and are slain, and in which his lovers suffer the fatality of love. The noblest triumphs of his imagination—Erminia amongst the shepherds: Clorinda's death at the hands of Tancred: Armida's enchanted garden: Rinaldo's ascent of Mount Olivet—are episodic, for his poetry is purest when his fantasy is least fettered by historical, literary or orthodox preoccupations. At such moments Tasso is capable of great feeling, conveyed more by the atmosphere of words than by their meaning, and of a religious sentiment which is not found in his heavy handling of the supernatural, but in his attitude to powers and passions greater than himself.

In Tasso's remaining works, the prose style of his dialogues and letters has been much admired; his Discorsi (1587) are indispensable to a right understanding of his attitude to his own poetry. His lyrics are always elegant, seldom excellent; his Torrismondo makes tedious reading. His religious poems are solid monuments to the tragedy of exhausted genius, for Tasso 'had the misfortune to outlive himself'.

Opere (eds: L. Caretti, 1957- ; G. Petrocchi, 1961; B. Maier, 5 vols, 1963- ); Rinaldo (1562; ed. L. Bonfigli, 1936; tr. J. Hoole, 1792); Aminta (1580; eds: B. T. Sozzi, 1957; L. Caretti, 1961; C. Varese, 1962; L. Fassò, 5th ed. 1963; tr. A. Fraunce, 1591); Gerusalemme Liberata (1st pub. incomplete as Il Goffredo by C. Malespini, pirated ed., Venice, 1580; 1st authorized ed. F. Bonna, Ferrara, 1581; mod. crit. eds: L. Caretti, 1961; G. Getto, 2nd ed. 1962; E. Raimondi, 1963; tr. E. Fairfax, 1600, mod. ed. 1962); Gerusalemme Conquistata (ed. L. Bonfigli, 2 vols, 1934); Prose (eds: F. Flora, 1935; E. Mazzali, 1959); Poesie (ed. F. Flora, 1952); Dialoghi (ed. E. Raimondi, 4 vols, 1958); Discorsi dell'arte poetica e del poema eroico (ed. L. Poma, 1964); Latin poems in Carmina Latina (ed. A. Martini, 1895).

A. Solerti, Vita di T. T. (3 vols, 1895); R. Ramat, Lettura del T. minore (1953); B. T. Sozzi, Studi sul T. (1954) and Nuovi studi sul T. (1963); E. Mazzali, Cultura e poesia nell'opera di T. T. (1957); F. Pool, Desiderio e realtà nella poesia del T. (1960); L. Caretti, Ariosto e T. (1961); E. Donadoni, T. T., saggio critico (5th ed. 1963); G. Petrocchi, La poesia di T. T. (1963); C. P. Brand, T. T.: A Study of the Poet and His Contribution to English Literature (1965); A. Tortoreto, Rassegna bibliografica dei recenti studi tassiani (1965); G. Getto, Interpretazione del T. (rev. ed. 1967); M. Fubini, 'L'Aminta intermezzo alla tragedia della Liberata' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., CXLIV (1968). P.McN.

Tassoni, ALESSANDRO (*Modena 28 IX 1565; †ibid. 25 IV 1635), Italian poet, literary critic and political writer. During a life spent in the service of Princes and Cardinals, Tassoni gave vent to his witty, pungent, satirical and paradoxical turn of mind in a number of prose works. His masterpiece is a hero-comic poem, La Secchia Rapita—a superimposition of imaginary adventures on to a basis of historical fact, with a double purpose: of satirizing contemporary men and situations and of exciting the reader's laughter. Tassoni's humour is often, though not always, still effective.

Considerazioni sopra le Rime del Petrarca (1609); Pensieri Diversi (1610); Filippiche (1615); La Secchia Rapita (Paris, 1622; The Trophy-Bucket, tr. M. Ozell, 1713; The Rape of the Bucket, tr. J. Atkinson, 2 vols, 1825); Rime (1711); Lettere (2 vols, 1901–10).—Prose politiche e morali (2 vols, 1930); Opere (1942).

J. Cooper Walker, Memoirs of A. T. (1815); G. Rossi, Studi e ricerche tassoniane (1904); Miscellanea tassoniana di studi storici e letterari (ed. T. Casini and V. Santi, 1908); V. Santi, La Storia nella 'Secchia Rapita' (2 vols, 1909); G. Reichenbach, A. T. (1931); V. Rossi, A. T. (1931); G. Bertoni, A. T. (1935); 'Tassoniana' in Atti e memorie della Deputazione di Storia Patria per le antiche provincie modenesi, XII (1960); Studi Tassoniani (1966); E. Loos, A. T.'s 'La Secchia Rapita' und das Problem des heroisch-komischen Epos (1967). U.L.

Tatarka, DOMINIK (*Drienove 14 III 1913), Slovak novelist. After his very successful portrayal of the Slovak state during the Second World War, Farská republika (1948), Tatarka succumbed to the prevailing fashion of a superficial 'Socialist Realism' (Družné letá, 1955). Later work shows a revival of his natural narrative talent (Rozhovory bez konca, 1959), and Démon súhlasu (1963) is an indictment of the attitudes and events of the 1950s. R.A.

Tate, ALLEN JOHN ORLEY (*Winchester, Ky. 19 XI 1899; ∞1924 Caroline Gordon* [o/o], ∞1959 Isabella Gardner [o/o], ∞1966 Helen Heinz), American poet, novelist, critic and biographer. A member of the Fugitive and Agrarian groups, Tate, though acutely conscious of his Southern heritage, has never restricted himself to mere regional writing. His poetry has a restraint, tact and wit indicative of his classical knowledge but also reveals a psychological tension in its harshness of diction and violence of imagery. His novel The Fathers (1938) provides a subtle and disturbing analysis of a torment of the spirit. His literary and social criticism shows great wit and insight and reveals Tate's distrust of modern society yet his refusal to retire before it.

VERSE: Poems 1928–31 (1932); The Mediterranean and Other Poems (1935); Sonnets at Christmas (1941); The Vigil of Venus (1943); The Winter Sea (1944); Poems (1960).—BIOGRAPHIES: Stone-wall Jackson: The Good Soldier (1928); Jefferson Davis: His Rise and Fall (1929).—ESSAYS: Reactionary Essays on Poetry and Ideas (1936); Reason in Madness (1947); The Hovering Fly (1948); On the Limits of Poetry (1948); The Forlorn Demon (1953); Essays of Four Decades (1969).

J. M. Bradbury, The Fugitives (1958); L. Cowan, The Fugitive Group (1959); 'Homage to A. T.' in Sewanee Rev., LXVII (1959); F. Kermode, Puzzles and Epiphanies (1962); R. K. Meiners, The Last Alternatives: A Study of the Works of A. T. (1963); G. Hemphill, A. T. (1964). G.A.K.

Tate, NAHUM (*Dublin 1652; †London 12 VIII 1715), English poet and dramatist, educated at Belfast and Trinity College, Dublin; settled in London 1672; poet laureate 1692–1715. He was a mediocre poet who collaborated with Dryden* in Absalom and Achitophel, Part II. His dramatic adaptations included a popular version, with a happy ending, of King Lear (1687). He also wrote the libretto for Purcell's Dido and Aeneas, a metrical version of the psalms with Brady, and the celebrated carol 'While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night'.

Brutus of Alba (1678); Poems (1684); Panacea—a Poem upon Tea (1700).

H. F. S. Thomas, The Life and Works of N. T. (1934). E.T.W.

Tatham, JOHN (fl. 1632–64), English poet and dramatist. Tatham appears to have succeeded John Taylor* as 'City Poet', and provided the annual City pageants from 1657 to 1664. He also wrote a few plays for the theatre and minor verse of a Metaphysical kind.

VERSE: Fancies Theater (1640); Ostella (1650).—Dramatic Works (ed. J. Maidment and W. H. Logan, 1879). J.B.B.

Tatishchev, VASILY NIKITICH (*Pskov province 16 IV 1686; †Moscow province 15 VII 1750), Russian historian. His Istoriya Gosudarstva Rossiyskogo (4 vols, 1768–74; 5th vol. 1848), written on critical and pragmatic lines, was the first creditable introduction to the study of Russian history.

Dukhovnaya (1773; The Testament of T., tr. J. Martinof, 1860); Perepiska V. N. Tatishcheva (1951). J.L.

Tauler, JOHANNES (*c. 1300; †Strasbourg 1371), German Dominican, active in Basle until about 1346, thereafter in Strasbourg. In his German sermons (80 preserved) he adapts the thought and simplifies the idiom of the mystics for the proper instruction of the simpler devout. Amongst spuria are a Vita and Meditations on the Passion.

Eds: F. Vetter (1910); A. L. Corin (1924–29).—Modernized W. Lehmann (2 vols, 1923).

J. M. Clark, The Great German Mystics (1949). F.P.P.

Tausen, HANS (*Birkende 1494; ∞1527 ?Dorothea, ∞1538 Ane Andersdatter; †Ribe 11 XI 1561), Danish theological and polemical author. Denmark's first Reformer, he was converted to Lutheran ideas at Wittenberg, and formed the first Lutheran congregation at Viborg. In 1542 he became Bishop of Ribe. Tausen translated parts of the Old Testament, wrote a collection of sermons and hymns and proved himself to be the most gifted spokesman of the Reformation.

Hans Tausens Smaaskrifter (1870); Hans Tausens Oversættelse af de fem Mosebøger (1932); Hans Tausens Postil (2 vols, 1934).

M. Christensen, H. T. (1942). E.B.

Tavallāi, FIRĪDŪN (*Shiraz 1917), Persian poet, parodist and satirical writer. Among the pioneers of the modern movement in Persian poetry, he combined fresh imagery and free verse forms with polished diction; his latest works, however, return to the style of the classical lyric.

Al-Taḥāṣīl (1946); Rāḥa (1951); Karavān (1952); Nāḥah (1962); Pūyah (1966). E.Y.

Taverner, RICHARD (*Brisley, Norfolk ?1505; †Wood Eaton, Staffs 14 VII 1575), English Reformer and author. He seems to have produced his edition of the English Bible and other religious, educational and moral works protected by Thomas Cromwell in the cause of the English Reformation.

Commonplaces of Scripture orderly set forth (1538); The Most Sacred Bible, which is the Holy Scripture, containing the old and new testament, translated in to English [by Tyndale and Coverdale], and newly recognised with great diligence after the most faithful exemplars by Richard Taverner (1539). G.K.H.

Tawney, RICHARD HENRY (*Calcutta 30 XI 1880; ∞1909 Annette Beveridge; †London 16 I 1962),

British economic historian and lecturer. He played an important part in the Workers' Educational Association and was Professor of economic history at London University from 1931 to 1949.

The Agrarian Problem in the Sixteenth Century (1912); English Economic History: Selected Documents (with A. E. Bland et al.; 1914); The Acquisitive Society (1921); Religion and the Rise of Capitalism (1926); Equality (1931); Land and Labour in China (1933).—The Radical Tradition (1964).

Essays in the Economic and Social History of Tudor and Stuart England in Honour of R. H. T. (ed. F. J. Fisher, 1961). H.L.C. (W.R.A.)

Tayama KATAI, pseud. of TAYAMA ROKUYA (*Tatebayashi, Gumma 22 I 1872; ∞I 1899 Ōta Risako; †Tokyo 13 V 1930), Japanese author of the Naturalist school. Although his first novel appeared in 1891, he first gained recognition with Futon in 1907 and the autobiographical trilogy Sei, Tsuma and En in 1908–09. His plots usually stress the harshness and cruel realities of life, but in later years his themes were mellowed.

Futon (1907; summary in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Ippeisotsu (1908; 'One Soldier', tr. G. W. Sargent in Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956; tr. W. E. Naff in The Heart Is Alone, ed. R. N. McKinnon, 1957); Sei (1908); Tsuma (1908); En (1909; summary of trilogy in Kunitomo, op. cit.); Zansetsu (1917–18; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Taylor, BAYARD (*Kenneth Square, Pa. 11 I 1825; ∞1850 Mary Agnew, ∞1857 Marie Hansen; †Berlin 19 XII 1878), American novelist, playwright, poet and historian. He wrote poems based on his wanderings in Europe and the Orient. His short stories deal with the Quaker surroundings of his boyhood; several novels present realistic studies of village life.

VERSE: Views Afoot; or, Europe Seen with Knapsack and Staff (1846); Poems of the Orient (1855).—NOVELS: Hannah Thurston: A Story of American Life (1863); The Story of Kennett (1866).—PLAYS: The Prophet (1874); Prince Deukalion (1878).—The Dramatic Works of B. T. (1880); The Poetical Works of B. T. (1880).

R. C. Beatty, B. T.: Laureate of the Gilded Age (1936). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Taylor, EDWARD (*Leicestershire, Eng. c. 1645; ∞1674 Elizabeth Fitch, ∞1692 Ruth Wyllys; †Westfield, Mass. 24 VI 1729), American poet. A Puritan minister, he combined rich and striking imagery with homely diction after the manner of the Metaphysicals. Though his conceits are sometimes over-ingenuous, he fuses religious feeling and creative imagination in meditative poems with a success unequalled in America in his period. His work was unpublished at his own request; only in 1937 were his manuscripts critically examined.

The Poetical Works of E. T. (ed. T. H. Johnson, 1939); The Poems of E. T. (ed. D. E. Stanford, 1960).

P. Miller and T. H. Johnson, The Puritans (1938); N. S. Grabo, E. T. (1962).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Taylor, SIR HENRY (*Bishop Middleham, Durham 18 X 1800; ∞1839 Theodosia Spring Rice; †Bournemouth 27 III 1886), English dramatist, poet and essayist, whose Elizabethan-inspired Philip Van Artevelde (1834) has greater psychological than theatrical value. R.M.H.

The Statesman (1836; intro. L. Silberman, 1957); Works (5 vols, 1877–78); Autobiography (2 vols, 1885); Correspondence (ed. E. Dowden, 1888).

J. B. Bilderbeck, Sir H. T., and His Drama of Ph. van A. (1877). R.M.H. (K.W.)

Taylor, JEREMY, Bishop of Down and Connor (*Cambridge VIII 1613; ∞Uppingham 27 V 1639 Phoebe Langsdale, ∞before 1665 Joanna Bridges; †Lisburn 13 VIII 1667), English clergyman, renowned for his sermons and other prose. Educated at Gonville and Caius (1626–35), his substitute preaching at St Paul's moved Laud to send him to Oxford (Fellow of All Souls 1636). After varying fortune in the Civil War (he was chaplain to the King's household), Taylor lived at Golden Grove in Carmarthenshire until he went to Lisburn (1658).

The Whole Works (ed. R. Heber, 1822; rev. C. P. Eden, 1847–54).—Holy Living (1650; ed. A. R. Waller, 1900); Holy Dying (1651).—Poems and Verse Translations (ed. A. B. Grosart, 1870).—The Golden Grove (sel. prose; ed. L. P. Smith, 1930); The House of Understanding (ed. M. Gest, 1954).

Sister M. S. Antoine, The Rhetoric of J. T.'s Prose (1946); C. J. Stranks, Life and Writings of J. T. (1952); H. Trevor Hughes, The Piety of J. T. (1960). B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Taylor, JOHN (*Gloucester 24 VIII 1580; ∞Alice?; †London XII 1653), English poet and pamphleteer, usually known as 'the water-poet'. Taylor was sent to the grammar school in Gloucester, but proving a poor scholar was taken away, apprenticed to a waterman and pressed into the navy. Discharged with a lame leg, he became a waterman on the Thames, supplementing his earnings by writing. He wrote a multitude of works in prose and verse, including descriptions of his various journeys (one to Bohemia). He was a well-known 'character'. During the Civil War he kept an inn in Oxford and afterwards another in London. His writing is uneducated and crude but vigorous and often diverting.

All the Works of J. T., the Water Poet (1630; repr. Spenser Soc., 1868–69); Works of J. T. the Water-Poet not included in the Folio volume of 1630 (Spenser Soc., 1870–78).

W. Thorp, 'J. T. the water poet' in Texas Rev., VIII (1922). J.B.B.

Taylor, WILLIAM (*Norwich 7 XI 1765; †ibid. 5 III 1836), English man of letters, translator and contributor to the periodicals of articles stimulating English interest in German literature.

TRANSLATIONS: Lessing, Nathan the Wise (1791); Goethe, Iphigenia in Tauris (1793); Bürger, Leonore (1796).—Tales of Yore (3 vols, 1810); English Synonyms discriminated (1813); Historic Survey of German Poetry (3 vols, 1823–30).

J. W. Robberds, Life and Writings of the late W. T. of Norwich (2 vols, 1843; incl. corresp. with Southey); G. Herzfeld, W. T. von Norwich, eine Studie über den Einfluss der neueren deutschen Litteratur in England (1897); M. A. Christensen, 'T. of Norwich and the Higher Criticism' in Jour. Hist. of Ideas, XX (1959).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Tchekhov, ANTON PAVLOVICH: see Chekhov, ANTON PAVLOVICH.

Tchernichowsky, SHAUL (*Mikhaïlovka, Crimea 1875; †Tel Aviv 1943), Hebrew poet. He was not brought up in the traditional Jewish way but was educated in Russian schools, pursuing his studies at German and Swiss Universities. As a doctor, he practised first in Russia and from 1931 in Palestine. His first poems were published when he was still a student: his poetical activity continued till his death, and in old age he found the courage to change from Ashkenazi pronunciation to that of the Sephardi. He is unique in Hebrew poetry for the sensuous beauty of his love lyrics and nature poems. He sang of a fleeting love that knows no disappointment and is always ready to make way for a newer love. After the love lyrics came the pantheistic songs addressed to heathen gods, Chezionoth Neviei Ha-Sheker. He was nicknamed the 'Hellene' and the 'Heathen', but he sang of Biblical and Jewish historical themes, preferring scenes of battle, of courage and of heroism, as in Baruch Mi-Magenza. He also wrote Idylls, describing the life of the Jews in Crimea. He wrote stories, but his prose never rose to the stature of his poetry. He is unrivalled as a translator, especially in the accomplished, metrically true, translations of GILGAMESH and KALEVALA, and even more of Homer's* Iliad and Odyssey. Y.H.

J. Klausner, S. T. (1947); B. Kurzweil, Bialik we-T. (1964); E. Silberschlag, S. T. (London, 1968). M.Ge.; Y.F.

Teasdale, SARA (*St Louis, Mo. 8 VIII 1884; †1914 Ernst Filsinger [o/o 1929]; †New York 29 I 1933), American poet. She became known for her lyrics, which, almost bare of imagery and metaphor, articulate moods rather than metaphysical speculation.

Helen of Troy and Other Poems (1911); Rivers to the Sea (1915); Love Songs (1917); Flame and Shadow (1920); Dark of the Moon (1926); Strange Victory (1933).—The Collected Poems of S. T. (1937). H.L.C.

Tebalde, ANTONIO (*Ferrara 4 XI 1463; †Rome 1537), Italian poet who Latinized his name TEBALDI into Tebaldeo. Tutor to Isabella d'Este and secretary to Lucrezia Borgia, he went to Rome during Leo X's pontificate and enjoyed Papal patronage. Here the sack of 1527, described in his letters, reduced him to the penury in which he died. Tebaldeo wrote pastoral eclogues, terza rima epistles, and numerous sonnets in the exaggerated style dubbed 'secentismo anticipato'. Mistaking artifice for art, his facile imitation of Petrarch* too often degenerated into caricature. Concern for Italy inspired better verse than love for Flavia, whilst his Latin epigrams were much admired. His poems were published without his consent by J. Tebaldi in 1498.

Soneti e capitoli de misser A. T. (1500); L'Opere d'amore (1550); Nuove rime volgari di A. T. (ed. U. Renda, 1910); Poeti estensi del rinascimento (ed. S. Pasquazi, 1966).

A. Luzzo and R. Renier, 'La cultura e le relazioni letterarie di Isabella d'Este Gonzaga' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XXXV (1900); A. D'Ancona, 'Del secentismo nella poesia cortigiana del secolo XV' in Pagine sparse (2nd ed. 1914); G. de Lisa, Un rimatore cortigiano del Quattrocento (1928); S. Pasquazi, Umanesimo ferrarese: A. T. e T. Benedetti (1955) and Rinascimento ferrarese (1957). P.McN.

Tecchi, BONAVENTURA (*Bagnoregio 11 II 1896; †Rome 30 III 1968), Italian novelist, short-story writer and literary critic. Tecchi's realism and psychological insight are seen to best advantage in the long short story, a form that he has cultivated. Idilli moravi (1939) contains his impressions of Czechoslovakia, where he taught Italian literature from 1933 to 1937. As a critic he has concentrated chiefly on modern German literature.

NOVELS: I Villatàuri (1935); Giovani amici (1940); L'isola appassionata (1945); Gli egoisti (1959); Gli onesti (1965).—SHORT STORIES: Il vento tra le case (1928); Tre storie d'amore (1931).—Scrittori tedeschi del '900 (criticism; 1941).

J.F.C. (B.M.)

Tedaldi, PIERACCIO (*Florence c. 1290; †c.1350), Italian poet. Of merchant stock; twice married, he led a dissipated wandering life. Castellan of Montopoli (1328). Tedaldi wrote 43 gay, moral and political sonnets; largely autobiographical in content, these express (in the familiar and realistic style of Cocco Angiolieri*) his love of money, his misery, remorse and repentance, and hatred of his wife.

Le Rime (ed. S. Morpurgo, 1885); Poeti giocosi del tempo di Dante (ed. M. Marti, 1956); Rimatori comico-realistici del Due e Trecento (ed. M. Vitale, 1956).

M. Marti, Cultura e stile nei poeti giocosi del tempo di Dante (1953). M.W.

Teffy or Teffi, pseud. of NADEZHDA ALEKSEYEVNA BUCHINSKAYA (*1876; †1952), Russian author of humorous stories and sketches. Many of them appeared in the periodical Satiricon. Her poetry had much in common with Symbolism. After 1917 she lived abroad and took an active part in émigré literature.

Yumoristicheskie rasskazy (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1911); Dym bez ognia (1914); Nezhivoy zver' (1916); Rasskazy (1922); Vosponinaniya (1932); Vsë o lyubvi (1946). J.L.

Tegnér, ESAIAS (*Kyrkerud 13 XI 1782; †Östrabo 2 XI 1846), Swedish Bishop, scholar, poet and orator. After his father's death at the rectory in Kyrkerud, Tegnér was sent in 1793 to become assistant to the Crown bailiff Branting and early manifested his brilliance. Thanks to Branting's assistance he was enabled to accompany his older brother to his tutoring post in 1796, and so he received some regular schooling. Another employer of his brother, Myhrman of Råmen, helped him to begin studying at Lund University in 1799. He shone as a scholar, and in 1803 became a lecturer in aesthetics. In 1806 he married Anna Myhrman, a daughter of his patron, in 1810 was appointed Professor, and two years later was given a Chair of Greek. He was ordained the same year (largely because a clerical stipend would eke out the inadequate University salary and so permit him to support his large family), and remained at Lund until 1826, dominating academic life with the brilliance and wit which are reflected in his letters, and leading the intellectual circle known as Hårbärget. In 1824 he had been called to the Bishopric of Växjö (his acceptance was largely based on financial considerations) and his life after 1826 was mainly given up to his diocesan and parliamentary responsibilities. His youthful liberalism yielded more and more to conservatism, and at the Riksdag of 1840 he angrily defended the ageing Karl XIV Johan against the Liberal opposition. The melancholia and instability which had early manifested themselves now broke out into madness. Partially cured in 1841, he carried out his duties until his death. While Tegnér had started writing poetry before 1799 and produced intermittently until the last years of his life, the period of his most important activity may be said to fall between 1808, when he wrote Krigssång för skånska lantvärnet, and 1825, when he completed Frithiofs Saga (tr. W. Strong, 1833), a romance cycle on an old Icelandic theme which consolidated and extended the popularity he had won by Svea in 1811. He was elected a member of the Swedish Academy in 1818, but though both the Old School and the New strove to enrol him as a partisan in the literary battle he maintained an independent attitude. He inherited the Gustavian tradition with its elegance and rhetoric, but (like the Fosforister) was much influenced by German idealistic philosophy, especially by Kant* and Schiller*, though he condemned the obscurantism of the Swedish Romantics (see the oration Tal vid jubelfesten, 1817). His forte is the lucid forceful philosophic lyric, in which his mastery of both language and metre are revealed, as in Epilog vid magisterpromotionen (1820), but he also wrote passionate and beautiful love poems, and delightful occasional verses.

VERSE: Sång till solen (1813); Hjälten (1813); Nattvardsbarnen (1820; The Children of the Lord's Supper, tr. H. W. Longfellow, 1842); Axel (1821; tr. R. G. Latham, 1837); Vid Svenska Akademiens femtidra minneshögtid (1836).—PROSE: Opuscula Latina (1875); Filosofiska och Estetiska skrifter (ed. A. Nilsson and B. Möller, 1913).—Samlade Skrifter (ed. C. W. Böttiger, 7 vols, 1847–51); Samlade Skrifter (incl. letters; ed. E. Wrangel and F. Böök, 10 vols, 1918–25); E. T.s brev (ed. N. Palmberg, 1953–); Samlade dikter (ed. F. Böök et al., 1964–).—For Eng. trs see N. Afzelius, Books in English on Sweden (Stockholm, 1951) and Suecana Extranea 1900– (Swed. Inst.).

G. Brandes, E. T. (1876); O. Levertin, Svenska Gestalter (1903) and Essayer, I (1907); E. Wrangel, T.s kärlekssaga (1916), Råmen och Tegnérminnet (1917) and T. i Lund (2 vols, 1932); B. Gadellius, Skapande fantasi och sjuka skaldar (1927); A. Nilsson, T. och Uppsalafilosofien (1934); G. Hedin, 'T.s uppfattning om klassiskt och romantiskt' in Göteborgs Högskolas Årsskrift (1935); M. Gravier, T. et la France (1942); Tegnérstudier tillägnade A. Werin (1942); F. Böök, E. T. (2 vols, 1946–47); T. Sondén, 'T.s psykiska ohälsa' in Lunds Universitets Årsskrift (1946); P. Sandblom, T.s kroppsliga ohälsa (1951); C. E. Göransson, Biskop T. i traditionen och verkligheten (1959).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Teichner, HEINRICH DER (fl. 1350–77), Viennese didactic poet, praised for his rectitude and piety by Peter Suchenwirt*. He wrote some 700 poems, addressed particularly to the middle classes. (He disapproves of the nobility, jousting etc.) A sober critic and earnest teacher, of considerable influence on later didactic poetry.

Ed., I (poems 1–282; 1953).—Index of all identified poems, H. Niewöhner in Zschr. f. dt. Alt., LXVIII–LXIX (1931–32).

Th. G. von Karajan, Über H. der T. (1955).

F.P.P.

Teika: see Fujiwara NO TEIKA.

Teilhard de Chardin, PIERRE (*Sarcenat, Puy-de-Dôme 1 V 1881; †New York 10 IV 1955), French philosopher. He became a Jesuit in 1899, and was ordained a priest in 1911; simultaneously with his theological studies in Paris he acquired an excellent grounding in palaeontology and geology. He then dedicated his researches to China, where he lived (1923–46), also joining scientific expeditions to South-East Asia, Indonesia and Africa. His most notable discovery was the famous 'Pekin Man' at Chou-kou-tien. Eventually he went to New York where he became a member of the Wenner-Gren Foundation for Anthropological Research.

His philosophical work, which was not authorized for publication by the Society of Jesus, was only revealed after his death (Le phénomène humain (1955; The Phenomenon of Man, tr. B. Wall et al., 1959) and aroused world-wide interest. He integrated into Christianity the most advanced discoveries of modern science, finding in evolution a mid-point between the 'biosphere' of the materialists and the 'noösphere' of the believers, thus upsetting all traditional dogmas, and orientating the Church towards a modernism the consequences of which are incalculable.

La messe sur le monde (1923); Le milieu divin (1926–27); Le cœur de la matière (1950); La Chrétienne (1955).—Œuvres complètes (Éditions du Seuil, 1955–).

C. Tresmontant, Introduction à la pensée de T. de C. (1956); C. Cuénot, P. T. de C. (1958–66); H. de Lubac, La pensée religieuse de T. de C. (1962); J. Onimus, P. T. de C., sa vie, son œuvre (1964); M. Barthélemy-Madaule, La personne et le drame humain chez T. de C. (1967); D. Paulin, T. de C.: essai de bibliographie (Quebec, 1967); Cahiers de l'Assoc. des Amis de P. T. de C. (1958–).

M.G.

Teirlinck, HERMAN (*St Jans-Molenbeek 24 II 1879; †Beersel-Lot 4 II 1967), Flemish novelist, short-story writer and playwright. His writings include fantastic country tales, impressionistic descriptions (Zon, 1906), sophisticated novels in the manner of Anatole France's* dilettantism (e.g. Mijnheer Serjanszoon and Het ivoren aapje) and more restrained vitalistic works. His last work, Zelfportret of het galgemaal, is a particularly convincing novel written in the second person. In the 1920s he was a leading figure among the Expressionistic dramatists. An aesthete who succeeds in clothing a striking imagination and sophisticated sensuousness in a compelling style.

NOVELS: Mijnheer Serjanszoon, orator didacticus

(1908); Het ivoren aapje (1909; Das Elfenbein-äffchen, tr. S. Rüttgers, 1927); De leemen torens (with K. van de Woestijne; 1928); Maria Speermalie (1941; Fr. tr. H. Piette, 1943); Het gevecht met de Engel (1952); Zelfportret of het galgemaal (1955); The Man in the Mirror, tr. J. Brockway, 1963).—SHORT STORIES: De wonderbare wereld (1902); Het stille gesternte (1903); De doolage (1905); Johan Doxa (1917; Jean Doxa, Fr. tr. J. de Herdt, 1931).—PLAYS: De vertraagde film (1922); Ik dien (1924); De man zonder lijf (1925); De ekster op de galg (1937); Versmoorde goden (1961).—Verzameld werk (8 vols, 1955–67).
J. Kuypers, H. T. (1923); Gedenkboek H. T. (1929); P. Minderaa, H. T. (1959); Th. Oegema van der Wal, H. T. (1965). R.F.L.

Teirlinck, ISIDOOR: see Stijns, REIMOND.

Teishitsu, pseud of YASUHARA MASAOKA (*Kyoto 1610; †ibid. 14 XII 1673), Japanese haiku poet. A pupil of Teitoku, he was one of the predecessors of Bashō*. His reputation rests on what is generally acknowledged to be the best haiku poem ever written. E.B.C.

Sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, An Anthology of Haiku (1932); R. H. Blyth, A History of Haiku, I (1963); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Teitoku: see Matsunaga TEITOKU.

Telesio, ANTONIO, Latinized THYLESIUS (*Cosenza 1482; †ibid. 1534), Italian writer. A distinguished humanist, and uncle of Bernardino Telesio*, he taught in Florence, Milan and Rome, where Medicean patronage procured him the Chair of Latin. After the sack of 1527 he retired to Venice, where he was appointed official historian to the Republic, but returned to Cosenza to die. Besides his treatises De coloribus (1528) and De coronis, his epistles, orations and classical commentaries, Telesio wrote Latin lyrics of irreproachable elegance in the manner of Horace* and Catullus*, and Imber aureus (1529), a tragedy in which the world of Greek mythology is sympathetically portrayed.

Antonii Thylesii Consentini poemata (1524); Opera (ed. F. Daniel, 1762); Carmina et epistolae (1808).

A. Pagano, 'L'opera poetica di A. T.' in Misc. Torraca (1922) and A. T. (1935). P.McN.

Telesio, BERNARDINO (*Cosenza 1509; †ibid. 2 X 1588), Italian philosopher. Heading the philosophical revolt from a priori scholasticism, his treatise De rerum natura (1586) propounded a system of thought which foreshadowed later empirical method.

De rerum natura juxta propria principia (crit.

ed. V. Spampanato, 3 vols, 1910–23; ed. L. De Franco, I, 1965).

G. Gentile, B. T. (1911); N. C. Van Deusen, T. the First of the Moderns (1932); G. Soleri, T. (1945); P. O. Kristeller, Eight Philosophers of the Italian Renaissance (1964). P.McN.

Tellez, FRAY GABRIEL: see Tirso de Molina.

Temple, SIR WILLIAM (*London 6 IV 1628; †ibid. 25 XII 1654 Dorothy Osborne*; †Moor Park 27 I 1698/99), English statesman, critic and patron of letters, educated at Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Apart from his love-story, Temple is best known for his Essay upon Ancient and Modern Learning which concentrated English attention on the Battle of the Books. He also wrote in his youth a romance, The Disastrous Chances of Love and Fortune.

The Works of Sir W. T. (1720 etc.); Essays on Ancient and Modern Learning (ed. J. E. Spingarn, 1909); Letters of Dorothy Osborne to W. T. (ed. G. C. Moore Smith, 1928; repr. 1968); The Early Essays and Romances (ed. idem, 1931); Five Miscellaneous Essays (ed. S. H. Monk, 1963).

C. Marburg, Sir W. T. (1929).

B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Tenāli Rama or Rāmakṛṣṇa, 17th-century Telugu poet at the court of Venkātāpati Rāja; he was a celebrated buffoon who also, in serious vein, composed a Vaiṣṇavite epic, Pāṇḍurāgamā-hāmyamu. J.R.M.

Tenca, CARLO (*Milan 19 X 1816; †ibid. 4 IX 1883), Italian patriot and literary critic, editor of the periodical Il Crepuscolo from 1850 to 1859. He started the move away from the Risorgimento attitude which tended to judge literature narrowly by its patriotic fervour: instead he stressed the primacy of purely artistic criteria and the artist's freedom both in subject and style. At the same time he fostered the growth of realism, calling on literature to recover its dignity and a sense of purpose by reflecting contemporary realities and the evolving consciousness of the Italian people, and thus raise the nation to a new level of civilization.

Prose e poesie scelte (1888); Giornalismo e letteratura nell'Ottocento (ed. with good intro. G. Scalia, 1959).

A. D'Ancona, 'C. T.' in Varietà storiche e letterarie (1885); B. Croce, Storia della storiografia italiana nel sec. XIX, II (1921); L. Jannuzzi, 'Il Crepuscolo' e la cultura lombarda (1850–59) (1966); A. Palermo, C. T. Un decennio di attività (1838–48) (1967); G. Pirodda, Mazzini e T. Per una storia della critica romantica (1968).

J.G.-R.

Tengnagel, MATTHIJS GANSNEB (*Amsterdam 1613; †?1672), Dutch poet, disciple of Huygens*, but coarser. In Amsterdamsche Lindebladen (1640) he satirizes actors and playwrights. In a later work, variously ascribed to him and the poet Naeranus, De Geest van T. in d'andere Werelt bij de verstorvene poëten (1652), Tegnagel's ghost again criticizes everything in connection with the stage. He wrote a farce, Frick in 't Feur-huis (1643), and a prose story, Leven van Konstance (1643), Amsterdamsche Maneschijn (poems; 1640) and the play De Spaensche Heidin (1643). In 't Amsterdamsch Minnebeeckie are printed three songs of his. A.M.B.W.

Alle de Wercken (ed. J. J. Oversteegen, 1969).

J. H. W. Unger, 'M. G. T.' in Oud-Holland, I (1883); J. A. Worp, 'M. G. T.'s geest' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., XXXIV (1915); J. J. Oversteegen, 'Zes hoofden rollen in T.'s Onbekende Voerman van 't Schou-burgh' in Merlyn, IV (1966). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Tennant, KYLIE, pseud. of Mrs L. C. RODD (*Manly, New South Wales 12 III 1912), Australian novelist. She describes urban life realistically and with humour.

Tiburon (1935); Foveaux (1939); The Batilers (1941); Ride on Stranger (1943); Lost Haven (1945); Australia, Her Story (1953); The Honey Flow (1956); Tell Morning This (1967).

M. Dick, The Novels of K. T. (1966).

F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Tennyson, ALFRED, 1ST LORD (*Somersby, Lincs 6 VIII 1809; ∞1850 Emily Sellwood; †Aldworth, Haslemere 6 X 1892), English poet. In his father's rectory Tennyson developed the fine sensibility to natural beauty which is one of the principal qualities of his work. Poetically he was heir to the Romantics, but his early volumes were stamped already with his own individuality: his peculiar delicacy of phrase, subtlety of metrical effect, melancholy and occasional morbidity of tone emerge clearly through a style primarily influenced by Keats*. At Cambridge he joined a group of brilliant young men, one of whom, Arthur Hallam, was to be in life his closest friend and in death his deepest inspiration. In Memoriam is, however, more than a profoundly moving elegy in the English tradition: it reflects also the conflict of faith and doubt of the Victorian age. Here, as elsewhere, Tennyson expressed contemporary scientific and philosophic interests, even attaining in Locksley Hall to prophetic vision.

The 1842 Poems assured his succession to Wordsworth* as poet laureate (1850) by revealing his versatility. Tennyson could speak for the nation and its sovereign on great occasions. His subsequent reputation has suffered from his presentation of the ARTHURIAN LEGEND in terms of Victorian morality and from the period flavour of his domestic narratives and of his dialect and humorous pieces. His best dramatic work is not in his plays but in the 'mono-drama' Maud, where characters and events come to life in the varied moods of passion and tenderness in the speaker. But Tennyson's enduring fame rests on his lyrics and classical poems. The boldness and originality of his metrical experiments and his consummate mastery of a poet's technical resources gave each theme and each shade of emotion its perfect rhythmical and musical form. It is with equal felicity that he ranges from the delicate nostalgia of 'Tears, Idle Tears' to the marvellous grandeur of 'To Virgil'. R.F.

VERSE: Poems by Two Brothers (1827); Poems, chiefly Lyrical (1830); Poems (1832); Poems (2 vols, 1842; ed. A. M. D. Hughes, 1914); The Princess (1847); In Memoriam (1850); Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington (1852); The Charge of the Light Brigade (1854); Maud and Other Poems (1855); The Idylls of the King (1859; enlarged 1869, 1872, 1885); Enoch Arden (1864); Lucretius (1870); The Revenge (1878); Ballads and Other Poems (1880); Tiresias and Other Poems (1885); Locksley Hall, Sixty Years After (1886); Demeter and Other Poems (1889); The Death of Oenone and Other Poems (1892); The Early Poems of T. (ed. J. C. Collins, 1900); The Suppressed Poems of T. (ed. J. C. Thompson, 1904); Unpublished Early Poems (ed. Charles Tennyson, 1931); The Poems of T. (ed. C. Ricks, 1969).—
 DRAMA: Queen Mary (1875); Harold (1876); Becket (1884); etc.—The Devil and the Lady (in Juvenilia, ed. Charles Tennyson, 1931).—Collected Works (ed. Hallam Tennyson, with author's notes, Eversley ed., 9 vols, 1907–08).

W. Bagehot, 'Wordsworth, T. and Browning' in Nat. Rev. (1864; repr. in Literary Studies, 1879); Hallam Tennyson [son], Alfred Lord T., A Memoir (2 vols, 1897) and ed., T. and His Friends (1911); Charles Tennyson [grandson], Alfred Lord T. (1949); Anne Ritchie, Records of T., Ruskin and Browning (1892); Andrew Lang, T. (1901); A. C. Bradley, A Commentary on T.'s In Memoriam (1901) and 'The reaction against T.' (1917; in A Miscellany, 1929); A. C. Lyall, T. (1902); T. R. Lounsbury, The Life and Times of T., 1809–1850 (1915); H. Nicolson, T. (1923); E. D. H. Johnson, The Alien Vision in Victorian Poetry (1952); E. F. Shannon, T. and the Reviewers 1827–51 (1952); J. Killham, T. and 'The Princess' (1958); J. H. Buckley, T.: the Growth of a Poet (1960); C. de L. Ryals, Theme and Symbol in T.'s Poems to 1850 (1964). R.F. (K.W.)

Tennyson (from 1830: Turner), CHARLES (*Somersby, Lincs 4 VII 1808; ∞1836 Louisa Sellwood; †Cheltenham 25 IV 1879), English poet, brother of Alfred, whose reflective, well-wrought verses, often in sonnet form, mirror the incidents and thoughts of country vicarage life.

Poems by Two Brothers (with Alfred; 1827);

Sonnets and Fugitive Pieces (1830); Small Tableaux (1868).—Collected Sonnets, Old and New (ed. Hallam T., with intro. J. Spedding, 1898).

H. D. Rawnsley, Memories of the T.s (1912); H. Nicolson, T.s Two Brothers (1947).

R.M.H.

Tennyson, FREDERICK (*Louth 5 VI 1807; ∞ 1839 Maria Giulioti; †Kensington 26 II 1898), English poet, brother of Alfred, in whom the family lyrical gift, allied to a love of the mystical, found expression in poems of classical inspiration.

Poems by Two Brothers (Charles and Alfred; F. contrib. 4; 1827); Days and Hours (1854); The Isles of Greece (1890); Daphne (1891); Shorter Poems (ed. C. Tennyson, 1913).

See also biblio. to prec. art.

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Teodoreanu, ALEXANDRU O., nicknamed PĂSTOREL (*Dorohoi 1894; †1964), Rumanian humorist and bon vivant, author of comic sketches and a racy skit on a Moldavian chronicle.

Hronicul Măscăricului Vălătuc (1928); Mici satisfacții (1931); Un porc de cline (1933); Bercu Leibovici (1935).

F.J.B.

Teodoreanu, IONEL (*Iasi 1897; †Bucharest 1954), Rumanian novelist, brother of A. O. Teodoreanu*. In spite of a tendency to whimsy and abuse of metaphor, his studies of children, particularly those on the threshold of adolescence, are sensitive and finely observed.

NOVELS, ETC.: Ulița copilăriei (1923); La medeleni (3 vols, 1925–27); Turnul Milenei (1928); Bal mascat (1929); Fata din Zlataust (1931); Golia (1933); Crăciunul de la Silvestri (1934); Lorelei (1935); Arca lui Noe (1936); Fundacul Varlaamului (1938); Tudor Ceaur Alcaz (1940–43); Hai Dividam (1946).—REMINISCENCES: In casa bunicilor (1938); Ce a văzut Ilie Pînișoară (1940); Întoarcerea în timp (1941); Masa umbrelor (1947).

G. Ibrăileanu, Scriitori români și străini (1926); Perpessicius, Mențiuni critice, I–V (1928–46); E. Lovinescu, Istoria literaturii române contemporane, 1900–1937 (1937); I. Negoitescu, Scriitori moderni (1966); N. Ciobanu, I. T. (1970).

F.J.B.

Teodosije, 14th-century Serbian chronicler. His biography of St Sava*, based on one by another monk, Domentijan, is one of the first Serbian works of literary value—simple, graphic and dramatic.

Stare srpske biografije (ed. M. Bašić, 1924; cont. mod. Serbo-Croatian version of T.s works); V. Gligorić, Iz naše književnosti feudalnog doba (1968; sel. with notes); Stare srpske biografije (ed. D. Bogdanović, 1969).

Dj. Sp. Radović, Stari srpski književnici XIV–

XVII veka (arts and essays; 1942) and Antologija stare srpske književnosti XI–XVIII veka (anthol.; 1960).

V.J.

Terence (PUBLIUS TERENTIUS AFER) (*Carthage ?195; † 159 B.C.), Roman comic dramatist, a man of local African rather than Semitic stock, brought to Rome as a slave in obscure circumstances and given an aristocratic type of education. Six comedies based on Attic originals, four by Menander* and two by Apollodorus* of Carystus, were produced under his name at festivals between 166 and 160. It was suggested at the time that certain aristocratic youths with whom Terence associated had some part in the writing of them.

Contemporary poets attacked Terence for the freedom with which he translated his Attic originals and the meanness of his verbal style. Audiences walked out, preferring to watch gladiators or tightrope-walkers. Terence himself claimed to be writing in the tradition of the great dramatic poets of the past, Naevius*, Plautus* and Ennius*, and to prefer an entertaining scenic effect to literal accuracy of translation. He boasted of the 'purity' of his Latin style. Only the Eunuchus among his plays had much success in the actual theatre. Students of the language, however, admired him greatly and his plays became from the late Republic onwards part of the syllabus of literary education, while those of other poets, even Plautus, were neglected.

Like his predecessors Terence sometimes inserted scenes from other plays into the one he was adapting but was perhaps as a rule a much more faithful translator. He reduced the amount of music accompanying monologue and dialogue and avoided the polymetric variety of Plautus. He kept violent stage action to a minimum and rarely introduced anachronistic and undramatic references to Roman institutions and things. On the other hand he made the speech of his personages much closer to that employed in the conversation of upper-class Romans.

Terence's plays were much read in the Middle Ages and have had a wide literary influence in modern times, writers as diverse as Molière* and P. G. Wodehouse* finding inspiration in him.

Crit. ed. R. Kauer, W. M. Lindsay and O. Skutsch (1958); comm. S. G. Ashmore (1908); important individual comms: K. Dziatzko, Phormio (4th ed. E. Hauler, 1913) and Adelphoe (2nd ed. 1903); P. Fabia, Eunuchus (1895); G. P. Shipp, Andria (2nd ed. 1961).—Eng. trs.: J. Sargeant (1912); F. Perry (1929).

G. Jachmann, 'Terentius (36)' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, VA.1, 598 ff. (1934); H. Haefter, Untersuchungen zur altlateinischen Dichtersprache (1934); J. Strauss, Terenz und Menander (1955).

H.D.J.

Teresa of Jesus, SAINT, religious name of TERESA

SÁNCHEZ DE CEPEDA Y AHUMADA (*?Gotarrendura, nr Ávila 1515; †Alba de Tormes 1582), Spanish mystic. Her grandfather, Juan Sánchez, confessed to Jewish practices in Toledo, 1485. As a child she ran away from home to seek martyrdom among the Moors. She professed as a Carmelite at Ávila in 1534 and founded her first convent there in 1562. Despite opposition she founded other convents and took part with St John* of the Cross in reforming her Order. Nothing dismayed her in her struggle against ill-health and ecclesiastical enmity.

Her autobiography and the relations of her spiritual experiences, written for her confessors, are mainly concerned with her personal religious life. The Way of Perfection is a guide to the nuns in the convent she founded at Ávila. Las moradas ('The Dwelling-Places') is a mystical treatise in which she conducts the reader through seven chambers of prayer to spiritual union with God. The Book of Foundations is a lively account of the difficulties she had to overcome in founding the religious houses of the Reformed Discalced Carmelites in different Spanish towns. She also wrote some minor treatises: Conceptos del amor de Dios, a reply to a spiritual challenge, maxims, etc. Much of her correspondence has been preserved; it bears witness to her piety, charm and energy.

Her reading consisted almost entirely of devotional works: St Augustine*, St Gregory*, Osuna*, the Imitation of Christ, Ludolf of Saxony and the Bible. Her style was unaffected by literary usage; it contains popular idioms, wonderfully revealing images drawn from daily life and intense expressions of her love of God and for mankind. At times her syntax is irregular and her meaning obscure, but generally her prose is clear, vivid and strong. Her verse is less interesting. Crashaw* addressed three fine poems to her; with him we can praise her 'angelical height of speculation', her 'masculine courage of performance'.

Obras (ed. P. Silverio de Santa Teresa, 9 vols, 1922); Obras completas (ed. L. Santullano, n.d.); Obras completas (ed. Fr. O. del Niño Jesús and Fr. E. de la Madre de Dios, 2nd ed. 1967).—M. Jiménez Salas, Santa T. de J. Bibliografía fundamental (1962).—Las moradas (ed. T. Navarro Tomás, 1910, 1916); Camino de perfección (ed. J. M. Aguado, 2 vols, 1929, 1942); Libro de las fundaciones (ed. idem, 2 vols, 1940).—The lyf of the Mother Teresa of Jesus (tr. W. M[alone], Antwerp, 1611); The Flaming Hart (tr. T. Matthew, ibid., 1642); Complete Works (tr. E. A. Peers, 3 vols, 1946); Letters (tr. idem, 2 vols, 1951).

G. Cunninghame Graham, Santa Teresa (1894); R. Hoornaert, Sainte Thérèse, écrivain (Paris, 1922, 1925; Brussels, 1940); Saint Teresa in Her Writings, tr. J. Leonard, 1931; G. Etchegoyen, L'Amour divin (1923); R. Menéndez Pidal, 'El estilo de Santa Teresa' in La lengua de Cristóbal Colón (1942); E. A. Peers, Studies of the Spanish Mystics (1927) and Mother of Carmel (1945); 1946); M. Auclair, Saint T. of A. (1953); J. Papasogli, Santa T. de A. (1957).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Terkelsen, SØREN (∞1639 Elsebe Christophersdatter; †1656 or 1657), Danish poet. Mainly a translator, notably of Opitz*, Voigtländer* and d'Urfé*, he introduced the fashion of pastoral poetry in Denmark by translating from the German d'Urfé's famous novel Astrée, and a series of pastoral poems.

Dend Hyrdinde Astrea (1645); Astree Siunge-Choer (3 vols, 1648–54). E.B.

Terpander, Greek poet from Lesbos (7th century B.C.) who was said to have composed lyrics at Sparta. The genuineness even of the few fragments that survive is disputed.

J. M. Edmonds, Lyra Graeca, I (2nd ed. 1928; with tr. and testimonia). J.T.H.

Terrazas, FRANCISCO DE (*1525; †?1600), Mexican poet, author of fragments of an epic on the Conquest of Mexico. His lyric poetry is in the Petrarchan tradition.

Poesías (ed. J. Castro Leal, 1941).—García Icazbalceta, F. de T. y otros poetas del siglo XVI (Madrid, 1962). J.F.

Tersteegen, GERHARD (*Mörs 25 XI 1697; †Mühlheim, Ruhr 3 III 1769), German religious poet; the most important hymn-writer of the German Reformed Church. His mysticism allies him to Angelus* Silesius. John Wesley* translated many of his hymns.

Geistliches Blumengürtlein (1729; many eds); Der Frommen Lotterie (1732); Erbauliche Verse der Madame Guion (1749); coll. works (8 vols, 1844); sel. W. Nigg (with letters; 1938).

J. Julian, Dictionary of Hymnology (1907); H. Forsthooff, Die Mystik in T.s Liedern (diss. Bonn, 1918); G. Wolter, T.s geistliche Lyrik (diss. Marburg, 1929); H. Blanknagel, T. als religiöser Erzieher (1934); A. Löschhorn, T. (1946).

L.W.F.

Tertullian (QUINTUS SEPTIMIUS FLORENTIUS TERTULLIANUS) (*Carthage c. 160; †ibid. c. 220), Christian writer. He practised as a pleader and became converted to Christianity probably c. 195, embracing with eagerness the Montanist heresy. His numerous writings show wide reading in Latin and Greek and arouse admiration for his boldness in defence of an unpopular creed, although their style is obscure and barbarous. The Apologeticus and the De spectaculis are the most favourable specimens and effectively attack the ambiguous official attitude towards Christianity. J.A.W.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, I–II (1879, 1844);

ed. A. Reifferscheid, G. Wissowa, E. Kroymann et al. in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., XX and scattered later vols to LXXVI (1890-1957); De anima (ed. with intro. and comm. J. H. Waszink, 1947); Apologeticus (ed. J. E. B. Mayor with tr. A. Souter, 1917; Apology, tr. E. J. Daley, 1950).—Trs: T. R. Glover (1931); E. Evans (1948-64).

T. D. Barnes, T. A Historical and Literary Study (1971). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Tesselschade, MARIA VISSCHER (*25 III 1594; ∞XI 1623 A. Crombalch [†24 VI 1634]; †20 VI 1649), Dutch poet, younger daughter of Roemer Visscher*, who gave her the sobriquet Tesselschade. Her excellent education and universal talents yet do not exalt her to the rank of genius. She wrote some beautiful poems and charming letters to Hooft*, Huygens*, van Baerle* and other friends of the MUIDERKRING whom she inspired by her personality. She tolerated Huygens' coarse jokes about her conversion and deserved Brederode's* adoration, Hooft's friendship and Vondel's* respectful poems to 'Eusebia'.

One song pub. in Minneplicht ende kuysheyt-kamp (1625); other poems in Verscheide Nederduytsche Gedichten (1659).

J. Scheltema, Anna en M. T., de dochters van Roemer Visscher (1808); E. Gosse, 'M. T.' in Studies in the Literature of Northern Europe (1879); G. de Rudder, De Tessela Romeria (1900); J. F. M. Sterck, 'Vondel, Eusebia, T.' in Van onzen Tijd, XI (1911), 'Tessalica' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., XL (1921) and Hoofdstukken over Vondel en zijn Kring (1923); J. A. Worp, Een onwaardeerlycke vrouw (1918); C. Bruining, 'M. T. V.' in Onze Eeuw, XVII (1919); A. Verwey, 'T.' in Proza, V (1922); P. Brachin, 'T., femme savante' in Études de littérature néerlandaise (1955).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Tessin, CARL GUSTAF, COUNT (*1695; †1770), son of the architect Nicodemus Tessin the younger, Swedish statesman and patron of culture. A leading diplomat and politician from 1720 till 1761, Tessin acted as tutor to Gustav* III while he was Crown Prince. A noted art connoisseur and collector, he ruined himself financially, so that his collections largely came into public ownership; he was a patron of Linné* and others.

En gammal mans bref till en spädd prints (1751); En äldre mans bref till en stadigare prints (1753); C. G. T. dagbok, 1757 (1824); Dagbok, 1748-1752 (ed. S. Leijonhufvud, 1915).—Skrifter (ed. G. Frunck, 1882-83).—For Eng. trs see N. Afzelius, Books in English on Sweden (Stockholm, 1951).

S. Leijonhufvud in Ord och bild (1906 and 1931) and Omkring C. G. T. (2 vols, 1917-18); W. Holst, C. G. T. (1936). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Testi, FULVIO (*Ferrara 23 VIII 1593; ∞1614

Anna Leni; †Modena 28 VIII 1646), Italian lyric poet. He served the Dukes of Este until his restlessness and ambition induced him to plot against them. He was imprisoned and died shortly afterwards from natural causes. As a poet he began in the wake of Marino*, but soon, following Chiabrera's* example, turned to imitation of classical antiquity, and achieved at times a choice and lofty style, praised by Leopardi*. Testi's fame was much enhanced by his fervent patriotic poems addressed to Charles Emmanuel I of Savoy.

Rime (1613; with adds, 1617); Poesie Liriche (1627-48); Lettere (ed. M. L. Doglio, 3 vols, 1967); many unpub. letters ed. Varini in Studi Secenteschi, XII (1972) and XIII (1973).—Raccolta generale delle poesie (1653).

G. Tiraboschi, Vita di F. T. (1780); E. Massano, Vita di F. T. (1900); A. Zamboni, F. T. (1939). U.L.

Teternikov, FĖDOR KUZ'MICH: see Sologub, FĖDOR.

Tetmajer, KAZIMIERZ PRZERWA (*Ludzimierz 12 II 1865; †Warsaw 18 I 1940), Polish author. The leading poet of the first phase of Polish modernism (Młoda Polska), his work is typical of the European fin de siècle. Most important are the two volumes of poetry of 1893 and 1898. He shocked his contemporaries with strikingly sensual and erotic poetry. His preoccupation with the folk-lore of the Tatra mountains is expressed in his verses and in the tales in dialect (Na Skalnym Podhalu). He also wrote some feverishly emotional prose works reminiscent of Przybyszewski*. He became mentally ill soon after the First World War.

VERSE: Poezje (7 series, 1891-1912); Erotyki (1905).—SHORT STORIES: Ksiądz Piotr (1894); 'Father Peter', tr. A. F. Tait in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XVI, 1937-38); Na Skalnym Podhalu (7 ser., 1903-12; Tales of the Tatras, tr. H. E. Kennedy and Z. Umińska, 1941).—NOVELS: Anioł śmierci (2 vols, 1898; L'Angelo della morte, tr. M. Grigorienna and M. Visetti, 1930); Panna Mery (1901); Król Andrzej (1909; König Andreas, tr. C. Lodygowski, 1914) and sequel Grafal (1910); Koniec epopei (3 vols, 1913-16).—PLAYS: Rewolucja (1906; Die Revolution, tr. E. Goldscheider, 1907); Judas (1917).—Poezje (4 vols, 1923); Wybór poezji (1936); Poezje wybrane (1968).

A. Mazanowski, K. P. T. (1911); Z. Wasilewski, Współcześni (1924); Z. Dębicki, 'K. P. T.' in Portrety, I (1927). S.S. (P.H.)

Thackeray, WILLIAM MAKEPEACE (*Calcutta 18 VII 1811; ∞1836 Isabella Shawe; †London 24 XII 1863), English novelist. His birth in India, his schooling in London and Cambridge (where began his friendship with Edward FitzGerald* and William Henry Brookfield), his living abroad, largely affected his choice of scenes and the personages of his fiction. Until Vanity Fair

(1847–48) he used pseudonyms and, though writing mainly small things, was working towards fiction on a large scale: the new practice of publishing novels in monthly parts enabled him to achieve this; no other novel in monthly parts reached a higher number than Pendennis and The Virginians, which reached 24. Even the work of his apprenticeship has many signs of greatness: he was a born story-teller—the loss of his fortune in 1833 may have helped him to become the voluminous great writer he was born to be. His ideal from the start was the sound one of a flowing and hurrying simplicity of narrative, and it is by that means that his subtlety as well as his strength and tenderness is conveyed; his style has the unaffected spontaneous grace of good conversation. Like other novelists he draws for many of his personages on his memory of people he knew. It has been thought that he did not transform them enough in the process of transferring them into his books. But the transformation was as complete as the caricatures of himself, introduced as illustrations in some of his books—he was an accomplished draughtsman. When we have noted the place of his friends in his fiction, we are still left with a thousand figures the originals of which are unknown—Thackeray bears down his critics by the sheer amount of his writings, which are always buoyant and never turgid or pretentious. The emotional colour of his work is as delicate as that of Henry James*. Those who hold it to be cynical are no more perceptive than those who hold it to be sentimental. He is a brilliant satirist but a kindly one, and where his pathos is deepest it is not without touches of asstringency. In his personal life the insanity of his wife from 1840 onwards threw him on the kindness of his friends—in particular his mother, Mrs Brookfield and Sally Baxter—and led him to cultivate the pleasures afforded him by his daughters. Now that most of his letters are collected, we can appreciate the fascinating agility and ceaseless felicity of his day-to-day writing which, in slightly more formal shape, makes the Roundabout Papers (1860–63) perhaps the finest collection of essays in the language.

The Yellowplush Correspondence (1837); Catherine (1839–40); The Paris Sketch Book (1840); The Second Funeral of Napoleon (1841); The Irish Sketch Book (1843); Barry Lyndon (1844); Notes of a Journey from Cornhill to Grand Cairo (1846); The Book of Snobs (1846); Pendennis (1848; completed 1850); Rebecca and Rowena (1849); Henry Esmond (1852); The English Humourists (1853); The Newcomes (1853; completed 1855); The Rose and the Ring (1854); The Virginians (1857; completed 1859); The Four Georges (1860); Lovel the Widower (1860); Philip (1861; completed 1862); Denis Duval (1863; never completed); Letters and Private Papers (ed. G. N. Ray, 1945–46).

H. A. Taine, Histoire de la littérature anglaise, V (1859); W. C. Roscoe, Poems and Essays (2 vols, 1860); A. Trollope, T. (1879); W. C. Brownell, Victorian Prose Masters (1902); A. T. Quiller-Couch, Charles Dickens and Other Victorians (1925); G. Saintsbury, A Consideration of T. (1931); J. W. Dodds, T., A Critical Portrait (1941); G. N. Ray, 'Vanity Fair' in Trans. Roy. Soc. of Lit., new ser., XXV (1950), The Buried Life (1952) and T. (2 vols, 1955–58); G. Tillotson, T. the Novelist (1954); J. Loofbourow, T. and the Form of Fiction (1964); T.: The Critical Heritage (ed. G. Tillotson and D. Hawes, 1968).

G.T. (M.A.)

Thales OF MILETUS in Ionia, the first Greek philosopher. His date is uncertain, but he predicted the solar eclipse of 585 B.C. He wrote nothing himself and was variously reported by later writers. He began the structure of Greek cosmology by seeking the material from which the world was formed, and decided on water, probably because water seemed to have life and movement in it. He was thus the first to offer a universal explanation of the cosmos based on observation and reasoning.

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, I (6th ed. 1951; Ancilla to the Pre-Socratic Philosophers, tr. K. Freeman, 1948).

R. G. Collingwood, The Idea of Nature (1945); J. Burnet, Early Greek Philosophy (4th ed. 1945); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, I (1962). D.J.F.

Theer, OTAKAR (*Czernowitz 16 II 1880; †Prague 20 XII 1917), Czech poet. A talented lyric poet, strongly influenced by O. Březina* and the Symbolist tradition, his promising work was cut short by an early death.

Dílo (ed. A. Novák and A. M. Piša, 3 vols, 1930–31).

A. M. Piša, O. T. (2 vols, 1928–33). R.A.

Themistius (*Paphlagonia c. 317; †c. 388), Greek rhetorician and philosopher. He taught rhetoric in Constantinople from c. 345, and became senator, Prefect of the city 383–384, and tutor of the future Emperor Arcadius. Author of 34 speeches, which provide interesting evidence for pagan political thought in the century of the victory of Christianity, and of paraphrases of certain works of Aristotle*.

Orationes (ed. W. Dindorf, 1832; ed. H. Schenkl and G. Downey, 2 vols, 1965–71); Paraphrases (ed. M. Wallies et al. in Commentaria in Aristotelem Graeca, 1903).

L. Méridier, Le philosophe T. devant l'opinion de ses contemporains (1906); V. Valdenberg, 'Les discours politiques de T. dans leur rapport avec l'antiquité' in Byzantion, I (1924); H. F. Bouchery, Bijdrage tot de studie van T.'s leven en persoonlijkheid (1934–35) and T. in Libanius' brieven (1936); G. Dagron, 'L'empire romain d'orient au IV<sup>e</sup> siècle et les traditions politiques de l'hellénisme. Le témoignage de Thémistios' in Travaux et Mémoires du Centre de Recherche d'Hist. et Civilisation Byzantines, III (1968; major stud.). R.B.

Theobald, LEWIS (~Sittingbourne 1688; †London 18 IX 1744), English editor of Shakespeare* who for his Shakespeare Restored, criticizing Pope's* edition, was made the first hero of The Dunciad. Shakespeare Restored and Theobald's own subsequent edition of Shakespeare (1733) show acumen, taste and scholarship, equipping him as an outstanding textual critic. He also wrote plays, translated Sophocles* and did hack work for the theatre.

Shakespeare Restored: or, a Specimen of many Errors, as well committed, as unamended by Mr Pope, in his late Edition of this Poet (1726); Double Falsehood (1727; prob. by T. himself, based on old play).

R. F. Jones, L. T., With Some Unpublished Letters (1919). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Theocritus (*Syracuse 320-300 B.C.), Greek pastoral poet. He studied under Philetas* in Cos, unsuccessfully appealed to Hiero II of Syracuse for patronage in 275 and successfully to Ptolemy Philadelphus, and was in Alexandria before 270. Later he was probably again in Cos. His poems are partly pastorals, partly dramatic representations of city life, partly mythological. The pastoral theme is inspired by genuine love of the country, now far distant from the Greeks who lived in Alexandria. But he is also a learned Alexandrian poet drawing on literary sources (e.g. Philoxenus* for the Cyclops, and Sophron* for the Adonis feast). Nevertheless he achieves freshness and immediacy. T.B.L.W.

A. S. F. Gow, T. (2 vols, with tr. and comm., 2nd ed. 1952) and The Greek Bucolic Poets (tr.; 1953). A.H.G.

Theodore Balsamon (*Constantinople; fl. second half 12th century), Bishop of Antioch. He wrote a much-used commentary on the canons of the great Church Councils, and his work contains valuable information on many aspects of Byzantine life.

Syntagma XIV titulorum (and other works; ed. G. A. Ralli and M. Potli, II-III, 1852-53); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXIX (1864), CXXXVII-CXXXVIII (1865; all with Lat. tr.).

E. Herman, 'B.' in Dictionnaire de droit canonique, II (ed. R. Naz, 1937; excellent art. with biblio.). J.M.H.

Theodore Gazes (*Thessalonica c. 1370; †1475), Byzantine humanist who settled in Italy and wrote on the early history of the Turks in a letter addressed to Francesco Filelfo*.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CLXI (1866; with Lat. tr.). J.M.H.

Theodore II Lascaris, Byzantine Emperor 1254-58, son of John III Vatatzes and pupil of Nicephorus* Blemmydes. He left letters, orations and theological writings.

Epistulae (ed. N. Festa, 1898). J.M.H.

Theodore Metochites (*1260; †1332), Byzantine statesman and scholar. He wrote on philosophy, rhetoric, astronomy, ancient literature and also left letters and poetry. It was in his household that Nicephorus* Gregoras was a student. He founded the monastery of the Chora and when misfortune befell him, he retired there as a monk. Much of his work remains unpublished. J.M.H.

Miscellanea (ed. C.-G. Müller and T. Kiessling, 1821); poetry ed. M. Treu (1895); R. Guiland, 'Les poésies inédites de Théodore Métochite' in Études byzantines (1959).

Ch. Diehl, Études byzantines (1905); I. Ševčenko, Études sur la polémique entre Théodore Métochite et Nicéphore Choumnos (1962). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theodore of Mopsuestia (*Antioch; †c. 428), Greek ecclesiastical writer, pupil of Libanius* and Diodorus of Tarsus, friend of John* Chrysostom; Bishop of Mopsuestia from 392. Author of many exegetic and dogmatic works, surviving largely in excerpts or Syriac translations. He is a thoroughgoing adherent of the Antiochene school of literal and historical interpretation. Long suspect as a forerunner of Nestorianism, he was anathematized in 553.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXVI (with Lat. tr.; 1859; very incomplete); H. B. Swete, Theodori Mopsuesteni episcopi in epistolas Pauli commentarii; The Latin Version with the Greek Fragments (2 vols, 1880-82); J. B. Chabot, Commentarius Theodori Mopsuesteni in Evangelium S. Johannis, Versio Syriaca, I (1897; all published); Commentary of T. of M. on the Nicene Creed (1933; Syriac and Eng.); Commentary of T. of M. on the Lord's Prayer and Sacraments (1933; Syriac and Eng.).

L. Pirot, L'œuvre exégétique de T. de M. (1913); L. Patterson, T. of M. and Modern Thought (1926); H. Lietzmann, Die Liturgie des T. von M. (1934); R. Devreesse, Essai sur T. de M. (1948). R.B.

Theodore Prodromus, sometimes called PTOCHOPRODROMUS, 'Poor Prodromus' (†1166), Byzantine writer and poet. He frequented the courts of John II Comnenus and Manuel I and lost no opportunity for presenting poems and addresses to all in authority, constantly bemoaning his poverty. He had on occasion a lively and satirical turn of mind, and both poetry and prose works are valuable sources for contemporary social and political life. Some of his writings are in the vernacular and not all have yet been published.

Works attributed to him cover a wide range, from a novel in verse (Rodanthe and Dosicles) to satire after the model of Lucian* and religious poetry.

J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXXXIII (with Lat. tr.; 1864); Catomyomachia (ed. P. Markakos, 1955); Der byzantinische Katz-Mäuse-Krieg (ed. H. Hunger, 1968); D. C. Hesselung and H. Pernot, Poèmes prodromiques en grec vulgaire (1910).

S. D. Papadimitriu, Feodor Prodrom (Odessa, 1905); A. P. Kazhdan in Vizantiiskii Vremennik, XXIV (1964). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theodoret (*Antioch c. 393; †458), Greek Christian writer, Bishop of Cyrrhus in Syria. Author of many exegetic, apologetic, historical and dogmatic works as well as homilies and letters. An adherent of the Antiochene school, he is lucid and factual in his exegesis. His Ecclesiastical History continues that of Eusebius* up to 428.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXXX-LXXXIV (1859–60); J. Raeder, Theodoreti Graecarum affectionum curatio (1904); L. Parmentier, T.: Kirchengeschichte (1911); Y. Azéma, Théodoret de Cyr. Correspondance (2 vols, 1955–64).—The Ecclesiastical History, Dialogues, and Letters of T. (tr. B. Jackson, 1892).

A. Güldenpenning, Die Kirchengeschichte des T. von Kyrrhos: eine Untersuchung ihrer Quellen (1889); K. Günther, T. von Cyrus und die Kämpfe in der orientalischen Kirche (1913); E. Schwartz, Zur Schriftstellerei T.s (Sitzungsberichte der Bayerischen Akad. der Wissenschaften, 1922, No. 1); M. M. Wagner, 'A chapter in Byzantine epistolography: the letters of T. of Cyrus' in Dumbarton Oaks Papers, IV (1948); Y. Azéma, Théodoret de Cyr d'après sa correspondance (1952); P. Canivet, Histoire d'une entreprise apologétique au Ve siècle (1957). R.B.

Theodore the Studite (*759; †826), Byzantine theologian. He became Abbot of the important Studite house in Constantinople but was exiled for his violent iconophile views. After his death he was canonized. He left numerous writings, mainly sermons and letters and some poetry, all of which reveal him as an inspired interpreter of the monastic way of life. J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, XCIX (1860; with Lat. tr.); A. Mai and J. Cozza-Luzi, Nova Patrum bibliotheca, VIII–IX (1877–88); E. Auvray, Theodori parva catechesis (1891); poems ed. P. Speck (1968).

A. Gardner, T. of Studium (1905; now needs revision); I. Hausherr, Saint Théodore Studite: l'homme et l'ascète (1926; with biblio.).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theodulf of Orleans (*North Spain c. 760; †c. 821), Carolingian poet of Gothic race. Widely read in the Latin classics, the Fathers and the Christian Latin poets, he became one of the brightest ornaments of the court of Charlemagne, who made him Bishop of Orleans and employed him as a missus dominicus. Under Louis the Pious he was imprisoned, and in his prison he is said to have composed his Palm Sunday poem Gloria, laus et honor, part of which became a processional hymn. His poems carry on the rhetorical tradition and are valuable historical and cultural documents, especially Ad Carolum regem and Versus contra iudices.

Ed. E. Dümmler in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Poeti Latini aevi Carolini, I (1881); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, L (1907); Migne, Patrologia Latina, CV (1851).

C. Cuissard, Théodulfe, évêque d'Orléans (1892). F.J.E.R.

Theodulus Monachus: see Thomas Magistros.

Theognis, Greek elegiac poet from Megara (6th century B.C.). A large collection of short poems (some certainly spurious) has come down under his name. Maxims of general application (often addressed to a certain Cynrus) are found together with verses of a political colouring: the latter seek to protect the privileges of the aristocracy against democratic encroachments.

Eds: D. Young (1961); J. M. Edmonds, Elegy and Iambus (1931; with tr.); T. Hudson-Williams, The Elegies of T. (1910; with comm.); M. L. West, Iambi et elegi Graeci, I (1971).

J. Kroll, T. Interpretationen (1936); C. M. Bowra, Early Greek Elegists (1938). J.T.H.

Theophanes 'the Confessor' (†818), Byzantine historian. He entered the monastery he had founded near Sigriane on the sea of Marmora. He opposed Leo V's iconoclastic policy and was therefore exiled to Samothrace. His Chronographia, written c. 810–815 to complete the work of his friend George* Syncellus, covers the period 284–813. It is particularly valuable for the 7th and 8th centuries because it appears to draw on sources now lost, and for the period of Theophanes' own life when it is probably to some extent based on oral evidence. In style he stands mid-way between classical and popular Greek. A Latin translation was made c. 873–875 by the Papal librarian Anastasius. In both the Greek and the Latin worlds Theophanes was much used by later chroniclers.

Chronographia (crit. ed. C. de Boor, 2 vols, 1883–85); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CVIII (1863; with Lat. tr.); L. Breyer, Bilderstreit und Arabersturm in Byzanz (1957; part. Ger. tr.).

G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theophanes Continuatus, the title of a work apparently commissioned by the 10th-century

Byzantine Emperor Constantine* VII Porphyrogenitus. The first four books, continuing Theophrastus* from 813 to 867, and Bk V on Basil I (867–886) are strongly pro-Macedonian, and Bk V appears to have been written by Constantine himself. Bk VI, 886–961 (where it breaks off abruptly), drawing largely on Georgius Continuatus, is pro-Lecapenid and was probably commissioned later in Nicephorus II Phocas' reign.

J.M.H.

Ed. I. Bekker (1838; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CIX (1863; with Lat. tr.).

H. G. Nickels, 'The Continuatio Theophrasti' in Trans. and Proc. Amer. Philol. Assoc., LXVIII (1937); R. J. H. Jenkins, 'The classical background of the Scriptores post Theophrastum' in Dumbarton Oaks Papers, VIII (1954); G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theophrastus OF ERESUS (*c. 370; †c. 286 B.C.), Greek philosopher. He went to Athens before the death of Plato*, but soon afterwards joined Aristotle* in Assos and Mitylene: he became Aristotle's most notable pupil and succeeded him as head of the Peripatetic school in 323/322. He wrote a great deal, on all the subjects studied by his master. The surviving works include Metaphysics, Enquiry Into Plants, Aetiology of Plants and some minor scientific treatises; the Characters, his most readable book, is a collection of descriptions of typical bad characters. His history of physics survives in quotations and provides good evidence for the views of early philosophers. After Aristotle's creative enterprise, what was needed was consolidation and detailed research: this was admirably supplied by Theophrastus' diligent scholarship.

H. Diels, Doxographi Graeci (1879); Characters (ed. idem, 1910; ed. with tr. J. M. Edmonds, 1929); Historia plantarum (ed. with tr. A. F. Hort, 2 vols, 1916); Metaphysics (ed. and tr. W. D. Ross and F. H. Fobes, 1929); De lapidibus (ed. D. E. Eichholz, 1965).—Coll. texts (ed. F. Wimmer, 1854–64).

O. Regenbogen, 'T. von Eresos' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der klassischen Altertumswissenschaft, supp. V (1950; most complete account).—O. Navarre, Caractères de Théophraste (1924); R. Walzer, Magna Moralia und aristotelische Ethik (1929); G. Senn, Entwicklung der biologischen Forschungsmethode in der Antike (1933); F. Dirlmeier, Die Oikeiosis-Lehre Theophrasts (1937); R. Strömberg, Theophrastea (1937); I. M. Bochenski, La logique de Théophraste (1947); P. Steinmetz, Die Physik des Theophrast (1964).

D.J.F.

Theophylact of Bulgaria (THEOPHYLACT HEPHAESTUS) (†c. 1118), Archbishop of Ochrida, Byzantine scholar. He was tutor to Michael VII's son and later (perhaps in Alexius I Comnenus' reign) head of the Bulgarian Church. His writings include theological commentaries, poems, letters and speeches. They are important for Bulgarian history and for their reflection of the learning and interests of an educated Byzantine of the late 11th century.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXXIII–CXXVI (1864; with Lat. tr.).

A. Leroy-Molinghen, 'Prolégomènes à une édition critique des "Lettres"' in Byzantion, XIII (1938); G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958); P. Gautier, 'Le discours de Théophylacte de Bulgarie à l'autocrator Alexis I Comnène' in Rev. des Études Byzantines, XX (1962).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theophylact Simocattes (fl. first half 7th century), Byzantine historian. According to Photius* he was a high official under Heraclius. His letters and Quaestiones physicae are in the nature of youthful exercises. His History covers Maurice's reign (582–602). He had access to official documents and used contemporary oral evidence and, in spite of an antiquarian flavour and a weakness for tall stories, his work is of considerable historical value.

J.M.H.

Crit. ed. C. de Boor (1887); ed. I. Bekker (1834; with Lat. tr.); Quaestiones physicae (ed. L. Massa Positano, 1953).

O. Veh, Untersuchungen zu dem byzantinischen Historiker Th. S. (1957); G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Theopompus (*Chios 376 B.C.), Greek historian, pupil in Athens of Isocrates*. Author of Hellenica, continuing Thucydides* from 410 to 394, Philippica, a discursive account of the Greek world in the time of Philip II of Macedonia, and minor works, all surviving in excerpts. Combining pathos with rhetoric, he sought to win the emotional participation of the reader in the events recounted.

F. Jacoby, Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker, IIB and IID (1929–30).

E. Meyer, T' Hellenika (1909); W. Schranz, T' Philippika (1912); A. Momigliano, 'Studi sulla storiografia . . . I: Teopompo' in Rivista di filol., LIX (1931); W. R. Connor, T. and Fifth Century Athens (1968).

R.B.

Thériault, Yves (*Quebec 28 XI 1915; †21 IV 1942 Germaine Blanchet), Canadian novelist and story-writer. His first book of short stories attracted immediate attention by its power of tragic symbolism, its characters being rather embodiments of primitive instincts than persons. This symbolic quality has continued, but with increasing attention to character-drawing, in subsequent books, in which there is a growing sense of irony. Thériault is a prolific writer, in English as well as French, and has explored a wide variety of subject-matter including the problems of ethnic groups such as Indians, Eskimos and Jews.

Contes pour un homme seul (1944); La fille laide (1950); Le dompteur d'ours (1951); Les vendeurs du temple (1951); Aaron (1954); Agaguk (1958; tr. M. Chapin, 1963); Ashini (1960; tr. idem, 1961); Les commettants de Caridad (1961); Amour au goût de mer (1961); La rose de pierre (1964); L'appelante (1967).

J. Ménard, 'Y. T. ou l'évolution d'un romancier' in Rev. Dominicaine, LXVI (1960).

B.K.S. (R.Su.)

Thério, ADRIEN, pseud. of ADRIEN THÉRIEAULT (*Saint-Modeste, Quebec 15 VIII 1925), Canadian novelist, critic, story writer and Professor. Editor of the annual review of literary activities Livres et Auteurs québécois and of two anthologies of French-Canadian literature.

Les brèves années (1953); La soif et le mirage (1960); Mes beaux meurtres (1961); Le printemps qui pleure (1962); Un paten chez les pingouins (1970).—CRITICISM: Jules Fournier, journaliste de combat (1955); Le mors aux flanc (1965). R.Su.

Thespis (fl. 6th century B.C.), the first Athenian tragic poet. He won a victory c. 534 but stories connect him with Solon* (c. 560). He is credited with the introduction of actor and masks into a performance previously wholly choral.

M.L.C.; T.B.L.W.

Bruno Snell, Tragicorum Graecorum fragmenta, I (1971).—A. W. Pickard-Cambridge, Dithyramb, Tragedy and Comedy (2nd ed. 1962). E.W.H.

Thibaut IV, COUNT OF CHAMPAGNE AND BRIE (*?30 V 1201; †?Pamplona 7 VII 1253), French poet. A member of the league of nobles who opposed the Queen-Mother, Blanche de Castile, after the death of Louis VIII in 1226, he soon deserted his associates. He succeeded his maternal uncle on the throne of Navarre in 1234 and led the Crusade of 1239. The view, once popular, that he was in love with Blanche rests on very slender foundations. His poetry, written mainly after 1234, consists of courtly lyrics in the conventional genres, with a few religious poems (chansons de croisade, serventois and songs to the Virgin) in addition. Some 60 poems are extant. A writer of considerable ease and fluency, thoroughly conventional in form and substance, and writing at a time when allegorical personification was invading the lyric, Thibaut is perhaps the most representative of the 13th-century poets.

A. Wallensköld, Les chansons de T. de C. (1925).
H. Petersen Dyggve, Onomastique des trouvères (1934). F.W.

Thibaut de Blaison (first mention 1206; †21 III/1 XII 1229), French lyric poet from Blaison (Maine-et-Loire). An important political figure, he was at the siege of Calatrava in 1212 and is mentioned as seneschal of Poitou in 1227. His 13 extant poems (five without name of author) include two pastourelles, two chansons de mal-mariée and eight chansons d'amour which, although conventional in sentiment, are as a whole light and melodious, using as they do refrains and short metres.

Eds: J. Brakelmann in Les plus anciens chansonniers français, II (1896); A. Pinget, Les chansons et pastourelles de Thibaut de B. (1930).

P. Paris in Histoire littéraire de la France, XXIII (1856); H. Petersen Dyggve, Onomastique des trouvères (1934). F.W.

Þiðrekssaga: see NIBELUNGENLIED, text and biblio.

Thierry, JACQUES NICOLAS AUGUSTIN (*Blois 10 V 1795; †Paris 22 V 1856), French historian. Thierry was born in modest circumstances, educated at the École Normale, acted as secretary to Saint-Simon*, and engaged in journalism before devoting himself to history. In 1826 he became blind, but his wife's devoted help enabled him to continue his work until he died. He was the author of a theory based on racial antagonisms, which he considerably modified in later life. He had a fondness for dramatic episode and for primitive simplicities, as well as a strong feeling for the picturesque aspects of history which makes him one of the great Romantic historians.

Dix ans d'études historiques (1834); Histoire de la conquête de l'Angleterre par les Normands (1825); Récits des temps mérovingiens (1840); Essai sur l'histoire de la formation et des progrès du Tiers État (1853).—Œuvres complètes (9 vols, 1883).

A. Augustin Thierry, A. T. (1922); A. Dupront, A. T. (1935). M.G.; J.P.R.

Thierry of Chartres (*before 1155), brother of the famous Platonist Bernard of Chartres, whose writings have not survived, was Chancellor of the school of Chartres (1141). His Heptateuchon is a manual of teaching of the liberal arts, which included the study of classical authors. His De septem diebus et sex operum distinctionibus is an attempt to reconcile Genesis with Plato's* Timaeus and the commentary of Chalcidius. He also wrote commentaries on Boethius*.

Ed. B. Hauréau as 'De sex dierum operibus' in Notices et extraits de quelques MSS latins de la Bibliothèque Nationale, I (1890); commentaries ed. N. M. Häring in Archives d'hist. doctrinale et littéraire (1956, 1958, 1960).

J. M. Parent, La doctrine de la création dans l'école de Chartres (1938); P. Delhaye in Mediaeval Stud., XI (1949). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Thijm: see Alberdingk Thijm.

Thoby-Marcellin, PHILIPPE (*1904), Haitian poet and novelist. Influenced by P. J. Toulet* and Apollinaire*, he is a love and nature poet. His novels, written in collaboration with his brother, PIERRE MARCELIN, are mainly about peasant life with social comment. They have been much admired by the American critic Edmund Wilson*.

VERSE: La négresse adolescente (1932); Dialogue avec la femme endormie (1941); Lago-Lago (intro. Valéry Larbaud, 1943); À fonds perdu (Paris, 1953).—NOVELS: Canapé-Vert (New York, 1944; Eng. tr. under same title, ibid., 1944); La bête de Musseau (ibid., 1946; with intro. Edmund Wilson, London, 1951); Le crayon de Dieu (1952; tr. The Pencil of God, Cambridge, Mass. and London, 1951); Tous les hommes sont fous (New York, 1970; tr. All Men Are Mad, intro. Edmund Wilson, ibid., 1970). D.P.

Thoma, LUDWIG (*Oberammergau 21 I 1867; †Rottach 26 VIII 1921), German humorist, prose writer and poet. Editor of the outstanding German periodical Simplizissimus, he was an ingenious creator of comic Bavarian types, a master of naughty verse in the tradition of Wilhelm Busch*, and a brilliant narrator of humorous episodes.

Moral (comedy; 1909; tr. H. Bernstein, 1909).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Erinnerungen (1919); Ein Leben in Briefen (1963).—Gesammelte Werke (ed. A. Knaus, 8 vols, 1956).

F. Dehnow, L. T. (1925); E. Hederer, L. T. (1941); R. Zierch, L. T. (1964); G. Thumser, L. T. und seine Welt (1966). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Thomas (author of Horn), 12th-century Anglo-Norman poet (no certain biography). His romance of Horn may be based ultimately on English or Scandinavian tradition, but as he tells it it is a highly romanticized epic in the Old French style exploiting the theme of 'exile and return' and bringing in many of the stock motifs used in the French literature of the time.

Ed. M. K. Pope (2 vols: I, text, 1955; II, intro., rev. and completed T. B. W. Reid, 1964).

W. H. Schofield, 'The story of Horn and Rimenheld' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. Amer., XVIII (1903); M. K. Pope, 'The romance of Horn and King Horn' in Medium Aevum, XXV (1956); S. Hofer, 'Horn et Rimel' in Romanische Forschungen, LXX (1958). F.W.

Thomas (author of Tristan), 12th-century French poet who wrote in England, possibly at the court of Henry II. The concluding episodes of his Tristan are still extant, and a good idea of the lost portion can be formed from three foreign adaptations—the Norse Tristramssaga (13th century), the poem of Gottfried* von Strassburg and the Middle English Sir Tristrem. He adapts the archetypal version of the Tristan poem for a courtly audience. Strongly influenced in technique by Wace*, he makes the story illustrate the ideal of constancy in love.

Laboured dialectical analyses by a character of his own attitude in a given situation are characteristic of the extant portions of the poem. The style is somewhat stiff and heavy, contrasting markedly with the melodious fluency of Gottfried. The poem is posterior to Wace's Brut and almost certainly earlier than the Cliges of Chrétien* de Troyes. (See also TRISTAN AND ISEULT.)

Ed. B. Wind (1960); J. Bédier, Le roman de Tristan par T. (2 vols, 1902–05; with reconstruction of the lost portion); Eng. tr. (completed from Tristramssaga) R. S. Loomis (1931).

R. S. Loomis, 'Tristan and the house of Anjou' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XVII (1922); M. D. Legge in Anglo-Norman Literature (1963). F.W.

Thomas, DYLAN MARLAIS (*Swansea 27 X 1914; †1936 Caitlin Macnamara; †St Vincent's Hospital, New York 9 XI 1953), Anglo-Welsh poet and writer. Left Swansea for London as a young man and there found fellow avant-garde artists. Later he returned to Wales, to Laugharne and a temporary security. A heavy, sociable drinker, this trait was cruelly exposed by his fame, and resulted in his early death while on a successful poetry-reading tour in America. His poetry was energized by his concern with the process of life and death, his 'womb-tomb' obsession. Language, too, he regarded as having its own energy and life, and poetry was that organic form produced by the breeding of images. Acutely sensitive to the suggestiveness of words and the rhetorical flourishes of sound, he was also a master-craftsman and painstaking worker. His labour was always for clarity, and it was in that direction that his poetry moved after the obscurity of some of his early work.

His play Under Milk Wood (1954), full of dazzling language, shrewdness of observation, and warmth of sentiment, was an instant and worldwide success. His short stories reveal, explore and tap the source of his literary power—his childhood in a Welsh seaside town. He is a very powerful and arresting voice among recent British poets.

VERSE: Eighteen Poems (1934); Twenty-Five Poems (1936); Deaths and Entrances (1946); Collected Poems (1952).—Adventures in the Skin Trade (novel; 1955).—STORIES: The Map of Love (incl. poems; 1939); Portrait of the Artist as a Young Dog (1940); A Prospect of the Sea (ed. Daniel Jones, 1955).—The Doctor and the Devils (film scenario; 1953).—Quite Early One Morning (broadcasts; pref. Aneurin Talfan Davies, 1954).—Selected Letters (ed. C. FitzGibbon, 1966); Letters to Vernon Watkins (ed. Vernon Watkins, 1957); Poet in the Making; The Notebooks of D. T. (ed. Ralph Maud, 1968).—Early Prose Writings (ed. W. Davies, 1972).

H. Treece, D. T.: 'Dog Among the Fairies' (1949); E. Olson, The Poetry of D. T. (1954); J. A. Ralph, D. T.: A Bibliography (1956); Caitlin

Thomas, Leftover Life to Kill (1957); D. T.: The Legend and the Poet (ed. E. W. Tedlock, 1960); J. M. Brinnin, Casebook on D. T. (1960); D. Holbrook, Llareggub Revisited (1962); W. York Tindall, A Reader's Guide to D. T. (1962); R. Maud, Entrances to D. T.'s Poetry (1963) and D. T. in Print (1971); H. H. Kleinman, The Religious Sonnets of D. T. (1963); J. Ackerman, D. T.: Life and Work (1964); C. FitzGibbon, The Life of D. T. (1965); D. T. Collection of Critical Essays (ed. C. B. Cox, 1966); W. T. Moynihan, The Craft and Art of D. T. (1966); D. Cleverdon, The Growth of Under Milk Wood (1969). M.W.T.

Thomas, GWYN (*Rhondda 1913), Anglo-Welsh novelist and short-story writer. Once Spanish teacher in Barry, South Wales, but now totally involved in writing. He is a magnificent comic writer of enormous verbal ingenuity and imaginative inventiveness. Much of his best work comes from his experience of the cosmopolitan vitality and the grim depression of the Rhondda of his youth. He is a brilliant spontaneous talker and lecturer.

The Keep (play; 1962).—NOVELS: The Dark Philosophers (1946); The Alone to the Alone (1947); All Things Betray Thee (1949); The World Cannot Hear You (1951); Now Lead Us Home (1952); A Frost on My Frolic (1953); The Stranger at My Side (1954); A Point of Order (1956); The Love Man (1958).—SHORT STORIES: Where Did I Put My Pity? (1946); Gazooka (1957); Ring Delirium 123 (1960).

Glyn Jones, The Dragon Has Two Tongues (1968). M.W.T.

Thomas, JOHANN, pseud. MATTHIAS JONSOHN, J. MOSTAIN (*Leipzig 1624; †1662 Marie Elisabeth von Bonn; †Altenburg 1679), German poet. After a successful career as Professor of law at Jena he became a diplomat and finally Chancellor of the Duchy of Saxe-Altenburg. His literary importance rests on his pastoral novel Damon und Lisille (1663), a delightful and individual precursor of the 18th-century novel of sincere feeling. It renders in stylized form his own love for his wife (Lisille = Elisabeth) in a manner unique in German baroque literature.

Keuscher Liebes-Beschreibung von Damon und der Lisillen (1663; 2nd ed. 1665; repr. ed. H. Singer and H. Gronemeyer, 1966).

K. Winkler, 'Ein lange vergessener Meisterroman des dt. Barocks und sein Verfasser' in Verhandlungen des Historischen Vereins für Oberpfalz und Regensburg, XCIV (1953); Herbert Singer, Der dt. Roman zwischen Barock und Rokoko (1963). L.W.F.

Thomas, (PHILIP) EDWARD (*Lambeth 3 III 1878; †1899 Helen Noble; †in action Arras 9 IV 1917), English poet and critic. During most of his short career he was condemned to writing books to order for a living, but wrote always with literary taste about poets and with feeling about nature. Killed in the War, he left poems whose lyrical beauty and passion greatly enhanced his reputation.

Collected Poems (1917; ed. Walter de la Mare, 1920, 1928).—The South Country (1909); Richard Jefferies: His Life and Work (1909); Swinburne, a Critical Study (1912).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: The Childhood of E. T. (1938); Letters From E. T. to Gordon Bottomley (1968).

Helen Thomas, As It Was (1926) and World Without End (1931).—H. Coombes, E. T. (1956); E. Farjeon, E. T.: The Last Four Years (1958); W. Cooke, E. T.: A Critical Biography (1970). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Thomas, RONALD STUART (*Cardiff 1913), Anglo-Welsh poet. He learned Welsh as an adult, and has been vicar first of Manafon, then of Eglwysfach, and now of Aberdaron. Critics were slow to recognize the quality of his eloquent, austere poetry. He writes of the elemental struggle for existence of the Welsh hill-farmer and of the Welsh nation, and ruthlessly examines their conditions of existence.

POETRY: Song at the Year's Turning (1955); Poetry for Supper (1958); Tares (1961); The Bread of Truth (1963); Pieta (1966); Not That He Brought Flowers (1968).—Sel. poems in Penguin Modern Poets, I (1962).

Gwyn Jones, 'The new Anglo-Welsh writers' in The Welsh Anvil, I (1949); C. Price, 'The poetry of R. S. T.', ibid., IV (1952); M. Merchant, 'R. S. T. since 1950' in Crit. Quart., II.4 (1960); R. George Thomas, R. S. T. (Writers and Their Works), CLXVI; 1964, 'The poetry of R. S. T.' in Rev. Eng. Lit., III.4 (1962) and 'Humanus Sum: a second look at R. S. T.' in Anglo-Welsh Rev., XVIII.42 (1968). M.W.T.

Thomas a Kempis, actually THOMAS HEMERKEN (*Kempen, Rhineland c. 1380; †25 VII 1471), Dutch mystic, author of the Imitatio Christi. A pupil at the chapter school at Deventer at the age of 12, Thomas soon came under the spiritual guidance of Florens Radewijns*. In 1399 he went to the monastery of the Canons Regular, St Agnietenberg near Zwolle; in 1406 he entered the Order and in 1413 or 1414 was ordained priest. Except for an interruption of three years on account of the Utrecht schism (1429–32) he lived there until his death.

Thomas' writings are among the most widely circulated ascetic literature; they have been translated into well-nigh every European language and the number of their editions surpasses 3,000. This success is due to the poetic qualities of his prose, but more especially to the contents, which show both true devotion and deep psychological insight. Although Thomas has written a number of spiritual poems he is known to us chiefly as a prose writer, having written tracts (Soliloquium animae, Hortulus rosarum, Vallis liliorum), meditations, sermons, biographies (of Geert Groote*, Florens Radewijns etc.), a chronicle of the monastery of St Agnietenberg and one short work in Middle Dutch: Van goede woerden to horen ende die te spreken.

Thomas' main work is De imitatione Christi, after the Bible the most widely circulated Christian religious book. Within a few years after its first appearance it was known all over Europe. Ever since the 17th century its authorship has been a subject of bitter controversies. It has been variously ascribed to Joh. Gersen of Vercelli (defended again lately), Jean Gerson*, Chancellor of Paris University, and to Geert Groote. Although the latter candidature, for the first time defended by Jacobus van Ginneken, has found adherents, the case for Thomas' authorship has in fact only been strengthened by this controversy.

Opera omnia (ed. M. J. Pohl, 1907–22).—The Founders of the New Devotion (biogs tr. J. P. Arthur, 1905); The Imitation of Christ (tr. L. Sherley-Price, 1953); Middle Dutch tr. (ed. with intro. and notes C. C. de Bruin, 1954).

A. de Backer, Essai bibliographique sur le livre De imitatione Christi (1864; repr. 1966).—L. M. J. Delaissé, Le manuscrit autographe de T. a K. et 'L'imitation de Jésus-Christ' (2 vols, 1956); J. Huyben and P. Debogne, L'auteur ou les auteurs de l'Imitation (1957). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Thomas Aquinas, St (*Roccasecca, S. Italy 1224/25; †Fossanova 7 III 1274), perhaps the greatest of Christian theologians. Born into the feudal nobility—his father was Count of Aquino—Thomas, after attending the University of Naples, to the displeasure of his family became a Dominican Friar (1243/44). He studied under Albertus* Magnus at Cologne, and then, at Paris in 1252, began his own career as a teacher. Called in 1259 to teach in the Papal Curia, he greatly extended, in this period, his mastery of Aristotelian philosophy, with the aid of fresh translations made from the Greek by his fellow-Friar William of Moerbeke*. Returning to Paris in 1268, he found his powers stretched to the utmost by a wave of Averroistic rationalism in the University. The next three years brought his thought to maturity. After a brief interlude at Naples he was called to attend the Council of Lyons, but died on the way.

The bulk of St Thomas' work (all in Latin) consists of expositions and discussions of Christian teaching and commentaries on Aristotle*. Considered as literature it represents, as a whole, scholastic Latin at its finest, while his mastery of medieval Latin verse-forms is shown in the hymns he composed for the office of Corpus Christi. The authenticity of an Italian sonnet ascribed to him is doubtful.

Opera omnia (official 'Leonine' ed., Rome, 1882 ff.).—Quaestiones disputatae (Paris, 1926 ff.); Aristotelian commentaries (Turin, 1926–34); Summa contra Gentiles (repr. from 'Leonine' ed. Rome, 1934); Opuscula, etc. (Paris, 1949 ff.); Summa theologiae (general ed. T. Gilby, with trs, London, 1963 ff.; best ed. for Eng. readers).

E. Gilson, Le Thomisme (5th ed. 1948; Eng. tr., with valuable 'catalogue' of T.'s works by I. Eschmann, The Christian Philosophy of St T. A., 1957); M. D. Chenu, Introduction à l'étude de St T. d'A. (1950); A. Walz, St T. A.: A Biographical Study (Eng. tr., 1951); K. Foster, The Life of St T. A.: Biographical Documents (1959); V. J. Bourke, A. Search for Wisdom (1965).

K.F.

Thomasin von Zerclære, or DE CERCLARIA (c. 1185–1238), canon of Aquileia, Italian author of the first comprehensive moral philosophy for the German nobility, Der wälsche Gast (1215–16; 15,000 lines). Its programme of education and speculum are essentially practical; more learned (Bible, Cicero*, Boethius*, William* of Conches) is the review of virtues and vices. Digressions on German romance ('fictions', but useful for the unschooled), and on Walther* von der Vogelweide (whose anti-Papal poems Thomasin regrets). He was often copied and influential. (See Freidank*; Hugo* von Trimberg.)

Ed. H. Rückert (1852; repr. 1965).

H. Teske, Th. von Z., der Mann und sein Werk (1933); J. Müller, Studien zur Ethik und Metaphysik des Th. von Z. (1935); F. W. von Kries, Textkritische Untersuchung (1967). F.P.P.

Thomas Magistros, or THEODULUS MONACHUS from his monastic name (fl. 13th–14th centuries), Byzantine scholar of the literary circles of Andronicus II Palaeologus. His main work was a philological text-book; he also left scholia on classical authors, orations and letters.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXLV (1865; with Lat. tr.); Ecloga vocum Atticarum (ed. F. Ritschl, 1832).

J. Irigoin, Histoire du texte de Pindare (1952); A. Turyn, Studies in the Manuscript Tradition of the Tragedies of Sophocles (1952) and The Byzantine Manuscript Tradition of the Tragedies of Euripides (1957); A. Tuilier, Recherches critiques sur la tradition du texte d'Euripide (1968).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Thomas of Cantimpré (*Leuw St-Pierre 1201; †15 V 1272), Dominican preacher and theologian, studied at Cologne under Albertus* Magnus. His activities extended into Germany, Belgium and France. In addition to several works on philosophy, theology and hagiography, he wrote an encyclopaedia on the nature and properties of creatures entitled De natura rerum and an allegorical treatise on bees, called Bonum universale de apibus.

Eine altfranzösische moralisierende Bearbeitung des Liber de monstruosis hominibus Orientis aus T. von C.s De Naturis Rerum (ed. A. Hilka, 1933); P. Kirsch, Des T. von C. Buch der Wunder und denkwürdigen Vorbilder (1875).

A. Kaufman, T. von Chantimpré (1899); L. Thorndike, A History of Magic and Experimental Science, II (1923); G. Sarton, Introduction to the History of Science, II (1931); P. Aiken, 'The animal history of Albertus Magnus and T. of C.' in Speculum, XXII (1947); A. C. Crombie, Medieval and Early Modern Science (2nd rev. ed., 2 vols, 1959). R.R.R.

Thomas of Celano (*Celano c. 1200; †c. 1255), joined the Franciscans in 1215 and in 1221 went to Germany, where he became deputy provincial minister. On his return to Italy, Gregory IX asked him to write the official life of St Francis*. The result was the Legenda prima, written under definite instructions, with significant omissions (1229–30). In 1244 a second life was commissioned, and Celano now felt himself free to write 'from the point of view of one who wished to see the ideals and wishes of St Francis carried out to the letter' (Moorman). He is probably the author of the Dies Irae, which was adopted by the Church as the Sequence in the Mass for the Dead. He also composed a treatise on the miracles of St Francis and two Sequences in his honour. F.J.E.R.

S. Francisci Assisiensis vita et miracula auctore Fr. Thoma de C. (ed. E. Alençon, 1906; ed. Franciscans of Quaracchi, Analecta Franciscana, X, 1926–41); The Lives of S. Francis of Assisi by Brother T. of C. (tr. A. G. Ferrers Howell, 1908).

F. Ermini, Il 'Dies Irae' (1928); J. R. H. Moorman, The Sources for the Life of S. Francis of Assisi (1940). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Thomas Simonsson: see Tomas Simonsson.

Thomas the Rhymer: see Erceldoune, THOMAS OF.

Thomissen, HANS (*Hygum 1 III 1532; ∞1561 Margrethe Lauridsdatter, ∞1563 Magdalene Madsdatter; †Copenhagen 22 IX 1573), Danish hymnist. Headmaster at Ribe and later Dean in Copenhagen, he edited a well-arranged and beautifully printed hymn-book, to which he himself contributed various hymns, original as well as translations; it was used for the next 130 years.

Den danske Psalmebog, tilsammen set aff H. T. (1569; facs. ed. 1933). E.B.

Thompson, FRANCIS (*Preston 18 XII 1859; †London 13 XI 1907), English poet and author of a few posthumously published prose works, including an Essay on Shelley (1909). His poetry, for which he often employs irregular Pindaric measures, shows profound mystical experience. R.M.H.

Works (ed. W. Meynell, 3 vols, 1913).—Poems (1893; incl. 'The Hound of Heaven'); Sister Songs (1895); New Poems (1897); Life of St Ignatius Loyola (1909); Life and Labours of St John Baptist de la Salle (1911).

W. Blunt, F. T. (1907); G. A. Beacock, F. T. (1912); E. Meynell, Life of F. T. (1913); R. Mergoz, F. T. (1927); V. F. MacNabb, F. T. and Other Essays (1935); P. van K. Thompson, T. (1961). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Thomsen, GRÍMUR ÞORGRÍMSSON (*Bessastaðir 15 V 1820; ∞1870 Jakobína Jónsdóttir; †ibid. 27 XI 1896), Icelandic poet. The son of a jeweller, Thomsen studied at Copenhagen and obtained a degree for a thesis on Byron*. From 1847 to 1866 he served in the Danish Foreign Office. In 1867 he settled down in Iceland, became a member of the Althing and was, for a time, editor of Ísafold. His many poems on historical incidents and persons, often with telling symbolic significance, are most impressive. Heroism is his favourite theme, which he depicts in rugged language through powerfully drawn situations and characters.

Ljóðmæli (1880, 1895, 1906; ed. S. Jónsson, 2 vols, 1934; ed. S. Nordal, 1969).

S. Nordal, 'G. T.' in Eimreiðin, XXIX (1923); R. Beck, 'G. T.—A pioneer Byron student' in Jour. Eng. and Germanic Philol., XXVII (1928); B. Kristjánsson, Um ljóðmæli G. T. (1935).

R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Thomson, JAMES (*Ednam 7 IX 1700; †Richmond 27 VIII 1748), Scottish poet. After some training as a divinity student at Edinburgh University, he left for London and a literary career. His poems earned him the patronage of Lyttelton*, and he spent the last decade of his life moving in literary and social circles. His dramatic work is feeble; but there is some delightful poetry in his Spenserian imitation, The Castle of Indolence (1748; ed. A. D. McKillop, 1961), and good blank verse in Liberty. His best work is The Seasons (particularly before Lyttelton helped to revise it)—a four-book blank-verse review of the year, rich in natural description, with reflective digressions, which powerfully influenced not only Burns* and Wordsworth*, but also Continental descriptive poets. His diction is Latinate and Miltonic; he displays the scientific and philosophical interests of his day; and the poems contain much finely detailed and sensitive description of rural scenes in many moods.

Winter (1726), Summer (1727), Spring (1728), pub. with Autumn as The Seasons (1730; rev. ed. 1744); verse contributions to J. Ralph's Miscellany (1729); Sophonisba (1730); Liberty; a Poem in five Parts, I–III (1735), IV–V (1736); The Masque of Alfred (with Mallet; 1740; contains 'Rule! Britannia'); Tancred and Sigismunda (1745); Coriolanus (1749).—Works (2 vols, 1730–36, 1738; ed. Lord Lyttelton, 4 vols, 1750); Poetical Works

(ed. J. Logie Robertson, 1908); Letters and Documents (ed. A. D. McKillop, 1958).

M. M. Cameron, L'Influence des Saisons ... en France 1759-1810 (1927); A. D. McKillop, The Background of T.'s Seasons (1942); M. Nicolson, Newton Demands the Muse (1946); D. Grant, J. T. (1951); P. M. Spacks, The Varied God: A Critical Study of the Seasons (1959); R. Cohen, The Art of Discrimination ... The Seasons and the Language of Criticism (1964). J.K.

Thomson, JAMES, pseud. 'B. V.' or 'BYSSHE VANOLIS' (*Port Glasgow 23 XI 1834; †London 3 VI 1882), Scottish poet. He spent a wandering and ill-fortuned life as army schoolmaster, clerk, mining agent in America, and journalist. Much of his verse was contributed to The National Reformer (1860-75). In The City of Dreadful Night (1874), a poem of 21 sections in a variety of stanza-forms, he expresses a profound melancholy and despair with intensity and poetic power. Other poems, e.g. 'Sunday at Hampstead', show him in a lighter vein.

The City of Dreadful Night and other Poems (1880); Vane's Story (1881); Essays and Phantasies (1881); A Voice from the Nile (with memoir by B. Dobell, 1884); Poetical Works (ed. idem, 1895); Biographical and Critical Studies (1896); Poems and Some Letters (ed. A. Ridler, 1963).

I. Walker, J. T. (B. V.): A Critical Study (1950); C. Vachaut, J. T. (Paris, 1964); K. H. Byron, The Pessimism of J. T. (B. V.) (1965); W. D. Schaefer, J. T. (B. V.): Beyond 'The City' (1965). J.K.

Thorarensen, BJARNI VIGFÚSSON (*Brautarholt 30 XII 1786; ∞1820 Hildur Bogadóttir; †Möðruvellir 24 VIII 1841), Icelandic poet. Thorarensen came from a family of means and became a judge and, in 1833, governor of north and east Iceland. As a student in Copenhagen he came under the influence of Steffens* and Oehlenschläger* and devoted much of his time to literature. On his return to Iceland in 1811 he championed the new Romanticism and became the first great writer of the new era of Icelandic literature. His production, which was limited to one slight volume, includes patriotic, nature, satirical and elevated love poems. R.G.P.

Kvæði (1847, 1884); Úrvalslið (1934; with introductory essay by K. Albertson); Ljóðmæli (ed. J. Helgason, 2 vols, 1935).

Þ. Gíslason, 'B. T.' in Lögrétta, XXVII (1932); R. Beck, 'B. T.—Iceland's pioneer Romanticist' in Scand. Stud. and Notes, XV (1938); S. Guðmundsson in Samtið og saga, III (1946).

R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Thorbecke, JOHAN RUDOLF (*Zwolle 14 I 1798; ∞1836 Adelheid Solger; †The Hague 4 V 1872), Dutch liberal statesman and prose writer; Professor at Ghent (1825), at Leiden (1831), drafted the Dutch Constitution (1848) and was Prime Minister in three Cabinets.

Aanteekeningen op de Grondwet (1839); Historische Schetsen (1860); Parlementaire Redevoeringen (11 vols, 1900-12).

Th. C. L. Wijnmalen, 'J. R. T. Eene Bibliographie' in Levensberichten Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (1875). J.W.W.

Þórðarson, ÞÓRBERGUR (*Hali in Suðursveit 12 III 1888; ∞1932 Margrét Jónsdóttir), Icelandic essayist, poet and biographer. A farmer's son, Þórðarson studied at the University of Iceland and became interested in Oriental philosophy, theology and spiritualism; finally he became an ardent socialist. His first poems, Hálfir skóssólar (1915), were at once noteworthy for their originality and for the revolt they represented against the current Romanticism. His essays Ljós úr austri (1919) were influenced by his study of Oriental philosophy, and in 1924, when he had turned to socialism, appeared the most important of his essays, Bréf til Láru, containing an often vitriolic satire on a wide variety of subjects. Their publication resulted in his being deprived of his post as a teacher. As belles-lettres they are outstanding and have exercised a profound influence on the development of modern Icelandic prose. His six-volume biography of Rev. Árni Þórarinnsson is outstandingly entertaining.

VERSE: Spaks manns spjarir (1917); Hvítir hrafnar (1922).—PROSE: Pistilinn skrifði (1933); Rauða hettan (1935); Íslenzkur aðall (1938); Ofvitinn (2 vols, 1940-41); Æfisaga Árna Þórarinnssonar (6 vols, 1945-50); Sálmurinn um blómið (2 vols, 1954-55); Ritgerðir (2 vols, 1960); Í Unuhúsi (1962); Einar ríki (2 vols, 1967-68).

S. Einarsson, Þ. Þ. fimmtugur (1939).

R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Thoreau, HENRY DAVID (*Concord, Mass. 12 VII 1817; †ibid. 6 V 1862), American poet and essayist. After graduation from Harvard in 1837 he tried teaching but considered his effort a failure. Emerson* at this time led Concord's intellectual and spiritual life; Thoreau became his friend, joined the Transcendental Club and contributed to The Dial. A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers (1849) records in his pungent style an actual journey taken with his brother. His dramatic residence for two years in a cabin on Walden Pond resulted in Walden; or, Life in the Woods (1854), a remarkable symbolic study of Thoreau's experiment to discover the limits of his awareness. He published his insurgent essay, On The Duty of Civil Disobedience (1849), backing his decision not to pay taxes to a government which sanctioned slavery. He helped runaway slaves and supported John Brown with vigorous anti-slavery speeches. His poetry is crowded with images, rugged and uneven.

Excursions (1863); The Maine Woods (1864); Cape Cod (1865); A Yankee in Canada, with Anti-Slavery and Reform Papers (1866); Early Spring in Massachusetts (1881); Familiar Letters of H. D. T. (1894); Poems of Nature (1895).—The Heart of T.'s Journals (ed. O. Shepard, 1927); The Writings of H. D. T. (20 vols, 1906); Collected Poems of H. D. T. (ed. C. Bode, 1943); The Correspondence of H. D. T. (ed. W. Harding and C. Bode, 1958).

H. S. Canby, T. (1939); B. Atkinson, H. T., The Cosmic Yankee (1927); F. O. Matthiessen, American Renaissance (1941); J. L. Shanley, The Making of Walden (1957); P. Miller, Consciousness in Concord (1958); S. Paul, The Shores of America: T.'s Inward Exploration (1958); W. Harding, The Days of H. T. (1965); C. R. Anderson, The Magic Circle of Walden (1968); The Recognition of T. (ed. W. Slick, 1969). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Thoresby, RALPH (*Leeds 16 VIII 1658; †ibid. 16 X 1725), English antiquarian. His Ducatus Leodiensis (1691; ed. T. D. Whitaker, 1816), a topography of the town and parish of Leeds, with copious genealogies, was the first important work on Yorkshire antiquities to be published.

Diary and Correspondence (ed. J. Hunter, 4 vols, 1830–32). G.K.H.

Þorgilsson, ARI (*1067; †9 XI 1148), Icelandic historian, priest and chieftain. He was the founder of historical writing in Icelandic. In his Íslendingabók ('Book of the Icelanders') he relates the history of his country from the time of settlement, c. 870, until 1120. In an earlier lost edition he had also included information on the reigns of the Kings of Norway, and this was of great importance for 12th- and 13th-century historians in Norway and Iceland. Ari was a sober and critical recorder but his style shows he was a pioneer in vernacular literary composition. P.G.F.

Íslendingabók (ed. F. Jónsson, 1930); The Book of the Icelanders (ed. and tr. H. Hermannsson, 1930); Íslendingabók. Landnámabók (ed. J. Benediktsson, 1968).

E. Hagnell, Are fröde (1938); E. Arnórsson, Ari fróði (1942); B. Sigfússon, Um Íslendingabók (1944). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Thorild, THOMAS (*Svartaborg 18 IV 1759; †Greifswald 1 X 1808), Swedish poet, critic and optimistic pantheistic philosopher. Born THORÉN, he changed his name in 1785 (Thorild = Thors eld, 'Thor's fire'). After studies at Lund and work as a tutor, he entered the literary field in Stockholm by competing, in 1781, for a prize offered by the society Utile Dulci, with a poem, Passionerna, in unrhymed hexameters. This work led to a prolonged controversy with Kellgren* concerning the nature of poetry, form, the relative importance of imagination and reason, etc. It was interrupted by Thorild's studies at Uppsala (1787–88) and his journey to England (1788–90), but was continued in the prose manifesto En kritik öfver kritiker (1791). Thorild was first imprisoned, then banished, for his views on freedom, after the murder of Gustav* III (1792), and settled in Greifswald, where he became librarian and Professor in 1795. In Dithyramb (1786) he successfully combines feeling and form: but often his work, whether in prose or verse, is marred by excess of emotion, which makes him fragmentary and incoherent. In his admiration for German and English poetry, in his cult of the 'genius', he is one of the principal Swedish forerunners of Romanticism. He founded (1784) and ran the periodical Den Nya Granskaren.

PROSE: Om det allmänna förståndets frihet (1792); Om upplysningens princip (1793); Rätt, eller alla samhällens eviga lag (1795).—VERSE: Straffsången, eller Nytt försök till orimnad vers (1785); Harmen (1787); Göthamannasånger (1793, 1805–06; pub. 1819).—Samlade skrifter (ed. E. Geijer, 1819–35, incomplete; ed. P. Hansell, 1874, incomplete; ed. S. Arvidson, 1932 ff.); Thorilds brev (ed. L. Weibull and A. Karitz, 1899; incomplete).

B. von Beskow, 'Om den estetiska betydelsen av T.'s strid mot Kellgren och Leopold' in Svenska Akademiens handlingar, XLVIII (1873); Till T.'s minne (various authors; 1908); F. Böök, 'T.' in Stridsmän och sångare (1910); C. Marcus, 'Några Thorildsdikter' in Studier til Warburg (1912); A. Karitz, Tankelinjer hos T. (1913); A. Nilsson, T. (1915); R. G. Berg, Litterärkritik (1916); M. Lamm, Upplysningstidens romantik, II (1920); S. Arvidson, Den unge T. (1931) and T. och den franska revolutionen (1938); R. Fridholm, T. och antiken (1940); E. Cassirer, T.'s Stellung in der Geistesgeschichte des 18. Jh. (1941); O. Hellin, Religionsproblemet hos T. (1947); A. Nyman, Exilens filosofi (1956).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Þorláksson, JÓN (*Selárdalur 13 XII 1744; †Bægisá 21 X 1819), Icelandic poet. He was educated at Skálholt and ordained in 1768, but for various reasons he did not get a living until 1788. He was a prolific and popular composer of occasional verse, elegies and hymns but is most famous for his translations of foreign poems, especially Milton's* Paradise Lost. Both the subject-matter of such poems and the forms he used contributed greatly to a renewal of Icelandic poetry in the early 19th century.

Paradisarmissa (1828); Messias (1834–38); Íslensk Ljóðabók (ed. J. Sigurðsson, 2 vols, 1842–43); Ljóðmáli (ed. A. Björnsson, 1956).

R. Beck, J. Þ. Icelandic Translator of Pope and Milton (1957). P.G.F.

Thornton, BONNELL (*London II 1724; ∞1764 Sylvia Brathwaite; †ibid. 9 V 1768), English miscellaneous writer and wit, who started The Connoisseur with George Colman* the elder and diverted Johnson* and the Nonsense Club with his jokes, practical and literary.

An Ode on St Caecilia's Day, adapted to the Antient British Musick: the Salt Box, the Jew's Harp, the Marrow Bones and Cleavers, the Hum Strum or Hurdy Gurdy (1749; set to music and performed at Ranelagh); Comedies of Plautus (2 vols, 1767; not all his own work).

R. E. Tickell, Thomas Tickell and the 18th-Century Poets . . . (cont. unpub. letters and poems; 1931). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Thoroddsen, JÓN ÞÓRÐARSON (*Reykþólar, Barðaströnd 5 X 1819; ∞1854 Kristín Þorvaldsdóttir; †Leirá 8 III 1868), Icelandic novelist and poet. Of good family, he became prefect in the districts of Barðaströnd and Borgarfjörður, and a member of the Althing. In the literary field he towers over his contemporaries and immediate successors and is to be regarded as the father of the modern Icelandic novel, with Piltur og stúlka (1850) as the pioneer work in this respect. Here he reveals affinities with Scott*, but humorous characterization is his great virtue. Thoroddsen also wrote lyric poems of merit, although they are far less important than his fiction. Most representative are Ó, fjögur er vor fjósturfjörð, Rokkvísa, Vorid er komid and Vöggukvæði.

VERSE: Veidiför, gamanríma (1865); Kvæði (1871; 1919); Úrvalslið (1944).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Piltur og stúlka (1850; Lad and Lass, tr. A. M. Reeves, 1890); Maður og kona (1876).—Skáldsögur Jóns Thoroddsens (ed. S. J. Þorsteinsson, 2 vols, 1942).

S. J. Þorsteinsson, J. T. og skáldsögur hans (2 vols, 1943). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Thoroton, ROBERT (*Car Colston, Notts 1623; †ibid. 1678), English antiquary. His Antiquities of Nottinghamshire (1677) remains a principal source of local knowledge. G.K.H.

Thorpe, WILLIAM (fl. early 15th century), English prose writer and Lollard who set down an account of his examination for heresy (1407) before the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Examination (ed. A. W. Pollard, with modernized spelling, in 15th-Century Prose and Verse, 1903). R.W.B.

Thorsteinsson, STEINGRÍMUR (*Arnarstapi, Snæfellsnessýsla 19 V 1831; ∞1858 Lydia Wilstrup, ∞1890 Guðríður Eiríksdóttir; †Reykjavík 21 VIII 1913), Icelandic poet. The son of a provincial governor, Thorsteinsson grew up in a literary and cultivated home. He studied law and classical philology at Copenhagen, but also developed wide literary interests. He remained in Copenhagen writing and teaching until 1872 and later taught in Reykjavík until his death. As a Romantic poet his themes were patriotism, nature and love, and his poems have always been extremely popular. He is, however, even more significant as a great cultural influence in Iceland, particularly through his first-rate translations of Goethe*, Schiller*, Tegnér* and Byron*; and, most important, of the Arabian Nights and Shakespeare's* King Lear.

Gilbakkaljóð (1877; A Glenside Lay, tr. R. Fjeldsted, 1920); Ljóðmæli (1881, 1893, 1910, 1925; Heildarútgáfa frumsaminnna ljóða, 1958); Úrvalslið (ed. A. Thorsteinsson, 1939).

J. C. Poestion, S. T., Ein isländischer Dichter und Kulturbringer (1912). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Thovez, ENRICO (*Turin 10 XI 1869; †ibid. 16 II 1925), Italian poet, critic and painter. He advocated a return to the classical tradition, as exemplified by Leopardi*. In his verse he attempts to carry out his precepts. The polemical tone of his writings gave offence, especially Il pastore, il gregge e la zampogna (1910). Perhaps his most important achievement was to introduce American literature into Italy, and he was one of the first to appreciate Ungaretti*.

VERSE: Il poema dell'adolescenza (1901); Poemi d'amore e di morte (1922). B.M.

Thrale, MRS: see Piozzi, HESTER LYNCH.

Thrasylbulus: see Huet, CONRAD BUSKEN.

Thrasymachus of CHALCEDON (fl. c. 430–400 B.C., probably at Athens), Greek sophist and rhetorician, is portrayed by Plato* (Republic, i) as defending the thesis that justice is simply the interest of the strong. By using a simpler style (though combined with rhythmic effects) he helped to free oratory from the confined formalism of Gorgias*. J.H.K.

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, II (6th ed. 1951); L. Rademacher, Artium Scriptores (Vienna, 1951).

O. Navarre, Essai sur la rhétorique grecque avant Aristote (1900); E. Norden, Die antike Kunstprosa (2 vols, 1898; repr. 1909); J. F. Dobson, The Greek Orators (1919); A. and M. Croiset, Histoire de la littérature grecque, IV (1947). J.H.K. (S.U.)

Thucydides (*before 454; †c. 399 B.C.), Athenian historian. Probably a member of the Philaid family, to which Miltiades and Cimon belonged. As a general defeated by the Spartan Brasidas at Amphipolis in Thrace (424), he was exiled from Athens and spent the next 20 years partly on his Thracian estates and partly travelling in Peloponnesian-controlled or neutral territory, but returned to Athens after 404.

His history of the Peloponnesian War, in eight books, treats events from 433 to 411. The work is incomplete, having presumably been interrupted by the author's death.

Influenced alike by the sophists' radical criticism of the old ways of thought and by the methods of the Hippocratic doctors, Thucydides' approach to history is thoroughly rationalistic. All men, he believes, tend naturally to self-defence and self-aggrandizement. But in response to the stimulus of environment men and communities develop new characteristics, which may turn their individualism towards more social forms of conduct. Events fall into two classes, those resulting from purposive action based upon knowledge, and those independent of man's will and often beyond his understanding. Thus history, though infinitely variable, has recurring features and is in some degree predictable. A work of history which enables these recurring features to be recognized for what they are, as a medical casebook helps a practising doctor, is 'a thing of value for ever'.

The brilliance of Periclean Athens and the wavering leadership of the oligarchs led Thucydides to break with the traditions of his class. An admirer of the Periclean democracy, he judges subsequent Athenian history from its standpoint. Repelled by the sharpening class conflicts, he could not follow the more radical democrats.

His seriousness of purpose and the care which he took to obtain accurate information make him most trustworthy in matters of fact. The two questions with which Thucydidean scholarship is most concerned are that of the unity of the work and that of the speeches. Did he write his history as a whole after the war or did he write it bit by bit as events occurred? Does it thus reflect a single point of view or a series of changing ones? Opinion today inclines to a unitary view. Agreement is general that the speeches do correspond to real speeches, and most would agree that, where he had good information, he reproduces the main arguments actually used; elsewhere he may have put into the mouth of a speaker the arguments which his experience suggested such a man would use on such an occasion.

Esteemed in later antiquity and by the Byzantines for his style rather than for his content, Thucydides was made known to the West in Laurentius Valla's* Latin translation of 1452; 17th-century England knew him and appreciated him in Thomas Hobbes'* translation of 1629. He had great influence on Niebuhr* and Ranke* and through them on 19th-century European historiography. Today he is more than any other the 'historian's historian'.

H. Stuart Jones and J. E. Powell, Thucydidis Historiae (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1942); A. W. Gomme et al., A Historical Commentary on T. (4 vols, 1945-70); C. F. Smith, T. (4 vols, 1919-23; with tr.); C. Hude, Scholia in Thucydidem (1927).

F. M. Cornford, T. Mythistoricus (1907); W. R. M. Lamb, Clio Enthroned: A Study of Prose Form in T. (1914); C. F. Abbott, T.: Study in Historical Reality (1925); F. Taeger, T. (1925); E. Täubler, Die Archäologie des T. (1927); E. Schwartz, Das Geschichtswerk des T. (2nd ed. 1929); C. N. Cochrane, T. and the Science of History (1929); A. W. Gomme, Essays in Greek History and Literature (1937); J. H. Finley, T. (1942) and Three Essays on T. (1967); G. B. Grundy, T. and the History of His Age (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1948); D. Grene, Man in His Pride: A Study in the Political Philosophy of Plato and T. (1950); J. de Romilly, Histoire et raison chez Thucydide (1956) and T. and Athenian Imperialism (Eng. tr. 1963); H. D. Westlake, Individuals in T. (1968). R.B.

Thümmel, MORITZ AUGUST VON (*Schönefeld nr Leipzig 27 V 1738; †Coburg 26 X 1817), German poet and novelist. From 1761 to 1783 Thümmel was a high official in the Duchy of Coburg. In his last years he travelled extensively. His books unite whimsical sentiment with half-concealed sensuality after the manner of Sterne*. His principal work is the Reise.

Wilhelmine (novel; 1764); Die Inokulation der Liebe (verse; 1771); Reise in die mittäglichen Provinzen Frankreichs (1791-1805).—Sämtliche Werke (with biog. J. von Gruner; 7 vols, 1812-20). H.B.G.

Thurber, JAMES GROVER (*Columbus, Ohio 8 XII 1896; †2 XI 1961), American humorist. Much of his work appeared in the New Yorker magazine accompanied by his own fantastic cartoons. His work unites realism with fantasy producing a manic comedy. Thurber suggested that most men live 'lives of noisy desperation'; this adaptation of Thoreau's* famous comment illustrates that sense of reduction and threat which he found in modern life and which is contained in even his most whimsical work. His character Walter Mitty has become a modern 'type' in his attempts to escape into his 'secret life'.

Is Sex Necessary? (with E. B. White; 1929); The Owl in the Attic and Other Perplexities (1931); The Seal in the Bedroom and Other Predicaments (1932); My Life and Hard Times (1933); The Middle Aged Man on the Flying Trapeze (1935); Fables for Our Time and Famous Poems Illustrated (1940); The Thurber Carnival (1945); The White Deer (1945); The Thurber Album (1952); Thurber Country (1953); Thurber's Dogs (1955); Fables for Our Time (1956); The Wonderful O (London, 1958); Lanterns and Lances (1961); Credos and Curios (1962); Thurber & Company (1966).

N. Yates, The American Humorist: Conscience of the Twentieth Century (1964). G.A.K.

Thwaites, EDWARD (*Ravensworth, Westmorland 1667; †?Oxford 1711), English Anglo-Saxon scholar. At Oxford Thwaites came under the influence of Hickes* (whose Thesaurus he revised) and became a prime mover in the Oxford revival of Old English studies.

Heptateuchus [Ælfric], Liber Job [frag., Ælfric], Evangelium Nicodemi and Historiae Judith fragmentum (the poem printed as prose; 1698).

G.K.H.

Thynne, FRANCIS (*Erith, Kent 1545; ∞ Elizabeth de la Rivers; †Clerkenwell Green XI 1608), English historic and emblematic writer; studied at Lincoln's Inn, was created Lancaster Herald. He revised Holinshed's* Chronicle together with John Stow* and others.

Animadversions (criticism; 1599; ed. F. J. Furnivall, Early Eng. Text Soc., 1875, 1965); Emblemes and Epigrammes (verse; 1600; ed. idem, ibid., 1876). J.J.Y.L. (T.P.M.)

Tiberianus (fl. c. A.D. 335), Latin poet known chiefly for a beautiful poem on nature, in trochaic metre, the Amnis ibat; he was imitated by Ausonius* and Prudentius*.

Tr. J. W. and A. M. Duff in Minor Latin Poets (1934). A.J.D.

Tibullus, ALBIUS (*c. 54; †19 B.C.), Latin elegiac poet, of whose life little is known. He was a friend of Horace* and a leading member of the literary circle of Messalla. His poems were inspired by his love for the woman he celebrates as Delia, a young man, Marathus, and the greedy courtesan Nemesis, his friendship with Messalla and his longing for the calm of rural life. In one poem only (1.7) is a national note sounded. Tibullus' depth of sentiment expressed with a natural ease of diction, and his versification, graceful and melodious if not of Ovidian perfection, combine to make him the most charming of the Augustan elegiac poets.

Book 3 (divided by some editors into 3 and 4) contains other poetic works of the circle. Most notable of these are the bombastic Panegyricus Messallae, the elegies of Lygdamus, and elegies some addressed to, some written by, Sulpicia*.

Eds with comm.: K. F. Smith (1913; repr. 1964); G. Heyne (4th ed. 1817; repr. 1969).—Tr. J. P. Postgate (1912).

W. Y. Sellar, Horace and the Elegiac Poets (1892); A. Cartault, Tibulle et les auteurs du Corpus Tibullianum (1909); K. Witte, Geschichte der römischen Elegie, I: T. (1924); M. Schuster, Tibull-Studien (1930; 1968); G. Luck, The Latin Love Elegy (2nd ed. 1969). A.J.D.

Tickell, THOMAS (*Bridekirk 1686; ∞1726 Clotilda Eustace; †Bath 23 IV 1740), English verse-writer and man of letters, friend and panegyrist of Addison*, who charged him with the authentic edition of his works.

First Book of Homer's Iliad (1715); Epistle from a Lady in England to a Gentleman at Avignon (1717); Works of Joseph Addison (ed.; 4 vols, 1721); Kensington Garden (1722).

R. E. Tickell, T. T. and the 18th-Century Poets (cont. unpub. letters and poems; 1931).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Ticknor, GEORGE (*Boston 1 VIII 1791; ∞1821 Anna Eliot; †ibid. 26 I 1871), American scholar. Harvard Professor of modern languages, he is remembered for his History of Spanish Literature (1849).

Life of William Hickling Prescott (1864); ... General Lafayette (1825).

A. Ticknor and G. S. Hillard, Life, Letters and Journals of G. T. (1876); D. B. Tyack, G. T. and the Boston Brahmins (1967). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Tieck, LUDWIG (*Berlin 31 V 1773; ∞1798 Amalie Alberti; †ibid. 28 IV 1853), German writer. The talented and precocious Tieck's first ambition was to become an actor, which may partly explain his extreme adaptability. Though an important literary figure, he excelled in no single field. Beginning as his schoolmaster's 'ghost', by 1794 he was writing rationalist stories to order for Nicolai's* Strausfeldern. With Wackenroder* he originated much of the Romantic idiom, and, joining the Schlegels* in Jena (1799), put their theories into practice. To him we owe the earliest examples of the Romantic short story (Der blonde Eckbert, 1796) and the Romantic satirical play. Genoveva and Octavianus were fruitful but undramatic attempts at Romantic drama. His middle period was mainly devoted to criticism, scholarship, theatrical production and literary salvage (e.g. Kleist's* works), and he completed A. W. Schlegel's Shakespeare* translations. Living in Dresden (1819–42), he took up the NOVELLE where Goethe* left it, developing it both as the historical story and as criticism of contemporary life and art.

Phantasus (3 vols, 1812–16; Eng. tr. J. C. Hare, J. A. Froude et al., 1845); Gedichte (3 vols, 1821–23; facs. 1967); Der Aufruhr in den Cevennen (1826; Eng. tr. Mme Burette, 1845); Vittoria Accorombona (2 vols, 1840; tr. The Roman Matron, 1845).—Schriften (28 vols, 1828–54); Kritische Schriften (4 vols, 1848–52); Briefwechsel mit den Brüdern Schlegel (ed. H. Lüdecke, 1930).

E. H. Zeydel, T. and England (1931) and L. T., the German Romanticist (1935); R. Lieske, T's Abwendung von der Romantik (1933, 1967); R. Minder, Un poète romantique allemand: L. T. (1936); P. Matenko, L. T. and America (1954); M. Thalmann, L. T., der romantische Weltmann aus Berlin (1955) and L. T., 'Der Heilige von Dresden' (1960); J. Trainer, L. T. From Gothic to Romantic (1964). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

T'ien CHIEN (orig. name T'UNG T'ien-CHIEH)

(*Wu-hu, Anhwei 1916), Chinese poet, began writing under the influence of the Crescent group, but developed a characteristic short 'drum-beat' line in his first collections (1935-36).

Sel. trs in: R. Payne, Contemporary Chinese Poetry (1947); K.-Y. Hsu, Twentieth Century Chinese Poetry (1963). A.R.D.

T'ien HAN (*Ch'ang-sha 13 III 1898), Chinese dramatist. T'ien's enthusiasm for the drama goes back to his schooldays and his student days in Japan. He was a founder of the Creation Society (1921) and published two plays in Creation Quarterly, first issue. Later he directed the important South China Society (1927) and was a founder of the League of Left-Wing Dramatists (1931). Up to 1937 he wrote and staged many plays as well as writing for films. In the war years he began to revise Peking operas for modern staging and continued these experiments after 1949. He came under major attack in the Cultural Revolution (1966). A.R.D.

AL-Tījānī, YŪSUF BASHĪR (*Omdurman, Sudan 1912; †ibid. 1937), Sudanese Arab poet, who became influenced by the Arab Romantics and produced deeply personal and sometimes mystical poetry.

Ishrāqa (verse; pub. posth.).—Anthologie de la littérature arabe contemporaine: La poésie (tr. Luc Norin and Edouard Tarabay, Paris, 1967). M.M.B.

Tikhonov, NIKOLAY SEMĖNOVICH (*1896), Soviet poet whose striking talent matured under several influences—from Gumil'ev* to Mayakovsky* and Pasternak*. One of his conspicuous themes is a virile affirmation of life. For his war poems, Kirov s nami, dealing with the siege of Leningrad, he was awarded the Stalin prize. He has also published a number of stories.

Stikhotvoreniya (1932); Rasskazy (1935); Izbrannoye (1948); Povesti i rasskazy (1948); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1959); Dvoynaya raduga (1964).

N. Kovarsky, N. T. (1935); I. Grinberg, N. T. (1952). J.L.

Till Eulenspiegel: see Eulenspiegel, TILL.

Tillotson, JOHN (*Sowerby 1630; †London 22 XI 1694), Archbishop of Canterbury. The easy elegance of his sermons was taken as a model for the 'reformed' preaching of the post-Restoration period. The turgid style of the previous generation was broken down into simpler and clearer forms more suitable for the age of reason.

Sermons ([54] 1696; ed. R. Barker [some 250], 14 vols, 1695-1704); The Golden Book of T. (ed. J. Moffatt, 1926).

G. Locke, T.: A Study in 17th Century Literature (1954); I. Simon, Three Restoration Divines (1967); James Sutherland, English Literature in the Late 17th Century (1969). G.K.H. (M.Bu.)

Tilschová, ANNA MARIA (*Prague 11 XI 1873; †Dobříš 18 VI 1957), Czech novelist. Her most successful work portrays the Prague society of the 19th and 20th centuries.

Stará rodina (1916); Synové (1918); Vykoupení (1923); Orlí hnízdo (1942).—Sebrané spisy (1959 ff.).

K. Krejčí, A. M. T. (1959). R.A.

Timaeus (*c. 346; †c. 250 B.C.), Greek historian. Son of Andromachus, the founder of Tauromenium in Sicily; spent 50 years in exile in Athens. His history of Sicily to about 264, long-winded and rhetorical, was nevertheless based on solid research and was much drawn upon later.

F. Jacoby, Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker, IIIB (1950).

P. Scheller, De Hellenistica historiae conscribendae ratione (1911); T. S. Brown, T. of Tauromenium (1958). R.B.

Timmanna, 16th-century Telugu poet at the court of Kṛṣṇadevarāya*, and author of Pārijātāpaharaṇamu. Having unwisely given a pārijāta flower (Nyctanthes arbor-tristis L.) to but one of his consorts, Rukmiṇī, the god Krishna is scolded furiously by the other, Satyabhāmā. To placate her, he goes up to Indra's heaven and steals a heavenly pārijāta tree for her, precipitating a battle between himself and Indra's army, in which he and Satyabhāmā are victorious. J.R.M.

Timmermans, FELIX (*Lier 5 VII 1886; †Lier 24 I 1947), Flemish novelist, short-story writer, playwright and poet. Self-educated, he was a draughtsman and painter as well as a writer. He dominated Flemish prose in the period between Streuvels* and Walschap*. His Pallieter (1916; Eng. tr. C. B. Bodde, 1924) is a panegyric of life in the form of a series of nature scenes, linked together by a personage, Pallieter, who is a type in the portrait-gallery of world literature: not a pagan hedonist, but one who glorifies creation as a reflection of God; 19 years later he repeated this in Boerenpsalm, this time a laudatory discourse upon man rather than upon nature, man being represented by the peasant Wortel, who lives in the chiaroscuro of joy, happiness, work, affliction, sorrow and death and whose existence is ennobled by his strong faith in God. Between Pallieter and Boerenpsalm he wrote a number of works which, though unequal in merit, are fascinating by their variety; restrained verse and short stories, tales full of atmosphere, anecdotal novels, fresh narratives, mostly in a popular folk-lore strain, romanticized biographies of Bruegel, St Francis* and Brouwer, popular plays etc., all originating from an unquenchable, Goethean 'Lust zu fabulieren' and written in plastic, succulent language.

NOVELS: Het Kindeke Jezus in Vlaanderen (1917; The Christ Child in Flanders, tr. E. C. Bricks, 1960); Anna-Marie (1921; Fr. tr. Mme Cludts, 1946); De pastoor uit den bloeyenden wijngaerd (1924; Der Pfarrer vom blühenden Weinberg, tr. P. Mertens, 1927); Pieter Bruegel (1928; Droll Peter, tr. M. C. Darnton and W. J. Paul, 1930); De harp van Sint-Franciscus (1932; The Harp of Saint Francis, tr. M. Bird, 1949); Boerenpsalm (1935; Psaume paysan, tr. B. Colin, 1942); De familie Hernat (1941; Die Familie Hernat, tr. P. Mertens, 1943); Adriaan Brouwer (1948; Ger. tr. B. Loets, 1952).—SHORT STORIES: Schemeringen van de dood (1910); De zeer schoone uren van juffrouw Symforosa, begijntjen (1918; Les très belles heures de Mademoiselle Symphorose, béguine, tr. R. Kervyn de Marcke ten Driessche, 1931); Driekoningentryptiek (1923; The Triptych of the Three Kings, tr. H. L. Ripperger, 1936); Het keerseken in den lanteern (1924; Das Licht in der Laterne, tr. A. Valetton-Hoos, 1926); Ik zag Cecilia komen (1938; Ich sah Cäcilie kommen, tr. P. Mertens, 1938); Minneke Poes (1943; Minneke Pus, Ger. tr. K. Jacobs, 1950).—PLAYS: En waar de ster bleef stille staan (1925; Et où l'étoile s'arrêta, tr. W. Timmermans, 1928); Leontientje (1926).—Adagio (verse; 1947; Ger. tr. G. Hermanowski, 1949).

T. Rutten, F. T. (1928); M. E. Tralbaut, Zo was de Fee (1947); E. van der Hallen, F. T. (1948); S. Streicher, T., der ewige Poet (1948); K. Jacobs, F. T. (1949); R. Veremans et al., Herinneringen aan F. T. (1950); Lia Timmermans, Mijn vader (1951); J. de Ceulaer, F. T. (1959); L. Vercammen, Vijftig jaar Pallieter (1966). E.W.H.

Timocles (fl. c. 340–315 B.C.), poet of Athenian Middle Comedy, of whom 27 plays are known by title. He is a late exponent of personal attack in comedy, notably against Demosthenes* and Hyperides*; in Orestautokleides, Autocleides as Orestes takes refuge not from Furies, as in Aeschylus*, but from hetairai.

T. Kock, Comicorum Atticorum fragmenta, II (1884); J. M. Edmonds, Fragments of Attic Comedy, II (1959; with tr.).—T. B. L. Webster, Studies in Later Greek Comedy (2nd ed. 1970). E.W.H.

Timofeyev, IVAN, 17th-century Russian scribe and author of a somewhat rhetorical yet reliable chronicle (written in the 1630s) of the 'troubled times' at the end of the 16th and the beginning of the 17th century.

S. F. Platonov, Drevne-russkie skazaniya i povesti o smutnom vremeni kak istoricheskiy istochnik (1888). J.L.

Timoneda, JUAN DE (*?Valencia; †ibid. 1583),

Spanish publisher, dramatist and jest-book writer. He published plays by Lope de Rueda*, Alonso de la Vega* and himself, three entertaining books of anecdotes and a collection of romances. His prose plays derive from Italian sources and translations of Plautus*. He wrote two autos sacramentales and revived four by other writers.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., II, III, LVIII; Obras (ed. E. Juliá Martínez, 3 vols, 1947–48); The Aucto del Castillo de Emaus and the Aucto de la Iglesia (ed. and tr. M. E. Johnson, Iowa, 1933); El patrañuelo (ed. F. Ruiz Morcuende, 1930); Sobremesa de caminantes (facs. of 1569; ed. M. García Moreno, 1917).

H. Mérimée, L'art dramatique à Valencia (1913). E.M.W.

Timotheus, Greek lyric poet from Miletus (*c. 450; †c. 360 B.C.), friend of Euripides*. The longest surviving fragment comes from The Persians, a nome (perhaps partly monodic, partly choral) which depicts episodes of the battle of Salamis.

D. L. Page, Poetae Melici Graeci (1962); J. M. Edmonds, Lyra Graeca, III (2nd ed. 1940; with tr.); U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, Timotheos: Die Perser (1903; with comm.). J.T.H.

Timrava, pseud. of BOŽENA SLANČÍKOVÁ (*Polichno 2 X 1867; †Lučenec 27 XI 1951), Slovak novelist and dramatist. Her realistic stories of Slovak provincial life are among the outstanding achievements of 20th-century Slovak prose writing.

Zobrané spisy (1955 ff.).—A. Mráz, O slovenských realistických prozaikoch (1956). R.A.

Timrod, HENRY (*Charleston, S.C. 8 XII 1828; ∞1864 Kate Goodwin; †Columbia, S.C. 6 X 1867), American poet. He attended the University of Georgia, enlisted in the Confederate army but was soon given a medical discharge. With 'A Cry to Arms', 'Carolina' and other war poems he became the laureate of the Confederacy.

Poems (1860); The Collected Poems of H. T. (ed. E. W. and A. W. Parks, 1965).

G. A. Wauchope, H. T., Man and Poet (1915); V. P. Clare, Harp of the South (1936); E. W. Parks, H. T. (1964). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Tindale, or Tyndale, WILLIAM (*1484; †executed Vilvorde 6 VIII 1536), translator of the Bible. Tyndale studied at Oxford and Cambridge when the influence of the New Learning was strong. Wishing to translate the Bible into the vernacular, he went to the Continent. He became a Zwinglian and engaged in controversy with Sir Thomas More*.

TRANSLATIONS: New Testament (Worms, 1525 and 1526; ed. G. Offor, 1836); Pentateuch (?Antwerp, 1530; ed. J. I. Mompert, New York, 1884); Jonah (?Antwerp, ?1531; facs. ed. F. Fry, Bristol, 1863).—OTHER WORKS: The Obedience of a Christen Man (?Antwerp, 1528; ed. R. Lovett, 1888); The Practyse of Prelates (?Antwerp, 1530).

M. T. Pattison, The History of the English Bible (1894); A. W. Pollard, Records of the English Bible (1911). J.B.B.

Ting Ling, pseud. of CHIANG PING-CHIH (*Li-ling, Hunan 1907), Chinese short-story writer and novelist. Ting Ling, the best-known Communist woman writer, achieved notice with the publication of her first story (1927). Her novel of land reform T'ai-yang chao tsai Sang-kan ho shang (1948; The Sun Shines Over the Sangkan River, tr. H.-Y. and G. Yang, Peking, 1954), gained a Stalin Prize in 1951, but after increasing attacks she was expelled from the Party as a 'rightist' in 1958.

SHORT-STORY COLLECTIONS: Tsai hei-an chung (1928); I-ko nü-jên (1930); I-wai chi (1936); Wo tsai Hsia-ts'un ti shih-hou (1943); When I Was in Sha Chuan and Other Stories, tr. Kung Pu-sheng, Bombay, 1946).—NOVELS: Wei-hu (1930); Shui (1933; part. tr. in E. Snow, Living China, 1936).

M. Goldman, Literary Dissent in Communist China (1967). A.R.D.

Tippmann, HUGO KARL (*Duppan, Bohemia 13 III 1875; †New York 4 VI 1942), German-American poet, founder of short-lived magazines. His spirited ballads (Amerikanische Balladen und andere Gedichte, 1942) immortalize American historical figures of German descent.

E. Posselt, 'The story of an American poet' in Amer.-Ger. Rev., XVII.1 (1950). E.R.

Tiraboschi, GIROLAMO (*Bergamo 18 XII 1731; †Modena 3 VI 1794), Italian scholar and prose writer. Jesuit; Professor of eloquence in the Brera schools, Milan (1755); director of the Biblioteca Estense, Modena (1770). Tiraboschi wrote a Storia della letteratura italiana (13 vols, 1772–82; 9 vols, 1787–94), an erudite compilation describing 'the origin and development of all the sciences in Italy' from Etruscan times until 1700. His other works include a vast correspondence and journalistic activity, the Biblioteca modenese (6 vols, 1781–86) and Notizie dei pittori, scultori, incisori e architetti nati degli stati del duca di Modena (1786).

Dal Muratori al Cesarotti, IV: Critici e storici della poesia e delle arti nel secondo Settecento (ed. E. Bigi, 1960; biblio.).—M. Laterza, G. T.: Vita e opere (1921); V. Cian, 'G. T.' in Memorie della Reale Accad. di Modena (1933). M.W.

Tiro, MARCUS TULLIUS (*103 B.C.; †4 B.C.), Cicero's* freedman and secretary. He edited many of Cicero's works, wrote his life and invented a system of shorthand, now commonly called 'notae Tironianae'. The letters of Book 16 of Cicero's Ad familiares are, with one exception, addressed to Tiro, by Cicero or by members of his family.

P. Mitzschke, M. T. T. (1875); F. Ruess, Ueber die Tachygraphie der Römer (1879). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Tirso de Molina, pseud. of GABRIEL TELLEZ (*Madrid ?1580; †Soria 1648), Spanish dramatist and novelist. He studied at Alcalá and took his vows as a Mercenary Friar at Guadalajara in 1601. He lived in Toledo (1614), Santo Domingo (1615–18), Salamanca (1626) and Barcelona (1632–39). His five volumes of plays appeared between 1624 and 1633; his two miscellanies in 1621 and 1635. He also wrote an unpublished history of his Order.

Tirso followed Lope de Vega's* methods as a dramatist in his (?80) plays. In cloak-and-sword plays his originality consisted in his feminine psychology, rapidity of movement and realistic dialogue. His chronicle play La prudencia en la mujer is one of the best in Spanish. He also wrote magnificent Biblical and religious dramas, including, possibly, the masterpiece El condenado por desconfiado. His most famous work is El burlador de Sevilla y convidado de piedra (before 1630), the first play about DON JUAN, powerful, but carelessly written.

Tirso's first miscellany Los cigarrales de Toledo contains an interesting defence of the popular theatre, two excellent plays and some rather mediocre novels. The second is religious—Deleitar aprovechando. His prose is sometimes over-elaborate, but he wrote one famous, if rather brutal, story—'Los tres maridos burlados' in Los cigarrales.

Comedias (Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., V, LVIII; Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., IV, IX); Obras dramáticas completas (ed. B. de los Ríos, 3 vols, 1946, 1952, 1958); Obras, I (El Burlador de Sevilla, El vergonzoso en palacio; ed. A. Castro, 1910, rev. ed. 1922), II (El amor médico, Averigüelo Vargas; ed. A. Zamora Vicente and M. J. Canellada, 1947).—Don Gil de las calzas verdes (ed. B. P. Bourland, New York, 1910); Los cigarrales de Toledo (ed. V. Said Armesto, 1913); La villana de Vallecas (ed. S. W. Brown, Chicago, 1934); Marta la pladosa (ed. E. Juliá Martínez, 1943); La prudencia en la mujer (ed. A. H. Bushee and L. Stafford, Mexico, 1948); La santa Juana (ed. A. del Campo, 1948); Deleitar aprovechando (1635; 1677; 1765); Por el sótano y el torno (ed. A. Zamora Vicente, 1949); La patrona de las musas (ed. R. Frolidi, 1959); La villana de Vallecas (ed. J. Lemartinel and G. Zomana, 1964); La venganza de Tamar (ed. A. K. G. Paterson, 1969).

R. Menéndez Pidal, Estudios literarios (1920; 1938); A. H. Bushee, Three Centuries of T. de M. (1939); E. Gijón Zapata, El humor en T. de M. (1959); A. Urtiaga, El indiano en la dramática de

T. de M. (1965); K. Vossler, Lecciones sobre T. de M. (1965); A. Nougé, L'œuvre en prose de T. de M. (n.d.) E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Tirumurai: see NĀYANMĀR.

Tiruvalluvar (c. 2nd century A.D.) was according to tradition a weaver living in southern India. He was the reputed author of the Kuraḷ, a collection of 1330 moral maxims written in the Tamil language. Others assert that Tiruvalluvar is not a name but a title borne by religious teachers of the lower castes. The Kuraḷ has been called the Tamil Veda and described as 'the most venerated and popular book south of the Godāvari... the literary treasure, the poetic mouthpiece, the highest type of verbal and moral excellence among the Tamil people'.

H. A. Popley, The Sacred Kural (1931).
H.G.R. (J.R.M.)

Tishbi: see Bachur, ELIAH.

Tisias (fl. c. 440 B.C.), Sicilian Greek rhetorician, pupil of Corax* and pioneer in forensic oratory. He divided the speech into four parts—introduction, narrative, proof and conclusion—and established argument from probability as the dominant form of proof. Like Corax, he probably published handbooks, which may have included standard arguments (loci communes) for use in the different sections of the speech. These innovations became permanent features of Athenian oratory, whence they were transmitted to Roman and later Greek oratory.

Biblio. as for Corax*. S.U.

Tišma, ALEKSANDAR (*Horgoš 16 I 1924), Serbian novelist and prose writer. A graduate of Belgrade, Tišma is now director of the Matica Srpska publishing house and an editor of Letopis Matice srpske. His prose is concerned with the problems of the post-war young generation and the psychology of violence. He has also written poetry.

NOVELS: Za crnom devojkom (1969).—STORIES: Krivice (1961); Nasilje (1965). B.J.

Titinius (first half of 2nd century B.C.), perhaps the first writer of fabulae togatae (comedies set in Italian country towns). Fragments of about 15 of these survive. Varro* ranked his ability at character-drawing on the same level as Terence's*.

O. Ribbeck, Comicorum Romanorum fragmenta (3rd ed. 1898).—F. Leo, Geschichte der römischen Literatur (1913). H.D.J.

Tocqueville, ALEXIS DE (*Verneuil 29 VII 1805; †Cannes 16 IV 1859), French politician and historian, retired in 1851 from politics. He was a remarkable observer and critic in his Démocratie en Amérique (a country he had visited in 1832) and profoundly original in his Ancien Régime, in some ways the most mature historical work of the 19th century.

De la Démocratie en Amérique (2 vols, 1835; tr. H. Reeve, 2 vols, 1835); L'Ancien Régime et la Révolution française (1856; tr. idem, 1856).—Œuvres complètes (9 vols, 1860–65; defin. ed. J.-P. Mayer, 1952 ff.); Souvenirs (2 vols, 1893; Eng. tr. A. Teixeira de Mattos, 1902).

E. d'Eichthal, A. de T. et la démocratie libérale (1897); J.-P. Mayer, A Prophet of the Mass Age: A Study of A. de T. (1939); G. W. Pierson, T. and Beaumont in America (1938). D.H.

Todorov, PETKO (*Elena 26 IX 1879; †Geneva 14 II 1916), Bulgarian idyll-writer and playwright. He became a gifted member of the 'Missul circle' (Krustev*) after studying in Toulouse, Berlin and Leipzig, where he met Pencho Slaveykov* who stimulated his interest in folk-lore. Influenced by J. Schlaf*, he combined this with his individualist philosophy to write a series of 'idylls' in his own style of poetic prose. His plays also present such motifs in a setting of the patriarchal rural tradition.

Idilii (1906); Drami (1910); Slavyanite v bulgarskata literatura (1944).—Coll. works (ed. N. Furnajiev et al., 3 vols, 1957–58). V.P.

Toepffer, RODOLPHE (*Geneva 31 I 1799; †ibid. 8 VI 1846), Swiss novelist and art critic. Early compelled by weak eyesight to give up painting, he set up a cosmopolitan boys' school in 1824 and later gave lively accounts of the school's expeditions in the Alps in the Voyages en Zigzag (1844) and Nouveaux voyages en Zigzag (1854). In 1832 he became Professor of literature at the Académie de Genève and started writing his nouvelles which unite humour and sensitive observation and express the love for his native city from which this kindly family man and teacher rarely stirred. He also wrote stories in the form of a series of caricatures, precursors of the strip-cartoon, M. Vieux-Bois, M. Crépin, M. Cryptograme, Docteur Festus.

SHORT STORIES: La bibliothèque de mon oncle (1832); Nouvelles genevoises (1841).—Le presbytère (novel; 2 vols, 1839); Réflexions et menus propos d'un peintre genevois (1848); Nouvelles, romans, albums et inédits (Skira ed., 1943).

P. Chaponnière, Notre T. (1930). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Tofte, ROBERT (†London I 1620), English sonneteer and translator. Tofte's Petrarchan sequences Laura and Alba (containing a reference to Love's Labour's Lost) are presented as the results of travels in France and Italy. Most of the poems are translated from these languages. The rest of his works are avowed translations.

Laura: the toys of a traveller (1597; ed. Sir Sidney Lee, Elizabethan Sonnets, II, 1904); Alba, the months mind of a melancholy lover (1598; ed. A. B. Grosart, 1880); Orlando Innamorato (from Boiardo; first 3 bks, 1598). G.K.H.

Tokuda SHŪSEI, pseud. of TOKUDA MATSUO (*Kanazawa, Ishikawa 1 II 1872; †18 XI 1943), Japanese novelist of the Naturalist school.

Ashiato (1910); Kabi (1911); Tadare (1913; summary of these 3 in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Shi ni shitashimu (1933; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Kunshō (1935; 'The Decoration', tr. I. I. Morris in Modern Japanese Stories, 1961); Shukuzu (1941; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Tolentino, NICOLAU: see Almeida, NICOLAU TOLENTINO DE.

Tolkien, JOHN RONALD REUEL (*3 I 1892; ∞1916 Edith Bratt), English scholar, and author of a series of books in which he has created a whole new mythology, completely credible and enthralling. The story of the Hobbits and the affairs of Middle Earth begins in The Hobbit (1937), but it is the imaginative power of the trilogy The Lord of the Rings (The Fellowship of the Ring, 1954; The Two Towers, 1954; The Return of the King, 1955) that has won the allegiance of his devoted readers.

Eds of Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (1925) and Beowulf (1940).—Farmer Giles of Ham (1949); The Adventures of Tom Bombadil (1962); Smith of Wootton Major (1967).

English and Medieval Studies Presented to J. R. R. T. (1962); T. and the Critics (ed. N. D. Isaacs, 1968); Shadows of Imagination: the Fantasies of C. S. Lewis, J. R. R. T. and Charles Williams (ed. M. R. Hillegas, 1969); C. R. Stimpson, J. R. R. T. (1970). W.R.A.

Tollens, HENDRIK FRANCISCUS CAROLUSZON (*24 IX 1780; ∞1800 Gerbranda C. Rivier; †21 X 1856), Dutch poet and business-man, self-educated, started as a sentimental rhymist and playwright and developed into a much admired descriptive and homely poet whose deliberate simplicity sometimes achieved a fine sincerity. J.W.W.

PLAYS: De bruiloft (1799); Konstantijn (1800).—VERSE: Proeve van minnezangen en idyllen (3 vols, 1800–03); Gedichten (3 vols, 1808–15); Tafereel van de overwintering der Hollanders op Nova Zembla (1819; ed. G. W. Huygens, 1964; The Hollanders in Nova Zembla, tr. D. van Pelt, 1882); Laatste gedichten (1848–53).—Gezamenlijke dichtwerken (12 vols, 1855–57).

G. D. J. Schotel, T. en zijn tijd (1860); C.

Busken Huet, Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, VI (1881–88); W. G. C. Byvanck in De Gids (1898); J. Valckenier Suringar in Rotterdamsch Jaarboekje (1923); D. Ban, 'Vier overwinteringen op Nova Zembla' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XXXII (1938); W. J. M. A. Asselbergs, Tussen Vosmaer en T. (1968). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Toller, ERNST (*Samotschin 1 XII 1893; †New York 22 V 1939), German playwright. His radical pacifist and Marxist convictions were poured out in vivid abrupt language, and he became a representative spokesman of Expressionist drama.

Das Schwalbenbuch (verse; 1924; Eng. tr. A. Dukes, 1924); Eine Jugend in Deutschland (autobiog.; 1933; Eng. tr. E. Crankshaw, 1934).—SELECTED TRANSLATIONS: Seven Plays (1935); No More Peace! (tr. E. Crankshaw and W. H. Auden, 1937); Pastor Hall (1939).—Ausgewählte Schriften (ed. B. Uhse and B. Kaiser, 1959); Prosa, Briefe, Dramen, Gedichte (1961).

H. Liebermann, E. T. (in Yiddish, 1924; Span. tr. 1936; Ger. tr. 1939); W. A. Willibrand, E. T., Product of Two Revolutions (1941) and E. T. and His Ideology (1945); T. Dorst, T. (1968).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Tolomei, CLAUDIO (*Siena 1492; †Rome 1555/57), Italian writer. Exiled from Siena in 1526, he lived in Rome, Piacenza and Padua; recalled to Siena, he held high office and was nominated ambassador to France. A writer of sonnets and no mean orator, he opposed Trissino's* orthographical reforms in Il Polito, and in Il Cesano championed Tuscan usage in the language controversy. His Regole anticipated Carducci* in attempting to apply classical metres to Italian.

Il Polito (pub. under name of A. Franci; 1525); Versi e regole della nuova poesia toscana (1539); Delle lettere di M. C. T. libri sette (1547); Il Cesano (1555; ed. G. Antimaco in G. Daelli's Biblioteca rara, 1864); Lirici del Cinquecento (ed. L. Baldacci, 1957).

G. Carducci, La poesia barbara nei secoli XV e XVI (1881); P. L. Sbaragli, C. T.: la vita e le opere (1939). P.McN.

Tolstoy, COUNT ALEXEY KONSTANTINOVICH (*St Petersburg 24 VIII 1817; †28 IX 1875), Russian author. As a poet he was an eclectic and polished 'Parnassian', with a humorous vein—e.g. Kuz'ma Prutkov, a well-known collection of nonsense verse and parodies (written in collaboration with the two brothers Zhemchuzhnikov). But he also wrote fine poems on tragic and religious themes. His 'Shakespearean' dramatic trilogy, Smert' Ivana Groznogo (1866), Tsar' Fëdor (1868) and Tsar' Boris (1870), is in blank verse and has good characterization. Less satisfactory and now somewhat dated is his historical romance, Knyaz' Serebryany, from the times of Ivan* the Terrible.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1910–11); Dramaticheskaya trilogiya (1939).—Prince Serebrenni (tr. Pr. Galitzine, 1874; Prince Serebryani, tr. I. H. Curtis, 1892; A Prince of Outlaws, tr. C. A. Manning, 1927); The Death of Ivan the Terrible (tr. I. H. Harrison, 1869; tr. A. Hayes, 1926; tr. G. R. Noyes, 1933); Czar Fyodor Ivanovich (tr. J. Covan, 1923; tr. A. Hayes, 1924).

A. A. Kondratyev, Graf A. K. T. (1912); A. Girondelle, Le poète A. T. (1912); biogs by: A. Starchevsky (1935); R. Messer (1939)

J.L.

Tolstoy, COUNT ALEXEY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1882; †Moscow 1945), Russian author who, after a spell abroad, returned to Soviet Russia (in 1923) and became one of the most prominent figures in Soviet fiction. His first book of stories appeared in 1910, but he wrote his best works after the Revolution. His range is wide: narratives of the decaying gentry; Wellsian romance (Aelita, 1924); delightful autobiographic fragments in Detstvo Nikity (1921; Nikita's Childhood, tr. V. L. Dutt, 1945); a splendid panorama of war and revolution in his trilogy, Khozhenie po mukam (1921–41); a grotesquely satirical picture of emigré life in Priklyucheniya Nevzorova ili Ibikus (1925); and a vivid reconstruction of a past epoch in his historical novel Peter I (3 parts, 1929, 1933, 1945); also some shorter stories. He is the author of several plays—two of them about Ivan* the Terrible (1945). During the Second World War he concentrated on anti-German propaganda and patriotic pamphleteering.

Izbrannye proizvedeniya (1945); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (15 vols, 1946–53); Pëtr Pervy (1947); Khozhenie po mukam (new ed., 2 vols, 1950).—Sobranie sochineniy (1958–61).—Imperial Majesty (tr. H. Ch. Matheson, 1932); Darkness and Dawn (tr. E. Bone and E. Burns, 1936; as Road to Calvary, 1945); Peter the Great (tr. idem, 1936); The Death Box (tr. B. G. Guerny, 1936); Bread (tr. S. Garry, 1938); Daredevils (tr. L. Fromberg, 1942); My Country (tr. idem, 1943); Russian Tales for Children (tr. E. Shimanskaya, 1944); The Golden Key (tr. E. Hartley, 1947).

I. I. Veksler, A. N. T. (1948); B. Shcherbina, A. N. T. (1956). J.L.

Tolstoy, COUNT LEV NIKOLAYEVICH (*Yasnaya Polyana 28 VIII 1828; ∞23 IX 1862; †Astapovo 7 XI 1910), Russian author. Coming of aristocratic landowning stock, he had all he needed for a quiet rural existence, but his restless character tossed him between all sorts of experiences, contrasts and contradictions. He gave up his University studies, became a soldier among the primitive Caucasian Cossacks, travelled abroad, experimented with education (on Rousseau's lines). But, however successful he was as a creative artist, he could never rid himself of the fundamental cleavage which can be traced in the whole of his life and work. On the one hand he was capable of enjoying (and describing) life in its instinctive full-blooded aspects with a gusto rare among ordinary mortals. Yet behind his spontaneous love of life there lurked in him all the time the brooding moralizing seeker for that ultimate meaning which would justify existence in the teeth of death. It was in fact death as the negation of life, the meaninglessness of death, that filled him with fear and anguish, urging him on to intensify his quest even at the expense of his art. The dividing line was his Isповед' ('Confession'), written about 1879 and first published at Geneva in 1882. After that date the moralist in him took the upper hand. Out of a simplified Sermon on the Mount and his own Rousseauesque aversion to all civilization Tolstoy now constructed that puritanic and in essence anarchic would-be Christianity which became known as Tolstoyanism. As he was anxious to practise it in his own house, he had frequent misunderstandings with his wife, from whom he eventually escaped. During that dramatic flight he caught pneumonia and died at a little railway station in central Russia.

As a writer Tolstoy made his début in Sovremennik in 1852 with his Detstvo—the first part of his more or less autobiographic trilogy. This work aroused immediate attention by its freshness, truthfulness and plastic power. He enhanced his reputation by a number of other narratives, among which his unfinished novel Kazaki (1862) is of particular interest, in so far as the flow of the story is repeatedly interrupted by the broodings of Tolstoy the seeker and the moralist. The same can be said of his Voyna i mir ('War and Peace'; 1862–69)—that magnificent cross-section of the entire Russian nation during one of its critical periods. Here Tolstoy's own moral quest and vexation of the spirit have been convincingly projected into his two doubles, Prince Andrey and Pierre Bezukhov. The conflict is more strongly marked in Anna Karenina (1875–77), a novel about the Russian manor and Russian society as Tolstoy saw them after he had happily married and settled for good on his estate of Yasnaya Polyana. But this time Tolstoy's alter ego, the externally happy and prosperous squire Levin, is almost driven to suicide by his inability to find that meaning of life without which he cannot accept life itself. In the end this meaning (in the formula of universal love and brotherhood) is revealed to him by the wisdom of a simple, illiterate peasant.

The next logical step was Tolstoy's 'conversion', so poignantly described in his own Confession. For a number of years Tolstoy now kept pouring out theological and moral pamphlets, admonitions and indictments, to the dismay of all those who admired his artistic genius. But Tolstoy's creative vitality was strong enough to produce a number of literary masterpieces even after his conversion: Smert' Ivana Ilyicha (1886), the naturalistic peasant drama Vlast' i'my (1886), Khozyain i rabotnik (1895), the splendid Caucasian narrative Hadji Murad (1901). The most interesting work of that period is however his last long novel, Voskresenie (1899), with its mixture of the powerful artistic and the dry, didactic aspects of Tolstoy. While reading it, one cannot help feeling that Tolstoy the moralist and the prophet has little to give to our generation, whereas Tolstoy the artist remains and will remain among the greatest.

Numerous eds of T.'s works, among the more recent being: Sobranie khudozhestvennykh proizvedeniy (12 vols, 1948); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (1949 ff.).—TRANSLATIONS: Centenary Edition of T.'s Works (ed. A. Maude, tr. mainly A. and L. Maude, 21 vols, 1928–37); Tales of Army Life (tr. idem, 1935); Tales by T. (tr. idem, 1936); Anna Karenina (tr. R. Edmonds, 1954).

D. Merezhkovsky, T. i Dostoyevsky (2 vols, 1901–02); V. Zelinsky, Russkaya kriticheskaya literatura o proizvedeniyakh Tolstogo (8 vols, 1902–12); Lev Shestov, Dobro i zlo v uchenii Tolstogo i Nietzsche (1907, 1923); Ivanov-Razumnik, L. T. (1910); A. L. Volynsky, L. T. (1910); K. N. Leontyev, O romanakh Tolstogo (1911); R. Rolland, Vie de T. (1911); V. Veresayev, O Dostoyevskom i Tolstom (1913); M. Gorky, Vospominaniya o Tolstom (1919); A. B. Goldenveizer, Vblizi Tolstogo (2 vols, 1922–23); L. L. Tolstoy, La vérité sur mon père (1923); M. A. Aldanov, Zagadka Tolstogo (1923); D. Makovicky, Yasnopolyanské zapiski (1923); P. J. Biryukov, L. N. T. (4 vols, 1923); H. Fausset, T. (1927); N. N. Gusev, Zhizn' L'va Tolstogo (1927), Letopis' zhizni i tvorchestva Tolstogo (1936) and L. N. T. (1954); B. Eichenbaum, L. T. (1928); Sofya A. Tolstaya, Dnevnik (1928); The Diary of T.'s Wife, tr. A. Werth, 1928); M. N. Rozanov, Rousseau i T. (1928); V. B. Shklovsky, Materialy i stil' v romane Voina i mir (1928); V. F. Bulgakov, Tragediya Tolstogo (1928); A. Maude, The Life of T. (2 vols, 1929–30) and The Final Struggle (1936); A. I. Nazarov, T., the Inconstant Genius (1930); S. M. Breitburg, Literatura o Tolstom poslednikh let (1931); Countess A. Tolstoy, The Tragedy of T. (tr. E. Varneck, 1933); L. Dillon, Count L. T. (1934); M. V. Muratov, T. i Chertkov (1934); V. Pozner, T. est mort (1935); G. E. H. Abraham, T. (1935); I. A. Bunin, Osvobozhdenie Tolstogo (1937); F. V. Buslayev, Korrespondenty Tolstogo (1940); L. Derrick, T. (1944); J. Lavrin, T. (1944; New York, 1969); M. Kues, T. vivant (1945); I. I. Polner, T. and His Wife (1946); E. Simmons, L. T. (1946, 1949); P. Boyer, Chez T. (1950); F. Porche, Portrait psychologique de T. (1949); T. v russkoy kritike (ed. S. P. Bychkov, 1952); H. Troyat, Tolstoi (1965; Eng. tr. N. Amphoux, 1968). J.L.

Toman, KAREL, pseud. of ANTONÍN BERNÁŠEK (*Kokovice 25 II 1877; †Prague 12 VI 1946), Czech poet. Influenced in his early days by the aestheticism of the Czech décadents, he developed in his later poetry a melodious, emotionally subtle manner, often successfully treating patriotic themes.

Dílo (1956–57).

J. Hora, K. T. (1935); F. Buriánek, K. T. (1963). R.A.

Tomashevsky, BORIS VIKTOROVICH (*1890), Soviet critic, editor, theoretician of literature and specialist in Pushkin*. With Zhirmunsky*, Shklovsky*, Brik* and Eichenbaum* he belonged in the early 1920s to the FORMALIST group whose members approached literary works from the angle of style and form.

Teoriya literatury. Poetika (1927). J.L.

Tomasi di Lampedusa, GIUSEPPE (*Palermo 23 XII 1896; ∞ Baroness Alessandra Wolff-Stomersee; †Rome 26 VII 1957), Italian novelist. His only novel, Il gattopardo (1958; The Leopard, tr. A. Colquhoun, 1960), written in the last few years of his life, was the result of years of meditation. It was published posthumously and soon became an international best-seller. It is a historical novel set in Sicily between 1860 and the turn of the century and is an interpretation both of Sicily and of the Risorgimento. Tomasi di Lampedusa also wrote short stories (Racconti, 1961; Two Stories and a Memory, tr. A. Colquhoun, 1962).

Opere (1965).

A. Vitello, I Gattopardi di Donnafugata (1963). B.M.

Tomas or Thomas Simonsson (*c. 1380; †1443), Swedish Bishop, poet and politician. He studied abroad, was a supporter of the reforms introduced by the Council of Basle, and in 1429 became Bishop of Strängnäs. In 1439 he took part in the deposition of King Erik and in this connection wrote the first poem in Swedish of which the author is known, Frihetsvisan, the form of which is traditional and the contents topical. He also wrote an allegorical poem on the subject of loyalty.

Poems printed for the first time in Scriptores rerum svecicarum (ed. E. Geijer and J. H. Schröder, 1828; repr. G. Klemming in Svenska medeltidsdikter och rim, 1887–89).

E. Hjärne, 'Biskop T. av Strängnäs visa om striden för Sveriges frihet' in Historisk tidskrift för Finland (1919); L. Sjödin, 'Biskop T.' fosterlands- och frihets-kärlek' in Historisk tidskrift (1925); B. Lönnrot, 'Biskop T.' frihetsvisa' in Scandia (1931); G. Carlsson, Biskop T. av Strängnäs (1955). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Tomáš ze Štítneho, or TOMÁŠ ŠTÍTNÝ (*Štítné c. 1333; †Prague between 1401 and 1409), Czech moralist. A member of the minor nobility, Štítný studied at Prague University, spent some years on his provincial estate and finally (from 1381) sold his landed property and lived in Prague. His theological works (many of them written for the instruction of his children) show little originality in content but are noteworthy in that they are written in Czech. Štítný is thus one of the first prose-writers of Czech literature and in this sense is a forerunner of the 15th-century Czech Reformation with its insistence on the importance of the vernacular.

Řeči besední (ed. M. Hattala, 1897); Knižky šestery o obecných věcech křesťanských (ed. K. J. Erben, 1852); Řeči nedělní a sváteční (ed. J. Straka, 1929); Knihy naučení křesťanského (ed. A. J. Vrt'átko, 1873); Barlaam a Josafat (ed. F. Šimek, 1946); Knižky o hře šachové a jiné (ed. idem, 1956); Sborník vyšehradský (ed. F. Ryšánek, 1960–69).

J. Gebauer, O životě a spisích T. ze Š. (1923).

R.A.

Tomkiss, THOMAS (fl. 1607), University dramatist, English-born. His plays are among the best academic productions of the period, written in fluent verse full of pleasant reminiscences of earlier English poetry.

Lingua: or the combat of the tongue and the five senses for superiority (1607; repr. R. Dodsley, Old Plays, rev. W. Hazlitt, IX; Tudor Facs. Texts, 1913); Albumazar (1615; repr. Dodsley-Hazlitt, XI).

G.K.H.

Tommaseo, NICCOLÒ (*Sebenico, Dalmatia 9 X 1802; †Florence 1 V 1874), Italian scholar and writer who lived by his pen, in his time an important literary and political figure, a radical Catholic who hoped for a spiritual regeneration of society and wrote many moralizing works to further this end. His output was vast and varied and he made passionate attacks on many great contemporary writers; but his undisciplined yet categorical mind never achieved great depth or originality of thought, even in his work on the language, Tuscan but popular in direction, which includes his still useful Nuovo dizionario de' sinonimi della lingua italiana (1830) and the Dizionario della lingua italiana (7 vols, 1858–79), written when he was blind. The tortured mixture of sensuality and spirituality characteristic of his life pervades the novel Fede e bellezza (1840), which shocked many readers, as well as his historical novels, autobiographical prose, lyrics and narrative poems. Though often forced in style and feeling, they include some of the best work of their era.

Tommaseo is perhaps most successful as a translator of folk-poetry, in Canti popolari toscani, corsi, illirici, greci (1841–42), and of Latin poets and the Bible, adhering closely to the texture of his originals.

Numerous sels of T.'s work, several by himself;

Opere (ed. M. Puppo, 2 vols, 1968; the fullest, with a good biblio.).—Dell'Italia (1920; 1st pub. as Opuscoli inediti di fra Girolamo Savonarola, Paris, 1835); Il Duca d'Atene (ibid., 1837); Memorie poetiche (1838; crit. ed. M. Pecoraro, 1964); Studi filosofici (4 vols, 1840); Iskrice (in Serbo-Croat, Zagreb, 1844; N. T.'s Ital. tr., Scinrille); N. T. and G. Capponi, Carteggio inedito dal 1833 al 1874 (4 vols, 1911–32); N. T. and G. P. Vieusseux, Carteggio inedito, I: 1825–1834 (1956).—3 vols of the Edizione Nazionale of T.'s works have appeared.

R. Ciampini, Vita di N. T. (1945); M. Fubini, 'Vita e poesia del T.' in Romanticismo italiano (1953; 4th ed. 1968).

J.G.-R.

Tompa, MIHÁLY (*Rimaszombat 28 IX 1817; †1849 Emilia Zsoldos; †Hanva 30 VII 1868), Hungarian poet. During a life of illness and melancholy Tompa claimed recognition from Petőfi* and Arany*. His poetry consists of romantic lyrics, verse myths and legends, and a few narrative poems. He is at his greatest as a nature poet.

Népregék és mondák (1846); T. M. versei (2 vols, 1847–54).—T. M. munkái (ed. J. Lévy, 4 vols, 1902–05).

M. Lengyel, T. M. élete és művei (1906); L. Kéký, T. M. (1912).

G.F.C.

Tone, THEOBALD WOLFE (*Dublin 20 VI 1763; †1785 Matilda Witherington; †ibid. 19 XI 1798), Irish revolutionary and political writer; educated at Trinity College, Dublin; barrister; founder of the Society of United Irishmen. A Protestant himself, he produced An Argument on behalf of the Catholics of Ireland in 1791. His political aim was to create a united nation which would cut across all barriers of class or creed. Fighting in the nationalist cause he attempted to enlist French aid, was captured and died in prison. Tone was one of the founders of Irish democratic republicanism and his writings have influenced Irish political writing into the 20th century.

Autobiography and Writings (ed. William Tone, 2 vols, 1826); Autobiography (abr. S. O'Faolain, 1937).—Frank MacDermot, T. W. T. (1939).

E.T.W.

Tonniss, JAN, 17th-century Dutch playwright, Professor of Hebrew at Coster's* academy, wrote a Joseph trilogy, Joseph's Droef- en Bly-Eynd' spel (1639), which Vondel* must have known. However, the only classical element is the chorus.

A.M.B.W.

W. A. P. Smit, Van Pascha tot Noah, I (1956).

R.P.M.

Tony: see Bergmann, ANTON.

Tooke, originally HORNE, JOHN (*Westminster

25 VI 1736; †Wimbledon 18 III 1812), English politician of turbulent career and pioneer philologist, for whom this science subserved his nominalist philosophy. He emphasized the importance of Gothic and Old English studies. R.M.H.

The Petition of an Englishman (1765); Oration ... at a Meeting of the Freeholders of Middlesex (1769); The Diversions of Purley (1786 and 1798; philol. work).

A. Stephens, Memoirs of J. H. T. (2 vols, 1813); J. A. Graham, Memoirs of T. ... with his Speeches and Writings (1828); M. C. Yarborough, J. H. T. (1926); H. Aarsleff, The Study of Language in England, 1780-1860 (1967).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Topelius, ZACHARIAS (*Kuddnäs 14 I 1818; ∞1845 Emilie Lindquist; †Sipoo 12 III 1898), Swedish poet, novelist and short-story writer of Finland. The son of the folk-lore collector Zacharias Topelius the elder, he received an excellent education, studying under Runeberg* in Helsinki and graduating in 1840. He taught at the Helsinki Lycaum and later became a Professor and Rector of Helsinki University. Topelius published his early verse in 1845 and after that was prolific in various fields, including those of children's literature, memoirs, travel literature and scholarship. He resembles Runeberg in his optimism, idealism, ethical interests and love of Finland. All his works have been translated into Finnish.

VERSE: Ljungblommor (3 vols, 1845-54); Nya blad (1870); Ljung (1889).—NOVELS AND STORIES: Hertiginnan af Finland (1850); Fältskärens berättelser (1853-64); The Surgeon's Stories, tr. S. Borg and M. A. Brown, 5 vols, 1872-74; Vinterqvällar (1880-97); Planeternas skyddslingar (1886); Ljungars saga (1896).—PLAYS: Efter femtio år (1851); Kung Karls jakt (1852); Regina von Emmeritz (1854); Hangö's öga (1867); Prinsessan af Cypern (1881).—CHILDREN'S BOOKS: Sagor (3 vols, 1847-49); Naturens bok (1856); Läsning för barn (8 vols, 1865-96); Fairy Tales From Finland, tr. E. R. Christie, 1896; Boken om vårt land (1875); Evangelium för barnen (1893).—MISCELLANEOUS PROSE: Söder om Östersjön (1856-57); Londonbref (1860); Dagböcker (diaries; 4 vols, 1918-24); Självybiografiska anteckningar (1922).—Samlade skrifter (coll. writings; 34 vols, 1904-07).

E. G. Palmén, Z. T. oman ajan arvostelussa (1899); E. Vest, Z. T. (1906); V. Vasenius, Z. T. (6 vols, 1912-33); S. Lagerlöf, Z. T. (1920); E. N. Tigerstedt, T.-studier (1943); M. Granér, Z. T.'s kärlekslyrik (1946); K. Laurent, T. saturo-noilijana (1947); P. B. Nyberg, Z. T. (2 vols, 1950); B. Lunelund-Grönroos, Z. T.'s tryckte skrifter (1954) and T. sagor på utländska språk (1956). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Topirceanu, GHEORGHE (*Bucharest 1886; †Iasi 1937), Rumanian poet and humorist, author of clever verse parodies and of prose reminiscences of war experiences.

VERSE: Balade vesele (1916); Parodii originale (1916; 3rd ed. 1927); Balade vesele și triste (1920; 4th ed. 1931); Migdale amare (1928); Postume (1938).—Opere alese (intro. A. Săndulescu, 1959).—PROSE: Amintiri din luptele de la Turtucaia (1918); Scrisori fără adresă (1930; 3rd ed. 1934); Pirin-Planina (1936).

A. Săndulescu, G. T. (1958); Otilia Cazimir, Prietenii mei scriitori (1960); C. Ciopraga, G. T. (1966). F.J.B.

Toplady, AUGUSTUS MONTAGUE (*Farnham 4 XI 1740; †London 14 VIII 1778), English divine, apologist of Calvinism and writer of hymns, including 'Rock of Ages'.

Memoirs (1778); Works (with memoir by W. Row; 1794); Historic Proof of the Doctrinal Calvinism of the Church of England (2 vols, 1774); Psalms and Hymns (1776, etc.).

T. Wright, Life of A. M. T. (1911).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Topsøe, VILHELM CHRISTIAN SIGURD (*Skelskør 5 X 1840; ∞1868 Augusta Pauline Kirstine Petersen; †Skodsborg 11 VII 1881), Danish novelist and short-story writer; editor of the Copenhagen paper Dagbladet from 1872. As a creative writer he was influenced in style and technique by Dickens* and Thackeray*. In spite of his realism he was disliked by Georg Brandes* and his circle, because of his conservative views. He depicts contemporary life with subtle irony.

NOVELS: Jason med det gyldne Skind (1875); Slagne Folk (1892).—SHORT STORIES: Skizzer af Xox (1863); I Solskin (1867); Nutidsbilleder (1878); Fra Studiebogen (1879); Samlede Fortællinger (3 vols, 1891).—ESSAYS AND VARIOUS: Fra Schweitz og Frankrig (1871); Fra Amerika (1872); Politiske Portrætsstudier (1878).—Udvalgte Skrifter (2 vols, 1923).

V. Andersen, V. T. (1922).

E.B.

Torelli-Benedetti, BARBARA (*Parma 21 II 1546; ∞G. P. Benedetti; †after 1598), Italian poet. Her pastoral drama Partenia in blank verse and five acts is contemporaneous with Pastor Fido and derives from Aminia.

Partenia remains in MS in Cremona.—One sonnet in Componimenti poetici delle più illustri rimatrici d'ogni secolo (ed. L. Bergalli, 1726).

G. Zonta, 'La "Partenia" di B. T.-B.' in Rassegna bibliografica della lett. ital., XIV (1906). P.McN.

Torelli-Strozzi, BARBARA (*1475; ∞1491 Ercole Bentivoglio, ∞1508 Ercole Strozzi*; †Bologna 17 XI 1533), Italian poet. Her second husband's mysterious murder evoked one of the most moving sonnets in the Italian language. The attribution of this sonnet is, however, disputed.

Lirici del Cinquecento (ed. L. Baldacci, 1957).

M. Catalano, 'La tragica morte di Ercole Strozzi e il sonetto di B. T.' in Archivum romanicum, X (1926); M. A. Mortara, 'La morte di Ercole Strozzi poeta ferrarese' in La Rassegna, 4th ser., XXXVI (1928); L. Falchi, 'Per un sonetto attribuito a B. T.', ibid., XXXVII (1929). P.McN.

Torga, MIGUEL, pseud. of ADOLFO CORREIA DA ROCHA (*S. Martinho de Anta 1907), Portuguese poet, short-story writer and playwright. His verse offers a somewhat abstract affirmation of human values which already indicates a state of crisis. He is at his best in the short story, particularly in those dealing with his own backward province of Trás-os-Montes. Vindima (1945), his only novel, is a harrowing tale of exploitation and disaster in the Douro wine-producing country. Bichos (1940) is a set of humorous animal stories.

VERSE: Ansiedade (1928); Rampa (1930); Tributo (1931); Abismo (1932); O outro livro de Job (1936); Lamentação (1943); Odes (1945); Libertação (1945); Nihil sibi (1948); Cantico do homem (1950); Orfeu rebelde (1958); Camara ardente (1963).—PROSE: Pão azimo (1931); A criação do mundo (3 vols, 1937–38); Diário (9 vols, 1941–64); Montanha (1941); Rua (1942); Novos contos da montanha (1944).—PLAYS: Terra firme; Mar (1941).

Castro Gil, Mário de Sá-Carneiro, M. T., José Régio (1949); E. Lourenço, O desespero humanista de M. T. (1955); J. de Melo, M. T. (1960). T.P.W.

Torhout, MARTIJN VAN, 13th-century Dutch poet, monk of Eename near Oudenaerde. He reveals himself as the poet of Vander Biechten in the colophon of a MS at Oudenaerde. Some also ascribe to him the extensive and remarkable poem Van den levene ons heren and even all the works (mainly hagiographies) in the MS mentioned above.

J. van Mierlo, 'M. van T.' in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1938–39); W. H. Beuken in Album Philologicum... Th. Baader (1939); J. A. N. Knuttel in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXIV (1946); Vanden levene ons Heren (ed. W. H. Beuken, 2 vols, 1968). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Törneros, ADOLF (*Eskilstuna 24 XII 1794; †Uppsala 20 I 1839), Swedish author and scholar. Törneros was Professor of aesthetics at Uppsala 1829–32 and Professor of Latin there 1832–39, a friend of Atterbom* and an adherent of the Romantic Fosforister. His literary style was influenced by Sterne* and Jean* Paul: his best-known writings are his accounts (largely in letter form) of travel, especially in Södermanland, which reflect his aesthetic contemplative nature.

Bref och dagboksanteckningar (ed. E. A. Schröder, with biog. by P. Atterbom, 2 vols, 1840–42; new ed. J. Landquist, 2 vols, 1925); Sommarodyssé (ed. N. Afzelius, 1932).

O. Östergren, Stilistiska studier i T.' språk (1905); M. Montgomery-Silfvertolpe, Memoarer (4 vols, 1908–11); S. Siwertz, A. T. Försök till ett porträtt (1961). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Torquemada, ANTONIO DE (fl. mid-16th century), Spanish miscellany-writer. His satirical colloquies (1553) contain much information about 16th-century life. His Jardín (1570) is a miscellany of popular and learned wisdom. His influence, like Mexía's*, was considerable in Spain and abroad. He also wrote a novel of chivalry, Don Olivante de Laura (1564).

Jardín de flores curiosas (ed. A. G. de Amezúa, 1943; Eng. tr., The Spanish Mandeule of miracles, 1600); Coloquios satíricos (in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., VII). E.M.W.

Torre, ALFONSO DE LA (fl. mid-15th century), Spanish prose-writer and poet. He studied at Salamanca. His Visión deleitable (late 1430s) is an allegorical encyclopaedia which draws on late classical, Arabic and Jewish sources. Though no source is later than the 12th century, the Visión remained popular until the mid-17th (Ital. tr. by Delfino, 1556; retr. into Span. 1663).

Visión deleitable in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXVI.

J. P. Wickersham Crawford, 'The Visión delectable of A. de la T. and Maimonides' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XXVIII (1913) and 'The seven liberal arts in the Visión delectable of A. de la T.' in Romanic Rev., IV (1913). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Torre, FRANCISCO DE LA (fl. mid-16th century), Spanish poet. Nothing is known of his life. The poems were ready for publication before 1594. Quevedo* published the first edition in 1631 to counteract GONGORISM. The poems are elegant, Italianate sonnets, odes and eclogues. The poet has been falsely identified with Alfonso de la Torre* and with Quevedo himself.

Obras (facs. ed. New York, 1903); Poesías (ed. A. Zamora Vicente, 1944).

J. P. Wickersham Crawford, 'F. de la T. y sus poesías' in Homenaje a Ramón Menéndez Pidal, II (1925). E.M.W.

Torre, GUILLERMO DE (*Madrid 1900; ∞Norah Borges), Spanish writer. After studying law at Madrid University he became the leader of the avant-garde literary movement of ultraismo (Manifesto vertical ultraista, 1920; Hélices, 1923). His book Literaturas europeas de vanguardia (1925) is very valuable for the understanding of this period. He was co-founder of the influential literary review La Gaceta Literaria (1927). More recently his most outstanding publications have been Problemática de la literatura (1951), La metamorfosis de Proteo (1956) and El fiel de la balanza (1961).

N. Jiménez, 'G. de T. y la nueva poesía' in América, IX (Quito, 1934). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Torres Bodet, JAIME (*1902), Mexican poet who has advanced from simple, intimate verse to a brilliant, but sometimes over-clever, manipulation of images.

Fervor (1918); El corazón delirante (1922); Canciones (1922); La casa (1923); Nuevas canciones (1923); Los días (1923); Poemas (1924); Biondo (1925); Destierro (1930); Cripta (1937).—Poesía de J. T. B. (1965). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Torres Naharro, BARTOLOMÉ DE (*nr Badajoz; †?1524), Spanish poet and dramatist. He was a priest who had endured shipwreck and captivity by the Moors. He lived in Rome, where his plays were acted, and in Naples, where his Propalladia, a collection of seven plays, was printed in 1517. Two more plays appeared in later editions. The preface emphasizes the importance of fitness in drama, quotes Horace* and Cicero*, and divides comedies into the realistic and the fantastic. His two realistic plays vividly describe life in the army and in a great household. The fantastic include Himeneo (whose source is La Celestina*) in which an angry brother portrays Spanish dramatic honour for the first time. This is the first Spanish cloak-and-sword play. In others he introduces characters who speak in Valencian, dog-Latin and Italian. His works were included in the Index of 1559, but they were reissued in an intelligently expurgated edition in 1573.

Propalladia (ed. M. Cañete and M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 2 vols, 1880–1900); Propalladia and Other Works (ed. J. E. Gillet and O. H. Green, Bryn Mawr, 4 vols, 1943–61); Tres comedias (ed. H. López Morales, New York, 1965).

J. E. Gillet, 'T. N. and the Spanish drama of the 16th century' in Estudios eruditos in memoriam de Adolfo Bonilla y San Martín, II (1930; contin. in Hispanic Rev., V, 1937); J. P. W. Crawford, Spanish Drama Before Lope de Vega (1937).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Torres Villarroel, DIEGO DE (*Salamanca 1693; †ibid. 19 VI 1770), Spanish writer and poet. He studied the humanities at Salamanca. Hermit, soldier, alchemist, dancer and bullfighter, he ended by qualifying in medicine, becoming Professor of mathematics at Salamanca, and finally taking religious Orders in 1745. He died honoured by the whole nation.

The amazing ups and downs of his life are told in his famous Vida (1743–58), witty, cynical confessions written in an easy style with superb narrative; a remarkable autobiography which put an end to the picaresque novel. Voracious, disorderly reading of mathematics and philosophy led to curious semi-scientific books on the philosopher's stone and other strange subjects; and above all to his Gran Piscator, begun in 1721 and continued throughout his life. The fulfilment of a few of his prophecies gave him a nation-wide popularity. As a social satire of the period his burlesque poetry is almost equal to Quevedo's*. In it popular and culto elements are beautifully combined. Among other works he wrote a very fine biography of Sor Gregoria de Santa Teresa (1738) and a series of sketches of Madrid life—Sueños, 1743—of great literary and historical value.

Obras completas (15 vols, 1794–99); Vida, ascendencia, nacimiento, crianza y aventuras del doctor don D. de T. V., escrita por él mismo (with pref. by F. de Onís in Clás. Cast., VII); Visiones y visitas de T. con don Francisco de Quevedo por la Corte (ed. R. P. Sebold, ibid., 1966).—Poesías in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXI.

A. García Boiza, Don D. T. de V. (1911) and Nuevos datos sobre don D. T. de V. (1918); J. Entrambasaguas, 'Un memorial autobiográfico de T. V.' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Esp., XVIII (1931); A. Berenguer Carisomo, El doctor D. T. de V. o el pícaro universal (1964).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Torti, GIOVANNI (*Milan 24 VI 1774; †Genoa 15 II 1852), Italian scholar and poet, a friend and admirer of Parini* but also esteemed by Manzoni* and Grossi*; best known for his Epistola sui Sepolcri di Ugo Foscolo e di Ippolito Pindemonte (1808).

Poesie complete (1853).

E. G. Bellorini, 'G. T.' in Studi di lett. ital., VII (1907) and VIII (1908). N.K.W.

Toshiyori: see MINAMOTO NO TOSHIYORI.

Tōson: see SHIMAZAKI TŌSON.

Tostado, EL: see MADRIGAL, ALFONSO DE.

Tóth, ÁRPÁD (*Arad 14 IV 1886; †Budapest 7 XI 1928), Hungarian author. Both in his original lyrics and in his translations, Tóth displayed an unusual mastery of language and poetic form. The sheer beauty and pathos of his works made him outstanding in an age of literary experiment.

VERSE: Hajnali szerenád (1913); Lélektől lélekig (1928).—T. Á. összes versei (coll. verse; ed. L. Szabó, 1935); T. Á. összes művei (ed. L. Kardos, 4 vols, 1964–69).

L. Kardos, T. Á. (1955); G. Makay, T. Á. (1968). G.F.C.

Totius, pseud. of JACOB DANIEL DU TOIT (*Paarl, Cape Colony 21 II 1877; ∞1903 Maria Postma; †Potchefstroom 1 VII 1953), Afrikaans poet. He grew up in an atmosphere of national awakening, in which his father was a leading figure. He was chaplain with Boer commandos during the South African War and from 1911 to 1949 was Professor of theology at Potchefstroom and leading churchman of the Dutch Reformed Church. He played a great part in the translation of the Bible into Afrikaans. He is essentially a lyric poet, even in his treatment of epic subjects. His poetry is not rich in imagery or in musical and rhythmic beauty but is of a moving, child-like simplicity and directness. His writings show the influence of the Flemish poet Gezelle*. G.D.

Coll. works (8 vols, 1960–62).—VERSE: By die Monument (1909); Wilgerboombogies (1912); Rachel (1913); Kinderverse (1920); Passieblomme (1934); Uit Donker Afrika (1936); Skemering (1948).—PROSE: Ds. S. J. du T. in Weg en Werk (1917); Bybellande Deurreis (1945).

L. J. du Plessis, T. in sy Verse (1924); C. M. van den Heever, Die Digter T. (1932) and Keur uit die Gedigte van T. (1941); T. T. Cloete, Die Wêreld is ons Woning nie (1936) and T. (1961); G. Dekker, T. as Psalmberymmer (1938); P. J. Nienaber, T., Digter en Profeet (1948). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Tottel, RICHARD (*Exeter c. 1530; †Wiston, Pemb. VII 1593), English printer. Tottel printed the first miscellany of English lyric verse (now always known by his name) and thus set the fashion in courtly lyric, for poets as well as printers, for the rest of the century. Shakespeare* mentions Tottel's 'Book of Songs and Sonnets' in The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Songs and Sonnets (1557; ed. H. E. Rollins, 1928, 1965). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Toulet, PAUL JEAN (*Pau 5 VI 1867; †Guéthary 6 IX 1920), French poet and novelist. Toulet's parents came from Mauritius. His chief work is a collection of short poems marked by their brilliantly ingenious versification (Les contrerimes, 1921). The same virtuosity shows in his novels—witty and sensitive accounts of the often licentious manners of the France of 1900.

NOVELS: Monsieur du Paur, homme public (1898); Le mariage de Don Quichotte (1901); Les tendres ménages (1904); Mon amie Nane (1905); La jeune fille verte (1920); Les demoiselles La Mortague (1923).—VARIOUS: Les contes de Behanzigue (1920); Notes de littérature (1926); Lettres à soi-même (1927).

T. Derême, En rêvant à T. (1927); P. O. Walzer, P. J. T. (1949). M.G.; J.P.R.

Tourgée, ALBION WINEGAR (*Williamsfield, Ohio 2 V 1838; ∞1863 Emma Kilbourne; †Bordeaux, France 21 V 1905), American novelist. A Union officer in the Civil War, he later became a radical Reconstructionist in the South. Though the plots of his novels were often romantic, his fiction was seriously concerned with racial and political tensions in the South during the Civil War and Reconstruction.

**Toinette* (1874); A Fool's Errand (1879); Figs and Thistles (1879); Bricks Without Straw (1880); The Invisible Empire (1883); Hot Ploughshares (1883); Pactolus Prime (1890).

R. F. Dibble, A. W. T. (1921); T. L. Gross, A. W. T. (1963); D. H. Olsen, Carpetbagger's Crusade: The Life of A. W. T. (1965). I.W.

Tourneur, CYRIL (*c. 1575; †Kinsale, Ireland 28 II 1626), English poet and dramatist. An imitator of Marston*, both in his satirical poem The Transformed Metamorphosis and in his tragedies, Tourneur shows in The Revenger's Tragedy (1607; issued anonymously but probably his) a burning intensity in his vision of evil which is almost unique in English drama. The Atheist's Tragedy (1611) is a work of less brilliance but is not without its own brooding view of the world and a certain clumsy effectiveness. G.K.H.

The Revenger's Tragedie (ed. G. B. Harrison, 1934; ed. R. A. Foakes, 1966); The Atheist's Tragedy (ed. Irving Ribner, 1964).—Plays and Poems (ed. J. C. Collins, 2 vols, 1878); Complete Works (ed. A. Nicoll, 1930).

T. S. Eliot, 'C. T.' in Elizabethan Essays (1934); U. M. Ellis-Fermor, 'The imagery of The Revenger's Tragedie and The Atheist's Tragedie' in Mod. Lang. Rev. (1935); P. B. Murray, A Study of C. T. (1964). J.R.B. (C.B.)

Toussaint, (ANNA LOUISA) GEERTRUIDA: see Bosboom-Toussaint, ANNA LOUISA GEERTRUIDA.

Toussaint van Boelaere, FERNAND VICTOR (*Anderlecht 19 II 1875; †Brussels 30 IV 1947), Flemish short-story writer, essayist, critic and poet. His themes included country and town stories, dream-stories and hedonistic fantasies. A tragic note is often apparent in the austere style of his excellent prose. In accordance with his opinion that art is a condensation and crystallization of experience, his interest was focused upon the short story.

Landelijk minnespel (1910); De bloeiende verwachting (1913); Petruskens einde (1917); Het gesprek in Tractoria (1923); Le dialogue dans un music-hall, tr. B. Colin, (1931); De zilveren vruchtenschaal (1924); De Peruviaansche reis (1925); Turren (1935); De doode die zich niet verhing (1937); Het Barceloneesche avontuur (1944); Drie rozen van den struik (1945); Mallorca en de nymfen (1946); Zwart en goud (1948).—ESSAYS AND CRITICISM: Zurkel en blauwe lavendel (1926); Litterair scheepsjournaal (3 vols, 1938–46); Geur van bukshout (1940).—VERSE: Latere bekendenis (1909); De gouden oogst (1944).

R. Roemans, Analytische bibliographie van en over F. V. T. van B. (1936); Album Amicorum F. V. T. van B. (1946). R.F.L.

Towneley (or Wakefield) Cycle. The dual designation of this cycle of Miracle plays derives from circumstances surrounding its unique MS. Found in the library of the Towneley family at Towneley Hall, Lancs, it is reputed to have originated from Woodkirk Abbey near Wakefield and is now in the Huntington Library in California. Records of the Burgess Court in Wakefield, however, prove that a Corpus Christi Cycle existed belonging to the trade guilds of that city of which there is no trace unless the Towneley MS is accepted as being that cycle, a supposition strongly supported by topographical references in The Play of the Fall and the Secunda Pastorum.

The MS is of the mid-15th century, but some of the plays are of earlier origins. Modern scholarship asserts that the 32 plays in the full cycle comprise three distinct styles: at some time c. 1390 Wakefield borrowed and copied the *York* Cycle* as it then stood (first and second styles) in toto, and when the present MS was compiled extensive local redactions were incorporated (third style). The latter, characterized by use of a nine-line stanza, are known as the work of 'the Wakefield Master' and are distinguished by disregard of convention, humour and fierce social criticism.

The Cycle was suppressed in 1576. It was revived at the Mermaid Theatre, London (1961), at the Derby Playhouse and in Derby Cathedral (1968) and at Bretton Hall, near Wakefield (1967).

Ed. G. England and A. W. Pollard (1897; repr. 1966).

L. Wann, 'A new examination of the MS of the T. Plays' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XLIII (1928); A. C. Cawley, The Wakefield Pageants in the T. C. (1958). G.W.

Townshend, AURELIAN (*not later than 1583; ∞?London before 1623 Anne Wythies; †?London c. 1646-47), English poet and writer of masques performed at Court (1632), who was employed abroad by Cecil (1603) and accompanied Sir E. Herbert* to Paris (1608).

Poems and Masks (ed. E. K. Chambers, 1912).

G. C. M. Smith, 'A. T.' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XII (1917); Times Lit. Supp. (23 Oct. 1924).

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Toynbee, ARNOLD JOSEPH (*14 IV 1889), English scholar. Professor of history, University of London and Director of Studies at the Royal Institute of International Affairs (1925-55), editor of an extensive series on British foreign policy. His writings embrace classical scholarship, politics, history, religion and travel, his masterwork being A Study of History (I-III, 1934; IV-VI, 1939; VII-X, 1954; XI, 1958; XII, 1961). As one man's prophetic vision of the human universe this monumentally erudite survey of 21 civilizations, attacked in detail by professional historians, has found a widespread response in readers at large.

M. Popper, A Bibliography of the Works in English of A. T. 1910-1954 (1955).—A Study of History (abr. D. C. Somerwell, I-VI, 1946, VII-X, 1957; illus. ed., abr. A. J. T. with J. Caplan, 1 vol., 1972); for crit. see: T. and History (ed. M. F. Ashley Montagu, Boston, 1956); The Intent of T.'s History (ed. E. T. Gargan, Chicago, 1961).

J.B.-B.

Tozzi, FEDERIGO (*Siena 1 I 1883; †Rome 21 III 1920), Italian writer who won posthumous acclaim for his novel Tre croci (1920). An often needy provincial, he founded the short-lived Catholic cultural periodical La Torre before moving to Rome. Despite some crudities, Tozzi's nervous style and starkly haunting concreteness in his stories and in other largely autobiographical novels like Bestie (1917) and Con gli occhi chiusi (1918) evoke a sense of damnation hanging over his provincial world and its inhabitants.

Opere complete (1943-60).

P. Cesarini, Vita di F. T. (1935); E. De Michelis, Saggio su F. T. (1936). J.G.-R.

Traherne, THOMAS (*Hereford c. 1 III 1637/28 II 1639; †Teddington c. 27 IX/X 1674), English mystical religious prose writer and poet. Educated at Brasenose College, Oxford, presented to the living of Credenhill (1657), he became chaplain to Sir Orlando Bridgeman (1669) who took him to Teddington. Traherne's simple, clear prose is best in sentences, weakest in its development in paragraphs; his verse, often intense in its simplicity, nevertheless fails sometimes by lack of discipline. He is inspired in both verse and prose with a radiant certainty of the goodness of the Creator and of the Creation. Despite his learning and devotion he strikes some modern minds as naively idealistic, unaware of, rather than transcending, evil. B.L.J.

Centuries, Poems and Thanksgivings (ed. H. M. Margoliouth, 2 vols, 1958; ed. A. Ridler, 1966).

J. B. Leishman, Metaphysical Poets (1934); G. I. Wade, T. T. (1944); K. W. Salter, T. T. (1964); A. L. Clements, The Mystical Poetry of T. T. (1969); S. Stewart, The Expanded Voice (1970). J.R.B. (A.N.W.)

Trakl, GEORG (*Salzburg 3 II 1887; †Cracow 3 XI 1914), Austrian poet. A hypersensitive, pathologically suffering man, he needed the help of alcohol and drugs, which ended his life prematurely. Death and decay are the main subjects of his poetry, which constitutes one of the most striking formal achievements in German. His system of colours, sounds, and ciphers creates a logic of its own, assuring the precise impact of the imagery. Trakl has been called many things—Impressionist, Expressionist, Imagist, Surrealist.

Despite his small output, he is a major modern poet.

Gedichte (1913); Die Dichtungen (coll. poems; ed. K. Röck, 1919); Gesang des Abgeschiedenen (sel. poems; 1932); Aus goldenem Kelch (early poems; 1939, 1951); Offenbarung und Untergang (prose poems; 1948).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesammelte Werke (ed. W. Schneditz, 3 vols, 1948–51); Dichtungen, historisch-kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. W. Killy and H. Sklenar, 2 vols, 1969).—Decline; 12 Poems (tr. M. Hamburger, 1952); 20 Poems of G. T. (tr. J. Wright and R. Bly, 1961).

T. Spoerri, G. T. (1954); E. Lachmann, Kreuz und Abend: Eine Interpretation der Dichtungen G. T.s (1954); W. Ritzer, T.-Bibliographie (1956); H. Goldmann, Katabasis: Eine tiefenpsychologische Studie zur Symbolik der Dichtungen T.s (1957); L. Dietz, Die lyrische Form G. T.s (1959); W. Killy, Über G. T. (1960); T. S. Casey, Manshape That Shone: An Interpretation of T. (1964); O. Basil, G. T. in Selbstzeugnissen und Bilddokumenten (1965); U. Jaspersen, G. T. (1965); E. E. George, 'On seeing and hearing the poem: an experiment with T.'s "Afra"' in Orbis Litterarum, XXI (1966); Erinnerung an G. T. (3rd enlarged ed. 1966); R. Blass, Die Dichtung G. T.s (1968); H. G. Kemper, G. T.s Entwürfe (1970).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Trancoso, GONÇALO FERNANDES (*c. 1520; †c. 1596), Portuguese short-story writer. He began to write his collection of moral tales at the time of the Lisbon plague of 1569, in which he lost his wife and children. Many of his 38 stories are directly based on Italian novelle from Boccaccio* to Bandello*; attractively written, they constitute the only instance of this genre in classical Portuguese literature.

Contos e histórias de proveito e exemplo (I, II, 1575; III, 1596; complete ed. 1624; ed. A. dos Campos, Antologia portuguesa: T., 1921).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 'Cuentos portugueses de G. F. T.' in Orígenes de la novela, II (1907).

T.P.W.

Třanovský, Jiří, Latinized GEORGIUS TRANOSCIVS (*Těšín 27 III 1592; †Liptovský Sv. Mikuláš 29 V 1637), Czech author of Czech and Latin poems who died as an exile in Slovakia. He is best remembered for his Cithara Sanctorum (Levoča, 1636), a collection of Czech Protestant hymns (by himself and others) which gained great popularity, especially in Slovakia.

J. T.: Sborník k 300. výročí kancionálu Cithara sanctorum (1936); J. Ďurovič, Životopis Juraja Tránovského (1942).

R.A.

Tranströmer, TOMAS GÖSTA (*Stockholm 15 IV

1931; ∞1958 Monica Bladh), Swedish poet with a sense of wonder at life. His rich imagery is concentrated and strictly controlled and his verse seems deceptively simple.

17 dikter (1954); Hemligheter på vägen (1958); Den halvfärdiga himlen (1962); Klanger och spår (1966).

I.S.

Trausti, JÓN, pseud. of GUDMUNDUR MAGNÚSSON (*Rif, Melrakkaslétta 12 II 1873; ∞1898 Guðrún Sigurðardóttir; †Reykjavík 18 XI 1918), Icelandic novelist and poet. Of a poor family of cottars, Jón Trausti was for several years a farm-hand and fisherman. Later he became a printer. In 1896 he visited Copenhagen to study the theatre and from 1898 he lived in Reykjavík, engaging in a variety of occupations until his untimely death from Spanish influenza. After having produced two volumes of well-formed but not particularly important verse and an unsuccessful play, he found his true genre in the novel and the short story. His themes are social and historical, set in rural Iceland.

Trausti's literary qualities include considerable power of characterization and a narrative talent which only occasionally flags. His attitude to the problems he poses is well-balanced, conservative and manly, and is perhaps best characterized by his pen-name, 'Stalwart John'.

VERSE: Heima og erlendis (1899); Íslandsvísur (1903); Kvæðabók (1922).—PLAYS: Teitur (1903); Dóttir Faraós (1914).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Ferðaminningar (1905); Halla (1906); Leysing (1907); Heiðarhylið (4 vols, 1908–11); Borgir (1909); Smásögur (2 vols, 1909–12); Sögur frá Skaftáreldi (2 vols, 1912–13); Góðir stofnar (1914–15); Tvær gamlar sögur (1916); Bessi gamli (1918); Samtíningur (1920); Ferðasögur (1930); Ríttisafn (ed. S. Einarsson, 8 vols, 1939–46; with biog.).

R.G.P.

Traven, BRUNO, prob. pseud. for BERICK TRAVEN TORSVAN (*Chicago 5 III 1890; †Mexico City 27 III 1969), Mexican-German writer. Actor and pacifist in Germany, he participated in the Munich communistic revolt of 1918–19. He fled to Mexico in 1923. His stories about the American West became popular with socialist readers.

STORIES: Der Schatz der Sierra Madre (1927; tr. The Treasure of the Sierra Madre, 1935); Das Totenschiff (1930; tr. The Death Ship, 1934); Die Baumwollpflücker (1931; tr. The Cotton-Pickers, 1956).

R. Recknagel, 'Der Empörer B. T.' in Weimarer Beiträge (1963); anon. in New York Times (27 Mar. 1969).

E.R.

Travérs, GIAN (*Zuoz 1483; †ibid. 1563), Ræto-Romansch poet and dramatist. Born of a distinguished Engadine family, he played a prominent rôle in the political life of his country, becoming the leading statesman of the Grisons. An adherent of the Reformation, in his Chianzun dalla guerra dagl Chiastè da Mûs (wr. 1527), a vigorous and rough-hewn action poem, he gives a vivid account of his policy and his struggle to retain the lands subject to the Grisons. It is the earliest literary monument in Romansch which has come down to us. Travers' Biblical dramas, the first Ræto-Romansch attempts in the genre, derive from Latin and German models.

La Chianzun dalla guerra dagl Chiastè da Mûs in Annalas da la Soc. Retorum, LVI (1942).—PLAYS: La Histoargia dalg bio Patriarch Joseph (perf. 1534); La Histoargia dalg filg pertz (perf. 1542); La Chianzun da Joseph l'g filg da Jakob (perf. 1548; ed. J. Ulrich in Rætoromanische Chrestomathie, 1883, and C. Decurtins, ibid., 1900). R.R.B.

Traversari, AMBROGIO (ST AMBROSE OF CAMALDOLI) (*Portico, Florence 16 IX 1386; †Florence 21 X 1439), Italian scholar and general of the Camaldolese Order, translated many of the Greek Fathers into humanist Latin. Employed by the Papacy at the Councils of Basle and Florence and on monastic reform which he described in his Hodoeporicon.

Hodoeporicon (Lucca, 1678); Epistolae et orationes (Florence, 1759).

A. Dini-Traversari, A. T. e suoi tempi (1912); G. G. Coulton, Five Centuries of Religion, IV (1950). D.H.

Trayanov, TEODOR (*Pazarjik 30 I 1882; †Sofia 15 I 1945), Bulgarian poet. Having studied in Vienna and served in his legation there, he became the laureate of Bulgarian Symbolist poetry, founding with L. Stoyanov* its journal Hyperion and editing it during 1922–32. An enigmatic and introvert figure, he wrote verse often complex but of compelling strength and musicality, especially when concerned with his favourite theme of the rodina ('homeland').

Regina Mortua (1908); Himni i baladi (1911); Bulgarski baladi (1921); Romantichni pesni (1923); Pessen na pesnite (1923); Osvobodenyat chovek (1929); Panteon (1934).

M. Benarova, T. i negoviya mir (1926); G. Tsanev, Ot simbolizum kum realizum (1948). V.P.

Traz, ROBERT DE (*Paris 14 V 1884; †Nice 9 I 1951), Swiss novelist, essayist and critic; educated in Paris. A Protestant preoccupied with the complexity of moral problems and a penetrating analyst of inner conflicts. He was director of La Voile latine (1905–10), Les Feuilles (1911–13) and La Revue de Genève (1920–30).

La puritaine et l'amour (1917); Fiançailles

(1922); L'écorché (1927); À la poursuite du vent (1932); Les heures de silence (1934; Silent Hours, tr. D. M. Richardson, 1934); L'ombre et le soleil (1942); La blessure secrète (1944).—CRITICISM: Alfred de Vigny (1928); L'esprit de Genève (1929); The Spirit of Geneva, tr. F.-A. Kindler, (1935); Le pouvoir des fables (1935); La famille Brontë (1939); Pierre Loti (1948).

Le souvenir de R. de T. (1952). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Trede, PAUL (*Brockdorf, Holstein 19 VIII 1829; †Bremen 29 VI 1908), Low German writer. He resembles Fehrs* in his simplicity of language, terseness of composition and depth of psychology.

Abel (1880); Lena Ellerbrok (1884); Brochdörper Lüd. Allerhand plattdütsche Stückschens (1890).

E. Pörksen, 'P. T.' in Niedersachsen, IX (1904); L. Schröder in Mitteilungen Quickborn, II (1908). G.C.

Tredyakovsky, VASILY KIRILLOVICH (*Astrakhan 9 II 1703; †St Petersburg 6 VIII 1769), Russian pseudo-classic poet, chiefly remembered as the first, in 1735, to advocate replacing the syllabic metre in Russian poetry by the more suitable tonic metre with regular accented feet—a reform put into practice by his younger contemporary Lomonosov*.

Sochineniya i perevody (2 vols, 1752); Stikhotvoreniya (1935).

A. S. Orlov, XVIII vek (1935). J.L.

Treitschke, HEINRICH VON (*Dresden 15 IX 1834; †Berlin 28 IV 1896), German historian, taught from 1874 at Berlin. An active politician and journalist, Treitschke's works, though founded on much research, were intended to support the Prussian programme of German unification. His brilliant style gave Treitschke much contemporary influence, but he had few scholarly disciples.

Deutsche Geschichte im XIX. Jahrhundert (5 vols, 1879–94; Eng. tr., 7 vols, 1915–18); Historische und Politische Aufsätze (4 vols, 1865–97).

T. Schiemann, T.s Lehr- und Wanderjahre (1896); H. von Petersdorff in Allgemeine deutsche Biographie, LV (1910); H. W. C. Davis, Political Thought of H. von T. (1914). D.H.

Trelawny, EDWARD JOHN (*London XI 1792; ∞1813 Caroline Addison [o/o 1819], ∞1823 Tersitza Kamenou [o/o 1826]; †Sompting nr Worthing 13 VIII 1881; □Rome), English writer and adventurer.

The Adventures of a Younger Son (3 vols, 1831); Recollections of the Last Days of Shelley and Byron (1858; rev. as Records of Shelley, Byron and the Author, 1878).—The Letters of E. J. T. (ed. H. B. Forman, 1910).

H. J. Massingham, The Friend of Shelley (1930); R. G. Grylls, T. (1950). B.H. (K.W.)

Trembecki, STANISŁAW (*nr Proszowice ?1735; †Tulczyn 12 XII 1812), Polish poet. A member of the country gentry, he stayed till 1768 in Paris and Italy. Returning to Poland he became King Poniatowski's secretary and accompanied him to Petersburg; there he found a protector in Count Potocki of Tulczyn. A very weak character, he was a good stylist in his poems which are mostly occasional verses and in which he followed French classical poetry. Twelve fables in the style of La* Fontaine and a descriptive poem Zofiówka are his best achievements. He translated two comedies of Voltaire*.

Sofiówka sposobem topograficznym opisana (1800; Fr. tr. A. De Legarde, 1815; ed. W. Jankowski, 1925); Poezye (3 vols, 1819–20); Pisma (2 vols, 1883); Pisma wszystkie (2 vols, 1953); Listy (2 vols, 1954).

Cl. Backvis, Un grand poète polonais du XVIIIe siècle, S. T. (1937; the best work on S. T.); H. Biegeleisen, Charakteristik T.s (1882); E. Rabowicz, S. T. w świetle nowych źródeł (1965). S.S. (P.H.)

Trenëv, KONSTANTIN ANDREYEVICH (*1878; †1945), Soviet author and playwright. He wrote several volumes of short stories, but his outstanding success was Lyubov' Yarovaya (1926), a tense drama about the Civil War. His comedy Zhená (1928) is against the NEP, whereas in Na beregu Nevy (1937) he deals with the part played by Lenin* in 1917. One of his plays, Anna Luchinina (1941), discusses Soviet ethics.

Vladyka (1928); Izbrannye proizvedeniya (2 vols, 1955).—In a Cossack Village, and Other Stories (tr. J. A. Atkinson, 1946).

B. Val'be, 'O tvorchestve Trenëva' in Novy Mir, IX (1939); E. D. Surkov, K. A. T. (1953). J.L.

Tres Reys d'Orient, LIBRE DELS, 13th-century Spanish poem in the same metre as the *Vida de Santa* Maria Egipcíaca* and preserved in the same MS. This poem draws on the apocryphal Gospels to tell of the childhood miracle that prepared for the salvation of the Good Thief at the Crucifixion. The poem is short but is constructed with great skill.

Libro de la infancia y muerte de Jesús (ed. M. Alvar, 1965, and in Poemas hagiográficos de carácter juglaresco, 1967).—M. Chaplin, 'The episode of the robbers in the Libre T. R. O.' in Bull. Hispanic Stud., XLIV (1967). A.D.D.

Tretyakov, SERGEY MIKHAILOVICH (*1892), Soviet poet from the Far East and author of the propaganda play, Rychi, Kitay (Roar, China, tr. F. Polianovska and B. Nixon, 1931). He was associated with Mayakovsky's* periodical LEF and advocated—in contrast to the literature of fiction—'literature of mere facts'.

Literatura fakta (ed. N. Chuzhak, 1929).

J.L.

Trevelyan, GEORGE MACAULAY (*Stratford-on-Avon 16 II 1876; †1904 Janet Penrose Ward; †Cambridge 21 VII 1962), English historian. For him the historian's task has been, not that of science, but to reconstruct the human life of the past, and reveal it through the imagination, 'pursuing the fact and fastening upon it'. He has been most powerful when describing great causes and liberal ideals (as in the Garibaldi books, 1907–11) or discovering the human life of the people (as in his English Social History, 1942).

HISTORY: English in the Age of Wycliffe (1899); England Under the Stuarts (1904); Clio (1913); British History in the Nineteenth Century (1922); History of England (1926); England Under Queen Anne (3 vols, 1930–34).—BIOGRAPHY: Sir George Otto Trevelyan (1932); Grey of Fallodon (1937).—An Autobiography (1949).

J. H. Plumb, G. M. T. (1951); Studies in Social History: a Tribute to G. M. T. (ed. idem, 1955); O. Chadwick, Freedom and the Historian (1969). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Trevisa, JOHN OF (*Cornwall ?c. 1342; †Berkeley, Glos. 1402), vicar of Berkeley, English translator of Latin works, principally Higden's* Polychronicon and Bartholomaeus* Anglicus' De proprietatibus rerum; he sometimes added original material.

Polychronicon Ranulphi Higden (incl. T.'s tr.; ed. C. Babington and J. R. Lumby; 9 vols, 1865–86); T.'s Dialogus etc. (ed. A. J. Perry, 1925).—D. C. Fowler, 'New light on J. T.' in Traditio, XVIII (1962). R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Triewald, SAMUEL (*Stockholm 1 V 1688; †Kiel 23 I 1743), Swedish poet, critic and civil servant. His poems, written in his youth, are mainly satires and epigrams, often translated from French models. A great admirer of Boileau*, he is chiefly remembered for his attempts to introduce French classical standards into Sweden.

Lärespån uti svenska skaldekonsten (ed. L. Salvius, 1756; repr. in P. Hanselli, Samlade Vitterhetsarbeten, XVIII, 1856–78).

M. Lamm, 'S. T.'s liv och diktning' in Samlaren (1907); A. Blanck in Bellman vid skiljevägen (1941); C. Fehrman, Kyrkogårdsromantik (1954). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Trigo, FELIPE (*Villanueva de la Serena, Badajoz 13 II 1864; †Madrid 2 IX 1916), Spanish novelist. An army doctor, he abandoned his profession to become a writer. Influenced by French naturalism and D'Annunzio*, his works delight in eroticism; hence his popular success. However, to accuse him of sheer pornography is unfair; voluptuousness may be analysed with scientific precision but his aim is always artistic and even moral.

Las ingenuas (1901); La sed de amar (1902); Alma en los labios (1902); La bruta (1904); Sor demonio (1905); La clave (1907); El médico rural (1912).

M. Abril, F. T.: Exposición y glosa de su filosofía, su moral, su arte, su estilo (1917); H. Peseux-Richard, 'Un romancier espagnol' in Rev. Hispanique, XXVIII (1913); A. J. Watkins, Eroticism in the Novels of F. T. (1954); J. P. Ton, F. T., estudio crítico de sus obras novelescas (1952). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Trigueros, CÁNIDIO MARÍA (*Orgaz, Toledo 1763; †Madrid ?1801), Spanish philosophical poet, author of a continuation of Cervantes' La Galatea, and dramatist. Trigueros reworked several Golden Age plays according to the tenets of the 18th-century stage.

El poeta filósofo (1774-78); Poesías (1776); La riada (1784); Los enamorados o Galatea y sus bodas (1798). J.E.V.

Trilling, LIONEL (*New York 4 VII 1905; ∞1929 Diana Rubin), American critic and novelist, Professor of English at Columbia; advisory editor of the Kenyon Review and of the Partisan Review. Noted for the urbanity and sensitivity of his criticism.

CRITICISM: Matthew Arnold (1939); E. M. Forster (1943); The Liberal Imagination: Essays on Literature and Society (1950); The Opposing Self (1955); Freud and the Crisis of our Culture (1955); A Gathering of Fugitives (1956); Beyond Culture (1965); The Experience of Literature (1967).—The Middle of the Journey (novel; 1947). H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Trillo y Figueroa, FRANCISCO DE (*La Coruña ?1615; †?1665), Spanish poet, emulating Góngora* in light verse, and author of the unsuccessful epic poem Neapolisea (1651).

Poesías varias, heroicas, satíricas y amorosas (1652); Obras (ed. A. Gallego Morell, 1951).

A. Gallego Morell, F. y Juan de T. y F. (1950). J.E.V.

'Trilussa', pseud. of CARLO ALBERTO SALUSTRI (*Rome 26 X 1871; †ibid. 21 XII 1950), Italian poet. His verse is nearly all written in Roman dialect and is essentially Roman in inspiration. He is both a moralist and satirist and is justly famous for his fables, modelled on those of Aesop*, and for his epigrams.

Ommi e bestie (1908); Nove poesie (1910); Lupi e agnelli (1919); Le cose (1922); La gente

(1927); Lo specchio e altre poesie (1938); Acqua e vino (1944); Tutte le poesie (1951).

Silvio D'Amico, T. (1925). J.F.C. (M.B.)

Trimmer, SARAH, née KIRBY (*Ipswich 6 I 1741; ∞1762 James Trimmer; †Brentford 15 XII 1810), English author of moral and religious books for the young.

Fabulous Histories (1786; subsequently issued as History of the Robins); The Two Farmers: an Exemplary Tale (1787); The Oeconomy of Charity (2 vols, 1787); Reflections upon the Education of Children in Charity Schools (1792).

Anon., Life and Writings of Mrs T. (2 vols, 1814; cont. her private journal); C. L. Balfour, A Sketch of Mrs T. (1854). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Triplet, ELSA, pseud. of ELSA BRIK, so called after her first husband (*Moscow 25 IX 1896; †Saint-Arnoult-en-Yvelines 16 V 1970), French novelist. Of Russian origin, she was sister-in-law to Mayakovsky*. Besides first-rate translations and introductions to the works of several Russian authors, notably Chekhov*, she wrote her first three books in Russian. Her meeting in Paris with the then Surrealist Louis Aragon*, whom she married, was for both the turning-point in their lives. She began to write in French with Bonsoir, Thérèse (1937) and during the Second World War fought with Aragon in the Resistance (Le premier accroc coûte deux cents francs, 1945; A Fine of 200 Francs, tr. anon., 1949). She was a militant Communist crusading for an art which would be both free and committed, enriched with all sorts of psychological and poetic undertones. Her language is light and clear, with great purity of style.

NOVELS: À Tahiti (1925); Mille regrets (1942); Le cheval blanc (1943; Eng. tr. M. Savill, 1951); Les amants d'Avignon (1943); Anne Marie (1952; incl. Personne ne m'aime, 1946, and Les fantômes armés, 1947); L'inspecteur des ruines (1948; Eng. tr. N. Cameron, 1952); Le monument (1957); L'âge de nylon, I: Roses à crédit, II: Luna park (1959), III: L'âme (1963); Les manigances (1962); Le grand jamais (1965); Écoutez voir (1969).—Œuvres romanesques croisées d'E. T. et Aragon (32 vols, 1964- ).—ESSAYS: numerous studs on Russ. lit.; La muse en mots (1969).

J. Madaule, Ce que dit E. (1961); Europe, special no. (1967). M.G.

Tripāṭhi, GOVARDHANRAM MĀDHAVRĀM (*1855; †1907), Gujarāṭi novelist, poet and pedant; author of the huge novel Sarasvatīcandra (1887-1901). I.R.

Trissino, GIANGIORGIO (*Venezia 8 VII 1478; †Rome 8 XII 1550), Italian writer, philologist and literary reformer whose Hellenizing influence was partly responsible for the re-orientation of Italian literature during the 16th century. Concerned to break the romance tradition and exalt the epic as the supreme literary genre, he laboured for 20 years to give his country, in L'Italia liberata dai Goti (1547-48), a serious national poem worthy of Homer's* Iliad. Written in blank hendecasyllabic verse, it is meticulously historical, realistic and didactic; but, being preposterously unpoetical, is deservedly forgotten. La Sophonisba (1524), the first 'regular' tragedy in modern literature, embodied certain orthographical reforms (proposed in an Epistola) which aroused literary hostility. His Il Castellano (1529) further vexed the QUESTIONE DELLA LINGUA by introducing Dante* (whose De vulgari eloquentia he discovered, published in translation, and misinterpreted) to support his contention that the literary medium was neither Florentine nor Tuscan, but Italian. Besides I Simillimi (1548), a comedy modelled on Plautus's* Menaechmi, he wrote indifferent lyrics, eclogues and an Arte poetica (1529). Trissino's importance lies rather in the influence he exerted on the writings of others than in any excellence in his own. Favoured by Leo X, Clement VII and Paul III, he undertook important diplomatic missions, dividing his life between Vicenza, Padua, Murano and Rome.

Tutte le opere di Giovan Giorgio Trissino gentiluomo vicentino non più raccolte (ed. S. Maffei, 2 vols, 1729); G. Daelli, Biblioteca rara [Il Castellano and I Simillimi] (1864); La Sofonisba (ed. A. Scarpa, 1950); Scritti scelti (ed. idem, 1950; with biblio.).

B. Morsolin, G. T. (2nd ed. 1894); F. Ermini, L'Italia liberata di G. T. (1895); G. Marchese, Studio sulla Sofonisba del T. (1897); A. Scarpa, G. T. poeta d'amore (1934); G. Toffanin, Il Cinquecento (4th ed. 1950); B. Croce, Poesia popolare e poesia d'arte (3rd ed. 1952); M. Vitale, La questione della lingua (1960). P.McN.

Tristan l'Hermite, pseud. of FRANÇOIS L'HERMITE, SIEUR DU SOLIER (*Chateau du Solier c. 1601; †Paris 7 IX 1655), French poet and dramatist. In his youth he served various noble patrons with small success, as described in his romanced autobiographical novel Le Page disgracié (1643; ed. A. Dietrich, 1898). In 1621-35 he was attached to Gaston d'Orléans, Louis XIII's brother, before becoming a seemingly independent writer. He then produced the plays which are the most important part of his work. Notable among them are Mariane (1636; ed. J. Madeleine, 1939), an early regular tragedy, La Mort de Sennéque (1643; ed. idem, 1919), a Roman tragedy reminiscent of Corneille*, La Mort de Chrispe (1645), which has a similar story to Racine's* Phèdre, and a tragic-comedy rich in characterization, La Folie du sage (?1642; ed. idem, 1936). The partly personal lyric qualities which distinguish Tristan's love-poetry are also evident in some of his plays.

POETRY: Les Plaintes d'Acante (1633); Les Amours (1638); La Lyre (1641); Vers héroïques (1648).—Selections (eds: J. Madeleine, 1909; P. Camo, 1925; P. A. Wadsworth, 1962).—TRAGEDIES: Panthée (1937); La Mort du Grand Osman (1647).—Le Parasite (comedy; 1653; ed. J. Madeleine, 1934).—Amaryllys (pastoral; 1652).

N. M. Bernardin, Un précurseur de Racine, T. L'H. (1895); H. C. Lancaster, A History of French Dramatic Literature in the XVIIth Century, II (1932); A. Carriat, T., ou l'éloge d'un poète (1955); D. Dalla Valle, Il teatro di T. L'H. (Turin, 1964). G.B.

Tritheim (TRITHEMIUS), JOHANN VON, pseud. of J. VON HEIDENBERG (*Tritenheim nr Trier 1 II 1462; †Würzburg 13 XII 1516), prolific German historian. He was a man of vast energy, from 1485 Abbot of Sponheim (to which he bequeathed his large collection of books). Partisan forgery of sources mars his historical works (Annales Hirsauenses, 1514; Catalogus illustrium virorum Germaniae, 1491); his 'Annals of the Franks' was not completed. He also worked on code systems.

J. Silbernagel, J. T. (2nd ed. 1885); F. W. E. Roth, Studien zum J. T. Jubeljahr (1916); R. W. Seton-Watson in Tudor Studies . . . A. F. Pollard (1924); L. W. Spitz, Religious Renaissance of the German Humanists (1963). F.P.P.

Troelstra, PETER JELLES (*Lecuwarden 20 IV 1860; †The Hague 12 V 1930), Frisian poet and political leader, one of the founders of the Dutch Socialist party. He compiled a popular song-book (Nij Frysk Lietboek) and wrote political works in Dutch as well as lyrical poems in Frisian; the latter were collected in Rispinge (3rd ed. 1945).

A. Wadman, Frieslands Dichters (1949); E. Howard Harris, The Literature of Friesland (1956); J. Piebenga, Koarte Skiednis fan de Fryske Skriftekennisse (2nd ed. 1957). K.D.

Trogus, POMPEIUS (fl. c. A.D. 10), Roman historian, compiled from Greek sources, particularly Timagenes, the first Roman universal history, which he named Historiae Philippicae. The Prologi of individual books survive, and Justin's* epitome preserves the main outline. J.A.W.

Prologi in F. Rühl's ed. of Justin (1886; rev. O. Seel, 1935).

R. B. Steele, 'P. T. and Justinus' in Amer. Jour. Philol. (1917); A. Momigliano in Athenaeum (1934); M. Rambaud, 'Salluste et Trogue-Pompée' in Rev. des études latines (1948).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Trollope, ANTHONY (*London 24 IV 1815; ∞1844 Rose Heseltine; †ibid. 6 XII 1882), English author who, in defining the main work of the novelist as 'the creation of human beings in whose existence one is forced to believe', defined his own peculiar excellence. His early novels were written in Ireland where, as a civil servant employed in the Post Office, his native zest for life was gradually asserting itself after the poverty, loneliness and harshness of his schooldays. The sombre Irish novels, unnoticed by the critics, were followed by The Warden (1855), Barchester Towers (1857) and the other Barsetshire novels, six in all, concluding with Last Chronicle of Barset (1867). In these, his most popular works, Trollope portrayed a social class and an environment—a cathedral town and its clergy—with a vision showing profound appreciation of the normal in human conduct, character and conversation. His literary reputation made, he settled at Waltham Cross and later in London, writing his 250 words a quarter of an hour from 5 a.m. till breakfast time. In his next series, of six political novels, including Phineas Finn (1869) and The Prime Minister (1876), he showed the same power of evoking a complete world. He wrote in all over 40 novels, of which The Three Clerks (1858) describes his early civil service experience, many articles for periodicals and short stories, and an Autobiography that ruined his sales by its uncompromising avowal that, apart from the satisfaction and self-esteem authorship gave him, he wrote for money. R.M.H.

The Macdermots of Ballycloran (1847); The Kellys and the O'Kellys (1848).—CHRONICLES OF BARSETSHIRE: Doctor Thorne (1858); Framley Parsonage (1861); The Small House at Allingham (1864).—POLITICAL NOVELS: Can You Forgive Her? (1864); The Eustace Diamonds (1873); Phineas Redux (1876); The Duke's Children (1880).—OTHER NOVELS: Orley Farm (1862); He Knew He Was Right (1869); The Vicar of Bulhampton (1870); The Way We Live Now (1875); Is He Popenjoy? (1878); Ayala's Angel (1881).—SHORT STORIES: Tales of All Countries (1861 and 1863); Why Frau Frohmann raised her Prices (1882).—Autobiography (intro. M. Sadleir, 1923).—The Oxford Trollope (ed. M. Sadleir and F. Page, 1948).—Letters (ed. B. A. Booth, 1951).

T. H. S. Escott, A. T., His Works, Associates and Literary Originals (with biblio.; 1913); H. James, A. T. A Partial Portrait (1888); G. Saintsbury, Three Mid-Century Novelists (1895); L. Stephen, Studies of a Biographer, IV (1902); M. Sadleir, A. T. A Commentary (1927) and T. A. Bibliography (1928); Hugh Walpole, A. T. (1928); A. O. J. Cockshut, T. (1955). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Trollope, FRANCES, née MILTON (*Stapleton, nr Bristol 10 III 1780, ∞1809 Thomas Anthony Trollope; †Florence 6 X 1863), English writer, mother of Anthony, who, beginning to write at 52 to restore the family fortunes, produced 115 successful novels and travel books.

Domestic Manners of the Americans (1832; with intro. M. Sadleir, 1927); Vicar of Wrexhill (1837); Widow Barnaby (1838).

F. E. Trollope, F. T., her Life and Literary Work (1895); U. Pope-Hennessy, Three English Women in America (1929). R.M.H.

Trommius, ABRAHAM (*Groningen 23 VIII 1633; †29 V 1719), Dutch parson and poet.

Nederlandsche concordantie (3 vols, 1672–91); Sachte verbeteringe der Psalm-rijmen Datheni (1695). J.W.W.

Trotsky, LEON, pseud. of LEV BRONSTEIN (*XI 1879; †Coyoacán, Mexico 21 VIII 1940), Russian revolutionary. As critic from a Marxist angle he took part in the literary controversy after 1917, and his Literatura i revolyutsiya (1923; Literature and Revolution, tr. R. Strunsky, 1925), was a landmark in early Soviet criticism. He, like Lenin*, opposed the cultural and literary monopoly of the PROLET-CULT. He introduced the nickname FELLOW-TRAVELLER (poputchik) and remained a mouthpiece of the moderate right-wing Marxist criticism, as distinct from such left-wing extremists as Averbakh* and Gorbachëv.

Sochineniya (15 vols, 1925–27); Moya zhizn' (2 vols, 1930).—Problems of Life (tr. Z. Vengerova, 1924); The History of the Russian Revolution (tr. M. Eastman, 1934); The Revolution Betrayed (tr. idem, 1937). J.L.

Trotzig, BIRGITTA, née KJELLÉN (*Gothenburg 11 IX 1929; ∞1949 Ulf Trotzig), Swedish novelist. Her works show with great intensity the almost unbearable suffering to which man is exposed for the sake of love and religion. She often heightens the effect by setting the works in turbulent periods of history.

De utsatta (1957); En berättelse från kusten (1961); Levande och döda (1964); Sveket (1966); Örgränser (1968). I.S.

Troya, COUNT CARLO (*Naples 7 VI 1784; †ibid. 28 VII 1858), Italian patriot, historian and scholar. His literary fame rests on Il veltro allegorico di Dante (1825; new ed. 1936) and Il veltro allegorico dei Ghibellini (1832).

G. Del Giudice, C. T., vita pubblica e privata, studi, opere (1899); B. Croce, Storia della storiografia italiana nel sec. XIX (1930). N.K.W.

Troyat, HENRI, pseud. of LEV TARASSOV (*Moscow 1 XI 1911), French novelist. After several well-written Realist novels (L'Araigne, 1938) Troyat rediscovered his Russian roots, taking as his theme the history of his family and of the land where he was born: Tant que la terre durera (1936). Convinced that he could achieve profundity only by writing with the same breadth and scale of vision as Tolstoy*, he composed a number of major works devoted alternately to France—Les semailles et les moissons (5 vols, 1959–62; part. trs L. Duplaix, 1957, M. V. Dodge, 1958); Les Eygletière (3 vols, 1965–67)—and to Russia—La lumière des justes (5 vols, 1959–62; Eng. tr. G. E. Abbott, 1962); Les héritiers de l'avenir (3 vols, 1968–70). His biographies of major Russian writers are sound and well written. Member of the Académie Française (1959).

NOVELS: Faux-jour (1935); Le vivier (1935); Grandeur nature (1936; One Minus Two, tr. J. Whitall, 1938); La tête sur les épaules (1938); Étrangers sur la terre (1850; Eng. tr. A. Hinton, 1958); La neige en deuil (1950); Une extrême amitié (1963).—BIOGRAPHIES: Dostoïevsky (1950; Firebrand, tr. N. Guterman, 1946); L'étrange destin de Lermontov (1952); Pouchkine (1953; Eng. tr. R. T. Weaver, 1951); Tolstoi (1965; Eng. tr. N. Amphoux, 1968).—PLAYS: Les vivants (1946); Sébastien (1949); Madame d'Arches a dit peut-être (1952).

M.G.

Trubar, PRIMOŽ (*Raščica, south of Ljubljana 1508; †Derendingen, Württemberg 25 VII 1586), Reformer and founder of Slovene literature. His works are partly translations, partly compilations of the most important theological, ritual and organizational texts for the Slovene Protestant Church. He also wrote some original polemics. He encouraged and guided a number of collaborators, and also worked for the propagation of the Protestant religion among the Croats and Serbs, for he hoped that with the aid of the pure gospel in the South Slavonic languages it would prove possible to win over even the Turks to Protestantism and European culture.

Catechismus (1550); Novi testament (1557–77; 2nd ed. 1582); Cerkovna ordninga (1564); Psalter Davidov (1566); Eni psalmi, ta celi catechismus . . . stare inu nove krščanske pejsni (1567; many other eds); Hišna postila (1595).

Nirko Rupel, 'Primus Truber' in Südosteuropa-Schriften, V (1965); Abhandlungen über die Slowenische Reformation (ed. B. Berčič, Munich, 1968).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Trubetskoy, PRINCE EVGENY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1862; †1920), Russian philosophic-religious writer and follower of Vladimir Solovyëv*. Besides many essays, articles and pamphlets, he wrote, while in exile, a book of memoirs, Vospominaniya (1922).

Mirosozertsanie Solovyëva (2 vols, 1913).

J.L.

Trueba y Cossío, JOAQUÍN TELESFORO DE (*Santander 1798; †Paris 1835), Spanish writer. After studying in London and Paris, he became a diplomat. For political reasons he emigrated to England (1823). His main works were written and published in English: The Romance of History.

Spain (1827), a good rendering of old Spanish legends, and historical novels which were praised by Walter Scott*.

Gómez Arias (1828); The Castilian (1828); The Exquisites (1831); Call again to-morrow (play; 1832); Paris and London (1831).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Estudios críticos sobre escritores montañeses (1876); V. Lloréns Castillo, Liberales y románticos (1954).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Trueba y de la Quintana, ANTONIO DE (*Montellano, Vizcaya 24 XII 1819; †Bilbao 10 III 1889), Spanish writer of humble origin; self-educated. The secret of his success lies in the exact portrayal of the types, landscapes and customs of his Basque country (Libros de Cantares, de Montañas, Cuentos, etc.). When he steps outside this local realism his excessive sentimentality makes his books painful reading.

Obras (11 vols, 1905–24); Obras escogidas (ed. M. Rubinos, 3 vols, 1944–45).

A. González Blanco, A. de T.: su vida y sus obras (1914); G. Mújica, T. Su significación en la moderna literatura vasca (1914).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Trumbull, JOHN (*Westbury, Conn. 13 IV 1750; †1776 Sarah Hubbard; †Detroit, Mich. 11 V 1831), American poet. Most important of the 'Hartford Wits', he wrote M'Fingal, based on Hudibras, satirizing the Tories in the Revolution.

The Progress of Dulness (1772); M'Fingal: A Modern Epic Poem (1775–82).—The Poetical Works of J. T. (2 vols, 1820).

A. Cowie, J. T.: Connecticut Wit (1936).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Tsang K'o-CHIA (*Chu-ch'eng, Shantung 1905), Chinese poet, published more than 20 volumes of poetry, beginning with Lo-yin (1934). Possessing considerable technical skill, his poems of the 1930s and 1940s are a realistic chronicle of the sufferings of common people in social disorder and war.

Sel. trs in: R. Payne, Contemporary Chinese Poetry (1947); K.-Y. Hsu, Twentieth Century Chinese Poetry (1963).

A.R.D.

Ts'ao CHAN, or Ts'AO HSÜEH-CH'IN (*Nanking c. 1715; †Peking 12 II 1763), Chinese novelist. For three generations the Ts'ao family had been superintendents of the imperial textile factory at Nanking and had thereby amassed great wealth. In 1728 however all their property was confiscated by imperial order. Only a small residence in Peking was returned and thither the family moved to live in great poverty. The vicissitudes of his family inspired Ts'ao's great novel, Hung-lou meng. He had written 80 chapters when he died, but it was still incomplete. (The first printed edition [1792] contained 120 chapters, and it has been held that 40 chapters were added by Kao O. Recent MS discoveries have cast doubt on this view.) This story of the decline of a great house with the tragic romance of the heir and his consumptive cousin as its central theme is remarkable for masterly characterization. The fifty or more major characters are all sharply drawn without impairing the unity of the whole. Exhibiting the most perfect style among all the older novels, Hung-lou mêng has been an important model for the modern vernacular-literature movement.

Hung-lou mêng (1792; partial trs: Wang Chichen, Dream of the Red Chamber, 1929, rev. ed. 1958; F. Kuhn, Der Traum der roten Kammer, 1932; tr. [from Ger.] F. and I. McHugh, The Dream of the Red Chamber, 1958).

Wu Shih-ch'ang, On the Red Chamber Dream (1961); C. T. Hsia, The Classic Chinese Novel (1968). A.R.D.

Ts'ao CHIH (*192; †17 XII 232), Chinese poet and essayist. Ts'ao was the third son of Ts'ao* Ts'ao and younger brother of Ts'ao* P'ei. He at first received great affection from his father but later lost his favour. His relations with his brother were embittered by jealous quarrels which increased when Ts'ao P'ei became Emperor (220). He was granted a series of small fiefs, finally being given the title of King of Ch'ên (232). The growing unhappiness of his life may be seen in his poetry. He is indeed China's first great writer of true personal poetry. Some 150 of his poems are extant, including ku-shih, fu-poems and song-libretti. More than 100 of his prose pieces have also been preserved.

Ch'ên Ssü-wang chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: E. von Zach, Die chinesische Anthologie, 2 vols, Harvard, 1958; G. W. Kent, Worlds of Dust and Jade, 1969). A.R.D.

Ts'ao P'ei (*187; †Lo-yang 29 VI 226), Chinese poet and essayist. The eldest son of Ts'ao* Ts'ao, he succeeded to his father's fief of Wei and to his office as first minister of Emperor Hsien in 220. He immediately deposed Hsien and proclaimed himself Emperor Wên of the Wei dynasty. He also followed his father's example of literary patronage. Although he did not achieve the great fame of his younger brother Ts'ao* Chih, there are among his extant poems (both songs and spoken verse) a number of great lyrical power and feeling. His essay Tien-lun is the earliest attempt in China to discuss literature from an aesthetic standpoint.

Wei Wên-ti chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in Die chinesische Anthologie, 2 vols, Harvard, 1958). A.R.D.

Ts'ao Ts'ao (□Ch'iao 155; †15 III 220), Chinese general and poet. Ts'ao was one of the generals who got power in the collapse of the central government during the later years of the 2nd century. By 204 he had possession of the northern provinces which under his son became the empire of Wei. (Ts'ao himself remained nominally Prime Minister under Emperor Hsien.) He had a great love of literature and was an important patron of poetry. His son, Ts'ao* Chih, became one of the greatest poets. He himself left a number of songs of a simple, vigorous character.

Wei Wu-ti chi (coll. works); trs of poems: D. von der Steinen, 'Poems of Ts'ao Ts'ao' in Monumenta Serica, IV (1939); E. Balazs, 'Two Songs by Ts'ao Ts'ao' in Chinese Civilization and Bureaucracy (1964). A.R.D.

Ts'ao Yü, pseud of WAN CHIA-PAO (*Ch'ien-chiang, Hupei 1910), Chinese dramatist. After studying Western literature at Tsinghua University, Ts'ao Yü achieved an immediate success with his first play, Lei-yü (wr. 1933). Following this with Jih-ch'u (1935) and Yüan-yeh (1936; the three are known as 'Ts'ao Yü's Trilogy'), he established himself as China's foremost dramatist. He succeeded in translating the technique of Western drama to the Chinese stage. His themes are generally large in conception, treated ideologically with great complexity of dialogue and action.

Lei-yü (Thunderstorm, tr. Wang Tso-liang and A. C. Barnes, Peking, 1958); Jih-ch'u (Sunrise, tr. A. C. Barnes, ibid., 1960); Shui-pien (1940); Pei-ching jên (1941); Chia (1941; 'Family', part. tr. G. Begley in Life and Letters, LX, 1949); Ch'iao (1947); Ming-lang-ti t'ien (1956); Tan-chien p'ien (with others; 1962). A.R.D.

Tscherning, ANDREAS (*Bunzlau 18 XI 1611; †Rostock 27 IX 1659), German poet, distantly related to Opitz*, whose poetic theories he, together with Augustus Buchner*, defended and extended. He was Professor of poetry at Rostock, and his extensive correspondence is important background material to German baroque literature. Though his poetry was influenced by Opitz, Heinsius* and Buchner, he introduced new metrical forms. His Centuria Proverbiorum Alis (1641) is the first German translation from Arabic.

Deutscher Gedichte Früling (1642); Vortrag des Sommers (1655); Unvorgreifliches Bedencken über etliche Missbräuch in der deutschen Schreib- und Sprachkunst (1659).

H. H. Borchardt, A. T. (1912); B. Marckwardt, Geschichte der deutschen Poetik, I (1937). L.W.F.

Tschudi, AEGIDIUS or GILG (*Glarus 5 II 1505; †ibid. 28 II 1572), Swiss historian. A keen Roman Catholic, Tschudi figured in the 'Tschudi war', 1559-64; he was the first Swiss historian to use original documents and MSS and dominated Swiss historiography up to the 19th century. He popularized the TELL legend, and Schiller* drew on him for his Wilhelm Tell.

Geschichte des 2. Kappelerkrieges (1531; pub. 1826); Die uralte warhaftig Alpisch Rhetia (1538); Helvetische Chronik (1000-1470) (ed. J. Iselin, 2 vols, 1734-36); Vom Feggfür (ed. I. A. Knowles, 1924).

F. Gallati, G. T. und die ältere Geschichte des Landes Glarus (1938); F. Gundolf, Anfänge deutscher Geschichtschreibung (1938). D.G.D.

Ts'ên SHEN [Ts'ên Ts'an] (*Nan-yang 715; †770), Chinese poet. Like Kao* Shih, with whom he is commonly coupled, Ts'ên saw service in frontier commands (749-751 and 754-756). His service took him far into Central Asia and the graphic poems of this experience are unusual in T'ang poetry, as well as of great historical interest.

Ts'ên Chia-chou chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in A. Waley, 'A Chinese poet in Central Asia' in History Today, I, Nov. 1951). A.R.D.

Tsêng KUNG (□Nan-fêng 1019; †1083), Chinese prose writer. After passing the examinations (1057) Tsêng was for eight years a compiler in the history office. Afterwards he held a series of local governorships in which he gained a great reputation for just administration. He was unable to accept the reform policy of Wang* An-shih, who had been his great friend, but again held appointments in the capital from 1080. Regarded as one of the great Sung prose-masters and a model for later writing, the thought and content of his work are dominated by his austere Confucianism. He avoided all stylistic ornament.

Yüan-fêng lei-kao (1085; coll. works; sel. tr. F. E. A. Krause, 'Tsêng Kung: Ein Beitrag aus der Literatur der Sung-Zeit' in Heidelberger Akten der Von Portheim Stiftung, Sinologie, I, 1922). A.R.D.

Tsêng KUO-FAN (□Hsiang-hsiang 26 XI 1811; †Nanking 12 III 1872), Chinese statesman and man of letters. Tsêng, by his suppression of the Taiping Rebellion, preserved the life of the Manchu dynasty for a further 50 years. Naturally conservative (which is the gravamen of later criticism of him), he tended in thought towards the Sung school, which gained greatly from his support, as did the 'T'ung-ch'êng' prose school (Yao* Nai), which he eulogized. Yet by the depth of his very diverse writings and their clear style, he attained an undoubted literary stature.

Tsêng Wên-chêng kung ch'üan-chi (coll. works; 1876).

W. J. Hail, Tsêng Kuo-fan and the Taiping Rebellion (1927); H. Wilhelm, 'The background of Tsêng Kuo-fan's ideology' in Asiatische

Studien, III (1949); M. C. Wright, The Last Stand of Chinese Conservatism (1957). A.R.D.

Tserkovski, TSANKO (also pseud. T. BAKALOV) (*Byala Cherkva 16 X 1869; †Sofia 2 V 1926), Bulgarian writer. Enchanted by folk-lore and the pastoral idyll, he created the Musina village 'commune' and dedicated his life and works to the peasantry. A founder of the Agrarian Union (which soon became Bulgaria's largest political party), he was a minister in A. Stamboliyski's government (1919-23). When it fell, he was twice imprisoned, writing then his last two works.

Pechalni chassove (1892, 1895); Ruja (1904); Polski pesni (1905); Halosnik (1908); Iz gunkite na surseto (1926); Pisma ot zatvora (1932).—Coll. works (ed. N. Atanassov, 3 vols, 1947).

N. Atanassov, T. T.: život i literaturna dejnost (1921); Yubileen sbornik (1922). V.P.

Tso Ssü (□Lin-tzü ?250; †Chi-chou ?305), Chinese poet. Tso went to the capital, Lo-yang, when his sister became a lady-in-waiting. His 'Three Capitals' (San-tu fu), the work of ten years, was so greatly acclaimed by the metropolitan literati that it is said that the price of paper rose because of the number of copies made. It is regrettable that so few of Tso's poems have survived, for he was a writer of great skill and some imagination.

San-tu fu (tr. E. von Zach, with other poems preserved in the anthology Wên-hsüan, in Die chinesische Anthologie, 2 vols, Harvard, 1958). A.R.D.

Tsubouchi SHÖYÖ, pseud. of TSUBOUCHI YÜZÖ (*Ôta, Gifu 22 VI 1859; †Atami 28 II 1935), Japanese novelist, dramatist, critic and translator. After graduating in 1883 at Tokyo Imperial University, where he had made a special study of English literature, he became lecturer in the university which later became Waseda University (where he remained for over 50 years). Two years later he published Shōsetsu shinzui, a work of criticism (inspired by the example of English novelists) advocating more realistic and rational literary principles; he followed it with Tōsei shōsei katagi (1885), a humorous novel in a pioneering style, as being a specimen of his principles.

In 1891 he founded Waseda Bungaku, which became an important literary periodical; and at about the same time turned his attention to drama. After careful study of Japanese, Chinese and European play-writing, he produced in the following years a number of excellent plays, among which the best known are Kiri hitoha, Shinkyoku Urashima and En no gyōja. In these his indebtedness to Shakespeare* is often clear, and from 1907 to 1928 he was engaged in preparing a complete Japanese translation of Shakespeare. His influence on Japanese fiction-writing and drama was considerable. E.B.C.

CRITICISM: Shōsetsu shinzui ('The Essence of the Novel'; preface tr. in Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956; extracts tr. with discussion in M. G. Ryan, Japan's First Modern Novel: Ukigumo of Futabatei Shimei, 1967).—Saikun (novel; 1889).—PLAYS: Kiri hitoha (1896; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948); Shinkyoku Urashima (1904; Fr. tr. T. Yoshiye in Bull. Soc. Franco-Japonaise, XLVIII, 1921); En no gyōja (1916; L'Ermite, tr. idem, 1920).

Ito Sei, 'Modern Japanese literature, III: pioneers of the new literature' in Japan Quart., II.2 (1955). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Ts'ui SHU (□Wei-hsien, Hopei 19 IX 1740; †Chang-tê 4 III 1816), Chinese historian, spent his life in difficulty and frequent poverty. The critical methods which he presented in K'ao-hsin lu were in advance of his time, though it was one of great progress in scholarship. This work, containing 12 studies on early Chinese histories and other books, was written and revised over a period of 30 years (1783-1814). Much of his writings might not have survived but for the efforts of his admirer Ch'ên Lin-ho to have them printed.

Ts'ui Tung-pi i-shu (coll. works; 1824-25; definitive ed. 1936; one essay, Ch'eng-lun, 'The Place of Acquiescence in Conflict', tr. A. W. Hummel in T'ien Hsia Monthly, 1940). A.R.D.

Tsurayuki: see KI NO TSURAYUKI.

Tsuruya NAMBOKU, pseud. of TSURUYA INOSUKE (*Edo [=Tokyo] 1755; †ibid. 22 .XII 1829), Japanese playwright, author of well over 100 plays. He was the fourth holder of the name Tsuruya Namboku.

Osomo Hisamatsu ukina no yomiuri (1813); Tōkaidō yotsuya kaidan (1825; 'The Ghost of Yotsuya', summary in A. S. and G. M. Halford, The Kabuki Handbook, 1956). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Tsutsumi Chūnagon Monogatari ('The Tales of Tsutsumi Chūnagon'), Japanese collection of ten short stories, by various unknown authors, probably compiled between 1100 and 1200, though the only datable story was written about 1055; they are among the world's earliest short stories, and are notable for the unexpectedly comic elements introduced into otherwise typical Heian stories.

Complete trs: E. O. Reischauer and J. K. Yamagiwa in Translations From Early Japanese Literature (1951); The T. C. M.: A Collection of 11th Century Stories of Japan (tr. U. Hirano, 1963); extracts tr. in: A. Waley, The Lady Who Loved Insects (1929; repr. in Anthology of Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1955); Selections From Japanese Literature (ed. F. J. Daniels, 1959); extracts tr. O. Benl in Der Kirschblütenzweig

(1965).—O. Benl, 'T. C. M.' in Monumenta Nipponica, III (1940). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Tsvetayeva, MARINA IVANOVNA (*1892; †1938), Russian modernist poet. After the publication of her first book, Stikhi ('Verses'; 1910), she developed her craftsmanship, partially influenced by Pasternak*. Her poems have unusual verve, a great variety of rhythms, and the inflection of the folk-song. In 1922 she left Russia, but she returned and committed suicide.

Tsar'-Devitsa (1922); Posle Rossii (1922); Psikheya (1923); Kniga stikhov (1923); Molodets (1924); Povest' o Sonechke (1937); Proza (New York, 1953). J.L.

Tsyganov, NIKOLAY GRIGORYEVICH (*1797; †1831), Russian poet. He was born a serf, but became an actor and finally achieved fame as a self-made poet in the folk-style. Some of his poems became folk-songs. J.L.

Tu Fu (□Ching-chao 712; †nr T'an-chou 770), Chinese poet. Tu failed to pass the official examinations (736) and spent the next years travelling in the north-eastern provinces or at Lo-yang. He met Li* Po, who made a great personal impression on him, at Ch'ên-liu (K'ai-fêng) in 744. In 746 he returned to Ch'ang-an in a second attempt to secure an official post. This he finally achieved in 755, just before the disastrous revolt of An Lu-shan, during which he suffered in the general distress. In 760 he went to live at Ch'êng-tu, where he enjoyed the patronage of the Governor-General Yen Wu. His last years from 765 were mainly spent in travel.

Tu's poetry directly reflected his surroundings and the circumstances of his life. Thus the tone of poems from different periods is very different. His war poems, written at the time of the An Lu-shan revolt, reveal an intense sympathy. In general he shows far greater concern for the human situation of his time than does his great contemporary Li Po. Yet he is also more intellectual than Li and is a more typical representative of the great age of T'ang poetry. His influence, particularly his immediate influence, was much greater. His best poems are in the seven-word 'regulated' metre (lǚ-shih) or in the five-word freer 'old' metre.

Tu Kung-pu chi (coll. works); Tu Fu's Gedichte (tr. E. von Zach, 2 vols, Harvard, 1952); F. Ayscough, Tu Fu (1929) and Travels of a Chinese Poet (1932); W. Hung, Tu Fu, China's Greatest Poet (1952); A. R. Davis, Tu Fu (1971). A.R.D.

Tu Mu (□Wan-nien 803; †853), Chinese poet and prose-writer. Tu followed a normal official career (828 onwards), finally achieving a fairly high post in the Grand Secretariat. Stylistically his work occupies an intermediate position between the 8th-century writers with their greater emphasis on content and the aesthetic tendency of the 9th century, although in general it stands nearer the former.

Tu Fan-ch'uan chi (coll. works); sel. trs in: W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain (1929); G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise (1948); E. von Zach, Han Yü's Poetische Werke (Harvard, 1952); A. C. Graham, Poems of the Late T'ang (1965).
A.R.D.

Tubbe, HENRY (*Southampton 1618; †1655), English poet, educated at Cambridge, who wrote verse epistles, elegies, epigrams, and hymns. He has little originality but some ingenuity.

Meditations Divine & Morall (1659; 1682; sel. ed. G. C. Moore Smith, 1915).
J.J.Y.L.

Tucholsky, KURT, pseud. THEOBALD TIGER, PETER PANTER, IGNAZ WROBEL, KASPAR HAUSER (*Berlin 9 I 1890; †Hindås, Sweden 21 XII 1935), German satirical prose writer and poet. A brilliant journalist and a fearless fighter for his socialist and pacifist convictions. The high standard of the left-wing journal Die Weltbühne (edited by Carl von Ossietzky who was awarded the Nobel prize for peace in 1935) was due to contributors like Tucholsky, a master of the short, pointed essay, a satirist of great power and verve.

Tucholsky—ganz anders (1958); Morgen wieder? (ed. F. J. Raddatz, 1964); Wenn die Igel in der Abendstunde. Gedichte, Lieder, Chansons (ed. idem, 1968).—Gesammelte Werke (ed. idem and M. Gerold-Tucholsky, 4 vols, 1960–62).—SELECTED TRANSLATIONS: The World Is a Comedy. Anthology (tr. H. Zohn, 1957); What If?—Satirical Writings (tr. idem and K. F. Ross, 1967).

H. Prescher, K. T. (1959); K.-P. Schulz, K. T. (1959).
R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Tucker, ABRAHAM (*London 2 IX 1705; ∞1736 Dorothy Barker; †Betchworth Castle, nr Dorking 20 XI 1774), English philosopher, writer of discursive, good-humoured works on human nature that charmed Hazlitt* into abridging them.

Freewill, Foreknowledge and Fate: by Edward Search (1763); The Light of Nature pursued (7 vols, 1768–78); Works (with Life by Sir H. Mildmay; 2nd ed., 7 vols, 1805); Works (an abridgement; ed. A. R. Waller and A. Glover, 1902).
R.M.H.

Tucker, NATHANIEL BEVERLEY (*Chesterfield Co., Va. 6 IX 1784; ∞Mary Coalter, ∞Eliza Taylor, ∞1830 Lucy Anne Smith; †Winchester, Va. 26 VIII 1851), American novelist and essayist. In his novels he developed the symbol of the cavalier in the South.

George Balcombe (1836); The Partisan Leader: A Tale of the Future (1836).

C. Bridenbaugh in Dictionary of American Biography (1936).
H.L.C.

Tuckerman, FREDERICK GODDARD (*Boston 4 II 1821; ∞1847 Hannah Jones; †Greenfield, Mass. 9 V 1873), American poet. Shy and reclusive by nature, he neither sought nor achieved popular recognition. But his introspective, gloomy and sometimes disturbing poems were highly valued by Emerson*, Longfellow* and Tennyson*, and his reputation is now steadily increasing.

Poems (1860).—The Complete Poems of F. G. T. (ed. M. S. Momaday, 1965).

Y. Winters, Maule's Curse (1938); S. A. Golden, F. G. T. (1966).
I.W.

Tuckerman, HENRY THEODORE (*Boston 20 IV 1813; †New York 17 XII 1871). American essayist, critic and minor poet. His books of essays and travel sketches are marked by their quiet optimism and his sentimental Poems (1851) were mildly popular. Cousin of Frederick Goddard Tuckerman.

Italian Sketch Book (1835); Thoughts on the Poets (1840); Leaves From the Diary of a Dreamer (1853); America and Her Commentators . . . (1864); Book of the Artists: American Artist Life (1867).

N. F. Adkins in Dictionary of American Biography (1936).
I.W.

Tudur Aled (*Llansannan, Denbighshire c. 1465; †Carmarthen 1526), Welsh poet. He was of noble birth, being a nephew—and a pupil—of Dafydd* ab Edmwnd. He sang the praises of those in authority, both ecclesiastic and lay, among them Sir Rhys ap Thomas, champion of Henry Tudor. A man of many accomplishments and a great master of the traditional modes of eulogy, solicitation and elegy, he was a leading figure in the Caerwys eisteddfod of 1523. Vigour and compression mark his awdlau (odes), his englynion (quatrains) and his scores of cywyddau, the latter including, besides the types mentioned, love poems, flyting poems and moral exhortations to patrons. He excels in exact descriptive metaphors and in epigrammatic observations on men and affairs.

Gwaith T. A. (ed. T. Gwynn Jones, 2 vols, 1926).
Saunders Lewis, 'T. A.' in Efrydiau Catholig, I (1946).
B.Re.

AL-Ṭuḡhrā'ī (*Isfahan 1061; †1121), Arabic poet, was Vizier of one of the Seljuk rulers. A poem by him, called Lāmiyat al-'Ajam ('Poem Rhyming in L of the Persians'), was widely known among the Arabs and much studied by early European Arabists.

Eng. trs.: L. C. Chappelow (1758); J. D. Carlyle, Specimens of Arabian Poetry (1796; 2nd ed. 1840).
S.M.S.

Tuglas, FRIEDEBERT, pseud. of FRIEDEBERT MIHKEL-son (*Ahja manor 2 III 1886; †15 IV 1971), Estonian novelist, short-story writer and critic. Tuglas went to school with Suits* in Tartu and joined him as a leader of the Young Estonia movement. As a member of the Social Democratic Party he lived in exile after the failure of the 1905 revolution. He became the leading Estonian literary critic from 1918 to 1944 and was the first editor of the literary periodical Looming ('Creation'). After Suits left Estonia, Tuglas succeeded him as Professor at Tartu University and became a member of the Soviet Estonian Academy of Sciences.

Tuglas' initial realism soon gave way to impressionism and fantasy, but he did not discard his realist technique, though this is obscured by self-consciousness and a coloured vocabulary recalling Oscar Wilde's*. He reached the peak of his art in the short story. As a critic Tuglas is cautious, objective, a subtle psychologist and the master of a style that is entirely unmannered. He has written vivid travel-books and reminiscences.

SHORT STORIES: Hingemaa (1906); Kahekest (1908); Liivakell (1913); Saatust (1917); Arthur Valdes (1918); Raskuse vaim (1920); Poeet ja idioot (1924); Hingede rändamine (1925); Kuldne rõngas (1936); Der goldene Reifen, (1961).—NOVELS: Felix Ormusson (1915); Väike Illimar I (1937); Illimar, tr. F. Schwarz, (1959).—TRAVEL BOOKS: Teekond Hispaania (1918); Teekond Põhja-Aafrika (3 vols, 1928–30).—ESSAYS AND MONOGRAPHS: Juhan Liiv (1914); A. H. Tammsaare (1919); Mait Metsanurk (1919); William Shakespeare (1920); Henrik Ibsen immesena (1920); Ado Grenzsteini lahkumine (1926); Juhan Liiv: Elu ja looming (1927); Karl Rumor-Ast (1930).—LITERARY CRITICISM: Aja kaja (1919); Marginaalia (1921); Kirjanduslik päevaraamat (1921); Eesti kirjanduse selts (1932); Kriitika (8 vols, 1935–36).—MEMOIRS: Noorusmälestused (1940); Mälestused (1960).

A. Kallas, 'An Estonian novelist: F. T.' in Slavon. Rev., VI (1927); P. Viires, F. T.: elu ja looming (1937); H. Jürman et al., F. T. Metoodilisi ja bibliograafilisi materjale raamatukogudele (1966); N. Andresen, F. T. (1968). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Tuinman, CAROLUS (*Maastricht; ~19 XI 1659; †Middelburg 5 XI 1728), Dutch parson, poet and philologist, wrote several charming poems.

VERSE: Neander (1706); Zielsverlusting (1716); Nederduytsche poëzij (2 vols, 1718–28); Beginnselen van hemelwerk (1720).—Fakkelt der nederduytsche taale (2 vols, 1722–31). J.W.W.

Tukārām (*nr Poona 1608; †1649), the most popular of all the Marāthi poet saints. He is said to have written over 4,000 abhangas, short hymn-like poems of religious devotion mainly addressed to the god Vithobā of Pandharpur.

N. Macnicol, Psalms of the Marāthā Saints (1923); G. A. Deleury, Psaumes du pèlerin (1956). H.G.R. (I.R.)

Tuke, SIR SAMUEL (*c. 1620; ∞ Mary Guldeford, ∞ Mary Sheldon; †London 26 I 1673/74), English dramatist who entered Gray's Inn in 1635. Tuke fought and commanded as a Royalist. In Paris during the Commonwealth, he became one of the first members of the Royal Society on his return. His Adventures of Five Hours, adapted from a Spanish source, is full of incident and 'heroic' quality.

The Adventures of Five Hours (1663; 1664; 1671; ed. A. E. H. Swaen, 1927).

E. S. De Beer in Notes and Queries, CLXI (1931). B.L.J. (A.N.W.)

Tukur, MUHAMMADU: see Muhammadu Tukur.

Tullin, CHRISTIAN BRAUNMANN (*Kristiania 6 VII 1728; ∞1760 Mette Kruchow; †ibid. 21 I 1765), Danish-Norwegian poet. He studied theology at Copenhagen and graduated in 1748. The same year he went back to his native town where he settled permanently, for a time as a clergyman, but eventually as the owner of a factory. As a poet he is influenced by Pope*, Thomson* and Young*. Best known is Majdagen ('The May Day'), a descriptive poem.

Skrifter (3 vols, 1770–73); Breve (ed. O. G. Lundh and H. J. Huitfeldt, 1861).

F. Bull, Fra Holberg til Nordal Brun (1916); H. Noreng, C. B. T. (1951). E.B.

Tulsī Dās (*1543; †1623), a Vaishnava in the tradition of Rāmānanda and perhaps the most famous Hindi religious poet. His most important work is the Rāmcharita Mānasa ('Lake of the Deeds of Rāma'), a vernacular version of the RĀMĀYANA. It is written in eastern Hindi and has been described as the bible of 90 million Hindus.

W. D. P. Hill, The Holy Lake of the Acts of Ram (Oxford, 1953); F. R. Allchin, Kavitavali (London, 1964) and The Petition to Ram (ibid., 1966). S.C.R.W.

Tumas, JUOZAS: see Vaižgantas.

Tung CHUNG-SHU (□Kuang-ch'uan c. 179; †Mao-ling c. 104 B.C.), Chinese scholar, Tung was appointed an academician (po-shih) under Emperor Ching (157–141), as a specialist in Ch'un-ch'iu studies. During Emperor Wu's reign he was for short periods Chancellor, first (c. 140) to the King of Chiang-tu, and later (c. 124) to the King of Chiao-hsi. Much of his life was spent as a scholar and teacher. Tung occupies a position of great importance in the development of Confucianism as a state religion. The great master of the Kung-yang school of interpretation of the Ch'un-ch'iu (CONFUCIAN CLASSICS), he combined a view of the Ch'un-ch'iu as a political document applicable to all times, with the theories of the 'Yin-yang' school which explained all phenomena as governed by fixed laws. On this basis he erected a comprehensive political, ethical and cosmological system which set forth the interrelation of man and nature. His thought is known from Ch'un-ch'iu fan-lu (probably compiled from his surviving writings some centuries after his death) and from his replies to edicts of Emperor Wu, preserved in his biography in Pan* Ku's Han Shu.

Ch'un-ch'iu fan-lu (part tr. K. Woo, Les trois théories politiques du Tch'ouen Ts'ieou, 1932; tr. anon. in Lectures Chinoises, I, Peking, 1945); replies to Wu's edicts tr. in W. Seufert, 'Urkunden zur staatlichen Neuordnung unter der Han-Dynastie' in Mitteilungen des Seminars für orientalische Sprachen, XXIII-XXV (1922).

O. Franke, Studien zur Geschichte des konfuzianischen Dogmas und der chinesischen Staatsreligion (1920); Fung Yu-lan, A History of Chinese Philosophy, II (tr. D. Bodde, 1953); further biblio. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969).

A.R.D.

Tuppo, FRANCESCO DEL, 15th-century Italian writer in Naples. Published in 1485 a vernacular version of Aesop's* fables, remarkable for its idiomatic Neapolitan and for the confirmatio exemplaris accompanying each fable.

L'Esopo di F. del T. (ed. C. de Lollis, 1886).

L. di Francia, Novellistica, I (1924); A. Mauro, F. del T. e il suo 'Esopo' (1926); G. Petrocchi, Masuccio Guardati e la narrativa napoletana del Quattrocento (1953).

P.McN.

Turberville, GEORGE (*1540; †1598), English poet, educated at Winchester, New College and the Inns of Court. His poems are marked by a rough but strong rhythm, and he was regarded by later Elizabethan poets as one of the pioneers of their craft.

VERSE: Epitaphes, Epigrams, Songs and Sonets (1567).—TRANSLATIONS: The Heroicall Epistles . . . of Publius Ovidius Naso (1567); The Eglogs of Mantuan turned into English verse (1567); Tragicall Tales (1587; from Boccaccio).—PROSE: The Booke of Faulconrie or Hauking (1575); The Noble Art of Venerie (1575).

J.B.B.

Turgenev, IVAN SERGEYEVICH (*Orël 28 X 1818; †Boulevard, nr Paris 3 IX 1883), Russian author. Born into a family of landed gentry, he suffered as a child from his mother's despotic character. He graduated in St Petersburg and went to Berlin where he strengthened both his Western sympathies and his liberal views. In literature he first emerged with his tale in verse Parasha (1843) before adopting prose as his true medium. In 1847 he published in Sovremennik the first of those stories of a sportsman which, in 1852, appeared in book form as Zapiski okhoznika—one of the best early contributions to the NATURAL

SCHOOL of fiction championed by Belinsky*. Full of impressionist landscape motifs, the sketches are a series of portraits of peasants and landowners. These are shown against the background of serfdom not in terms of propaganda but exclusively in terms of art, which made them all the more effective. It is said that the future Tsar Alexander II was so impressed by them that he became determined to abolish serfdom (which he did in 1861).

Turgenev's other works can be divided between novels, stories and ten plays, one of which—Mesyats v derevne, 'A Month in the Country'—enjoys a worldwide reputation. His novels are among the artistically most perfect and best constructed in Russian literature. His favourite topic is gentry life and the Russian usad'ba or country-house of the period, and his general mood is of autumnal melancholy: as if springing from the impending doom of a class, already knowing itself to be 'superfluous'. The hero of his first novel, Rudin (1855), is a typical 'superfluous man' and a pathetically helpless bundle of frustrations. Lavretsky, the principal character of Dvoryanskoe gnezdo (1858), is another passive failure. In Nakanune (1860) and then more convincingly in Bazarov, the hero of his best novel, Ottsy i deti (1861), Turgenev tried to show what an active man, such as the period was waiting for, could be like. Yet here, too, as in his other novels, including Dym (1867) and Nov' (1870), the end is one of frustration.

Written in beautiful mellow language, these works show a superb narrative sense and an amazing interplay of characters, with an invariable balance between truth and poetry, between observation and imaginative intuition. The same can be said of his stories, most of which are among the finest in European literature. In his delicate impressionism, in his art of conjuring up atmosphere, as well as in his peculiar cult of failure, Turgenev anticipated Chekhov*. Like Pushkin* in Evgeny Onegin, he was particularly fond of confronting a weak man with a strong woman. And he was at his best when rendering the evasive nuances and caprices of love—partly because all through his adult life he was in love with the famous singer, Mme Viardot, whom he followed (as a loyal friend) all over Europe, finally dying near her, a tired and disappointed man. Yet at the time of his death he was still the best known and most appreciated Russian author abroad. Moreover, through his wide contacts and friendships outside Russia (especially in France), he did more for a literary rapprochement between Russia and the West than any other writer of that period.

Sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1898; another ed., 1928–34); Izbrannoye (1944); Sobranie sochineniy (11 vols, 1949).—TRANSLATIONS: The Novels of I. T. (tr. C. Garnett, 17 vols, 1919–23); The Plays of I. T. (tr. M. S. Mandell, 1924); Hamlet and

Don Quixote (tr. R. Nichols, 1930); Three Plays (tr. C. Garnett, 1934); Fathers and Children (tr. R. Hare, 1947); A Nobleman's Nest (tr. idem, 1947); Smoke (tr. N. Duddington, 1949); First Love (tr. I. Berlin, 1950); Rudin (tr. A. Brown, 1950); A Sportsman's Notebook (tr. C. and N. Hepburn, 1950); Fathers and Sons (tr. G. Reavey, 1950); On the Eve (tr. G. Gardiner, 1950; tr. M. Budberg, 1950); Poems in Prose (Russ. and Eng.; tr. C. Garnett and R. Rees, 1951).

Dostoyevsky i T. Perepiska (1928); B. P. Botkin i I. S. T. Perepiska (1930); Neizdannye pis'ma (2 vols, 1937); G. Flaubert, Lettres inédites à T. (1946); I. T.: Nouvelle correspondance inédite, I (ed. A. Zwigilsky, 1972).

V. Zelinsky, Kriticheskaya literatura o Turgeneve (1918) and in Literaturnoye nasledstvo, XXXI, XXXII (1937).

Biogs and studs by: D. N. Ovsyaniko-Kulikovsky (1904); V. I. Pokrovsky (1905); A. E. Gruzinsky (1918); E. A. Solovyev (1922); E. K. Semenov (1930); B. Zaitsev (1930, 1949); A. Remizov (1933); L. Brodsky (1940); N. P. Antsiferov (1947).—In Fr. or Eng.: E. Hauman (1906); E. Garnett (1917); A. Yarmolinsky (1926); A. Maurois (1931); J. A. T. Lloyd (1942); D. Magarshak (1954).

P. Sakulin, Na grani dvukh kul'tur (1918); Turgenevskiy sbornik (ed. A. F. Koni, 1921); Y. Nikol'sky, T. i Dostoyevsky (1921); I. M. Grevs, T. i Polina Viardot (1927); A. Ostrovsky, T. v zapiskakh sovremennikov (1929); A. Mazon, Manuscripts parisiens d'I. T. (1930); H. Hershkowitz, Democratic Ideas in T.'s Works (1932); M. K. Kleman, Letopis' zhizni i tvorchestva I. S. Turgeneva (1934); R. A. Gettmann, T. in England and America (1941); T. v russkoy kritike (ed. K. I. Bonetsky, 1953); R. Freeborn, T.—The Novelist's Novelist (1960); A. Fitzlyon, The Price of Genius (biog. of Pauline Viardot; 1964).
J.L.

Turgot, ANNE-ROBERT-JACQUES, BARON DE L'AULNE (*Paris 10 V 1727; †ibid. 20 III 1781), French economist, who became Minister of Finance (1775–76), but failed to carry through his enlightened programme of economic reform. He contributed to the Encyclopédie. His Réflexions sur la formation et la distribution des richesses (1766), an early work of political economy, expounds the doctrine of the physiocrats, that the land is the ultimate source of all wealth.

Lettres sur la tolérance (1753–54).—Œuvres (ed. G. Schelle, 5 vols, 1913–23).

G. Schelle, T. (1909); D. Dakin, T. and the Ancien Régime (1939); R. L. Meek, The Economics of Physiocracy (1963).
G.B.

Turmeda, ANSELM (*Mallorca 1352; †Tunis c. 1430), Catalan writer; a Franciscan who went to Tunis and renounced his faith. He wrote homilies (Llibre de bons amonestaments), satirical cobles, prophecies and a defence of Islam. His most famous work, La disputa de l'ase, known only in French translation (1417), is imitated from the Arabic; it shows the cynical nature of the age and was banned by the Inquisition.

'La Disputa d'un asne' (ed. R. Foulché-Delbosc in Rev. Hispanique, XXIV, 1911); Obres menors (ed. M. Olivar, 1927).

J. Miret y Sans, 'Vida de Fr. A. T.' in Rev. Hispanique, XXIV (1911); A. Calvet, Fr. A. T., heterodoxo español (1914); M. Asín Palacios, 'El original árabe de la Disputa del asno contra Fr. A. T.' in Rev. de filol. esp., I (1914); Ideari d'A. T. (ed. J. Marfany, 1965).
G.W.R.

Turner, CHARLES TENNYSON: see Tennyson, CHARLES.

Turner, FREDERICK JACKSON (*Portage, Wisc. 14 XI 1861; ∞1889 Carolina Sherwood; †Pasadena, Calif. 14 III 1932), American historian. In a paper delivered in 1893 to the American Historical Association he argued that the dominant factor in American history was the existence of free unsettled land to the West from 1620 until about 1890. This 'Frontier Thesis' found a ready response in the American imagination (FRONTIER).

The Rise of the New West (1906); The Frontier in American History (1920).

H. N. Smith, Virgin Land: The American West as Symbol and Myth (1950).
D.S.R.W.

Turoldus: see CHARLEMAGNE, LEGEND OF.

Turpilus, SEXTUS (†Sinuessa 103 B.C.), Roman comic poet. Fragments of about 13 versions of Attic comedies survive. At least one was still performed on the stage in Cicero's* day.

L. Rychlewski, Turpilii comici fragmenta (1962).
H.D.J.

PSEUDO-Turpin: see CHARLEMAGNE, LEGEND OF.

Tusser, THOMAS (*Rivenhall, Essex 1524; ∞Amy Moon; †London 3 V 1580), English agriculturalist, educated at Eton and King's College, Cambridge. He began as a musician and singer, but turned to farming. Despite the advice he offered others, he was unsuccessful and died in debt.

A hundreth good points of husbandrie (1557); Five hundreth good pointes of husbandrie (1573; ed. W. Payne and S. J. Herbage, 1878); Four bookes of husbandrie (1577).
J.B.B.

Tutuola, AMOS (*Abeokuta, Nigeria 1920), Nigerian novelist. With only primary education, Tutuola became a blacksmith, a coppersmith, then a Labour Ministry messenger. After his first book was published, the Nigerian Broadcasting Corporation appointed him storekeeper at Ibadan.

His unorthodox English is much affected by Yoruba grammar and syntax. Although his books were acclaimed abroad, as much for mere quaintness as for narrative skill and originality, many Nigerians scorned his 'uneducated' English and 'plagiarizing' of folk-tales. Influenced by Fagunwa's* Yoruba stories (though he avoids moralizing), by Bunyan* and official English and journalese, he nevertheless handles African myths with genuine originality.

The Palm-Wine Drinkard and His Dead Palm-Wine Tapster in the Dead's Town (1952); My Life in the Bush of Ghosts (1954); Simbi and the Satyr of the Dark Jungle (1955); The Brave African Huntress (1958); Feather Woman of the Jungle (1962); Ajaiyi and His Inherited Poverty (1967).

A.R.

Tuwim, JULIAN (*Łódź 13 IX 1894; †Zakopane 27 XII 1953), Polish poet. The leading poet and co-founder of the 'Skamander' group, he strongly opposed the Symbolist poetry of Młoda Polska in his early work. Inspired partly by German Expressionism and Russian futurism, he created a poetic diction using colloquial language. His early ebullient optimism gradually changed and his often grotesque satires from the 1930s reflect his liberal political convictions. At the same time he became preoccupied with the problem of the connection between language and cultural tradition, and introduced into his poetry extreme, but mostly successful, linguistic experiments, especially neologisms. His poems for children, written just before the Second World War, have become classics in Polish literature. He was an excellent translator, especially of Russian poetry. P.H.

VERSE: Cryhanie na Boga (1918); Sokrates tańczący (1920); Siódma jesień (1922); Słowa w krwi (1926); Biblia cygańska (1933); Rzecz czarnośleska (1929); Jarmark rymów (1934); Zieleń (1936); Kwiaty polskie (1949; 1950).—VARIOUS: Lokomotywa, Rzepka, Ptasie Radio (1938); The Locomotive, adapt. B. Gutteridge and W. J. Peace, (1940).—Wybór poezji 1919–1939 (1947).

A. Wyleżyńska, Jeunes poètes polonais (1926); J. Stradecki, J. T. Bibliografia (1959); M. Głowiński, Poetyka T. a polska tradycja literacka (1962); Wspomnienia o J. T. (1963); M. Żywow, J. T. (1963); R. Sielnikoff, Ze studiów nad językiem J. T. (1968). S.S. (P.H.)

Túy, LUCAS DE: see Lucas of Túy.

Tvardovsky, ALEXANDER TRIFONOVICH (*1910; †Moscow 18 XII 1971), Soviet poet whose 'engaged' narrative poem, Strana Muravia (1934–36), written in the folk tone, is in the tradition of Nekrasov's* Komu na Rusi zhit' khorosho; only here the picaresque roamer is a peasant who vainly seeks a country in which there are no collective farms. During the war Tvardovsky wrote his famous Vasily Těrkin (1941–45), the portrait of a peasant soldier during the war with Hitler. It consists of a long series of episodes showing the commonsense humour and all those moods which were likely to make a simple soldier endure the trials of that war. Written in the language of the people, this was the most successful poetic work of the war period. Tvardovsky's post-war optimism came out in his collection Za dalyu dal' (1953).

Vasily Těrkin (1949); Kniga liriki (1949); Stikhotvoreniya i poemy (1954).

B. Alexandrov, Lyudi i knigi (1950); M. Metchenko, Lektsii po istorii russkoy sovetskoy literatury, III (1953). J.L.

Twain, MARK: see Mark Twain.

Twardowski, SAMUEL ZE SKRZYPNY (*on Lutynia river c. 1600; †1661), Polish poet. A leading Polish Baroque poet, he described historical events and customs realistically and vividly in his massive epic chronicles. His analysis of changes of emotion in the idyll Daphnis, is skilful, elegant and typically Baroque as is his account of the clashes between heavenly and earthly love in Nadobna Pasqualina, probably an adaptation of an unknown Spanish poem. P.H.

VERSE: Przeważna legacja . . . Zbaraskiego (1633); Szczęśliwa moskiewska wyprawa Władysława IV . . . (1634); Daphnis drzewem bobkowym . . . (1638); Satyr na twarz Rzeczypospolitej (1640); Nadobna Pasqualina (1655; ed. R. Pollak, 1926); Wojna domowa z Kozaki i Tatary . . . (1681).—Poezje (1861).

K. Thieberger, S. von Skrzypna T. (1898); S. Turowski, S. ze S. T. i jego poezja na tle współczesnem (1909); R. Fiszerowna, S. T. jako poeta barokowy (1931). S.S.

Twm o'r Nant: see Edwards, THOMAS.

Twyne, BRIAN (*Lewes 1579; †Oxford 14 VI 1644), English antiquary. Twyne was the first archivist and historian of Oxford University. His copious collections formed the basis of Wood's* History and Annals. G.K.H.

Twyne, THOMAS (*Canterbury 1543; †Lewes 1 VIII 1613), English translator. Besides Englishing several topographical works Twyne completed Phaer's* translation of the Aeneid (1573). G.K.H.

Tyāgarāja (*1767; †1847). Although born in Tiruvārūr in Tamilnād, this Vaiṣṇava devotee is renowned in South Indian music for his Telugu kirtanas, devotional songs in praise of Rāma, the god-hero of vernacular versions of the RĀMĀYAṆA. He also composed two musical dramas on Vaiṣṇava themes. J.R.M.

Tyard, PONTUS DE (*Château de Bissey-sur-Fley, nr Mâcon 1521; †Bragny-sur-Saône 23 IX 1605), French poet. He began as a disciple of Maurice Scève* (Erreurs amoureuses), then became associated with Ronsard*. He forms a link, personally and aesthetically, between the neo-Petrarchism of the Lyons poets and the broader humanism of the PLÉIADE, of which he was a member. His prose Discours philosophiques (1587) are imbued with Platonism and discuss poetry, music, metaphysics, astrology. Tyard was an important Burgundian figure and Bishop of Chalon-sur-Saône (1578–89).

Les Erreurs amoureuses (1549, 1551, 1555; crit. ed. J. A. McClelland, 1967); Œuvres poétiques (1573).—Œuvres (ed. C. Marty-Laveaux, 1875); Œuvres poétiques complètes (ed. J. C. Lapp, 1966).

A. Jeandet, P. de T. (1860); J. Vianey, Le Pétrarquisme en France (1909); R. V. Merrill, 'Platonism in P. de T.'s Erreurs Amoureuses' in Mod. Philol. (1937); K. M. Hall, P. de T. and His 'Discours philosophiques' (1963). G.B.

Tyl, JOSEF KAJETÁN (*Kutná Hora 4 II 1808; †Plzeň 11 VII 1856), Czech dramatist. He devoted his life as actor, producer and playwright to the establishment and maintenance of a Czech theatrical tradition with a vernacular repertoire. His plays are of little lasting merit, but were of immense importance in the formation of the modern Czech theatre. Best remembered are his popular farces and dramatized fairy tales, e.g. 'The Fair' (Fidlovačka, 1834), 'The Bagpiper of Strakonice' (Strakonický dudák, 1847). In Fidlovačka Tyl introduced the song which was to become the Czech national anthem, 'Kde domov můj?' ('Where Is My Home?').

Spisy (ed. V. Štěpánek et al., 25 vols, 1952 ff.).—M. Kačer and M. Otruba, Tvůrčí cesta J. K. T. (1961; with biblio.). R.A.

Tyler, ROYALL (*Boston 18 VII 1757; ∞1794 Mary Palmer; †Brattleboro, Vt. 26 VIII 1826), American playwright, novelist and poet. The Contrast (1790), the first American comedy to be produced, presents a Yankee rustic and embodies American ideals. The Algerine Captive (1797) is a picaresque novel.

The Yankey in London (1809).—Four Plays by R. T. (ed. H. T. Brown et al., 1941); The Verse of R. T. (ed. M. B. Péladeau, 1968).

G. T. Tanselle, R. T. (1967).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Tyndale, WILLIAM: see Tindale, WILLIAM.

Tynyanov, YURY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1894; †1944), Soviet author of literary-historical novels, beginning with Kyukhlya (1925)—the nickname of the poet and friend of Pushkin*, Küchelbecker*. This well-documented biographie romancée shows a cool detachment, a keen psychological sense, and the authentic setting of the age described. Tynyanov's second and even better novel, Smert' Vazir Mukhtara (1929; Death and Diplomacy in Persia, tr. A. Brown, 1938), is about the playwright and diplomat Griboyedov* who, in 1829, had been torn to pieces by a fanatical Persian mob in Tehran. His third novel of the same kind, Pushkin (1936–37), full of meticulous detail, remained unfinished. Tynyanov was one of those who set the fashion for the modernized historical novel, so prominent in subsequent Soviet literature. As a member of the FORMALIST group of critics, he wrote several studies and stories, and took part in the literary controversy then in vogue.

Problema stikhotvornogo yazyka (1924); Arkhaisty i novatory (1929); Rasskazy (1935).

L. Tsyrlin, T.-belletrist (1935). J.L.

Tyrtaeus, Greek elegiac poet (7th century B.C.), wrote poems summoning the Spartans to battle and extolling the glories of war.

J. M. Edmonds, Elegy and Iambus, I (1931; with tr.); T. Hudson-Williams, Early Greek Elegy (1926; with comm.); C. Prato (1968; with comm.).

C. M. Bowra, Early Greek Elegists (1938); W. Jaeger, Paideia, I (4th ed. 1959). J.T.H.

Tyrwhitt, THOMAS (*London 27 III 1730; †ibid. 15 VIII 1786), English antiquarian scholar and grammarian, through whose researches the rules of Chaucer's* prosody became known to the 18th century. Through linguistic knowledge he detected Chatterton's* Rowley forgeries.

Observations and Conjectures upon some Passages of Shakespeare (1766; pub. anon.); Poems supposed to have been written at Bristol by Thomas Rowley and others . . . (ed.; 1777); Vindication of the Appendix to the Poems called Rowley (1782); The Canterbury Tales of Chaucer (with essay, notes and glossary; 5 vols, 1775–78).

J. Nichols, Illustrations of Literary History (8 vols, 1817–58) and Literary Anecdotes, III (1812). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Tyutchev, FĖDOR IVANOVICH (*Orël province 23 XI 1803; †St Petersburg 15 VII 1873), Russian poet, a precursor of Symbolism. He made his debut in Pushkin's* Sovremennik in 1836–37, after which there was a long period of silence—partly because he spent a number of years in diplomatic service in Turin and Munich, and partly because the age was growing much too utilitarian to care for his kind of poetry. Dostoyevsky* once called Tyutchev the 'first poet-philosopher' in Russian literature, and not without reason, since his poetry shows a deeply felt pantheistic attitude towards the world (partly influenced by Schelling's* Naturphilosophie). Yet behind the external order of the cosmos Tyutchev suspected an ever-threatening dark chaos, and this irrational 'nocturnal' aspect of the world he expressed in haunting symbols. Another group of his best lyrics reflects the tragic love he had (from 1850 onwards) for Mlle Denisyeva who was associated with his daughters' education. In politics he was a conservative Slavophil and patriot, and wrote several political verses, and in his French pamphlet, La Russie et la révolution (1849), extolled Russia as the only giant capable of stemming the revolutionary tide coming from the 'contaminated' West.

Sochineniya Tyutcheva (2nd ed. 1900); Stikhotvoreniya (1921); Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (1933, 1939).—Pushkin, Lermontov, T. (tr. V. Nabokov, 1947).

D. D. Yazykov, F. I. T. (1904); L. P. Grossman, Tri sovremennika (1922); G. I. Chulkov, Letopis' zhizni i tvorchestva T. (1933); D. Stremoukhov, La poésie et l'idéologie de T. (1937). J.L.

Tzara, TRISTAN, pseud. of SAMI ROSENSTOCK (*Moinești, Rumania 4 IV 1896; †Paris 25 XII 1963), French poet. In 1916 Tzara founded the 'Dada' group in Zürich. In 1919 he brought his ideas to Paris and gained the support of such young avant-garde poets as Breton* and Aragon*, who later (1922) left him to found the Surrealist movement (SURREALISM). He finally abandoned his experiments in the 'disintegration' of language and placed his natural lyrical gifts at the service of 'engaged' literature.

La première aventure céleste de M. Antipyrine (1916); Sept manifestes dada (1920); Mouchoir de nuages (1925); L'homme approximatif (1930); Où boivent les loups (1932); L'Antitête (1933); Grains et issues (1935); Le cœur à gaz (1938); La fuite (1947); Morceaux choisis (1947); Le surréalisme et l'après-guerre (1947); Lampisteries (1963).

R. Lacôte, T. T. (1952); M. Sanouillet, Dada à Paris (1965). M.G.; J.P.R.

Tzetztes: see John Tzetztes.

U

'Ubaid Zākānī, NIZĀM-AL-DĪN (*Qazvin 1300; †1371), Persian poet and satirist. He lived in Qazvin and Shiraz, visited Baghdad and held a judicial post for some time in Qazvin, but died in poverty. 'Ubaid is the unequalled master of parody and social satire, in which he frequently uses obscene language. His serious poetry is written in a pure and elegant style.

Muntakhab al-Laḡā'if (incl. 'Akhlāq al-Ashrāf', 1340, 'Sad pand', 1350, and 'Ta'rifāt', ed. M. H. Ferté, Constantinople, 1885); Mūsh u Gurbah (ascribed to 'U.; Tehran, 1930); Rats Against Cats, tr. M. Farzad, (1945); Divān (intro. 'A. Īqbal, Tehran, 1942). E.Y.

Uberti, FAZIO [BONIFAZIO] DEGLI (*?Pisa c. 1305/09; †?Verona c. 1367), Italian poet. A Ghibelline of illustrious Florentine family, he lived in exile at various Italian courts. Uberti wrote love poetry, robust political canzoni and the Dittamondo (c. 1346–67), an allegorical treatise in terza rime inspired by the Divina Commedia. A rich source of legendary tales, this unfinished work describes the author's moral conversion (c. 1348) in terms of a fantastic journey through Europe, Africa and part of Asia.

Il Dittamondo e le Rime (crit. ed. G. Corsi, 2 vols, 1952); Poeti minori del Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1952); Poesia del Duecento e del Trecento (ed. C. Muscetta and P. Rivalta, 1956).

A. Pellizzari, Il Dittamondo e la Divina Commedia (1905); B. Croce, 'F. degli U.' in Poesia popolare e poesia d'arte (1933).—C. E. Wittmore, 'F. degli U. as a lyric poet' in Romanic Rev., V (1914). M.W.

Uc de Saint Circ (c. 1217–53), Provençal troubadour. Born in the neighbourhood of Arles, he led an unhappy life as a minstrel. The 15 elegant songs which have come down to us form a love story—of the faithful minstrel-lover and his faithless lady. He imitates Raimon* de Miraval, to whom he is perhaps superior in formal skill. His sirventes and tensos, a biography of Bernart* de Ventadorn—he may have written others—stamp him as a professional court poet; the Provençal grammar of UC FAIDIT, Donatz provençals, was ascribed to him.

A. Jeanroy and J. J. Salverda de Grave, Poésies de U. de S. C. (1913). R.R.B.

Udall, NICHOLAS (*1505; †1556), English playwright. Udall was headmaster of Eton (1534–41), patronized by Edward VI and Mary, and appointed headmaster of Westminster (1554). His Ralph Roister Doister, the first English comedy, combines native humour and pathos with the structure and type-characters of Roman comedy.

Ralph Roister Doister (wr. c. 1553; pub. ?1567; ed. W. W. Greg, 1935; ed. G. Scheurweghs, Louvain, 1939).

C. M. Gayley, 'An historical view of the beginnings of English comedy' in Representative English Comedies, I (1903); W. H. Williams, 'Ralph Roister Doister' in Eng. Studien, XXXVI, XXXVII (1906–07); D. L. Mauley, 'The relation between U.'s Roister Doister and the comedies of Terence and Plautus', ibid., XXXVIII (1907); J. Hinton, 'The source of Ralph Roister Doister' in Med. Philol., XI (1913); T. W. Baldwin and M. C. Linthicum, 'The date of Ralf Roister Doister' in Philol. Quart., VI (1927); M. Chitty, 'N. U.' in Times Lit. Supp. (22 July 1939).

W.A.A.

Ueda AKINARI (*Sonezaki, Osaka 1734; †1760 Ueyama Tama; †Kyoto 8 VIII 1809), Japanese writer, scholar and poet. The son of an unknown father and a prostitute, he was adopted into a rich family and lived an idle life until 1756, when he started studying literature. His first book came out in 1766 and his masterpiece Ugetsu monogatari in 1776. After 1771, in addition to his literary work, he studied and then practised medicine, but gave this up in 1788 to devote himself to writing. His last years were lonely and miserable: he lived in poverty, affected by blindness and an increasingly unsociable nature. Although his scholarly works on Chinese and Japanese literature are of high value, his novels are his main literary achievement. His stories usually have grotesque and supernatural plots, presented sincerely and convincingly. E.B.C.

Ugetsu monogatari: 'Tales of a Clouded Moon', 5 of the 9 stories tr. W. Whitehouse in Monumenta Nipponica, I (1938), IV (1941); another story tr. in Selections From Japanese Literature (ed. F. J. Daniels, 1959); remainder tr. E. D. Saunders in Monumenta Nipponica, XXI (1966); 'The Chrysanthemum Tryst', 1 story tr. Louis Allen in Durham Univ. Jour., new ser., XXVIII.2 (1967); Contes de pluie et de lune (complete tr. R. Seiffert, 1956).

P. Humbertclaude, 'Essai sur la vie et l'œuvre de U. A.' in Monumenta Nipponica, III–V (1940–42); J. Araki, 'A critical approach to the Ugetsu monogatari', ibid., XXII (1967).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Ugarte, MANUEL (*Buenos Aires 1878; †1951), Argentinian political journalist and short-story writer whose fame in the former field rests on his militant attitude against North American imperialism. In this respect he coincided with the later developments of MODERNISM. As a short-story writer he has achieved distinction with some collected volumes that have been appreciated abroad.

Cuentos de la Pampa (1903); Cuentos argentinos (1908); El porvenir de la América latina (Valencia, 1911); El destino de un continente (Madrid, 1923; The Destiny of a Continent, tr. C. A. Phillips, 1925).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Ughelli, FERDINANDO (*Florence 21 III 1595; †Rome 16 V 1670), Cistercian scholar, author of a history of the Italian Church by dioceses, widely imitated in other countries.

Italia sacra (9 vols, 1643–62; ed. N. Coleti, 10 vols, 1717–22).
D.H.

Ugrinov, PAVLE, pseud. of VASILJE POPOVIĆ (*Mol nr Subotica 15 IV 1926), Serbian novelist and prose writer. After fighting with the Partisans as a boy from 1944, Ugrinov studied economics at Belgrade before changing to the Drama Academy. He has worked in most of the Belgrade theatres, including Atelje 212, the avant-garde theatre of which he was one of the founders. His prose is close to the French nouvelle vague style, modernist, descriptive, plastic with an almost complete absence of direct narration and apparent cohesion. He also writes plays for radio and television.

NOVELS: Odlazak (1958); Vrt (1967); Elementi (1968); Senzacije (1970).
B.J.

Uguccione da Lodi (fl. first half of 13th century), north Italian religious poet, wrote two long didactic poems (the Libro) on sin and Hell and Heaven. Nothing is certainly known of his life; he may have had a leaning to heresy. The poems, written in northern dialect, are of philological rather than literary interest.

Ed. R. Brogini in Studj romanzi, XXXII (1956); see also Crestomazia italiana dei primi secoli (ed. E. Monaci; 2nd ed. rev. F. Arese, 1955); Early Italian Texts (ed. C. Dionisotti and C. Grayson, 2nd ed. 1965).

E. Levi, U. da L. e i primordi della poesia italiana (1928).
K.F.

Uhland, LUDWIG (*Tübingen 26 IV 1787; ∞1820 Emilie Vischer; †ibid. 13 XI 1862), German poet. He and his friend Justus Kerner* formed the nucleus of the Swabian circle of poets, whose original impulse came from the Heidelberg Romantics. He developed rapidly during his study of medieval MSS in Paris (1810–11). His creative period lasted from 1804 to 1817, after which his energies were increasingly diverted to German literary studies of the Middle Ages, particularly of the MINNESANG (Professor at Tübingen 1824–33), and furthering democratic ideals in German politics. Historical sense was also the basis of his impersonal poetry, which, at its best, echoes the popular ballad and Volkslied. His historical plays, though unforgotten, are now dated.

Sämtliche Werke (ed. H. Fischer, 6 vols, 1892); Tagebuch (ed. J. Hartmann, 1893); Gedichte (crit. ed. idem and E. Schmidt, 2 vols, 1898); Brief- wechsel (ed. J. Hartmann, 4 vols, 1911–16).—Songs and Ballads of U. (tr. W. W. Skeat, 1864).

H. Schneider, U. (1920) and U.s Gedichte und das deutsche Mittelalter (1921, 1967); H. Maschek, U. als Schwabe (1930); E. Wohlhaupt, U. (1955); G. Schwarz, L. U. (1964).
H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Ujejski, KORNEL (*Beremiany 12 IX 1823; †Pawłów 19 IX 1897), Polish poet and playwright. His patriotic feelings were influenced by great Polish Romantic poets with whom he came into early contact. Social and political events in Poland at that time found a lugubrious expression in his patriotic and high-sounding poems. His hymn Z dymem pożarów, to which Nikorowicz set music, became for some time almost a national anthem.

Maraton (1847; ed. M. Janik, 1906); Skargi Jeremiego (1847); Melodie biblijne (1852); Tłumaczenia Szopena (1866; Worte zu Chopin, tr. H. Monat, n.d.); Skargi Jeremiego Część druga (1893).—Poezye (Leipzig, 1866); Pisma wybrane (1955).—Ger. tr. sel. poems in E. Bett, Bibliothek der Gesamtlitteratur (1886).

A. Bądzkiewicz, K. U. Zarys biograficzno-krytyczny (1893); K. Wroblewski, K. U. (1902); M. Wysłouchowa, K. U. Jego życie i pisma (1906).
S.S. (P.H.)

Ujević, AUGUSTIN ['Tin'] (*Vrgorac, Dalmatia 5 VII 1891; †Zagreb 12 XI 1955), Croatian poet. A bohemian character, standing outside all the Yugoslav literary movements of his time on account of the plaintive, personal and powerfully original quality of his lyricism and his exceptional mastery of the resources of the language. He was an active Socialist, an erudite essayist and translator.

POEMS: Lelek sebra (1920); Kolajna (1926); Auto na korzu (1932); Žedan kamen na studencu (1954).—ESSAYS: Nedjela maloljetnih (1931); Ljudi za vratima gostionice (1938).—Sabrana djela (coll. works; 17 vols, 1963–67); Izabrana djela (sel. works; ed. D. Tadijanović, 1965).

A. Marinković, Svetkovine poezije. O Tinu Ujeviću (1961).
V.J.

Uji Shūi Monogatari, a Japanese collection of nearly 200 Buddhist and secular tales second in importance only to the much larger *Konjaku* monogatari*, and compiled by an unknown compiler, probably in the early 13th century, though it may contain later interpolations. It has a close but obscure relationship to Konjaku; it appears to have developed out of a now lost work by Minamoto no Takakuni which (or some form of which) may have been one source for that monumental collection.

Detailed study and complete tr. in D. E. Mills, A Collection of Tales From Uji (1970); partial tr. J. S. Forster in Monumenta Nipponica, XX.1–2

(1965); two stories tr. R. H. Brower in Anthology of Japanese Literature (ed. D. L. Keene, 1955).

D.E.M.

Ulfilas: see Wulfila.

Ulloa y Pereira, Luis (*Toro 1584; †ibid. 1674), Spanish poet and memoir-writer. He was favoured by Olivares and became corregidor of León. His most famous poem is about Alfonso VIII and Raquel, the Jewess of Toledo. His minor poems are not remarkable. He also wrote a defence of the popular theatre and memoirs of the life of his brother.

E.M.W.

Obras, prosas y versos (1674); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIX; Memorias familiares y literarias (ed. M. Artigas, 1925).

J. García Aráez, Don L. de U. y P. (1952).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Ulrich von dem Türlin (fl. 1261–69), Carinthian burgher poet who, following hints in Wolfram* von Eschenbach's Willehalm, added a pre-history of some 10,000 lines, which in revisions by his own and later hands enjoyed popularity; the 15th-century prose version transmits the continuous story. (See Ulrich* von Türlin.)

Ed. S. Singer (1893).

F.P.P.

Ulrich von Gutenberg (fl. 1172–1200), minnesinger of noble Alsatian family; was remembered as an early master in the art of the LEICH, but in the example preserved preoccupation with metrical pattern has reduced him to commonplaces. His other songs are dull. He was influenced by Friedrich* von Hausen.

Minnesangs Frühling (ed. K. Lachman and C. von Kraus, 1950); H. de Boor, Die höfische Lit. 1170–1250 (1953).

F.P.P.

Ulrich von Lichtenstein (c. 1200–75), Styrian noble, whose verse autobiography (Frauendienst, 1255) is our best guide to the reality behind later minnesang: a few episodes from his impressive official career, but the full story of his fantastic behaviour from early youth to middle age in the name of amour courtois. It includes his lyrics up to 1255 (he wrote about 60), many spirited, but courtly Tanzlieder and two dawn songs (TAGELIED). (Ludwig Tieck*, Frauendienst . . . , 1812, is an adaptation.) His Frauenbuch (1257) is in the main a dispute between a knight and a lady on the decay of chivalry.

Ed. K. Lachmann (1841); Frauendienst (ed. R. Bechstein, 1888); Olive Sayce, The Poets of the Minnesang (1967).

K. Knorr, Über U. von L. (1875); W. Brecht, 'U. von L. als Lyriker' in Zschr. f. dt. Alt., XLIX (1908); K. L. Schneider, 'Die Selbstdarstellung' in Festgabe U. Pretzel (1963).

F.P.P.

Ulrich von Singenberg, 'der Truchsess von St Gallen' (fl. 1209–28), Swiss minnesinger. He imitates and parodies Walther* von der Vogelweide's Sprüche; in addition, conventional Minnelieder and Tagelieder. His robust tone heralds later Swiss developments. (See Steinmar*; Hadlaub*.)

Ed. W. Wackernagel and M. Rieger, Walther von der Vogelweide nebst U. von S. (1862); Dt. Liederdichter (ed. K. Bartsch and W. Golther, 1929).—L. Wolff in W. Stammeler, Die dt. Lit. des M.A.s, Verfasserlex., IV (1951–52).

F.P.P.

Ulrich von Türlin (fl. 1235–50), German poet of noble family who enjoyed the favour of King Henry, son of Frederick* II. Of his Cliges (based on Chrétien* de Troyes) there is only a fragment (60 lines). He attempted sequels to Gottfried* von Strassburg's Tristan (2,300 lines based on Eilhart* von Oberg) and Wolfram* von Eschenbach's Willehalm (36,000 lines based on chansons de geste of the Guillaume d'Orange cycle [CHANSONS DE GESTE]). (See Heinrich* von Freiberg; Ulrich* von dem Türlin.)

Cliges frag. in Zschr. f. dt. Alt., XXXII (1888); Willehalm (= Rennewart, ed. A. Hübner, 1938).—H. F. Massmann in Tristan und Isolde (1843); H. de Boor, Die höfische Lit. 1170–1250 (1953).

F.P.P.

Ulrich von Winterstetten (fl. 1241–80), Swabian knight (son of Konrad von W., a patron of Rudolf* von Ems): minnesinger—even after 1258, when canon of Augsburg. More notable than his Minnelieder are his Tanzlieder: flirtatious exchanges between girl and gallant, with lively rhythm and refrain, reminiscent of Neidhart* and Tannhäuser*, but without their venom or their virtuosity.

Ed. J. Minor, Die Leiche und Lieder U. Schenks von Winterstetten (1882); Dt. Liederdichter (ed. K. Bartsch and W. Golther, 1929).

G. Müller in Zschr. f. dt. Alt., LX (1923) and Dt. Vierteljahrsschr., I (1923); A. Selge, Studien über U. von W. (1929).

F.P.P.

Ulrich von Zatzikhoven (*Zätzikon, Switzerland; fl. c. 1200), Swiss poet (?capellanus of Thurgau). Translated and so preserved a version of the adventures of Lancelot ('in the possession of Hugh of Morville'—one of Richard* Lionheart's hostages); it and Chrétien* de Troyes' Chevalier de la Charete have a common source. Within German literature Ulrich's Lanzelet is an anachronism which was largely ignored; the prose 'Lancelots' of later centuries are based on the French prose of c. 1225.

Ed. K. A. Hayn (1845; repr. with intro. and biblio. F. Norman, 1965); R. Kluge, Lancelot, I, II (prose version; 1948, 1963); Eng. tr. K. G. T. Webster (1951).

Rosemary Combridge, 'The problems of a new edition...' in F. Ganz and W. Schröder, Probleme mittelalterlicher Überlieferung (1968). F.P.P.

'Umar ibn Abī Rabi'a (fl. 7th–8th century), Arabic poet. A member of the merchant aristocracy of Mecca, of the tribe of Quraish, he lived the life of a rich gentleman in Mecca and Medina. In contrast to contemporary poets like al-Farazdaq* and Jarir*, filled with the tribal spirit of ancient Arabia, 'Umar is the pioneer of a new poetry. His subject is love; he describes his experiences in gracious verses and in an easily flowing language.

P. Schwarz, 'Umar ibn Abī Rabi'a (1st 5 poems of his Diwan ed. with Ger. tr. and biog.; 1893) and 'Umars Leben, Dichtung, Sprache und Metrik (1909; last fasc. of Der Diwan des 'Umar ibn Abī Rabi'a, 1901–09). S.M.S.

Umayya ibn Abī'l-Ṣalt (fl. c. 600), pre-Islamic Arabic poet, was one of those Arabs who under the influence of Judaism and Christianity adopted a monotheistic faith. Most of the poems attributed to him, treating Biblical subjects, are, however, undoubtedly later Muslim forgeries.

H. H. Bräun, 'Umayya b. Abī'l-Ṣalt' in Encyclopaedia of Islam, IV (1st ed. 1934). S.M.S.

Umezaki HARUO (*Fukuoka 15 II 1915; †19 VII 1965), Japanese novelist. A graduate of Tokyo Imperial University in Japanese literature, he served during the Second World War in a naval signals unit in Kyushu. He was mentally unstable for much of his life and died of cirrhosis of the liver. His last novel, published in 1965, concerns a man who escapes from a Tokyo mental hospital to revisit the scenes of his wartime duty in Kyushu. He was much concerned with the bleakness of life in modern society and the unhappiness of ordinary people. His sympathy for them and his hatred of harsh military discipline emerge very clearly from his story Sakurajima (based on his own experience), about life during the closing weeks of the war in a naval signals unit at Sakurajima, a volcanic island off Kagoshima.

Sakurajima (1946; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, II, 1959; tr. D. E. Mills in The Shadow of Sunrise, ed. S. Saeki, 1966; Rinshō (1948; 'A Round in Three Parts', tr. C. Royston in Japan Quart., IV.4, 1968); S. no senaka (1952; 'The Birthmark on S.'s Back', tr. idem, ibid., XVI.1, 1969). D.E.M.

Unamuno y Jugo, MIGUEL DE (*Bilbao 29 IX 1864; ∞ Concha Lizárraga; †Salamanca 31 XII 1936), Spanish thinker. He was for over 40 years Spain's most powerful personality but always shook off followers and walked alone. He was exiled (1924–30) by the dictator Primo de Rivera, became member of the Republican constituent Cortes, and took Franco's side at the outbreak of the Civil War, only to raise his voice against it. Professor of Greek (and intermittently Rector) at Salamanca and a voracious reader in several languages, he was mainly concerned with the wide synthesis of culture as it centres upon the individual man with whom he identified himself.

The main body of his thought deals with the problem of death. In man's conscious or sub-conscious longing for eternal life, for the preservation of his personality, Unamuno sees the origin of all religions and the spur of all individual endeavour. The impossibility of reconciling this vital human longing with scientific knowledge gives rise to man's 'agony', his feeling of tragedy in life, because life and reason are antithetical, one affirming what the other denies (see his famous Del sentimiento trágico de la vida and La agonía del Cristianismo). This theme inspires and conditions all Unamuno's production. Thus his excellent novels (Niebla; Tres novelas ejemplares; San Manuel Bueno, mártir), stripped of all superfluous details, become huge philosophical and psychological skeletons, concerned exclusively with human doubts, passions and anxieties. Much of modern EXISTENTIALISM is foreshadowed in them. Springing as they do from inner feelings, Unamuno's thoughts find superb condensation in his noble, manly poems. Among these 'El Cristo de Velázquez' (1920) is considered his masterpiece. It has often been compared with Blake*. As a dramatist he is less successful; his plays utilize the same themes, but the language is rhetorical and the presentation reminiscent of 19th-century dramatists (Soledad, wr. 1921; El otro, wr. 1926; El hermano Juan, wr. 1934). His passionate concern for Spain appears in various analyses of Spain's cultural heritage and eventual decay; and also in powerful descriptions of landscape.

Obras completas (ed. M. García Blanco, 15 vols, 1958, 10 vols, 1968–70); Teatro completo (ed. idem, 1959).—Paz en la guerra (novel; 1897); Vida de Don Quijote y Sancho (1905; Life of Don Quixote and Sancho, tr. H. P. Earle, 1927; Our Lord Don Quixote, tr. A. Kerrigan, 1968); Mi religión y otros ensayos (1910); Por tierras de Portugal y España (1911); Rosario de sonetos líricos (1911); Del sentimiento trágico de la vida (1912; The Tragic Sense of Life in Men and Peoples, tr. J. E. C. Flitch, 1921); Contra esto y aquello (1912); Niebla (1914; Mist, A Tragi-Comic Novel, tr. W. Fite, 1929); Ensayos (7 vols, 1916–18; Essays and Soliloquies, tr. with intro. J. E. C. Flitch, 1925); Abel Sánchez (1917); El Cristo de Velázquez (1920); The Christ of Velázquez, tr. E. L. Turnbull, 1951); Tres novelas ejemplares (1921; Three Exemplary Novels, tr. A. Flores, 1930); Teresa (1923); La agonía del Cristianismo (1924; The Agony of Christianity, tr. P. Loving, 1928); De Fuerteventura a París (Paris, 1926); Cómo se hace una novela (1927); Romances del destierro (1928); San Manuel Bueno, mártir, y tres historias más (1933; with Eng. tr., 1957); La ciudad de Henoc (1941); Antología poética (1942; intro. L. Vivanco).

J. Marías, M. de U. (1943); A. Barea, U. (Cambridge, 1952); C. Clavería, Temas de U. (1953); S. Serrano Poncela, El pensamiento de U. (1953); M. García Blanco, Don M. de U. y sus poesías (1954); C. Blanco Aguinaga, U., tétrico del lenguaje (1954), and El U. contemplativo (1959); J. Ferrater Mora, U., bosquejo de una filosofía (1957) and U. A Philosophy of Tragedy (1962); P. G. Earle, U. and English Literature (1960); M. T. Rudd, The Lone Heretic (1963); J. M. Zavala, U. y su teatro de conciencia (1963); A. Moncy, La creación de los personajes en las novelas de U. (1963); M. J. Valdés, Death in the Literature of U. (1964); M. Laine, La palabra en U. (1964); Spanish Thought and Letters in the 20th Century (ed. G. Bleiberg and E. I. Fox, 1966); P. Ilie, U., An Existential View of Self and Society (1967); J. Rubia Barcia and M. A. Zeitlin, U. Creator and Creation (1967). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Uncle Remus: see Harris, JOEL CHANDLER.

Under, MARIE (*Tallinn 27 III 1883; ∞1902 K. Hacker, ∞1924 A. Adson), Estonian poet. Under the influence of neo-Romanticism she began her literary career with her erotic Sonetid ('Sonnets'; 1917), remarkable for its vitality and formal competence. By 1920 her egocentricity was giving way to an interest in social and moral problems (cf. Verivalla, 'Bleeding Wound', 1920) and she had fallen under the passing influence of Expressionism. With Hüäl varjust (1927; Stimme aus dem Schatten, tr. H. Stock, 1949), which reflects the effects of a serious illness, and subsequent collections she reached full maturity: her verse was now formally perfect, intellectually and emotionally balanced and among the best of its kind. Besides lyrics she has written ballads of notable narrative power. She has translated from Baudelaire*, Rimbaud*, Mactierlinck*, Ibsen*, Rilke* and the German Expressionists.

VERSE: Eelõitseng (1918); Sinine puri (1918); Pärisosa (1923); Rõõm ühest ilusast päevast (1928); Õnnevarjutus (1929); Lageda taeva all (1930); Kivi südamele (1935); Ja liha sai sõnaks (1936); Mureliku suuga (1942); Sõnasild (1945); Südamik (1957); Kogutud luuletused (coll. poems; 1958). —Verse tr. W. K. Matthews in Anthology of Modern Estonian Poetry (1953) and Child of Man (1955).

I. Vask, 'The main tradition of Estonian poetry' in Estonian Poetry and Language (1965); A. Mägi, Estonian Literature (1968); Eesti kirjanduse ajalugu, III (ed. E. Sögel, 1969); E. Nirk, 'M. U.' in Estonian Literature (1970). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Underdowne, THOMAS (fl. 1566–87), English translator. Underdowne's translation of Heliodorus* Æthiopica (from the Latin version of S. Warszewicki), in vigorous rhythmical prose, is thought to have influenced Sidney's* Arcadia.

An Æthiopian Historie (?1569; ed. W. E. Henley, 1895); Ovid his Inveective against Ibis (1569).

J.B.B.

Undset, SIGRID (*Kalundborg, Denmark 20 V 1882; ∞1912 Anders Svarstad [o/o1925]; †Oslo 10 VI 1949), Norwegian novelist. Her father was a well-known Norwegian archaeologist who aroused an interest in the past in her while she was still a child. His death when she was 11 caused her education to be curtailed, and for ten years she worked in an office in Christiania. Her first novel Fru Martha Oulie (1907) pinpointed a theme which was to recur in her work: the tribulations of the sexually delinquent woman. She went to Rome in 1909 on a travelling scholarship, and became a full-time writer. She achieved her first real success with Jenny (1911; Eng. tr. W. Emme, 1921), a sympathetic and at times moving testament of artistic youth, for which she drew on her own experiences of Christiania and Rome. Other novels and short-stories exploring the love and conjugal problems of idealistically inclined women followed. In the early 1920s she achieved world fame with the historical trilogy Kristin Lavransdatter, set in 14th-century Norway; it was followed by the less important Olav Audunssøn series. Basically, the problems in these works, though treated in greater depth and enunciated through much more freely-drawn characters, are of the same personal and domestic kinds as in her novels with modern settings, but interwoven in masterly fashion with the historical material, of which she had an encyclopaedic knowledge. Subsequently she wrote a number of novels with a modern setting, strongly marked in the problems they pose by her conversion to Roman Catholicism in 1924. Sigrid Undset's work always has great moral earnestness and, right from the start, the religious solution does not seem to be very far away. At times it has a cloying domesticity, and wordiness makes for density of texture, but her work has an impressive cumulative effect. She was awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1928.

Ungdom (verse; 1910).—I Grålysningen (play; 1908; pub. 1968).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Den lykkelige alder (1908); Viga-Ljot og Vigdis (1910); Gunnar's Daughter, tr. A. G. Chater, 1936; Fattige skjebner (1912); Vaaren (1914); Fortællinger om kong Arthur og ridderne av det runde bord (1915); Splinten av troldspeilet (1917); Images in the Mirror, tr. A. G. Chater, 1938; De kloge jomfruer (1918); Kristin Lavransdatter (3 vols, 1920–22; Eng. tr. C. Archer and J. S. Scott, 1 vol., 1930, 3 vols, 1969); Vaarskyer (1921); Olav Audunssøn (4 vols, 1925–27; The Master of Hestviken, tr. A. G. Chater, 1934); Etapper (1929; Stages on the Road, tr. idem, 1934); Gymnadenia (1929; The Wild Orchid, tr. idem, 1931); Den brændende busk (2 vols, 1930; The Burning Bush, tr. idem, 1932); Ida Elisabeth (1932; Eng. tr. idem, 1933); Etapper. Ny række (1933); Elleve aar (1934; The Longest Years, tr. idem, 1935); Den trofaste hustru (1936; The Faithful Wife, tr. idem, 1937); Norske helgener (1937; Saga of Saints, tr. [from MS] E. C. Ramsden, 1934); Selvportretter og landskapsbilleder (1938; Men, Women and Places, tr. A. G. Chater, 1939); Madame Dorthea (1939; Eng. tr. idem, 1941); Happy Times in Norway (tr. Joran Birkeland, 1943; Lykkelige dager, 1947); Return to the Future (tr. H. C. K. Næseth, 1942); Tilbake til fremtiden, 1945); Sigurd and His Brave Companions (in Eng., 1943; Sigurd og hans tapre venner, 1966); Catherina av Siena (1951); Artikler og taler fra krigstiden (ed. A. H. Winsnes, 1952).—Middelalder-Romaner (10 vols, 1949); Romaner og fortellinger fra nutiden (10 vols, 1949).

N. R. Anker, Min venn S. U. (1946); A. H. Winsnes, S. U., En studie i kristen realisme (1949; Eng. tr. P. G. Foote, 1953); E. Steen, Kristin Lavransdatter (1959); N. Deschamps, S. U. ou la morale de la passion (Montreal, 1966); A. Gustavson in Six Scandinavian Novelists (1968). R.G.P.

Ungaretti, GIUSEPPE (*Alexandria 10 II 1888; †Milan 3 VI 1970), Italian poet. His Egyptian background provides the images, and his quest for roots the themes, of much of his poetry, the form of which is at first influenced by his education in Paris, where he came under the influence of Apollinaire*. He did not visit Italy until 1914. After the war he worked as a journalist, and from 1936 to 1942 he taught Italian literature in Brazil, returning in the latter year to hold until 1962 a Chair of Italian literature in Rome.

He first became known for his war poems, published in Il porto sepolto (limited ed., 1916; 1919). L'Allegria (1931) contains most of his early poems, which in spite of their brevity, metrical experiments and the absence of punctuation, are very accessible. Sentimento del tempo (1933), more abstract in language, is Ungaretti's first volume of 'hermetic' poetry. Il dolore (1947), inspired by the death of his son and by the war, is possibly his most directly moving work. La terra promessa (1950), based on the theme of life as a quest, taking up ideas present in his earliest work, remains unfinished.

All Ungaretti's poetry is autobiographical in inspiration, and he gave to his work the collective title of Vita d'un uomo (Life of a Man, tr. A. Mandelbaum, 1956). He has also translated from Góngora*, Blake*, Racine* and Shakespeare*.

Poesie disperse (1945); Un grido e paesaggi (1952); Il taccuino del vecchio (1960).—Vita d'un uomo. Tutte le poesie (1969).

L. Rebay, Le origini della poesia di G. U. (1962); F. Portinari, G. U. (1967); L. Piccioni, Vita di un poeta: G. U. (1970). B.M.

Unico Aretino: see Accolti, BERNARDO.

Unruh, FRITZ VON (*Koblenz 10 V 1885; †28 XI 1970), German playwright and novelist. Originally a professional soldier, he began with plays about a soldier's problems; the actual experience of war made him an ardent pacifist propounding his belief in symbolic Expressionist dramas and prose. R.W.L. (K.P.)

PLAYS: Offiziere (1911); Louis Ferdinand, Prinz von Preussen (1913); Ein Geschlecht (1917); Platz (1920); Bonaparte (1927; Eng. tr. 1928).—Dramen (1960).

A. Kronacher, F. von U. (1946); W. Küchler, F. von U. (1949); F. von U. Rebell und Verkünder (ed. F. Rasche, 1960); W. F. Mainland, 'F. von U.' in German Men of Letters, III (ed. A. Natan, 1964). K.P.

*Unşuri, HASAN ABU'L-QĀSIM (*Balkh; †?1049), Persian poet, was poet laureate to Sultan Maḥmūd of Ghazna (998–1030), who enriched him; he afterwards praised Maḥmūd's son Mas'ūd (1030–40). Three romances ascribed to 'Unşuri are lost. His Divān contains mainly panegyrics. He writes in a dignified and forceful style, more reasoned and less exaggerated than those of later panegyrists.

Divān (Tehran, 1881).

C. Rieu, Catalogue of the Persian MSS in the British Museum, supp. (1895); J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Updike, JOHN (*Shillington, Pa. 18 III 1932; ∞1953 Mary Pennington), American short-story writer and novelist. One of the virtuosi of modern American writing, Updike proved in his second novel Rabbit, Run (1960) that his stylistic preoccupations could nevertheless show a man admirable in his refusal to accept compromise. His best-selling Couples (1968), a novel of an adulterous tightly-knit community, presents a preoccupation with oral sex through a Paterian richness of imagery and cadence.

NOVELS: The Poorhouse Fair (1959); The Centaur (1963); Of the Farm (1965); Rabbit Redux (1972).—SHORT STORIES: The Same Door (1959); Pigeon Feathers (1962); The Music School (1966). D.E.Mo.

Upiġs, ANDREJS (*Skriveri 5 XII 1877; †Riga XII 1970), Latvian novelist, playwright and literary critic. A peasant's son, self-taught, he became a qualified teacher in 1896 and taught in elementary schools in and around Riga from 1897 to 1908, after which he devoted himself to writing. In his early works he described the peasant's struggle to own his own plot. After his early period of 'peasant idealism' (Upīts' own term; 1901-05) he embarked on his trilogy Robežnieki, one of the best-known works in Latvian literature, in which the break-up of the old patriarchal order in village life at the beginning of the 20th century and subsequent social upheavals are reflected in the chronicle of the Robežniek brothers, Martin, the working-class hero, and Jan, the shallow petit-bourgeois hypocrite. Upīts' copious output also includes histories of Latvia (1911) and world literature (1930-34), and a number of historical novels, including Zaļā zeme ('The Green Land'; 1945), an account of 19th-century Latvian village life for which he was awarded a Soviet State prize, and Plaisa mākonos ('Break in the Clouds'; 1951), which dealt with the labour movement in 19th-century Latvia.

NOVELS: Robežniek trilogy: Jauni avoti (1909); Zīda tīklā (1912); Ziemeļa vējš (1921); sequels: Jāņa Robežnieka pārnākšana (1932); J. R.ka nāve (1933).—Outside Paradise and Other Stories (tr. T. Zalīte, ed. R. Daglish, Moscow, 1960).

M. J. Kalve, A. U. (Moscow, 1957). H.Le.

Urabe KENKO: see Yoshida KENKO.

Urban, MILO (*Rabčice 24 VIII 1904), Slovak novelist, and perhaps the most successful in the period 1918-39. His trilogy portrayed with keen realism and deep sympathy the life of a Slovak village, first under Hungarian rule and then in the Czechoslovak Republic. The picture of the deadening tyranny of Magyar domination in Slovakia during the First World War (Živý bič) is more successful than the attempt (in Hmly na úsvite, 1930, and V osidlách, 1940) to depict the difficulties and vicissitudes of the young Czechoslovak Republic. In the Second World War Urban was active as a journalist in the service of the Slovak Fascist state. After many years of silence, he resumed his chronicle of Slovak life, now viewing the events of the war period from the Communist point of view (Zhasnuté svetlá, 1957; Kto seje vietor, 1966).

Živý bič (1927; Ger. tr., Die lebende Peitsche, 1931). R.A.

Urbicius: see Maurice.

Ureche, GRIGORE (*Moldavia c. 1590; †1647), Moldavian chronicler. He studied at Lwów, where he read Polish and Latin annals on which he partly based his Letopiseșul Țării Moldovei ('Chronicle of Moldavia'), the earliest surviving Rumanian chronicle. This work covers the period 1359-1594 and is the first non-religious work in Rumanian. Although it betrays in many places the influence of Latin syntax it is nevertheless notable for its fluidity of style.

Letopiseșul Țării Moldovei (ed. P. Panaitescu, 1958; ed. L. Onu, 1967).—G. Ivașcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1969). D.J.D.

Urfé, HONORÉ D' (*Marsilles 11 II 1567; †1600 Diane de Châteaumorand; †Villefranche-sur-Mer 1 VI 1625), French novelist. Through his mother d'Urfé was of noble blood and spent much of his life in the service of his relative, the Duke of Savoy. He wrote pastoral and religious verse, but his great work was the Astrée, a pastoral romance inspired by such Spanish and Italian models as Amadis de Gaula, Montemayor's Diana and Guarini's Pastor Fido. It traces through many vicissitudes and digressions the love-story (set in 'Gaul in the time of the Druids') of the shepherd Céladon and the shepherdess Astrée. After d'Urfé's death, the Astrée was completed (Part V) by his secretary Baro. It was immensely popular throughout the 17th century and provided society with an art of courtship and a stylistic model for galant conversation. It idealized woman and etherealized love, and provided a storehouse of sentiments and of themes on which later novelists and dramatists constantly drew.

L'Astrée, où par plusieurs histoires et sous personnes de bergers et d'autres sont déduits les divers effets de l'honnête amitié (Pt I, 1607; II, 1610; III, 1619; IV and V, 1627; ed. H. Vaganay, 1925-28).

O. C. Reure, H. d'U. (1910); M. Magendie, L'Astrée (1929) and Le roman français au XVIIe siècle (1932). G.B.

Urfi, MUHAMMAD, JAMĀL-AL-DĪN (*Shiraz; †Lahore VIII 1591), Persian poet who emigrated to India. His poetry, written under Akbar Shāh (1556-1605), while revealing a perceptive and original mind, is somewhat heavy.

Divān (Cawnpore, 1880; Selections From Urfi's Qasidas, tr. Abdus-Salam, Calcutta, 1879); Kulliyāt (Cawnpore, 1880).

E. J. W. Gibb, History of Ottoman Poetry, I (1900); Shibli Nu'mani, Shi'r al-'Ajām, III (1924); M. A. Ghani, History of Persian Language and Literature at the Mughal Court, III (Allahabad, 1930). E.Y.

Urmuz (or Hurmuz), pseud. of D. DEMETRESCU-BUZĂU (according to some authorities DIMITRIE IONESCU-BUZĂU) (*Curtea de Argeș 1883; †[suicide] Bucharest 1923), a forerunner of the Dadaists. He is one of a line of Rumanian writers—of whom Tristan Tzara* and Eugène Ionesco* are the best known—who have used the absurd as a major literary device.

Separately pub. prose pieces, Pînă și Stamate, Ismail și Turnavitu, Gayk, etc., coll. in Algazy & Grummer (1930).

Sașa Pană, Sadismul adevărului (1936); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române (1941); G.

Ciprian, Cutia cu maimuțe (1942); O. S. Crohmălcianu in Contemporanul (13 Jan. 1967).

F.J.B.

Urquhart, SIR THOMAS (*Cromarty 1611; †abroad c. 1660), Scottish author, translator and a militant Royalist, educated at Aberdeen. Urquhart was variously learned and original in mind. He translated the first three books of Rabelais* in a highly distinctive style; racy, eccentric in diction, mannered and embellished, conveying the spirit and quality of Rabelais despite extravagant paraphrase and addition, it is the last elaborate example of the early Scots prose tradition.

Epigrams Divine and Moral (1641); Trissoteras: or a most Exquisite Table for resolving Triangles (1645); Παντοχρονόγραφον: or, A Peculiar Promptuary of Time . . . deducing the true Pedigree of the Urquharts . . . since the Creation (1652); The Discovery of a most exquisite Jewel (1652; incl. Life of the Admirable Crichton, ed. H. Miles, 1927); The Works of Mr Francis Rabelais, now faithfully translated (I–II, 1653, III, 1693; ed. C. Whibley, 3 vols, 1900); Logopandecticon: Or an Introduction to the Universal Language (1653).—Works (Maitland Club, 1834); Selections (ed. J. Purves, 1942).

J. Willcock, Sir T. U. of Cromartie (1899); H. Brown, Rabelais in English Literature (1933); [anon.] A Challenge From Sir T. U. of Cromartie (1948); F. C. Roe, Sir T. U. and Rabelais (1957).

J.K.

Urrea, JERÓNIMO JIMÉNEZ DE (*Epila nr Saragossa; †?1565), Spanish poet, translator and prose writer; soldier and councillor to Philip II. He wrote a padded paraphrase of Acuña's* translation of Le Chevalier délibéré and a bad translation of Ariosto*. His dialogue about military honour and his novel of chivalry have some merit.

Orlando furioso . . . traducido en romance castellano (Lyons, 1550, etc.); Discurso de la vida humana y aventuras del Caballero determinado (Antwerp and Medina del Campo, 1555); Diálogo de la verdadera honra militar (Venice, 1566); Primera parte del libro del invencible caballero don Clarisel de las Flores (Seville, 1879).

J. Borao, Noticia de Don Gerónimo de U. y de su novela caballeresca (1886); C. Clavería, Le Chevalier délibéré de Olivier de la Marche y sus versiones españolas (1950).

E.M.W.

Urrea, PEDRO MANUEL JIMÉNEZ DE: see Jiménez de Urrea, PEDRO MANUEL.

Urzidil, JOHANNES (*Prague 3 II 1896; †Rome 3 XI 1970), German-American writer. He emigrated to the United States in 1941. He was a close friend of Kafka*.

NARRATIVES: Der Trauermantel (1945); Die verlorene Geliebte (1956); Das Prager Triptychon

(1960).—VARIOUS: Das Glück der Gegenwart, Goethes Amerikabild (1958); Goethe in Böhmen (2nd enlarged ed. 1965); Da geht Kafka (essays; 1965).

A. von Gronicka, 'J. U.' in Wort in der Zeit, II (1956); W. Formann, 'J. U.' in Sudetendeutsche Dichtung heute (1960); H. Ahl, 'J. U.' in Literarische Portraits (1962); G. Trapp, Die Prosa J. U.s (1967).

E.R.

Usigli, RODOLFO (*1905), Mexican dramatist who created a Shavian style of drama at a period when theatre was virtually non-existent in Mexico. Some early plays satirize Mexican political life, especially Tres comedias impolíticas (1933–35) and El gesticulador (1937). He also wrote many plays exposing the hypocrisy of middle-class society, the most successful of which was Jano es una muchacha (1952). Many critics regard two historical dramas, Corona de sombras (1943; Crown of Shadows, tr. W. F. Stirling, 1946) and Corona de luz (1965), as his most important works. Usigli has also written on the theatre in Mexico en el teatro (1932) and Itinerario del autor dramático (1947).

Teatro completo (Mexico, 1963).

J.F.

Usk, THOMAS (†4 III 1388), English author of The Testament of Love, once ascribed to Chaucer*, an allegorical prose work concerning courtly and divine love.

Chaucerian and Other Pieces (ed. W. W. Skeat, 1897).

C. S. Lewis, The Allegory of Love (1936); S. K. Heninger, 'The Margarite-Pearl allegory in T. U.'s Testament of Love' in Speculum, XXXII (1957).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Uslar Pietri, ARTURO (*1905), Venezuelan author of two important historical novels, Las lanzas coloradas (1931; The Red Lances, tr. H. de Onís, 1963) and El camino de El Dorado (1947). He has also published a collection of short stories, Treinta hombres y sus sombras (1949), and a novel of contemporary Venezuelan life, Un retrato en la geografía (1962).

J.F.

Uspensky, GLEB IVANOVICH (*Tula 13 X 1840; †St Petersburg 1902), one of the principal 'populist' authors in Russian literature. A commoner by birth, he was familiar not only with peasants but also with the suburban lower classes whom he described in his Nravy rasteryayevoy ulitsy (1866). His main interest, however, was in village life, which is excellently depicted in his best novel Vlast' zemli ('The Power of the Soil'; 1882). Unlike many other 'populists', he refused to idealize the peasant or ignore the disintegration of the village under the impact of capitalism. Endowed with unusual moral sensitiveness, he scrutinized the problems of his country from an ethical angle, but he found little to comfort him. He committed suicide.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (6th ed., 6 vols, 1908; another ed. pub. by the Academy in 14 vols, 1940-54); Nesobrannye proizvedeniya (1936); Rasskazy i ocherki (1944).

O. F. Miller, G. I. U. (1889); G. I. Novopolin, U. (1903); I. Kubikov, U. (1925); V. E. Cheshikhin, U. (1929); A. S. Glinka, U. (1935) and, with A. Leman, U. (1939); N. A. Glagolev, U. (1953); I. Ryadov, U. (1954). J.L.

Usque, SAMUEL, 16th-century Portuguese writer. Of his life practically nothing is known. The son of Spanish Jews, he seems to have been born in Portugal towards the end of the 15th century, apparently emigrating later to Italy. His Consolação às Tribulações de Israel was published (1553) at the Jewish press in Ferrara by another distinguished member of the family, ABRAHAM USQUE. The work is a powerful protest against the persecutions suffered by the Jews from the earliest times down to the 16th century, and takes the form of three pastoral dialogues: Ycabo (Jacob) recounts in moving lamentations the sufferings of the Jewish race, being comforted by Numeo (Nahum) and Zicareo (Zachariah) who foretell the end of his tribulations and Israel's approaching triumph over her enemies.

Consolação às Tribulações de Israel (ed. J. Mendes dos Remédios, 3 vols, 1906-08).

C. Roth, 'The Marrano press at Ferrara' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXXVIII (1943). T.P.W.

Ussel: see Eble, Gui, Peire and Elias d'Ussel.

Usteri, JOHANN MARTIN (*Zürich 12 IV 1763; †Rapperswil 29 VII 1827), Swiss poet. At first in commerce, Usteri occupied various public offices in Zürich from 1803 until his death. Of his poems (written in High German and in dialect) Freut euch des Lebens is widely known.

Dichtungen in Versen und Prosa (ed. D. Hess, 3 vols, 1831).—A. Nægeli, J. M. U. (1907).

H.B.G.

Usuman dan Fodio, THE SHEHU (*Maratta 15 XII 1754; †Sokoto, Nigeria 20 IV 1817), a Fulani scholar and Muslim revivalist who led a successful holy war in Hausaland. He composed prose works in Arabic and verse in Arabic and Fulfulde. His original compositions in Hausa are limited but several Fulfulde poems were later rendered into Hausa (Isa* dan Usuman) and are now widely attributed to him: Tabban hakikan ('For Certain'), Wakokin Hausa (Zaria, 1957), a religious homily, and Ma'ama'are (ibid., n.d.), a panegyric to the Prophet Muhammad.

Extrs tr. in Mervyn Hiskett, Hausa Islamic Verse: Its Sources and Development Prior to 1920 (thesis, London, 1969). M.H.

U Tam'si, GÉRALD FÉLIX TCHICAYA (*Mpili, Moyen Congo 1931), Francophone African poet. Tchicaya U Tam'si spent his childhood in the Middle Congo, and went to France in 1946, where he completed his education and where he has since remained.

U Tam'si's is the most outstanding poetic talent to have emerged in Francophone Africa since Senghor*. The surrealism characteristic of his style and of his imagery makes much of his poetry obscure, often impenetrable. Recurring imagery and a delight in punning provide the unity of each volume. There is an intensely personal and emotional quality about U Tam'si's poetry which gives it its distinctive quality.

Le mauvais sang (1955); Feu de brousse (1957); Brush Fire, tr. Sangodare Akanji, Ibadan, 1964); À triche-cœur (1960); Épitomé (1962); Le ventre (1964); Arc musical (1969).—Selected Poems (tr. G. Moore, 1970).

African Literature in the Universities (ed. G. Moore, Ibadan, 1965). C.W.

Utsubo Monogatari, a long but somewhat disjointed Japanese novel, written by an unknown author probably some time between 850 and 1000. Some sections are fantastic in the vein of *Taketori* monogatari*, others are more realistic, but still far inferior to Genji monogatari (Murasaki* Shikibu).

Section tr. W. G. Aston in A History of Japanese Literature (1907); some other sections tr. E. A. Cranston, 'Atemiya' in Monumenta Nipponica, XXII (1969). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Uylenbroeck, PIETER JOHANNES (*Amsterdam 7 XII 1748; †ibid. 16 XII 1808), Dutch publisher, bookseller and poet. His shop was a centre for writers, some of whose poems he published in Kleine dichterlijke handschriften (20 vols, 1788-1809). He wrote the plays Wilhelmina van Blondheim (1777) and Teunis en Teuntje (1783).

P. G. Witsen Geysbeek in Biographisch, Anthologisch en Critisch Woordenboek, V (1824); H. H. Klijn, Nagelaten en verspreide gedichten en redevoeringen (1856). J.W.W.

Uytenbogaert, JOHANNES (*Utrecht 1557; †The Hague 1644), Dutch theologian, leader of the Remonstrants after Arminius' death, Court Preacher to Prince Maurice, had to flee to France, founded the Remonstrant brotherhood, returned to the Netherlands in 1626. He was an eloquent preacher. A.M.B.W.

Remonstrantie (1610); Nader Vertoog (1617); Leerredenen.

H. C. Rogge, J. U. en zijn tijd (3 vols, 1874-76); A. H. Haentjens, Fragment uit de geschiedenis van de Remonstrantse Broederschap (1959).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

V

Văcărescu, IANCU (*1791; †1863), Rumanian poet, and son, grandson and nephew of poets (Alec, Ienăchiță and Nicolae Văcărescu). He was a leading figure in the political and literary movements of his age. His poetry marks an advance in flexibility of expression and range of verse forms.

Poezii alese (1830); Colecție din poeziile d-lui marelui logofăt I. V. (1848).—Poezii Văcărești: Versuri alese (ed. E. Piru, 1961).

A. Piru, Poezii Văcărești (1967). E.A.C.

Văcărescu, IENĂCHIȚĂ (*1740; †1797), Wallachian historian, philologist and poet, author of one of the first printed Rumanian grammars (1787). A boyar and diplomat, he wrote a history of the Ottoman Empire and a collection of love poems in the Anacreontic style of the period.

Poezii Văcărești: Versuri alese (ed. E. Piru, 1961).

P. Papadopol, Poezii Văcărești: Viața și opera lor poetică (1940); G. Ivașcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1969). D.J.D.

Vadianus, Latinized name of JOACHIM VON WATT (*St Gall 30 XII 1484; †ibid. 6 IV 1551), Swiss humanist, Reformer and historian. Founded the Evangelical Church in St Gall, edited classical texts, wrote important historical works, especially the Chronik der Äbte von St Gallen (1529).

J. von W. Deutsche Hist. Schriften (ed. E. Götzinger, 3 vols, 1875–79); Briefsammlung (ed. E. Arbenz and H. Wartmann, 7 vols, 1892–1913).

W. Näf, J. von W. (1944 ff.); D. F. Rittmeyer, V.-Bildnisse (1948); C. Bonoraud, Aus V.s Freundes- und Schülerkreis in Wien (Vadian Studien, VIII; 1965). D.G.D.

Vaernewijck, MARCUS VAN (*Ghent 21 XII 1516; †ibid. 20 II 1569), Dutch poet and writer, entirely self-educated. He became a factor of the Chamber of Rhetoric, Marien Teeren, and also sat on the town council. He wrote a Cronycke van Vlaenderen int corte (1557) and Vlaemsche Audvremdigheydt (1560), in ballad form, from the scholarly viewpoint as unimportant as his Spiegel der Nederlandscher Audtheyt (1568; called Historie van Belgis in later eds). More important is his Historie van . . . Carolus de Vijfste (1561), but his best work is Van die Beroerlijke Tijden in die Nederlanden en voornamelijk in Ghendt (1566–68) which—together with many of his other writings—was first published three centuries later.

Beroerlijke Tijden (ed. F. Van der Haeghen, 5 vols, 1872–81); M. van V. (anthol. in Fr. tr. S. Bergmans, 1946).

P. Blommaert, De Nederduitsche schryvers van Gent (1861); Bibliotheca Belgica, 1st ser., V

59–72 (1880–90); V. Fris, Bibliographie de Gand, no. 352 (2 vols, 1921); W. Waterschoot in Jaarboek De Fontaine (1966). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Vahshī Bāfqī (*Bafq; †1845), Persian poet, extolled the Safavid Tahmasb I (1524–76), but is best known for his tender lyrical poems and his elegies on Shi'ite martyrs.

Shirin u Farhād (Tehran, 1847); Khuld-i Barin (Calcutta, 1861); Divān (Tehran, 1956).

C. Rieu, Catalogue of Persian MSS in the British Museum, II (1881). E.Y.

Vailland, ROGER (*Acy-le-Multien 16 X 1907; †Meillonas 12 V 1965), French novelist. Vailland dallied with SURREALISM (co-founder of Le Grand Jeu, 1928), was in turn journalist, traveller, Resistance fighter (Drôle de jeu, 1945; Playing With Fire, tr. G. Hopkins, 1948), member of the Communist party (1952–56), and finally devoted himself entirely to literature, and occasionally to the cinema, in a desire for unrestrained creativity tempered by light-hearted mockery. His work, once marked by the doctrine of Social Realism (325,000 francs, 1955), finally revealed a resolutely agnostic, libertarian spirit; loving life, keeping a clear cool outlook, sensitive to beauty and intelligence. His dynamic style recalls his acknowledged masters, Choderlos* de Laclos and Stendhal*.

Œuvres complètes (14 vols, 1967–68).—NOVELS: Les mauvais coups (1948; The Turn of the Wheel, tr. P. Wiles, 1962); Bon pied, bon œil (1950); Un jeune homme seul (1951); La loi (1957; Eng. tr. idem, 1958); La fête (1960); The Sovereigns, tr. idem, 1960); La truite (1964; The Young Trout, tr. idem, 1965).—PLAYS: Héloïse et Abélard (1950); Le Colonel Forster plaidera coupable (1952); Monsieur Jean (1958).—ESSAYS: Esquisses pour le portrait du vrai libertin (1946); Laclos (1953); Éloge du Cardinal de Bernis (1956); Le regard froid (1963).—Journal (1968); Lettres à sa famille (1972). M.G.

Vaillant: see Chastellain, PIERRE.

Vaižgantas, pseud. of JUOZAS TUMAS (*Svedasai parish 8 IX 1869; †Kaunas 29 IV 1933), Lithuanian novelist, short-story writer, critic and publicist. He went to school in Daugavpils (Latvia) and Kaunas, and was ordained in 1893; he travelled widely in Europe and the U.S.A., and when independent Lithuania was established in 1918, returned home and devoted himself to the cause of national culture. His first efforts as a writer go back to the Aušra period, but he did not produce his best-known work (Pragiedruliai, 3 vols) till 1918–26. He wrote in Polish and Russian as well as in Lithuanian and was markedly influenced by the Polish and Russian classics. His writings are more important from a cultural than from a literary standpoint.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Rimai ir nerimai (1914); Dėdės ir dėdienės (1920–21).—TRAVEL BOOK: Aplink Baltiją (1919).—Raštai (works; 10 vols, 1922 ff.).
A. Jakštas, Užgesę žiburiai (1930); J. Ambrazevičius, V. (1936). W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Vajanský, SVETOZÁR HURBAN (*Hlboké 16 I 1847; †Turčiansky Sv. Martin 17 VIII 1916), Slovak poet and novelist. The son of J. M. Hurban*, he published under the name of Vajanský, first as a pseudonym, later as a pendant to his original surname. Educated in Germany and Hungary, Vajanský entered on a legal career, but after taking part in the Austro-Hungarian occupation of Bosnia in 1878 he turned to journalism and devoted himself from then on to the propagation of the Slovak national cause and to literary work—two activities which for him were closely interwoven.

His lyrical poetry, beginning with the striking collection Tatry a more (1879), expanded the horizons of Slovak verse, especially in the realm of form. In philosophy and political outlook an uncompromising Slavophile, who looked for salvation for his people at the hands of their Russian brothers, Vajanský nevertheless accepted Western, especially German, influences on his versification. His novels portray with effective realism the position of the Slovak gentry with its conflicting loyalties to the Hungarian state and the Slovak people. His most successful prose work was the novel Suchá ratolesť (1884).

Sobrané diela (coll. works; 18 vols, 1905 ff.); Výber z poézie (poems; ed. S. Šmatlák, 1956).
A. Matuška, V. proziak (1946). R.A.

Vajda, JÁNOS (*Pest 8 V 1827; ∞1880 Róza Bartos; †Budapest 17 I 1897), Hungarian poet and essayist. A lonely and melancholy lyricist, Vajda kept apart from the mainstream of Hungarian verse after 1849, and gained scant recognition in his lifetime. In his philosophical poems and even more in his passionate love poems, he anticipated Ady*.

VERSE: Költemények (1856); Újabb költemények (1876).—VARIOUS: Önbirálát (Leipzig, 1862).—Összes művei (crit. ed. 1969– ).

M. Rubinyi, V. J. (1922); A. Komlós, V. J. (1954). G.F.C.

Valančius, MOTIEJUS (*nr Salantai 16 II 1801; †Varniai 17 V 1875), Lithuanian historian and story-writer. He became a Professor at the theological academies in Vilna and St Petersburg, but returned home to Varniai in 1850 and was consecrated Bishop of Samogitia. Interested in the moral and intellectual welfare of his compatriots, he wrote mainly didactic stories in his native dialect. As an author he is the pioneer of realism in Lithuanian literature and has a keen sense of humour.

STORIES: Žyvatų šventųjų (1858); Vaikų knygelė

(1864); Žemaičių patarlės (1867); Paaugusių žmonių knygelė (1868); Palangos Juzė (1869); Antano tretininko pasakojimai (1872).—HISTORY: Žemaičių vyskupystė (1848).—Raštai (works; ed J. Balčikonis, 1931).

A. Alekna, Žemaičių vyskupas M. V. (1922). W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Valdelomar, ABRAHÁN (*Pisco 1888; †1919), Peruvian prose writer who recorded, in a delicate style, and with idealistic approach, the old legends of the Incas.

Con la argelina al viento (1910); La Mariscala (1914); El caballero Carmelo (1918); Belmonte, el trágico (1918); Los hijos del sol (1921).—Obra poética (1958). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Valdés, ALFONSO DE (*Cuenca ?1490; †Vienna 1532), Spanish prose-writer. He held a post in the Spanish chancellery, became Latin secretary to Charles V in 1526, and corresponded with Erasmus*, Peter Martyr [Vermigli*] and Sepúlveda*. He died of the plague. His two dialogues are lively in style and show the strong influence of Erasmus. That on the sack of Rome (1527) led to a controversy with Castiglione*. The other is an imitation of Lucian* which satirizes hypocrisy and advocates evangelical piety.

Diálogo de las cosas ocurridas en Roma (ed. J. F. Montesinos, 1928; tr. The sack of Rome exsequuted by the Emperour Charles army, 1590); Diálogo de Mercurio y Carón (ed. idem, 1929).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, IV; M. Bataillon, Érasme et l'Espagne (1937). E.M.W.

Valdés (VALDESIUS), JUAN DE (*Cuenca ?1490; †Naples 1541), Spanish theologian and philologist; brother of Alfonso. He knew Greek and Hebrew and corresponded with Erasmus*. In 1531 he went to Italy where he resided in Naples, and led a select group of Protestants, who believed in justification by faith but never tried to leave the Roman Church. He translated portions of the Epistles and Psalms and wrote theological treatises, including a commentary on St Matthew. These works, which are well written, partly derive from German mystics (Eckhart* and Tauler*). The Diálogo de la lengua is of more general interest: Valdés stresses the importance of a natural style, of choosing properly between different forms of words and of the merits of various Spanish authors. He owed something to Bembo's* Prose. The work remained unpublished until 1737. It is both a useful historical record of the Spanish of about 1530 and an intelligent, aristocratic treatise on how to make the language a more subtle instrument.

E.M.W.

Diálogo de doctrina cristiana (facs. ed., Coimbra, 1925; ed. Fließner, 1929; ed. Stochall, Buenos Aires, 1946); Alfabeto cristiano (Ital., Venice, 1546; Span. ed. L. de Uoz, London, 1860); Epistola de San Pablo a los Romanos (Venice, 1556; cd. idem, Madrid, 1856); Le cento et dieci divine considerationi (Basle, 1550; Span. ed. idem, Madrid, 1855, 1862; London, 1863); El Evangelio según San Mateo (ed. idem, 1880); Diálogo de la lengua (ed. J. F. Montesinos, best ed., 1928); Cartas inéditas de J. de V. al Cardenal Gonzaga (ed. idem, 1931).—TRANSLATIONS: The hundred and ten considerations (tr. N. Ferrer, 1638; tr. J. Betts in B. B. Wiffen, Life and Writings of J. de V., 1865); XVII Opusculos (tr. J. Betts, 1882).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, IV.4; M. Bataillon, Érasme et l'Espagne (1937); D. de Santa Teresa, J. de V. (Rome, 1957); D. Ricart, J. de V. y el pensamiento religioso europeo en los siglos XVI y XVII (1958). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Valdivielso, JOSÉ DE (*Toledo 1560; †Madrid 1638), Spanish poet and dramatist. He was chaplain to the Archbishop of Toledo. His epic on St Joseph (?1604) has few modern readers. His religious lyrics are excellent; he infused real feeling into the conventional models of Ledesma*. His autos also contain excellent poetry. He licensed for the press many of his contemporaries' works of literature.

Doce autos sacramentales y dos comedias divinas (1622); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIX, XXXV, LVIII; Romancero espiritual (ed. M. Mir, 1880).

J. M. Aguirre, J. de V. y la poesía religiosa tradicional (1965). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Valdombre: see Grignon, CLAUDE HENRI.

Válek, MIROSLAV (*1929), Slovak poet. Válek, who became Slovak Minister of Culture on the federalization of Czechoslovakia in 1969, came to notice as a poet in the early 1960s with a series of volumes (Dotyky, 1959; Prit'azlivost', 1961; Nepokoj, 1963) in which personal emotions are intertwined with the anxieties induced by the actual and potential catastrophes of our age. R.A.

Valencia, GUILLERMO (*Popayán 20 X 1873; †1943), Colombian poet who followed on J. A. Silva* in the modernista movement (MODERNISM), concentrating on the Parnassian element therein, and entirely cut off from its later developments. He possessed an impressive command of form, and his verse is to be reckoned among the most perfect written in Spanish in modern times. His themes are choses vues, exotic scenes, philosophical attitudes; he excelled as a translator.

Ritos (1898; enlarged, London, 1914).—Catay (tr. from Fr. of F. Toussaint from the orig. Chinese, 1929).—Obras poeticas completas (1948; 3rd ed., Madrid, 1955). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Valenrod, REUBEN (*Russia 2 II 1899), Hebrew writer, who describes Jewish life in America.

Badyota Hashlishit (short stories; Tel Aviv, 1937); Bekhug Ha Mishpachah (New York, 1939); Ki Phana Yom (Tel Aviv, 1946); Bein Homot (New York, 1953); Be-ein Dor (1953).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Valente, JOSÉ ÁNGEL (*Orense 1929), Spanish poet, author of A modo de esperanza (1955) and Poemas a Lázaro (1961). J.E.V.

Valentijn, FRANÇOIS (*Dordrecht 17 IV 1666; ∞1692 Cornelia Snaats; †The Hague 6 VIII 1727), Dutch parson, geographer and historian; went to Indonesia as a preacher; student of the Malay language; wrote encyclopaedic travel books with valuable source material.

Oudt en Nieuw Oost-Indiën (5 vols, 1724–26). J.W.W.

Valentijn en Nameloos, a so-called 'Oriental' romance, the fragmentary 14th-century Middle Dutch verse version of which—presumably after a French original, now lost—is still recognizable in a Middle Low German translation. The romance is built on the theme of the separated twin brothers who after many adventures meet again.

Middle Dutch fragments: ed. G. Kalff, Middel-nederl. Epische Fragmenten (1886); ed. W. de Vreese in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Tual- en Letterk., XI (1892); the Middle Low German romance ed. W. Seelmann (1884).—G. J. Dieperink, Studien zum Valentin und N. (1933). J.J.M.

Valera, CIPRIANO DE (*Seville ?1532; †after 1602), Spanish polemist and translator. He was a monk who turned Protestant and lived in England, where he printed his Spanish New Testament (1596). His version is a revision of Reina's*. His controversial works are lively but abusive. He also translated Calvin's* Institutions.

Tratado del Papa y de la Misa (London, 1588; ed. Uoz, 1847); Tratado para confirmar los pobres cativos de Berberia (ibid., 1594; ed. idem, 1854); El Testamento Nuevo (ibid., 1596); A todos los fieles de la nación española (ibid., 1597; ed. idem, 1858); La Biblia (Amsterdam, 1602; frequently repr. in rev. eds); Two treatises (tr. J. Golburne, 1600).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, IV. E.M.W.

Valera, MOSÉN DIEGO DE (*Cuenca 1412; †Puerto de Santa María ?1488), Spanish chronicler, letter-writer and poet. He had an adventurous life, and his picturesque character is well revealed in his letters. He summarized the history of Spain from diverse sources, and chronicled two contemporary reigns; his didactic works include Defensa de virtuosas mugeres. His style in both prose and verse is good.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., CXVI; Epístolas etc. (ed. J. A. de Balenchana, 1878); Crónica de los Reyes Católicos (ed. J. de M. Carriazo, 1927); Memorial de diversas hazañas (ed. idem, 1941).

L. de Torre y Franco-Romero, 'M. D. de V.: su vida y obras' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Hist., LXIV (1914); C. Real de la Riva, 'Un mentor del siglo XV: D. de V. y sus epístolas' in Rev. de Literatura, XX (1961). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Valerand de la Varenne (*Abbeville; fl. c. 1500), neo-Latin epic poet. His most famous work is an epic on Joan of Arc.

De Gestis Joanne Virginis (1516; ed. E. Prarond, 1889).—D. Murarasu, La poésie néolatine (1928). F.W.

Valera y Alcalá-Galiano, JUAN (*Cabra, Córdoba 18 X 1824; ∞ Dolores Delavat; †Madrid 18 IV 1905), Spanish novelist and man of letters, nephew of Alcalá* Galiano. He studied law at Granada and Madrid Universities, entered diplomacy in 1847 and held various posts in Europe and America. A man of considerable culture and refined taste, well-read in Greek and Latin, he slowly elaborated—through letter-writing—a literary style which is considered one of the best in 19th-century Spain: harmonious without oratory, clear and concise, sparkling with subtle irony. This suited perfectly his amiable, sceptic, worldly character. His incisive mind is at its best when discussing Spanish or world classics, art and literary genres. When dealing with his contemporaries, excessive politeness generally killed the critic in him (Estudios críticos sobre literatura, 1864; Disertaciones y juicios literarios, 1878). Later in life he became a novelist, and as such is generally overrated. In his first and most famous novel, Pepita Jiménez (1874)—half written in letter form—a seminarist's mysticism melts away at the first contact with profane love; but this never reaches the level of real psychological conflict. To present this or his other novels as deep psychological studies is quite misleading. His conception of the novel as 'poetry rather than story' and 'more beautiful than reality' produces good narrative, and a subtle idealization of Andalusian life, but when applied to character and emotions the risk of woolliness is not always avoided. The writer is excellent, the novelist weak. Of his many first-rate translations Longus* Dafnis y Cloe stands out as a masterpiece of superb rendering.

Obras completas (2 vols, 1942).—Pepita Jiménez (ed. M. Azaña in Clásicos Castellanos, 1927; tr. M. J. Serrano, 1891); Epistolario de Valera y Menéndez y Pelayo (1930); Correspondencia (ed. C. C. DeCoster, 1956); Obras desconocidas (ed. idem, 1965); Artículos de 'El Contemporáneo' (ed. idem, 1966).—Eng. trs: M. J. Serrano, Doña Luz (1891) and Comendador Mendoza (1893); Clara Bell, Don Braulio (1892).

M. Azaña, 'V. en Rusia' in Nosotros (Buenos Aires, 1926), La novela de Pepita Jiménez (1927) and V. in Italia (1929); E. Fishtine, Don J. V., the Critic (Bryn Mawr, Pa., 1933); J. Krynen, L'esthétisme de J. V. (1946); A. Jiménez, J. V. y la Generación de 1868 (1956); J. F. Montesinos, V. o la ficción libre (1957); R. E. Lott, 'Siglo de oro' Tradition and Modern Adolescent Psychology in 'Pepita Jiménez' (1958); C. Bravo Villasante, Biografía de D. J. V. (1959); A. Zamora Romera, D. J. V. (1966); M. Bermejo Marcos, D. J. V., crítico literario (1968). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Valeri, DIEGO (*Padua 25 I 1887), Italian poet. A lyric poet of sensitivity and delicacy, whose musical, limpid verse, mainly inspired by the beauty and colour of Venice, has been much influenced by Verlaine* and the 'crepuscular' poets (Gozzano*). He is an authority on French literature.

VERSE: Poesie vecchie e nuove (1930); Scherzo e finale (1937); Tempo che muore (1942); Terzo tempo (1950); Il flauto a due canne (1958).—PROSE: Saggi e note di letteratura francese moderna (1940); Guida sentimentale di Venezia (1942).

V. Zambon, La poesia di D. V. (1968).

J.F.C. (B.M.)

Valeriano, PIERIO, properly GIOVANNI PIETRO DELLE FOSSE (*Belluno 3 II 1477; †Padua VI 1558), Italian humanist and poet. Scholar and priest, he was tutor to Ippolito and Alessandro de' Medici in Rome and possibly taught Vasari* in Florence. He wrote love poetry and works of scholarship in Latin and an interesting Dialogo della Volgar Lingua (c. 1516) in which he maintains that the literary language should be based on the broader Italian used by the ruling class in the various Italian states, rather than on the local idiom of Florence.

Amorum Libri (1549); Hieroglyphica (1552); Dialogo della Volgar Lingua (1620).

L. Alpago-Novello, 'Spigolature Vaticane di argomento bellunese' in Archivio Veneto Tridentino, IX (1926); G. Bustico, 'Due umanisti veneti: Urbano Bolzanio e P.V.' in Civiltà Moderna (1932). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Valerius, ADRIANUS (*Middelburg; †Veere 1625), Dutch poet, contributed to De Zeeuwsche Nachtegaal (1623). He owes his fame to his collection of historical songs on the events of the first years of the war of independence, which he published with their tunes. A.M.B.W.

De Nederlandsche Gedenck-Clanck (1626; ed. P. J. Meertens, N. B. Tenhaeff and A. Komter-Kuipers, 1942); W. J. C. Buitendijk, Nederlandse Strijdzangen uit de 16e en de eerste helft der 17e eeuw (1954). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Valerius, JOHAN DAVID (*1776; †1852), Swedish

poet, singer. In 1797 Valerius became a singer at the Royal Theatre, later secretary and also translated plays for its repertoire. Subsequently he became a civil servant. His poetry consists for the most part of didactic verse or of songs, often drinking songs: he is essentially a derivative poet, but in his day was both popular and successful. He was an opponent of the Romantic writers.

Visor och sångstycken (2 vols, 1809–11; repr. 1878); Vitterhetsförsök (1831); Samlade vitterhetsarbeten (ed. with biog. B. von Beskow, 2 vols, 1855).

F. Böök in Fem porträtt (1929).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Valerius Antias, Roman historian, composed about 50 B.C. a history of Rome from the beginnings to his own time, in at least 75 books. His work was annalistic in method and rhetorical in style. Its numerous inaccuracies are rebuked by Livy*, who nevertheless used it extensively J.A.W.

Fragments in H. Peter, Historicorum Romanorum reliquiae, I (2nd ed. 1914; repr. J. Kroymann and W. Schaub, 1967, with bibl. from 1900).—P. G. Walsh, Livy: His Historical Aims and Methods (1961); Latin Historians (ed. T. A. Dorey, 1966). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Valerius Flaccus (GAIUS V. F. BALBUS SETINUS) (†c. A.D. 92/93), Latin epic poet of whose life little is known. His only known and extant work is an epic poem, the Argonautica, on the quest of the Golden Fleece, already treated by Apollonius* Rhodius and Varro* Atacinus; the work was interrupted by the poet's death. Like the other post-Augustan epic poets, Valerius is strongly influenced by Virgil*. The debt to Apollonius is not so great, and Valerius shows originality in his incidents and in the psychological insight with which his characters, especially those of Jason and Medea, are depicted.

Ed. O. Kramer (1913; repr. 1967); ed. E. Courtney (1970); ed. with comm. P. Langen (1897; repr. 1964).

W. C. Summers, A Study of the Argonautica (1894); H. E. Butler, Post-Augustan Poetry (1909); R. W. Garson, 'Observations on . . . Argonautica' in Class. Quart. (1964–65). A.J.D.

Valerius Maximus (fl. A.D. 30), Roman historian, compiled a handbook of examples for rhetoricians, in which virtues and vices are classified and illustrated by examples first Roman, then foreign. The style varies according to the fidelity with which he copied his sources, principally Cicero* and Livy*.

Ed. C. Kempf (2nd ed. 1888; repr. 1966; incl. Paris and Nepotianus, late epitomators).—R. Helm, 'V. M., Seneca, und die "Exemplarsammlung"' in Hermes (1939). J.A.W.

Valéry, PAUL (*Sète 30 IX 1871; ∞1900 Jeannie

Gobillard; †Paris 20 VII 1945), French poet, essayist and critic. Valéry went to Paris at the age of 20 and fell under the spell of Mallarmé*. He first became well known however by two prose works, the Introduction à la méthode de Léonard de Vinci (1895) which portrays the ideal human being capable of realizing every possibility of the human spirit, but who wastes his life in chimerical projects; and Monsieur Teste (1896) which proved by his methodical refusal of fame and his 'murderous lucidity' how an artist can refuse to produce ('réalisation' is 'déchéance'). After many years' silence the poem 'La jeune Parque' (1917) brought him immediate fame. This was followed by poems collected in the slim volume Charmes (1922) which contains the great meditations on the themes of love and death: 'Le serpent', 'La Pythie', and above all, 'Le cimetière marin'. After Charmes Valéry wrote chiefly in prose: Eupalinos (1923) which studies man as the frontier between matter and spirit, acute critical essays (Variété) and aphorisms on literature and art.

He believed that poetry is the contrary of what is generally called literature and is above all music. With his haunting melody of language he combined an astonishing gift for mingling abstractions with concrete pictures, thus revivifying poetic imagery. He professes an unwavering mistrust of the spontaneous and an interest only in the spectacle of a mind's functioning. His poetry is the fruit of philosophical meditation on body and spirit and their intimate relationship. Though sceptical and somewhat disillusioned his final message is a call to action in the freshening breeze.

G.M.T.

Album de vers anciens (1920); Poésies (1942).—PROSE: La soirée avec Monsieur Teste (1896); Variété (5 vols, 1924–44); Propos sur l'intelligence (1925); Choses vues (1930); L'idée fixe (1932); Degas. Danse. Dessin (1938); Mauvaises pensées (1942); Correspondance André Gide–P. V. 1890–1942 (ed. R. Mallet, 1955); Cahiers (29 vols, 1957–61).—Œuvres complètes (12 vols, 1931–52).

A. Thibaudet, P. V. (1923); E. Noulet, P. V. (1938; 1951); P. O. Walzer, La poésie de V. (1953); F. Scarfe, The Art of P. V. (1954).

G.M.T. (M.T.)

Valla, LORENZO [DELLA] (*Rome 1407; †ibid. 1 VIII 1457), Italian humanist. Valla has been called the greatest representative of the spirit of criticism and innovation in Italian 15th-century humanism. By a scientific and accurate study of original texts he struck at the roots of scholastic and medieval tradition and thus based his conception of man's intellectual independence on philological evidence. No one was safe from his attacks. After writing against the work of the jurist, Bartolo da Sassoferrato, he was forced in 1433 to leave Pavia where he had held the Chair of rhetoric. He went to Naples in the service of Alfonso of Aragon and remained there until he returned to Rome in 1448. While in Naples he attacked Aristotelian dialectic in his Dialecticae (1439), demonstrated the falsity of the Donation of Constantine and attacked the temporal power of the Church in De Constantini Donatione (1440) and produced his greatest work, the Elegantiarum Linguae Latinae (1444), a treatise on style and grammar which attempted to restore Latin to its classical purity. In his philosophical works, De Voluptate ac Vero Bono (1432) and De libero Arbitrio, he attacked Stoicism and formulated an Epicurean philosophy which could be reconciled with Christianity. His life was embittered by violent polemics with other humanists especially Poggio [Bracciolini*] and Panormita [Beccadelli*].

Elegantiarum Linguae Latinae (1471; 59 eds before 1536); De libero arbitrio (1482; crit. ed. M. Anfossi, 1934); Dialecticae libri tres (1499); Historiarum Ferdinandi Regis Aragonae (1521); De falso credito et ementita Constantini donatione (1570).—Crit. eds: C. B. Coleman (1922; with Eng. tr.); W. Schwan (Leipzig, 1928); Opera (Basle, 1540, 1543).—Opere (crit. ed. E. Garin, with biblio., 2 vols, 1962).

G. Mancini, Vita di L. V. (1891); L. Barozzi and R. Sabbadini, Studi sul Panormita e sul V. (1891); J. H. Whitfield, Petrarch and the Renaissance (1949); G. Saitta, Il pensiero italiano nell'Umanesimo e nel Rinascimento, I (1949); P. O. Kristeller, Eight Philosophers of the Italian Renaissance (1965). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Vallabhāchārya (*1478; †1530), a Telugu Brahmin from Benares who founded a highly influential Krishnaite sect in the Braj area, and founded a school of philosophy called Shuddhadvaita. His son VITTHAL NĀTH founded the Āstachāp, or group of eight Hindi poets, all of merit, and all devotees of Krishna. Of these the most outstanding were the blind SŪRDĀS, author of the Sūr Sāgara, a huge collection of Krishnaite lyrics in Braj Bhāṣā, and NAND DĀS. S.C.R.W.

Vallathol (VALLATOL NĀRĀYAṆA MĒNŌN): see INDIAN LITERATURES; Malayalam.

Valle-Inclán, RAMÓN MARÍA DEL (*Villanueva de Arosa 28 X 1866; ∞Josefina Blanco; †Santiago de Compostela 5 I 1936), Spanish novelist, poet and dramatist. He studied law in Santiago and for a year was a journalist in Mexico. After 1895 he lived mainly in Madrid. Witty, quick-tempered—it cost him an arm—he led an independent, eccentric life full of nobility and pride.

Valle-Inclán achieved notoriety with the four Sonatas (1902–05), works of fin-de-siècle decadence recounted in a sophisticated and mannered style. His native Galicia figures in short stories and in Flor de santidad (1904), a poetic and yet brutal legend in which a peasant girl gives herself to a pilgrim, thinking him to be Christ. A trilogy of historical novels centres round the Carlist Wars (1908–09), but more important are the three Comedias bárbaras (1907, 1908, 1922), novels in dialogue form that reveal a growing interest in the dehumanization of character and a powerful use of language. Valle's constant interest in the theatre is reflected not only in the early poetic plays, but in the original esperpentos of the 1920s, a form in which plot, character and language are twisted and deformed into a bitter attack on contemporary society. The puppet plays an important part in Valle's dehumanization. These short dramatic pieces and the novels which Valle wrote in the late 1920s and early 1930s are his most important work and have earned the respect of writers of the present day. Tirano Banderas (1926) is located in a Spanish-American setting and describes the fall of a hideous tyrant and the corruption of the society in which he enjoys power; in the novels of the Ruedo ibérico (two completed novels and several fragments survive from a projected trilogy of trilogies), Valle turns to the Peninsula and unmercifully satirizes the Spain of Isabel II, the strength of his attack deriving from his choice of significant detail, carefully counterpoised construction, constant dehumanization and mordant choice of vocabulary. A similar stylistic evolution is to be observed in his poetical works.

Obras completas (2 vols, 1942).—‘The Dragon’s Head’ (tr. M. Haywood Brown in Poet Lore, 1918); ‘Captain’s Honour’ (tr. anon. in Old World, 1923); The Pleasant Memoirs of the Marquis de Bradomin (tr. M. Haywood Brown and T. Walsh, 1924).

M. Fernández Almagro, Vida y literatura de V. I. (1944); A. Zamora Vicente, Las sonatas de R. del V.-I. (1951) and La realidad esperpéntica (1969); W. L. Fichter, Publicaciones periódicas de V. I. anteriores a 1895 (1952); J. Rubia Barcia, A Bibliography and Iconography of V.-I. (1960); Cuadernos hispanoamericanos, nos. 199–200 (1966); J. Marias, V.-I. en el ‘Ruedo ibérico’ (1967); A. Zahareas, R. del V.-I., An Appraisal of His Life and Works (1968); M. E. March, Forma e idea de los ‘esperpentos’ de V.-I. (1969); E. Speratti-Piñero, De ‘Sonata de otoño’ al ‘esperpento’ (London, 1969). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Vallejo, CÉSAR (*Santiago de Chuco 1892; †Paris 1938), one of the greatest of Latin American poets. This cholo was born of a humble but united family, living in the remote provinces, and separation from them became one of the major themes of his poetry. In his first collection, Los heraldos negros (1919), there were still traces of modernist influence, but there was already an original break with poetic forms. His ‘Nostalgias imperiales’ evoked the Indian of Peru, but this was not a vein that he was to exploit. Trilce (1922), a collection that included radical, experimental poetry, was a complete rupture with tradition. Some of the poems were written in prison where he spent some months accused, apparently unjustly, of inciting to riot. Others show the profound effect on him of his mother's death. In the poems in which syntax is ruptured and parts of speech torn out of their usual functions, he presents a dialectic between human aspirations and the limitations of man's condition. In 1923 he left for Paris, and except for trips to Russia and Spain, remained there until his death. As a member of the Communist party, he tried to break out of an elite view of literature and write for the theatre. He also published an unsuccessful novel, Tungsteno (1931). During the Spanish Civil War, he published España aparta de mí este cádiz but the edition was lost and this and his Poemas humanas (1939; Human Poems, tr. Clayton Eshleman, 1969) were published posthumously. These later poems are obsessed by death, the absurdity of existence and the grotesqueness of any attempt to bring dignity and purpose into life.

Escalas megalografiadas (1922); Rusia (1931).—Obra poética completa (Lima, 1968).

Luis Monguió, C. V. (1892–1938): vida y obra (New York, 1952); J. Higgins, C. V. An Anthology of His Poetry (1970) and Visión del hombre y de la vida en las últimas obras poéticas de C. V. (Mexico, 1970); Aproximaciones a C. V. (ed. A. Flores, 2 vols, New York, 1971). J.F.

Vallès, JULES (*Le Puy-en-Velay 11 VI 1832; †Paris 14 XI 1885), French novelist. Vallès has told the story of his adventurous life as a revolutionary journalist in his trilogy Jacques Vingtras, of which the climax is the Paris Commune (1871). He was an anarchist, a Communist and a realist novelist, with a bitter and incisive manner of writing.

Les réfractaires (1865); La rue (1866); Les enfants du peuple (1879); Jacques Vingtras: L'enfant (1879), Le bachelier (1881), L'insurgé (1886); Les chroniques de l'homme masqué (1882); La rue à Londres (1883); Mazas (1894); Les blouses (1919); Souvenirs (1932); Le tableau de Paris (1932); Le Proscrit (1950).

U. Rouchon, La vie bruyante de J. V. (2 vols, 1932; 1938); M. L. Hirsch, J. V. l'insurgé (1949); Europe, special no. (1957). M.G.; J.P.R.

Valle y Caviedes, JUAN DEL (*Porcuna, Spain 1652 or 1654; †Lima ?1692), Peruvian author of various humorous poems, chiefly a series of highly satirical verses on the medical men and other social types of Lima. Towards the end of his life, his verses become melancholy and there are one or two that finely express a religious sentiment.

Obras (best ed. Vargas Ugarte in Clásicos peruanos, 1947; in Colección de documentos literarios del Perú . . . V, ed. M. de Odrizola, 1873; and in Flor de Academias, 1899). E.Sa.

Vālmiki (2nd century B.C.), author of the RĀMĀYAṆA.

Van Bruggen, JOCHFEM (*Groede, Holland 29 IX 1881; ∞1905 Maria Petronella Oosthuizen; †Magaliesburg 22 V 1957), Afrikaans novelist. After taking part in the South African War he made a living as a country schoolteacher, tobacco dealer and farmer, thus gaining an intimate knowledge of his impoverished and backward countrymen, whom he depicts with great power of observation, sympathy, understanding and humour. The name of Ampie has become a household word in South Africa.

Teleurgestel (1917); Op Veld en Rande (1920); Ampie die Natuurkind (1924); Ampie, die Meisiekind (1928); Booia (1932); Huar Beproewing (1934); Met Ampie deur die Depressie (1939); Ampie die Kind (1943); Kranskop, I (1943).

J. C. Kannemeyer, J. van B. (1965).

G.D. (N.D.C.)

Vanbrugh, SIR JOHN (~St Nicholas Acons, London I 1664; ∞1719 Henrietta Maria Yarborough; †Whitehall 26 III 1726), English dramatist and architect. Vanbrugh served in both the 13th and 14th Foot, was imprisoned in France, apparently on an unexplained charge, and on his return he devoted himself first to the stage—for which he created his witty displays of light-hearted adulteries—and later to grandiose architectural projects, such as Blenheim Palace.

The Relapse: or Virtue in Danger (1697; ed. C. A. Zimansky, 1970); The Provok'd Wife (1697; ed. idem, 1969).—The Complete Works of Sir J. V. (ed. B. Dobrée and G. Webb, 4 vols, 1927–28; repr. 1967).

G. H. Lovegrove, The Life, Work and Influence of Sir J. V. (1902; architectural); L. Whistler, Sir J. V. (1933). B.H. (A.N.W.)

Vančura, VLADISLAV (*Háj 23 VI 1891; †Prague 1 VI 1942), Czech novelist and dramatist. One of the most striking and influential Czech prose writers of the inter-war period, Vančura was a doctor in Prague. He was shot by the Germans during the Second World War.

His novels treat very varied subjects: the heroism of the poor in Pekař Jan Marhoul (1924); the First World War in Pole orná a válečná (1925) and with greater maturity in Tři řeky (1936); personal and national relationships in the love-story of a Slovak youth and a Czech girl entitled Útek do Budína (1932); and a historical theme in Markéta Lazarová (1931). In all these works the characters and situations are overshadowed by the style. A virtuoso in the use of language, Vančura extended the range of literary Czech by the introduction of popular or archaic words and phrases and in general by a baroque eccentricity which, despite its heavy sophistication, can often fascinate the reader. During the German occupation of his country Vančura produced what is perhaps his masterpiece, a retelling of the history of his people, Obrázky z dějin národa českého (2 vols, 1939–40), in which sincerity and sobriety of feeling provide the necessary discipline for the author's highly individual style.

Dílo V. Vančury (16 vols, 1951–61).—NOVELS: Poslední soud (1929); Konec starých časů (1934).

J. Mukařovský, 'Dvě studie o V.u Vančurovi' in Kapitoly z české poetiky, II (1948). R.A.

Van den Heever, CHRISTIAN MAURITS (*Norvalspont, Cape Province 27 II 1902; ∞Martha Maria Kloppe; †8 VII 1957), Afrikaans poet and novelist. He studied in Holland and became Professor of Afrikaans and Dutch in Johannesburg. His poetry is lyrical and meditative: at its best his imagery is of a delicate beauty. In his novels he depicts the life of the Dutch South African farmer, his struggle with nature, and describes how many lose this battle and are driven to the cities to lead a life of social and economic slavery. He is a talented writer of short stories.

VERSE: Stemmingsure (1926); Deining (1932); Aardse Flam (1938); Versamelde Gedigte (1945).—PROSE: Langs die Grootpad (1928); Droogte (1930); Simson (1930); Groei (1933); Somer (1935); Harvest Home, tr. T. J. Haarhoff, (1945); Kromburg (1937); Kruispad (1938); Laat Vrugte (1939); Gister (1941); Generaal J. B. M. Hertzog (1943); Kringloop van die Winde (1945); Woestynsand dek die Spore (1946); Die Held (1948); Marthinus se Roem (1949).

A. Coetzee, C. M. van den H.: Die Wese van sy Kuns (1936). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Van den Heever, TOON, pseud of FRANS P. VAN DEN HEEVER (*Heidelberg, Transvaal 29 XI 1894; ∞Margaretha Rautenbach; †Bloemfontein 29 I 1956), Afrikaans poet. In his lyrics, ballads, dramatic monologues, epics and satires the voice of the generation that grew up during the first two decades of the century is heard; the spiritual conflict between the old orthodox faith and modern ideas and philosophy; the struggle for cultural autonomy. He is the leading poet of his generation.

VERSE: Gedigte (1910); Eugene e. a. Gedigte (1931).—PROSE: Gerwe uit die Erfpag van Skoppensboer (1948). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Van der Meersch, MAXENCE (*Roubaix 4 V 1907; †Le Touquet 14 I 1951), French novelist. A graduate in both law and literature, Van der Meersch began writing in student reviews in the north of France before practising law for two years. The success of his first novel La maison dans la dune (1932; Eng. tr. A. Glendinning, 1938) determined his literary inclination, which was interrupted by pulmonary tuberculosis. In Corps et âmes (1943; Eng. tr. E. Wilkins, 1948) he describes the cruel experiences he suffered at the hands of the doctors. His powerfully realistic art, with the passion and the flavour of Flanders, serves important social and moral causes, always from a Christian perspective (La fille pauvre, 1948–53; Eng. tr. E. Wilkins and E. Fitzgerald, 1949–57).

NOVELS: Quand les sirènes se taisent (1933; The Looms Are Silent, tr. F. A. Blossom, 1934); Invasion 14 (1935; Eng. tr. G. Hopkins, 1937); L'élú (1937); The Dynamite Factory, 1953); L'empreinte du Dieu (1936; Hath Not the Potter, tr. G. Hopkins, 1937); L'été (1937); Pêcheurs d'hommes (1940; Eng. tr. 1947); Masque de chair (1958; Eng. tr. M. Savill, 1960).—Pages choisies (1950).

R. Reus, Portrait morpho-psychologique de M. V. der M. (1952). M.G.

Van der Post, LAURENS (*Philippolis, Orange Free State 1906), South African novelist, essayist and writer of travel books. His interest in race relations was stimulated by association with Roy Campbell* and William Plomer*, and is reflected in his first novel, In A Province (1934). After distinguished war service, mainly in the East, he returned to Africa and explored little-known regions. His later books describe episodes of his adventurous life.

NOVELS: The Face Beside the Fire (1953); Flamingo Feather (1955).—PERSONAL NARRATIVES: Venture to the Interior (1952); The Lost World of the Kalahari (1958); The Heart of the Hunter (1961); The Night of the New Moon (1970).—SHORT STORIES: A Bar of Shadow (1954); The Hunter and the Whale (1967).

F. Carpenter, L. Van der P. (1969). U.La.

Van Doren, MARK ALBERT (*Hope, Ill. 13 VI 1894; ∞1922 Dorothy Graffe; †11 XII 1972), American poet and critic, who wrote critical studies of Thoreau*, Dryden* and Shakespeare*, and compiled anthologies. His Collected Poems received the Pulitzer prize in 1940.

CRITICISM: Henry David Thoreau, A Critical Study (1916); The Poetry of John Dryden (1920); Shakespeare (1939); The Happy Critic (1961).—VERSE: Spring Thunder (1924); Now the Sky (1928); A Winter Diary (1935); Collected Poems: 1922–1938 (1939); The Mayfield Deer (1941); Country Year (1946).—Autobiography (1958).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Van Hasselt, ANDRÉ (*Maestricht 5 I 1806; ∞1837 Joséphine Hérès; †Saint-Josse-ten-Noode 1 XII 1874), Belgian poet, historian and librettist. His friends Hugo*, Sainte-Beuve* and Dumas* acclaimed the melodious verse of this Romantic, neglected by his compatriots until the Jeune Belgique writers posthumously discovered him. Many of his 'études rythmiques' were set to music by Massenet and he translated the libretti of operas by Mozart and Beethoven.

Les primevères (1834); Poésies (1852); Poèmes, paraboles, odes et études rythmiques (1862); Les quatre incarnations du Christ (1867); Le livre des ballades (1872).—Histoire des Belges (1851).

C. Hanlet, Les écrivains belges contemporains (1946). B.M.W.

Van Heerden, ERNST (*Pearston, Cape Province 20 III 1916), Afrikaans poet and critic. His poems are characterized by an involved metaphorical structure. He is also a well-known writer of travelogues.

VERSE: Weerlose Uur (1942); Die Sewe Vrese (1951); Die Klop (1961); Anderkant Besit (1966).—

PROSE: Rekenskap (1963); Die Aamborstige Klok (1966). N.D.C.

Van Lerberghe, CHARLES (*Ghent 21 X 1861; †Brussels 26 X 1907), Belgian dramatist, poet and Jeune Belgique. Too timid for a profession, too shy to marry the girl he loved, he succeeded only as a poet. Suffused with delicate imagery, his incomparable Chanson d'Ève (1904) is a spiritual autobiography in allegorical form. Symbolism in the Maeterlinck* manner prevails in his verse and dramas.

Les flaireurs (1889); Entrevisions (1898); Pan (1906).

G. Turquet-Milnes, Some Modern Belgian Writers (1916); L. Christophe, C. V. L. (1943); V. Mallinson, Modern Belgian Literature 1830–1960 (1966). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Van Melle, JOHANNES (*Goes, Holland 1 II 1887; †Johannesburg 8 XI 1953), Afrikaans novelist and writer of short stories. As a country schoolteacher he gained an intimate knowledge of rural life and people which he depicts in a frugal, effective style. He won growing critical approval for his portrayal of the 'unsaid things' in the relationship between people living together.

Dawid Booysen (1933); Vergesigte (1938); Mense gaan verby (1940); Venster aan die straat (1940); Bart Nel (En ek is nog Hy) (1942); Verspeelde Lente (1961). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Vannozzo, FRANCESCO DI (*Padua c. 1340), Italian poet. As a lutenist and courier he passed an adventurous life in the service of various north Italian courts. He composed frottole, tenzoni and lute songs, love lyrics in the Petrarchan style, autobiographical poems on his wretchedness and a notable group of political sonnets (1388) expressing the ambitions of Gian Galeazzo Visconti.

Le Rime (crit. ed. A. Medin, 1928); Rimatori del tardo Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1967).—E. Levi, F. di V. e la lirica nelle corti lombarde (1908). M.W.

Vanzye, GUSTAVE (*Brussels 10 VI 1869; †Boitsfort 11 IX 1955), Belgian novelist, dramatist and art critic. Best known as a playwright, Vanzye poses with acute psychological insight the problems of domestic relationships, of heredity and of duty. His monographs on the great Flemish painters constitute a considerable artistic achievement.

NOVELS: Claire Fantin (1900); La Révélation (1904).—PLAYS: Les étapes (1907); Les liens (1912); Les semailles (1919).—CRITICISM: Henri de Brackeleer (1923); Méditations devant des images (1929).—Au temps du silence (autobiog.; 1939).

A. Vierset, G. V. (1913). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Vaptsarov, NIKOLA (*Bansko 24 XI 1909; †Sofia 23 VII 1942), Bulgarian poet. He left his native Pirin (of which he always wrote nostalgically) to train as a marine engineer in Varna and sail the Mediterranean, then worked as a factory hand and stoker. Like Botev*, whose life he in some ways re-enacted, he wrote little but his poems caught the Zeitgeist with their honesty and virility. Influenced by Mayakovsky*, he wrote forcefully, opposing the inhuman world of factory concrete and steel with his humane romanticism but never lived to see his Communist ideal applied to Bulgaria, being executed as a Partisan.

Motorni pesni (1940).—Coll. works (ed. E. Petrov, 1959).

Sbornik V. (1947); B. Vaptsarova, Spomeni za V. (1952); N. V. spomeni (1953); G. Tsanev, Poetich-noto maystorstvo na V. (1956). V.P.

Vāras Shāh (fl. 18th century A.D.), Punjabi poet of whose life little is known, but famous as the author of Hir Rānjhā (1766), a long verse romance of some 5,000 lines, which is certainly the greatest and by far the most popular work of Punjabi secular literature. Although frequently imitated, no poet has proved able to rival Vāras Shāh's distinctive style, particularly evident in the realistic colloquial speech of his characters.

Hir and Ranjha (tr. C. F. Usborne, repr. 1966). C.S.

Varchi, BENEDETTO (*Florence 19 III 1503; †ibid. 18 XII 1565), Italian historian and critic. Imbued with ideals of classical republicanism, Varchi helped to drive the Medici from Florence in 1527 but later (1543) accepted employment under Duke Cosimo I at whose request he wrote his Storia Fiorentina. Although well documented and accurate, his history lacks the universal significance of those by Machiavelli* and Guicciardini* and is full of adulation of the new Duke. Educated partly at Padua, Varchi introduced the Aristotelian conception of poetry, prevalent there, into his lectures at Florence University. He also wrote Petrarchan sonnets and a defence of the vernacular L'Ercolano (1560) which derives from Bembo* and Speroni*.

Sonnetti (1555-57); Lezioni sul Dante e Prose Varie (ed. G. Aiazzi and L. Arbib, 1841); Storia Fiorentina (ed. G. Milanese, 1857).—Opere (1803); crit. ed. of V.'s Lezione della maggioranza delle arti, with artists' letters, in Trattati d'arte del Cinquecento fra manierismo e Controriforma (ed. P. Barocchi, 1960).

G. Manacorda, 'B. V., l'uomo, il poeta, il critico' in Annali Scuola Norm. Sup. di Pisa, XVII (1903); M. Lupo Gentile, 'Studi sulla storiografia fiorentina alla corte di Cosimo I', ibid., XIX (1906); B. Croce, 'B. V.' in Poeti e scrittori del pieno e del tardo Rinascimento, III (1952). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Varese, CARLO (*Tortona 1792; †Rovezzano, Florence IX 1866), Italian historian and novelist. His first novel, Sibilla Odaleta (1827), reflects the influence of British novelists, particularly Sterne* and Scott*. A later novel, Torriani e Visconti (1839), is more in the tradition of Manzoni*. His short story, Ortobolan Pistrifrier Onagriuf, said to be his best work, is again imitative of Sterne*.

I prigionieri di Pizzighettone (1829); Folchetto Malaspina (1830); Preziosa di Sanluri (1830); La fidanzata ligure (1828); Gerolimi (1829); Il proscritto (1829).

A. Salaroli, C. V. il vessillifero del romanzo storico e degli scottiani in Italia (1927). N.K.W.

Vargas Llosa, MARIO (*1936), Peruvian novelist. His first publication was a collection of short stories, Los jefes (1958). In 1962 he won the Biblioteca Breve prize in Barcelona with the novel La ciudad y los perros (1963); The Time of the Heroes, tr. L. Kemp, 1967). All his works are set in Peru: La ciudad y los perros in a military academy, La casa verde (1966; The Green House, tr. G. Rabassa, 1969) in the town of Piura and the jungles of the Marañón, Los cachorros (1967) and Conversación en la Catedral (1969) in the barrios of Lima. Except for Los cachorros, the structure of the novels is highly complex with overlapping planes of time which have the effect of presenting the characters in a web woven out of their personal conditioning as individuals and the social forces and moral codes of their society. J.F.

Varlaam (*?; †1657), Metropolitan of Moldavia. He introduced the printing-press to Iași, capital of Moldavia, and in 1643 printed a collection of homilies Cartea românească de învățătură, translated from Slavonic. The preface to this work revealed his desire to see the creation of a literary standard. Two years later he wrote Răspunsul împotriva catehismului calvinesc, a reply to the Calvinist catechism printed at Alba Iulia in 1640, in an attempt to combat Calvinist efforts to convert Orthodox Rumanians in Transylvania.

I. Lupaș, Mitropolitul V. al Moldovei (Cluj, 1935); G. Dinca, V. mitropolitul Moldovei (1940); G. Ivașcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1969). D.J.D.

Varnhagen von Ense, KARL AUGUST (*Düsseldorf 21 II 1785; †1814 Rahel Levin; †Berlin 10 X 1858), German writer and diplomat. With his brilliant wife he was closely linked with the Romantics. Their salon was a centre of Berlin intellectual life and of the Goethe* cult. His biographical style was smooth; his diary a mine of gossip.

Briefwechsel mit Humboldt (1860); Ausgewählte Schriften (19 vols, 1871-76).

C. Misch, V. in Beruf und Politik (1925); F. Römer, V. als Romantiker (diss., 1934).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Värnlund, RUDOLF (*Stockholm 6 II 1900; †Österskär 16 II 1945), Swedish novelist and dramatist. Prominent among the proletarian writers of the 1920s and 1930s. His works provide excellent character studies of working-class Swedes. He reveals an unresolved conflict, for in him the individualism of the artist is opposed to the demands of the collective. Värnlund's plays show the influence of German Expressionism and Constructivism.

Skrifter i urval (ed. S. Carlson, 6 vols, 1956).

T. Blom, R. V. En arbetardiktars liv och dikt (1946). I.S.

Varro, MARCUS TERENCE (*Reate 116; †27 B.C.), the greatest of Roman antiquaries. After serving on Pompey's side in the Civil War he retired into private life to pursue antiquarian studies. Varro wrote about 70 works in over 600 books, covering every aspect of scholarship. Extant are three books De re rustica, written in his 80th year and Books 5-10 of the original 25 of De lingua Latina. His greatest work, the Antiquitates rerum humanarum et divinarum, has perished, although much information from it is preserved in Gellius*, Servius*, Macrobius* and Augustine*. Other major works were 76 dialogues on various subjects (Logistoricon libri) and a collection of Greek and Roman biographies (Hebdomades). Varro's Novem disciplinae was made the basis of the De nuptiis Philologiae of Martianus* Capella. Of Varro's 150 Menippean satires 90 titles and many fragments remain, largely thanks to their preservation in Nonius*. J.A.W.

De re rustica (ed. G. Goetz, 2nd ed. 1929; tr. [with Cato, De agri cultura] W. D. Hooper and H. B. Ash, 1934; V. on Farming, tr. with intro. and comm. L. Storr-Best, 1912); De lingua Latina (ed. G. Goetz and F. Schoell, 1910, repr. 1964; Book 5 ed. with Fr. tr. and comm. J. Collart, 1954); Saturae Menippeae in ed. of Petronius by F. Bücheler (6th ed. rev. W. Heraeus, 1922); grammatical frags in H. Funaioli, Grammaticae Romanae fragmenta (1957; repr. 1964).

G. Boissier, La vie et les ouvrages de M. T. Varron (1861); J. Collart, Varron grammairien latin (1954); F. della Corte, Varrone il terzo gran lume romano (1954); Varron: Six exposés et discussions (Fondation Hardt: Entretiens, IX, 1963); J. E. Skydsgaard, V. the Scholar: Studies in the First Book of V.'s De Re Rustica (1968).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Varro Atacinus, PUBLIUS TERENTIUS (*82 B.C.), Roman poet, wrote an Argonautica, which was a free translation or adaptation of the Argonautica of Apollonius* Rhodius, Chorographia on a geographical subject, Bellum Segunicum on the Gallic campaign of Caesar* in 58, and satire.

W. Morel, Fragmenta poetarum Latinorum (1927).
J.F.L.

Vasalis, pseud. of MARGARETHA LEENMANS (*The Hague 13 II 1909; ∞ J. Droogleever Fortuyn), Dutch poet. Her first volume found an immediate and surprisingly large response. Her poems, written in a pellucid, colloquial style, show a sensitive and intelligent concern for the small things of life.

Parken en woestijnen (1940); De vogel Phoenix (1947); Vergezichten en gezichten (1954). J.J.O.

Vasari, GIORGIO (*Arezzo 30 VII 1511; †Florence 1574), Italian painter, architect and art historian. At the age of 13 Vasari came to Florence to study under Michelangelo [Buonarrotti*]. A rapid and facile painter, his frescoes are to be found all over Italy but he was employed chiefly by Duke Cosimo in Florence and Popes Julius III, Pius V and Gregory XIII in Rome. As an architect his most important work is the Uffizi Palace in Florence. A man of wide culture and influential connections and an indefatigable collector of facts and anecdotes, he is best remembered for his Vite dei piu eccellenti pittori, scultori e architetti. Begun in 1546 at the suggestion of Giovio* and Cardinal Alessandro Farnese, they were published in 1550 and a second augmented edition in 1568. These unique biographies, in which, in spite of occasional bias and inaccuracy, the personality of each artist is depicted with unerring touch, still provide an inexhaustible fund of material for the art historian. But Vasari meant his work to be more than a series of biographies. He believed in the evolution of art towards the ideal of exact representation of nature, and distinguished various stages in this progress in the lives of his painters, childhood, youth and, with Michelangelo, maturity and perfection.

Le vite (ed. Sansoni, 1878–85; tr. A. B. Hinds, 1927; crit. ed. R. Bettarini of both the 1550 and 1568 eds, with accompanying vols of comm. by P. Barocchi, 1966–); Il libro delle ricordanze di G. V. (ed. A. Del Vita, 1927); Ragionamenti sopra le invenzioni da lui dipinte nel Palazzo delle Li Aliezze Serenissime, Il libro delle ricordanze and letters (ed. K. D. Frey in Der literarische Nachlass G. V.s, 3 vols, 1923–40).—Opere (6 vols, 1822).

U. Scoti Bertinelli, 'G. V. scrittore' in Annali Scuole Norm. di Pisa, XIX (1906); R. W. Carden, The Life of G. V. (1910); see also the periodical Il Vasari (Florence, 1927 ff.); Studi vasariani (Atti del Convegno per il IV Centenario delle Vite) (1952).
C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Vasconcelos, JORGE FERREIRA DE (*c. 1515; †?1563), Portuguese playwright and novelist. He seems to have studied law at Coimbra and later entered the court, first in the service of Prince Duarte (†1540) and later as a secretary; he was replaced in the latter post in 1563. His works consist of a romance of chivalry (Memorial das Proezas da Segunda Távola Redonda, 1567; ed. 1867) and three long plays which are, in effect, novels in dialogue—a form that derives from the Spanish Tragicomedia de Calixto y Melibea (Celestina*). The Comedia Eufrosina (1555), Vasconcelos' best work and one of the most interesting works of 16th-century Portugal, is indebted to the Spanish masterpiece in other respects—the procuress Philtra, for example, clearly descends from the famous Celestina—but the central love-story has a thoroughly Portuguese flavour. Comedia Ulyssippo (1618) has a more complex plot but the same theme: the triumph of true love, this time in a bourgeois setting. Comedia Aulegrafia (1619) deals exclusively with court life. Richly varied and full of ironic observation of social customs and human foibles, these three works present a critical portrayal of Portuguese life comparable with that made by Gil Vicente* earlier in the century.

Comédia Eufrosina (ed. A. F. G. Bell, 1918; ed. E. Asensio, 1951, valuable pref.); Comédia Aulegrafia (ed. A. Machado Vilhena, 1968).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 'La "Celestina" en Portugal' in Orígenes de la novela, III (1910); J. M. Teixeira de Carvalho, Comédia Eufrosina de J. F. de V. (1922); Massaud Moisés, A novela de cavalaria no quinhentismo português (São Paulo, 1957).
T.P.W.

Vasconcelos, JOSÉ (*1882; †1959), Mexican politician and thinker, author of works on philosophy and aesthetics, notably La raza cósmica (1925), but, from a literary point of view, chiefly remarkable for his period in office as Minister of Education during the early years after the Revolution and for his vivid autobiography, Ulises Criollo (1935), with its picture of Mexico before, during and after the Revolution.

Obras completas (4 vols, Mexico, 1957–61).

J.F.

Vassilev, VLADIMIR (*Sliven 4 XI 1883; †Sofia 27 XII 1963), Bulgarian critic. He inherited the mantle of Missul (Krustev*) as doyen of 'individualist' writers, editing Zlatorog, the authoritative literary monthly of the time, throughout its long run (1920-44). Rejecting tendentious writing, he stimulated a variety of young talents by his constructive and scholarly criticism.

Many arts in Zlatorog, incl.: 'Teatralniyat chovek' (1928); 'Literatura i teatur' (1932); 'Novata literatura' (1937); 'Tvorchestvoto na Yovkov' (1938); 'Ot 1920 nassam' (series).

C. A. Moser, 'Zlatorog and modern Bulgarian letters' in Slavon. Rev. (1963). V.P.

Vātsyāyana (fl. c. 5th century A.D.), Sanskrit author of the Kāmasūtra, the Indian Ars amatoria. It had a great influence on writers of Sanskrit poetry.

Tr. Richard Burton and F. F. Arbuthnott (ed. W. G. Archer, 1963). H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Vaugelas, CLAUDE FAVRE, BARON DE PÉROGES, SIEUR DE (*Meximieu, Ain 6 I 1585; †Paris II 1650), French grammarian. His Remarques sur la langue française (1647) made Vaugelas the contemporary arbiter of correct French. His guide was the 'good usage' of the court rather than erudition or grammatical logic, but his condemnation of popular and provincial terms encouraged artificiality.

Remarques (ed. J. Streicher, 1934). G.B.

Vaughan, HENRY (*Llansantffraed, Brec. 1621; †c. 1646 Catherine Wise, †c. 1655 Elizabeth Wise; †ibid. 23 IV 1695), Anglo-Welsh poet, who lived almost the whole of his life at Llansantffraed. According to Wood*, he spent 'two years or more' at Oxford; then went (c. 1640) to London to read law. He was possibly in Colonel Price's Royalist company at Chester (IX 1645) and showed bitter opposition to the Puritan 'propagators' (1652). He seems to have practised as a physician in the last 20 years of his life. His twin brother, Thomas, was greatly interested in chemistry and Hermetic literature. Occasional references to the latter are to be found in Henry Vaughan's poetry, but mingled, as always, with his Christian outlook. In Vaughan, too, the beauty of nature is subordinated to its mystical significance. His early verse shows echoes of Cleveland*, Habington* and Francis Beaumont*. His later work is strongly influenced by George Herbert*. (For the effect of Welsh verse and language on Vaughan, see Hutchinson, in bibl., ch. XII.) Vaughan's poetic achievement is uneven, but the best of his work in Silex Scintillans is of great intensity and spiritual perception.

Poems, with the tenth satire of Juvenal Englished (1646); Silex Scintillans: Sacred Poems and Private Ejaculations (1650; 2nd ed. 1655; with memoir by H. F. Lyte, 1847; ed. W. A. L. Bettany, 1905); Olor Iscanus, Select Poems and Translations ... (1651; reissued 1679); The Mount of Olives: or, Solitary Devotions ... (1652; ed. L. I. Guiney, 1902); Thalia Rediviva: The Pass-Times and Diversions of a Country Muse ... (1678).—Works (ed. L. C. Martin, 2 vols, 1914; 2nd ed. 1957); Complete Works (ed. A. B. Grosart, 4 vols, 1870-71); Poems (ed. E. K. Chambers, intro. H. C. Beeching, 2 vols, 1896); Poems (ed. I. Gollancz, 1900); Poems (ed. Ernest Rhys, Gregynog, Newtown, 1924); Complete Poetry of H. V. (ed. F. Fogle, New York, 1965).

A. B. Grosart, Wales (1894); K. M. Loudon, Two Mystic Poets (1922); L. R. Merrill, 'V.'s influence upon Wordsworth's poetry' in Mod. Lang. Notes, XXXVIII (1922); R. Sencourt, Out-Flying Philosophy (1925); E. Blunden, On the Poems of H. V. With His Principal Latin Poems Translated Into English Verse (1927); A. C. Judson, 'The sources of H. V.'s ideas concerning God in Nature' in Stud. in Philol., XXIV (1927) and 'H. V. as a nature poet' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XLII (1927); L. C. Martin, 'V. and Cowper' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXII (1927) and 'H. V. and the theme of infancy' in 17th Century Studies Presented to Sir Herbert Grierson (1938); E. Holmes, H. V. and the Hermetic Philosophy (1932); W. O. Clough, 'H. V. and the Hermetic philosophy' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XLVIII (1933); H. R. Walley, 'The strange case of Olor Iscanus' in Rev. Eng. Stud. (1942); E. L. Marilla, 'The significance of H. V.'s literary reputation' in Mod. Lang. Quart., (1944) and A Comprehensive Bibliography of H. V. (Alabama, 1948); F. E. Hutchinson, H. V. A Life and Interpretation (1947); R. Garner, H. V.: Experience and the Tradition (1959); E. C. Pettet, Of Paradise and Light (1960); M. Willy, Three Metaphysical Poets (1961); R. A. Durr, On the Mystical Poetry of H. V. (1962); Louis L. Martz, The Paradise Within: Studies in V., Traherne and Milton (1964). C.P. (M.W.T.)

Vauquelin de la Fresnaye, JEAN (*?Caen 1535 or 1536; †Caen 1606), French poet. He drew on Theocritus* and Virgil* as well as on his French contemporaries of the PLÉIADE in his bucolic poems (Foresteries, 1555). His Satires, in themselves mediocre, established in France the medium of M. Régnier* and Boileau*. At Henri III's command he began c. 1574 the last Art Poétique of the 16th century (pub. 1605); Vauquelin's alone was written in verse (alexandrines). Broadly, it restated in confused form the doctrines of the Pléiade, though with more tolerance towards medieval literature. (See also B. Aneau*; J. Du* Bellay; J. Peletier*; T. Sebillot*.)

Art Poétique (1605; ed. G. Pellissier, 1885); Poésies complètes (1612; ed. J. Travers, 1869).

G.B.

Vauvenargues, LUC DE CLAPIERS, MARQUIS DE (*Aix-en-Provence 6 VIII 1715; †Paris 28 V 1747), French moralist. Vauvenargues' short life was marked by physical suffering and disappointment. Half-crippled in the war of the Austrian Succession, in which he served as a captain, he contracted smallpox and failed in his efforts to obtain a diplomatic post. His writings are marked by a stoical morality derived from his youthful readings of Plutarch* and Seneca* and by a rare sympathy for, and faith in, human nature. His optimism contrasts with the cynicism of another great maxim-writer, La* Rochefoucauld.

Introduction à la connaissance de l'esprit humain, suivie de réflexions et maximes (1746, 1747).—Œuvres (ed. P. Varillon, 3 vols, 1929; ed. H. Bounier, 2 vols, 1968); Réflexions et Maximes (ed. J. R. Charbonne, 1934).

G. Lanson, Le Marquis de V. (1930); F. Vial, Une philosophie et une morale du sentiment: L. de C. Marquis de V. (1938). G.B.

Vaux, THOMAS, 2ND BARON VAUX OF HARROWDEN (*1510; ∞Elizabeth Cheney; †X 1556), English poet. Probably educated at Cambridge. His poems are mostly short lyrics which are marked by an affected tone of melancholy.

J.J.Y.L. (T.P.M.)

The Poems of Lord V. (ed. L. P. Vonalt, 1960); Totiel's Miscellany, II (ed. H. E. Rollins, 1965).

T.P.M.

Vazov, IVAN (*Sopot [now Vazovgrad] 27 VI 1850; †Sofia 22 IX 1921), Bulgaria's 'national author'. Despite his precocious literary bent, his father had him trained for commerce. At 20, leaving for Rumania he joined the Bulgarian emigré revolutionaries in Braila, publishing his first poems there in Periodicheskospisanie. In 1879 he became a judge in Berkovitsa and from 1880 to 1885 was a leading figure in Plovdiv, capital of Eastern Rumelia, where he edited Nauka and other journals with Velichkov*. Opposing S. Stambolov's diktatura, he went into exile (1886–89), composing in Odessa Pod igoto (1894; Under the Yoke, tr. E. Gosse, 1896), Bulgaria's 'national novel'. In this and his memoirs of the 1870s he, like Z. Stoyanov*, fixed for all time the heroic legend of persons and events leading up to Bulgaria's independence in 1878. He returned to edit Dennitsa (1890–91) and became an M.P., then Minister of Education (1897–99), devoting himself thenceforth to his writing.

Vazov's works link the Bulgaria of the 19th-century renaissance with the successes and failures, events and moods in town and country of the new nation in its first four decades of independence. An old-fashioned patriot, he wrote too much for all to be vintage, but he explored a range of language and genres unprecedented in Bulgarian literature and inestimably valuable to it. A warm admirer of Victor Hugo* and Eugène Sue*, he wrote with warmth, humour and sometimes deep feeling, regretting the extent to which devotion to his people excluded 'personal' writing. His personality is however effectively expressed in much of his verse, the memoirs and the travelogues. There have been more brilliant talents, but few would dispute his laureateship in Bulgarian literature.

VERSE: Pryaporets i gusla (Bucharest, 1876); Tugite na Bulgaria (1877); Izbavlenie (1878); Polya i gori (1884); Slivitsa (1886); Zvukove (1893); Skitnishki pesni (1899); Legendi pri Tsarevets (1910); Pesni za Makedonia (1916); Novi ekove (1917); Ne shte zagine and Lyulyaka mi zamirisa (1919).—LONGER POEMS: Zagorka (1883); Epopeya na zabravenite (1893); Gramada (1894).—NOVELS: Mitrofan (1882); Chichovtsi (1885); Nova zemya (1896); Kazalarskata tsaritsa (1903).—STORIES: Razkazi (1891); Videno i chuto (1891); Draski i sharki (2 vols, 1893–95); Pustur syay (1902).—PLAYS: Ruska (1883); Hushove (1894); Slujbogontsi (1903); Borislav (1909); Kum propast (1910).—MEMOIRS: Neotdavna (1881); Nemili nedragi (1883).—TRAVELOGUES: Velika Rilska pustinya (1904); V nedrata na Rodopite (1904).—Coll. works (ed. B. Vazov [brother], incl. notes, diaries, corresp. etc., 100 vols, 1926–37; 20 vols, 1955–57).

K. Krustev, Edin portret (1894); S. Romunski, V.—Jivot i tvorcestvo (1920); Y. Trifonov, I. V. (1920); K. Hristov, I. V. (1920); V. Vassilev, Prirodna u V. (1927); M. Nikolov, I. V. (1928); I. Shishmanov, V.—spomeni i dokumenti (1930); P. Christophorov, La formation d'un écrivain bulgare (Paris, 1938) and Tvorcheskoto razvitiye na V. (1944); M. Arnaudov, I. V. (1939–44) and Iz jivota i poeziata na I. V. (1958); M. Genov, I. V. (1946); N. S. Derjavin, I. V. (1950); S. Chilingirov, I. V., spomeni (1953); E. Konsulova-Yazova, I. V. (1958).—Sbornik I. V. (ed. S. Romunski, 1920); Proslava na I. V. (ed. S. Chilingirov, 1921); I. V. Sbornik (ed. N. Liliev, 1949); I. V. Sbornik (1950). V.P.

Vázquez de Mella, JUAN (*Cangas de Onís, Asturias 1861; †Madrid 26 II 1928), Spanish orator and man of letters. He sat for 25 years in Parliament. A man of brilliant flamboyant oratory, he became the champion of the political school of tradicionalismo. Amongst his works stand out those on regionalism and social problems. R.M.N.

Obras completas (29 vols, 1928–32).

R. García y García de Castro, V. de M. Sus ideas, su persona (1940); F. Gutiérrez Lasanta, J. V. de M. el verbo de la hispanidad (1961).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Vechters or Victorijn, JOAN (*1590; †Amsterdam

1642), Dutch philologist. Brought up in the Amsterdam orphanage, he studied law, was friendly with Vondel*, whom he urged to translate Electra, and belonged to the MUIDERKRING. He wrote a eulogy on Jan Vos* Aran en Titus and a tragedy Goliath (1629; ed. with intro. and notes P. Minderaa, 1963).

G. C. de Waard, 'Het thema en de symboliek van Victorijns Goliath' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LXIII (1970).
A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Vedel, ANDERS SØRENSEN (*Vejle 9 XI 1542; ∞1577 Marine Hansdatter Svaning, ∞1581 Mette Hansdatter; †Ribe 13 II 1616), Danish historian. During his schooldays he was influenced by the new humanistic ideas, and in Copenhagen he made the acquaintance of the astronomer Tycho Brahe with whom he travelled on the Continent. In 1575 Vedel published his translation of Saxo's* Gesta Danorum, and in 1591 the first printed collection of Danish ballads. He was commissioned to write a Danish history as a continuation of Saxo's work, but never went beyond the very thorough preparatory investigations.

Saxos Danmarkskrønike (1575); It hundrede udvalde danske Viser (1591); Om den danske Krønike at beskrive (1581).

C. F. Wegener, Om A. S. V. (1846); A. Karker, A. S. V. (1956); G. Albeck, A. S. V. (1959).

E.B.

Vedel, VALDEMAR (*Copenhagen 9 XI 1865; ∞Simona Friboline Neukirch, ∞1941 Ellen Alfhiid Lykke; †Birkerød 16 II 1942), Danish literary scholar, originally a law student; Professor of comparative literature at Copenhagen 1911–33.

Studier over Guldalderen i dansk Digtning (1890); Fra Italien (1892); Dante (1892); Svensk Romantik (1894); Holger Drachmann (1909); Middelalderlige Kulturidealer (4 vols, 1901–11); Barok i italiensk og spansk Aandsliv (1918); Menneskelighed (1920); Renæssancens Frembrud (1922); Firsernes Førere (1923); Højrenæssancen syd og nord for Alperne (1923); Corneille og hans Samtid (1927); Molière (1929); Racine (1932); Liv og Kunst (2 vols, 1949).

Festskrift til V. V. (1935).

E.B.

Veen, ADRIAAN VAN DER (*Venray 16 XII 1916), Dutch critic; at first a writer of surrealist short stories, then of outspokenly realistic, and finally autobiographical, though certainly not apologetic, novels and stories.

Oefeningen (1938); Geld speelt de groote rol (1938); Wij hebben vleugels (1946); Zuster ter zee (1949); Het wilde feest (1952); The Intruder, tr. J. S. Holmes and Hans van Marle, (1958); Alibi voor het onvolkomen hart (1953); Spelen in het donker (1955); De man met de zilveren hoed

(1957); Doen alsof (1960); Make Believe, tr. Roy Edwards, 1963; De boze vrienden (1962); Kom mij niet te na (1968); Vriendelijke vreemdeling (1969).

Marten Mooij, A. van der V. (1965). J.J.O.

Veen, JAN VAN DER (*Haarlem; †Deventer 1659), Dutch poet and apothecary, published a collection of emblems, Zinnebeelden oft Adams-Appel (1642), a farce on the first Anglo-Dutch war, Nikkerspraetje, 162 Raadtselen met berijmde antwoorden (1653) and patriotic songs, Zegezangen voor Frederik Hendrik and Verkeersspel (1631).
A.M.B.W.

Veer, GERRIT DE, Dutch seafarer, described his journeys to the North in 1594, 1595 and 1596–97 in Waerachtighe beschryvinghe van de drie seylae-gien by Noorden (1598; Eng. tr. W. Philipp, 1609).

Ed. S. P. L'Honoré Naber in Linschoten-Vereeniging, XIV, XV (1917); Eng. tr. repr. Ch. T. Beke (Hakluyt Soc., 1853). J.J.M.

Veer, HENDRIK DE, pseud. VESALIUS MOBACHUS (*Sommelsdijk 23 XI 1829; ∞1855 Sara Tijl; †Rhenen 11 XII 1890), Dutch parson, writer and journalist. Without importance as a novelist, he was admired for his sketches, Trouwingh voor 't jonge Holland (2 vols, 1868–72) and Kerstvertellingen (1878).

NOVELS: Van gelijke beweging als gij (1859); Frans Holster (1871); Malthusia (1880).

J. te Winkel in Vaderlandsche Letteroefeningen (1869); E. J. Potgieter, E. J. P.'s verspreide en nagelaten werken . . . Kritische Studiën, III (ed. J. C. Zimmerman, 1875–77); J. ten Brink, Geschiedenis der Noord Nederlandsche letteren in de 19e eeuw, III (with biblio.; enlarged ed., 1887–89).
J.W.W.

Vega, ALONSO DE LA (†before 1566), Spanish dramatist. He wrote three rather poor plays in prose. The best, La Duquesa de la rosa, derives ultimately from Bandello*. Timoneda* printed them in 1566.

Tres comedias (ed. M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Gesellschaft für romanische Literatur, Dresden, VI, 1905).

J. P. W. Crawford, Spanish Drama Before Lope de Vega (1937).
E.M.W.

Vega, GARCILASO DE LA: see Garcilaso de la Vega.

Vega, VENTURA DE LA (*Buenos Aires 14 VII 1807; ∞Manuela de Lema; †Madrid 29 XI 1865), Spanish poet and dramatist. He became teacher of Isabel II, director of the national theatre and an academician. The bulk of his poetical work is neo-classical in style. His best play, however,

El hombre de mundo (1845), is a good, witty portrayal of middle-class society, which foregrounds the technique of Ayala* and Benavente*. He wrote the libretto for Barbieri's* zarzuela, Jugar con fuego.

Obras poéticas (Paris, 1866); Obras escogidas (1874).

Conde de Cheste, 'Elogio fúnebre' in Memorias Acad. Esp., II (1866); N. Alonso Cortés, Artículos historicoliterarios (1935); J. K. Leslie, V. de la V. and the Spanish Theatre, 1820-1865 (1940); J. Montero Alonso, V. de la V., su vida y su tiempo (1951). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Vega Carpio, LOPE FÉLIX DE (*Madrid 1562; ∞1588 Isabel de Urbina [†1595], ∞1598 Juana de Guardo [†1613]; †ibid. 1635), Spanish dramatist, poet and novelist. After a precocious boyhood he entered the service of the Bishop of Ávila; later he served as a volunteer at the conquest of Terceira. His irregular love-affairs started early: María de Aragón (1578), Elena Osorio (†1583). He was banished from Madrid for his libels against Elena's family but returned to carry off his first wife; after marrying her, he served in the Armada. He lived for two years in Valencia and then became secretary to the Duke of Alba. After his return to Madrid (1595) he began an affair with Micaela de Luján, which lasted until 1607, when he began relations with Jerónima de Burgos. In 1605 he met the Duke of Sessa, who became his master and patron in 1607. During these years he was bitterly attacked by Góngora* and by critics who favoured the classic type of drama. In 1614 he became a priest. Two years later he met Marta de Nevares, with whom he fell in love; his affair with her lasted until her death in 1632, although she was then blind and often mad. His last years were much saddened by the death of his son and the abduction of his daughter.

Lope's love-affairs directly influenced his writings. Elena Osorio appears in his early ballads and is the subject of his late novel, La Dorotea. Other reflections of his private life recur continually in plays, poems, novels. The range of his non-dramatic works is enormous: an epic about Drake (1598), long poems about St Isidro (1599) and Mary Queen of Scots (1627), a sequel to Ariosto* and an imitation of Tasso* (1604), a pastoral novel (1598), a religious pastoral novel about the shepherds of Bethlehem (1612), short stories, an imitation of Heliodorus*, mythological poems, a burlesque epic about cats (1634), epistles, odes, sonnets and ballads. His more elaborate poems, though not completely successful, contain some very good writing; his lyrics are often exquisite. He knew how to recapture the spirit of popular lyricism and he had great literary skill. His religious lyrics and sonnets are among the finest in Spanish. La Dorotea (1632), a dialogue novel in imitation of the Celestina*, is a masterpiece.

Lope established the form of the Spanish comedia: three acts, a variety of metres, mixture of comic and tragic effects. The themes are usually concerned with love and honour, loyalty and religion; character is subordinated to plot; tragedy generally leads to a happy ending. His peasant plays are very good. His polymetrical technique closely resembles the moods of non-dramatic poetry, and ballads and traditional lyrics were easily assimilated. He claimed to have written more than 1,800 plays, but of the 500 surviving plays attributed to him, a good many are spurious or were revised by other hands. His best plays are carefully constructed and very well written. The following list will show the variety and excellence of his talent: El acero de Madrid (comedy; ?1610), La buena guarda (religious; 1610), Peribáñez (peasant honour; ?1610), La dama boba (comedy; 1613), Fuente-Ovejuna (peasant revolt; ?1613), El caballero de Olmedo (tragedy; ?1623), El castigo sin venganza (tragedy; 1631). E.M.W.

Colección de las obras sueltas (21 vols, 1776-79); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXVIII.—L. de V. Studies 1937-62 (Toronto, 1964; crit. biblio.); R. L. Grismer, Bibliography of L. de V. (1965).—Facs. ed. of La Circe etc. (1935); La Dorotea (ed. A. Castro, n.d.); Poesías líricas (sel. ed. J. F. Montesinos, 2 vols, 1927-41 and 1968); Jerusalén conquistada (ed. J. de Entrambasaguas, 2 vols, 1935); Epistolario (ed. A. G. de Amezúa, 4 vols, 1935-43); La Dorotea (ed. E. S. Morby, 1958).—DRAMAS: Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIV, XXXIV, XLI, LII and CLVII (22 vols, in progr.); Obras (ed. M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 15 vols, 1890-1913); Obras (ed. E. Cotarelo et al., 13 vols, 1916-30).—Five Plays (tr. J. Booty, 1961).

R. Schevill, The Dramatic Art of L. de V. (Berkeley, 1918); H. A. Rennert and A. Castro, La vida de L. de V. C. (1919; repr. 1967); M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Estudios sobre el teatro de L. de V. (6 vols, 1919-27); J. F. Montesinos, Teatro antiguo español, IV-VII (1922-35); W. L. Fichter, L. de V.'s El castigo del discreto Together With a Study of Conjugal Honor in His Theater (1925); K. Vossler, L. de V. y su tiempo (1935; 2nd ed. 1940); R. Menéndez Pidal, De Cervantes y L. de V. (1935); S. G. Morley and C. Bruerton, The Chronology of L. de V.'s Comedias (1940; Span. tr. 1968); A. Zamora Vicente, L. de V., su vida y su obra (1961); N. Salomon, Recherches sur le thème paysan dans la 'comedia' au temps de L. de V. (1965); F. C. Hayes, L. de V. (New York, 1967). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Vega y Oreiro, RICARDO DE LA (*Madrid 7 II 1841; †ibid. 22 VI 1910), Spanish playwright, son of Ventura de la Vega*. He is the undisputed master of the género chico, short plays dealing exclusively with Madrid popular types and customs. Never before were libretti so well combined with music to catch the carefree, colourful life of the city. Amongst his most famous, La Verbena de la Paloma (1894; music by Bretón) is a gem.

El Señor Luis el Tumbón o despacho de huevos frescos (1880); La Canción de la Lola (1880; music by Valverde y Chueca); Pepa la Frescachona o el colegial desenvuelto (1886).

E. de Benot, Estudio sobre los sainetes de R. de la V. (1910); M. Zurita, Historia del Género Chico (1920); J. Deleito y Piñuela, Origen y apogeo del género chico (1949); P. Lozano Guirao, Vida y obras de R. de la V. (1959).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Vegetius (FLAVIUS V. RENATUS) (fl. c. A.D. 400), Roman military writer. His Epitoma rei militaris in four books is mainly a collection of excerpts from earlier historians and military writers. The work is devoid of literary merit, but contains a good deal of material not elsewhere extant. Vegetius also wrote on veterinary medicine.

J.A.W.

Epitoma rei militaris (ed. C. Lang, 2nd ed. 1885, repr. 1967; tr. J. Clarke in Roots of Strategy: A Collection of Military Classics, ed. T. R. Phillips, 1941); P. Vegeti Renati digestorum artis mulomedicinae libri (ed. F. Lommatzsch, 1903).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Vegio, MAFFEO (*Lodi 1407; †Rome 1458), Italian humanist. Chiefly remembered for his educational treatise De educatione liberorum (1445-48), one of the most Christian of the Renaissance works on education; he also wrote on archaeology and a 13th book for the Aeneid.

De educatione liberorum (Bks 1-3 ed. W. Fanning, Washington, 1933; Bks 4-6 ed. Sullivan, ibid., 1936); Opera (1613).

A. Cox Brinton, Maphaeus Vegius and His Thirteenth Book of the Aeneid (1930); G. Saitta, Il pensiero italiano nell'umanesimo e nel rinascimento, I (1949).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Veigelsberg, HUGÓ: see Ignotus.

Veinberg, PETER ISAYEVICH: see Weinberg, PETER ISAYEVICH.

Veldeke(n): see Heinrich von Veldeke.

Velden, WILLEM CORNELISZ. VAN (*1601; ∞Elsje van Houweningen; †The Hague 1663), Dutch poet, secretary to Hugo de Groot* during his imprisonment. He wrote a drama, Reinherde Treurende (1640), and a number of poems, some in good alexandrines.

Versakinghe syns selfs (1633); Hoftapiit tot cieraedt van de nieuwe gewelfde staetzael in 't vrie Batavia (1659).

A.M.B.W.

Veslavín (DANIEL ADAM Z VELESVAVÍNA) (*Prague 31 VIII 1546; †ibid. 18 X 1599), Czech humanist. Veslavín is principally remembered as the characteristic representative of the 'golden age' of the Czech language, its final phase before the decadence of the 17th and 18th centuries. More important than Veslavín's original historical writings were his dictionaries, e.g. Silva quadrilinguis (1598).

M. Daniele Adama z Veleslavína práce původní (ed. J. Rozum, 1853).

H. Brauner, Die tschechische Lexikographie des 16. Jh. (1939); M. Kopecký, D. A. z V. (1962).
R.A.

Vélez de Guevara, JUAN (*Madrid 1611; ∞María López de Palacios; †ibid. 27 XI 1675), Spanish poet and dramatist, son of Luis Vélez*. Juan wrote plays for the court theatre and occasional verse.

Los celos hacen estrellas (ed. J. E. Varey, N. D. Shergold and J. Sage, London, 1970; only ed. of 17th-cent. zarzuela which incl. text, music and contemporary illus. of décor).

J.E.V.

Vélez de Guevara, LUIS (*Écija 1579; †Madrid 10 XI 1644), Spanish dramatist and novelist. He studied at the University of Osuna, was for a few years page to the Archbishop of Seville and later in the household of various nobles in Valladolid and Madrid. He was appointed usher to Prince Charles of England when he visited Madrid in 1623. Afterwards he obtained the same position in the palace of Philip IV. He married four times, and very often he suffered from poverty.

Vélez began to write for the theatre before 1614 and is said to have composed over 400 plays, of which about 80 survive. He copied the manner of Lope de Vega*, whose plays he sometimes refurbished, and he collaborated with other dramatists such as Calderón*, Rojas* Zorrilla and Mira* de Amescua. His best plays rival Lope's: Reinar después de morir is a pathetic play about Inés de Castro, wife of Prince Peter of Portugal; La serrana de la Vera is the lively story of a female bandit. His satirical fantasy in prose, El diablo cojuelo, written in imitation of Quevedo's* Sueños, is the source of Lesage's* Le Diable boiteux. In his own day he was famous for his conversational wit.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLV; La serrana de la Vera in Teatro español antiguo, I (1916); El rey en su imaginación, ibid., III (1920); El diablo cojuelo (ed. F. Rodríguez Marín, 1918, 1922); Reinar después de morir y El diablo está en Cantillana (ed. M. Muñoz Cortés, 1948); El embuste acreditado (ed. A. G. Reichenberger, 1956).

E. Cotarelo y Mori, 'L. V. de G. y sus obras dramáticas' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Esp., III, IV (1917); F. E. Spencer and R. Schevill,

The Dramatic Works of L. V. de G. (Berkeley, 1937). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Velichkov, KONSTANTIN (*Pazarjik 1855; †Grenoble 3 XI 1907), Bulgarian writer and politician. Educated in France, he was a close friend of I. Vazov*, with whom he collaborated on periodicals in Plovdiv (Nauka, 1881; Zora, 1885) and a literary anthology. He was Minister of Education in 1881 and 1895–97. Romantic and sensitive, he wrote fine verse as well as travelogues, essays and memoirs of Turkish imprisonment. He edited the journal Letopisi (1899–1903) and translated from Dante* and Shakespeare*.

Tsarigradski soneti (1880); Tugi i radosti (1881); Bulgarska hristomatia (1884); Jertvi i otmushtenie (1885); Pisma ot Rim (1895); V temnitsa (1899).—Coll. works (ed. I. Vazov, 9 vols, 1911–15); sel. works (ed. S. Vassilev, 1956).

N. Atanassov, V. Pomennik (1910); S. Vassilev, K. V. (1947) and K. V. lit.-kriticheski ocherk (1960). V.P.

Velleius Paterculus, GAIUS (*c. 20 B.C.; †after A.D. 31), Roman historian, wrote a history of Rome in two books down to A.D. 30. For the civil wars Velleius claims to draw upon works of Hortensius*, Cato* and Augustus. The style is brilliant but over-rhetorical. His work has survived in one very corrupt MS. J.A.W.

Eds: C. Halm (2nd ed. rev. C. Stegmann von Pritzwald, 1933; repr. 1965; rev. with adds H. D. Blume, 1968); R. Ellis (1928); tr. F. W. Shipley (1924). J.D.

Velluti, DONATO (*Florence 6 VII 1313; ∞1341 Bice Covoni; †ibid. 1 VII 1370), Italian chronicler. Of merchant stock, he studied law at Bologna (1329–38) and later entered Florentine public life; Prior (1341, 1342, 1356); gonfalonier of justice (1351, 1370). Velluti wrote (1367–70) a lively and colourful Cronica domestica, 'the history of his family in relation to the political fortunes of the city' (Russo), containing a notable historical account of the years 1342–70.

Crit. ed. I. Del Lungo and G. Volpi (1914); Cronisti del Trecento (ed. R. Palmarocchi, 1935). M.W.

Velthem, LODEWIJK VAN (fl. c. 1300), Dutch poet, vicar at Zichem near Diest in 1304, parish priest at Velthem near Louvain in 1312, chiefly known as the writer who continued Jacob van Maerlant's* Spiegel Historiael and Merlijn (under the title Coninc Arthur's boec) and also as the author of a vast compilation of the Lancelot legends.

Continuation of Spiegel Historiael ed. I. le Long (1727) and H. van der Linden, W. de Vreese, P. de Keyser and A. van Loey (1906–38); Merlijn

(ed. J. van Vloten, 1880–82); the Lancelot-compilation ed. W. J. A. Jonckbloet (1846–49); Lanceloet en het hert met de witte voet (ed. M. Draak, 4th ed. 1970).

J. te Winkel, Ontwikkelingsgang d. Nederl. Lett., I (2nd ed. 1922); F. L. Ganshof in Album-Baur, I (1948); M. Draak, De Middelnederl. vertalingen van de Proza-Lancelot (1954).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Vel'tman, ALEXANDER FOMICH (*St Petersburg 8 VII 1800; †2 II 1860), Russian author, historian and archaeologist of Swedish extraction. His historical and archaeological writings have no value nowadays, but his narratives are of great interest—partly because they reflect the influence of Laurence Sterne* on Russian Romanticism of the 1830s. He was also a precursor of Dostoyevsky*, though without his depth.

Strannik (1831); Muromskie lesa (1831); Koshchey bessmertny (1833); Salomeya (1848).—Sobranie sochineniy (9 vols, 1925–27); Prikl'yucheniya (1933).

L. Buchstab, 'Pervye romany Vel'tmana' in Russkaya proza (1926); Z. S. Efimova, 'A. F. V.' in Russkiy romantizm (ed. A. Beletsky, 1927); V. F. Pereverzev, U istokov russkogo real'nogo romana (1937). J.L.

Vemana (probably 15th century), Telugu poet. He composed a śatakamu (century) of mystical advaita poems that are widely quoted. J.R.M.

Venantius Fortunatus: see Fortunatus, VENANTIUS HONORIUS CLEMENTIANUS.

Venegas del Busto, ALEJO (*Toledo ?1493; †after 1543), Spanish humanist and religious writer. He studied and taught in Toledo. His chief work is a treatise on death, but he also wrote works on orthography, on dialogues and on the natural world. His style was pure.

Agonía del tránsito de la muerte in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XVI. E.M.W.

Venevitinov, DIMITRY VLADIMIROVICH (*Moscow 14 IX 1805; †St Petersburg 15 III 1827), Russian poet. Influenced by the German idealistic philosophy, he wrote in a metaphysical vein, but with a strong sense of reality. His poetic technique and diction were, in spite of his youth, at the high level typical of the 'golden age' of Russian poetry.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (1934).

A. P. Pyatkovsky, Odoyevsky i V. (3rd ed. 1901); P. N. Sakulin, Iz istorii russkogo idealizma (1913); S. Spitzer, 'Materialy dlya biografii Venevitinova' in Golos minuvshogo, I. J.L.

Veneziano, ANTONIO (*Monreale 7 I 1543; †Palermo 19 VIII 1593), Sicilian poet. Bold, dashing and romantic, Veneziano led an adventurous life, in and out of prison. He knew Cervantes*, was captured by Algerian pirates (1578) and died when the prison at Castellamare was blown up. A prolific and facile writer, he enjoyed an immense reputation for his poetry in Sicilian dialect, especially Celia, a poem in octaves dedicated to his lady. He also composed biting epigrams and many types of canzoni. His work lacks personal feeling and is full of Petrarchan conceits but has a certain popular freshness and grace.

Opere (1861); Ottave (sel. with Ital. tr. A. Rigoli, intro. L. Sciascia, 1967); V. is also represented in Lirici del Cinquecento (ed. G. Davico Bonino, 2nd ed. 1968).

G. Pitre, 'A. V. nella leggenda popolare siciliana' in Archivio storico siciliano, new ser., XIX (1894); G. Millunzi, 'A. V.', ibid.; S. Vento, Petrarchismo e concettismo in A. V. (1917); F. Biondillo, Saggi e ricerche (1926).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Vengeance de Notre Seigneur Jésus-Christ sur les Juifs par Vespasien et Titus, two related French Mystery Plays. The first, of some 14,000 lines divided into three days, follows the Arras* Passion in the same 15th-century MS and is signed by Marcadé*. The second, anonymous, is known from early printed versions (1491 on) and contains some 22,000 lines also to be performed on three days. Both dwell gloatingly on the physical horrors suffered by the Jewish people as a punishment for crucifying Christ and link the New Testament story with Roman history. This striking example of late medieval anti-semitism had at least 12 known performances in various versions between 1396 and 1540. There is no modern edition.

J.-M. Richard, ed. of Arras Passion (1893); L. Petit de Julleville, Les Mystères, II (1880).

G.B.

Vengerov, SEMĖN AFANASYEVICH (*1855; †1921), Russian literary historian and critic. Anxious to stress the importance of Russian literature in its social-ideological role, he published a number of monographs and two valuable reference works—both unfinished: Kritiko-bibliograficheskiy slovar' russkikh pisateley i uchënykh (6 vols, 1889–1904), and Istochniki slovary russkikh pisateley (2 vols, 1900, 1917). He edited several collected works, including those of Pushkin*, and a Russian translation of Byron*.

Sobranie sochineniy (5 vols, 1911–13). J.L.

Vennberg, KARL GUNNAR (*Blädinge II IV 1910; †1938 Anna-Lisa Lindegren), Swedish poet and critic. Together with Erik Lindegren* considered the leader of the modernistic 'Forties Group' (Fyrtialisterna). His work is sceptical, ironic, extremely pessimistic, intellectual and often deliberately obscure. Vennberg has greatly influenced Swedish letters, introducing in his essays and translations T. S. Eliot*, Kafka*, Sartre*, Malraux* and W. Faulkner*.

Kritiskt 40-tal (1948); Dikter 1944–1960 (1962). K. E. Lagerlöf, Den unge K. V. (1967). I.S.

Venne, ADRIAEN VAN DE (*Delft 1589; †The Hague 12 XI 1662), Dutch painter and poet, studied at Leiden, moved to Middelburg in 1619 and there co-operated with his brother, the publisher. He illustrated Cats* Sinne en Minne-beelden, supplied drawings for De Zeeuwsche Nachtegael, in which appeared two of his poems, one psalm and Meyclacht (1623). Theoretically he was in favour of pure, clear Dutch, but in practice he is involved and artificial.

A.M.B.W.

Tafereel van Sinne-mal (1623); Sinnevonck op den Hollandschen Turf (1634); Hollandsche Sinnedroom op het Nieuw Wijs-mal van den ouden Italiaansche Smit (1634); Tafereel van den belacchende Werelt (1635).

D. Franken, A. van de V. (1878); A. Ising, 'Een schilder-dichter uit de XVIIde eeuw' in De Gids, LIII (1889). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Veragüe, PEDRO DE (15th century), Spanish poet. His Doctrina de la discrición (Tractado de la doctrina) combines a verse catechism with aphoristic moral advice, drawing heavily on the Llibre de bons amonestaments of Anselm Turmeda*.

R. A. del Piero, Dos escritores de la baja Edad Media castellana (P. de V. y el Arcipreste de Talavera . . .) (1971); F. Rico, 'P. de V. y fra Anselm Turmeda' in Bull. Hispanic Stud., XLIX (1972). A.D.D.

Verbitskaya, ANASTASIYA ALEKSEYEVNA (*1861; †1928), Russian author. Her principal novel, Klyuchi schastiya (5 vols, 1909–13), was an outstanding success.

K. Chukovsky, Kniga o sovremennykh pisatelyakh (1914). J.L.

Vercors, pseud. of JEAN BRULLER (*Paris 26 II 1902), French writer. Vercors has been a typographer and also an outstanding illustrator. During the German occupation of France he founded (1942) the clandestine Éditions de Minuit to which he contributed a long short story, Le silence de la mer, the story of a 'good German', which had a great influence on the French national conscience under Pétain. After the war he championed humanistic values in a series of philosophic tales.

Le silence de la mer (pub. secretly, 1942; 1st authorized ed. 1945; crit. stud. P. Hoy, 1967; Put Out the Light, tr. C. Connolly, 1944); La marche à l'étoile (pub. secretly 1943; 1st authorized ed. 1945; Guiding Star, tr. E. Sutton, 1946); Les armes de la nuit (1947); Le songe, Le sable du temps, Les mots (1945-46); Les yeux et la lumière (1948); Plus ou moins homme (1950); La puissance du jour (1951); Les animaux dénaturés (1955); Sur ce rivage, I: Le périple (1958), II: M. Prousthe (1958); La liberté de décembre (1960); Paths of Love, tr. R. Barisse, 1961); Sylva (1961; Eng. tr. idem, 1962); Zoo ou l'assassin philanthrope (play; 1963); Quota (1966); Le radeau de la Méduse (1969).—La bataille du silence (autobiog.; 1967; Eng. tr. R. Barisse, 1968).

L. Parrot, L'intelligence en guerre (1945).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Verdaguer, JACINT (*Folguerolas 1845; †1902), Catalan poet. Of peasant origin, he studied in Barcelona to become a priest. He was in constant conflict with his Bishop and was suspended for a time. To him is largely due the consolidation of the Catalan renaissance, perfecting and expanding the spirit of the Jocs Florals. His outstanding contribution was the renewal of the poetical language with a wealth of words and phrases used by the peasantry in connection with nature and country life, in contrast to the archaizing tendency previously. His best-known work is the great epic poem L'Atlàntida (1877), which tells the mythological story of the opening of the Straits of Gibraltar by Hercules and the sinking of the fabulous continent Atlantis. His other great epic poem, Canigó (1886), describes the reconquest of the Catalan Pyrenees from the Arabs. These works are notable more for their grandiose sweep and rhetorical force than for subtlety of expression, but Verdaguer had a genuine feeling for the geological and cosmic effects of nature. He was also remarkable for his mystical poems of simple Franciscan or folk-lore inspiration, such as his Idil·lis i Cants místics (1885), Jesús Infant (1896), Flors del Calvari (1896). He was a close friend of Mistral* whose Provençal poem Nerto he translated into Catalan.

Obres completes (1905); Antologia poètica (sel.; intro. C. Riba, 1949). J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Verde, JOSÉ JOAQUIM CESÁRIO (*Lisbon 1855; †1886), Portuguese poet. His work consists of a relatively small number of lyrics, collected posthumously in O livro de Cesário Verde (1887), a work that marks a welcome reaction against the pretentious rhetoric common to much 19th-century Portuguese verse. His fine sensibility, imaginative presentation of everyday reality and social awareness make him one of the most original and attractive figures in modern Portuguese poetry.

Obra completa (ed. J. Serrão, 1964).

J. Serrão, C. V.: interpretação, poesias dispersas e cartas (2nd ed. 1961).

T.P.W.

Verdugo y Castilla, ALFONSO, CONDE DE TORRE-PALMA (*Alcalá la Real, Jaén 3 IX 1706; †Turin 1767), Spanish poet and diplomat. At first he followed the baroque intricacies of 17th-century poetry; later, 18th-century neo-classicism. His best work, however, is that in which he foreshadows the Romantic treatment of certain themes—ruins, death etc. In El Deucalión and in El diluvio there are passages of great expressive power.

El Deucalión in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIX; Poestas, ibid., LXI.

L. A. Cueto, 'Bosquejo históricocrítico de la poesía castellana en el siglo XVIII' in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXI.

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Veresayev, V., pseud of VIKENTY VIKENTYEVICH SMIDOVICH (*Tula 1867; †Moscow 1946), Russian author of Polish extraction. He began writing in the 1890s, became a Socialist and in most of his narratives tried to explore the mentality of perplexed intellectuals. A physician by profession, he published in 1901 his Zapiski vracha ('A Doctor's Sketches'). His Soviet novels—V tupike (1922; The Deadlock, tr. N. Wisotzky and C. Coventry, 1927), Na povorote (1927) and Sestry (1933)—were notable for their truthfulness and sincerity. Although a Marxist himself, he was objective enough to see the other side in its true light. Among his non-fiction works is a long (and not always reliable) study of Tolstoy*, Dostoyevsky* and Nietzsche*, a book on Gogol*, and a book on Pushkin* as seen by those who had known him personally.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (11 vols, 1928-29); Vospominaniya (3rd ed. 1946).—The Sisters (tr. J. Soskice, 1934).

A. V. Lunacharsky, Etyudy (1922); S. Vrzosek, Zhizn' i tvorchestvo Veresayeva (1930). J.L.

Verga, GIOVANNI (*Catania 2 IX 1840; †ibid. 27 I 1922), Italian gentleman writer. Foremost among the Italian school of realism (VERISMO), Verga was influenced by French Naturalism, through the agency of his friend Luigi Capuana*. His early novels, however, Una peccatrice (1866), Storia di una capinera (1871), Eva (1873), Tigre reale (1873) and Eros (1875), fashionable stories of all-consuming, ill-fated passion, gave little indication of his future achievement as a realist. A short story, Nedda (1874), ushers in the Sicilian village and peasant life which is to be Verga's new subject-matter in the stories of Vita dei campi (1880) and Novelle rusticane (1883) and the novels I Malavoglia (1881) and Mastro-Don Gesualdo (1889); but these, like Verga's equally stark tales of low life in Milan, Per le vie (1883) and Vagabondaggio (1887), won scant or superficial attention from the narcissistic literary establishment and reading public.

Verga perfects a technique of rigorous impersonality, whereby the story seems to tell itself, or the village community to tell its own story in a 'choral' polyphony of direct and indirect speech which, often despite first appearances, achieves effects of extraordinary concentration and power. Verga's style, quite unliterary, is thus the first, and still the most, successful medium for thoroughgoing realism in Italian literature, skilfully adapting the forms of standard Italian to convey the outlook of his vernacular speakers. Invariably tragic, his plots gradually evolve from catastrophes of dogged heroism to a long-drawn-out process of defeat, dishonour and despair. The two 'veristic' novels were conceived as part of a cycle describing the tragedies of individuals, drawn from each social level in turn, who come to grief, through social and economic stress, out of 'a desire to better themselves or a vague yearning for the unknown'. The cycle remained unfinished because of Verga's incapacity to present satisfactorily the psychology of more sophisticated characters.

Verga also tried some plays, but lapsed into almost total 'silence' for the last 20 years of his life. The story Cavalleria rusticana, recast as a play, was the basis of the opera by Mascagni.

Amore e patria (wr. 1856; unpub.); I carbonari della montagna (1861); Sulle lagune (1863); Il marito di Elena (1882); Ricordi del capitano d'Arce (1891); Don Candeloro e c. (1894).—Teatro (1962).

L. Russo, G. V. (1920; rev. 1947); A. Momigliano, V. narratore (1923); T. G. Bergin, G. V. (in Eng.; 1931); G. Cattaneo, G. V. (1963); G. Cecchetti, Il V. maggiore (1968).—G. Raya, Un secolo di bibliografia vergiana (1960); G. Santangelo, Storia della critica vergiana (1962). J.G.-R.

Vergani, ORIO POLONIO (*Milan 6 II 1899; †ibid. 6 IV 1960), Italian novelist, short-story writer, playwright and journalist. Before the Second World War Vergani was for many years foreign correspondent of Il Corriere della Sera. His humanity and sympathy with the oppressed are evident in Io povero negro (1928) and Levar del sole (1933). La via nera (1938) describes his travels in Abyssinia.

Un giorno della vita (novel; 1942).—SHORT STORIES: Soste del capogiro (1927); Domenica al mare (1931); Basso profondo e altre fantasie (1939); Udienza a porte chiuse (1957).—Il cammino sulle acque (play; 1927). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Vergil, POLYDOR (*Urbino c. 1470; †ibid. 18 IV 1555), Italian ecclesiastic who held appointments in England and anticipated Erasmus* in his Adagia Sacra. Vergil is of importance in English literature for his Anglica Historia; through the virtual translation by Hall* it influenced Shakespeare*, and the Privy Council enacted that it should be read in schools (1582).

The Anglica Historia of P. V., 1485–1537 (ed. and tr. D. Hay, Camden Soc., 1950).

D. Hay, P. V. (1952). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Vergilius: see Virgil.

Verhaeren, ÉMILE ADOLPHE GUSTAVE (*St-Amand-lez-Puers 21 V 1855; †1891 Marthe Massin; †Rouen 26 XI 1916), Belgian poet, playwright and critic. Though called to the Bar, Verhaeren gave up law to become a prominent Jeune Belgique writer, expressing his exuberant Flemish temperament in French. A receptive imagination led him to experiment widely with style and metre. Frankly naturalistic in Les flamandes (1883), coldly Parnassian in Les moines (1886), morbidly introspective in Les débâcles (1888), he turned to Symbolism and free verse with Les villages illusoires (1895). Meanwhile, an idyllic marriage inspired the refreshing love-lyrics, Les heures claires.

Les rythmes souverains (1910) reveal him as an exalted epic poet, a fervent apostle of materialistic progress. The European counterpart of Whitman*, he adds irregularities of versification and vocabulary. An indifferent playwright, he was a shrewd art critic. The influence of England, where he was a frequent visitor, is evident in much of his work. Albert I granted him his friendship, and his last significant volume, Toute la Flandre (1911), won for him the unofficial status of poet laureate.

VERSE: Les soirs (1888; Eng. tr. J. Murphy, New York, 1918); Les campagnes hallucinées (1893); Les villes tentaculaires (1895); Les heures claires (1896; Eng. tr. F. S. Flint, 1916); Les forces tumultueuses (1902); Les heures d'après-midi (1905; The Sunlit Hours, tr. C. Murphy, New York, 1917); La multiple splendeur (1906); Les rythmes souverains (1910); Les heures du soir (1911; Eng. tr. F. S. Flint, 1916); Toute la Flandre (1911); La Belgique sanglante (1915; Belgium's Agony, tr. M. Sadleir, 1915); Les ailes rouges de la guerre (1916); Les flammes hautes (1917).—PLAYS: Les aubes (1898; The Dawn, tr. A. Symons, 1898); Le cloître (1900; The Cloister, tr. Osman Edwards, 1915); Hélène de Sparte (1909; Eng. tr. J. Bithell, 1916); Philippe II (1910; Eng. tr. F. S. Flint, 1916).

P. Mansell-Jones, E. V., A Study in the Development of His Art and Ideas (1926); M. Sadleir, Things Past (1944). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Verhagen, HANS (*Vlissingen 3 III 1939), Dutch poet, typical of the 1960s, writing an unpoetic type of poetry which oscillates between a cool report of painful personal experiences and Pop art.

Rozen en motoren (1963); Sterren, cirkels, bellen (1968). J.J.O.

Verino (VIERI), UGOLINO (*Florence I 1438; †ibid. 10 V 1516), Italian humanist and poet. He wrote Latin verse of religious inspiration and a collection of love elegies (Flametta, 1463). Best known is his history of Florence.

De Illustratione urbis Florentinae (Paris, 1583); Poemata (1679); Flametta (crit. ed. M. Men-caraglia, 1940).

A. Lazzari, U. e Michele V. (1897). C.Dr.

Veríssimo, ÉRICO (*Cruz Alta, Rio Grande do Sul 17 XII 1905), Brazilian novelist. Initially his work is centred on the urban bourgeoisie of Southern Brazil. Success came early, though his relatively conformist views on politics and literature alienated the avant-garde. Wider recognition attended his trilogy O tempo e o vento, a vast and well-documented study of the members of the Terra-Cambará family, and constituting an intelligent and imaginative solution to the problem of writing a family saga.

Clarissa (1932); Caminhos cruzados (1935; trs: Crossroads, New York, 1943; Crossroads and Destinies, London, 1956); Música ao longe (1935); Um lugar ao sol (1936); Olhai os lírios do campo (1938; tr. Consider the Lilies of the Field, 1948); Saga (1940); O resto é silêncio (1943; tr. The Rest is Silence, 1946); O tempo e o vento, I: O continente (1949; tr. Time and the Wind, 1951), II: O retrato (1951), III: O arquipélago (1961); Noite (1954; trs: The Night, New York and London, 1956; Evil in the Night, New York, 1957); O ataque (1959); O Senhor Embaixador (1965).—Ficção completa (5 vols, 1966–67; incl. full biblio. and important crit. arts). J.T.B.

Verlaine, PAUL (*Metz 30 III 1844; ∞1870 Mathilde Mauté [o/o1874]; †Paris 8 I 1896), French poet. The man who was to become the outstanding poète maudit of French literature was born of middle-class parents, worked as a municipal clerk in Paris, made literary connections and started to write in 1866. In 1870 he was married, but very soon left his wife, and in the company of Rimbaud*—to whose influence he unreservedly surrendered—fled to Belgium and England. In the course of a quarrel, he wounded Rimbaud with a revolver shot, and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment (1873–75). On his release he earned his living as a schoolmaster in England and France. Finally, in spite of his religious convictions, he fell a victim to drink and debauchery, spent the last years of his life in hospital, and died destitute.

His earliest poetry, written under the influence of Baudelaire*, stamped him as a PARNASSIAN (Poèmes saturniens, 1866; Fêtes galantes, 1869). He soon abandoned this manner and worked out a theory of poetry ('l'Art Poétique', 1871–73), to which he gave practical expression in his Romances sans paroles (1874). This new style—impressionistic, intensely musical, deliberately vague and self-consciously simple—he used to suggest intricate shades and subtleties of feeling and vision. His mood varied with the events of his life. It could be melancholy or gay, as in his first poems, optimistic and sentimental (La bonne chanson, 1870), Catholic and unsophisticated (Sagesse, 1881), bawdy and licentious (Parallèlement, 1891; Odes en son honneur, 1893). Verlaine's work, life and legend profoundly influenced the writers of the Symbolist movement. Today his reputation stands rather less high.

VERSE: Jadis et naguère (1884); Amour (1888); Bonheur (1891); Chansons pour elle (1891); Liturgies intimes (1892); Chair (1896); Invectives (1896).—Poems (sel. and tr. A. Wingate, 1904).—VARIOUS: Les poètes maudits (1884); Mémoires d'un veuf (1886); Mes hôpitaux (1891); Mes prisons (1893); Confessions (1895); Confessions of a Poet, tr. J. Richardson, 1950).—Œuvres complètes (ed. A. Messein, 5 vols, 1898–1903); Œuvres posthumes (3 vols, 1911–29); Œuvres oubliées (1926, 1930).

E. Lepelletier, P. V. et son œuvre (1907); H. Nicolson, P. V. (1921); P. Martino, V. (1924); F. Porché, V. tel qu'il fut (1933); B. Roberts, P. V. (1937); V. P. Underwood, V. et l'Angleterre (1938); C. Morice, V., poète maudit (1947); A. Adam, V. l'homme et l'œuvre (1955); O. Nadal, P. V. (1961); C. Cuénot, Le style de V. (1963). M.G.; J.P.R.

Vermeylen, AUGUST (*Brussels 12 V 1872; †Ukkel 10 XII 1945), Flemish writer. He was the leader of Van Nu en Straks, the magazine which in the 1890s raised Flemish literature to a higher level. He launched the slogan: 'We want to be Flemings in order to become Europeans'. The anarchist opinions which he defended in his youth and applied to the Flemish movement (Kritiek der Vlaamsche Beweging) were abandoned by 1900 when he became a Socialist. His essays influenced his generation, but in his criticism he failed to develop his talents fully. His novel De wandelende Jood (1906; Le Juif errant, tr. G. Vermeylen, 1925), in a style strongly influenced by Flaubert*, is the symbolic account of man searching for truth and finding it on earth in an idealistic rationalism.

Twee vrienden (novel; 1943).—ESSAYS: Verzamelde opstellen (2 vols, 1904–05); Beschouwingen (1942); De Vlaamse letteren van Gezelle tot heden (4th ed. 1949).—ART HISTORY: Van de catacomben tot Greco (1946).—Verzamelde werk (6 vols, 1951–55).

R. Roemans, Het werk van A. V. Analytische bibliografie (1953); A. Westerlinck, De wereld-beschouwing van A. V. (1958); J. Venstermans, A. V. (1965). R.F.L.

Vermigli, PIETRO MARTIRE, known as PETER MARTYR (*Florence 8 IX 1499; ∞1546 Catherine Dammartin, ∞1559 Caterina Merenda; †Zürich 12 XI 1562), Italian theologian and Protestant Reformer whose writings influenced the course of the Reformation in the direction of a new scholasticism. From 1547 to 1553 he lived in England, where as Professor of divinity at Oxford he helped Cranmer* shape the reformed Anglican liturgy and Articles of Religion. His Defensio (against Stephen Gardiner) is probably the weightiest treatise on the Eucharist of the entire Reformation.

Defensio doctrinae de sacrosancto Eucharistiae sacramento (1559); Loci Communes (1576; tr. A. Marten, 1583).

C. G. A. Schmidt, Peter Martyr V. (1858); J. C. McLelland, The Visible Words of God (1957). P.McN.

Verne, JULES (*Nantes 8 II 1828; †Amiens 24 III 1905), French novelist. He began by writing opera libretti and collaborating with the younger Dumas* in playwriting. In 1862, with the publication of Cinq semaines en ballon, he discovered his true gift—that of composing adventure stories set usually in the future. They reflected the novel fascination which science began to exert in the 1860s. But they are so ingeniously and freshly written that they have not yet lost their popularity with boys and girls.

Voyage au centre de la terre (1864; Eng. tr. F. A. Malleon, 1877); Les enfants du Capitaine Grant (1867); A Voyage Round the World, tr. anon., 1876; Vingt mille lieues sous les mers (1869; Eng. tr. H. Frith, 2 vols, 1876); Le tour du monde en 80 jours (1873; Eng. tr. G. M. Towle, 1874).

B. Frank, J. V. et ses voyages (1941); M. L. Allotte de la Fuye, J. V. sa vie, son œuvre (1955); Europe, special no. (April 1955); M. More, Le très curieux J. V. (1960); Nouvelles explorations de J. V. (1963); I. O. Evans, J. V. and His Work (1965); J. Chesnaux, Une lecture politique de J. V. (1971). M.G.; J.P.R.

Verney, LUÍS ANTÓNIO (*Lisbon 23 VI 1713; †Rome 20 III 1792), Portuguese critic. In 1736 he settled in Italy; here he acquainted himself with modern European thought and spent the rest of his life advocating educational reforms to remedy the intellectual stagnation that afflicted 18th-century Portugal. His programme of reform, set forth in Verdadeiro Método de Estudar, aroused much bitter controversy. This work is a full-scale attack on scholastic modes of thought and archaic teaching methods, and makes Verney the major intellectual figure of the Portuguese enlightenment.

Verdadeiro método de estudar (2 vols, 1746; ed. A. Salgado Júnior, 5 vols, 1949–52); Synopsis primi tentaminis pro litteratura scientiisque instaurandis apud lusitanos (1762).

L. Cabral de Moncada, Um iluminista português, L. A. V. (1941); A. A. Andrade, V. e a cultura do seu tempo (1966). T.P.W.

Verri, ALESSANDRO, CONTE (*Milan 9 XI 1741; †Rome 23 IX 1816), Italian novelist, younger brother of Pietro Verri*, the economist. Apart from contributing to Pietro's periodical Il Caffè, he is known chiefly for Le Notti romane al sepolcro degli Scipioni (1792 and 1804; crit. ed. R. Negri, 1967), a didactic philosophic work in the form of imaginary conversations with the souls of ancient Romans. Le avventure di Saffo (1782), usually referred to as a historical romance, is in fact a light and amusing parody of the love story of Sappho*. La vita di Erostrato (1815) is another pseudo-historical romance. His Congiura di Milano is an example of genuine pre-Romantic drama, violating the rule of the three unities, and deriving its plot from national history.

Discorsi vari (1818); Tentativi drammatici (pub. anon. 1799); Lettere e scritti inediti di Pietro e A. V. (ed. C. Casati, 4 vols, 1879–81).

A. Leprieri, Studio biografico critico su A. V. e le "Notti romane" (1900); U. Ucerra, I romanzi di A. V. e l'influenza della letteratura francese e inglese su di essi (1912); D. Chiomenti Vassalli, I fratelli V. (1960); R. Negri, Gusto e poesia delle rovine in Italia fra il Sette e l'Ottocento (1965); G. Trombatore, 'I "romanzi" del V.' in Belfagor, XXIII (1968). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Verri, PIETRO, CONTE (*Milan 12 XII 1728; †ibid. 28 VI 1797), Italian prose writer. Economist; soldier (1759); founder of the Società dei Pugni (1761)—an academy of Milanese noblemen imbued with the spirit of French encyclopaedism—and the director of its polemical organ Il Caffè (1764–66). An illuminist with a European outlook, Verri held important offices in the Milanese government; he aimed to revitalize commerce and was largely responsible for most of the administrative reforms in Lombardy under the Austrian régime. He wrote important treatises on economic questions (Sulle leggi vincolanti il commercio dei grani, 1769; Sull' economia politica, 1771), the Osservazioni sulla tortura (1777) and a Storia di Milano (2 vols, 1783–98). Other works include the Discorso sull' indole del piacere e del dolore (1773), an important correspondence (1766–97) with his brother and 38 articles for Il Caffè.

Il Caffè (ed. S. Romagnoli, 1960); Discorso sull' indole del piacere e del dolore (ed. N. Raffaelli, 1964); Del piacere e del dolore ed altri scritti di filosofia ed economia (ed. R. De Felice, 1964); Considerazioni sul commercio dello Stato di Milano (ed. C. A. Vianello, 1939); Cronaca di Cola de li Picirilli (ed. S. Sammarco, 1951); Osservazioni sulla tortura (ed. G. L. Barni, 1961); Storia di Milano (4 vols, 1824–25; ed. E. Ronconi, 2 vols, 1963); Diario militare (ed. G. Scalia, 1967);

Meditazioni sulla economia politica (ed. G. R. Carli et al., 1967).—Carteggio di P. e A. V. (ed. F. Novati et al., 12 vols, 1910–42); Lettere inediti (ed. M. Zolezzi, 1965).—Scritti vari (ed. G. Carcano, 2 vols, 1854); Opere varie, I (ed. N. Valeri, 1947– ).

N. Valeri, P. V. (1937; rev. ed. 1969).—A. Ottolini, P. V. e i suoi tempi (1921); C. A. Vianello, La giovinezza di Parini, V. e Beccaria (1933); M. R. Manfra, P. V. e i problemi economici del suo tempo (1940); L. Salvatorelli, Il pensiero politico italiano dal 1700 al 1870 (1943); D. Chiomenti Vassalli, I fratelli V. (1960); M. Fubini, 'P. V. e il "Caffè"' and 'P. V. nel carteggio col fratello Alessandro' in La cultura illuministica in Italia (1964). M.W.

Verschaeve, CYRIEL (*Ardooe 30 IV 1874; †Solbad Hall nr Innsbruck 8 XI 1949), Flemish author. An Augustinian character, he sought to encompass both his native land and eternity in a dream which begins and ends in God. A baroque artist, he was not free from a certain rhetorical strain, but his somewhat chaotic 'music of the spheres' is in keeping with his dynamism and fundamental unrest. As a poet he wrote symbolic philosophical lyrics. In his plays Judas (1917) and Maria Magdalena (1928) occur the deepest probings of the soul on the Flemish stage. His essays on great writers, painters, composers, thinkers and mystics are primarily confessions of self-introspection. He wrote a monumental life of Jesus.

VERSE: Zeesymfonieën (1911; Meersimfonien, tr. G. van Poppel, 1936); Nocturnen (1936).—PLAYS: Jacob van Artevelde (1911; Ger. tr. J. Decroos, 1939); Ferdinand Verbiest (1912); Philips van Artevelde (1913); Elijah (1936).—PROSE: Passieverhaal (1913); La passion de N. S. Jésus-Christ, 1919; Jezus (1940); Jesus der Menschensohn, tr. F. Fromme, 1957).—ESSAYS: Uren bewondering voor groote kunstwerken (6 vols, 1920–22); Rubens. Vlaanderen's spectrum (1938; Ger. tr. G. van Poppel, 1938); Eeuwige gestalten (1944); Verzameld werk (8 vols, 1954–61).

R. V. van den Bussche, C. V., zijn levenshouding en zijn kunstenaarschap (1942); K. de Jager, Brieven over V. (1951); D. Vansina, V. getuigt (1956); L. Vilsen, C. V. (1962). R.F.L.

Vershigora, PETRO (*1910), Soviet author of Lyudi s chistoy sovestyu (1945)—a well-written documentary account of Partisan activities behind the German lines in Byelorussia and the Ukraine in 1941–42. The heroic exploits described here are based on actual facts. J.L.

Vervoort, FRANS (*Malines, end 15th century; †ibid. 1555), Dutch mystic (motto: 'O Heere wanneer'), a typical representative of the late medieval Franciscan, almost baroque, pietistic brand of mysticism. He wrote many tracts in Latin as well as in the vernacular; some 40 have been identified. His dependence on other mystics was clearly demonstrated by G. J. Peeters.

R. Hardeman in Bode van het H. Hart (1920–21); P. Verheyden in Hand. v. d. Mechelsen kring voor Oudheidkunde (1922) and Passietooneelen uit F. V.'s Woestijne des Heeren (1924); A. Ampe and A. Deblaere in Ons Geestelijk Erf (1945); St. Axters in Album-Baur, I (1948); G. J. Peeters, F. V. en zijn afhankelijkheid (1968); A. Ampe in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Akad. (1968) and Handelingen 28. Vlaams Filologencongres (1969). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Verwey, ALBERT (*Amsterdam 15 V 1865; †1890 Kitty van Vloten; †Noordwijk aan Zee 8 III 1937), Dutch poet, critic, playwright and scholar. Verwey, the eldest son of orthodox Protestant parents who both died young, developed rapidly, attaining poetic maturity with Persephone (1883). Though fundamentally religious, he broke away from dogmatic Christianity, rejecting dualism for a monistic faith in an immanent universal life which he afterwards found expressed in Spinoza*. He took an active part in the Beweging van 'Tachtig, established his reputation as a lyrical poet and critic, but resigned his co-editorship of De Nieuwe Gids at the onset of its impressionist decline in 1889, the year before he married and settled at Noordwijk. After some years of intensive reading and reflection (Vondel*, Shelley*, Goethe*, Spinoza) Verwey resumed his regular publications and gradually found a measure of recognition and a good deal of opposition. He was a personality of exceptional stature and integrity. His influence as a critic proved a powerful force in the change from exuberant impressionism to a restrained harmony of form and idea which was the main trend of the period 1895–1920. Verwey was co-editor (with L. van Deyssel*) of the periodicals Het Tweemaande-lijksch Tijdschrift (1894–1902) and De Twintigste Eeuw (1902–05) and editor of De Beweging (1905–19); from 1925 to 1935 he was Professor of Dutch literature in the University of Leiden.

His early poetry, strongly influenced by Shelley and Keats* and by his contemporary Kloos*, was at once admired for its melodious spontaneity and its evocative qualities. The mature work, long decried as over-intellectual, harsh and unequal, has since found recognition as one of the major achievements of the age. Despite its undeniable inequality due to that very poetic integrity which ensured Verwey's lasting spontaneity and resilience, it achieves greatness by the combination of apparently disparate qualities: a strong power of graphic evocation, the gift of spontaneous expression in the short lyric, a marked tendency towards contemplative reflection, and an irresistible urge to build complex patterns of harmonious form. The works from Het Blank Heelal (1908) onwards substantially realized their integration. Verwey's three poetic plays are outstanding examples of the Goethean drama of ideas. He was linked by a lifelong friendship, in spite of fundamental differences of outlook, with the German poet Stefan George*, his best translator, and was himself a prominent translator, notably of the Divina Commedia (1923) and of Shakespeare's* Sonnets (1933).

POEMS: Persephone en andere gedichten (1885); Van het leven (1888); Verzamelde gedichten (1889); De Joden (1892); Spaansche reis (1893); Aarde (1896); De Nieuwe Tuin (1898); Het Brandende Braambosch (1899); Dagen en Daden (1901); De Kristaltwijg (1903); Uit de lage landen bij de zee (1904); Het Levensfeest (1912); Het Eigen Rijk (1912); Het Zichtbaar Geheim (1915); Het Zwaardjaar (1916); Goden en Grenzen (1920); De Weg van het Licht (1922); De Maker (1924); Rondom mijn Werk (1925); De Legende van de Ruimte (1926); De Getilde Last (1927); Vondel Herdacht (1929); De Figuren van de Sarkofaag (1930); De Ring van Leed en Geluk (1932); Het Lachende Raadsel (1935); 'Songs of Ultimate Understanding', 12 poems tr. Th. Weevers in Ger. Life and Letters, new ser., VI, 1952; In de Koorts van het Kortstondige (1936); De Dichter en het Derde Rijk (1936); Het Kind van het Land (1936); Amsterdam en Vondel (1937).—Verzamelde Gedichten (3 vols, 1911–12); Oorspronkelijk Dichtwerk (2 vols, 1938).—PROSE: Een inleiding tot Vondel (1892); Jonker Jan van der Noot (1895); Nederlandsche Dichters behalve Vondel (1893–95); Toen de Gids werd opgericht (1897); Stille Toernooien (1901); Luide Toernooien (1903); Oorlogsdaad of Oorlogsgevoel (1903); Het leven van Potgieter (1903); De Oude Strijd (1905); Inleiding tot de Nieuwe Nederlandsche Dichtkunst (1905); Droom en Tucht (1908); Gedroomd Paardrijden, het Testament van Potgieter (1912); Holland en de oorlog (1916); H. L. Spieghele (1919); Proza (10 vols, 1921–23); Van Jacques Perk tot nu (1925); Vondels Vers (1927); Ritme en Metrum (1931); Mijn Verhouding tot Stefan George (1934); Het lezen en schatten van gedichten (1935); Het lijden aan de tijd (1936); Onze taak in de tijd (1937); Vondel. Volledige dichtwerken, ed. (1937); Het leven van Frederik van Eeden (1940); 'Mijn dichterlijk levensbedrijf' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XLIV (1951); Uiting en Vorming, rede t. Goethe's sterfslag (1932; pub. in Ad Interim, 1949); 'Het kader van mijn levenswerk' in Tijdschrift voor Nederl. Taal- en Letterkunde (1954).—DRAMA: Johan van Oldenbarnevelt (1895); Jacoba van Beieren (1902); Cola Rienzi (1912; in Verzamelde Gedichten, III).

J. D. Bierens de Haan, 'V. en Spinoza' in De Stem (1937); A. van Duinkerken, 'Bij de dood van A. V.' in De Gids, II (1937); V. E. van Vriesland, 'A. V. als dramatisch dichter' in De Stem (1937); W. J. M. A. Asselbergs, 'A. V.' in Geschiedenis

van de Letterkunde der Nederlanden, IX (10 vols, 1939–53); S. Vestdijk, A. V. en de Idee (1940); A. W. C. Zuidema, 'De historische Spelen van A. V.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids (1941); M. Uyldert, Over de Poëzie van A. V. (1942); De Jeugd van een Dichter (1948); Dichterlijke Strijdbaarheid (1955) and Naar de Voltooiing (1959); J. J. Gielen, De Dichter V. (1946); P. N. van Eyck, Verzamelde Werk, IV, V, VI (1948–); C. A. Zaalberg, 'V. en het Kluizenaarschap' and Het Lachende Raadsel van A. V.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids (1949); J. C. Bloem, 'In Memoriam A. V.' in Verzamelde beschouwingen (1950); Th. Weevers, 'Het Blank Heelal van A. V. . . . ' in Tijdschrift voor Nederl. Taal- en Letterkunde (1951); 'De structuur van V.'s cyclus Het Lachende Raadsel', ibid. (1971); 'A. V.'s ultimate understanding of Stefan George' in Mod. Lang. Rev. (1955); Poetry of the Netherlands in Its European Context (1960); Mythe en Vorm in de Gedichten van A. V. (1965) and 'Over V.'s De Legendes van de ene Weg' in De Nieuwe Taalgids (1969); F. W. van Heerikhuizen, A. V. (1963); Klaas Heeroma, Der Mensch in seiner Sprache (1963); J.-M. Delcour, 'V. est-il un poète cérébral?' in Études germaniques (1964); M. Nijland-Verwey, A. V. en Stefan George, De Documenten van hun Vriendschap (1965); R. Pannwitz, A. V. und Stefan George (1965). Th.W.

Very, JONES (*Salem, Mass. 28 VIII 1813; †Boston 8 V 1880), American poet. He remained at Harvard as tutor in Greek. An eccentric and a mystic, he insisted that his sonnets were 'communicated' by the Holy Ghost; Emerson*, who edited his works, found him 'profoundly sane'.

Essays and Poems (ed. R. W. Emerson, 1839).

W. I. Bartlett, J. V.: Emerson's 'Brave Saint' (1942); E. Gittleman, J. V.: The Effective Years 1833–40 (1967). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Vesaas, TARJEI (*Vinje 20 VIII 1897; ∞1934 Halldis Moren; †Oslo 15 III 1970), Norwegian novelist. His family had owned for 300 years the farm where he was born, and as a young man he resolved he would also live his life in his native Vinje. His early reading included Kipling*, Hamsun* and Selma Lagerlöf*, influences which were not fully assimilated in his earliest work, though even this has characteristic features. His real breakthrough came with the Klas Dyregodt trilogy, Fars reise (1930), Sigrid Stallbrokk (1931) and Dei ukjende mennene (1932), later completed with Hjarta høyre sine heimlands-tonar (1938). In the meantime he had published his most outstanding pre-war book, Det store spelet (1934; The Great Cycle, tr. E. Rokkan, 1967) and its sequel Kvinnor ropar heim (1935), in which the benefits of a life lived close to the soil are realistically and poetically portrayed, but where the positive and the fruitful are closely juxtaposed with the negative and the destructive.

His play Ultimatum (1934) presages the doom-laden atmosphere which haunts the novels Kimen (1940; The Seed, tr. K. G. Chapman, 1964) and Huset i mørket (1945), the latter an allegory of Norway during the Occupation. At the same time these works inaugurated a new phase in Vesaas's style, characterized by short, chiselled sentences, stylization of characters and milieu, and evocative symbolism; at times his work can be reminiscent of Kafka* and Lagerkvist*. Outstanding novels from this period are Bleikeplassen (1946), Fuglane (1957; The Birds, tr. T. Støverud and M. Barnes, 1968), and Is-slottet (1963; The Ice Palace, tr. E. Rokkan, 1966). He has also published many short stories (the collection Vindane, 1952, won him a European literary prize), some very good radio plays, and collections of verse. Vesaas writes in New Norwegian (nynorsk), but this has not prevented him from becoming the leading Norwegian writer of his generation. At his best the perspectives in his work are universal ones, though his settings are invariably highly localized. Though he is much concerned with the destructive possibilities of man, his work is always pervaded by a deep humanism, including a remarkable understanding of children and the under-privileged. Stylistically, he is a master of the implied, the unsaid, and the evocative.

VERSE: Kjeldene (1946); Leiken og lynet (1947); Lykka for ferdesmenn (1949); Løynde eldars land (1953); Ver ny, vår draum (1956).—Dikt i samling (1969).—PLAYS: Guds bustader (1925); Morgonvinden (1947).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Menneskebonn (1923); Sendemann Huskuld (1924); Grindegard (1925); Grindekveld (1926); Dei svarte hestane (1928); Klokka i haugen (1929); Sandeltreet (1933); Leiret og hjulet (1936); Tårnet (1948); Signalen (1950); Vårnatt (1954); Spring Night, tr. K. G. Chapman, 1964; Brannen (1961); Bruene (1966); Båten om kvelden (1968); The Boat in the Evening, tr. E. Rokkan, 1971).—Noveller i samling (1964).—R. Skrede, T. V. (1947); Ei bok om T. V. (ed. L. Mæhle, 1964); T. V. (ed. J. E. Vold, 1964); E. Beyer, 'T. V.' in Scandinavica, X (1964); T. V. (ed. idem et al., 1967); K. Chapman, Hovedlinjer i T. V.'s diktning (1969). R.G.P.

Veselinović, JANKO (*Salaš Crnobarski 1 V 1862; †Glogovac 14 VI 1905), Serbian writer of 'village' stories, many with themes from his experiences in the Mačva region, where he worked as journalist and teacher, and of a historical novel.

Sluke iz seoskog života (stories; 2 vols, 1886–88); Stari poznanici (stories; 1891); Hajduk Stanko (novel; 1896); Pisma sa sela (memoirs; 1900, 1904).—Celokupna dela (complete works, 9 vols, 1928–31); Pripovetke (sel. short stories; 1966).

K. Dimitrijević, Pesnik Mačve (1962); V. Milinčević, J. V. (1963). V.J.

Veselovsky, ALEXANDER NIKOLAYEVICH (*Moscow

1835; †St Petersburg 1906), Russian literary historian and theoretician, concerned especially with Russian and Slav folk-lore and old literature.

Iz istorii romana i povesti (2 vols, 1886–88); Sobranie sochineniy (16 vols, 1897–1938); Istoričeskaya poetika (1940).

P. N. Simoni, Bibliograficheskii spisok učēno-literaturnykh trudov Veselovskogo (1921); V. Shishmoviev, A. V. i russkaya literatura (1946). J.L.

Veselovsky, ALEXEY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1843; †1918), brother of Alexander Veselovsky* and a literary scholar. He wrote extensively about Molière*, Byron*, Herzen*, and especially about Western influences on Russian literature.

Zapadnoe vliyanie v novoy russkoy literature (1896).

P. N. Sakulin, 'A. N. V.' in Nauchnye Izvestiya (1922). J.L.

Vesëly, ARTĚM, pseud. of NIKOLAY IVANOVICH KOCHKUROV (*1899), Soviet author of proletarian origin. His two novels about the Revolution, Strana rodnaya (1927) and Rossiya krovyu omytaya (1928), both show the influence of Bely* and Pilnyak*. His historical novel about the 17th-century adventurer and conqueror of Siberia, Yermak, Gulyay, Volga (1933), is written in an equally ornate and lyrical style. In several of his stories the skaz method of Remizov* is noticeable.

P. Polonsky, 'Ob Andreye Vesëlom' in Pechat' i Revolyutsiya, V (1926). J.L.

Vespasiano da Bisticci (*Florence 1421; †ibid. 1498), Italian bibliophile and biographer. His bookshop in Florence was a favourite haunt of scholars. His Vite d'uomini illustri del secolo XV was written after he had retired from business in 1480; he wrote also a similar work on women, Libro delle lodi e commentazioni delle donne illustri.

Vite d'uomini (ed. L. Frati, 3 vols, 1892–93; 1 vol. repr. 1938; The Vespasian Memoirs, tr. W. George and E. Waters, 1927, repr. 1963 as Renaissance Princes, Popes and Prelates); Libro delle lodi (ed. L. Sorrento, 1910).

E. Frizzi, 'Di V. da B.' in Annali della scuola normale di Pisa (1889); V. Rossi, Il Quattrocento (2nd ed. 1934). B.R.

Vestdijk, SIMON (*Harlingen 17 X 1898; ∞1965 Adriana Catharina Maria van der Hoeven), Dutch poet, novelist and essayist. The work of this incredibly prolific writer forms a unique achievement in contemporary world literature. Highly personal in his viewpoint, yet objective in method, Vestdijk projects his vision of the world in novels, stories and poems which cover many periods and backgrounds. The unity of his complex universe, not less remarkable than its diversity, is brought about by the recurrence of themes (archetypal patterns can, for instance, easily be discerned), and by his brilliant style, based on the synthesis of paradoxical elements. His essays, composed with the utmost care, show the same objectivity and reconciliation of superficial contradictions.

VERSE: Verzen (1932); Berijmd palet (1933); Vrouwendienst (1934); Kind van stad en land (1936); Fabels met kleurkrijt (1938); Klimmende legenden (1940); Water in zicht (1940); De vliegende Hollander (1941); Simplicia (1941); De uiterste seconde (1944); Mnemosyne in de bergen (1946); Thanatos aan banden (1948); Gestelsche liederen (1949); Swordplay, wordplay (with A. Roland Holst; 1950); Rembrandt en de engelen (1956); Merlijn (1957).—STORIES: De dood betrapt (1935); De bruine vriend (1935; Eng. tr. M. Duyvendak in New Writers, 1962); Narcissus op vrijersvoeten (1938); Stomme getuigen (1947); De fantasia (1949).—NOVELS: Terug tot Ina Damman (1934); Else Böhler (1935); Meneer Visser's hellevaart (1936); Heden ik, morgen gij (with H. Marsman, novel in letters; 1936); Het vijfde zegel (1937); De nadagen van Pilatus (1938); Sint Sebastiaan (1939); De zwarte ruiter (1940); Rumeiland (1940; Eng. tr. B. K. Bowes, 1963); Aktaion onder de sterren (1941); Iersche nachten (1946); De overnachting (with Jeanne van Schaik-Willing; 1947); Puriteinen en piraten (1947); De vuuraanbidders (1947); Pastorale 1943 (1948); De redding van Fré Bolderhey (1948); Surrogaten voor Murk Tuinstra (1948); Avontuur met Titia (with Henriëtte van Eyk; 1949); De andere school (1949); Bevrijdingsfeest (1949); De kellner en de levenden (1949); Les voyageurs, tr. L. Roelandt, 1966); De koperen tuin (1950; The Garden Where the Brass Band Played, tr. A. Brotherton, 1964); De vijf roeiers (1951); Ivoren wachters (1951); De dokter en het lichte meisje (1951); De verminkte Apollo (1952); Op afbetaling (1952); De schandalen (1953); Het glinsterend pantser (1956); De beker van de min (1957); Open boek (1957); De vrije vogel en zijn kooien (1958); De arme Heinrich (1958); De rimpels van Esther Ornstein (1959); De ziener (1959); De laatste kans (1960); Een moderne Antonius (1960); De filosoof en de sluipmoordenaar (1961); Een alpenroman (1961); De held van Temesa (1962); Het genadeschot (1964); Bericht uit het hiernamaals (1964); Zo de oude zongen. . . (1965); Juffrouw Lot (1965); De onmogelijke moord (1966); Het spook en de schaduw (1966); Een huisbewaarder (1967); De leeuw en zijn huid (1967); De filmheld en het gidsmeisje (1968); De hôteleur doet niet mee (1968); Het schandaal der blauwbaarden (1968); Vijf vadem diep (1969); Het verboden bacchanaal (1969); Het proces van Meester Eckhart (1969).—ESSAYS: Kunstenaar en oorlogspsychologie (1937); Lier en lancet (1939); Strijd en vlucht op papier

(1939); Albert Verwey en de Idee (1940); Muiterij tegen het etmaal (2 vols, 1942, 1947); De Poolsche ruiter (1946); Het eeuwige telaat (1947); De toekomst der religie (1947); Astrologie en wetenschap (1949); De glanzende kiemcel (1950); Essays in duodecimo (1952); Zuiverende kroniek (1956); Marionettenspel met de dood (with S. Dresden; 1957); Voor en na de explosie (1960); Gestalten tegenover mij (memoirs; 1961); De zieke mens in de romanliteratuur (1964); De leugen is onze moeder (1965); Gallische facetten (1968); Het wezen van de angst (1968).

Menno ter Braak, De duivelskunstenaar (1943); Podium, special no. (Oct. 1948); Max Nord et al., Over S. V. (1948); F. Sierksma, Tussen twee vuren (1952); Schrijvers prentenboek, II (1958); Nol Gregoor, S. V. en Lahringen (1958); Th. Govaert, S. V. (1960); Kees Fens, De eigenzinnigheid van de literatuur (1964); Anne Wadman, Handdruk en handgemeen (1965); R. A. Cornets de Groot, De chaos en de volheid (1966); H. U. J. d'Oliveira in Merlyn, IV.3-4 (1966); Raster, special no. (Oct. 1968); J. J. Oversteegen, Vorm of vent (1969).—V. in kaart (biblio.; 1967); interview, Nol Gregoor, In gesprek met S. V. (1967); essay in Eng.: J. J. Oversteegen in Writing in Holland and Flanders (Mar. 1967). J.J.O.

Vetranović or Vetranić, MAVRO (*Ragusa [Dubrovnik] 1482; †ibid. 1576), Ragusan poet. As a Benedictine monk he lived for some years in Italy. His wide erudition is seen in his prolific verse, principally pessimistic and moralizing. Remeta, describing his secluded life at the time of its writing, is chiefly interesting for its accounts of natural history. He treated Biblical subjects in dialogue form; his allegorical moralizing epic Piligrin is unfinished.

Pjesme (1871).

V.J.

Vialar, PAUL MARIE ERNEST (*Saint-Denis 18 IX 1898), French novelist. After publishing some poetry, and producing some ten plays, Vialar devoted himself to a vast work of fiction intended as the saga of our time. Three great series of novels have occupied his entire career: La mort est un commencement (8 vols, 1945-50), La chasse aux hommes (10 vols, 1952-53), Chronique française du XXème siècle (10 vols, 1955-61). Many prefer his stirring hunting tales to these immense, realistic, somewhat laboured novels.

NOVELS: La rose de la mer (1939; Eng. tr. L. Alexander, 1951); La grande meute (1943); La caille (1945); La tour aux amants (1947); L'éperon d'argent (1951; Eng. tr. P. J. Stead, 1954); Cinq hommes de ce monde (1954); Destination Berlin, tr. idem, 1956); Tournez jolies gosses (1955; Tune for a Star, tr. idem, 1957); Les Robes Noires (1955; tr. idem, 1958); Le petit garçon de l'ascenseur (1957); Le roman des oiseaux et des bêtes de chasse (1964); La jeunesse du monde (1966); La cravache d'or (1967); Safari vérité (1970).—PLAYS: Pothu, brave homme (1920); L'âge de raison (1922); Les hommes (1931).

M.G.

Vian, BORIS (*Ville-d'Avray 10 III 1920; †Paris 23 IV 1959), French poet, novelist and playwright. Vian was 'King of St Germain-des-Prés' in the post-war years of EXISTENTIALISM, when he abandoned his work as an engineer and devoted himself to jazz, the cinema, and song. A practical joker of genius, he started writing under the name of VERNON SULLIVAN, an imaginary American author whose work he claimed to have translated. A more serious side is revealed, however, in L'écume des jours (1947; Froth on the Daydream, tr. S. Chapman, 1967); and the play Les bâtisseurs d'empire (1959) subtly shows his joy and sadness in living, loving, writing and dreaming.

VERSE: Barnum's Digest (1948); Cantilènes en gelée (1950); Je voudrais pas crever (1959).—NOVELS: J'irai cracher sur vos tombes (1946); Vercoquin et le plancton (1946); L'automne à Pékin (1947); Les fourmis (1949); L'herbe rouge (1950); L'arrache-cœur (1953; Heartsnatcher, tr. S. Chapman, 1968); Troubles dans les Andains (1966).—PLAYS: L'équarrissage pour tous (1950); Le goûter des généraux (1962).—En avant la zizique... (essay; 1958).

D. Noakes, B. V. (1964); J. Clouzet, B. V. (1966); H. Baudin, B. V. La poursuite de la vie totale (1966); Bizarre, special no. (1966); M. Rybalka, B. V. Essai d'interprétation (1969).

M.G.

Viana, JAVIER DE (*Canelones 1872; †1925), Uruguayan short-story writer. His stories were a variation on the gaucho theme: he depicted the Uruguayan cowboy, no longer as heroic but as bereft of all vigour. He combined the cuadro de costumbres (local sketch) method with realist theories. He applied this to one long novel, a study in abnormal feminine psychology, Gaucha (1899).

Campo (1896); Guri (1901); Yuyos (1912); Macachines, cuentos camperos (1920).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Vianu, TUDOR (*Giurgiu 1898; †Bucharest 1964), Rumanian critic, literary historian and aesthetician, whose wide culture and high intellectual standards helped to reinforce the links between Rumanian literature and the general European tradition.

The following is only a sel. list of his pubs: Fragmente moderne (1925); Filozofia culturii (1929); Poezia lui Eminescu (1930); Arta și frumosul (1931); Idealul clasic al omului (1934); Ion Barbu (1935); Arta prozatorilor români (1941); Studii de literatură comparată și universală (1960); Jurnal (1961).

Ion Biberi, T. V. (1966); Bio-bibliografie (ed. M. Tomescu, 1967).

F.J.B.

Viau, THÉOPHILE DE (*Clairac, nr Agen 1590; †Chantilly 25 IX 1626), French poet. After a wandering youth, he entered the service of the rakish Comte de Candale, then of the Duc de Montmorency, was banished and later (VIII 1623) sentenced by the Parlement de Paris to be burned for the alleged impiety of his verse. Montmorency saved him from this, but a long period of rigorous imprisonment proved fatal to his health.

The greatest of the libertin (free-thinking) poets, he wrote free and sincere verse on love and nature, which he felt more directly than other poets of his age. He resisted an over-strict application of the doctrines of Malherbe*. Relatively free from affectation, he was the most considerable non-religious French lyric poet of his century. His Pyrame et Thisbé (pub. 1623; crit. ed. G. Saba, Naples, 1967) contributed to the development of French classical tragedy.

Œuvres (Paris and Rouen, 1621–27); Œuvres complètes (ed. C. Alleaume, 2 vols, 1856); Œuvres poétiques choisies (ed. L. R. Lefèvre, 1926); Œuvres poétiques (ed. J. Streicher, 2 vols, Geneva, 1951–58).

F. Lachèvre, Le procès de T. de V. (2 vols, 1909); A. Adam, T. de V. et la libre-pensée française en 1620 (1936) and Histoire de la littérature française au XVIIe siècle, I (1949). G.B.

Vicente, GIL (*?1465; †?1537), Portuguese playwright and poet. His plays were performed at the courts of Manuel I and John III between 1502 and 1536, but little is known of his life. He is sometimes identified with the Gil Vicente who was goldsmith to Queen Lianor (1458–1525); perhaps under her patronage, he made his first attempts at drama and so laid the foundation of a Portuguese theatre. Vicente wrote during the most brilliant period of Portuguese history, when the wealth of the East had begun to flood into the country, making the court of King Manuel the most opulent in Europe, and before fanaticism and economic incompetence had set the country in decline. He became organizer of court entertainments for which he wrote his own plays, mostly short, witty and entirely unpredictable. In these he exercises an almost unlimited freedom of comment and presents with incomparable verve a panoramic view of the life, foibles, abuses and social upheavals of an age of change.

Vicente's work consists, apart from some minor compositions, of 44 plays written in verse. Most of these have come down to us in a text edited by his son some 25 years after the poet's death; 17 are in Portuguese and 11 in Spanish; both languages are used in 15 'bilingual' plays and one (Auto da Fama) makes comic use of French and Italian as well.

Gil Vicente began his literary activity in 1502 with a dramatic monologue, followed soon after by a series of short plays in the pastoral manner of Encina* and Lucas Fernández*, written for performance at Christmas. Allegory first appears in the Auto da Fé and Vicente soon developed a highly original type of MORALITY—the first known instance of this form in the Spanish peninsula—of which the finest examples are Auto da Sibila Cassandra, Auto da Barca do Inferno, Auto da Alma, Breve Sumário da História de Deus, Auto da Feira, Auto da Cananeia and Auto da Mofina Mendes. Apart from their novel treatment of religious themes these—and indeed all Vicente's plays—contain a wealth of songs and lyrical passages unsurpassed for their beauty and freshness; they also contain much social satire and outspoken criticism of ecclesiastical abuses, a feature which later caused many of the plays to be banned or severely censored by order of the Inquisition.

Brilliant character sketches, witty dialogue and comic situations abound in the farces Quem tem farelos?, Auto da Índia, Inês Pereira, and O Velho da Horta; and in others without any well-defined plot (Farsa dos Almoçreves, O Juiz da Beira etc.), more in the nature of a modern revue than conforming to any strict conception of genre.

Vicente treated the romantic comedy on various occasions, though nowhere with such success as in Don Duardos, based on an episode from a romance of chivalry; written in Spanish, this is Vicente's longest play—and, for its subtle development and sustained lyricism, perhaps his finest. For the celebration of court festivities Gil Vicente devised a curious type of dramatic fantasy in which various heterogeneous elements—farce, satire, lyrics, music, dancing—are linked by a central allegorical motif (Frágua de Amor, Nau de Amores, Triunfo do Inverno etc.); in the 1562 edition of his works this type of composition generally receives the name tragicomédia.

Vicente's literary antecedents were entirely medieval and he was innocent of neo-classical concepts of style and construction. But if approached without preconceptions it will be seen that his style is always adequate to his purpose, and even where use is made of the revue technique, each of the loosely connected scenes makes its impact and is brought to life by Vicente's poetic genius, his Brechtian satirical edge, and the dramatic instinct of a born man of the theatre.

Vicente also ranks as a major figure in the literature of Spain.

PLAYS (the order followed is that of the 1st ed., 1562; for chronol., in many cases doubtful, see below: A. Braancamp Freire, Vida e Obras de G. V.): OBRAS DE DEVAÇÃO: Monólogo do Vaqueiro (Auto da Visitação) (1502); Auto Pastoril Castelhana (1502); Auto dos Reis Magos (1503);

Auto da Sibila Cassandra (1513); Auto da Fé (1510); Auto dos Quatro Tempos (1511); Auto da Mofina Mendes (1534); Auto em Pastoril Português (1523); Auto da Feira (1528); Auto da Alma (1518); Auto da Barca do Inferno (1516); Segundo Auto das Barcas (Purgatório) (1518); Auto da Barca da Glória (1519); Breve Sumário da História de Deus (1526); Diálogo da Ressurreição (1526); Auto da Cananeia (1534); Auto de S. Martinho (1504).—COMÉDIAS: Comédia de Rubena (1521); Comédia do Viuvo (1514); Comédia sobre a Divisa de Coimbra (1527); Floresta de Enganos (1536).—TRAGICOMÉDIAS: Dom Duardos (1525); Amadis de Gaula (1533); Nau de Amores (1527); Frágua de Amor (1524); Exortação da Guerra (1513); Templo de Apolo (1526); Cortes de Júpiter (1521); Tragicomédia Pastoril da Serra da Estrela Triunfo do Inverno (1529); Romagem de Agravados (1533).—FARSAS: Quem tem farelos? (1509); Auto da Índia (1509); Auto da Fama (1515); O Velho da Horta (1512); Auto das Fadas (1511); Farsa de Inês Pereira (1523); O Juiz da Beira (1526); Auto das Ciganas (1525); Farsa dos Almoçreves (1527); O Clérigo da Beira (1530); Auto da Lusitânia (1532); Farsa dos Físicos (1512); Auto da Festa (1525).—Copilaçam de todas as Obras de G. V. (1562; facs. repro., Obras completas de G. V., Bibl. Nac. de Lisboa, 1928); Obras completas (ed. Marques Braga; 6 vols, 1942–44); Obras (complete; 1965); Obras dramáticas castellanas (Madrid, 1962).—Plays attrib. to G. V.: Obra da Geração Humana; Auto de Deus Padre e Justiça e Misericórdia (ed. I. S. Révah, Deux Autos méconnus de G. V., 1948); I. S. Révah, Deux 'Autos' de G. V. restitués à leur auteur (1949).—TRANSLATIONS: Four Plays of G. V. (1920); Lyrics of G. V. (2nd ed. 1921; both ed. and tr. A. F. G. Bell).

Bibliografia vicentina (ed. L. M. de Castro e Azevedo, 1942); A. Braancamp Freire, Vida e obras de G. V., 'trovador, mestre de balança' (2nd ed. 1944); C. Michaëlis de Vasconcelos, Notas vicentinas (2nd ed. 1949) and Autos portugueses de G. V. y de la escuela vicentina (Madrid, 1922); O. de Pratt, G. V. Notas e comentários (1931); D. Alonso, 'Problemas del castellano vicentino' in Tragicomedia de Don Duardos (Madrid, 1942); I. S. Révah, Recherches sur les œuvres de G. V., I (1951); A. J. Saraiva, História da cultura em Portugal, II (1955) and G. V. e o fim do teatro medieval (2nd ed. 1965); T. P. Waldron, intro. to G. V.: Amadis de Gaula (Manchester, 1959); L. Keats, The Court Theatre of G. V. (Lisbon, 1962). T.P.W.

Vico, GIAMBATTISTA (*Naples 23 VI 1668; ∞1699 Teresa Caterina Destito; †ibid. 23 I 1744), Italian philosopher, historian, jurist, literary critic, poet; 'Laufilo Terio' in the Arcadia (1710). Son of a poor bookseller, largely self-taught, he took a law degree at Naples (?1694) while employed as tutor to the Marchesi Rocca at Vatolla, Salerno. In 1698 he became Professor of rhetoric at his own University, with a miserably small salary; and later (1723) bore stoically the bitter disappointment of not obtaining the more suitable, better-paid Professorship of law. He was broken in health when Charles III made him Historiographer Royal (1735).

Vico's philosophy is anticipated in seven Latin inaugural lectures, particularly in De nostri temporis studiorum ratione (1708). A first stage in the arrangement of his thought is the treatise De antiquissima Italorum sapientia (1710); a second, the Diritto universale (1720–21); and the final consolidation of his ideas, the Scienza nuova prima (1725), rewritten as Scienza nuova seconda (1730) and finally revised in 1744. Non-philosophical writings, Italian and Latin, include 'occasional' verse and prose—epithalamia, panegyrics, commemorations; and historical and literary essays: interesting is the Giudizio su Dante (?1728), emphasizing Dante's* imaginative side. The Autobiografia (1725) with Aggiunta (1731) reveal the heroic struggle of a great mind searching for clear exposition of tortured, tumultuous thought.

Continuing the Renaissance Neo-Platonist tradition and influenced by, though opposed to, Cartesianism, Vico is a precursor of 19th-century 'historicism' and the new science: aesthetics. Many original ideas in his philosophy of history, with its laws of recurring cycles, anticipate modern historiography. His most important contribution to modern thought is, however, his study and definition of the imaginative faculty, leading to theories on the nature of poetry, the origin of speech and the 'discovery of the true Homer'. His style is difficult and involved: solemn, elevated, heroic, baroque. He founded no school and his work was not fully appreciated until nearly a century after his death. Michelet's* translation of the Scienza nuova into French (1827) marks the beginning of an ever-growing interest, until Croce's* fundamental study (1947) proclaimed him one of the greatest of Italian philosophers, and his international reputation was firmly established during the tercentenary celebrations (1968).

Opere (crit. ed. F. Nicolini, B. Croce and G. Gentile, 8 vols, 1914–42).—La scienza nuova (annotated ed. F. Nicolini, repr. 1968; ed. with Eng. notes T. G. Bergin and M. H. Fisch, 1949; The New Science of G. V., tr. idem, 1961); Autobiografia (ed. M. Fubini, with sel. letters, orations, verse, 1965; Eng. tr. Bergin and Fisch, Cornell, 1944).—ANTHOLOGIES: G. V., Opere (ed. F. Nicolini, 1954); Il pensiero di G. V. (ed. P. Rossi, 1958).

BIBLIOGRAPHIES: B. Croce and F. Nicolini, Bibliografia vichiana (1947–48); E. Gianturco, 'A selective bibliography of V. scholarship' in Forum Italicum, supp. (1968).

H. P. Adams, The Life and Writings of G. B. V.

(1935); F. Amerio, Introduzione allo studio di G. B. V. (1946); B. Croce, La filosofia di G. B. V. (4th ed. 1947; Eng. tr. R. G. Collingwood, 1913); F. Nicolini, Saggi vichiani (1954) and V. storico (ed. F. Tessitore, 1967); I. Berlin, 'The philosophical ideas of G. B. V.' in Art and Ideas in 18th Century Italy (1959); M. Fubini, Stile e umanità di G. B. V. (new ed. 1965); G. Gentile, Studi vichiani (3rd ed. rev. V. Bellezza, 1968).—'Omaggio a V.' in Collezione di filosofia, X (1968); G. V.: An International Symposium (ed. G. Tagliacozzo, 1969); F. Tessitore et al., G. B. V. nel terzo centenario della nascita (1969). K.S.

Victorijn: see Vechters, JOAN.

Vida, MARCO GIROLAMO (*Cremona ?1485; †Alba 27 IX 1566), Italian humanist and poet, Bishop of Alba. A zealous Church reformer, he played an active part in the Council of Trent. His writings were much appreciated, especially the Christias, a Latin epic of the redemption modelled on the Aeneid; Ars Poetica, which advocated the imitation of Virgil* and Cicero*; and two Latin poems, on chess, Scacchia ludus, and silkworms, Bombyx. His importance lies in his attempt to fuse Christian and Latin culture in an epic rather than in his poetic qualities. His works were freely translated and were popular in England in the 18th century.

De arte Poetica (1520; tr. C. Pitt, 1725); Christiados libri sex (1535; tr. J. Cranwell, 1768); Opera (1550); Poemata omnia cum dialogis (1731).

F. Novati, 'Sedici lettere inedite di M. G. V.' in Archivio storico lombardo (1898, 1899); V. Cicchitelli, Sulle opere poetiche di M. G. V. (1904) and Sulle opere in prosa di M. G. V. (1909); G. Toffanin, L'Umanesimo al Concilio di Trento (with app. of Ital. trs of De rei publicae dignitate by A. Altamura; 1955); M. A. di Cesare, V.'s 'Christiad' and Virgilian Epic (1964).

C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Vidaković, MILOVAN (*Nemenikuće 1780; †Budapest 28 X 1841), Serbian writer, a pioneer among his people as a novelist. His romantic moralizing stories were popular reading although not written in the vernacular.

NOVELS: Usamljeni junosha (1810); Velimir i Bosiljka (1811); Ljubomir u Elisiumu (1814); Silvan i Milena (1829). V.J.

Vidal, GORE (*West Point, N.Y. 3 X 1925), American novelist. His Myra Breckinridge (1968) was a best-seller because of its stylistic inventiveness, bizarre sexuality and tough-minded nostalgia for Hollywood in the great days.

Williwaw (1946); In a Yellow Wood (1947); The City and the Pillar (1948); Julian (1964).

L. White, G. V. (1968). D.E.Mo.

Vidalín, JÓN ÞORKELSSON (*Garðar, Álftanes 21 III 1666; ∞1699 Sigríður Jónsdóttir; †Skálholt 30 VIII 1720), Icelandic divine and homilist. After education and military service in Denmark he worked for Bishop Þórður Þorláksson, whom he finally succeeded as Bishop of Skálholt in 1697. He is chiefly famous for his sermons, which remained household reading until modern times. His message is severe, his style baroque, a forceful and colourful eloquence mixing the high-flown and the homely.

Hvss-Postilla (2 vols, 1718–20; 14th ed., Vidalinspostilla, ed. P. Þorleifsson and B. Sigfússon, 1945).

A. Møller, J. V. og hans Postil (1929).

P.G.F.

Vidas, FEDOR (*Bakar 13 I 1924), Croatian prose writer. A law graduate of Zagreb University, Vidas has worked as a journalist and an editor of various journals. He writes mainly in the novella style, short episodic sketches with detailed settings and very often an overriding atmosphere of nostalgic melancholy.

STORIES: Popodne kad sam sretan (1954); Ponedjeljak ili utorak (1961); Novele (1965).

B.J.

Vidmar, JOSIP (*Ljubljana 14 X 1895), Slovene critic. For him the 'essential elements of art' are the artist's commitment to life and his freedom of concept and composition. From this Goethean point of departure he has, starting with his review Kritika (1925–27), assessed current literary work and the productions of the National Theatre, Ljubljana, and written critical judgements on problems of literary history from the same standpoint. During the fight for national freedom he was a leading political figure, but after 1945 he remained faithful to his pre-war aesthetic concepts and has defended the artist's right to imaginative and creative freedom against both political dogmatism and the modernizing avant-garde. He has translated Goethe*, Molière*, Griboyedov*, Dostoyevsky* and other classics. Since 1952 he has been President of the Slovene Academy of Science and Art.

Kulturni problemi slovenstva (1932); Oton Župančič (1935); Literarne kritike (1951); Meditacije (1954); Polemike (1963); Literarne eseji (1966); Dnevniki (1968); Gledališke kritike (1968).
A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Vidrić, VLADIMIR (*Zagreb 30 IV 1875; †Stenjevec, nr Zagreb 29 IX 1909), Croatian lyric poet. He wrote little, but is recognized as a poet of 'inspired spontaneity' and of the joy of life. Themes from Greek mythology and the past of the Slavs are vehicles for the expression of his own emotions.

Pjesme (1907).—A. Barac, V. (1940). V.J.

Vieira, ANTÓNIO (*Lisbon 6 II 1608; †Baía 18 VI 1697), Portuguese writer. A Jesuit who achieved renown as a preacher of unusual power, he influenced the policy of John IV (acclaimed King in 1640) during the critical period after Portugal had regained her independence from Spain, and undertook important diplomatic missions abroad. He is also noted for his missionary work in Brazil where his advocacy of the Amerindians aroused the enmity of the colonists, though his compassionate soul did not rebel against the enslavement of the Negroes. Fine passages abound in Vieira's sermons, though the style is often florid and the thought naïve; more interesting are his numerous letters, indispensable for a knowledge of the complex political history of the period. Not the least intriguing of the many roles Vieira filled during his long life was that of messianic visionary. In História do Futuro (pub. 1718) and Clavis Prophetarum (still incomplete at the time of his death) he foresees the establishment of God's kingdom on earth by Portuguese arms and the creation of a universal monarchy under the Portuguese Crown.

Obras escolhidas (ed. A. Sérgio and H. Cidade, 12 vols, 1951–54).—Sermões (18 vols, 1679–1748; ed. Gonçalves Alves, 15 vols, 1945–48); Cartas do Padre A. V. (ed. J. L. de Azevedo, 3 vols, 1925–28).

J. L. de Azevedo, História de A. V. (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1931); R. Cantel, Prophétisme et Messianisme dans l'œuvre d'A. V. (1960) and Les sermons de V., étude du style (1959); H. Cidade, Padre A. V. (1964).
T.P.W.

Viélé-Griffin, FRANCIS (*Norfolk, U.S.A. 26 V 1864; †Bergerac 12 XI 1937), French poet. He was brought to France at the age of eight and lived there for the rest of his life, dividing his time between Paris and Touraine. His early poetry was conventional in form but later he advocated and practised the vers libre. He applied a musical, flowing prosody to simple, intimate themes. He was among the most gifted and optimistic of the Symbolist poets.

Poèmes et poésies 1886–1893 (1895); La clarté de la vie (1897); Phocas le jardinier (1898); La partenza (1899); La légende ailée de Wieland le forgeron (1900); L'amour sacré (1903); Voix d'Ionie (1904); La sagesse d'Ulysse (1925).

J. de Cours, F. V.-G. (1930); H. Nicolas, La vie passionnée d'un poète symboliste: F. V.-G. (1959).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Viereck, GEORGE SYLVESTER (*Munich 31 XII 1884; ∞30 IX 1915 Margaret Hein; †Holyoke, Mass. 20 III 1962), German-American author. He started with precocious German poems, but soon used English exclusively. He was the leading pro-German propagandist during the two World Wars. As a poet he followed Baudelaire* and Swinburne*.

VERSE: Gedichte (1904; with intro. by Eduard Engel, 1922); Ninive (1906; as Nineveh, 1908); The Candle and the Flame (1912); Songs of Armageddon (1916).—NOVELS: The House of the Vampire (1907); with Paul Eldridge: My First Two Thousand Years (1929); Salome, the Wandering Jewess (1930).—VARIOUS: Spreading Germs of Hate (1931); The Strangest Friendship in History (1932); The Kaiser on Trial (1937); The Seven Against Man (1941); Men Into Beasts (1952).—Ed. (with Louis Viereck, his father): Der deutsche Vorkämpfer (1907–11); The Fatherland (1914–27).
E.R.

Vieusseux, GIAMPIETRO (*Oneglia 29 IX 1779; †Florence 28 IV 1863), Italian scholar, of Swiss origin, founder, with Gino Capponi*, of the periodical Antologia. He also instituted the Gabinetto di lettura, a literary club and library in Florence, and in 1827 founded the Giornale agrario toscano and La Guida dell'educatore and in 1842 L'Archivio storico.
C.Dr.

N. Tommaseo, Di G. V. e dell'andamento della civiltà italiana (1863); R. Ciampini, G. P. V. I suoi viaggi, i suoi giornali, i suoi amici (1953); I. Mazzei, 'Il Gabinetto V.' in Firenze, IX (1940).
C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Vignay: see Jean de Vignai.

Vigneault, GILLES (*Natashquan, Quebec 13 X 1928; ∞1955 Rachele Cloutier), Canadian poet and story writer who has achieved international fame as a 'chansonnier-poète'. He began singing in 1960, after ten years in the teaching profession, and gained immediate success. In 1959 he had founded Éditions de l'Arc, a small publishing house which continues to release his works. His brief stories have a mystical quality and make use of rich symbolism and imagery; his poetry and songs have a simplicity, vigour and earthiness which seem to capture the mystique of French Canada.

Étraves (1954); Balises (1964); Avec les vieux mots (1965); Pour une soirée de chansons (1965); Quand les bateaux s'en vont (1965); Les gens de mon pays (1967); Tam ti delam (1967).—STORIES: Contes sur la pointe des pieds (1961); Contes du coin de l'œil (1966).

A. Robitaille, G. V. (1968).

R.Su.

Vigny, ALFRED VICTOR, COMTE DE (*Loches 27 III 1797; ∞3 III 1825 Lydia Bunbury [†XII 1862]; †Paris 17 IX 1863), French poet, novelist and playwright. Vigny's frustrated career opened with service (1814–27) in the royal guards, from which he resigned in despair of seeing active service. His marriage was a source of distress—his wife became a permanent invalid—and his liaison (1831–37) with the actress Marie Dorval ended unhappily. After 1840 he lived in relative isolation in Paris or at his country house at Le Maine-Giraud. Elected to the Académie Française in 1845, he stood twice unsuccessfully for Parliament in 1848 and 1849.

His poems fall chronologically into two main groups, the first including Éloa (1824), Moïse and Le Cor (1826); the second, La Colère de Samson (1839), La Mort du loup, La Maison du berger, Le Mont des Oliviers (1843–44). Claiming that 'all the great problems of humanity can be discussed in verse', he examines those problems pessimistically, often through Biblical symbols, and recommends a stoical endurance of suffering. His arduous and dignified style has given a few poems unsurpassed in French. In prose, he recalled the unhappy destiny of three young poets (Chénier*, Chatterton* and Gilbert*) in Stello, and the tribulations of the soldier in Servitude et grandeur militaires. He translated three Shakespearean plays, but his only dramatic success was his own Chatterton.

VERSE: Poèmes (1822); Éloa, ou La Sœur des anges (1824); Poèmes antiques et modernes (1826, 1829, 1837; crit. ed. E. Estève, 1914); Les Destinées (1864; crit. ed. V. L. Saulnier, 1947).—PLAYS: La Maréchale d'Ancre (1831); Chatterton (1835).—TRANSLATIONS: Roméo et Juliette (1828); Othello (1829); Shylock, le Marchand de Venise (1829).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Cinq-Mars (1826); Stello (1832); Servitude et grandeur militaires (1835); The Military Necessity, tr. H. Hare, (1953); Journal d'un poète (1867; crit. ed. P. Flottes, 1949); Correspondance, 1816–63 (ed. E. Sakellarides, 1905).—Œuvres complètes (ed. F. Baldensperger, 2 vols, 1948–49); Les consultations du docteur Noir (ed. F. Germain, 1970).

E. Dupuy, A. de V., la vie et l'œuvre (1913); E. Estève, A. de V., sa pensée et son art (1923); P. Flottes, La pensée politique et sociale de V. (1927); F. Baldensperger, A. de V. (1933); A. Whitridge, A. de V. (1933); G. Bonnefoy, La pensée religieuse et morale d'A. de V. (1946); F. Germain, L'imagination d'A. de V. (1962).
G.B.

Viktorin Kornel ze Všehrd: see Všehrd.

Vilakazi, BENEDICT WALLET: see AFRICA (SUB-SAHARAN): Southern African Languages.

Vilanova, ARNAU DE (*Valencia ?1240; †at sea off Italy 1311), Catalan physician, alchemist and theologian. He taught medicine at Montpellier and exercised great influence over James II of Aragon and Frederick III of Sicily. Much attacked for religious arrogance, his De adventu Antichristi et fine mundi and his Confessió de Barcelona, in Catalan, reveal his main obsession. He denounced ecclesiastical corruption and advocated a vernacular Bible. His opinions were condemned as heretical in 1316.

Obres catalanes (ed. M. Batllori and J. Carreras Artau, 2 vols, 1947).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, II (1947).—B. H[auréau] in Histoire littéraire de la France, XXVIII (1881); P. Diepgen, A. von V. als Politiker und Laien-theologe (1909). G.W.R.

Vilde, EDUARD (*Pudivere manor, Virumaa 4 III 1865; †Tallinn 26 XII 1933), Estonian novelist, short-story writer and playwright. After an early education, which gave him a knowledge of German, Vilde worked on various Estonian and German newspapers, married twice, travelled widely in Europe and the United States, was Estonian minister in Berlin, and from 1920 onwards lived as an author at home. While engaged in journalism in the 1880s Vilde wrote many light novels and stories, which made him very popular. His literary importance dates from the 1890s with the influx of critical realism into Estonian literature. His work of the middle period culminated in a historical trilogy (1902–08) giving a cross-section of Estonian material and spiritual development in the middle of the 19th century. The influence of journalism pervades his use of language till c. 1912, when he was able to devote more care to its perfection. From then till his death Vilde wrote his aesthetically most satisfying novels (e.g. Mäeküla piimamees, 'The Dairyman of Mäeküla', 1916) and plays (e.g. Pisuhänd, 'The Hobgoblin', 1913). Like Tammisaare*, Vilde is a distinguished representative of the Estonian novel.

NOVELS: Karikas kihvti (1893); 'Linda' aktsiad (1894); Kümale maale (1896); Mahtsa sõda (1902); Aufbruch in Machtra, 1952; Kui Anija mehed Tallinnas käisid (1903); Prohvet Maltisvet (1905–08).—SHORT STORIES: Kuhu päike ei paista (1887); Jutused (1912); Muiged (1913).—PLAYS: Tabamaata ime (1912); Side (1922).—Kogutud teosed (coll. works; 33 vols, 1923–34).

M. Sillaots, E. V. naistüüb (1925); D. Palgi, E. V. 'Mäeküla piimamehe' stiil (1929); K. Mihkla, E. V. (1935); H. Salu, E. V. n historiallisest romaanist (1964); V. Alttoa, E. V. (1965); A. Hint, E. V. sammu . . . (1965). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Vildrac, CHARLES, pseud. of CHARLES MESSENGER (*Paris 23 XI 1882; †Saint-Tropez 25 VI 1971), French poet and dramatist. One of the 'unanimist' group of poets, Vildrac excels as a dramatist in the delicate portrayal of simple, sensitive humanity. The production of his Paquebot Tenacity (1920) is a landmark in the theatrical movement initiated by Jacques Copeau at the Vieux Colombier theatre. He also wrote essays and travel memoirs.

VERSE: Livre d'amour (1914; Eng. tr. W. Bynner, New York, 1923); Chants du désespéré (1920).—PLAYS: Michel Auclair (1922); Madame Béliard (1926); La brouille (1931); L'air du temps (1938);

Trois mois de prison (1942); Le jardinier de Samos (1947); L'absence (1952); Théâtre I, II (1942, 1948); Théâtre pour la jeunesse: Les jouets du Père Noël (1952).

Art Libre (special no., Mar. 1921); L. Savitzky, 'C. V. et le théâtre contemporain' in Mercur de France, CLXIII (1923); M. L. Bidal, Les écrivains de l'Abbaye (1938); G. Bouquet and P. Menanteau, C. V. (1959). T.W. (M.G.)

Vilenkin, NIKOLAY MAXIMOVICH: see Minsky, N.

Villaespesa, FRANCISCO (*Laujar, Almería 14 X 1877; †Madrid 9 IV 1936), Spanish poet and dramatist. In 1897 he was already leading the new poetical movement started by Rubén Darío*. He carried it triumphantly on to the stage with El alcázar de las perlas (1911). To him is chiefly due the rapid popularization of this MODERNISM. He adapted it to Romantic themes: Orientalism, past glories of Spain, the passing of youth, etc. Up to the 1920s he enjoyed an excessive popularity, but now he has fallen into undeserved oblivion. His brilliant, facile poetry is not always exempt from vulgarities, but the more intimate, less flamboyant poems are as good as the best of the period.

Obras completas (12 vols, 1927); Poesías completas (ed. F. de Mendizábal, 2 vols, 1954).—'After Las Ánimas' and 'The Hesperides' (tr. T. Walsh in Hispanic Anthology, 1920); 'Worn Gold' (tr. H. Eldredge Fish in Translations From Hispanic Poets, 1938).

J. Montero y Alonso, 'Prólogo' in Sus mejores poesías (1928); J. Álvarez Sierra, F. V. (1949).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Villalón, CRISTÓBAL DE (fl. mid-16th century), Spanish humanist. He wrote a comparison between the ancient and modern, an imitation of Castiglione* called El scholástico, and a treatise on usury. He did not write the Viaje de Turquía (Laguna*), and it is almost certain that the Crotalón—a curious Erasmian novel—is not his work.

Ingeniosa comparación entre lo antiguo y lo presente (ed. M. Serrano y Sanz, 1898); El Scholástico, I (ed. R. J. A. Kerr, 1967); El Crotalón in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., VII; Viaje de Turquía, ibid., II.

A. Farinelli, Dos excéntricos: C. de V. y el Dr Juan Huarte (1936); M. Bataillon, Érasme et l'Espagne (1937; Span. tr. Mexico, 1950).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Villalonga, LLORENÇ (*Palma de Mallorca 1897), Catalan novelist. His first novel, Mort de dama (1931), a pitiless satire of the decadent Majorcan aristocracy, provoked a social scandal, but since the war his writing (especially Bearn, 1961) has been on the contrary an elegy of the semi-feudal Majorca recently destroyed by the touristic boom. His novels are quite conventional from a technical point of view, but possess some of the psychological perception of Proust*, combined with the irony of Voltaire* (the two writers he admires most). He has succeeded in creating a very personal literary world.

Obres completes, I: El mite de Bearn (1966; intro. J. Molas). J.L.M.

Villamediana, DON JUAN DE TASSIS Y PERALTA, CONDE DE (*Lisbon 1582; ∞1601 Ana de Mendoza de la Cerda; †Madrid 1622), Spanish poet. He led a debauched life at the Spanish court, fought in Naples and Lombardy, returned to Madrid, was banished from the capital, and returned there on the death of Philip III. He composed a chivalric play for court performance; three months later he was mysteriously murdered. He wrote five poetical fables in imitation of Góngora's* Polifemo, some magnificent love poems and innumerable political and personal lampoons. He was a friend to and a patron of Góngora.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLII (sel. only); Poesías de Juan de Tassis, Conde de V. (ed. L. R. C., 1944; excludes fables, play and lampoons); Cancionero de Mendes Britto (ed. J. M. Rozas, 1963); Poesías (ed. idem, 1969).

E. Cotarelo, El Conde de V. (1886); N. Alonso Cortés, La muerte del Conde de V. (1928); J. M. Rozas, El Conde de V. (1964). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Villani, FILIPPO (*1345; †1405), Italian chronicler. Chancellor of the comune of Perugia; public reader of Dante* in Florence (1401); a scholar and humanist, he composed the Vite di illustri Fiorentini and a Latin commentary on the first canto of the Divina Commedia. On the death of his father, Matteo Villani*, he added one book (42 chapters) to the Cronica and continued the account of what seemed 'worthy of remembrance' in Florentine affairs until the establishment of peace with Pisa (1364).

Cronica (ed. I. Moutier and F. Gherardi Dragomanni, 1846); Cronisti del Trecento (ed. R. Palmarocchi, 1935).—Il commento al primo canto dell'Inferno (ed. G. Cugnoni, 1896).

M.W.

Villani, GIOVANNI (*Florence ?1276; ∞Madonna Sobilia, ∞Monna de' Pazzi; †ibid. 1348), Italian chronicler. Florentine merchant; consul of the Arte di Calimala. Politically opposed to both the Grandi and the White Guelfs, he occupied responsible offices in the Florentine comune; Prior (1316, 1317, 1321). Villani wrote the most important Florentine Cronica of the 14th century. He reviewed in 12 books the history of events which led from the destruction of the Tower of Babel to the Florence of his day. Books 1-6 are a conventional medieval compilation of fables, legends and Biblical stories, but with regard to the true history of Florence he is very accurate; and Books 7-12 comprise an invaluable though artless account of the social, political and economic life of Florence (1265-1348) drawn largely from contemporary documents and personal evidence.

Cronica (ed. I. Moutier and F. Gherardi Dragomanni, 4 vols, 1845); Cronisti del Trecento (ed. R. Palmarocchi, 1935).—Villani's Chronicle, Being Selections From the First Nine Books (ed. P. H. Wicksteed, tr. R. E. Selfe, 1906).

R. Palmarocchi, I V. (1937).

M.W.

Villani, MATTEO (*Florence ?1295; †ibid. 12 VII 1363), Italian chronicler. On the death of his brother Giovanni, he continued the Cronica with a well-ordered, day-to-day account of Italian affairs from the time of the plague (1348) to the death of Piero Farnese (1363). These ten books constitute a valuable link in the series of 14th-century Florentine chronicles.

Cronica (ed. I. Moutier and F. Gherardi Dragomanni, 2 vols, 1846); Cronisti del Trecento (ed. R. Palmarocchi, 1935).

M.W.

Villari, PASQUALE (*Naples 3 X 1826; †Florence 17 XII 1917), Italian historian and patriot. His best-known works are Storia di Gerolamo Savonarola e dei suoi tempi (1859-61) and Niccolo Machiavelli e i suoi tempi (1877-82). He was a friend of De* Sanctis and took part with him in the Neapolitan rising of 1848.

Saggi storici e critici (1890); I primi due secoli della storia di Firenze (1893-94); Il Savonarola e la critica tedesca (1900); L'Italia da Carlo Magno ad Arrigo VII (1910).—L'Italia e la civiltà (ed. G. Bonacci, 1916).

P. C. Falletti Fossati, La personalità storico-morale di P. V. (1919); E. Garin, La cultura italiana fra Otto e Novecento (1962).

N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Villasandino, ALFONSO ÁLVAREZ DE (†c. 1424), Spanish poet, a court versifier for Henry II and John I of Castile. He began (c. 1370) by writing in Galician but, sensitive to changes of fashion, turned to Castilian. His verse is by turns mercenary, religious, satirical and amorous. He is an unequal poet, but has technical skill and, occasionally, real charm. Some poems speak, seemingly with great candour, of his personal life.

G. Caravaggi, 'V. et les derniers troubadours de Castille' in Mélanges offerts à Rita Lejeune, I (Gembloux, 1969); see also Baena*.

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Villaurrutia, XAVIER (*1903; †1950), Mexican poet and dramatist who was associated with the influential magazine Contemporáneos (1928-31).

His best-known collection of poems, Nostalgia de la muerte (1939), include some very fine examples of meditative, oneiric verse, remarkable for precision of language. He was also a dramatist.

PLAYS: El ausente (1937); La hiedra (1941); El yerro candente (1944); Invitación a la muerte (1940).—Obras (intro. Ali Chumacero, Mexico, 1966). J.F.

Villaverde, CIRILO (*1812; †1894), Cuban novelist and patriot. He spent many years in exile and his novel Cecilia Valdés (tr. S. G. Gest, 1962), begun as early as 1839, was not published in its final form until 1882. The novel is a sensitive study of race relations in Cuba, the heroine being a mulatto, the unacknowledged illegitimate daughter of a wealthy Spanish slave trader, who falls in love with her own half-brother. This conventionally romantic plot is however only the scaffolding of a novel which is rich in scenes of life on the plantations and in Havana in the early years of the 19th century. J.F.

Villaviciosa, JOSÉ DE (*Sigüenza 1589; †Cuenca 1658), Spanish poet. He was a Doctor of Laws, an Inquisitor and a canon at Cuenca. His burlesque epic, La mosquée (1615), was an imitation of Folengo's* Moschaea. It has some ingenuity and humour, but the joke is rather prolix.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XVII.

J. P. W. Crawford, 'Teófilo Folengo's Moschaea and J. de V.'s La Mosquée' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XXVII (1912). E.M.W.

Villegas, ANTONIO DE (fl. mid-16th century), Spanish novelist and poet. His Inventario (licensed 1551; pub. 1565) contains an early text of the novel El Abencerraje* (of which he was probably not the original author) and a pastoral episode which probably precedes Montemayor's* Diana. The verses included in the Inventario are sometimes agreeable.

H. Mérimée, 'El Abencerraje d'après l'Inventario et la Diana' in Bull. Hispanique, XXI (1919); F. López Estrada and J. E. Keller, A. de V.'s 'El Abencerraje' (1964; incl. tr.).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Villegas, ESTEBAN MANUEL DE (*Matute, nr Nájera 1589; †Nájera 1669), Spanish poet and translator. He held a provincial post and spent much time in litigation. The Inquisition disapproved of his ideas about free will and confiscated some of his writings. His Anacreontics (1618) were often imitated in the 18th century. He wrote two or three anthology pieces, but his work is on the whole disappointing. In his old age he translated Boethius*.

Las Eróticas y traducción de Boecio (2 vols, 1797); Poesías in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLII;

Eróticas o amorosas (ed. N. Alonso Cortés, 1913).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, V, app. VI. E.M.W.

Villehardouin, GEOFFROY DE, Marshal of Champagne (†?1212), French chronicler. As one of the most influential advisers to the leaders of the Fourth Crusade, he became Marshal of Romania after the fall of Constantinople (1204), was granted a fief in Macedonia and appears never to have returned to France.

His unfinished Conquête de Constantinople, which describes events from 1198 to 1207, was written with the object of justifying the diversion of the Fourth Crusade to Constantinople. Though biased, it gives a more complete and accurate picture of the expedition than does Robert de Clari*, and it is far superior as a literary work. Villehardouin is the first great master of French prose, and his style is characterized by its clarity and terseness.

Conquête de Constantinople (ed. and mod. Fr. tr. E. Faral, 2 vols, 1938–39); Historiens et chroniqueurs du moyen âge (ed. A. Pauphilet and E. Pognon, 1952); Eng. tr. M. R. B. Shaw (1963).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Causeries du Lundi, IX (1886); H. Moeser, G. von V. und der Lateinerzug gegen Byzanz (1897); A. Pauphilet, 'Robert de Clari et V.' in Mélanges A. Jeanroy (1928); E. Faral, 'G. de V.' in Rev. hist., CLXXVII (1936). A.H.D.

Villena, ENRIQUE DE (*1384; ∞ María de Albornoz; †Madrid 1434), Spanish translator and miscellaneous writer. He allowed his wife to become mistress to Henry III of Castile in his endeavours to become Marquis of Villena. He was interested in all kinds of learning, including magic (he wrote a treatise on the evil eye); after his death John II ordered his books to be destroyed. The Arte de trovar, a treatise on poetry and language, shows the influence of Catalan and Provençal literature. He translated into prose the Aeneid and the Divine Comedy. He also wrote an interpretation of the labours of Hercules (first in Catalan, then in Spanish), an essay on carving, and medical, astrological and religious treatises.

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Arte de trovar (ed. F. J. Sánchez Cantón, 1923); Arte cisorio (ed. F. Sainz de Robles, 1967); 'Tres tratados' in Rev. Hispanique, XLI (1917); Los doze trabajos de Hércules (ed. M. Morreale, 1958).

E. Cotarelo y Mori, Don E. de V., su vida y obras (1896); L. F. Sachs, 'E. de V.: portrait of the magician as outsider' in Stud. in Philol., LXIV (1967). A.D.D.

Villiers de L'Isle-Adam, PHILIPPE-AUGUSTE-MATHIAS (*Saint-Brieuc 28 II 1838; †Paris 19

VIII 1889), French writer. Villiers came of a noble and ancient family and spent a dreamy youth in his native Brittany. Most of his adult life was spent in Paris, where he lived in conditions of appalling poverty, though with his pride unbroken. His work expressed an idealism at once Romantic and Symbolist. It drew its inspiration from Hoffmann*, Hegel*, Baudelaire*, Poe* and still more from his concern with spiritualism and the occult sciences. His stories, beginning with the Contes cruels (1883, 1889; Eng. tr. R. Baldick, 1963), are remarkable as satirical fantasies. His poetic drama, Axel (1890), is a magnificent refusal to come to terms with the outer world and is the best expression of his lyrical idealism.

Premières poésies (1856–58); Isis (1862); Elen (1866); Morgane (1866); La révolte (1870); The Revolt and the Escape, tr. T. Barclay, 1898); Le nouveau monde (1880); L'Ève future (1886); Tribulat Bonhommet (1887); Le secret de l'échafaud (1888).—Œuvres complètes (10 vols, 1914–29).

H. Chapoutot, V. de L'I.-A. (1908); M. Daireaux, V. de L'I.-A., l'homme et l'œuvre (1936); G. Michaud, Le message poétique du symbolisme (1947); R. L. Doyon, Le Bestiaire de V. de L'I.-A. (1957); A. W. Raitt, V. de L'I.-A. et le mouvement symboliste (1965). M.G.; J.P.R.

Villon, FRANÇOIS, alias DE MONTCORBIER OF DES LOGES (*1431), French poet. A Master of Arts of Paris (1452), he killed a priest in a brawl on Corpus Christi Day, 1455, and participated in a robbery at the College of Navarre around Christmas 1456. From then until 1461 he seems to have led a wandering life, visiting the courts of Charles d'Orléans* and of Jean II of Bourbon. Late in 1462 he was condemned to death for his part in a quarrel outside the booth of a Papal protonotary in Paris, the sentence being commuted on appeal (5 I 1463) to perpetual banishment from Paris. His subsequent history is completely unknown.

Villon's work consists of two long poems (Le Lais, 1456; Le Testament, 1461), cast in the form of comic wills, and a number of shorter pieces. The Lais is immature work and its humour is largely verbal in character. The Testament, on which his fame chiefly rests, contains, beside comic bequests, long passages of moral reflection and includes a number of celebrated ballades. Villon is a deeply personal and intimate poet, and earlier scholars tried to relate his work to his tragic and criminal life, regarding his acrid humour, deep cynicism and unabashed obscenity on the one hand and his genuine religious feeling and moral perspicacity on the other as true reflections of a complex personality. But he himself clearly recognizes that he is writing on two levels: that of the literary clown and parodist and that of the orthodox moralist. Although the shifts from jest to earnest are frequently disconcerting, many of his serious themes are common-places of the period, to which by his art he was able to give perfect and enduring expression. The personal and the highly conventional are mingled in his powerful but narrow treatment of the theme of death, the great leveller and the grim witness to the impermanence of the joys and beauties of this mortal world.

Eds: L. Thausne (3 vols, 1923); A. Longnon (rev. L. Foulet, 1967).—Eng. trs: A. Bonner (1960); Beram Saklatvala (intro. John Fox, 1968).

General studies: P. Champion (2 vols, 1913); D. B. Wyndham Lewis (1928); I. Siciliano (1934); F. Desonay (1947); John Fox (1962); J. P. Th. Deroy (1967); P. Le Gentil (1967).—W. H. Rice, The European Ancestry of V.'s Satirical Testaments (1941). F.W.

Vincent of Beauvais (*c. 1190; †1264), joined the Dominican Order and came to the notice of Louis IX and his Queen, for whom he wrote a treatise De eruditione filiorum regalium. He is famous for his Speculum maius, a vast encyclopaedia of universal knowledge. It consists, in its final form, of three parts, Speculum naturale, Speculum doctrinale and Speculum historiale. It was a standard work, much copied and, later, printed. F.J.E.R.

Ed. Strasbourg (1473–76), Douai (1624; repr. Graz, 1964–); Speculum historiale (part ed. O. Holder-Egger in Monumenta Germaniae historica, XXIV, 1879).

B. L. Ullman, 'A project for a new edition of V. of B.' in Speculum, VIII (1933); A. Steiner, 'Guillaume Perrault and V. of B.', ibid.; A. Gábel, The Educational Ideas of V. of B. (1956). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Vinci, LEONARDO DA: see Leonardo da Vinci.

Vinciguerra, ANTONIO (*Venice 1440–46?; †Zovon, Padua 9 XII 1503), Italian poet, secretary to the Venetian republic. One of the first writers of satire in terza rima, his work is inspired by moral sentiment and medieval asceticism.

Opera nuova (1527).

A. Della Torre, Di A. V. e delle sue satire (1902); P. L. Rambaldi, 'Di A. V.' in Nuovo archivio veneto (1905). C.Dr.

Vinet, ALEXANDRE (*Ouchy 17 VI 1797; †Clarens 4 V 1847), Swiss Protestant theologian, philosopher and critic. He taught French literature in Basle (1817–37) and theology at the Académie de Lausanne (1837–46). A noble and single-minded Christian personality, his thought was emancipated from traditional Protestantism and inspired by the religious revival of the Réveil. Perhaps the greatest figure in 19th-century French Protestantism, he was a powerful defender of tolerance and freedom of conscience. His literary criticism, penetrating and subtle, won him the esteem of the greatest writers and critics of the day.

Mémoire sur la liberté des cultes (1826); Essai sur la manifestation des convictions religieuses et sur la séparation de l'Église et de l'État (1839); Études sur Pascal (1848).—Œuvres (ed. Société . . . Vinet, 1910 ff.); Lettres (4 vols, 1947–49).

Henri Clavier, La pensée religieuse de V. (1938); G. G. Baardman, L'œuvre pédagogique de V. (1939); Philippe Bridel, La pensée de V. (1944); V. vivant (coll. speeches on the centenary of V.'s death; 1947). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Vinje, AASMUND OLAVSSON (*Vinje 6 IV 1818; ∞1869 Rosa Kjeldseth; †Gran, Hadeland 30 VII 1870), Norwegian poet and essayist. Born of a peasant family in the poorest circumstances, Vinje eventually took a law degree in 1856. For some years he was a journalist, and in 1858, having decided that he would henceforth only use New Norwegian, he started a paper of his own in that language, Dølen ('The Dalesman'). In 1861 appeared his first book Ferdaminni, an account of a journey he made to Trondheim in 1860 for the coronation of Charles XV. Here Vinje discourses on a variety of topics, revealing a sensitive feeling for nature and a realism which was quite alien to the current national Romanticism. His poems are often marked by a mild melancholy and a longing for the scenes of childhood; most important of them is the epic poem Storegut (1866). Vinje is chiefly memorable today as one of the outstanding pioneers of New Norwegian in Norway.

Diktsamling (verse; 1864).—PROSE: Ferdaminni fraa Sumaren 1860 (2 vols, 1861); A Norseman's Views of Britain and the British (Edinburgh, 1863); Om Schweigaard (1870).—Skrifter i samling (ed. O. Midttun, 5 vols, 1916–21).

V. Visle, Aa. V. (1929); S. Skard, Aa. O. V. og antikken (1938); A. Bergsgård, Aa. V. (1940); D. Grønset, I V.s fotspor (1960); O. Midttun, Aa. O. V. (rev. ed. 1966). R.G.P.

Vinogradov, ANATOLY KORNELEYEVICH (*1888), Soviet author. His Tri tsveta vremeni (1930; Three Colours of Time, tr. G. Selley, 1946) is about Stendhal*, while Chërny konsul (1931; The Black Consul, tr. E. Burns, 1934) deals with Toussaint L'Ouverture's rising in Haiti, and Povest' o brat'yakh Turgenyevykh (1932) with the Russian freemasonry. The hero of another of his novels is Paganini, and of another the famous Russian scientist Mendeleev. They are all well told and well documented. As a literary historian, however, he is less reliable.

The Condemnation of Paganini (tr. S. Garry, 1946). J.L.

Vinogradov, VIKTOR VLADIMIROVICH (*1894),

Soviet literary critic. He made valuable investigations into the works of Pushkin*, Gogol*, Tolstoy*, Avvakum* etc.

Etyudy o stile Gogolya (1926); Evolutsiya russkogo naturalizma (1929); Yazyk Pushkina (1935); O yazyke Tolstogo (1935); Ocherki po istorii russkogo literaturnogo yazyka (1949).

J.L.

Virgil (PUBLIUS VERGILIUS MARO) (*nr Mantua 15 X 70; †Brundisium 21 IX 19 B.C.), the greatest of the Latin poets. Though of humble birth, Virgil received a liberal education at Cremona, Milan and Rome. In 41 his paternal estate was confiscated but restored on the intercession of influential friends. The poems of the Appendix Vergiliana, traditionally believed to have been early works, are not now generally regarded as Virgilian; his earliest certain work is the Eclogues (Bucolics), 42–37 B.C. Most of these ten poems are influenced by the Greek pastorals of Theocritus*, but have an artificial admixture of contemporary persons (e.g. Pollio* in 4), sometimes concealed (e.g. Tityrus in 1 is Virgil himself), and contemporary events (e.g. the confiscated farm) with idealized shepherds in an imaginary setting. They remain very difficult to interpret.

Virgil was by 37 B.C. a close friend of Maecenas, and at his suggestion composed the Georgics, a treatise on agriculture in four books. He claims to be the Roman Hesiod* but was much more, for, as Lucretius* had raised didactic poetry to a level never attained by the Greeks, so Virgil created a masterpiece in which the subject is treated with such evident love and sympathy that a didactic theme is transformed into inspiring poetry (see especially the praises of Italy, ii, 135 ff.).

His last years were devoted to the Aeneid, which was unfinished at his death: his last request for it to be destroyed was countermanded, Augustus ordering it to be edited without additions. Virgil's aim was to glorify the rise of Rome to her destiny under Augustus and to make the reader feel by what toil and self-sacrifice Roman greatness was made possible. The 12 books record the history of Trojan Aeneas after the sack of Troy—his adventures and travels before reaching Italy (1–6), his battles to found a new city there (7–12). The underlying theme of Rome's heaven-sent mission as a civilizing and lawgiving power is introduced at the outset and is brought into prominence by a number of passages woven skilfully into the main structure.

In the Aeneid, Virgil is indebted in outward form, and from time to time in episode, to Homer* and other Greek writers from the tragic poets to the Alexandrines. Among his Latin predecessors he owes an especial debt to Ennius*. But whatever is utilized is transformed by his own master-touch. The Aeneid is the greatest work of Latin literature. Virgil treated a lofty and national theme with masterly poetic diction, narrative and descriptive power, and with a perfection of metrical technique. Yet side by side with the Roman note he reveals a tender humanity which could feel the pathos of the tragedy of a Dido or a Turnus or of any sufferer, and a poetic insight which can turn from the particular to find the universal.

VIRGILIUS MARO GRAMMATICUS [700]

Appendix Vergiliana (ed. W. V. Clausen et al., 1966); Catalepton (ed. with comm. R. E. H. Westendorp-Boerma, 2 vols, 1949–63); Bucolics and Georgics (ed. T. E. Page, 1898); Georgics (ed. W. Richter, 1957); Aeneid (ed. with comm. J. W. Mackail, 1930; eds with comm.: Bk 1: R. G. Austin, 1971; Bk 2: idem, 1964; Bk 3: R. D. Williams, 1962; Bk 4: A. S. Pease, 1935, repr. 1967; R. G. Austin, 1955; Bk 5: R. D. Williams, 1960; Bk 6: E. Norden, 4th ed. 1957).—Opera omnia (ed. R. A. B. Mynors, 1969; ed. with comm. J. Conington, H. Nettleship and F. Haverfield, reprs of latest eds 1966–).—Tr. H. R. Fairclough (2 vols, 1916–34).

W. Y. Sellar, V. (3rd ed. 1897); T. R. Glover, V. (7th ed. 1942); H. J. Rose, The Eclogues of V. (1942); K. Büchner, P. V. M. (1961; repr. from Pauly-Wissowa art.); F. Klingner, V. (1967); K. Quinn, V.'s Aeneid (1968); W. A. Camps, An Introduction to the Aeneid (1969); L. P. Wilkinson, The Georgics of V. (1970). A.J.D.

Virgilius Maro Grammaticus (fl. late 6th century), a grammarian of Toulouse, who wrote in a bizarre Latin 15 epitomae and eight letters, purporting to deal with grammatical questions, in which the real and the purely fantastic and improbable are mingled. He was taken seriously by Irish and Anglo-Saxon writers.

Virgillii Maronis grammatici opera (ed. J. Huemer, 1886); D. Tardi, Les Epitomae de Virgile de Toulouse (1928; Fr. tr.). F.J.E.R.

Vir Singh (*1872; †1957), scholar, journalist, novelist and poet, almost solely responsible for the early development of modern Punjabi literature. While his trilogy of historical novels dealing with an idealized Sikh past, and his epic poem, Rāṇā Sūrat Singh, are noteworthy, it is as a lyric poet that he is most highly regarded today.

Nargas, Songs of a Sikh (tr. Puran Singh, 1924). C.S.

Virtá, Nikolay Evgenyevich (*Tambov 1906), Soviet author whose novel, Odinochestvo (1936), won the Stalin prize.

Zakonomernost' (novel; 1937); Zagovor obrechennykh (play; 1949); Vecherniy Zvon (novel; 2 vols, 1951). J.L.

Virués, Cristóbal de (*Valencia ?1550; †?1610), Spanish dramatist and poet. As an army captain he fought at Lepanto and campaigned in Italy.

His epic poem El Monserrate (1588; rev. 1602) is a readable version of a pious legend. His five tragedies, written before 1590, are bloody, rhetorical and Senecan. The tragedy of Elisa Dido was an attempt to write according to 'the rules'; the others are in three acts and have no chorus. His shorter poems are unjustly neglected.

Obras trágicas y líricas (1609); El Monserrate in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XVII; Poetas dramáticos valencianos, I (ed. E. Juliá Martínez, 1926); Poesía heroica del Imperio, I (ed. L. Rosales and L. F. Vivanco, 1940).

H. Mérimée, L'art dramatique à Valencia (Toulouse, 1913); C. V. Sargent, A Study of the Dramatic Works of C. de V. (1930). E.M.W.

Virza, Edvarts, pseud. of E. Lieknis (*Emburga canton 27 XII 1883; †1921 Elza Stērste; †Rīga 1 IV 1940), Latvian poet. He began to publish verse in 1906. The First World War brought tragedy to his father's family, and he himself was evacuated to St Petersburg. On his return to an independent Latvia he married a Latvian authoress and received a diplomatic appointment in Paris, where he became a lifelong admirer of French literature. Back home in 1920, Virza divided his time between journalism and authorship, distinguishing himself as an eloquent and formally disciplined patriotic poet in verse and prose (cf. Straumēni, 1935) and as a translator of French Renaissance poetry. He associated himself wholeheartedly with Ulmanis' authoritarian régime in 1934 and became its poet laureate and apologist. Death spared him the sight of its fall.

VERSE: Biķeris (1907); Dievišķīgās rotaļas (1919); Laikmets un lira (1923); Poēmas (1924); Skaidriba (1927); Lauku balsis (1927); Dzejas un poēmas (1933); Hercogs Jēkabs (1937).—MISCELLANEOUS PROSE: Zem karoga (1935); Kārlis Ulmanis (1935); Jauņa junda (1936).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Tricolour Sun (1936). W.K.M.

Viśākhadatta (fl. c. A.D. 800), author of the Sanskrit drama Mudrārākṣasa ('The Signet of Rākṣasa'), a historical play dealing with the plot by which Cāṇakya wins over Rākṣasa, the minister of the Nanda king of Pāṭaliputra (Patna), to betray his master and replace him by the usurper Chandragupta Maurya, the founder of the Maurya empire in 325 B.C. H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Vischer, Friedrich Theodor (*Ludwigsburg 30 VI 1807; †Gmünden 14 IX 1887), German writer. He studied at the Tübinger College but proved unsuitable, entered the Church, and was finally Professor of aesthetics at Tübingen (1837), Zürich (1855), returning to Tübingen in 1866. He made valuable contributions to aesthetics but his Faust Part III (1862) was judged in doubtful taste. The novel Auch Einer shows Vischer's best qualities—tragi-comical, philosophic and truculent.

Über das Erhabene und Komische (1837); Kritische Gänge (2 vols, 1844; 6 vols, 1860–73); Ästhetik oder Wissenschaft des Schönen (3 vols, 1846–57); Auch Einer (2 vols, 1879; sel. tr. H. Müller-Casenow in The Humour of Germany, 1892); Briefwechsel mit Mörike (ed. R. Vischer, 1926); Dichterische Werke (5 vols, 1917).

H. Glockner, V. und das 19. Jahrhundert (1931); W. Oelmüller, F. T. V. und das Problem der nachhegelschen Ästhetik (1959); F. Schlawe, F. T. V. (1959). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Vishnevsky, VSEVOLOD (1910–51), Soviet dramatist whose Pervaya konnaya (1929), a dramatized chronicle about the formation of the victorious Budyonny cavalry force during the Civil War, was highly successful.

Dramaticheskie proizvedeniya (1934); Sobranie sochineniy (5 vols, 1954–).—‘An Optimistic Tragedy’ (tr. H. C. Scott and R. Carr in Four Soviet Plays, 1937). J.L.

Visio Philiberti: see Alma y el Cuerpo, DISPUTA DEL.

Visnapuu, HENRIK (*Leebiku canton 2 I 1890; †Long Island 3 IV 1951), Estonian poet. Visnapuu had a chequered career, which included teaching, study at Tartu and Berlin Universities, free-lancing in Tartu, and work in the Estonian civil service. He spent his last years in refugee camps in Germany and died soon after arriving in the U.S.A.

Visnapuu began as a member of the Siuru group and made his name with the sensual verse of Amores (1917), which Igor Severyanin* translated into Russian. The book was followed by many other collections of lyric and narrative poetry showing a notable variety of theme, technical brilliance and unflagging vitality. With Ränikivi (‘Flint’; 1925) patriotic themes become frequent and they culminate in his latest work. Visnapuu is a poet of considerable originality and depth of emotion.

VERSE: Jumalaga, Enel (1918); Talihari (1920); Hõbedased kuljudes (1920); Käoorvik (1920); Parsilai (1924); Maarjamaa laulud (1927); Jehoova surm (1927); Puuslikud (1929); Tuulesõel (1931); Päike ja jõgi (1932); Üle kodumäe (1934); Saatana vari (1937); Põhjalvalgus (1938); Kaks algust (1940); Tuule ema (1942); Esivanemate haud (1946); Tuuline teekond (1946); Mare Balticum (1948); Linnutee (1951).—PLAYS: Meie küla poisid (1932); Madaam Sohk ja Pojad (1933).—Vanad ja vasted poeetid (essays; 1921).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Anthology of Modern Estonian Poetry (1953).

A. Mägi, ‘H. V.’ in Estonian Literature (1968); E. Nirk, ‘H. V.’ in Estonian Literature (1970).

W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Visscher, ANNA ROEMERS (*Amsterdam 1583; ∞Boot van Wesel; †Alkmaar 6 XII 1651), Dutch poet, daughter of Roemer Visscher*. At an early age she met many Amsterdam poets at the ‘Saligh Roemershuis’—‘blessed house of Roemers’—writes Vondel*. In 1622 she visited Cats* at Middelburg, inspiring many poets in Zeeland to eulogies, collected in De Zeeuwsche Nachtegaal (1623), which includes some poems of Anna’s. Her talent was particularly suited to the emblematic genre. She wrote legends to Roemer Visscher’s Sinnepoppen (1619). A.M.B.W.

Poetic works (complete ed. N. Beets, 1881).

J. Scheltema, Anna en Maria Tesselschade (1808); J. H. W. Unger, ‘A. R.’ in Oud-Holland, III (1884); F. Kossmann, Gedichten van A. R. V. (1925); H. Hardenberg, ‘A. R. V.’ in Spiegel der historie, I (1966). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Visscher, MARIA: see Tesselschade, MARIA VISSCHER.

Visscher, ROEMER (*Amsterdam 1547; ∞1583 Aefgen van Campen; †ibid. 1620), Dutch poet and prose writer; sponsor and leader of the great 17th-century poets. He himself wrote a number of small poems in the new tone, but in the popular spirit, collected in Brabbelingh, full of worldly wisdom, wholesome humour and constructive criticism; also the first emblematic poetry in Dutch literature in Sinnepoppen (1614).

N. van der Laan, Uit R. V.’s Brabbelingh (2 vols, 1918–23) and in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., XLII (1923); Sinnepoppen (ed. L. Brummel, 1949).

J. C. Arens in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXXXII (1966) and Spiegel d. Lett., IX (1965–66); R. Foncke in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1966). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Visser, ANDRIES GERHARDUS (*Fraserburg, Cape Colony 1 III 1878; ∞Lettie Conradie, ∞1927 Marie de Villiers; †10 VI 1929), Afrikaans poet. The best of his verse is love poetry: the moving elegiac poems on his first wife, the playful, vivacious poems by which he sought to win his second wife. With a good ear for music he uses conventional forms and motifs in a graceful, personal way.

Gedigte (1925); Rose van Herinnering (1927); Die purper Iris (1930); Uit ons prille Jeug (1930). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Vital, CHAIM BEN JOSEPH, CALABRESE (*Safed 1543; †Damascus 6 V 1620), Palestinian Hebrew mystical writer. Rabbi in Jerusalem 1584–94, he was the chief disciple of Isaac Luria*, whose oral teachings he recorded in many writings (coll. as ‘Etz Chayim, Korzec, 1785).

Hoq le-Yisrael (devotional sels; Cairo, 1740).

S. Schechter, 'Safed in the 16th century' in Studies in Judaism, II (1908); G. G. Scholem, Major Trends of Jewish Mysticism (2nd ed. 1946). C.R.

Vitalis: see Sjöberg, ERIK.

Vitalis of Blois (fl. 1175), author of the Amphitryio or Geta and the Aulularia, versified tales in Latin elegiacs and described as comoediae. The Amphitryio is based on Plautus*, probably at second hand, and the Aulularia on the late Latin Querolus.

G. Cohen, La 'Comédie' latine en France au XIIe siècle (2 vols, 1931). F.J.E.R.

Vitoria, FRAY FRANCISCO DE (*?Burgos ?1483; †Salamanca 1546), Spanish theologian and jurist. He was a Dominican Friar who methodically reformed the teaching of theology at Salamanca after he had studied at Paris. His treatises on the Indies and on the just war are important for the history of international law.

Relectiones XII theologicae (Lyons, 1557; Salamanca, 1565; Antwerp, 1604; Span. tr. Relecciones teológicas, 3 vols, 1917).

L. Alonso Getino, El Maestro Fr. F. de V. (1930); V. Beltrán de Heredia, F. de V. (1939); Ricardo G. Villoslada, Fr. F. de V., fundador del derecho internacional (1946). E.M.W.

Vitrac, ROGER (*Puisac 17 XI 1899; †Paris 22 I 1952), French poet and playwright. A follower of Dada and the Surrealist movement, Vitrac avoided total involvement, and in the tradition of Jarry* and under the influence of Antonin Artaud* wrote brilliantly, irreverently and in an often cynical and mordant style mainly adapted to the theatre. Victor ou les enfants au pouvoir (1928) still retains its explosive power due to its crudely farcical language.

VERSE: Cruautés de la nuit (1927); Connaissance de la mort (1927; reissued as Deslyre, 1965).—

PLAYS: Les mystères de l'amour (1930); Le coup de Trafalgar (1934); Le camelot (1936); Les demoiselles du large (1938); Loup-garou (1939); Le sabre de mon père (1951).

H. Béhar, R. V. (1966).

M.G.

Vitruvius Pollio, Roman engineer, compiled, probably between 25 and 23 B.C., a work entitled De architectura in ten books. The sources are mainly Greek, together with practical experience. Neither his method nor his style deserves high praise, but his work is of the greatest value as the only extant ancient work upon architecture.

J.A.W.

Eds: A. Choisy (with comm. and tr.; 1909); F. Krohn (1912); trs: M. H. Morgan (1914; repr. 1960); F. Granger (2 vols, 1931–34).

L. Sontheimer, V. und seine Zeit (1908); E. Stuerzenacker, V. über die Baukunst (1938); A. Boethius, 'V. and the Roman architecture of his age' in Acta Instituti Romani regni Sueciae, 2nd ser., I (1939). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Vittorini, ELIO (*Syracuse 23 VII 1908; †12 II 1967), Italian novelist. He contributed to the review Solaria short stories later published under the title Piccola borghesia (1931) and the novel Il garofano rosso (1933–34; in book form with important pref., 1948; The Red Carnation, tr. A. Bower, 1953). In the latter work one can see Vittorini's preoccupation with the themes of happiness and social justice, which he dealt with most memorably in Conversazione in Sicilia (1941; Conversation in Sicily, tr. W. David, 1948), his most successful work. His anthology Americana (1941) played an important part in introducing American literature into Fascist Italy. Uomini e no (1945) deals with the Resistance in Milan and also with the rôle of culture in the face of Fascism, a subject discussed vigorously in Vittorini's periodical Il politecnico (pub. 1945–47). In later novels he relates his earlier themes to the post-war social scene.

Vittorini's status as a writer is the subject of much debate. The quality of his writing is uneven, and he is at his best in a stylized, lyrical manner, although he continually experiments. Some critics maintain that he is important as a 'man of culture', for his influence, rather than as a creative writer. This seems an inadequate assessment of one of the most vital and active writers of the pre- and post-war years.

FICTION: Il Sempione strizza l'occhio al Fréjus (1947; Tune for an Elephant, tr. E. Mosbacher, 1955); Le donne di Messina (1949; rev. ed. 1964).—VARIOUS: Diario in pubblico (1957); Le due tensioni. Appunti per una ideologia della letteratura (1967; posth.).

S. Pautasso, E. V. (1967); special nos of Il Menabò (X, 1967) and Il Ponte (April 1968) are devoted to V. B.M.

Vittorino da Feltre: see Rambaldoni, VITTORINO DE'.

Vivanco, LUIS FELIPE (*San Lorenzo del Escorial 1907), Spanish poet and literary critic, translator of Jammes* and, in collaboration with Luis Rosales*, dramatist.

Cantos de primavera (1936); Tiempo de dolor (1940); Continuación de la vida (1948); El descampado (1957); Memoria de la plata (1958); Lecciones para el hijo (1961). J.E.V.

Vivekananda (*1863; †1902), Indian monk, known as NARENDRA until he became a sanyasi. A graduate of Calcutta University, he became the chief disciple of Ramakrishna Paramahansa, and attended the Parliament of Religions in Chicago. He aspired to make Vedantic truths 'run like fire', to make them 'living, poetic in everyday life', and yet used the 'principles and methods of science' at a time when, in the West, Darwin* had shaken faith in religion and God. He is best read in selections, which should include some of his verse.

The Complete Works of Swami V. (8 vols, 1957). C.D.N.

Vives, JUAN LUIS (*Valencia 1492; ∞1524 Margarita Valldaura; †Bruges 1540), Spanish humanist. His ancestry was probably Jewish. He studied in Paris, settled in Bruges in 1512 and later became a Professor at Louvain. He went to England, obtained a fellowship at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, but his support of Catherine of Aragon involved his return to Bruges in 1527. He was a friend of Budé*, Erasmus* and Thomas More*. As a philosopher, Vives criticized the extremes of scholasticism and advocated a more critical approach. In certain respects he was a precursor of Bacon* and Descartes*. He was much interested in psychology, and his treatise De anima et vita was influential. His commentary on St Augustine's* City of God (Basle, 1522) was put on the Index after his death, but his other religious writings circulated freely. He wrote an interesting treatise on the education of women and a charming set of Latin dialogues for use in schools. In his political writings he showed himself a pacifist. He was the greatest Spanish figure in the humanistic movement of the Renaissance, and his Defensio fidei christianae is a fervent Christian apology. All his writings are in Latin. E.M.W.

Opera (Basle, 1555); Opera omnia (ed. G. Mayans y Siscar, 8 vols, 1782; Span. tr. Obras completas, 2 vols, 1947).—Eng. trs: The instruction of a Christian woman (tr. R. Hyrde, 1540); An introduction to wysedome (tr. R. Morysone, 1540); The office and dutie of an husband (tr. T. Paynell, 1550); St Augustine of the Citie of God, with the learned comments of J. L. V. (tr. J. Healey, 1610).

A. Bonilla y San Martín, L. V. y la filosofía del renacimiento (1903); Foster Watson, Les relations de J. L. V. amb els anglesos i amb l'Angleterra, I (no more pub.; Barcelona, 1919); H. de Vocht, 'V. and his visits to England' in Monumenta Humanistica Lovaniensia (1934); J. Gomis, Criterio social de L. V. (1946); E. Cassirer, Petrarca, Valla, Ficino, Pico, Pomponazzi, V.: The Renaissance Philosophy of Man (1948); B. G. Monsegú, Filosofía del humanismo en J. L. V. (1961); A. M. Salazar, El escudo de armas de J. L. V. (London, 1967). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Vladimir, MONOMAKH, PRINCE OF KIEV (reigned 1113–25), one of the most enlightened rulers of his time. He spoke six languages and the famous

'Testament' (Pouchenie) which he wrote in 1125 for his children is an autobiography recording his wars, political activities, travels and hunting expeditions.

K. Bestuzhev-Ryumin, Knyaz' V. S. M. (1865); A. S. Orlov, V. M. (with tr. of his works into mod. Russ.; 1946). J.L.

Vlahuță, ALEXANDRU (*Pleșești 1858; †Bucharest 1919), Rumanian poet and novelist. A former teacher and lawyer, from 1893 to 1896 he edited the review Viața and in 1901, with Cosbuc*, founded Sămănătorul. As a poet he was often accused of imitating Eminescu* but this can hardly be said of such poems as 1907 and Dreptate, based on the peasant revolt of 1907. The writer and Rumanian society is the theme of his novel Dan (1893), the inspiration for which came largely from his own life.

Scrieri alese (ed. V. Ripeanu, 1963).

V. Ripeanu, V. și epoca sa (1966); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române, compendiu (3rd ed. 1968). D.J.D.

Vlaming, PIETER (*Amsterdam 29 III 1686; ∞1709 Wijnanda Calkoen; †Hogerwoerd, Haarlem 2 II 1733), Dutch man of letters and poet; jurist, clerk of the Dutch East India company. In addition to his own evenly descriptive verse he edited the writings of Spiegel*, Schermer* and van Hoogstraten* and translated Sannazaro's* Arcadia (1730).

Dichtlievende uitspanningen (with J. B. Wellekens; 1711); Alcides (1714).

J. Wagenaar in Amsterdam, III (1788); M. M. Prinsen, De idylle in de 18de eeuw (1934).

J.W.W.

Vlaykov, TODOR (pseud. VESSELIN) (*Pirdop 13 II 1865; †Sofia 28 IV 1943), Bulgarian genre-writer. Under Russian and Ukrainian influence he resolved in the 1890s to devote himself, with H. Maksimov, to improving the peasants' lot by education and other initiatives. His stories reflect the traditional culture of village life challenged and contaminated by urban ways and the involvement of the narodnik schoolteacher in this. From 1900 to 1925 he was engaged in politics as a Radical leader, and in editing Demokraticheski pregled, but he returned to literature on retirement with memorable portraits of peasant women and autobiographical accounts of childhood, youth and the difficult conflict of his aesthetic and civic ideals.

Za dyadovata Slavchova unuka (1889); Lelya Gena (1890); Ratay (1892); Uchitel Milenkov (1894); Strina Venkovitsa (1925); Jitieto na edna mayka (1925); Chinovnichestvo i vlastnitsi (1934); Zavoi (1935); Prejivyanoto (3 vols, 1934–41).—Coll. works (6 vols, 1925–31).

Yubileen sbornik, T. G. V. (1935); V. Pinto,

'Civic and aesthetic ideals' in Slavon. Rev. (1954) and 'T. V. (1865-1943)', ibid. (1958). V.P.

Vloten, JOHANNES VAN (*Kampen 18 I 1818; ∞ Johanna E. C. van Gennep; † Haarlem 21 IX 1883), Dutch man of letters, historian, critic and journalist; Professor at the Athenaeum, Deventer (1854-67), editor of De Levensbode (12 vols, 1865-81; subsequently continued as De Humanist, 3 vols, 1881-83). He wrote numerous studies and articles on contemporary and earlier Dutch civilization, but because of their aggressiveness and slipshod writing they had less influence than they deserved. He was an exponent of Modern Christianity and later of Spinozism. He edited texts and anthologies and rediscovered much lost beauty.

Nederlandsche geschiedzangen (2 vols, 1852); Passchier de Fijne (1853); Het Nederlandsch kluchtspel (2 vols, 1854); Brieven van P. C. Hooft (4 vols, 1855-58); Nederlands opstand (3 vols, 1858-60); Nederlandsch dicht en onacht der 19de eeuw (2 vols, 1861-65); Baruch d'Espinoza (1862); Aesthetika (1863); Eerlijke wenschen omtrent hooger en middelbaar onderwijs (1867); Schets van de Geschiedenis der Nederl. letteren (1871); Nederlandsche baker- en kinderrijmen (1872); Nederlandsche schilderkunst (1873); Onkruid onder de tarwe (1875); Bellamy (1877); Spinoza (1880); Benedictus de Spinoza (1882); Spinoza, Opera omnia (with J. P. N. Land; 2 vols, 1882-83).

J. A. Bientjes, 'J. van V. herdacht' in De Nieuwe Gids, XXX (1915); M. Mees-Verwey, De betekenis van J. van V. (1928); A. van Duinkerken, 'J. van V.' in Achter de Vuurlijn (1930).

J.W.W.

Vodnik, VALENTIN (*Ljubljana 3 II 1758; † ibid. 8 I 1819), Slovene poet, philologist and journalist. After classical beginnings he wrote poetry in various genres, patriotic and pre-Romantic in the spirit of the classical Enlightenment and to the measures of Slovene Alpine dancing songs. He also renewed Slovene popular prose by drawing on the speech of the people.

V. V. izbrani spisi (sel. works; ed. F. Wiesthaler, 1890).—Izbrane pesmi (sel. poems; ed. with comm. and notes A. Gspan, 1958).—Zadovoljni Kranjec (1781); Velika pratika (1795-97); Ljubljanske novice (1797-1800); Pesmi za pokušino (1806); Ilirija oživljena (1811); V. Pesmi (ed. F. Levstik, 1869).

F. Levstik, Zbrano delo, VI (1935).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Vogt, NILS COLLETT (*Kristiania 24 IX 1864; ∞ 1894 Siri Thysehus; † Lillehammer 23 XII 1937), Norwegian poet, novelist and playwright. Vogt, who can be reckoned amongst the foremost Norwegian lyric poets, was a rebellious spirit from a conservative upper-class home. His impetuous enthusiasm for the radicalism of the 1880s set its mark on his early work and continued to colour, in reflective and sometimes melancholy tones, his later production. Visits to Italy enhanced his intense response to the seasons in Norway (especially the spring) and his appreciation of the natural beauty of the country, and this is reflected in many of his poems. Profound patriotism, manly fortitude and a fund of deep compassion coupled with a vigorous and forthright style characterize the work of his maturity.

VERSE: Digte (1887); Fra Vaar til Høst (1894; rev. ed. 1904); Musik og Vaar (1896); Det dyre Brød (1900); Fra Kristiania (1904); Septemberbrand (1907); Kantate ved Norges jubilæumsstilling (1914); Hjemkomst (1917); Ned fra bjerget (1924); Vind og bølge (1927).—PLAYS: Spændte sind. To skuespil (1910); Moren (1913); Therese (1914); De skadeskudte (1916; rev. version of 'Ingrid' in Spændte sind); Karneval (1920); Forbi er forbi (1929).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Familiens sorg (1889); Harriet Blich (1902); Mennesker (1903); Smaa breve fra Finmarken (1918); Levende og døde (1922); Et liv i dikt (1930); Fra gutt til mann (1932); Oplevelser (1934). K. Elster in Fra tid til anden (1920). R.G.P.

Voiculescu, VASILE (*Pîrscov, nr Ploiești 1884; † 1964), Rumanian author. A doctor by profession, he was at first influenced by Vlahuță*, but he later adopted a number of different styles and eventually became a member of the Gîndirea circle. He deliberately introduced into his poems words collected from country folk, sometimes with discordant effect. After 1944 he underwent an astonishing final development in which he produced his 'feigned translations of an imaginary last sonnet sequence by Shakespeare', a host of stories, many not yet published, and an unpublished novel, Zahei orbul. The achievements of this last period, which came to an abrupt end with his arrest in 1958, have led some critics to place him in the first rank of Rumanian writers.

Poezii (1916); Din țara zimbrului (1918); Pîrgă (1921); Poeme cu îngeri (1927); Destin (1933); Urcuș (1937); Intezăriri (1939).—Poezii (sel. from later poems, incl. the entire sequence Ultimele sonete închipuite ale lui Shakespeare în traducere imaginară; 2 vols, intro. A. Rău, 1968); Povestiri (sel. stories; 2 vols, intro. V. Streinu, 1966). F.J.B.

Voigt, RUDOLF (*Frankenberg, Saxony 21 XI 1899; † Milwaukee 1956), German-American poet. Emigrated to the U.S.A. (1924) and taught at the University of Illinois, Northwestern University and Wisconsin University.

Die Frühlingsfackel (1917); Blutende Sehnsucht (1918); Der Tanz um die Liebe (1919); Gedichte (1934); Das sehnsüchtige Herz (1953). E.R.

Voiture, VINCENT (*Amiens 24 II 1597; †Paris 26 V 1648), French poet. The son of a wine merchant, Voiture attained high appointments at court and achieved social success as el rey chiquito ('the little king') of Mme de Rambouillet's salon. The foremost précieux poet, he shows great technical skill in his echoes of Marini* and of the Spanish baroque poets. He practised the sonnet and madrigal and revived the medieval rondeau and ballade. Contemporaries admired his Lettres for their easy wit. He died as the result of a duel.

Œuvres (1649 and 1658; ed. A. Ubicini, 2 vols, 1855); Choix de poésies (ed. A. Arnoux, 1907).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Causeries du lundi, XII (1867); E. Magne, V. et l'Hôtel de Rambouillet (2 vols, 1929–30). G.B.

Vojnović, Ivo (*Dubrovnik 1 X 1857; †Belgrade 30 VIII 1929), Croatian poet and dramatist. His dramas, influenced by Western European Symbolism, and outstanding by reason of their aesthetic value and psychological studies, are principally concerned with the decline of the Ragusan aristocratic tradition.

Ekvinocij (1895); Dubrovačka trilogija (1902); Smrt Majke Jugovića (1907); Gospodja sa sunco-kretom (1912).—Trilogia ragusea (Ital. tr. I. V. and C. Cronia, 1955).

R. V. Jovanović, I. V. (1964).

V.J.

Volen, ILIYA (*Uglen 13 IX 1905), Bulgarian story-writer. From close observation he has, like Karaslavov*, depicted the harsh, often primitive and basic realities of peasant life. His child studies in this setting are particularly striking.

Cherni ugari (1928); Krustsi (1931); Boji hora (1937); Divi dushi (1954); Vulchi vremena (play; 1956); Mejdu dva svyata (1958); Zlatanovata mechtia (1960).—Sel. works (2 vols, 1962). V.P.

Vollenhove, JOHAN VAN (*Vollenhove 1631; ∞Gesina Hake [†1681], ∞Katharina Roozeboom; †14 III 1708), Dutch poet, parson at Zwolle and The Hague. Appreciated by Vondel* (especially his Kruisström), he imitated Vondel to the extent of writing in the 'language of Parnassus', but inspiration is rare. He wrote devotional and commemorative poetry and gradually tended towards classicism. In his poem Aan de Nederduitsche Schrijvers (1678) he recommended a purist approach to language. Oxford presented him with an honorary degree. The main body of his poetry was published in 1686 in Poëzy; his devotional poems were collected in 1750.

A. L. Lesturgeon, Bloemlezing uit van V. (1865) and Levensschets van van V. (1865); E. J. Posthumus Meyjes, 'J. V.' in Die Haghe (1921).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Voloshin, MAXIMILIAN ALEXANDROVICH (*1877;

†Crimea 1932), Russian poet. An aesthete by nature, he became (under the impact of the Revolution) a kind of mystical patriot, and some of his best verses are about Russia's destiny, expressed in a quasi-religious spirit.

Stikhotvoreniya (1910); Liki tvorchestva (1914); Anno mundi ardentis (1916); Demony glukhonemye (1920); Stikhi o terrore (1923).

E. Lann, Pisatel'skaya sud'ba Voloshina (1927). J.L.

Volpi, GIOVANNI ANTONIO, known as GIAN-NANTONIO (*Padua 10 XI 1686; †ibid. 25 X 1766), Italian scholar; Professor of philosophy (1727–36) and humanities (1736–60) at Padua University; co-editor, with his younger brother GAETANO (1689–1761), of a celebrated collection of classics in annotated editions published by the Stamperia Cominiana. He wrote also Latin and Italian poems, and Latin treatises on classical subjects.

G. Natali, Il Settecento (1936).

P.T.

Volsungasaga: see NIBELUNGENLIED, text and biblio.; SAGAS.

Voltaire, pseud. of FRANÇOIS-MARIE AROUET (*Paris 21 XI 1694; †ibid. 30 V 1778), French writer. The fifth child of a prosperous notary, he was educated at the Jesuit College of Louis le Grand, studied law, but soon turned to literature. His first tragedy Oedipe, written during his first imprisonment in the Bastille, was performed on 18 XI 1718 with great success. The Henriade, published surreptitiously at Rouen under the title of the Ligue (1723), increased his reputation, but a quarrel with a courtier sent him again to the Bastille, from which he was however allowed to go to England.

Voltaire's stay in England (1726–29) had a profound effect upon him. He obtained command of the English language, became acquainted with Shakespeare's* plays and learned to appreciate English political institutions. On his return to France he completed Charles XII (1731) and the Lettres sur les Anglais (authorized Eng. version 1733; Fr. ed. 1734), and continued to write plays, among them being Brutus (1730) and Zaïre (1732), his best and one of the best classical French tragedies.

To escape arrest for his satire on contemporary letters, Le Temple du Goût (1733), he fled to Cirey in Lorraine, home of Gabrielle Émilie, Marquise du Châtelet, the 'divine Emily' (1706–49). Through the influence of Mme de Pompadour he was appointed Historiographer Royal and a Gentleman of the Bedchamber (1745), and in 1746 was elected to the Academy. This happy phase ended in 1749 when Mme du Châtelet died bearing a child by Saint-Lambert*. In 1751 Voltaire accepted an invitation from King Frederick* II of Prussia, with whom he had corresponded since 1736, and spent three years in Berlin.

Here he published the Siècle de Louis XIV (1751) and began the Dictionnaire Philosophique. His incessant quarrels, chiefly with Maupertuis, the President of the Berlin Academy, against whom he directed his bitterest lampoon (Diatribes du Docteur Akakia, 1752), led to his dismissal (1753).

A wealthy man through successful financial speculations, Voltaire now settled for the rest of his life near Geneva, first at Les Délices, and from 1758 in Ferney, just on French soil. In 1755 he published the Pucelle, began 20 years earlier. In the same year occurred the disastrous earthquake at Lisbon which caused Voltaire to reject the philosophical theory of optimism (supported by Rousseau*) and to write Candide (1759) as a satire upon it. To the last 20 years of his life belong most of the cases in which he attacked oppression and miscarriage of justice—the Calas and Sirven cases being the best known. His letters of this period bear his famous motto 'Écrasez l'Infâme'—'l'Infâme' being not Christ or the Church, as has been erroneously suggested, but entrenched and unthinking privilege, wheresoever encountered.

In 1778 Voltaire completed his last play, Irène, and took it to Paris, where he was received as a national hero; it was produced on 16 III. The general excitement and constant stream of visitors proved too much for him; he became seriously ill and died.

Voltaire's appearance is well known; he was always thin, and in later years skeletal. Never married, he was looked after for many years by his niece, Mme Denis. Needing little exercise or sleep, his output of work was prodigious. In addition to the vast canon of his writings, his correspondence amounts to 14,000 known letters. Many of his larger works are now out of fashion, but as Saintsbury has written: 'Not the most elaborate work of Voltaire is of much value for matter; but not the very slightest work of Voltaire is devoid of value in form. In literary craftsmanship, at once versatile and accomplished, he has no superior and scarcely a rival'.

Of his writings, his tales or short novels are incomparably the most important; although Candide is the most famous, there is not one which will not amply reward its reader by the beauty of the prose and clarity of thought with which he points what, behind the airiness of the tale, is generally a serious moral. Hence, deliciously readable today, he was a master at conveying to the light-minded an important message which they would not have assimilated in heavier form. His plays today are mainly forgotten, although two or three of the best still retain their place in the canon of the great classical French drama. As a poet he is brilliant, again, in his short pieces: his epics are generally respected but seldom read.

Of his histories, Charles XII stands above all the others: it is still a genuinely exciting book. Next to his tales, his correspondence probably takes pride of place—constantly grumbling, frequently deceitful, always intelligent, his letters vastly repay reading; and there is hardly the shortest note which does not give pleasure by the grace and purity of its style, and the ever-present sense that the writer knew exactly what he was doing.

Yet the man himself was greater than his works, for his inquiring mind, his tolerance and insistence on the rights of man made him the leader of a new chapter in the history of mankind.

COLLECTED WORKS: Ed. P. A. Caron de Beaumarchais, M. J. A. N. Caritat, Marquis de Condorcet, L. P. Decroix and Letellier (70 vols 8vo and 92 vols 12mo, Kehl, 1785–89; a vast amount was pub. for the 1st time in this famous ed.); ed. A. J. Q. Beuchot (72 vols, Paris, 1829–40; 1st sound crit. ed.); ed. L. Moland (50 vols, Paris, 1877–83; Table générale et analytique, 2 vols, 1885); coll. ed. correspondence, fully annotated (ed. T. Besterman, c. 100 vols, Les Délices, Switzerland, 1953 ff.); Œuvres complètes de V. (ed. T. Besterman, W. H. Barber, J. Ehrard, R. Pomeau, O. Taylor and S. Taylor, 1968 ff.). —SEPARATE WORKS: V. pub. over 2,000 books and pamphlets. In addition to those mentioned in the text, the following titles are worth enumerating. Mod. eds mentioned are crit. eds which may be consulted with advantage; of works not listed below the best crit. ed. of Candide is by A. Morize (1913) and of Temple du Goût by E. Carcassonne (1938). —PLAYS: Hérode et Mariamne (1725); Mort de César (1735); Alzire (1736); Mahomet (1742); Mérope (1743); Princesse de Navarre (1745; comedy ballet set to music by Rameau); Sémiramis (1748; ed. J. Olivier, 1946); Nanine (1749); Oreste (1750); Rome Sauvée (1752); Tancrède (1760); Olympie (1763); Loix de Minos (1772). —POEMS: Discours en vers sur l'Homme (1738); Bataille de Fontenoy (1745); Poèmes sur le désastre de Lisbonne et sur la Loi Naturelle (1756; ed. F. J. Crowley, Berkeley, Cal., 1938); Contes de Guillaume Vadé (1764). —HISTORICAL WORKS: Essay upon the Civil Wars of France (1727; wr. in Eng.); Essai sur l'histoire générale et sur les mœurs et l'esprit des Nations (1756); Histoire de l'Empire de Russie sous Pierre le Grand (1759–63); Histoire du Parlement de Paris (1769). —TALES: Zadig (1747; ed. Verdun L. Saulnier, 1946); Le Monde comme il va (1748); Micromégas (1752); L'Ingénu (otherwise known as Le Huron; 1767; ed. W. R. Jones, 1936); L'Homme aux 40 écus (1768); La Princesse de Babilone (1768); Le Taureau Blanc (1774). —MISCELLANEA: Letters Concerning the English (1733; Eng. tr., precedes pub. in Fr.); Lettres Philosophiques (otherwise known as Lettres sur les Anglais; 1734; ed. R. Naves, 1939); Éléments de la philosophie de Newton (1738); Vie de Molière (1739); Pièces originales concernant la Mort des Sieurs Calas (1762); Traité sur la Tolérance (1763); Théâtre de Pierre Corneille avec des commentaires (1764); Relation de la Mort du Chevalier de la Barre (1766[1768]); Défense de mon Oncle (1767); Singularités de la Nature (1768); Droits des Hommes (1768); Fragments sur l'Inde et sur le Général Lalli (1773); Prix de la Justice et de l'Humanité (1777).—Voltaire's England (ed. D. Flower, 1950).

BIBLIOGRAPHIES: J. M. Quérard, Bibliographie Voltairienne (1842); G. Bengesco, Bibliographie des Œuvres de V. (4 vols, 1882–90; not as sound as Quérard); M. H. Barr, Bibliography of Writings on V., 1825–1925 (1926) and Bibliographical Data on V. From 1926 to 1930 (1933).—BIOGRAPHIES: S. G. Tallentyre, Life of V. (2 vols, 1903); R. Aldington, V. (1925); G. M. C. Brandes, V. (1930); H. N. Brailsford, V. (1935; the best short life in any lang.); A. Noyes, V. (1936; has strong Catholic views); J. Charpentier, V. (1938); T. Besterman, V. (1969).—SPECIALIZED STUDIES: J. C. Collins, V., Montesquieu and Rousseau in England (1908); C. B. Chase, The Young V. (1926); R. Naves, Le goût de V. (1938), V. et l'Encyclopédie (1938) and V. l'homme et l'œuvre (1942); I. O. Wade, Studies on V. (1947) and V. and Mme du Châtelet (1941); Studs on V. and the 18th Century (ed. T. Besterman, Geneva, 1955 ff.). D.F.

Volynsky, AKIM L'VOVICH, pseud. of A. L. FLEKSER (*1863; †1926), Russian essayist, critic, and champion of an idealistic conception of thought and culture. His books on Dostoyevsky*, beginning with Tsarstvo Karamazovykh (1901), were partly responsible for the Dostoyevsky cult among the intellectuals of that period.

Russkie kritiki (1896); Leskov (1898); Bor'ba za idealism (1900); Kniga velikogo gneva (1904); Dostoyevsky (1906); Leonardo da Vinci (1909); Lev Tolstoy (1910).

N. G. Molostvov, V. i noveyshe idealisty (1905); Pamyati Volynskogo (ed. P. Medvedov, 1928). J.L.

Vondel, JOOST VAN DEN (*Cologne 17 XI 1587; ∞1610 Maaik de Wolf [†1635]; †Amsterdam 5 II 1679), Dutch poet, playwright and prose writer, son of Mennonite parents, who had to flee from Antwerp. Although he became a passionately loyal citizen of Amsterdam, yet his love for his native town remained, as is evident from Olyftack aan Gustaaf Adolf and other poems. He was a member, later deacon, of the Mennonite Brotherhood, member of the Brabant Chamber, Het wit Lavendel, which in later years he left for the Egelantier. Until c. 1620 it was from the Mennonites and the Brabanters that Vondel chose his friends and, as his education was limited, his horizon was circumscribed. He knew French and was influenced by Du* Bartas. He developed late and slowly, rooted as he was in the Middle Ages and the tradition of the REDERIJERS.

His first play, Pascha (1612), was still close to Rederijker drama. Loosely constructed and linguistically ornate, it describes the deliverance of the Jews from Egypt, with unmistakable references to the liberation of the Dutch from Spain. In the years that followed, Vondel made a thorough study of Latin literature, especially of the work of Seneca*, who became a strong influence on his own dramatic work. With Hooft* and some others he translated Seneca's Troades. His circle of friends widened and included Visscher*, Hooft, Heinsius*, Vossius*, de Groot*, Reael* and Coster*. His next play, Palamedes (1625), dealt ostensibly with the feud between Palamedes and Ulysses, but at the same time made a scathing attack on the Stadtholder Maurits for his part in the trial and execution of Oldenbarneveld in 1619. Vondel was taken to court and fined three hundred guilders. For some years he concentrated on satirical poetry with a political bias. The best of these poems is Roskam (1630) in which he assailed the corruption of modern magistrates and praised the father of P. C. Hooft, a former burgomaster of Amsterdam. In other satires, known as hekel-dichten, he attacked some bigoted ministers of the Church and the dogma of Predestination. In 1637 he wrote his best-known play, Gijsbrecht van Aemstel, which was intended for the inauguration of the new theatre in Amsterdam. The performance was held up for a few days because of suspected Roman Catholic features. Vondel was gradually moving away from Protestantism and became a Roman Catholic in 1641. His religious zeal led to a conflict with Hooft which was never resolved. After his conversion he wrote Maria Stuart (1646), a drama containing a sharp attack on Queen Elizabeth*. He celebrated the end of the Eighty Years' War with a pastoral play Leeuwendalers (1647). In his later plays Vondel adopted a new approach to drama: the innocent (epic) hero as in Palamedes, Gijsbrecht van Aemstel and Maria Stuart made way for a guilty hero, a man neither wholly good nor wholly bad, but often weak and wavering. Lucifer (1654), a drama on the same theme as Milton's* Paradise Lost, was one of the first plays in the new manner. It is Vondel's most baroque play, written in a very exuberant style. It was severely criticized, especially by the Calvinist ministers, and to silence his critics Vondel wrote Jeptha (1659), which he regarded as his best play because of its compliance with the Aristotelian unities and other rules laid down by Horace*, Scaliger*, Ronsard* and several others. In his last plays, such as Adam in Ballinschap (1664) and Noah (1667), Vondel took Sophocles* as his guide and allowed more lyricism into his drama. Apart from being the most important dramatist of his time, Vondel was also a prolific lyric poet who wrote odes, sonnets, elegies, religious poems, occasional verse. His Biblical epic poem Joannes de Boetgezant (1662) had a long-lasting influence. As a prose-writer he is known for his excellent Aanleidinge ter Nederduitse Dichtkunst (1650).

PLAYS: Hierusalem verwoest (1620); Maegden (1639); Gebroeders (1639); Joseph in Dothan (1640); Joseph in Egypten (1640); Peter en Paulus (1641); Salomon (1648); Lucifer (1654; Eng. tr. L. C. van Noppen, 1898, 1917); Salmoneus (1654); Samson (1660); Koning David in Ballingschap (1660); Koning David Herstelt (1660); Adonias (1661); Batavische Gebroeders (1663); Faeton (1663); Zungchin (1667).—DIDACTIC VERSE: Altaargeheimenissen (1645); Bespiegelingen van Godt en godtsdienst (1662); De Heerlyckheit der Kerke (1663).—LYRICAL VERSE: Poëzy (1647); Poëzy of Verscheide gedichten (pub. posth., 1682).—Trs of poems in: A. J. Barnouw, Coming After (1948); Th. Weevers, Poetry of the Netherlands in Its European Context (1960); F. J. Warnke, European Metaphysical Poetry (1961).—De werken van V. (10 vols, 1927–37, index 1940; known as Wereldbibliotheek editie, chronol. with biblio., biog. and comm.); Volledige dichtwerken en oorspronkelijk proza (ed. A. Verwey, in modern spelling with excellent intro., 1937).

J. H. W. Unger, Bibliographie van V.'s werken (1888).—BIOGRAPHIES: G. Brandt, Het Leven van J. van den V. (1682; new ed. P. Leendertz Jr, 1932); G. Kalff in Nederlandsche dichters der 17e eeuw (1901); P. Leendertz Jr (1910); H. C. Diferee (1912); A. J. Barnouw, V. (1925; best Eng. biog.); J. F. M. Sterck (1926); B. H. Molkenboer, De jonge V. (1950); J. Melles, J. van den V., de geschiedenis van zijn leven (1957).—G. Brom, V.'s Beking (1907) and V.'s Geloof (1935); J. Noë, De religieuze bezieling van V.'s werk (1952).—On V.'s verse: A. Verwey, Een inleiding tot V. (1892) and V.'s vers (1927); J. Koopman, 'V. als Christen-symbolist' in Letterkundige Studiën (1906); W. A. P. Smit, 'V. en het epos' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LIX (1966).—On drama: J. G. Bomhoff, Bijdrage tot de waardering van V.'s drama's (1950); W. A. P. Smit, Van Pascha tot Noah (3 vols, 1956–62) and 'The emblematic aspect of V.'s tragedies as the key to their interpretation' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LII (1957); P. King, 'The sacramental thought in V.'s drama' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LI (1956) and 'V. tussen imitatio en imitatio Christi' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LVIII (1965); L. C. Michels, Stoffen uit V.'s werk (1961); J. Poulssen, 'Tragiek van V.'s glans' in Raam (1963); K. L. Johannessen, 'De synthese van de barok als sleutel tot V.'s drama' in Tijdschr. Vrije Univ. Brussel, I (1959) and Zwischen Himmel und Erde; eine Studie über J. van den V.'s biblische Tragödie in gattungsgeschichtlicher Perspektive (1963); W. A. P. Smit and P. Brachin, V.: contribution à l'histoire de la tragédie au XVIIe siècle (1964); W. Kirkconnell, The Celestial Cycle (with tr. of Lucifer and Adam in Ballingschap; 1952) and

That Invincible Samson (with tr. of Samson; 1964); A. S. Gerard, 'Baroque and the order of love' in Neophilologus, XLIX (1965); L. Rens, Het priester-koning-conflict in V.'s drama (1965) and 'Het clair-obscur in V.'s drama' in Spiegel d. Lett., XII (1969–70).—G. Edmundson, Milton and V. (1885); J. J. Moolhuizen, V.'s Lucifer en Milton's Verloren Paradijs (1895); J. F. M. Sterck, Oorkonden over V. en zijn kring (1918), Hoofdstukken over V. en zijn kring (1923), Rondom V. (1927), Oud en Nieuw over J. van den V. (1932) and V.-brieven (1935); W. Flemming, 'V.'s Einfluss auf A. Gryphius' in Neophilologus, XIV (1929); De Vondelherdenking (1937); Th. Weevers, 'V.'s influence on German literature' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXXII (1937); Album Amicorum B. H. Molkenboer (1939); L. Rens, 'Over het probleem van de invloed van V. op de drama's van Andreas Gryphius' in Hand. Zuidnederl. Maatsch. v. Taal- en Letterk. en Gesch., XX (1966).

The Vereeniging Het V.-Museum (founded 1901) possesses a unique collection of Vondeliana in the Univ. Libr. at Amsterdam and pub's a Jaarboek; studs and book reviews concerning V. in Vondel-Kroniek (1930–40).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Vonmoos, SCHIMUN (*Ramosch 1 VII 1868; †ibid. 29 VII 1940), Ræto-Romansch author. After theological studies in Germany and at Zürich, he was for 45 years the Protestant pastor of his native village. His short stories are filled with wisdom, humanity and a subtle humour. He translated Gotthelf*, Goethe* and Ramuz*.

SHORT STORIES: La daintadūra da barba Lurench (1928; Ger. tr. 1943); La vacha cranzla (1934; Ger. tr. 1943; Eng. tr. 1970); Il corn da puolvrada Abraham (1938; Ger. tr. 1938); Requints (2 vols, 1955–56).

Jachen Luzzi, 'S. V.' in Annalas da la Soc. Retorum., LVI (1942). R.R.B.

Vonnegut, KURT, JR (*Indianapolis II XI 1922; †1945 Jane Marie Cox), American novelist. A writer of dark comedies, Vonnegut provides an intellectual and moral stimulation by verbal dexterity and wit. His sense of the bizarre and the tragic takes him into SCIENCE FICTION, but his distortion of his material never lets his reader forget his philosophical truths.

Player Piano (1951); The Sirens of Titan (1959); Mother Night (1961); Cat's Cradle (1963); God Bless You, Mr Rosewater (1964); Slaughterhouse V (1969).—STORIES: Welcome to the Monkey House (1968).

Black Humor (ed. B. J. Friedman, 1965); R. Scholes, The Fabulators (1967). G.A.K.

Voort, JERONIMUS VAN DER (*Lier c. 1535; †?c. 1600), Dutch poet in the REDERIKER tradition, member of the Chamber Den groeyenden boom at Lier until his imprisonment in 1568 because of his adherence to the new faith. He escaped, however, to the northern Netherlands, where he joined the Prince of Orange. After the Pacification of Ghent he settled at Antwerp as a painter. He was also factor of the Chamber De Goudbloeme there (1578-89). In 1597 he was a factor of the Chamber Blaeu Acolye at Flushing. Besides a number of shorter poems (e.g. on Anjou's attempt on Antwerp, 1583, and the fall of the town, 1585), three extensive works of his survive, namely Een schoon profijtelick bouck, ghenaeamt den benauden, veriaechden, vervolchden Christen (1577), Het heerlick bewijs van des menschen ellende (1582), Het leven en sterven ben ick genaemt (1597). Some allegorical plays must also be ascribed to him. There is insufficient evidence for ascribing to him the Dutch national anthem Wilhelmus. J.J.M.

Tcaetsspel der Fransoysen (ed. J. J. Mak in Uyt Ionsten Versaemt, 1957); Den droeven Adieu van Antwerpen (ed. P. Fredericq in Het Nederl. Proza in de 16-eeuwse pamfletten, 1907).

L. van Boeckel, 'J. van der V.' in Tijdschr. v. Geschiedenis en Folklore (1943); P. J. Meertens, Letterk. Leven in Zeeland (1943).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Voronsky, ALEXANDER KONSTANTINOVICH (*1884), Soviet critic and editor belonging to the right wing of Marxist criticism. While editing the important periodical Krasnaya Nov', he was broadminded enough to have FELLOW-TRAVELLERS among his contributors. Expelled from the party in 1927, he was afterwards readmitted, but his subsequent fate is unknown.

Na styke (1923); Literaturnye zapisi (1926); Literaturnye tipy (2nd ed. 1927); Za zhivoy i mertvoy vodoy (1927; Waters of Life and Death, tr. L. Zarine, 1936). J.L.

Vörösmarty, MIHÁLY (*Kápolnásnyék 1 XII 1800; ∞1843 Laura Csajághy; †Pest 19 XI 1855), Hungarian poet, playwright and critic. Vörösmarty joined Kisfaludy's* Aurora circle in 1824 and rapidly became its most outstanding writer. He united classical perfection with national themes in his great epics, of which Zalán futása (1825; Ger. tr. G. Kosztka, n.d.), is the most powerful. His shorter narrative poems, lyric verse and reflective epigrams reveal the variety and power of his poetic diction. Vörösmarty heralded the most brilliant period of classical Hungarian verse.

VERSE: Cserhalom (1825); Eger (1828).—V. összes munkái (ed. P. Gyulai, 8 vols, 1884-85); V. M. összes művei (crit. ed. K. Horváth and D. Tóth, 1960- ).

P. Gyulai, V. életrajza (1866); M. Babits, Irodalmi problémák (1917); S. Lukácsy and L.

Balassa, V. M. 1800-1855 (1955); D. Tóth, V. M. (1957); D. Mervyn Jones, 'V. M.' in Five Hungarian Writers (1966). G.F.C.

Vos, ISAAK (*Amsterdam 1651), Dutch playwright and actor. Principally a comedian, he rhymed a number of farces after English models: Pekelharing in de Kist after Singing Simpkin (1648); Robert Leverworst (1650) in alexandrines; Klucht van de Moffin (1642); Klucht van de Mof (1643); Iemant en Niemant (1645); and Gedwongen Vrient (1646) and De beklaglycke Dwang (1648) after prose translations of plays by Lope de Vega*.

J. A. Worp, 'J. V.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., III (1883); P. H. van Moerkerken, Het Nederl. Kluchtspel in de 17de eeuw (2 vols, 1899); J. Walch, Studiën over litt. en tooneel (1924). A.M.B.W.

Vos, JAN (*Amsterdam c. 1615; ∞1639 Grietje Gerrits; †ibid. 1667), Dutch poet and glazier, on the board of the Amsterdam theatre from 1647, became famous overnight through his Aran en Titus (1641), on the same theme as Shakespeare's* Titus Andronicus, admired also by the literati, especially Barlaeus who introduced him to Hooft*, Huygens* and Vondel*. Vos 'embellished' Vondel's plays with interludes; after 1660 this mutual appreciation waned. Vondel was a classicist, Vos a romanticist, although in classicist form. Vos' second play Medea (1665) brims with stage effects. He also wrote a farce, Klucht van Oene (1642), and poems on pictures and national events and for his patrons. His complete poetry appeared in 1662.

J. A. Worp, J. V. (1879); W. Creizenach, 'Die Tragödien des Holländers J. V. auf der deutschen Bühne' in Studien zur Geschichte der dramatischen Poesie im 17. Jh. (1886); E. F. Kossmann, 'De polemiek over de vertooningen van J. V. in 1660' in Oud-Holland, XXX (1912); M. Wagner, 'Versuch einer psychologisch-ästhetischen Würdigung von Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus und J. V.'s Aran en Titus' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., XXXII (1913); J. Koopmans, 'J. V. en het Amsterdamsche Maecenaat' in De Beweging (1915); A. van Duinkerken, 'J. V.' in Het tweede plan (1945); H. H. J. de Leeuwe, 'J. V.'s Medea, een Nederlandse bijdrage tot de Europese toneelgeschiedenis' in Levende Talen (1963), 'La Médée de J. V.' in Le lieu théâtral à la Renaissance (1964) and 'Een politiek gelegenheidsspel van J. V.: Ontzet van Koppenhaven' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LXI (1968).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Voskuyl, MEYNDERT (*c. 1595; †Amsterdam 1660), Dutch playwright, sea captain, leader of the EGELANTIER, wrote tragicomedies: Ouden en Jonghen Hillebrant (1639); Don Carel van Castiliën

(1635); Bellaria en Pandosto (1637; after Shakespeare's* Winter's Tale); and published some rhymes in Lof van Cupido (1626).

J. A. Worp, 'De bronnen van M. V.'s tooneelspeelen' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett. (1895); G. Kalff, 'Algemeene en Vergelijkende litt. gesch.' in Vragen des Tijds, XLII (1915-16).
A.M.B.W.

Vosmaer, CAREL (*The Hague 20 III 1826; ∞1853 A. G. C. G. Clant; †Montreux 14 VI 1888), Dutch man of letters, art historian, translator and critic; deputy registrar at the Supreme Court. Opposed to Naturalism, he admired Multatuli* and Perk*. From 1860 he was co-editor of De Nederlandsche Spectator, his contributions being collected in Vlugmaren (3 vols, 1879-83). His own creative work was anaemic; the Gedichten are often in blank verse in Greek metre, as is his main work Nanno (1883) and his witty masterpiece Londinias (1873). Important were the excellent translations in hexameters of the Ilias (1879-80) and the Odussee (1888).

NOVELS: Amazone (1880; The Amazon, tr E. J. Irving, 1884); Inwijding (1888; unfinished).—ESSAYS: Een studie over het schoone en de kunst (1850); Rembrandt (1863); Vogels van diverse pluimage (3 vols, incl. Gedichten, 1872-75); Een zaaier (1875).

In Memoriam C. V. (1888); J. ten Brink, Geschiedenis der Noord Nederl. letteren, II (with biblio.; 1904); J. P. Boyens, Mr C. V. (1931); G. Stuiveling, De briefwisseling Vosmaer-Kloos (1939) and 'V. en zijn jongere tijdgenoten' and 'De briefwisseling V.-Perk' in Groot Nederland, XXXVI (1938).
J.W.W.

Vosmaer, JACOB (*The Hague 25 VIII 1783; †Utrecht 13 II 1824), Dutch writer, physician and pharmacist, Professor at Harderwijk and Utrecht; wrote, with acute psychological insight, humorous essays, such as 'Het leven en de wandelingen van Meester Maarten Vroeg' in De nagelaten en verspreide letterarbeid (2 vols, 1862).

De menschenliefde (1818).
J.W.W.

Voss, JOHANN HEINRICH (*Sommersdorf, Mecklenburg 20 II 1751; †Heidelberg 29 III 1826), German poet. With Boie's* help Voss studied at Göttingen, where he was the leading spirit of the HAINBUND. A schoolmaster at Otterndorf, then at Eutin, he was at Weimar when Schiller* died. He devoted the last 20 years of his life to classical studies at Heidelberg. Voss was first influenced by Rousseau* and Klopstock*, but turned soon to the classics, translating Homer*. Combining his early manner with his classicism, he invented the rural idyll in hexameters, of which Luise (1783-84) and Der siebzigste Geburtstag (1781) are the best examples.

VERSE: Der Morgen (1776); Die Leibeigenschaft

(1776); Selmas Geburtstag (1776); Die Bleicherin (1777); Der Bettler (1777); Die Elbfahrt (1777); Der Abendschmaus (1779); Der Hagestolz (1779); Vermischte Gedichte (1784); Gedichte (2 vols, 1785-95); Idyllen (1801).—TRANSLATIONS: Die Odyssee (1781); Des P. Virgilius Maro Landbau (1789); Ilias (1793); Des Horatius Werke (1806); Shakespeares Schauspiele (1818-29); Aristophanes (1821).—PROSE: Über Götz und Ramler (1809); Abriss meines Lebens (1818).—Sämtliche poetische Werke (1835); sel. ed. A. Sauer in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XLIX (1887).—Briefe (2 vols, 1833-34).

W. Herbst, J. H. V. (2 vols, 1872-76); C. Kahlmann, J. H. V. als Kritiker und Gelehrter (1914).
H.B.G.

Vossius, GERARDUS (*nr Heidelberg 1577; †Amsterdam 1649), Dutch historian, studied and was Professor at Leiden, removed in 1619 because of his Arminian sympathies; Professor at the Amsterdam Athenaeum in 1631. Friend and adviser of Hooft* (history) and Vondel* (classical literature). At the death of his very talented son Vondel dedicated his magnificent Vertrouwingen to him.
A.M.B.W.

Leerboek over Rhetorica (1648); De historicis Graecis, De historicis Latinis (both wr. 1627; pub. 1677).

Edith Kern, The Influence of Heinsius and V. Upon French Dramatic Theory (1949); J. W. Johnson, The Formation of English Neo-Classical Thought (1967); C. J. M. Rademaker, G. J. V. (1967).
A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Vovchok, MARKO, pseud. of MARIA MARKOVYCH, née VILINSKAYA (*1834; †1907), author of Ukrainian and Russian stories, in which she combined ethnographic romanticism with a powerful quiet realism and exposed the evils of serfdom simply by implication. From 1860 to 1867 she lived and wrote in Paris.

Tvory (7 vols, 1964-66).—P.-J. Stahl, Maroussia, d'après une légende de Markovovzok (1878; numerous reprs).

P. Cundy, 'M. V.' in Ukr. Quart., III (1947); Y. Slavutych, 'M. V.', ibid., XIV (1958); O. Zasenko, M. V. i zarubizhni literaturni (1959).
V.S.

Voynikov, DOBRI (*Shumen 10 XI 1833; †Turnovo 27 III 1878), Bulgarian playwright. He established his own theatre touring company in 1865. All his life he wrote and produced plays, which were popular in their time. He produced his own weekly, Dunavska zora (1867-70).

Stoyan Voyvoda (1866); Rayna Knyaginya (1866); Pokrushtenie na Preslavski dvor (1868); Vuzstaryavane na Tsar Krum Strashny (1871).

K. Velichkov, D. V. (1893); N. Atanassov, Borba za teatur (1900).
V.P.

Voznesensky, ANDREI ANDREYEVICH (*Moscow 1933), one of the most talented Soviet poets of the younger generation. He studied architecture, but gave it up and dedicated himself to poetry. In contrast to Evtushenko*, who continues Nekrasov's* civic tradition, Voznesensky is more personal and technically more difficult. Having matured under Pasternak's* influence, he became a perfect craftsman in poetry of associations. Disgusted with the modern world as Goya (with whom he compares himself) was with his, he yet finds inspiration in love, nature and in living life. Among his verses are some interesting impressions of America.

Parabola (1960); Mosaic (1960); Antimiry (1964).—Selected Poems (tr. A. Hollo, New York, 1964); Selected Poems (tr. H. Marshall, 1966); Antiworlds and the Fifth Ace (tr. P. Blake and M. Hayward, 1968). J.L.

Vranckx, CORNELIS COLUMBANUS (*c. 1529; †1615), Dutch poet in the REDERIJKER tradition (motto: 'Columbarum instar, sine felle'), prelate of St Peter's Abbey at Ghent. He wrote a number of fierce Counter-Reformation poems, for instance Sduvels kermisse (1578) on the occasion of an iconoclastic riot after the Pacification of Ghent, and a eulogy in verse (?1601) on the Holy Sacrament.

P. Blommaert, Nederduitsche schryvers van Gent (1861); W. J. C. Buitendijk, Het Calvinisme in de spiegel van de Zuidnederl. literatuur der Contra-Reformatie (1942). J.J.M.

Vraz, STANKO (*Cerovec, Styria 30 VI 1810; †Zagreb 24 V 1851), Croatian and Slovene writer. He studied philology in Graz, and became associated with Gaj's* Illyrian movement. Vraz collected and published Slovene traditional poetry, and for Kolo, the first Croatian literary review, wrote works on folk-lore, philology and literature. His own romantic lyric verse is often strongly emotional.

Djulabije (1840); Gusle i tambura (1845).—Djela (1954). V.J.

Vrchlický, JAROSLAV, pseud. of EMIL FRIDA (*Louny 17 II 1853; †Domažlice 9 IX 1912), Czech poet, dramatist, novelist, critic and translator. The son of a merchant, Vrchlický, after a short period of preparation for the priesthood, went over to the study of history. In 1893 he was appointed Professor of comparative literary history at the Czech University of Prague. His private life was darkened by the break-up of his marriage in 1892. His immense literary activity was brought to an end in 1908 by a serious mental illness to which he finally succumbed.

By the very quantity of his output (83 volumes of original poetry, 31 plays, 98 volumes of translations, etc.), Vrchlický dominated Czech literature at the end of the 19th century. For a time he was generally regarded as the greatest of Czech poets, but already in his lifetime many dissentient voices were heard. It is undoubtedly true that through his writings (perhaps especially his translations) the Czech poetical language attained a breadth and maturity that it had not known before, and Czech poetry largely exchanged its indebtedness to German models for the influences of France, Italy and England; but the intrinsic value of his work cannot now be rated above that of other 19th-century poets such as Mácha*, Březina* or Bezruč*. His lyrics suffer from an over-rhetorical and diffuse manner; these characteristics are less harmful to his historical epics (partly inspired by Victor Hugo's* Légende des siècles and the work of Leconte* de Lisle). Among his best lyric collections are Hudba v duši (1886) and Meč Damoklův (1912). Notable among his epic cycles are Mythy (1879 and 1880), Zlomky epejeje (1886) and Nové zlomky epejeje (1895).

Sebrané spisy (65 vols, 1895–1912); Básmnické dílo (20 vols, 1948–63).

A. Jensen, J. V. Étude littéraire (Stockholm, 1894); F. X. Šalda in Duše a dílo (1913); V. Tichý, J. V. (1951). R.A.

Vries, HENDRIK DE (*Groningen 17 VIII 1896), Dutch poet and critic. His early work was mainly free verse, but soon his interest in technique became marked. Characteristic of his poetic universe is the almost Gothic preoccupation with fear, blood and ghosts; in his nightmare world, dreams and the irrational inner life of children play a dominant part. He also wrote criticism in verse.

VERSE: De nacht (1920); Copla's (1935); Nergal (1937); Atlantische balladen (1937); Toovertuin (1947); Iberia (1964).—Keur uit vroegere verzen 1916–1946 (coll. verse; 1962).—CRITICISM: Capri-cho's en rijmcritieken (1946); Vers tegen vers (2 vols, 1949–51).

G. J. Geers et al., H. de V. vijftig jaar (1946); H. Marsman, Verzameld werk (1960); P. N. van Eyck, Verzameld werk, IV (1961). J.J.O.

Vries, JERONIMO DE (*Amsterdam 9 IV 1776; ∞1803 Maria G. Verhoesen; †ibid. 1 VI 1853), Dutch writer and numismatist, town clerk of Amsterdam. Despite his co-editorship of De Arke Noachs and his friendship with Bilderdijk* he stayed outside politics. He wrote the first history of Dutch literature, Proeven eener geschiedenis der Nederduitse dichtkunde (2 vols, 1810).

Hugo de Groot en Marie van Reigersbergen (1827); Nederl. gedenkpenningen verklaard (with J. C. de Jonge; 1829). J.W.W.

Vries, THEUNIS UULKE DE (*26 IV 1907), Dutch poet, novelist, story writer and essayist, of Frisian origin. He began his literary career as an aestheticist poet, but in the early 1930s became deeply involved in the Communist movement. His creative work contains many rural, historical and political novels, and has been widely translated.

VERSE: Terugkeer (1927); Verzen (1932); De dood (1948).—PROSE: Friesche sagen (1925); Rembrandt (1931); Eroica (1934); Stiefmoeder aarde (1936); Het rad der fortuin (1938); De vrijheid gaat in 't rood gekleed (1946); Sla de wolven, herder (1946); De Friese postkoets (1948); Een spook waart door Europa (1948); De fuga van de tijd (3 vols, 1952–56); Het motet van de kardinaal (1966); De namen in de boom (1967).—ESSAYS: Vox humana (1941); M. Nijhoff, wandelaar in de werkelijkheid (1946); Meesters en vrienden (memoirs; 1962). J.J.O.

Vriesland, VICTOR EMANUEL VAN (*Haarlem 27 X 1892; ∞ Adrienne Canivez), Dutch poet and critic. An admirer of Paul Valéry*, he shows himself in his well-balanced writing to be an erudite and sensitive judge and poet.

Voorwaardelijk uitzicht (verse; 1929); Verzamelde gedichten (coll. verse; 1968).—PROSE: Het afscheid van de wereld in drie dagen (1926); De ring met de aquamarijn (1939); Herinneringen (recollections; 1969).—PLAYS: Der verlorene Sohn (tr. V. E. van Vriesland and Georg Kaiser, 1925); De havenstad (1933).—ESSAYS AND CRITICISM: Grondslag van verstandhouding (1946); Vereenvoudigingen (aphorisms; 1952); De onverzoenlijken (1954); Onderzoek en vertoog (coll. crit.; 2 vols, 1958); Het werkelijkheidsgehalte in de letterkunde (1962).

M. Vasalis et al., Victor, het boek der vrienden (1947); Willem Brandt et al., V. E. van V., een karakteristiek (1957). J.J.O.

Vrkljan, IRENA (*Belgrade 21 VIII 1930), Croatian poetess. Vrkljan began publishing in 1950 while still a student at Zagreb and now works for radio and television. She writes lyrical, intimate poetry with strong Surrealist undertones.

VERSE: Krik je samo tišina (1954); Paralele (1957); Srvari već daleke (1962); Doba prijateljstva (1963). B.J.

Vroman, LEO (*Gouda 10 IV 1915; ∞ 1947 Georgina Maria Sanders), Dutch poet and prose writer; also a biologist. He writes ingenious, yet colloquial, short and long poems, which attempt to involve the reader by addressing him directly and deliberately alternating between intensity and vagueness. His main themes are the indispensability of love and the inevitability of death, often expressed in the terms of biological analysis.

VERSE: Gedichten (1946); Poems in English (1953); Inleiding tot een leegte (1955); Uit slaapwandelen (1957); De ontvachting (1960); Twee

gedichten (1961); Fabels (1962); Manke vliegen (1963); Ballade van mezelf (1969).—126 gedichten (1964); 114 gedichten (1969).—PROSE: Tineke (1948); De adem van Mars (1956); Snippers (1958).—Voorgrond, achtergrond (play; 1969).

H. U. J. d'Oliveira in Merlyn I.1, I.6 (1962–63), IV.5 (1966); L. H. Pelzer, L. V. (1965); interview, H. U. J. d'Oliveira in Scheppen riep hij gaat van Au! (1965). J.J.O.

Všehrd, VIKTORIN KORNEL ZE (*Chrudim c. 1460; †Prague 1520), Czech humanist. He was one of the first writers to use Czech for works of scholarship, notably in his O právéch, o sídích i o dskách země české knihy devatery ('Nine Books on the Laws, Courts and Public Records of Bohemia'; wr. 1495–99, pub. 1508).

O právéch země české knihy devatery (ed. H. Jireček, 1874).—V. Vaněček, M. V. C. ze V. a další vývoj českého právníctví (1960). R.A.

Vučo, ALEKSANDAR (*Belgrade 25 IX 1897), Serbian novelist and poet. Vučo studied in Paris, graduated from the law faculty in Belgrade after the First World War and began publishing in 1926. He was an editor of numerous journals between the wars, including Naša stvarnost, and a foremost exponent of Surrealism during the 1920s and 1930s. His post-war poetry has remained basically Surrealist but has developed in the direction of deeper philosophical reflection and perhaps less superficial brilliance. His first attempt at a novel Koren vida (1927) has remained the only genuinely Surrealist novel in Serbian literature, but it was only partially successful. His post-war trilogy of novels is less experimental and closer to traditional realism, although the work still contains many features of the poetic and modernist novel currents. Like Davičo's* Pesma the trilogy is an examination of the theme of the individual's internal conflict with himself and his psychological development towards convinced participation in the revolutionary movement as a result of pragmatic experience and personal involvement. It is a far more convincing work than the majority of treatments of similar themes.

VERSE: Krov nad prozorom (1926); Načela (1929); Humor zaspalog (1932); Marija Ručara (1935; with D. Matić); Mastodonti (1951); Pesme (1957); Ako se još jednom setim (1958); Poziv na maštanje (1965); Alge (1968).—NOVELS: Gluho doba (1940; with D. Matić); Raspust (1954); The Holidays, tr. A. Brown, 1959; Mrtve javke (1958); Zasluge (1965). B.J.

Vulteijs Remensis, JOHANNES (vernacular surname uncertain: ?VISAGIER, ?VOULTÉ) (†1542), French neo-Latin poet. An ardent supporter of the new learning and an opponent of the medievalism of the Sorbonne. Although writing in Latin, he championed the claims of French. His work (pub. 1536–38) consists of epigrams, xenia and inscriptions.

D. Murarasu, La poésie néolatine (1928); P. Van Tieghem, La littérature latine de la Renaissance (1944).
F.W.

Vuylsteke, JULIUS (*Ghent 10 XI 1836; †ibid. 16 I 1903), Flemish poet, liberal politician, devoted himself to adult education, wrote love poetry in the tradition of Musset* and Heine*, and some powerful political and social verse.

Zwijgende liefde (1860); Uit het studentenleven (1868).—Verzamelde gedichten (1881); Verzamelde prozaschriften (4 vols, 1887–91).
R.F.L.

Vyazemsky, PĚTR ANDREYEVICH, PRINCE (*nr Moscow 12 VII 1792; †1878), Russian poet and writer of the Pushkin* circle. He was a champion of Romanticism, yet his own poetry was predominantly classical: polished, lucid and often full of caustic wit. As a critic he wrote articles and studies about Fonvizin*, Ozerov*, Krylov*, Gogol* etc. His correspondence, too, is of interest.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1878–86); Izbrannye stikhotvoreniya (1935).

D. Yazykov, P. V. (1904); A. Ginsburg, 'V. literator' in Russkaya proza (ed. B. Eichenbaum and J. Tynyanov, 1926); P. M. Bitsilli, Pushkin i V. (1939).
J.L.

Vydūnas, pseud. of VILIUS STORASTA (*Jugnaten, East Prussia 22 III 1868; ∞1888 Klara Koch;

†West Germany 20 II 1953), Lithuanian dramatist and publicist. Educated in Germany, Vydūnas attended courses in philosophy and religion at four Universities (Tumas calls him 'an enlightened autodidact'), then taught in schools from 1888 to 1912 and was prominent in the social life of East Prussia. His contribution to Lithuanian literature is chiefly in the form of plays, which are of two distinct kinds—realistic comedy and mystical and allegorical drama. As a mystic Vydūnas was influenced by theosophy, occultism and even spiritualism. He was an optimistic believer in human perfectibility. Like Donelaitis* he stood apart from literary developments in Lithuania proper, but his influence there was notable. He was a very prolific author and wrote in German as well as in Lithuanian.

PLAYS: Jonuks (1900); Prabočiu šešėliai (1908); Mūsų laimėjimas (1913); Amžina ugnis (3 vols, 1913); Vergai ir dykliai (1919); Zvaigždžių takais (1920); Jūrų varpai (1920); Likimo bangos (1922); Varpstis (1923); Gaisras (1928); Jūraitė (1934).—MISCELLANEOUS PROSE: Mūsų uždavinys (1910).

V. Mykolaitis, V. o dramaturgija (1935); Lietuvių literatūros istorija, II (1958).

W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Vynck, PROSPER DE (†1674), Dutch devotional poet, canon at Bruges, wrote a versification of Duyfkens en Willemynkens Pelgrimage tot haren Beminnenden binnen Jerusalem (1641) and an edifying dialogue between Spirit and Flesh, Wekelyck Vermaeck (1645). His works show Cats* influence.
A.M.B.W.

W

Wace, ROBERT (*Jersey c. 1100; †after 1174), French writer. Brought up at Caen, he was a clerc lisant (the precise meaning of which is uncertain). In his latter years at least he enjoyed the patronage of Henry II, who secured him a canonry at Bayeux (before 1169). Of his extensive output there survive three religious works and two chronicles in octosyllabic verse. These latter (the Brut and the Rou) relate the history of the Britons and the Normans respectively and bear the names of the reputed founders (Brutus the Trojan and Duke Rollo) of these two nations. Rou is based on Dudo of St Quentin and Guillaume de Jumièges, while Brut is an adaptation of Geoffrey* of Monmouth's Historia. Wace preserves the substance of his sources, but his manner is that of a popularizer of clerkly learning addressing himself to a lay public. His style is very similar to that of the romans d'antiquité, being marked by amplification, figures of rhetoric and stylized descriptions. Brut contains the first mention in literature of Arthur's Round Table. It enjoyed great popularity and exerted a marked influence on 13th-century vernacular literature (ARTHURIAN LEGEND).

La Vie de Sainte Marguerite (very early; ed. E. A. Francis, 1932); La Conception Notre-Dame (?1130–40; ed. W. R. Ashford, 1933); La Vie de Saint Nicolas (?c. 1150; ed. J. Ronsjö, 1942); Le Roman de Brut (1155; ed. I. Arnold, 1938–40); Le Roman de Rou (or Geste des Normands; begun 1161, left unfinished 1174; ed. H. Andresen, 1877–79).

M. Pelan, L'influence du Brut de W. (1931); E. Hoepffner, 'Le Brut de W.' in Rev. des cours et conférences, XXXIV (1933); M. Houck, Sources of the Roman de Brut (1941). F.W.

Wackenroder, WILHELM HEINRICH (*Berlin 13 VII 1773; †ibid. 13 II 1798), German art critic. Son of a Prussian minister, who dominated his timid son, Wackenroder became attached to Tieck*. Obligated to enter the civil service, he pined and succumbed easily to a fever. Wackenroder's principal writings are the essays published by Tieck as Herzensergiessungen. They display his dislike of analytical criticism and stress the critic's understanding of a work of art as a whole. He showed great enthusiasm for medieval art.

Herzensergiessungen eines kunstliebenden Klosterbruders (a small part by Tieck; 1797); Phantasien über die Kunst (1814); Werke und Briefe (ed. F. von der Leyen, 2 vols, 1910).

P. Koldewey, W. und sein Einfluss auf Tieck (1904); E. Gülzow, W. (1930); G. Fricke, W.s Religion der Kunst (1948). H.B.G.

Wade, THOMAS (*Woodbridge 1805; ∞Lucy

Bridgman; †Jersey 19 IX 1875), English poet and playwright whose poetry is coloured by Shelley's* to an extent that obscures his own poetic gift.

VERSE: Tasso, and The Sisters (1825); The Contention of Death and Love (1837).—PLAYS: Woman's Love, or the Triumph of Patience (1829); The Jew of Arragon (1830).

W. R. Nicoll and T. J. Wise, Literary Anecdotes of the 19th Century, I (1895; incl. H. B. Forman on W.). R.M.H. (K.W.)

Wadman, ANNE (*Langweer 30 XI 1919), Frisian writer of poetry, fiction and relentless literary criticism. His novels are written in a modern tone and violated sexual taboos in Frisian literature.

NOVELS: De oerwinning fan Bjinse Houtsma (1962); De Smearlappen (1963; Dutch tr. 1964; Ger. tr. 1965); Kûgels foar in labbekak (1964; Dutch tr. 1966); By de duvel to bycht (1966; Dutch tr. 1968); De feestgongers (1968); It rammelfjen fan de pels (1970).—Kritysk Konfoai (coll. essays; 1951).—Mei Abraham fûstkje (autobiog.; 1969).

E. Howard Harris, The Literature of Friesland (1956); J. Piebenga, Koarte Skiednis fan de Fryske Skriftekennisse (2nd ed. 1957). K.D.

Wadskier, CHRISTIAN FREDERIK (*Ørslev Kloster, nr Skive 1713; ∞1755 Christiane Annette Friederich, ∞1778 Frederikke Hæseker; †Copenhagen 5 XI 1779), Danish poet. Without any permanent employment for a long time, he made his living by writing occasional poems. In 1755 he became Professor of poetry at Copenhagen. Much of his poetry is simply mechanical, but his quaint and often witty style, reminiscent of 17th-century baroque, has given him a permanent place among Danish poets.

Udvalgte danske Vers (ed. H. Brix and A. Jensen, 1915). E.B.

Wagenaar, JAN (*Amsterdam 18 X 1709; ∞1739 Christiana Vergoes; †ibid. 1 III 1773), Dutch historian, topographer and journalist; self-educated, from 1730 a Mennonite. He wrote the first standard history of the Netherlands and of Amsterdam, showing a moderate partiality to the States' cause.

Hedendaagsche historie of tegenwoordige staat, I–III, V, X, XXI (1738–58); Vaderlandsche Historie (21 vols, 1749–59); Amsterdam in zijn opkomst . . . (3 vols, 1760–68).

P. Huisinga Bakker, Het leeven van J. W. (1776). J.W.W.

Wagenfeld, KARL (*Lüdinghausen 5 IV 1869; †Münster 19 XII 1939), Low German epic poet and playwright. He began with tragedies from peasant life but later devoted himself to religious poetry in which medium he wrote two epics and a Mystery play. These owe more to modern Christian beliefs and, in part, Expressionist technique, than to medieval Mystery plays. His use of the Westphalian dialect in highly wrought verse is masterly.

TRAGEDIES: Dat Gewitter (1912); Hatt gegen Hatt (1916).—EPICS: Daud un Düwel (1912); De Antichrist (1916).—Lucifer (play; 1921).—Gesammelte Werke (2 vols, 1954–56).

A. Kracht, Das Werk K. W.s (diss. Rostock, unpub.; extras in Mitteilungen Quickborn, XXV, XXVII, 1932, 1934); K. W. Festgabe (1939; with biblio.). G.C.

Wager, LEWIS (fl. 1566), English morality-writer. In the one play known to be written by him Wager uses Biblical history in polemic.

G.K.H.

The Life and Repentance of Mary Magdalene (1567; ed. F. I. Carpenter, 1902).

B. Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958); D. M. Bevington, From 'Mankind' to Marlowe (1962); F. P. Wilson, The English Drama 1485–1585 (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wager, WILLIAM (fl. 1566), English writer of interludes. Three interludes, Protestant in tone and didactic in intention, are known as the work of this author. G.K.H.

Enough is as good as a feast (?1565); The Cruel Debtor (1566; frags only); The longer thou livest the more fool thou art. A mirror very necessary for youth (1569); ed. R. M. Benbow (The Longer . . . and Enough . . .; 1968).

B. Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958); D. M. Bevington, From 'Mankind' to Marlowe (1962) and Tudor Drama and Politics (1968); F. P. Wilson, The English Drama 1485–1585 (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wägner, ELIN (*Lund 16 V 1882; †Bergslund, Småland 7 I 1949), Swedish journalist, author and feminist. Wägner's early work championed the emancipated woman; and her latent pacifism was brought out by the First World War, notably in Släkten Jerneploogs framgång (1916). In her Småland-peasant novel, Åsa-Hanna (1917), she returned to childhood media, leaving criticism of modern conventions for analysis of individuals and their spiritual troubles. The attempt to reconcile religion with modern life occupied her long, and though she never relinquished her feminist creeds, her best work combines both these inward urges. C.H.K.

Valda skrifter (ed. H. Ahlenius, 14 vols, 1950–54).—H. Ahlenius, E. W. (1936). I.S.

Wagner, HEINRICH LEOPOLD (*Strasbourg 19 II 1747; †Frankfurt-on-Main 4 III 1779), German dramatist. At Strasbourg University in 1771 Wagner met Goethe*, whom he greatly admired.

In 1774 he settled in Frankfurt in legal practice, becoming one of Goethe's circle. His satire Prometheus Deukalion (1775) was attributed to Goethe. His often strikingly realistic plays become stilted at moments of passion. He was primarily a gifted imitator.

Die Reue nach der Tat (1775); Die Kindesmörderin (1776); Theaterstücke (1779).—Gesammelte Werke (vol. I only; 1923); sel. eds: A. Sauer in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., LXXX (1883); K. Freye in Sturm und Drang (1911).

E. Schmidt, H. L. W. (1879).

H.B.G.

Wagner, RICHARD (*Leipzig 22 V 1813; ∞1836 Minna Planer [†1865], ∞1870 Cosima von Bülow; †Venice 13 II 1883), German composer and dramatist. From boyhood Wagner was equally drawn to dramatic writing and to composition, but only after apprentice work with conventional opera did he arrive at his individual synthesis. As Kapellmeister in Dresden (1843–49) he was gradually achieving success, when revolutionary entanglements caused his exile in Zürich (1849–59). There he elaborated his theory of the music-drama with its ancient Greek manner: poetry, music and the pictorial arts fused into one, with which the Festspiel—art elevated to a religious occasion—and the idea of drawing upon medieval myth and epic, unearthed during the Romantic period, were indissolubly linked. Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg (1862), counted among the few outstanding German comedies, was his last work intended for the stage as he found it, not as he wished it to be. He was helped by his friends—Liszt, von Bülow (whom he repaid by eloping with his wife), Nietzsche* (who turned from an admirer into a bitter opponent). Ludwig II gave him his chance: the Festspielhaus at Bayreuth was founded in 1872, The Ring first performed in 1876. As a dramatic poet he was a follower of the Romantics, carrying out their theories in practice. His work was at once a culmination and a dead end. He had ardent admirers and bitter enemies in many lands. Though his idea of combining the arts in a single work was never practicable, Tristan und Isolde (1865) is still the most revolutionary operatic work.

Mein Leben (2 vols, 1911, 1969; Eng. tr. 1911); Gesammelte Schriften und Dichtungen (6th ed., 16 vols, 1912–14); Briefe (17 vols, 1912; ed. G. Strobel and W. Wolf, 1967 ff.); Auswahl (ed. W. Altmann, 2 vols, 1925; Eng. tr. M. M. Bozman, 1927, 1936).—R. W.'s Prose Works (tr. W. A. Ellis, 8 vols, 1892–99; repr. 1966); Letters of R. W. (ed. J. N. Burk, 1952).

K. F. Glasenapp, W. (6 vols, 1894–1912; 6th ed. 1908–23); W. A. Ellis, Life of R. W. (6 vols, 1900–08); W. J. Henderson, R. W. His Life and His Dramas (1901, 1923); G. de Pourtalès, R. W. (Paris, 1932; Eng. tr. 1932); E. Newman,

W. As Man and Artist (1914; 3rd ed. 1960) and The Life of R. W. (4 vols, 1933–46); E. Kretzschmar, R. W. (1939); J. Kerman, Opera as Drama (1959); H. Barth, Internationale W.-Bibliographie (1961); R. Domington, W.'s 'Ring' and Its Symbols (1963); C. White, An Introduction to the Life and Works of R. W. (1967).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Waiblinger, WILHELM (*Heilbronn 21 XI 1804; †Rome 17 I 1830), German poet. Highly precocious, with marks of genius and unbounded ambition, Waiblinger wrote his novel Phaethon and was known to Schwab* and Uhland* while still at school. Hölderlin* was his model, Mörike*, for a time, his friend. Cotta financed his stay in Italy in 1826, but, dissatisfied, withdrew support. Immersing himself in Italian life, Waiblinger went to pieces, whilst his verse and prose, in spite of flashes of vivid beauty, remained unrecognized until after his death.

Gesammelte Werke (ed. H. von Canitz, 9 vols, 1839–40); Gedichte (ed. E. Mörike, 1844).

H. Behne, W. (1948); L. S. Thompson, W. W. in Italy (1953).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Wain, JOHN (BARRINGTON) (*Stoke-on-Trent 14 III 1925; ∞1947 Marianne Urmston [o/o 1956], ∞1960 Eirian James), English novelist, poet and critic. His novels have an engaging humour, and his poetry verbal dexterity and attractive wit.

NOVELS: Hurry On Down (1953); The Contenders (1958); The Smaller Sky (1967); A Winter in the Hills (1970).—POETRY: A Word Carved on a Sill (1956); Weep Before God (1961); Letters to Five Artists (1969).—CRITICISM: Preliminary Essays (1957); Essays on Literature and Ideas (1963); The Living World of Shakespeare (1964).

W.R.A.

Wakefield, GILBERT (*Nottingham 22 II 1756; ∞1779 Anne Watson; †Hackney 9 IX 1801), English classical scholar and controversialist whose pugnacious spirit is visible alike in his political career and in his emendations of the classical texts he edited.

R.M.H.

Silva Critica: the illustration of the Scriptures by light borrowed from the philology of Greece and Rome (5 vols, 1789–93); ed., Horace (2 vols, 1794); ed., Lucretius (3 vols, 1796–99); Correspondence with C. J. Fox (1813).—Memoirs of the Life of G. W. (2 vols, 1792; by himself).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Wakefield Cycle: see Towneley Cycle.

Walaëus, ANTONIUS (*Ghent 3 X 1573; †Leyden 9 VII 1639), Dutch theologian, 1605–19 parson at Middelburg, afterwards Professor at Leiden. He had an important share in the official translation of the Bible.

Opera omnia (ed. J. Walaëus, 1647–48); Synopsis purioris theologiae (ed. H. Bavinck, 1881).

J. D. de Lind van Wijngaarden, A. W. (1891).

J.J.M.

Walafrid Strabo (*c. 808; †849), Abbot of Reichenau from 838. He studied in Fulda under Rabanus* Maurus. Early works are a Visio Wettini (c. 830) and lives of saints. As tutor to Charles, son of Louis the Pious, he wrote court poetry in the best Carolingian tradition. More famous is De cultura hortorum ('Hortulus'), a description, with allegory, of the flowers in the cloister garden of Reichenau. He wrote a preface to Einhard's* Vita Caroli. He did not write the Glossa ordinaria.

Monumenta Germaniae historica, Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, II (1884); Hortulus (tr. R. S. Lambert, 1924); Life of St Gall (tr. Maud Joynt, 1927).

F. J. E. Raby, Secular Latin Poetry (2 vols, 1934); B. Smalley, The Study of the Bible (on the Glossa ordinaria; 2nd ed. 1952).

F.P.P.

Walcott, DEREK A. (*Castries, St Lucia 23 I 1930; ∞1954 Faye Moyston [o/o 1959], ∞1960 Margaret Maillard), West Indian poet and playwright. Since graduating from University in Jamaica he has lived mostly in Trinidad, where he directs the Trinidad Theatre Workshop. His creative sensibility has drawn heavily on his St Lucian experience, but increasingly Trinidad and elsewhere, first in his poetry and very recently in a play (In A Fine Castle), have been providing settings. A painter as well, Walcott is profoundly West Indian in his use of landscape and social setting, in the way in which the stylistic influence of English and American modern writers has been tempered by his strength in West Indian image and speech rhythm, and above all in respect of his themes and concerns, present from his teenage beginnings as a poet and explored humanely always. The familiar but crucial West Indian problems are present in his work, but without circumscribing it or limiting his vision. Instead his work as a whole redefines the West Indian problem in a new dimension, reminding us through his humanistic concern that it is not unique, and that if it depersonalizes, the solution is partly in the preservation and reconstruction of human personality. His work shows his own determination to remain whole; and if he is often the subject of his own poetry, the self is explored in ways that make his experience not unrepresentative of his country's, while at the same time remaining relevant in a world that is increasingly threatening the integrity of the individual.

PLAYS: Henri Christophe (n.d.); The Sea at Dauphin (1954); Drums and Colours (1961); Malcauchon (1966); Ti Jean (n.d.); Dream on Monkey Mountain and Other Plays (1970).—25 Poems (1948); In A Green Night: Poems 1948-60 (1962); The Castaway and Other Poems (1965); The Gulf and Other Poems (1969).—'Leaving School' in London Mag., new ser., V.6 (Sept. 1965).

G. C. O. King, 'The poems of D. W.' in Caribbean Quart., X.3 (Sept. 1964); Mervyn Morris, 'W. and the audience for poetry', ibid., XIV.1-2 (1968); Patricia Ismond, 'W. versus Brathwaite', ibid., XVII.3-4 (Sept.-Dec. 1971); Gerald Moore, The Chosen Tongue (1969); Edward Baugh, 'Metaphor and plainness in the poetry of D. W.' in The Lit. Half-Yearly, XI.2 (July 1970).

A.D.Dr.

Waldinger, ERNST (*Vienna 16 X 1896; †New York 1 II 1970), German-American lyricist. Forced to emigrate to the United States in 1938, he became a Professor at Skidmore College in Albany, New York.

Die Kuppel (1934); Der Gemmenschneider (1937); Die kühlen Bauernstuben (1946); Musik für diese Zeit (1946); Glück und Geduld (1952); Zwischen Hudson und Donau (1958); Gesang vor dem Abgrund (1961); Ich kann mit meinem Menschenbruder sprechen (1965).

J. Picard, 'E. W. at sixty' in Books Abroad, XXXI (1957); N. Langer in Dichter aus Österreich, IV (1960); R. Knauf, 'E. W.' in Amer.-Ger. Rev., XXVII (1961).

E.R.

Waldis, BURKARD (*Allendorf c. 1495; †c. 1556), German dramatist and moralist. Originally a Franciscan, he became a fanatical Lutheran after a visit to Rome and lived a restless life in Riga. There he wrote the Low German Shrovetide play, Der verlorene Sohn, dramatic, well constructed, deeply sincere and on a high poetic level, after Gnapheus* Acolastus the best play on this theme. His fables (Esopus) are, despite obscenity and long-windedness, full of humour, imagination and local Riga colour, and were extremely popular.

De parabell vam verlorn Szohn (1527; ed. G. Milchsack, 1881; ed. A. E. Berger in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, VI, 1935); Esopus (1548; ed. H. Kurz, 3 vols, 1862; ed. J. Tittmann, 2 vols, 1882); Der Psalter (1552).

G. Milchsack, B. W. (1881); E. Martens, B. W. 'Esopus' (diss. Göttingen, 1907); J. Riordan, 'The status of the B. W. studies' in Mod. Lang. Quart., II (1941).

D.G.D.

Waley, ARTHUR DAVID (*Tunbridge Wells 19 VIII 1889; ∞1966 Alison Grant Robinson; †27 VI 1966), English interpreter of Chinese and Japanese literature and art. His knowledge of his subject and feeling for it, and his ability as a translator, have made his books indispensable and delightful.

TRANSLATIONS: 170 Chinese Poems (1918); More Translations (1919); The Tale of Genji

(1925-33); The Book of Songs (1937); The Analects of Confucius (1938); Monkey (1942); Chinese Poems (1946).—ON CHINA: An Introduction to the Study of Chinese Painting (1923); The Way and Its Power (1934); Three Ways of Thought in Ancient China (1939); The Life and Times of Po Chü-i (1949); The Real Tripitaka (1951).—ON JAPAN: Japanese Poetry (1919); The Nō Plays of Japan (1921).

Madly Singing in the Mountains: An Appreciation and Anthology of A. W. (ed. I. Morris, 1970).—Biblio. by F. A. Johns (1968).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Walker, DAVID HARRY (*Dundee, Scotland 9 II 1911; ∞1939 Willa Magee), Scottish-Canadian writer who served as a military officer in Britain, India and the Sudan and was prisoner of war (1940-45). After filling the post of controller to the Viceroy of India (1946-47), he settled in Canada. Drawn from his varied experience, his novels and adventure stories are marked by vivid description, comedy and engaging narrative skill.

The Storm and the Silence (1949); Geordie (1950); The Pillar (1952); Digby (1953); Harry Black (1956); Where the High Winds Blow (1960); Mallabec (1965); Come Back, Geordie (1966).

M. Stobie, 'The quality of space' in Canad. Lit., VII (1961).

R.Su.

Wall, MERVYN (*Dublin 23 VIII 1908), Irish novelist and dramatist; he has written novels with medieval settings and satirical contemporary reference.

NOVELS: The Unfortunate Fursey (1946); The Return of Fursey (1948); Leaves for Burning (1952); No Trophies Raise (1956).

E.T.W.

Wallace, LEW(IS) (*Brookville, Ind. 10 IV 1827; ∞1852 Susan Elston; †Crawfordsville, Ind. 15 II 1905), American novelist. His first novel on the Spanish conquest of Mexico was followed by his widely-read romance of the early Roman Empire, Ben Hur. His autobiography tells of his Civil War experiences in the Union army.

The Fair God (1873); Ben Hur: A Tale of the Christ (1880); The Prince of India (1893); Lew W.: An Autobiography (1906).

H.L.C.

Wallace, (RICHARD HORATIO) EDGAR (*Greenwich 1 IV 1875; ∞1900 Ivy Maud Caldecott; ∞1921 Ethel Violet King; †Hollywood, Calif. 10 II 1932), English novelist and playwright. Earning a living humbly from the age of 12, he became Daily Mail correspondent in South Africa, and subsequently devoted himself to journalism, play-writing and the production of 170 sensational thrillers which had phenomenal popularity. On the Spot (1931) was a powerful play.

NOVELS: The Four Just Men (1905); Sanders of the River (1911); Bones (1915); The Crimson Circle (1922); The Green Archer (1923).—The Ringer (play; 1926).—People (autobiog.; 1926).

E. V. Wallace, E. W. (1932); M. Lane, E. W. (1938).—Biblio. by W. O. G. Lofts and D. Adley (1969). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Wallace-Crabbe, CHRISTOPHER KEITH (*Richmond, Melbourne 6 V 1934), Australian poet. Influenced by Auden* and having affinities with the English poets of the 1950s, his verse has sharp precision, careful craftsmanship and an engagingly humane outlook.

The Music of Division (1959); In Light and Darkness (1963); The Rebel General (1967). A.M.G.

Wallenberg, JACOB (*Visby 1 III 1746; †Mönsterås 25 VIII 1778), Swedish poet. His best-known work is the witty travelogue, Min son på galejan, written in the then popular genre during a voyage to Canton in 1769 as chaplain on one of the Swedish East India Company's ships. He also wrote other burlesques, much occasional verse and a successful play, Susanna.

Samlade skrifter (ed. N. Afzelius, pub. Svenska vitterhetssamfundet, 1928-41). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Wallengren, AXEL, pseud. FALSTAFF FAKIR (*Lund 21 I 1865; †Berlin 4 XII 1896), Swedish author of some rather indifferent serious poetry and tales, but best known as a humorous writer. His technique recalls Mark* Twain, but his matter is wholly personal and has done much to influence the comic tradition in Swedish literature.

Samlade skrifter (with biog. H. Küntzel; 5 vols, 1923-24); Falstaff Fakirs bästa (1943).

O. Holmberg, Skratt och allvar i svensk litteratur (1963). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Waller, EDMUND (*Coleshill 3 III 1606; †Beaconsfield 21 X 1687), English poet. Lifelong and eloquent Parliamentarian, poetical suitor to Lady Dorothy Sidney ('Sacharissa') and member of the circle of Lucius Cary*, Waller was acknowledged throughout the 18th century as the creator of the neo-classical style in English poetry. His 'lucid rhetoric' is little admired today, but a few lyrics (e.g. 'Go, Lovely Rose') keep their place in anthologies. G.K.H.

The Poems of E. W. (ed. G. Thorn-Drury, 1893).

A. W. Allison, Towards an Augustan Poetic (1962); W. L. Cherniak, The Poetry of Limitation: A Study of E. W. (1968). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Waller, MAX, pseud. of MAURICE WARLOMONT (*Brussels 23 II 1860; †ibid. 6 III 1889), Belgian poet and novelist. He founded and edited (1881-89) La Jeune Belgique, the review which launched Belgium's literary renaissance. As polemicist, organizer and catalyst to other men's art, he was brilliant: his own small output was delicate and whimsical.

La flute à Siebel (verse; 1887).—NOVELS: Lysiane de Lysias (1885); Greta Friedmann (1885).—Anthologie (ed. A. Giraud, 1908).

B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Wallin, JOHAN OLOF (*St Tuna 15 X 1779; †Uppsala 30 VI 1839), Swedish Archbishop and poet. Wallin's youthful didactic and occasional verse followed Leopold's* school. His self-imposed life-work of a revised official Swedish hymnary as a 'vade-mecum for all' was realized in 1819. Wallin himself wrote 130 of its 500 hymns, and revised, adapted or translated another 200. In 1834 he composed his greatest and most powerful sacred poem, Dödens ängel (The Angel of Death, tr. C. B. Shaw, 1910), under the influence of the cholera epidemic. His later verses had Dalarna themes and are remarkable for their authenticity.

Samlade vitterhetsarbeten (ed. B. von Beskow, 6th ed. 1878); Samlade skrifter (ed. E. Liedgren and S. Malmström, 1955- ).

F. Böök, Den romantiska tidsåldern (1928); D. Andreae, J. O. W. (1956). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Wallis, A. S. C., pseud. of ADELE SOPHIA CORNELIA VON ANTAL, née OPZOOMER (*Utrecht 21 VII 1857; ∞1888 Géza Antal von Felső-Geller; †Rotterdam 27 XII 1925), Dutch writer of historical novels and plays. Influenced by Schiller*, she wrote her first dramas in German; her first sombre novel, strong in atmosphere, has a depth which her later works, though more carefully written, fail to attain.

PLAYS: Der Sturz des Hauses Alba (1875); Eene Hongaarsche samenzwering (1904).—PROSE: In dagen van strijd (3 vols, 1878; In Troubled Times, tr. E. J. Irving, 1888); Vorstengunst (3 vols, 1883; Royal Favour, tr. idem, 1885); Een liefdedroom in 1795 (1906); De koning van een vreugderijk (1914).

J. Snellen in Levensber. Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (1926); G. B., 'Mevr. Bosboom over A. S. C. W.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XXX (1937); S. J. R. Rameckers, A. S. C. W. (1947).

J.W.W.

Walpole, HORATIO OR HORACE, 4TH EARL OF ORFORD (*London 24 IX 1717; †ibid. 2 III 1797), English letter-writer, wit and author, son of Sir Robert Walpole, whose correspondence with friends, made between the ages of 15 and 74, forms at once an autobiography and a history of a period written by an affected, affectionate and sensitive dilettante with a flair for gossip, anecdote and chronicle. Eton, Cambridge and the Grand Tour were followed for Walpole by an unenthusiastic seat in Parliament. In 1747 he bought

Strawberry Hill and gradually turned it into a little battlemented Gothic castle stocked with pictures, books, antiques and curiosities. Here he set up a printing press, of which the odes of his friend Gray* were the first production, and devoted himself to the life of amateur author and man of taste. He wrote The Castle of Otranto (1765), which set the fashion for the novel of Gothic horrors, Anecdotes of Painting in England (4 vols, 1762–71), and a tragedy called The Mysterious Mother (1768).

A Letter from Xo Ho, a Chinese philosopher at London, to his Friend Line Chi, at Peking (1757); Catalogue of the Royal and Noble Authors of England (2 vols, 1758); Fugitive Pieces in Verse and Prose (1758); Catalogue of Engravers (1763); Historic Doubts on Richard III (1768); Miscellaneous Antiquities (1772); Letter to the Editor of the Miscellanies of Thomas Chatterton (1779); Description of the Villa of H. W. . . . at Strawberry Hill (1774; defin. form, 1784).—Hieroglyphic Tales (1785); Essay on Modern Gardening (1785).—Reminiscences, written in 1788, for the amusement of Miss Mary and Miss Agnes B[err]y (1805); Memoirs of the last ten years of the reign of George II (ed. Lord Holland, 2 vols, 1822); Memoirs of the reign of King George III (ed. Sir D. Le Marchant, 4 vols, 1845); Journal of the Reign of George III From 1771 to 1783 (ed. J. Doran, 2 vols, 1859).—Works (ed. M. Berry, 5 vols, 1798); Castle of Otranto (ed. W. S. Lewis, 1964); Letters (ed. Mrs Paget Toynbee, 19 vols, 1903–25; ed. W. S. Lewis, 250 vols, 1937– ).

J. Pinkerton, Walpoliana (2 vols, 1799); E. Warburton, Memoirs of H. W. and His Contemporaries (2 vols, 1851); Lady T. Lewis, Extracts of the Journals and Correspondence of Miss Berry (3 vols, 1865); A. Dobson, H. W.: a Memoir (1893; with biblio.); M. A. Havens, H. W. and the Strawberry Hill Press (1901); P. Yvon, H. W. as a Poet (1924); A. F. De Koven, H. W. and Mme du Deffand (1929); R. W. K. Cremer, H. W. (1946); H. W.: Writer, Politician and Connoisseur (ed. W. H. Smith, 1967). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Walpole, Sir Hugh Seymour (*Auckland, N.Z. 13 III 1884; †nr Keswick 1 VI 1941), English novelist. Industrious, of an exuberant nature, skilled in straight narrative, expansive in scenic description, Walpole had the knack of making the most of a moderate talent, and had success with most of his books from 1911 onwards. Perhaps his best novel was The Dark Forest (1916), based on genuine experience.

NOVELS: Mr Perrin and Mr Traill (1911); The Duchess of Wrexe (1914); The Secret City (1919); Jeremy (1919); The Cathedral (1922); The Old Ladies (1924); Wintersmoon (1928); The Herries Chronicle: Rogue Herries (1930); Judith Paris (1931); The Fortress (1932); Vanessa (1933); The Bright Pavilions (1940); Blind Man's

House (1941).—CRITICISM: Joseph Conrad (1916); Anthony Trollope (1928).

R. Hart-Davis, H. W. (1952).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Walschap, Gerard (*Londerzeel 9 VII 1898), Flemish novelist. The principal prose writer of his generation, he made his début in the Expressionist manner of Moens* with verbose verse, a lyrical religious novel and anti-naturalistic plays in the Roman Catholic spirit. With Adelaide, in 1929, he came into his own as a novelist with a dynamic style of his own. From Adelaide onwards he fiercely criticized the preponderantly Roman Catholic civilization of Flanders, which, in his opinion, is merely external. After his own public breach with Roman Catholicism he portrayed the pagan, his self-confessed ideal, in his masterpiece Houtekiet. A strong ethical overtone in his work affirms the value of human aspirations in a strident, even aggressive, manner at first, latterly mellowing to a more supple humanist rationalism. He is also a master of the short story, and his output includes plays and children's books.

NOVELS: Waldo (1928); Adelaide (1929), Eric (1931), Carla (1933; pub. as a trilogy under title De familie Roothoof, 1939; Die Sünde der Adelaide, tr. E. and F. Augustin, 1933); Trouwen (1933); Marriage: Ordeal, tr. A. Brotherton, 1963); Celibaat (1934); Een mensch van goeden wil (1936); L'homme qui voulait le bien, tr. 1944); Sibylle (1938); De bejegening van Christus (1940; Begegnung mit Christus, tr. M. Hechtile, 1935); Het kind (1939; Das Kind, tr. idem, 1939); Houtekiet (1939; Fr. tr. R. Verheyen, 1942); Denise (1942; Fr. tr. R. de Vroylande, 1944); Ons geluk (1946); Moeder (1950); Zuster Virgilia (1951; Sœur Virgilia, tr. P. Chambard, 1953); Oproer in Congo (1953; Insurrection au Congo, tr. F. Populier and F. de Cacamp, 1956); De Française (1947); De ongelooflijke avonturen van Tilman Armenaas (1960); Nieuw Deps (1960); Alter ego (1964); De kaartridder van Heppeneert (1966); Het gastmaal (1966).—SHORT STORIES: Volk (1930); De dood in het dorp (1930; Himmelfahrten, tr. E. and F. Augustin, 1933); De wereld van Soo Moereman (1941); Genezing door aspirine (1943; Cure d'aspirine, tr. W. Elsschot, 1943).—De Spaansche gebroeders (play; 1937).—ESSAYS: Vaarwel dan (1940); Salut en merci (1955); Muziek voor twee stemmen (1963).

K. Elebaers, De romankunst van G. W. (1942); B. Fr. van Vlieden, G. W. (3rd ed. 1963); A. Westerlinck, Gesprekken met W. (2 vols, 1969–70).

R.F.L.

Walser, Martin (*Wasserburg, Lake Constance 24 III 1927), German prose writer and playwright. Proust* and Kafka* (Beschreibung einer Form. Versuch über Franz Kafka, 1961) are acknowledged starting-points for his fiction, in which the shallowness and corruption of the 'economic miracle' society is laid bare. His novels show social insight, satirical wit, a sharp eye for significant detail and linguistic virtuosity. In his tragicomic radio and stage plays he seeks to reveal the repressed and unexpressed tensions and tragedies of contemporary German society.

Ein Flugzeug über dem Haus (stories; 1955); Ehen in Philippsburg (novel; 1957; tr. The Gadarene Club, 1959); Halbzeit (novel; 1960); Lügendgeschichten (stories; 1964); Erfahrungen und Leseerfahrungen (essays; 1965); Das Einhorn (1966; tr. The Unicorn, 1971).—PLAYS: Ein deutsche Chronik (trilogy, in progr.: Eiche und Angora, 1962, tr. The Rabbit Race, 1963; Der schwarze Schwan, 1964).

R. Hartung, 'M. W.' in Monat, X (1957–58); R. H. Thomas and W. van der Will, The German Novel and the Affluent Society (1968). K.P.

Walser, ROBERT (*Biel nr Berne 15 IV 1878; †Herisau, Aargau 25 XII 1956), Swiss novelist, poet, writer of short stories. He wrote most of his works between 1904 and 1933, when he fell incurably ill and was admitted to a mental asylum. In spite of praise by Kafka*, Musil*, Benjamin* and Hesse* he is only now receiving wider recognition. With Kafka, whose work he influenced, he shared devotion to language as a medium—he liked 'fine and beautiful words'—but where Kafka is sad Walser is gay. His work is essentially lyrical, carefree fantasy with gentle irony.

NOVELS: Geschwister Tanner (1907); Der Gehülfe (1908); Jakob von Gunten (1909).—SHORT STORIES ETC.: Geschichten (1914); Kleine Prosa (1917); Der Spaziergang (1917); The Walk, and Other Stories, tr. C. Middleton, 1960); Poetenleben (1918).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesamtausgabe (ed. C. Seelig, 4 vols, 1953–62; abandoned after Seelig's death); Das Gesamtwerk (ed. J. Greeven, III–IV, 1967–68; VI–X, 1966–68).

C. Seelig, Wanderungen mit R. W. (1959); H. W. Waidson, 'R. W.' in German Men of Letters, II (ed. A. Natan, 1963); C. Middleton, 'R. W.' in Texas Quart., VII (1964); R. Mächler, Das Leben R. W.s: eine dokumentarische Biographie (1966); G. C. Avery, Inquiry and Testament: A Study of R. W. (1968). F.M.K.

Walsh, WILLIAM (*Abberley, Worcs 1663; †18 III 1708), English critic and poet. His critical powers were praised by Dryden* and Pope*; he seems to have aided the latter in the construction of his Pastorals. His correspondence with Pope preserves his name more surely than any of his own compositions.

Letters of Mr Pope and several eminent persons (1735); The Works of W. W. in Prose and Verse (1736); Poetical Works, ed. in Johnson (1779), Anderson (1793), Chalmers (1808), etc.

G.K.H. (C.B.)

Walsingham, THOMAS (†?1422), monk, classical scholar and the last of the great medieval chroniclers at the Abbey of St Albans; probably responsible for most of the Latin chronicles compiled or continued there 1377–1422. His other works include an 'elaboration' of the Ephemeris de historia belli Troiana by Dictys* Cretensis, the Historia magni principis Alexandri, and the Archana deorum, a moralization of Ovid's* Metamorphoses, which relies heavily on early mythographers.

Most chronicles ed. H. T. Riley (Rolls Ser.; 6 vols, 1863–76) but some are based on inferior MSS and problems of authorship remain; Archana deorum (ed. R. van Kluyve, Durham, N.C., 1968).

C. Jenkins, The Monastic Chronicler and the Early School of St Albans (1922); T. F. Tout, The Study of Mediaeval Chronicles (1922); and especially V. H. Galbraith, intro. to St Albans Chronicle 1406–1420 (1937). R.W.B. (Tor.)

Waltari, MIKA (*Helsinki 19 IX 1908; ∞1931 Marjatta Luukkonen), Finnish novelist and translator. Graduated from Helsinki University in 1929 and worked first as a journalist and translator before becoming a free-lance writer; since 1957 a member of the Finnish Academy. His early works reveal the influence of the Tulenkantajat literary circle of which Waltari was a young and gifted member. The events of 1939–44 induced in him a deep scepticism of human motives and his subsequent novels ponder the eternal struggle of good and evil in man. His work is characterized by a remarkable accuracy of detail and masterly, enthralling narrative. The numerous translations of his novels and the film of Sinuhe, egyptiläinen (2 vols, 1945; Sinuhe the Egyptian, tr. N. Walford, 1949) have made him the best known of Finnish writers abroad.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Suuri illusioini (1928); Mies ja haave (1933); Sielu ja liekki (1934); Palava nuoruus (1935); Vieras mies tuli taloon (1937; A Stranger Came to the Farm, tr. N. Walford, 1952); Kuka murhasi rouva Skrofin? (1939); Antero ei enää palaa (1940); Tanssi yli hautojen (1944); Mikael karvajalka (1948; Michael the Finn, tr. N. Walford, 1950); Mikael Hakim (1949; The Sultan's Renegade, tr. idem, 1951); Johannes Angelos (1952; The Dark Angel, tr. idem, 1953); Kuun maisema (1953; Moonscape and Other Stories, tr. idem, 1954); Turms, kuolematon (1955; The Etruscan, tr. E. Ramsden, 1957); Feliks Onnellinen (1958; The Tongue of Fire, tr. A. Blair, 1959); Valtakunnan salaisuus (1959; The Secret of the Kingdom, tr. N. Walford, 1960); Ihmiskunnan viholliset (1964; tr. The Roman, 1968). M. W:n juhlakirja (1958). M.A.B.

Walter, W. E. C.: see Loveling, VIRGINIE.

Walter of Speier (fl. 980), composed in Latin verse and also in prose the legend of St Christopher, dedicated to Balderich, his master.

Ed. K. Strecker and N. Fickermann in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Poeti Latini aevi Carolini, V.1 (1937); ed. P. Vossen (1962; with Ger. tr.). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Walter the Englishman (fl. 1177), versifier of fables mainly taken from a Latin prose collection known as Romulus (Phaedrus*). His verses were often published under the title Anonymus Neveleti.

Les fabulistes latins, II (ed. L. Hervieux, 1884); Ysopet-Avionnet (ed. K. McKenzie and W. Oldfather, 1919). R.R.R.

Walther von der Vogelweide (c. 1170–1230), Austrian poet. Bishop Wolfer of Passau gave him the price of a coat in 1203: the rest we glean from his poems. Ministerialis, of modest learning, birth-place unknown; from c. 1190 in Vienna, learnt the art of minnesang and soon engaged in rivalry with Reinmar* von Hagenau. Favoured by Frederick VI, but not by Leopold VII, he took to the road. His career until about 1220 included periods in the following of Philip of Swabia (to 1208), Otto IV and (from c. 1212) Frederick* II, with short spells in Thuringia and at Meissen where he may have met Wolfram* von Eschenbach and Heinrich* von Morungen.

He enhanced the prestige of Spruch poetry (Spervogel*), using it to commemorate state occasions (Philip's coronation and the Magdeburg Christmas festival 1198–99) and to express in grand diatribe the mood of Otto's anti-Papal policy; but particularly in three majestic poems for Philip, in which he 'sees' the 'state of the nation'. Nearer to Spruch tradition, despite their courtly tone and formal perfection, are his didactic and religious poems, his mordant attacks on individuals (including, we think, Neidhart*, for his 'ragtime' songs), his petitions and his joyous acknowledgement of a small fief granted by Frederick c. 1220.

His early minnesang is cold and stilted—though no poet sang more eloquently in its idiom of the glory of court ceremony graced by ladies of high degree. He breaks new ground, both in his famous pastourelle and in a number of lyrics inspired by genuine affection (for someone more nearly his social equal) and the best Goliardic tradition. His late poems are sombre, but manly. He calls on Dame World to bid the Devil claim outstanding dues; in a magnificent palinode (and Crusader's song) he reviews his 'wasted' years. All in all, the noblest poetry of the German Middle Ages. The MASTERSINGERS claimed him—mainly for his skill as metrist. We no longer jib at his begging or find his shifting political allegiance disturbing (though to speak of patriotism as the unifying factor is unscholarly).

Eds: W. Wilmanns and V. Michels (1924); K. Lachmann and C. von Kraus (12th ed. 1959); M. F. Richey and H. Sacker, Selected Poems (1959); Fr. Maurer (2 vols, 1960–62); Gedichte... (with mod. renderings by P. Wapnewski, 1964); C. von Kraus, Untersuchungen (2nd ed. 1966).—Eng. tr. E. H. Zeydel and B. Q. Morgan (1952).

W. Wilmanns and V. Michels, Leben und Dichtung... (1916); K. Burdach, Vorspiel, I (1925), Reinmar von Hagenau und W. von der V. (2nd ed. 1928) and, as examples of close historical interpretation, in Zschr. f. dt. Philol., LX (1935) and Dt. Vierteljahrsschr., XII (1935); K. H. Halbach, W. von der V. (Metzler M 40; 1965; for experts); M. F. Richey, Essays... Medieval German Love Lyric (1969). F.P.P.

Walton, IZAAC (*Stafford 9 VIII 1593; †Winchester 15 XII 1683), English author. Walton's major biographical effort was concerned with the heroes of the Anglican settlement, and he himself exhibits the Anglican temper of his age in its full range of gravity, sweetness and settled purity of mind. It is the same gentle but accurate attention to the details of everyday scenes which gives the Compleat Angler (1653) its charm. G.K.H.

R. B. Marston, W. and Some Other Writers on Fish and Fishing (1894); D. A. Stauffer, English Biography Before 1700 (1930); D. Novarr, The Making of W.'s Lives (1958); J. Butt, Biography in the Hands of W., Johnson and Boswell (1966); J. R. Cooper, The Art of the Compleat Angler (1968). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Walton, JOHN, or JOHANNES CAPELLANUS (fl. 1410), Augustinian canon of Oseney Abbey, Oxford, who translated Boethius* De consolations Philosophiae into English verse.

Walton's tr. (ed. M. Science, Early Eng. Text Soc., 1927).

E. P. Hammond, English Verse Between Chaucer and Surrey (1927). R.W.B.

Wanderer, THE: see Exeter Book.

Wang AN-SHIH (*Lin-chiang-chün 18 XII 1021; †Nanking 21 V 1086), Chinese statesman, essayist and poet. From the time of his first official appointment in 1042 Wang advanced steadily until in 1070 he attained the office of Grand Councillor. Between 1069 and 1074 he drew up and carried into effect a far-reaching programme of economic, military, administrative and educational reform which became the material of dispute between the political parties in the state until the end of the Northern Sung dynasty (1127).

Wang's works of classical interpretation, in particular Chou-kuan hsin-i (completed 1075), were written with the object of providing a testimony for his reforms from the Confucian canonical books and thus could not avoid criticism. His literary ability, however, was unquestioned. He adhered strictly to classical forms; in prose he wrote in the 'old' style revived by Han* Yü and Liu* Tsung-yüan and in poetry he followed Tu* Fu and other T'ang models. Within these limits he achieved many thoughtful essays and some fine poems.

Wang Lin-ch'uan ch'üan-chi (complete works; earliest known ed. 1140; sel. poems tr. H.-Y. and G. Yang in Chinese Lit., 1965, No. 11).

H. R. Williamson, Wang An Shih (2 vols, 1935-37; incl. trs of 28 essays). A.R.D.

Wang CHI (□Chiang-chou 585; †644), Chinese poet. Wang was the first poet of note to appear in the T'ang period. His poetry showed a great reaction against the elaborate style of the preceding century. He wrote with freedom of form and in language approached the vernacular. His favourite themes were nature and wine.

Tung-kao-tz'ü chi (coll. works; ed. Lü Ts'ai [†664]; sel. tr. in G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948).

A.R.D.

Wang CH'UNG (□Shang-yü 27; †c. 97), Chinese philosopher. Wang studied at the imperial academy in Lo-yang under the historian Pan Piao, father of Pan* Ku. He afterwards returned home, lived as a teacher and later occupied minor local government posts. Although he submitted several memorials to the throne, he failed to attract imperial notice. When Emperor Chang (76-88) finally summoned him to court he was too ill to go. Yet he was among China's most brilliant and lively thinkers. His attitude is near scientific or at least one from which true science might have developed. However, he received little recognition until modern times. His style has a deliberate clarity. For, as he states in his one surviving work, Lun-hêng, he hoped to reach beyond a scholarly audience.

Lun-hêng (completed bet. 76 and 84; tr. A. Forke, 2 vols, 1907-11).

Li Shi Yi, 'Wang Ch'ung' in T'ien Hsia Monthly, V (1937); further biblio. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969). A.R.D.

Wang K'AI-YÜN (□Hsiang-t'an 19 I 1833; †20 X 1916), Chinese poet, essayist and scholar. Wang served as a secretary to the statesman Tsêng* Kuo-fan (he wrote a controversial account of Tsêng's Hunan army, Hsiang-chün chih, 1881), and later as head of various academies. He was a fine poet, finding his models among 'Six Dynasties' and T'ang poets, of whom he made a well-known anthology (Pa-tai shih-hsüan). In prose, he was a distinguished 'parallel'-style writer. He also produced many works of scholarship of which the most important is Ch'un-ch'iu Kung-yang chuan chien (1908).

Hsiang-ch'i lou ch'üan-shu (coll. works; 1896-1911). A.R.D.

Wang Kuo-wei (*Hai-ning 3 XII 1877; †Peking 2 VI 1927), Chinese scholar. After two failures in the official examinations, Wang went to Shanghai (1898) where he met Lo Chên-yü (1866-1940) who became his lifelong friend. Through Lo's aid he went to study in Japan. Throughout his life he remained a convinced monarchist and it was to demonstrate his feelings that he committed suicide. He was the greatest Chinese scholar of modern times, working in archaeological, historical and literary fields. His study of the old Chinese drama has been of special influence.

Sung-Yüan hsi-ch'ü shih (1915; partial tr. E. Erkes, 'Das chinesische Theater vor der T'ang-Zeit' in Asia Major, X, 1935).—Hai-ning Wang Ching-an hsiên-shêng i-shu (coll. works; 1940). A.R.D.

Wang Po (□Chiang-chou ?649; †?676), Chinese poet and prose-writer. Wang, grand-nephew of Wang* Chi, enjoyed a great contemporary reputation as a scholar and poet (he is one of the 7th-century 'Four Masters'). He was also a successful writer of 'parallel' prose. His T'êng-wang ko hsü is especially famous.

Wang Po chi (coll. works); T'êng-wang ko hsü tr. in H. H. Hart, A Garden of Peonies (1938). A.R.D.

Wang SHIH-CHÊN (*K'ai-fêng 19 X 1634; †Hsin-ch'êng, Shantung 26 VI 1711), Chinese poet. A precocious child (his first volume of poetry was published in 1648), Wang attained in his public life the highest offices of state. As a poet and poetical theorist he exercised the greatest influence. He maintained that poetry depended on the achievement of shên-yün ('spiritual harmony') in words and rhythm. He did not explicitly explain this semi-mystical doctrine but illustrated it with examples. While some of Wang's poetry remained simple and readily comprehensible, much tended to display excessive erudition; yet all has a strong musical quality.

Tai-ching t'ang chi (verse and essays; 1711).—Tai-ching t'ang shih-hua (poetical crit.; 1760). A.R.D.

Wang SHIH-FU (□Ta-tu [=Peking]), 13th-century Chinese dramatist. Wang's dates and biographical details are unknown but he would seem to have been a contemporary of Kuan* Han-ch'ing. Of the 13 (or, according to another source, 14) plays which he wrote, three have survived with fragments of two others. Hsi-hsiang chi is among the most popular of all Chinese plays. It is much longer than other Yüan plays; and it is generally believed that its fifth act was added by Kuan Han-ch'ing, although others ascribe the whole work to Wang and others to Kuan. Its theme is drawn from the T'ang short story Hui-chên chi (ascribed to Yüan* Chen), which had already been adapted as a dramatic subject in the Sung and Chin periods. There are many different texts of the play. The popular edition is by Chin Jên-jui (1658) who ranked the play among the six greatest works of Chinese literature. But the text probably nearest the original is by Chou Ning-wang (pr. Ling Mêng-ch'ü bet. 1621 and 1627 as Chi k'ung kuan pên Hsi-hsiang chi).

Hsi-hsiang chi (The Romance of the Western Chamber, tr. S. I. Hsiung, 1935; The West Chamber, tr. H. Hart, 1936); Li-ch'ün t'ang; P'o-yao chi.
A.R.D.

Wang Ts'AN (□Kao-p'ing 177; †17 II 217), Chinese poet. Wang is the most famous of the 'Seven Masters of the Chien-an Period' (196-220) who enjoyed the patronage of Ts'ao* Ts'ao, and in whose works pure personal lyric poetry made its appearance. The personal approach is equally apparent in Wang's descriptive fu-poetry.

T'eng-lou fu (fu-poem; tr. G. Margouliès in Le Kou-wen chinois, 1925).—Wang Shih-lang chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948).
A.R.D.

Wang T'UNG-CHAO (*Chu-ch'êng, Shantung 1898; †1957), Chinese novelist, short-story writer and poet. A founder of the Literary Association (1920), he was a prolific writer, who wrote movingly of the life of ordinary people in the 1920s and 1930s.

Wang T'ung-chao shih-hsüan (sel. poems; 1958; sel. tr. in K.-Y. Hsu, Twentieth Century Chinese Poetry, 1963).—Short stories tr. in Chinese Lit. (1959) No. 9 and (1964) No. 1.
A.R.D.

Wang WEI (□T'ai-yüan 699/701; †759/761), Chinese poet. Wang had a more successful official career than most of the major T'ang poets. By the time of the revolt of An Lu-shan (755) he had risen to be a Grand Secretary of the imperial chancellery. During the revolt he fell into the hands of the rebels and was compelled to serve under them. After the suppression of the rebellion, he succeeded in excusing himself and was reinstated in high office. He spent his last years in the study of Buddhism, of which he was a devout adherent.

Wang had an equal fame as a poet and a painter. He was the 'father' of the southern school of Sung landscape painting. Su* Shih's saying that 'there is painting in his poetry (and poetry in his painting)' fairly represents the sharp and simple imagery of his verse. He can depict a scene and the emotion it arouses with great sureness and perhaps nowhere more successfully than in his four-line chüeh-chü ('cut-short') poems.

Wang Yu-ch'êng chi (coll. works; Poems by Wang Wei, sel. tr. Chang Yin-nan and L. C. Walmsley, 1958).

L. C. and D. B. Walmsley, Wang Wei the Painter-Poet (1968).
A.R.D.

Wang YANG-MING, literary name of WANG SHOU-JÊN (□Yü-yao 31 X 1472; †Nan-an 9 I 1529), Chinese philosopher. Wang began his official career in 1499 after passing the examinations at the third attempt. In 1506 he was banished to Kweichow through the enmity of the powerful eunuch Liu Chin. He was recalled when Liu was overthrown (1510) and six years later received his first military appointment. As a military commander he was highly successful, suppressing revolts in many provinces. During this busy career he lost no opportunity for teaching and writing. His philosophy was one of extreme idealism. Like Lu* Chiu-yüan, of whom he was the direct successor, he exalted intuition and maintained that phenomena were dependent on the mind. Evil was for him an obscuring of the natural condition of the mind. In Japan his doctrines had an even greater success than in China.

Wang Wên-ch'êng kung ch'üan-shu (coll. works; 1572; Chs 1-3, Ch'uan-hsi lu, tr. W.-T. Chan, Instructions for Practical Living, 1963).—Biblio. of studies in W. T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969).
A.R.D.

Wanley, HUMFREY (*Coventry 21 III 1672; †London 6 VII 1726), English palaeographer and librarian. Wanley made a considerable contribution to Old English studies by his dating of the manuscripts in which the extant texts are preserved. He assisted in the production of Bernard's catalogue of British MSS (1697). His work on the Harleian MSS is embodied in the catalogue of 1808. Son of the following.

H. Wanlit librorum vett. septentrionalium, qui in Angliae bibliothecis extant... catalogus historico-criticus (vol. II of G. Hickes' Thesaurus, 1705; Diary (ed. C. E. and R. C. Wright, 2 vols, 1966).

D. C. Douglas, English Scholars (1939; rev. ed. 1951).
G.K.H.

Wanley, NATHANIEL (*Leicester 1634; †Coventry 1680), English divine and author. Long popular for his Wonders of the little world, a compilation of marvels, Wanley is now known as a minor Metaphysical poet, in the vein of Vaughan*.

The wonders of the little world; or a general history of man (1678); The Poems of N. W. (ed. L. C. Martin, 1928).
G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wapull, GEORGE (fl. 1576), English interlude-writer. His one work is non-controversial, with allegorical and typical characters. G.K.H.

The tide tarryeth no man (1576).

B. Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958); D. M. Bevington, From 'Mankind' to Marlowe (1962); F. P. Wilson, The English Drama 1485-1585 (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Warburton, WILLIAM, Bishop of Gloucester (*Newark 24 XII 1698; ∞1745 Gertrude Tucker; †Gloucester 7 VI 1779), English controversial theologian and editor of Pope* and Shakespeare*. Trained for the law and later taking Holy Orders, Warburton makes aggressive use of a wide, ill-digested learning in his Divine Legation, his Doctrine of Grace and other theological works marking his road to preferment. As apologist of Pope's orthodoxy he wrote a commentary on Pope's Essay on Man, making philosophical annotations, was appointed authorized commentator on his works by Pope, and issued a heavily annotated edition of them in 1751. In 1747 he issued an edition of Shakespeare, with Pope's name coupled with his on the title-page, but based mainly on Theobald's* text. His high-handed emendations provoked a storm of criticism. R.M.H.

Alliance between Church and State (1736); Divine Legation of Moses (2 vols, 1738, 1741); Commentary on Mr Pope's Essay on Man (1739; remodelled as A Critical and Philosophical Commentary on Mr Pope's Essay, 1742); Works of Shakespeare . . . with Comments and Notes by Mr Pope and Mr Warburton (8 vols, 1747); A View of Bolingbroke's Philosophy (1754-55); Doctrine of Grace (2 vols, 1762).—Works (ed. R. Hurd, 7 vols, 1788, with Life, 1794).

J. S. Watson, Life (1863); L. Stephen, History of English Thought in the 18th Century (2 vols, 1876); G. W. Kitchin, Seven Sages of Durham (1911); R. M. Ryley, 'W. W. as "new critic"' in Studies in Criticism and Aesthetics (ed. H. Anderson and J. Shea, 1967). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Ward, ARTEMUS, pseud. of CHARLES FARRAR BROWNE (*Waterford, Maine 26 IV 1834; †Southampton 6 III 1867), American humorist, noted contributor to Punch, and to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, who became popular in England on the lecture platform. He wrote in the character of a travelling showman, much of his humour lying in grotesque misspelling.

Artemus Ward, His Book (1862); Artemus Ward, His Travels (1865); Artemus Ward, His Works Complete (1890).—Complete Works (ed. J. C. Hotten, 1871).

E. P. Hingston, The Genial Showman: being Reminiscences of the Life of A. W. (1870); H. R. Haweis, American Humorists (1882); D. C.

Seitz, A. W.—C. F. B.; A Biography and Bibliography (1919); W. Blair, Native American Humor (1800-1900) (1937); J. C. Austin, A. W. (1964). R.M.H. (D.S.R.W.)

Ward, MRS HUMPHRY, née MARY AUGUSTA ARNOLD (*Hobart Town 11 VI 1851; ∞1872 Thomas Humphry Ward; †London 24 III 1920), English novelist and social worker who made her name by novels reflecting her own deeply serious social and intellectual concerns. The granddaughter of Dr Arnold* of Rugby, she was opposed to votes for women.

Miss Bretherton (1884); Robert Elsmere (1888); The History of David Grieve (3 vols, 1892); A Writer's Recollections (1918).

J. P. Trevelyan, Life of Mrs H. W. (1923); S. Gwynn, Mrs H. W. (1917). R.M.H.

Ward, NATHANIEL (*Haverhill, Eng. 1578; †Shenfield, Eng. X 1652), English clergyman, lived in Massachusetts 1634-46. His writings are full of word coinages, jingling phrases and other forms of verbal display. The Simple Cobler is a vigorously intolerant plea for Puritan orthodoxy.

The Simple Cobler of Aggawam in America (1647); A Religious Retreat Sounded to a Religious Army (1647); A Word to Mr Peters (1647).

J. W. Dean, A Memoir of the Rev. N. W. (1868); J. Beranger, N. W. (1969).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Ward, ROBERT PLUMER (*London 19 III 1765; ∞1796 Catherine Maling, ∞1828 Mrs Plumer Lewin, ∞1833 Mary Okeover; †ibid. 13 VIII 1846), English novelist whose work influenced Bulwer Lytton* and Disraeli*.

De Vere: or the Man of Independence (1827); De Clifford: or, the Constant Man (1841).

E. Phipps, Memoir of R. P. W. (1850); M. W. Rosa, The Silver Fork School (1936).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Warner, CHARLES DUDLEY (*Plainfield, Mass. 12 IX 1829; ∞1856 Susan Lee; †Hartford, Conn. 20 X 1900), American novelist and biographer. In his trilogy of novels he emphasized the futility of ruthlessly acquiring wealth. With Mark* Twain he wrote The Gilded Age (1873), furnishing a name for the era of political corruption after the Civil War.

TRAVEL: My Winter on the Nile (1876); In the Levant (1877); Our Italy (1891).—NOVELS: A Little Journey in the World (1889); The Golden House (1894); That Fortune (1899).—BIOGRAPHIES: Captain John Smith (1881); Washington Irving (1881).

A. Fields, C. D. W. (1904).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Warner, WILLIAM (*London 1558; †Amwell, Herts 9 III 1609), English poet and translator. By profession Warner was a lawyer, but he was well known as a man of letters and highly esteemed, especially for Albions England (1586-1612). He may have translated other plays by Plautus*, but the Menaechmi (which Shakespeare* may have known) is the only one to survive.

Pan his Syrinx (prose; 1584); Menaechmi (1595; ed. W. H. D. Rouse, 1912). J.B.B.

Warren, JOHN BYRNE LEICESTER, 3RD BARON DE TABLEY (*Tabley House, Ches. 29 IV 1835; †Fulham 22 XI 1895), English poet and naturalist, sometimes using the pseudonyms GEORGE F. PRESTON and WILLIAM LANCASTER, whose scholarly works, often tragic in tone, passed unrecognized in his lifetime.

Philoctetes (anon.; 1866); Orestes (anon.; 1867); Rehearsals (under pseud. William Lancaster; 1870); Searching the Net (1873); Guide to the Study of Book Plates (1880); Flora of Cheshire (with Life; 1899).—Select Poems (ed. J. Drinkwater, 1924).—Collected Poems (1903).

H. Walker, J. B. L. W., Lord de T. (1903); R. Bridges, Collected Essays (1927).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Warren, ROBERT PENN (*Guthrie, Ky. 24 IV 1905; ∞1930 Emma Brescia [o/o], ∞1952 Elizabeth Clark), American novelist, poet and critic. A member of the Fugitive and Agrarian movements, Warren uses his concern with his regional history and consciousness as a background for his paradoxical speculations about identity and motive. The subtlest merging of social background and existentialist preoccupations is to be found in the shifting perspectives of his novel All the King's Men (1946). His poetry mingles abstract speculation with grotesque narrative and can be seen at its most powerful in 'The Ballad of Billie Potts', a poetic version of a Kentucky folk-tale, and Brother to Dragons (1953). His essays show a generous intelligence and diversity.

POETRY: Thirty Six Poems (1935); Eleven Poems on the Same Theme (1942); Promises, Poems 1954-56 (1957); You, Emperors, and Others; Poems 1957-60 (1960); Selected Poems New and Old (1966); Incarnations, Poems (1968).—FICTION: Night Rider (1939); At Heaven's Gate (1943); The Circus in the Attic and Other Stories (1948); World Enough and Time: A Romantic Novel (1950); Band of Angels (1955); The Cave (1959); Wilderness (1961); Flood (1964).—CRITICISM: Understanding Poetry (with C. Brooks; 1938); Understanding Fiction (with idem; 1943); Selected Essays (1958); The Legacy of the Civil War: Meditations on the Centennial (1961).

All the King's Men: A Symposium (ed. F. Sochatoff, 1957); J. M. Bradbury, The Fugitives (1958); Writers at Work (ed. M. Cowley, 1958);

L. Casper, R. P. W.: The Dark and Bloody Ground (1960); A. Kazin, Contemporaries (1962); C. Brooks, The Hidden God (1963); P. West, R. P. W. (1964); 'R. P. W., "All The King's Men": the matrix of experience' in Yale Rev., LIII (1964).

G.A.K.

Warton, JOSEPH (*Dunsfold, Surrey 22 IV 1722; ∞1748 Mary Daman, ∞1773 Charlotte Nicholas; †Wickham 23 II 1800), English poet, editor of Pope*, and pioneer critic in his day by his assertion of the imaginative rather than the didactic function of poetry and his challenging of correctness as a yardstick for measuring poetic achievement. Brother of Thomas Warton*.

Odes on Various Subjects (1746); Essay on the Genius and Writings of Pope (1756-82); ed., Works of Pope (9 vols, 1797).

J. Wooll, Memoirs (1806; with sel. from works and corresp.); E. H. Partridge, The Three W.s (1927); E. Gosse, Two Pioneers of Romanticism, T. and J. W. (1915); P. M. Griffith, 'J. W.'s criticism of Shakespeare' in Tulane Stud. in Eng., XIV (1965).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Warton, THOMAS (*Basingstoke 9 I 1728; †Oxford 21 V 1790), English poet laureate and critic, Professor of poetry at Oxford, who by his Observations on the Faerie Queene of Spenser (1754), critical edition of Milton's Poems on Several Occasions (1785) and his vigorous and learned History of English Poetry (3 vols, 1774-81) gave scholarly stimulus to the growing interest in medieval and Elizabethan poetry.

R.M.H.

Poems on Various Subjects (1791; with memoir, 1802); An Enquiry into the Authenticity of the Poems attributed to Thomas Rowley (1782).—The Three W.s: A Choice of Their Verse (ed. E. H. Partridge, 1927).

E. R. Wharton, MS history of Warton and Wharton families (Bodley); 'The correspondence of Thomas Percy and T. W.' in The Percy Letters, III (ed. M. G. Robinson and L. Dennis, 1951).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Washington, BOOKER TALLIAFERRO (*Hale's Ford, Va. 5 IV 1856; ∞1882 Fannie Smith, ∞1885 Olivia Davidson, ∞1893 Margaret Murray; †Tuskegee, Ala. 14 XI 1915), American Negro educational leader. He set forth his programme for handling the Negro problem in The Future of the American Negro (1899). His autobiography, Up From Slavery (1901), has been translated into many languages.

Sowing and Reaping (1900); The Story of the Negro (1909); My Larger Education (1911).

H.L.C.

Wassermann, JAKOB (*Fürth 10 III 1873; †Alt-Aussee 1 I 1934), German novelist. Sensational plots and strange characters are the main attractions of his stories, which do not lose in translation and brought him an international reputation.

Caspar Hauser oder Die Trägheit des Herzens (1908); Christian Wahnschaffe (2 vols, 1919; The World's Illusion, tr. L. Lewisohn, 1920); Der Fall Maurizius (1928; The Maurizius Case, tr. C. Newton, 1929); Etzel Andergast (1931; Doctor Kerkhoven, tr. C. Brooks, 1932); Mein Weg als Deutscher und Jude (1931; My Life as German and Jew, tr. S. N. Brainin, 1933).—Gesammelte Werke (15 vols, 1932); Gesammelte Werke (7 vols, 1944–48); Geliebtes Herz, Briefe (ed. A. Beraneck, 1948).

M. Karlweis, J. W. (Amsterdam, 1935); J. C. Blankenagel, The Writings of W. (Boston, 1942); H. Regensteiner, 'J. W. in retrospect' in Rev. de l'enseignement des langues vivantes, XXX (1964). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Wästberg, PER ERIK (*Stockholm 20 XI 1933; ∞1955 Anna-Lena Eldh), Swedish author, journalist and critic. After studies in America and Africa Wästberg has emerged as a foremost opponent of racial oppression, and a committed author.

Pojke med såpblubb (1949); Arvtägaren (1958); Förbjudet område (1960); På svarta listan (1960); Enkel resa (1964); Vattenslottet (1968); Luftriburen (1969). I.S.

Waterland, DANIEL (*Walesby 14 II 1683; ∞1719 Theodosia Tregonwell; †Twickenham 23 XII 1740), English divine, who with massive and temperate learning defended the orthodox Anglican doctrines of the Trinity and the Eucharist.

A Vindication of Christ's Divinity (1719); A Second Vindication... (1723); Scripture Vindicated (3 pts, 1730–32); A Critical History of the Athanasian Creed (1723); A Review of the Doctrine of the Eucharist (1737).—Works (12 vols, 1823–28; with life by W. Van Mildert); Fourteen Letters to Zachary Pearce (ed. E. Churton, 1868).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Watkins, VERNON (*Maesteg 27 VI 1906; ∞1944 Gwendoline Mary Davies; †Seattle 9 XI 1967), Anglo-Welsh poet. He spent most of his life working as a bank-clerk in Swansea and living in Gower. In 1966, after retiring, he was the first holder of the Gulbenkian Fellowship of Poetry at University College, Swansea, and in 1967 he went to the U.S.A. for a year as Visiting Professor of English at Washington University. He died suddenly at the beginning of his first term there. A close friend of Dylan Thomas*, he was himself a fine poet. His work is intensely spiritual, and the music of the verse expresses the bardic rhapsody of his vision.

VERSE: The Ballad of the Mari Lwyd (1941); The Lamp and the Veil (1945); The Lady With the Unicorn (1948); The Death Bell (1954); Cypress and Acacia (1959); Affinities (1962); Fidelities (1968); Uncollected Poems (intro. Kathleen Raine, 1969; limited ed.).—Selected Poems (1967).

J. Heath Stubbs, 'Pity and fixed stars: an approach to V. W.' in Philol. Quart., XII (1950); Kathleen Raine, 'V. W., poet of tradition' in Anglo-Welsh Rev., XIV (1964); Leslie Norris, 'The poetry of V. W.' in Poetry Wales, II (Winter 1966) and ed., V. W., 1909–67 (1970); Brynmor Jones, 'V. W.' in Bibliography of Welsh Literature, V (1968). M.W.T.

Watkyns, ROWLAND (*Longtown, Brecon ?1616; ∞by 1655 Alice?; †Clodock X 1664), British poet who became vicar of Llanfrynach (1635) and was probably dispossessed of his living in 1648. His poems in English and Latin, printed as Flama sine fumo (1662) but little regarded until the 20th century, probably belong to the years after his dispossession. They show loyalty to Church and Crown, and include versified medicinal remedies as well as devotional, occasional, satirical and panegyric pieces.

Flama sine fumo (1662; ed. P. C. Davies, 1968).

J. Drinkwater, Some Contributions to the English Anthology (1922). H.N.D.

Watson, JOHN: see Maclaren, IAN.

Watson, THOMAS (*c. 1515; †IX 1584), English neo-Latin dramatist. Educated at St John's College, Cambridge, he was a member of the Ascham*-Cheke* circle. Elected Bishop of Lincoln in XII 1556, he was deprived of the bishopric under Elizabeth*. He was praised as a writer of tragedy by Ascham and has now been identified as the author of the play Absalom (British Museum Stowe MS 957).

Absalom (ed. J. Hazel Smith, 1964). A.N.W.

Watson, THOMAS (*1555; †IX 1592), English and neo-Latin poet and classical scholar. Educated at Oxford, he became a friend of Lyly* and Peele*. His first publication was a translation into Latin of Sophocles* Antigone (1581). Amongst his other works are a collection of English verse, Hecatompethia (1582); a paraphrase of Tasso's Aminta in Latin hexameters (1585); and a translation of a collection of Italian madrigals.

Amyntas (ed. W. F. Staton, Renaissance Eng. Text Soc., 1967); The Hecatompethia (facs. repro. ed. S. K. Heninger Jr, 1964). A.N.W.

Watt, JOACHIM VON: see Vadianus.

Watts, ALARIC ALEXANDER (*London 16 III 1797; ∞1821 Priscilla Maden; †ibid. 5 IV 1864), English literary journalist of prodigious industry, ardent compiler, and editor of the New Monthly Magazine, Literary Souvenir and other journals.

Poetical Sketches (1822); Lyrics of the Heart (1851); compiled, Poetical Album (1828; best fugitive poetry of the day).

Alaric Alfred Watts, A. A. W.: A Narrative of His Life (1884). R.M.H.

Watts, ISAAC (*Southampton 17 VII 1674; †Stoke Newington 24 XI 1748), English hymn-writer. Watts' health prevented him from doing the full work of a Nonconformist pastor but his output of religious writings was great. His hymns for children and his Divine Songs show linguistic power as well as piety. B.H.

Horae Lyricae. Poems chiefly of the lyric kind (1706); Hymns and Spiritual Songs (1707); Divine Songs Attempted in Easy Language for the Use of Children (1715; with intro. and biblio. J. H. P. Pafford, 1971).—The Works of I. W. (ed. D. Jennings and P. Doddridge, 6 vols, 1753; rev. ed. G. Burder, 6 vols, 1810–11).

S. Johnson, The Lives of the Poets, IV (1781); T. Milner, The Life, Times and Correspondence of I. W. (1834); E. P. Hood, I. W., His Life and Writings (1875); T. Wright, Lives of the British Hymn Writers, III (1914); V. de S. Pinto, 'I. W. and the adventurous muse' in Essays and Stud., XX (1935) and 'I. W. and his poetry' in Wessex, III (1935); H. Escott, I. W., Hymnographer (1962). B.H. (M.Bu.)

Wauchier de Denain (fl. early 13th century), French writer, who translated eight lives of the Church Fathers into French prose for Philip, Marquis of Namur (†1212). A compilation (1223–30) dealing with early Roman history is also attributed to him. He was formerly supposed to be the continuator of Chrétien's* Conte del Graal down to line 34,934 of the poem. Then two continuations were distinguished, the first of whom (down to line 21,916) was called pseudo-Wauchier. The two continuations are now called the First and Second, since it is very unlikely that Wauchier had anything to do with either.

Continuations in Conte del Graal (ed. Ch. Potvin, 1866; ed. W. Roach, 1949– ).

P. Meyer in Histoire littéraire de la France, XXXIII (1906).—On continuations: H. Wrede, Die Fortsetzer des Gralromans Chrestiens von Troyes (1952); A. W. Thompson in Arthurian Literature in the Middle Ages (ed. R. S. Loomis, 1959). F.W.

Waugh, EVELYN ARTHUR ST JOHN (*London 28 X 1903; ∞1928 Evelyn Gardner, ∞1937 Laura Herbert; †Combe Florey 10 IV 1966), English novelist. With light banter and witty dialogue he produced delicious satires on the follies of social life in the 1920s and early 1930s. Later, taking himself and the sins of society more seriously, his comic vein often turned to sardonic bitterness, and his farce to ugliness.

NOVELS: Decline and Fall (1928); Vile Bodies (1930); Black Mischief (1932); Scoop (1938); Put Out More Flags (1942); Brideshead Revisited (1945); The Loved One (1948); Men at Arms (1952); Officers and Gentlemen (1955); Unconditional Surrender (1961).—Rossetti (criticism; 1928); When the Going was Good (travel; 1946); The Life of the Right Reverend Ronald Knox (biog.; 1959); A Little Learning (autobiog.; 1964).

F. J. Stopp, E. W.: Portrait of an Artist (1958); M. Bradbury, E. W. (1964); F. Donaldson, E. W.: Portrait of a Country Neighbour (1967). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Wauquelin, JEAN (†1453), French compiler at the court of Burgundy. He translated Latin chronicles into French, including Geoffrey* of Monmouth's Historia regum Britanniae, and made prose rearrangements of the Girart* de Roussillon epic and the ALEXANDER romance.

G. Doutrepont, La littérature française à la cour des ducs de Bourgogne (1909). A.H.D.

Wazyk, ADAM (*Warsaw 17 XI 1905), Polish poet and literary critic. His early poetry was deeply influenced by contemporary French poetry (he translated Apollinaire*) and in turn influenced contemporary Polish poets. After the war, which he spent in the Soviet Union, he fervently accepted the dogmas of Social Realism in theory but published little. His poem 'Poemat dla dorosłych' (1955) had at the time great impact on the creation of a liberal cultural opinion. His latest poetry seems to be his best: it combines brilliant technique with calm lucidity.

POETRY: Semafor (1924); Oczy i usta (1926); Serce granatu (Moscow, 1943); Wiersze 1940–53 (1953); Labyrinth (1961); Wagon (1963).—Wiersze i poematy (1957); Wybór poezji (1967).—ESSAYS: Mickiewicz i wersyfikacja narodowa (1951); Esaj o Wierszu (1964); Od Rimbauda do Eluarda (1964); Kwestia gustu (1966). P.H.

Webb, FRANCIS CHARLES (*Adelaide 8 II 1925), Australian poet. In poems such as 'A Drum for Ben Boyd', 'Leichardt in Theatre', 'The Canticale', 'Birthday' and 'Socrates' he explores, often in a semi-dramatic form, the experience of individuals who, whether for good or evil, have achieved eminence of heroic or legendary proportions. He provides in poems such as 'Ward Two' accounts of the mind in psychiatric disorder. At his best, he writes with impressive power and intensity, but his work is sometimes marred by tortuous obscurity and a failure to reconcile metaphoric and dramatic intentions in the presentation of his personae.

Collected Poems (pref. Sir Herbert Read; 1969). Vincent Buckley, 'The poetry of F. W.' in Meanjin, XXVI.3 (1967). A.M.G.

Webb, MARY GLADYS, née MEREDITH (*Leighton-under-the-Wrekin, Salop 25 III 1881; ∞1912 Henry Bertram Law Webb; †St Leonards, Sussex 8 X 1927), English novelist, of Welsh ancestry. Her intimate feeling for the Shropshire countryside gave the background to her romantic stories of love, cruelty, suffering and the uncanny, in which the sincerity of description compensated for over-coloured prose. She had little recognition before the publication of Precious Bane (1924)—praised by Stanley Baldwin, and brilliantly parodied by Stella Gibbons in Cold Comfort Farm (1932).

NOVELS: The Golden Arrow (1916); Gone to Earth (1917); The House in Dormer Forest (1920); Seven for a Secret (1922).—The Spring of Joy (essays; 1917).

W. R. Chappell, The Shropshire of M. W. (1930); H. L. Addison, M. W. (1931); T. Moulton, M. W.: Her Life and Work (1932); W. Byford Jones, Shropshire Haunts of M. W. (1937); D. P. H. Wrenn, Goodbye to Morning: a Biographical Study of M. W. (1964). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Webbe, WILLIAM (fl. 1568–91), English critic, educated at St John's College, Cambridge, who was an acquaintance of Gabriel Harvey* and Spenser* and who became a private tutor. Webbe's Discourse of English Poetrie (1586) is a valuable appraisal of his contemporaries. His letter to Robert Wilmot is prefixed to the revised Tancred and Gismund (1592).

A Discourse of English Poetrie (ed. E. Arber, 1870; repr. in G. Gregory Smith, Elizabethan Critical Essays, I, 1904). B.L.J.

Weber, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (*Alhausen, Westphalia 26 XII 1813; ∞1850 Anna Gipperich; †Nieheim nr Höxter 5 IV 1894), German poet. An orthodox Roman Catholic physician, he translated Tennyson*; his epic poem Dreizehnlinden—treating the conversion of the Saxons in 829—rivalled Scheffel's* Trompeter von Süßlingen in popularity. But it is for his lyric poetry that he is remembered today. In all his work piety was the key-note.

Dreizehnlinden (1878; 60th ed. 1893; Corvey Abbey, a Lyrical Epopee, tr. M. A. Muegge, 1923); Gedichte (1881); Marienblumen (1885); Goliath (1892; Eng. tr. H. L. Buehrle, 1914).—Gesammelte Dichtungen (3 vols, 1922).

M. D. Hocks, Tennysons Einfluss auf W. (1916); A. Giese, W.s Beziehungen zur nordischen Dichtung (1931); J. Schwering, W. der Arzt und Dichter (1932); M. Buchner, F. W. W. (1939).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Weber, MAX (*Erfurt 21 IV 1864; †Munich 14 VI 1920), German economist and sociologist, taught from 1894 at Freiburg. Weber was a pioneer in modern sociology, a subject which he helped to create, and where his own particular field was the sociology of religions.

Gesammelte Aufsätze zur Religionssoziologie (3 vols, 1920–21; The Sociology of Religion, part. tr. E. Fischoff, 1922); Zur Wissenschaftslehre (1922); Zur Sozial- und Wirtschaftsgeschichte (1923); General Economic History, tr. F. H. Knight, 1927; Wirtschaft und Gesellschaft (1922; 2nd enlarged ed. 1925; Theory of Social and Economic Organization, tr. A. R. Henderson and T. Parson, rev. ed. 1947); Zur Soziologie und Sozialpolitik (1924).

J. P. Mayer, M. W. and German Politics (1944); R. Bendix, M. W., an Intellectual Portrait (1960). D.H.

Webster, JOHN (*?London c. ?1580; †c. ?1625), English dramatist of whose life little is known for certain. Webster's statement that he was born free of the Merchant Taylor's Company has neither been confirmed nor contradicted, and no documentary evidence of his birth and activities exists earlier than the entry in Henslowe's Diary (V 1602) of a payment to him and others in earnest of a play Caesar's Fall. Webster wrote much in collaboration, notably with Dekker* in Westward Ho! (1604) and Northward Ho! (1605); he added the induction to Marston's* Malcontent (1604) and prefixed verses at intervals to other men's works. In X 1624 he composed Monuments of Honour, the Lord Mayor's pageant; but in 1634 he is referred to by Heywood* as if dead in The Hierarchy of the Blessed Angels. It is probable that Webster wrote the extra characters added to Overbury's* volume in 1616. His work, prose and verse, dramatic and non-dramatic, shows learning and maturity and fairly wide reading. In all his plays he shows ability to develop dramatic situations, handle a complicated plot and draw character. His blank verse can do all that is asked of it; lucid, varied, sparse yet flexible. He has a strong reaction to evil, seeing black as black, but aware of how successfully it can present itself as white. B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

The White Devil (1612; ed. J. R. Brown, 1966); The Duchess of Malfi (1623; ed. idem, 1964).—Works (ed. F. L. Lucas, 4 vols, 1927, repr. 1958, 1966; with biblio.).

R. Brooke, J. W. and the Elizabethan Drama (1916); U. M. Ellis-Fermor, The Jacobean Drama (1936); F. S. Boas, Introduction to Stuart Drama (1946); C. Leech, J. W. (1951) and The Duchess of Malfi (1963); T. Bogard, The Tragic Satire of J. W. (1955); G. Boklund, The Duchess of Malfi: Sources, Themes, Characters (1962); D. D. Moore, J. W. and His Critics (1966); 20th Century Interpretations of the Duchess of Malfi (ed. N. Rabkin, 1968); F. Lagarde, J. W. (2 vols, Toulouse, 1968); P. B. Murray, A Study of J. W. (1969).

J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Webster, NOAH (*West Hartford, Conn. 16 X

1758; ∞1789 Rebecca Greenleaf; †New Haven, Conn. 28 V 1843), American journalist, educationist and lexicographer. An ardent nationalist, he supported a language and an education suitable to American experience.

Dissertations on the English Language (1789); A Collection of Essays and Fugitive Writings (1790); An American Dictionary of the English Language (1800–28).

H. R. Warfel, N. W., Schoolmaster to America (1936); E. C. Shoemaker, N. W., Pioneer of Learning (1936). H.L.C.

Weckherlin, GEORG RUDOLF (*Stuttgart 14 IX 1584; ∞1616 Elizabeth Raworth; †Westminster 13 II 1653), German poet, secretary to the Duke of Württemberg, later assistant to the Secretary of State in London and Latin secretary under the Commonwealth. His first volumes represent the earliest notable court poetry in German and include some English verse. He used transitional metrics, but revised his poems later in accordance with Opitz's* rules. After he had definitely settled in England (1626), his poetry often becomes patriotic exhortation to his countrymen, but also has a personal and nostalgic note. He is in many respects a transitional figure between Theobald Hoeck* and Opitz. Though he was associated in the government service with Wotton*, Milton* and Marvell*, his later poetry shows little English influence. His daughter Elizabeth was the mother of Sir William Trumbull, diplomat and friend of Pope*.

Triumpf, newlich bey der F. Kindtauf zu Stuttgart gehalten (1616; Triumphall Shews set forth lately at Stuttgart, Stuttgart, 1616); Kurtze Beschreibung ... des jüngst gehaltenen Frewdenfests (1618); Oden und Gesänge (2 vols, 1618–19); Panegyric to the Lord Hays (Stuttgart, 1619); Geistliche und Weltliche Gedichte (Amsterdam, 1641; rev. 1648). —Sel. poems (ed. K. Goedeke, 1873); coll. poems (ed. H. Fischer, 3 vols, 1894–1907).

L. Forster, G. R. W., zur Kenntnis seines Lebens in England (1944), 'Sources for G. R. W.'s life in England: the correspondence' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XLI (1946), 'Dichterbriefe aus dem Barock' in Euphorion, XLVII (1953), 'Ein viersprachiger Gedichtzyklus G. R. W.'s in Jahrb. der dt. Schillergesellschaft, I (1957), 'Aus der Korrespondenz G. R. W.'s', ibid., IV (1960) and 'Tagwerk eines Hofmannes' in Festschrift für R. Alewyn (1967); Herbert Meyer, 'G. R. W.' in Schwäbische Lebensbilder, VI (biog., biblio.; 1957); F. G. Cohen, 'Barocke Stilzüge in der frühen Lyrik G. R. W.'s' in Ger. Quart., XXXV (1962); A. Beck, 'Über ein Gedicht von G. R. W.' in Jahrb. der dt. Schillergesellschaft, VI (1963); H. Lentz, Versiktus und Wortakzent im Versbau G. R. W.'s (1966); Dámaso Alonso, 'Sobre la persona y el arte de G. R. W.' in Filologia Moderna, XXVII–XXVIII (1968); C. Wagenknecht, W. und Opitz (1971).

L.W.F.

Wecksell, JOSEF JULIUS (*Åbo 19 III 1838; †Helsinki 9 VIII 1907), Finnish-Swedish poet and dramatist. As a schoolboy he revealed great literary promise and in 1860 published his first collection of poems. Shortly afterwards he showed signs of incipient insanity, but in 1862 managed to complete the historical tragedy Daniel Hjort, generally considered the most important historical play in Swedish before Strindberg's* Mäster Olof. He then went mad and never recovered.

Samlade dikter (1868; ed. G. Castrén, 1919).

A. Mörne, J. J. W. (1909) and Nya W.-studier (1920); G. Rydell, Adertonhundralets historiska skådespel före Strindberg (1928). B.M.E.M.

Wedderburn, JOHN (*Dundee ?1495; ∞?1526 Janet Forrester; †France X 1553), Scottish poet, very probably responsible for the authorship or compilation of The Gude and Godlie Ballatis (1567 and perhaps earlier; 1578; 1600; 1621). The book contains 'spiritual sangis', 'ballatis of the Scripture', and miscellaneous paraphrase, satire, and adaptations of popular songs to religious ends. Some of it is, in pious sentiment and in lyrical style, attractive work.

Eds: D. Laing (1868; 1578 text); A. F. Mitchell (1897; 1567 text); (in part) Iain Ross (Saltire Soc., 1939).

A. F. Mitchell, The W.s and their Work (1867); C. H. Herford in Studies in the Literary Relations of England and Germany in the 16th Century (1886). J.K.

Wedekind, FRANK (*Hanover 24 VII 1864; †Munich 9 III 1918), German playwright and prose writer, with Strindberg* the father of Expressionist drama. Of his ballad-like, violently anti-bourgeois plays with their often lurid and grotesque treatment of sexual themes only Frühlings Erwachen (1891; tr. Spring's Awakening, 1923), dealing with the problems of adolescence, and Lulu (in 2 pts: Erdgeist, 1895, tr. Earth-Spirit, 1952; Die Büchse der Pandora, 1902, tr. Pandora's Box, 1952) are still performed. Like his disciple Brecht*, he acted in his own plays and was famed as an irreverent ballad singer.

Der Marquis von Keith (1900; tr. The Marquis of K., 1952); Hidalla, oder Sein und Haben (1904); Totentanz (1905); Schloss Wetterstein (1910; tr. Castle W., 1952); Franziska (1912).—Gesammelte Werke (9 vols, 1912–21); Gesammelte Briefe (2 vols, 1924); Prosa, Dramen, Verse (2nd ed. 1960).

A. Kutscher, W.: Leben und Werk (2nd ed. 1964); G. Seehaus, F. W. und das Theater (1964); K. Völker, F. W. (1965); K. Ude, F. W. (1968); F. Rothe, F. W.'s Dramen: Jugendstil und Lebensphilosophie (1968); S. Gittleman, F. W. (New York, 1969). K.P.

Weert, JAN DE, 14th-century Dutch poet of the school of Jacob van Maerlant*, 'clerk of the surgeons' at Ypres. He wrote Nieuwe Doctrinael or Spiegel van Sonden, a didactic poem, comprising a bitter criticism of sins and abuses among all classes, and Disputacie van Rogiere ende van Janne, a militant poem, inspired by van Maerlant's Martijn-songs, on human willpower, grace and nature.

Nieuwe Doctrinael (ed. J. Jacobs, 1915); Disputacie (ed. E. Kausler, 1866).

J. Koopmans in Tweemaandelijksch Tijdschrift, VII (1901). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Weever, JOHN (*Lancs 1576; †London 1632), English poet and antiquary. Weever's Epigrams (1599) merely repeat current fashions, but their mentions of Shakespeare*, Spenser*, Jonson*, etc. have given them considerable interest as literary journalism.

Epigrams in the oldest cut and newest fashion (ed. R. B. McKerrow, 1911); Faunus and Melliflora; or the original of our English satyres (1600); Ancient Funeral Monuments (1631). G.K.H.

Wegierski, TOMASZ KAJETAN (*Węry 1755; †Marselles 11 IV 1787), Polish author. Of a quick temperament, he led an adventurous and light-hearted life and in 1783 went abroad. Witty in fables and poetical letters, he is bitter and sarcastic in Organy (1784), Portrety pieciu Elzbiet (pub. 1882) and Satyry (1803).

Pisma wierszem i prozą (ed. K. Estreicher, 1882). —Tr. of sel. poems in J. Bowring, Specimens of the Polish Poets (1827).

I. Chrzanowski, Z dziejów satyry polskiej XVIII wieku (1909); W. Borowy, O poezji polskiej w wieku XVIII (1948). S.S. (P.H.)

Wei YING-WU (□Ch'ang-an ?c. 735; †?c. 830), Chinese poet. He is stated to have served first under Emperor Hsüan-tsung (713–756); his last post was Prefect of Soochow. His reflective nature poems seem to owe much to the influence of Wang* Wei and more remotely to that of T'ao* Ch'ien, whom he greatly admired. He is most successful in the 'old' five-word metre (i.e. without prescribed tonal pattern).

Wei Su-chou chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain, 1929). A.R.D.

Weinberg or Veinberg, PETER ISAYEVICH (*1830; †1908), a minor Russian poet who translated the whole of Heine's* work into Russian. His own poems bear the stamp of Heine's influence and his favourite pen-name was 'Heine from Tambov'. He also translated from Shakespeare*. J.L.

Weinheber, JOSEF (*Vienna 9 III 1892; †Kirchstetten 8 IV 1945), Austrian poet; a virtuoso of verse technique, a great master of the German language whose achievement is still not fully recognized by critics. His verse, however, has formal perfection and range of tone.

Das Waisenhaus (autobiog. novel; 1924); Adel und Untergang (1934); Wien wörtlich (1935); Späte Krone (1936); O Mensch gib acht (1937); Hier ist das Wort (1947).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. J. Nadler and H. Weinheber, 5 vols, 1953–56).

F. Sacher, Der Lyriker W. (1949); Bekenntnis zu J. W. Erinnerungen seiner Freunde (ed. H. Zillich, 1950); H. Bergholz, Bibliographie des dichterischen Werkes (1951); J. Nadler, J. W. (biog.; 1952), and with H. Weinheber, J. W. und die Sprache (1955); K. Rohm in Jahresgabe: Josef Weinheber-Gesellschaft (1960); E. Kritisch, 'Schopenhauer's philosophy in the poetry of J. W.' in Mod. Lang. Quart., XXIII (1962); F. Feldner, Eine Dokumentation in Bild und Wort (1965). F.M.K.

Weise, CHRISTIAN (*Zittau 30 IV 1642; †ibid. 21 X 1708), German writer. As headmaster in Weissenfels and Zittau he wrote many plays for his pupils to perform, all distinguished for their clarity and sobriety of diction (in contrast to the works of Lohenstein* and Hofmannswaldau*) and anticipating 18th-century Saxon comedy. His didactic and rationalistic novels, like his plays, aim at inculcating practical success and address. He represents the rising middle class and was extremely influential. His lyric poetry is neat and often amusing.

Überflüssige Gedanken der grünenden Jugend (verse, 1668).—NOVELS: Die drey klügsten Leute (1657); Drey Hauptverderber (1671); Die drey ergsten Ertznarren (1672; ed. W. Braune, 1878); Der politische Näscher (1676).—PLAYS: Zittausches Theatrum (1683); Lust und Nutz der spielenden Jugend (1690); Tobias und die Schwalbe (ed. R. Genée, 1882); Bäurischer Machiavellus and Böse Catharine (ed. L. Fulda with good intro. in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XXXIX, 1882–89); Masaniello (ed. R. Petsch, 1907); Regnerus and Ulvida (ed. W. von Unwerth, 1914); Triumphierende Keuschheit (ed. M. von Waldberg, 1914); Die unvergnügte Seele and Vom vergnügten Lateiner (ed. F. Brüggemann in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, Aufklärung, I, 1928); Der niederländische Bauer (ed. W. Flemming, ibid., Barockdrama, IV, 1932). —Coll. works (ed. J. D. Lindberg, 1971– ).

O. Kämmel, C. W. (1897); R. Becker, W.s Romane (1910); W. Eggert, W. und seine Bühne (1935); A. H. J. Knight, 'Das Komische in W.s Lustspielen' in Germ.-Rom. Monatschr., XXIII (1935); K. Schaefer, Das Gesellschaftsbild in den Werken C. W.s (diss. Berlin, 1960); F. Martini, 'Masaniello, Lehrstück und Trauerspiel der Geschichte' in Orbis Litterarum, XXV (1970).

L.W.F.

Weiss, PETER (*Nowawes, nr Berlin 18 XI 1916),

German dramatist, prose writer and visual artist. Of Jewish origin, he emigrated with his family to England in 1934, finally settling in Sweden in 1939. His early experimental prose work expresses the rootless emigré's search for identity and suspicion of all allegiances. His work in graphics, collages and film-making led to his first, in many ways baroque, play Die Verfolgung und Ermordung des Jean Paul Marat dargestellt durch die Schauspielgruppe des Hospizes zu Charenton unter Anleitung des Herrn von Sade (1964; tr. Persecution and Assassination of Marat . . . [or Marat/Sade], 1965). The intellectual core of this spectacular play is the dialectic between the revolutionary Marat and the cynical egoist Sade*. Different productions have resolved the argument in favour of Sade (London) and Marat (Rostock—approved by Weiss in 1965), but all his work since 1965 has been clearly committed to a Marxist analysis of history. Consciously continuing where Brecht* left off, Weiss advocates a revival of agit-prop theatre employing documentary means. 'Most theatre now shows despair, but not why it exists or what solutions there may be.' Die Ermittlung. Oratorium in 11 Gesängen (1965; tr. The Investigation, 1966), based on edited transcripts of the Frankfurt Auschwitz trial, sets out to show exactly what happened using the formal devices of Greek tragedy.

PLAYS: Gesang vom lusitanischen Popanz (1967); Viet Nam Diskurs (1968); Trotzki im Exil (1970). —Dramen (2 vols, 1968).—PROSE: Der Schatten des Körpers des Kutschers (1960); Abschied von den Eltern (1961; tr. The Leavetaking, 1962); Fluchtpunkt (1962; tr. Vanishing Point, 1967); Das Gespräch der drei Gehenden (1963).

J. Milfull, 'From Kafka to Brecht: P. W.'s development towards Marxism' in Ger. Life and Letters, XX (1966); H. Rischbieter, P. W. (with biblio.; 1967). K.P.

Weisse, CHRISTIAN FELIX (*Annaberg 28 I 1726; †Leipzig 16 XII 1804), German dramatist. As a student at Leipzig Weisse became a friend of Lessing*. At first a tutor, he was later a tax-collector, then (by inheritance) a country gentleman. A prolific writer, he followed the fashions of the age from Anacreontic dallings to imitations of Shakespeare* without ever sounding an original note.

Scherzhafte Lieder (verse; 1758).—PLAYS: Beitrag zum deutschen Theater (5 vols, 1759–68; incl. Eduard III, Richard III, Romeo und Julia, and List über List); Komische Opern (incl. Der Teufel ist los; 1768).—Sel. ed. J. Minor in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., LXXII (1883).

Selbstbiographie (1806); J. Minor, C. F. W. (1880); W. Hüttemann, C. F. W. und seine Zeit (diss. Bonn, 1912); C. G. Zander, W. und die Bühne (diss. Mainz, 1949). H.B.G.

Weissenberg, ITZCHOK MEYER (*Zhelichov, Poland, 1881; †Warsaw 1938), Yiddish novelist and essayist, a leading 'neo-classic'. He fought against journalistic infiltration into literature, defending 'Polish' Yiddish against 'Litvak' (the Lithuanian school). The characters of his novels are mainly lower- and working-class, depicted with a sharp eye for detail. In his critical writings against complacency, his attacks against individual writers aroused controversy.

Dor hoilekh vedor boo (1904); Die meshuggene in dorf (1905); Shriftn (3 vols, 1909–10); Kine un ta've (1911); Geklibene shriftn (1911); Dertselungn un bilder (1912); Bukh far ale (1914); Yiddishe zamel-bikher (5 vols, 1918–19); Virklikhkeit (1925); Geklibene shriftn (1950). J.S.

Weldon, JOHN, pseud. BRINSLEY MACNAMARA (*Devlin, Co. Westmeath 1890; †1963), Irish novelist and dramatist; his naturalistic studies of Irish life, especially The Valley of Squinting Windows (1928), scandalized many of his readers. His comedies are unexceptional but some of his tragedies show considerable power.

PLAYS: The Glorious Uncertainty (1923); Look at the Heffernans! (1926); Margaret Gillan (1933). E.T.W.

Welhaven, JOHAN SEBASTIAN CAMMERMEYER (*Bergen 22 XII 1807; ∞1845 Josephine Bidoulac; †Kristiania 21 X 1873), Norwegian poet; Professor of philosophy at Kristiania, 1846–68. Welhaven greatly admired Danish culture and literature and was strongly influenced by the literary ideals of his distant relative, the Danish writer and aesthetician J. L. Heiberg*. He became firmly convinced that Norway could not afford to throw away this portion of her literary heritage in a desire to be exclusively national, now that the link with Denmark had been severed. These convictions soon brought him into conflict with Henrik Wergeland* and his followers, and it is the part Welhaven played in the polemical exchanges between the two factions which makes him chiefly memorable today.

As a poet his production was controversial, as in Norges Dæmring (1834); lyric-epic, as in Republikanerne (1839); and, elsewhere, as in Det omvendte Bæger (1848) and Den salige, highly personal. In other of his poems he derived inspiration from the popular ballads. Welhaven was a conscientious craftsman working to definite, if somewhat narrow, aesthetic principles, but his work lacks the originality and imaginative power of his great contemporary, Wergeland.

VERSE: Digte (1839); Nyere Digte (1845); Halvhundrede Digte (1848); Reisebilleder og Digte (1851); En Digtsamling (1860).—PROSE: Henrik Wergelands Digtekunst og Polemik (1832); Christianias Vinter- og Sommer-Dvale (1834); Billeder fra Bergenskysten (1842); Vasdrag og Skovmarker

(1851); En Sjel i Vildmarken (1856); Ewald og de norske Digtere (1863).—Samlede Digterverker (3 vols, 1943).

A. Løchen, J. S. W.'s liv og skrifter (1900); I. Hauge, Tanker og tro i W.s poesi (1955); R. Andersen-Næss, J. S. W. (1959). R.G.P.

Wellekens, JAN BAPTISTE (*Aalst 13 II 1658; †Amsterdam 14 V 1726), Dutch poet and painter, devout Jansenist. Between 1676 and 1686, as a painter in Italy, he came in contact with the Accademia degli Arcadi, but returned home because of failing eyesight and poor health. Then he wrote the first fishermen's songs, Arcadian, religious and topographical verse and, in particular, some occasional poems. The latter are often stilted; his beautiful religious and nature lyrics equal Poot's* in depth.

Dichtlievende uitspanningen (with P. Vlaming; 1711); Verscheidene en Bruiloftsgedichten (1729); Zedelijke en ernstige gedichten (with life by P. Vlaming, 1737); Amintas (play, after Tasso; with Verhandeling van het herdersdicht, 1715; ed. J. P. Warners, 1965).

J. Wagenaar, Amsterdam, III (1768); W. Kloos, Een daad van eenvoudige rechtvaardigheid (1909); M. M. Prinsen, De idylle in de 18de eeuw (1934); R. Pennink, Silvander (J. B. W.) 1658–1726 (1957). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Wells, HERBERT GEORGE (*Bromley 21 IX 1866; ∞Amy Catherine Robbins; †London 13 VIII 1946), English novelist and social philosopher. Apprenticed to a retail draper as a boy he read omnivorously, became a teacher, took a science degree, early gained attention as a writer, and became a major force in English literature after the turn of the century. In his early, highly ingenious scientific romances (e.g. The Time Machine, 1895) he is already interested in the idea of society as changing. This he developed in a series of books analysing society (e.g. Mankind in the Making, 1903). Not till he was nearly 40 did he embark on the series of powerful novels in which individual character was the starting-point for an account of the world. Much of his later work consisted of imaginative treatises on man's capacity to evolve into a citizen of the world, and so avoid annihilation. His highly original mind initiated ideas which subsequently became commonplace.

NOVELS: The Island of Dr Moreau (1896); The Invisible Man (1897); Love and Mr Lewisham (1900); Kipps (1905); Tono-Bungay (1909); Ann Veronica (1909); The History of Mr Polly (1910); The New Machiavelli (1911); Marriage (1912); Mr Britling Sees It Through (1916); The World of William Clissold (1926).—Short Stories (coll.; 1927).—SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY: Anticipations (1901); A Modern Utopia (1905); The Open Conspiracy (1928); The Work, Wealth and Happiness of Mankind (1932); The Shape of Things to Come (1933);

The Fate of Homo Sapiens (1939); Mind at the End of Its Tether (1945).—HISTORY: The Outline of History (1920; rev. ed. R. Postgate and G. P. Wells, 1972); A Short History of the World (1922).—Experiment in Autobiography (2 vols, 1934).

V. Brome, H. G. W.: a Biography (1951) and Six Studies in Quarrelling (1958); B. Bergonzi, The Early H. G. W. (1961); J. Kagarlitsky, H. G. W. (Moscow, 1963; Eng. tr. 1966); L. Dickson, H. G. W.: His Turbulent Life and Times (1969); P. Parrinder, H. G. W. (1970).—Biblio., dictionary and subject index (to 1925) by G. H. Wells (1926); comprehensive biblio. by H. G. W. Soc. (1968). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Weltman, ALEXANDER: see Vel'tman, ALEXANDER FOMICH.

Welty, EUDORA (*Jackson, Miss. 13 IV 1909), American novelist and short-story writer. Her fiction, set in her native state, combines elements of the abnormal and grotesque. Although her work is often seen in conjunction with that of Flannery O'Connor* and Carson McCullers*, Miss Welty operates on a far less overtly Gothic level, and her work is marked by a sense of controlled irony and an evocation of the delicate nuances of sensibility.

A Curtain of Green (1941); The Robber Bridegroom (1942); The Wide Net (1943); The Golden Apples (1949); The Ponder Heart (1954); The Bride of the Innisfallen (1955); The Shoe Bird (1964).

A Southern Vanguard (ed. A. Tate, 1947); R. Penn Warren, Selected Essays (1958); R. M. Vande Kieft, E. W. (1962); A. Appel, A Season of Dreams (1965); E. W. (ed. J. A. Bryant, 1968).

H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Wên I-to (*Hsi-shui 24 XI 1899; †Kun-ming 15 VII 1946), Chinese poet and scholar. Wên wrote his first volume of poetry, Hung-chu, while studying in America (1922). Ssu-shui, which he published after his return (1925), was among the most important works of modern Chinese poetry. Later he abandoned poetry for scholarship, producing many critical, sociological and literary studies.

Hung-chu (1923); Ssu-shui (1928); sel. trs in: H. Acton and Ch'en Shih-hsiang, Modern Chinese Poetry (1936); R. Payne, Contemporary Chinese Poetry (1947); K.-Y. Hsu, Twentieth Century Chinese Poetry (1963).—Wên I-to ch'üan-chi (coll. works; 1948).

K.-Y. Hsiü, 'The life and poetry of Wen I-to' in Harvard Jour. Asiat. Stud., XXI (1958).

A.R.D.

Wên T'ien-hsiang (□Chi-shui 6 VI 1236; †Yen-ching 9 I 1283), Chinese poet. Wên, a prolific writer in verse and prose, some of fine quality, is famous for his patriotic resistance to the Mongol invaders. He was executed for his refusal to submit.

Wên-shan chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in G. Margouliès, Le Kou-wen chinois, 1925, and Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948). A.R.D.

Wên T'ING-YÜN (□Ch'i-hsien ?c. 812; †?c. 870), Chinese poet. Wên failed in several attempts to pass the official examinations but from c. 860 held a number of minor provincial posts. He is represented as of a frivolous, pleasure-loving character. With Li* Shang-yin he became a model for a style of elegant and erudite poetry which was popular in the early Sung period (10th century). Yet of greater importance was his tz'ü-poetry (written to music). He was the first writer of true tz'ü and founder of the 'Hua-chien' school (so known from Hua-chien chi, an anthology of its works) of the 'Five Dynasties' period.

Tz'ü poetry in Hua-chien chi (940).—Wên Fei-ch'ing chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain, 1929). A.R.D.

Wendover, ROGER OF: see Paris, MATTHEW, biblio.

Wennerberg, GUNNAR (*Lidköping 2 X 1817; †Läckö 24 VIII 1901), Swedish politician, composer and poet. He wrote several oratorios and other sacred music, but is now remembered primarily for his gluntar—comico-romantic pictures of Uppsala student life in the 1840s in the form of musical duets. He also wrote romances and successful pieces for male voices.

Samlade skrifter (1881–85).

S. Taube, G. W. Brev och minnen (1913–16); B. Almqvist, Uppsalastudenten i W.'s vers och Strindbergssprosa (1926). C.H.K.

Weöres, SÁNDOR (*Szombathely 22 VI 1913; ∞Amy Károlyi), Hungarian poet and playwright. Endowed with an exotic imagination, Weöres is a virtuoso poet and translator, in whose verse language, form and content are explored to their utmost limits. His range is immense; he moves freely in time and space, switches from sombre to playful moods and can echo Oriental mysticism as easily as Western symbolism.

VERSE: Hideg van (1934); Medúza (1944); A fogak tornáca (1947); A hallgatás tornya (1956); Tűzkút (1964); Merülő Saturnus (1968).—PLAYS: Hold és sárkány (1967).—Egybegyűjtött írások (sel. works; 2 vols, 1970); sel. Ger. tr. in Gedichte (1969).

J. Reményi, 'S. W.' in Mod. Lang. Jour., XXXIII (1949); L. Cs. Szabó, 'Conversation with S. W.' in Tri-Quart., IX (1967). G.F.C.

Werfel, FRANZ (*Prague 10 IX 1890; †Beverly Hills, Calif. 27 VIII 1945), Austrian novelist, playwright and poet. He began with lyric verse and became the first poet of early EXPRESSIONISM (Der Weltfreund, 1911; Wir sind, 1913). Emotional pathos dominated the first period, intellectual pathos his activities as an Expressionist playwright, whose 20th-century version of FAUST in Der Spiegelmann (1920) typifies that literary movement. His third period is dominated by prose works, no longer eccentric, maturing from his first popular success, the novel Verdi (1924; tr. H. Jessiman, 1925), to those works which finally brought him recognition when he had despaired of the world and committed suicide—Der veruntreute Himmel (1939; Embezzled Heaven, tr. M. Firth, 1940), Das Lied von Bernadette (1941; The Song of Bernadette, tr. L. Lewisohn, 1942), Stern der Ungeborenen (1946).

NOVELS: Die Geschwister von Neapel (1931; The Pascarella Family, tr. D. F. Tait, 1932); Die vierzig Tage des Musa Dagh (1933; The Forty Days of Musa Dagh, tr. G. Dunlop, 1934).—STORIES: Nicht der Mörder, der Ermordete ist schuldig (1915); Abituriententag (1928; The Class Reunion, tr. W. Chambers, 1929).—PLAYS: Bocksgesang (1921; Goat Song, tr. R. Laugner, 1926); Juarez und Maximilian (1924; Eng. tr. idem, 1926); Paulus unter den Juden (1926; Eng. tr. P. P. Levertoff, 1928).—VERSE: Gedichte aus den Jahren 1908–1945 (1948); Poems (tr. E. A. Snow, 1945).—Gesammelte Werke (ed. A. D. Klarmann: Erzählungen aus zwei Welten, 3 vols, 1948–54; Dramen, 2 vols, 1959).

R. Specht, F. W. (with biblio.; 1926); Anna Mahler-Werfel, And the Bridge Is Love, Memoirs of a Life-Time (1958); W. Braselmann, F. W. (1960); F. W. 1890–1945 (ed. L. B. Foltin, 1961); W. H. Fox, 'F. W.' in German Men of Letters, III (ed. A. Natan, 1964); V. J. Günther, F. W. (1965); L. Zahn, F. W. (1966). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Wergeland, HENRIK ARNOLD (*Kristiansand 17 VI 1808; ∞1839 Amalie Bekkevold; †Kristiania 12 VII 1845), Norwegian poet, playwright and prose writer. The son of a clergyman prominent in Norwegian political life, Wergeland spent much of his childhood in Eidsvoll in eastern Norway. There, historical associations (the Norwegian constitution was promulgated in Eidsvoll in 1814) and the beauty of the country bordering on Lake Mjøsa made a deep impression on him; love of freedom and love of nature are the two great motivating forces in his work. Later he attended school and University in Kristiania, where he took a degree in theology in 1829. Already as a school-boy he had begun to write newspaper articles, and by the time he took his degree his production included a tragedy, two farces and a collection of poems. Moreover in 1830 his monumental Skabelsen, Mennesket og Messias was published. In the years that followed poems, plays, pamphlets and polemics of all sorts poured from his pen. Romantic though he was, the ideals of the Age of Enlightenment were strong in him, and he gave practical expression to them in his periodicals: For Almuen ('For the Common Man'; 1830-39), For Menigmand ('For the Ordinary Man'; 1836-38) and For Arbeidsklassen ('For the Working Class'; 1839-45). His noisy personality, his radical and republican views, and his not impeccable private life, had prevented him from obtaining theological preferment, but finally in 1840, through the direct influence of the King, whom he greatly admired as an individual, he obtained a post in the state archives. His death (from consumption) became the occasion for national mourning. Wergeland was greatest as a poet, and is generally regarded as the greatest his country has produced; his plays can be disregarded. His faults as a poet are easy to recognize: the frequent extravagance of his language and imagery; the chaos which often characterizes his thought and the generally careless and unrevised state of his work make him an easy target, as he was for the Welhaven* faction. But in spite of all this he can be capable of the most dazzling felicities and exhibit a boldness of imagination which, particularly in his shorter poems, entitle him to be ranked very high indeed. Amongst his principal works are Jøden (1842), Jødinden (1844), Den engelske Lods (1844) and Jan van Huysums Blomstestykke (1840). His farces were written under the pseudonym SIFUL SIFADDA.

VERSE: Digte. Første Ring (1829); Spaniolen (1833); Cæsar's (1833); Digte. Anden Ring (1833); Svalen (1841); Mennesket (1845).—PLAYS: Ah! (1827); Irreparabile Tempus (1828); Sinclars Død (1828); Harlequin Virtuos (1830); Barnemordersken (1835); Stockholms Fareren (3 vols, 1837); Campbellerne (1837); Den Konstitutionelle (1839); Vinagers Fjeldeventyr (1841); Venetianerne (1843); Søkadetterne iland (1848); Fjeldstuen (1848).—PROSE: Norges Konstitutions Historie (1841-43); Hassel-Nødder (1845).—Samlede skrifter (ed. H. Jæger, D. A. Seip, H. Koht and E. Høigård, 23 vols, 1918-40); Poems (tr. G. M. Gathorne-Hardy, J. Bithell and I. Grøndahl, 1960); W. for hvermann dikt og prosa (ed. H. Beyer, 1950); H. W.'s skrifter (ed. L. Amundsen and D. A. Seip, 8 vols, 1957-62).

A. Benterud, H. W.'s religiøse utvikling (1943); H. Beyer, H. W. (1946); H. Møller, H. W. (1947); A. Kabell, W. (2 vols, 1956-57); Y. Ustvedt, Det levende univers (1964); O. M. Mæland, Eros og Mytos (1969). R.G.P.

Werner, ZACHARIAS (*Königsberg 18 XI 1768; †Vienna 17 I 1823), German dramatist. The son of a Professor of rhetoric and a pampering mother who developed religious mania, Werner lived in restless disorder. His three marriages broke down, before he became a Roman Catholic (1810) and a priest (1813), after which he lived in Vienna as a sensational revivalist preacher. His ambition was to equal Schiller*. Goethe* considered him promising and gave him the approval he denied to Kleist*. His plays were deeply religious and, though fundamentally shoddy, were by far the most dramatically effective the Romantics produced. His 24. Februar was the original tragedy of fate, from which numberless imitations proceeded.

Die Söhne des Tales (2 vols, 1803; Eng. tr. E. Lewis, 1892); Der 24. Februar (1815; Eng. tr. W. H. H. Chambers, 1903).—Ausgewählte Schriften (15 vols, 1840-41); Briefe (ed. O. Floeck, 2 vols, 1918); Tagebücher (ed. idem, 1939-40).

N. Vierling, Z. W., la conversion d'un romantique (1908); G. Gabetti, Il dramma di Z. W. (1916); P. Hankhamer, Z. W. (1920); G. Carow, W. und das Theater seiner Zeit (1933).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Wernher (fl. 1172), Bavarian priest, author of 'Three Lays of Mary'—a poetic elaboration of the apocryphal Gospel of Pseudo-Matthew. The level of diction in the highly lyrical veneration of Mary is set by the traditional epithets. The story of the Holy Family is told with warm but pious sympathy. (See Konrad* von Fussesbrunn.)

Ed. J. Feifalik (1860); modernized H. Degering (1925); ed. C. Wesle and H. Fromm, Priester W.s Maria (1969).

U. Pretzel, 'Studien zum Marienleben' in Zschr. f. dt. Alt., LXXV (1938); H. Fromm, Untersuchungen zum Marienleben... (Turku, 1955). F.P.P.

Wernher der Gartenare (fl. c. 1270), Austrian layman and roving moralist, acquainted with the court romance, popular epics, and Neidhart*, from whom he draws the dandyism of his upstart peasant 'hero'. Meier Helmbrecht tells, realistically and with local references, of young Helmbrecht's defiance of his father, Christian ethics and the established order, and of his brief glory in the following of a robber baron. Old Helmbrecht is a tragic figure. For all its humour it is a pessimistic work and a solemn warning. A true 'case history', probably, brilliantly adapted; an invaluable social document.

Ed. C. E. Gough (1947); ed. F. Panzer and K. Ruh (1960).—Mod. prose J. Hofmiller (1925); C. H. Bell, Peasant Life in Old German Epics (tr. 1931).

Excellent appreciation in G. Ehrismann, Geschichte der deutschen Literatur des MA.s, IV (1935); K. Ruh in Zschr. f. dt. Philol., LXXXVI (1967). F.P.P.

Wernher von Elmendorf (fl. c. 1170-80), Thuringian cleric, author of an undistinguished verse translation of William* de Conches' Moralium dogma philosophorum. He is the innocent provoker of a long-standing debate on the origins of the ethical code of the chivalrous age.

J. Bumke, 'Die Auflösung des Tugendsystems

bei W. von E.' in Zschr. für dt. Alt., LXXXVIII (1957). F.P.P.

Wescott, GLENWAY (*Kewaskum, Wisc. 11 IV 1901), American novelist, short-story writer and poet. He spent the 1920s in Paris and on the Riviera; The Grandmothers (1927) tells of an American expatriate in Europe tracing the hard lives of his ancestors. The Pilgrim Hawk (1940) shows his mature power of obliquely presenting human motives.

VERSE: The Bitterns (1920); Natives of Rock (1925).—SHORT STORIES: Like a Lover (1926); Good-Bye, Wisconsin (1928).—Apartment in Athens (novel; 1945).—Images of Truth (crit.; 1962).

H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Wesker, ARNOLD (*London 24 V 1932; ∞1958 Dusty Bicker), English dramatist, whose plays impress by their boldness of conception. The 'Wesker trilogy' gives a dramatic picture of East End Jewish life from 1936 to 1956, and Chips With Everything (1962), a curious mixture of the 'realistic' and the 'naturalistic', looks at life in the R.A.F. as a microcosm of civilian life.

TRILOGY: Chicken Soup With Barley (1958); Roots (1959); I'm Talking About Jerusalem (1960).—The Kitchen (1961); The Four Seasons (1966); The Friends (1970).—Fears of Fragmentation (essays; 1970).

J. R. Taylor, Anger and After (1962); R. Hayman, A. W. (1970); G. Leeming and S. Trussler, The Plays of A. W. (1971). W.R.A.

Wesley, CHARLES (*Epworth Rectory, Lincs 18 XII 1707; ∞1749 Sarah Gwynne; †London 29 III 1788), English divine and hymn-writer through whose group of earnest Oxford undergraduates, joined 'to observe the method of study prescribed by . . . the University', the term Methodist was first used for the religious movement led by his brother John. Charles assisted his brother's ministry and with him produced eight collections of hymns. Charles' contributions, including 'Jesu, Lover of My Soul', show deep religious and often poetic feeling. R.M.H.

Sermons (ed. S. Wesley, with memoir, 1816); Journal (ed. T. Jackson, 2 vols, 1849).—Poetical Works of J. and C. W. (ed. G. Osborn, 13 vols, 1808).

T. Jackson, Life and Correspondence of C. W. (2 vols, 1841); J. Telford, Life of C. W. (1887); R. Green, Bibliography of Works of J. and C. W. (1896); F. Wiseman, C. W. Evangelist and Poet (1933) and C. W. and His Hymns (1938); F. Baker, C. W. As Revealed by His Letters (1948); M. L. Edwards, Family Circle. A Study of the Epworth Household in Relation to J. and C. W. (1949); R. N. Flew, The Hymns of C. W. (1953); M. R. Brailsford, A Tale of Two Brothers (1954); G. H.

Findlay, Christ's Standard Bearer (1956); London Quart. and Holborn Rev., LXXXII (1957; commem. issue). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Wesley, JOHN (*Epworth Rectory, Lincs 17 VI 1703; ∞1751 Mrs Mary Vazeille; †London 2 III 1791), English evangelical leader who performed vast literary labours in the service of his ministry. A Fellow of Lincoln College, and ordained priest in 1728, the religious zeal which had already associated him with his brother Charles' group of earnest philanthropic 'methodists' at Oxford led him in 1735 to undertake for the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel the mission to Georgia which he records in his Savannah Journal. A deep spiritual experience on 24 V 1738, after his return to England, was followed by his evangelizing itineraries and his ultimate unwilling severance from the Established Church. With his picked band of helpers he preached to the poor, the outcast and the desperate, ministering to their spiritual and social needs and stimulating a wave of religious fervour throughout the country. For the use of his followers he wrote concise grammars of English and classical languages; handbooks of medicine, physics, logic, and of ecclesiastical, Roman and English history; edited the works of Bunyan*, Law* and others, including Brooke's* novel, The Fool of Quality, and produced Bible commentaries and the 50 works of divinity forming The Christian Library. With his brother Charles he published collections of hymns, some of his best being vigorous translations from German, and in 1778 he founded The Arminian Magazine which he edited till his death. The daily course of his long, devoted life is narrated in his journals which, written with frankness, humour and unflinching faith, give in plain, nervous English a picture both of the writer and of contemporary manners and conditions.

Works (32 vols, 1771–74); Poetical Works of J. and C. W. (13 vols, 1808); Journals (4 vols, 1827; ed. N. Curnock, 8 vols, 1906–16); Standard Sermons (ed. E. Sugden, 1921); Letters of J. W. (ed. J. Telford, 8 vols, 1931).

T. Coke and H. Moore, Life of J. W. (1792); R. Southey, Life of W. (2 vols, 1820); A. Leger, J. W.'s Last Love (1910); Arnold Lunn, J. W. (1929); C. E. Vulliamy, J. W. (1931); Bonamy Dobrée, J. W. (1933); J. Laver, J. W. (1936); M. Bowen, Wrestling Jacob (1937); O. Kamm, J. W. und die englische Romantik (1939); M. R. Brailsford, A Tale of Two Brothers (1954); W. L. Doughty, J. W., Preacher (1955); V. H. H. Green, The Young Mr W. (1961); M. Schmidt, J. W.: A Theological Biography (tr. N. Goldhawk, 1962–); J. W. (ed. A. C. Outler, 1964); R. C. Monk, J. W.: His Puritan Heritage (1966). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Wessel, JOHAN HERMAN (*Jonsrud, Norway 6 X 1742; ∞1780 Anna Catharina Bukier; †Copenhagen 29 XII 1785), Danish poet and playwright.

He was of Norwegian extraction, but settled in Denmark. A bohemian, his name is immortal in Danish literature as one of its greatest humorists. His dramatic work, Kærlighed uden Strømper ('Love Without Stockings'; 1772), is one of the most comic tragedies of world literature. Written in alexandrines, its irony depends upon the putting of ordinary characters into a heroic setting. Its success put an end to imitations of French and Italian classicism. His light humorous poems and versified narratives have always been loved and admired in Scandinavia. His small impromptus are quick-witted and nimble; he was a master of brief humorous verse.

Epilog (1774); Lykken bedre end Forstanden (1776); Anno 7603 (1785); Samtlige Skrifter (2 vols, 1787).—Digte (ed. P. V. Rubow, 1936); Samlede Digte (1959); Digte (1966).

S. Thomsen, Kun en Digter. En Bog om J. H. W. (1942); O. Myre, J. H. W. (1942). E.B.

Wessely (WEISEL, WESEL), NAPHTALI HERZ or HARTWIG (*Hamburg 1725; †ibid. 28 II 1805), German Hebrew poet and essayist. Son of the commercial agent to the King of Denmark, educated in Copenhagen, Wessely spent his early manhood at Amsterdam, where he absorbed the Italian-Spanish Hebrew culture, and was influenced by its then chief representative, David Franco-Mendes*. From 1774 in Berlin, he added a Hebrew literary aspect to Moses Mendelssohn's* movement for enlightenment of the German Jews. He was the chief guide of the group of young men (mainly from Eastern Europe), who founded the literary quarterly Ha-Me'assef (1784–1829). In 1782 Wessely supported the introduction of secular schools (demanded by the Emperor Joseph II) in a pamphlet Divre shalom we-emeth (after Esther ix, 30), which was translated into several languages and involved Wessely in an acrimonious controversy. Disappointed, he retired to devote the last 20 years of his life to the heroic poem on the life of Moses, Shire Tif'ereth (6 pts, 1789–1829), inspired by Klopstock's* Messias. The metre, a new departure in Hebrew, seems to have been suggested by Franco-Mendes. Wessely also wrote important works on Hebrew synonyms, on ethics, and a commentary on Leviticus (in Mendelssohn's tr. and comm. on the Pentateuch).

W. A. Meisl, Leben und Wirken N. H. W.'s (1841). C.R.

Wessobrunn Prayer, 8th-century German poem of nine alliterating lines. The first lines describe in archaic idiom ('Earth was not, nor heaven... nor was any tree') the 'nothingness' which preceded Creation. The last four lines ('but Almighty God was, when naught else was') accord better with the century of composition. Idiomatic and orthographical peculiarities in a text otherwise Bavarian suggest a connection with Fulda, possibly an Anglo-Saxon source and, as historical context, Boniface's* mission. (See also Muspilli*)

Ed. W. Braune and K. Helm, Althochdeutsches Lesebuch (1962); C. C. Barber, Old High German Reader (1951).

H. G. Fiedler and F. Norman in Mod. Lang. Rev., XX (1925) and XXIV (1929); W. Perrett in Lond. Med. Stud., I (1938); J. Knight Bostock, Handbook of Old High German Literature (1955). F.P.P.

West, NATHANAEAL, pseud. of NATHAN WALLENSTEIN WEINSTEIN (*New York 17 X 1903; ∞ Eileen McKenney; †21 XII 1940), American novelist. Underrated until recently, his 'particular kind of joking' projects a manic vision of the pressures of modern urban mass society on characters who are physical and emotional cripples unable to define or to achieve the human contact to which they aspire. The barrenness and the cruel joke of existence is most powerfully exposed in Miss Lonelyhearts (1933). His editorial colleagues on the magazine Americana (1936) defined themselves as 'laughing morticians' and the phrase epitomizes the satiric style and stance of his four short novels.

The Dream Life of Balso Snell (1931); A Cool Million (1934); The Day of the Locust (1939).

J. F. Light, N. W.: An Interpretative Study (1961); S. E. Hyman, N. W. (1962); V. Comerchero, N. W.: The Ironic Prophet (1964); N. Podhoretz, Doings and Undoings (1964); R. Read, No Redeemer, No Promised Land (1968).

G.A.K.

West, REBECCA, pen-name of CICILY ISABEL FAIRFIELD (*Kerry 25 XII 1892; ∞ 1930 Henry Maxwell Andrews), English novelist and critic, whose main interest lies in the psychological development of her characters or subjects. Paradoxically her outstanding books are Black Lamb and Grey Falcon (2 vols, 1942), a record of a journey through Yugoslavia in 1937, and The Meaning of Treason (1949), a penetrating analysis of the psychology of the traitor.

NOVELS: The Judge (1922); The Thinking Reed (1936); The Fountain Overflows (1957); The Birds Fall Down (1966).—CRITICISM: Henry James (1916); The Strange Necessity (1928); The Court and the Castle (1958). W.R.A.

West, RICHARD (fl. 1607), English epigrammatist and satirist. His pictures of contemporary life are fluent and lively.

The court of conscience or Dick Whippers sessions (1607); The Wits' A.B.C. or a century of epigrams (1608). G.K.H.

Westerbaen, JACOB (*The Hague 7 IX 1599; ∞ 1625 Anna Weytsen, widow of Reinier Groenevelt [†1648]; †31 III 1670), Dutch theologian, doctor and poet, friend and disciple of Huygens*. He wrote Noodsaeckelyck Mal (1624) in imitation of Huygens' Costelick Mal, using the same stanza form and the same kind of witticisms. Westerbaen is less involved but also less pithy than Huygens. His Ockenburg (1654) is a counterpart of Huygens' Voorhout. He is a clever satirist in Kost Verlooren (1668). He translated Janus Secundus*, Ovid*, Virgil*, Terence* and Erasmus*.

POETRY: Minnedichten (1624); Kracht des Geloofs (against Vondel's Altaargeheimenissen; 1647); David's Psalmen (1655); Krancken-Troost voor Israël in Holland (1663).—Gedichten (1672).

J. A. Worp, 'J. W.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., VI (1886); J. Koopmans, 'W.'s Ockenburg en haar toepaden' in Groot-Nederland, XV (1917); F. van Herzele, 'J. W. en zijn werk' in Album Baur (1948); M. van Can, 'J. W.', bestrijder van Vondel in Vondel Jaarboek (1949); Minneliederen (ed. S. F. Witstein, 1956); P. A. F. van Veen, De Soeticheydt des buyten-levens, vergeselschap met de boucken (1960). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Westmorland, EARL OF: see Fane, MILDMAY.

Wetterbergh, CARL ANTON, pen-name ONKEL ADAM (*Jönköping 6 VI 1804; †Linköping 31 I 1889), Swedish author. Wetterbergh excelled in his short, good-humoured newspaper sketches, sometimes constituting social satires, and subsequently collected in Genremålningar (1842), De fyra signaturerna (1843), Guvernanten (1843), Pastorsadjunkten (1845) and Ett namn (1845). He afterwards took to long, rather unwieldy social novels, the best of which was Penningar och arbete (1847).

Samlade skrifter (9 vols, 1869–74).

K. Warburg in Svea (1881). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Wetzel, FRIEDRICH-GOTTLÖB: see Bonaventura.

Wevel, GODEFRIDUS (*1320; †1396), canon of Groenendaal, author of the widely diffused mystical Middle Dutch tract Van den Twaelf Dogheden, which is strongly influenced by Ruusbroec's* Brulocht and Eckhart's* Rede der Underscheidung. It was for a long time considered as a work of Ruusbroec.

Ed. J. van Mierlo in Ruusbroec, Werken, IV (1932).

St. Axters, Geschiedenis van de Vroomheid in de Nederlanden, II (1953). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Wever, RICHARD (fl. c. 1560), English Morality-writer. His one work deals in a didactic fashion with the temptations of youth. It is strongly Protestant in tone and was probably written 1547–53.

Lusty Juventus (?1565; ed. J. S. Farmer, 1905).

B. Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958); D. M. Bevington, From 'Mankind' to

Marlowe (1962) and Tudor Drama and Politics (1968); F. P. Wilson, The English Drama 1485–1585 (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Weyerman, JACOB CAMPO (*Breda 9 VIII 1677; ∞1727 Johanna Ernst; †The Hague III 1747), Dutch journalist and adventurer; flower-painter and editor of half a dozen weeklies more or less intending blackmail, e.g. De Rotterdamsche Hermes (1720–21) and De naakte waarheid (1737), written in a clever style, as were also his compilations, such as De levensbeschrijvingen der Nederlandsche konstschilders (4 vols, 1729–69).

Den Persiaansche zijdevever (1725); De Maagdenburgsche alchimist (play; 1733).

W. P. Sautijn Kluit in Nijhoff's Bijdragen, new ser., VII (1871); D. J. H. ter Horst, 'De geschriften van J. C. W.' in Het Boek (1944); C. M. Geerars, 'J. C. W.' in Annalen van het Thijmgenootschap (1957). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Weysenhoff, JÓZEF, BARON (*Kolano 8 IV 1860; †Warsaw 6 VII 1932), Polish writer. Of a wealthy family, after studying law at Dorpat he became a farmer. A born conservative and critical about new forms of political and literary activities, he was in his novels a keen and satirical observer of Polish life, using deadly irony with skill. He is adept at describing the beauties of nature.

NOVELS: Żywot i myśli Zygmunta Podfilipskiego (1898); Vie et opinions de Sigismond Podfilipski, tr. P. Cazin, 1930; Syn marnotrawny (1904); Der verlorene Sohn, tr. L. Richter, 1917; Soból i panna (1911); The Sable and the Girl, tr. K. Żuk-Skarszewska, 1929; Puszcza (1915).—SHORT STORIES: Znaj pana (1912).—Dziela zebrane (1932).

Z. Dębicki, 'J. W.' in Portrety, I (1927); O. Forst de Battaglia, 'Versuch über J. W.' in Pologne Littéraire, IV (1927); M. Piszczkowski, J. W. Poeta przyrody (1930); Z. L. Zaleski, 'J. W.' in Attitudes et destinées (1932).

S.S. (P.H.)

Wharton, EDITH, née NEWBOLD JONES (*New York 24 I 1862; ∞1885 Edward Wharton; †St Brice-sous-Forêt, France 11 VIII 1937), American novelist and short-story writer. Of a distinguished New York family, she had a rich cosmopolitan education. She was a friend and disciple of Henry James*; like him she was deeply concerned with artistic form, wrote of the upper class and looked to the moral values behind the social scene. Her Pulitzer-prize-winning novel, The Age of Innocence (1920), treated ironically New York high society in the Victorian period. Best known of her works is the grim, laconic New England tragedy, Ethan Frome (1911). She spent most of her mature years in France and received recognition for her energetic war work. H.L.C.

NOVELS: The Greater Inclination (1899); Sanc- tuary (1903); The House of Mirth (1905); Madame de Treymes (1907); The Reef (1912); The Custom of the Country (1913); The Marne (1918); A Son at the Front (1923); Twilight Sleep (1927); The Buccaneers (1938).—VARIOUS: Italian Backgrounds (1905); A Motor-Flight Through France (1908); Fighting France: From Dunkerque to Belfort (1915); French Ways and Their Meaning (1919); In Morocco (1920); The Writing of Fiction (1925); A Backward Glance (1934).

R. M. Lovett, E. W. (1925); E. K. Brown, E. W.: étude critique (1935); P. Lubbock, Portrait of E. W. (1947); B. Nevius, E. W.: A Study of Her Fiction (1953); M. Bell, E. W. and Henry James (1965).
H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Whately, RICHARD, Archbishop of Dublin (*London 1 II 1787; ∞1821 Elizabeth Pope; †Dublin 1 X 1863), English writer of works on logic and rhetoric, and of theological works.

Historic Doubts relative to Napoleon Buonaparte (1819; anon.); Use and Abuse of Party Feeling in Matters of Religion (1822); Essays on some of the Peculiarities of the Christian Religion (1825).

W. J. Fitzpatrick, Memoirs (1864); E. J. Whately, Life and Correspondence of R. W. (1866).
R.M.H. (K.W.)

Whelock, ABRAHAM (*Whitchurch, Salop 1593; †London 1653), English Anglo-Saxon scholar. Whelock produced the first edition of the Old English version of Bede's* Ecclesiastical History and (as an appendix) the first edition and translation into Latin of the *Anglo-Saxon* Chronicle*.

Historiae ecclesiasticae gentis Anglorum libri V... eiusque paraphrasi Saxonica explicati... quibus in calce operis Saxonica chronologia... contextimus (1643-44).
G.K.H.

Whetstone, GEORGE (*London c. ?1544; †1587), English poet, dramatist and writer of prose romances. He spent some time in France and in the army in the Low Countries (1574), was in Sir Humfrey Gilbert's* expedition (1578-79) and in Holland (1585). Whetstone, a friend of Gascoigne* and Churchyard*, is mentioned by Webbe*, but is best known for his romance and dramatic versions of Promos and Cassandra, utilized by Shakespeare* in Measure for Measure.

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

The Rocke of Regard (1576; ed. J. P. Collier, 1870); Promos and Cassandra (1578; ed. G. Bullough, Narrative and Dramatic Sources of Shakespeare, II, 1958).

T. Izard, G. W. (1942; repr. 1966).

J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Whewell, WILLIAM (*Lancaster 24 V 1794; ∞1841 Cordelia Marshall, ∞1858 Everina Affleck; †Cambridge 6 III 1866), English author of works on moral philosophy and a wide range of scientific subjects, showing encyclopaedic knowledge. He was Master of Trinity College, Cambridge.

History of the Inductive Sciences (3 vols, 1837); Philosophy of the Inductive Sciences (2 vols, 1840); Of the Plurality of Worlds (1853).

I. Todhunter, Account of W. W.'s Writings, with Selections and Correspondence (2 vols, 1876); J. M. Douglas, Life and Selections from Writings of W. W. (1882); R. Blanché, Le rationalisme de W. W. (1935).
R.M.H. (K.W.)

White, GILBERT (*Selborne, Hants 18 VII 1720; †ibid. 26 VI 1793), English writer and naturalist. He held various curacies but spent most of his life in Selborne, devotedly observing its natural history. 'All nature is so full' he says, and its fullness and variety is explored and questioned with enthusiasm, patience and curiosity.
B.H.

The Natural History and Antiquities of Selborne, in the County of Southampton: with Engravings, and an Appendix (1789); A Naturalist's Calendar with Observations in Various Branches of Natural History (ed. J. Aikin, 1795; sel.); Journals of G. W. (ed. W. Johnson, 1931).—Life and Letters of G. W. (ed. R. Holt-White, 2 vols, 1901).

H. C. Shelley, G. W. and Selborne (1910); W. Johnson, G. W.: Pioneer, Poet and Stylist (1928); W. S. Scott, W. of Selborne (1950); R. M. Lockley, G. W. (1954); C. S. Emden, G. W. in His Village (1956).
B.H. (M.Bu.)

White, HENRY KIRKE (*Nottingham 21 III 1785; †Cambridge 19 X 1806), English poet whose premature death excited for his poems, posthumously edited by Southey*, an interest which their intrinsic value has failed to sustain.

Poems, Letters and Prose Fragments (ed. John Drinkwater, 1907).

R. Southey, The Remains of H. K. W. (with life; 3 vols, 1807-23).
R.M.H. (K.W.)

White, PATRICK VICTOR MARTINDALE (*London 28 V 1912), Australian novelist and playwright. After his early childhood on his father's sheep station in New South Wales, he was sent to Cheltenham College. Returning to Australia, he spent three years as a jackeroo, during which time he wrote two unpublished novels, and later studied modern languages at Cambridge. He served as an intelligence officer with the R.A.F. during the Second World War and afterwards settled on a farm near Sydney.

His style first began to reach full maturity in The Aunt's Story (1948). His novels combine a microscopic observation of human experience with a large imaginative sweep. The English Romantic poets, 19th-century German philosophy, Lawrence*, Joyce* and Woolf* are amongst the influences assimilated in his boldly original style. With a skilful counterpointing of naturalistic and symbolic modes, White reveals the extraordinary behind the ordinary in his characters' lives, and shows them in the context of conflicting principles of flux and permanence. White's favourite province in drama is the borderland between farcical comedy and tragedy, where he is often highly successful. But his characteristic concerns are not always given fully convincing embodiment in the dramatic form.

NOVELS: Happy Valley (1939); The Living and the Dead (1941); The Tree of Man (1955); Voss (1957); Riders in the Chariot (1961); The Solid Mandala (1966).—Four Plays (1965).—The Burnt Ones (short stories; 1964).

G. Dutton, P. W. (1961); R. F. Brissenden, P. W. (1966); B. Argyle, P. W. (1967).

A.M.G.

White, TERENCE HANBURY (*Bombay 19 V 1906; †on board ship, Piraeus, Greece 17 I 1964), English writer, whose highly individual work defies classification. His fame now rests largely on the four Arthurian stories, of which the first was The Sword in the Stone (1938), published in 1958 as The Once and Future King, but his other novels and his general writing have the same qualities of vivid imagination and distinction.

Farewell Victoria (1933); England Have My Bones (1936); Mistress Masham's Repose (1946).—The Age of Scandal (1950); The Goshawk (1951); The Scandalmonger (1952).—The W. [Garnett Letters (ed. D. Garnett, 1968).

S. T. Warner, T. H. W. (1967). W.R.A.

White, WILLIAM HALE, pseud. MARK RUTHERFORD (*Bedford 22 XII 1831; ∞1856 Harriet Arthur, ∞1911 Dorothy Vernon; †Groombridge 14 III 1913), English novelist, critic and philosopher, exponent of Spinoza* and Wordsworth*. As Mark Rutherford he wrote self-disclosing novels of profound spiritual sincerity, two of them autobiographical in form. He inimitably described provincial dissenting circles.

Spinoza: Ethics (tr.; 1883); Emendation of the Intellect (1895); Examination of the Charge of Apostasy against Wordsworth (1898); John Bunyan (1905).—Autobiography of M. R. (1881); M. R.'s Deliverance (1885); Early Life of M. R., by Himself (1913).—Novels of M. R. (ed. H. W. Massingham, 6 vols, 1923).

A. E. Taylor, The Novels of M. R. (1914); Sir W. R. Nicoll, Memoirs of M. R. (1924); D. V. White, The Groombridge Diary (1924); W. Hale White, Letters to Three Friends (1924); C. M. Maclean, M. R. (1955). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Whitehead, CHARLES (*London 1804; †Melbourne 5 VII 1862), English poet, dramatist and novelist of tragically unfulfilled promise, whose introduction of Charles Dickens* to his publisher led to the writing of The Pickwick Papers.

The Solitary (poem; 1831); Lives and Exploits of English Highwaymen (1834); The Autobiography of Jack Ketch (1834); The Cavalier (drama; 1836); Richard Savage (3 vols, 1842).

Mackenzie Bell, A Forgotten Genius (1884).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Whiter, WALTER (*Birmingham 30 X 1758; †Hardingham Rectory, Norfolk 23 VII 1832), English critic. Whiter's analysis of Shakespeare's* language in the light of Locke's* psychology is an anticipation of the 20th-century interest in imagery.

A Specimen of a Commentary on Shakespeare. Containing i. Notes on As You Like It. ii. An Attempt to explain and illustrate various Passages, on a new Principle of Criticism, derived from Mr. Locke's Doctrine of the Association of Ideas (1794). B.H.

Whitman, WALT(ER) (*West Hills, Long Island, N.Y. 31 V 1819; †Camden, N.J. 26 III 1892), American poet and journalist. He grew up in Brooklyn, left school before his teens to work as an office boy and printer's devil. He taught in country schools; took up journalism in New York—writing sentimental fillers, melodramatic stories and even a hack novel supporting temperance. In 1855 appeared the first edition of his life work, Leaves of Grass, a pamphlet of 12 poems printed by the author. Emerson* responded with an enthusiastic letter, 'I greet you at the beginning of a great career', published by Whitman, without permission, in his second edition. During the Civil War he nursed the wounded in Washington hospitals. From this period date his war poems and his great elegy on the death of President Lincoln, 'When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd'. He lost a government clerkship because of the reputed 'immorality' of his poems, but was switched to another department. In 1873 he was stricken with paralysis and settled in Camden, N.J. The first Leaves of Grass stated the all-inclusive theme of Whitman's work; each revised edition added more poems. His style, modelled on the rhythms of the Old Testament and unrestricted by conventional forms, was developed to express the vitality of democratic man pushing to the edges of a new continent and forming a new society. In his poetry he sought to comprehend the nature of his identity and his relationship to the rest of his existence.

Franklin Evans (1842); Leaves of Grass (1855; 1856; 1860–61; 12th ed. 1891–92); Drum-Taps (1865); Democratic Vistas (1871); Passage to India (1871); After All, Not to Create Only (1871); As A Strong Bird on Pinions Free (1872); Memo-randa During the War (1875–76); Specimen Days and Collect (1882–83); November Boughs (1888); Autobiographia (1892).—Complete Poems and Prose of W. W., 1855–1888 (1888–89); W. W.:

Representative Selections (ed. F. Stovall, 1939); The Collected Writings of W. W. (ed. G. W. Allen and S. Bradley, 1961- ).

H. S. Canby, W. W., An American: A Study in Biography (1943); E. Holloway, W. W.: An Interpretation in Narrative (1926); B. Perry, W. W.: His Life and Works (1906); N. Arvin, W. W. (1938); S. W. Allen, The Solitary Singer: A Critical Biography of W. W. (1955) and W. W. as Man: Poet and Legend (1961); R. Chose, W. W. Reconsidered (1955); J. E. Miller, A Critical Guide to Leaves of Grass (1957); R. Asselineau, The Evolution of W. W.: The Creation of a Poet (1960) and The Evolution of W. W.: The Creation of a Book (1962); The Presence of W. W. (ed. R. W. B. Lewis, 1962); E. H. Miller, W. W.'s Poetry: A Psychological Journey (1968). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Whitney, GEOFFREY (*Coole Pilate, Ches. ?1548; †Ryles Green, nr Combermere Abbey 1601), English emblematic poet, educated at Oxford, Cambridge and Leiden.

A Choice of Emblems (1586; type facs. repr. H. Green, 1866, 1966). J.J.Y.L. (T.P.M.)

Whittier, JOHN GREENLEAF (*Haverhill, Mass. 17 XII 1807; †Hampton Falls, N.H. 7 IX 1892), American poet and journalist. He grew up under Quaker parents on a Massachusetts farm, described later in his most popular poem, Snow-Bound (1866). After a scanty education he edited country newspapers and wrote quantities of verse. In 1833 he announced his anti-slavery stand in a pamphlet, Justice and Expediency (1833); for the next three decades he vigorously supported abolition as an editor of reform journals and a polemical writer. His poetry consists of anti-slavery poems, personal and religious lyrics and salty New England ballads.

Legends of New-England (1831); Ballads and Other Poems (1844); Voices of Freedom (1846); Leaves from Margaret Smith's Journal (1849); Songs of Labor and Other Poems (1850); Home Ballads (1860); In War Time (1864); The Tent on the Beach (1867).—The Writings of J. G. W. (ed. H. E. Scudder, 7 vols, 1894); J. G. W. Representative Selections (ed. H. H. Clark, 1935); W. on Writers and Writing: The Uncollected Critical Writings of J. G. W. (ed. E. C. Cady and H. H. Clark, 1950).

S. T. Pickard, Life and Letters of J. G. W. (2 vols, 1907); A. Mordell, Quaker Militant: J. G. W. (1933); W. Bennett, W., Bard of Freedom (1941); G. Arms, The Fields Were Green (1953); L. Leary, J. G. W. (1961); J. B. Pickard, J. G. W.: An Introduction and Interpretation (1961); E. Wagenknecht, J. S. W. A Portrait in Paradox (1967). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Wibbelt, AUGUSTIN (*Vorhelm 19 IX 1862; †ibid. 14 IX 1947), Low German priest, writer and poet. His numerous short stories, often approaching the novel, continue the tradition of the humorous Westphalian story, but also deal with psychological and social problems. He has accomplished an all-round picture of the Westphalian peasantry at the turn of the century. His delicate, simple poems combine nature lyric and religious poetry.

STORIES: Drücke-Möhne (3 vols, 1898–1906); Wildrups Hoff (1900); De Strunz (1902); Hus Bahlen (1903); De Iesten Blomen (1904); Schulte Witte (1905); De Iärfschopp (1910); Dat Veerte Gebott (1912).—VERSE: Müten-Gaitlink (1909); Pastraoten-Gaoren (1912); Hillgenbeller (1924).—Gesammelte Werke (10 vols, 1953–60).—Der versunkene Garten (autobiog.; 1969).

A. Baldus, A. W., Leben und Werk (1921); G. Schalkamp, A. W. und die Dorfgeschichte (diss. Bonn, 1933); S. Pohl, A. W. als niederdeutschen Lyriker (1962). G.C.

Wickram, JÖRG (*Colmar 1505; †Burgheim nr Altbreisach before 1562), German novelist and dramatist. The father of the German novel, he wrote Der Jungen Knaben Spiegel (1554), the story of a hard-working boy's rise to success, and Der Goldfaden (1557), a romance based on French models. Loosely strung together, his novels nevertheless show a new striving after form and beauty of language, and introduce an idealizing note into the bourgeois setting. He also wrote Das Rollwagenbüchlein, a highly readable and popular collection of prose anecdotes, Meisterlieder, dramas, Shrovetide plays and didactic satire (Der irr reitend Pilger, Hauptlaster der Trunkenheit). All his works were immensely popular.

NOVELS: Ritter Galmy aus Schottland (1539); Gabriotto und Reinhart (1551); Der Jungen Knaben Spiegel (1554; ed. G. Fauth, 1917); Der Goldfaden (1554; adapt. Clemens Brentano, 1809; eds. P. Ernst, 1905; C. Schüddekopf, 1911); Von guten und bösen Nachbarn (1554).—PLAYS: Der treu Eckart (1538); Tobias (1551).—SCHWÄNKE: Das Rollwagenbüchlein (1555; ed. H. Kurz, 1865).—Werke (ed. J. Bolte and W. Scheel, 8 vols, 1901–06).

W. Scherer, Die Anfänge des deutschen Prosaromans und J. W. (1877); G. Fauth, J. W.'s Romane (1916); M. Spénlé in Annuaire de Colmar (1938). D.G.D.

Widsith: see Exeter Book.

Wiechert, ERNST (*Forsthaus Kleinort, East Prussia 18 V 1887; †Ürikon, Switzerland 24 VIII 1950), German novelist and poet. His simplicity recalls Rousseau*, and in the simple characters of his novels often shows sentimentality and escapism. But his great personal integrity, deep religious feelings and humanitarianism have impressed many readers.

Der Totenwolf (1924); Der Knecht Gottes

Andreas Nyland (1926); Die Magd des Jürgen Daskocil (1932); Die Majorin (1934); Hirtennovelle (1935); Die Jerominkinder (2 vols, 1945–47); Der Totenwald (1945); Missa sine nomine (1950); Der Exote (1951); Es geht ein Pflüger übers Land (anthol. of verse and prose; 1951).—Sämtliche Werke (10 vols, 1957).

H. Ebeling, E. W. (fullest biog., with biblio.; 1947); W. Berger, 'E. W.' in Ger. Life and Letters, IV (1950); S. Kirshner, 'A bibliography of critical writing about E. W.' in Librarium, VII (1964).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Wied, GUSTAV JOHANNES (*Holmegaard, nr Nakskov 6 III 1858; ∞1893 Alice Tutein; †Roskilde 24 X 1914), Danish novelist, playwright and short-story writer. One of a family of Lolland farmers, he began by writing Strindbergian plays, but with little success. His first story was banned, and he was imprisoned. He settled down at Roskilde, where most of his works were written, and where eventually he committed suicide.

With Holberg* and Wessel*, Wied is one of Denmark's greatest humorists. His wit is cynical and bitter: that of a disillusioned man who watches with a pitying smile the human race performing on the stage of the puppet theatre called life. His philosophy is cynical: 'We should feed our carp, make our whisky stronger, and leave the rest to the Lord!'. His best novels are masterpieces of malicious wit, but there is an underlying tenderness and a feeling of solitude which he cannot entirely suppress. Among his many plays, special mention should be made of his so-called Satyrspil.

NOVELS: Slægten (1898); Livsens Ondskab (1899); Knagsted (1902).—SHORT STORIES: Silhuetter (1891); Barnlige Sjæle (1893); Menneskenes Børn (2 vols, 1894); Ungdomshistorier (1895); Lystige Historier (1896); Circus Mundi (1909); Pastor Sørensen & Co. (1913); Imellem Slagene (1914).—PLAYS: En Hjemkomst (1889); En Bryllupsnat (1892); Jægermesterinden (1894); Erotik (1896); Adel, Gejstlighed, Borger og Bonde (1897); Det svage Køn (1900); To Kroner og halvtreds (1901); Et Opgør (1903); Autumn Fires, tr. B. F. Glazer, 1930; Dansemus (1905).—Første Violin (1898); Barnlige Sjæle (1900); Atalanta (1901); Den gamle Pavillon (1902); Ranke Viljer (1906; 2 × 2 = 5, tr. E. Boyd and H. Koppel, 1923); Kærlighed (1909).—Mindeudgave (8 vols, 1915–16); Romaner, Skuespil, Noveller (12 vols, 1966–68).—Digt og Virkelighed, Livserindringer (1950).

P. Christiansen, G. W. (1920); E. Holten-Nielsen, G. W. (1931); E. Neergaard, Peter Idealist (1938) and Dommen og Drømmen (1951); E. Salicath, Omkring G. W. (1946); K. Ahnlund, Den unge G. W. (1964). E.B.

Wieland, CRISTOPH MARTIN (*Oberholzheim, nr Biberach 5 IX 1733; †Weimar 20 I 1813), German poet and novelist. Of well-to-do origin, Wieland wrote imitations of Klopstock* which led Bodmer* to invite him to Zürich in 1752. Though he disappointed Bodmer, he remained in Switzerland for eight years. In 1760 he received an administrative appointment in Biberach, and abandoned his previous sentimental and religious tone, assuming a worldly sensual outlook reflected in 'gallant' verse romances. Wieland translated 17 plays of Shakespeare* (1762–66). In 1765 he became a Professor at Erfurt, writing his philosophical novel Agathon (1766–67) there. His educational novel Der goldene Spiegel (1772) led to his appointment as tutor to the Weimar Princes. He lived in Weimar for the rest of his life.

Wieland's facility and versatility were matched by his impressionability. His sprightliness of mind led to dexterous light prose at a time when clear writing was a neglected art in Germany.

VERSE: Erzählungen (1752); Der geprüfte Abraham (1752); Briefe von Verstorbenen (1753); Hymnen (1754); Don Sylvio von Rosalba (1764); Komische Erzählungen (1765); Idris (1768); Musarion (1768); Die Grazien (1770); Der neue Amadis (1771); Der verklagte Amor (1774); Oberon (1780; tr. John Quincy Adams, ed. A. B. Faust, 1940); Clelia und Sinnibald (1784); Hermann (1752; pub. 1882).—PLAYS: Lady Johanna Grey (1758); Alceste (1773).—NOVELS: Die Abderiten (1774); Peregrinus Proteus (1791); Agathodämon (1799); Aristipp (1800–01).—Sämtliche Werke (45 vols, 1794–1802; ed. J. G. Gruber, 53 vols, 1818–28; ed. B. Seuffert and W. Kurrelmeyer, 50 vols, 1909 ff.).

W. Michel, W. (Paris, 1938); F. Sengle, C. M. W. (1949); J. Hecker, W. (1960); D. M. van Abbe, W. (1961). H.B.G.

Wiele(n), JOANNES STALPAERT VAN DER (*The Hague 22 XI 1579; †Delft 29 XII 1630), Dutch Roman Catholic poet, read law at Orleans and theology at Rome, became a priest, later head of the Beguinage at Delft. He was rather a late representative of medieval devotion than a poet of the Counter-Reformation, although his Roomsche Reys (1624) was a polemic pamphlet. The epitaph on his tomb is by Anna Roemers Visscher*. He wrote a legend in verse, Sint Agnes, a satire, Extractum Catholicum tegen alle gebreken van verwarde hersenen (1631), and songs in Den Schat der geestelycke Lofsanghen (1634).

A.M.B.W.

G. L. Hoogewerff, De dichter S. van der W. (1920); L. C. Michels, J. S. van der W. (1931); A. R. Heyligers, 'Biografie en bibliografie van J. S. van der W.' in Bijdr. v. Vaderl. Gesch. en Oudheidk. (1937); P. Polman, Stalpaert en zijn Roomsche Reys (1938); B. A. Mensink, Jan Baptist J. van der W. (1958); M. C. A. van der Heijden, J. S. van der W.: Madrigalia (1960); F. Kossmann, 'S. Madrigalen' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXXVIII (1961);

K. Heeroma, 'Camphuysen en J. van der W.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LIV (1961); Gulde-jaer ons Heeren Jesu Christi (ed. B. A. Mensink and J. A. J. Böhmer, 1968). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Wienbarg, LUDOLF (*Altona 25 XII 1802; †Schleswig 2 I 1872), German writer, whose significant Ästhetische Feldzüge (1834) inspired Young Germany. His later activities were restricted by officialdom and he died mad. K.W.M.

Holland in den Jahren 1831–32 (2 vols, 1833); Zur neuesten Literatur (1835); Vermischte Schriften (1840); Das Geheimnis des Wortes (1852).

V. Schweizer, L. W. (1897); M. Bartholomey, W. ein pädagogischer Reformator des jungen Deutschlands (1912). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Wieringa, NICOLAAS JARICHIDES, 17th-century Dutch translator, teacher at the grammar school at Harlingen, produced excellent translations of Rabelais*.

Vriendschappen van Parnas (after Boccacini; 2 vols, 1670–73); Alle de geestige werken van Mr François Rabelais (2 vols, 1682); J. Barklai Satyricon (1683); Het leven van Filips de II (after Leti; 1699).

C. L. Thijssen-Schoute, N. J. W. (1939).

J.W.W.

Wierzyński, KAZIMIERZ (*Drohobycz 26 VIII 1894; †London 13 II 1969), Polish author. A co-founder of the 'Skamander' group in 1928, he won the first prize at the Olympics for Laur Olimpijski. As a poet he was first influenced by Severyanin*, Staff* and Whitman*. His language in verse and in prose is pure and direct, his imagination daring and vivid.

VERSE: Wiosna i wino (1919); Wielka Niedźwiedzica (1923); Laur Olimpijski (1927); Olympischer Lorbeer, tr. J. H. Mischel, 1928; Pieśni fanatyczne (1929); Barbakan warszawski (Nice, 1940); Ziemia wilczyca (London, 1941); Krzyże i miecze (New York, 1945); Korzec maku (ibid., 1950); Czarny polonez (Paris, 1968); Sen mara (ibid., 1969).—SHORT STORIES: Granice świata (1933).—VARIOUS: W garderobie duchów (1938); The Life and Death of Chopin (tr. N. Guterman, 3rd ed. 1951).—Utwory zebrane (1939); Poezje zebrane (1965).—Selected Poems (New York, 1959).

J. Topass, 'K. W.' in Pologne Littéraire, LXXXIX (1934); K. Husarski, 'Droga poetycka K. W.' in Wiedza i życie (1934). S.S. (P.H.)

Wigglesworth, MICHAEL (*Yorks, Eng. 18 X 1631; ∞1655 Mary Reyner, ∞1679 Martha Mudge, ∞1691 Sybil Avery; †Boston, Mass. 22 V 1705), American poet. A Puritan divine whose terrifying poem The Day of Doom (1662) was a colonial best-seller, though 'God's Controversy With New England' is the better poem.

Meat Out of the Eater (1670); Riddles Unriddled; or, Christian Paradoxes (1689).—The Diary of M. W. 1653–57 (ed. E. S. Morgan, 1946).

J. W. Dean, Sketch of the Life of Rev. M. W., A.M., with a Fragment of His Autobiography (1863); R. Crowder, No Featherbed to Heaven: A Biography of M. W. 1631–1705 (1962).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Wikner, PONTUS (*Valbo Ryr 19 V 1837; †Kristiania 15 V 1888), Swedish philosopher and author. Though a great scholar, Wikner was forced by circumstances to popular writing, e.g. Min moders testamente (1869; My Mother's Will, tr. E. Schmidt, 1902–03), Allt eller intet (1871) and Mantegnas ängel (1877). His essential humour and realism, however, come out best in En sommarsvaghet, a vivid Bohuslän tale.

Skrifter (ed. A. Ahlberg and T. Hjelmqvist, 12 vols, 1920–24).

F. Böök, Sveriges moderna litteratur, III (1921). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Wilbur, RICHARD (*New York 1 III 1921), American poet. He gained an M.A. at Harvard in 1947 and is currently teaching at Wesleyan University. Wilbur, influenced by Hopkins* and Wallace Stevens*, is a fine craftsman whose delicate observations are occasionally overwhelmed by his preoccupation with technique. At its best his poetry exemplifies the post-war American poet's refusal to make the glib statement or the grand gesture while retaining an absolute fidelity to feeling.

The Beautiful Changes (1947); A Bestiary (1955); Things of This World (1956); Walking to Sleep (1969). D.E.Mo.

Wilcox, ELLA WHEELER (*Johnston Center, Wisc. 5 XI 1850; ∞1884 Robert Wilcox; †Short Beach, Conn. 30 X 1919), American verse-writer and novelist. She gained wide popularity with her nearly 40 volumes of verse, which mixed platitudes with sentimentality.

VERSE: Drops of Water (1872); Poems of Passion (1883).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: The Story of a Literary Career (1905); The Worlds and I (1918). H.L.C.

Wild, ROBERT (*St Ives, Huntingdon 1609; †Oundle, Northants VII 1679), English divine and poet. Wild produced a series of broadsheet poems on topical subjects from the time of the Restoration.

Iter boreale, attempting something upon the successful march of General Monck (1660).—The Poems of Dr. R. W. (ed. J. Hunt, 1870). G.K.H.

Wilde, OSCAR FINGAL O'FLAHERTIE WILLS (*Dublin 16 X 1854; ∞1884 Constance Lloyd; †Paris 30 XI 1900), Irish dramatist, poet, essayist and story-writer, educated Portora School, Enniskillen, Trinity College, Dublin, and Oxford; Newdigate prize for poetry 1878. He settled in London in 1879 and gained renown by the publication of his first poems, by his cultivated eccentricity, and by literary tours of England and the U.S.A. From 1892 to 1895 he had a meteoric success with his plays. His imprisonment for sexual perversion caused his sudden ruin. He left Reading jail in 1897 and sought refuge in France, where he died after being received into the Roman Catholic Church. His pseudonym in Paris was 'Sebastian Melmoth'.

Wilde said that he put his genius into his life, his talent into his works. He gave to the English stage the best comedies since Sheridan*, full of sparkling wit and of excellent situations. He wrote elaborate and exotic prose, influenced by that of Walter Pater*, whose aesthetic theories he accepted.

R.McH.

PLAYS: Vera (1880); The Duchess of Padua (1883); Salome (1893); Lady Windermere's Fan (1893); A Woman of No Importance (1894); The Importance of Being Earnest (1899); An Ideal Husband (1899).—VERSE: Ravenna (1878); Poems (1881); The Sphinx (1894); A Ballad of Reading Gaol (1898).—VARIOUS: The Happy Prince (1888); Portrait of Mr W. H. (1889); The Picture of Dorian Gray (1891); Intentions (1891); Lord Arthur Savile's Crime (1891); A House of Pomegranates (1891); De Profundis (1905).—Collected Works (ed. R. Ross, 14 vols, 1908; ed. V. Holland [son], 1945; 1 vol., 1966); Letters (ed. R. Hart-Davis, 1962); The Artist as Critic: Critical Writings (ed. R. Ellmann, 1970).

Hesketh Pearson, The Life of O. W. (1946; rev. ed. 1966); Norbert Loeser, Nietzsche and W. (1960); R. Ellmann, Eminent Domain (1967) and ed., O. W. (1969); O. W.: The Critical Heritage (ed. K. Beckson, 1970). R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Wildenbruch, ERNST VON (*Beirut, Syria 3 II 1845; †Berlin 15 I 1909), German playwright, poet and novelist. An illegitimate descendant of the Hohenzollerns, he spent his childhood in Turkey and Greece, joined the army, resigned, studied law, and finally became a diplomat. In his dramas he tried to combine Schiller's* style with a more realistic treatment of historical subjects. The modernistic Die Haubenlerche (1890) is imbued with Naturalism. The result is not great literature but proved extremely successful on the stage. Some of his short stories such as Schwester-Seele (1893) and Das edle Blut (1892; A Story of Cadet Life, tr. W. D. Lowe, 1910) are of higher rank.

PLAYS: Harold (1882; tr. H. A. Clarke and D. Heller, 1891); Heinrich und Heinrichs Geschlecht (1896; King Henry, tr. R. M. Wernaer, 1915);

C 2 W L—III—AA*

Die Rabensteinerin (1907; Barseba of Rabenstein, tr. R. von Appiano and W. Nobbe, 1909).—SHORT STORIES: Der Meister von Tanagra (1880; tr. M. von Lauer, 1886); Neid (1900; Eng. tr. E. Traut, 1921).—Gesammelte Werke (ed. B. Litzmann, 16 vols, 1911–24).

B. Litzmann, E. von W. (2 vols, 1913–16); E. A. Morgan, W. as a Naturalist (diss., 1930); H. M. Elster, E. von W. (1934).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Wildenvey, HERMAN THEODORE (*Eiker 20 VII 1885; ∞1912 Giske Kramer-Andreassen; †27 IX 1959), Norwegian poet. Wildenvey, whose family name was PORTAAS, published his first collection of poems at the age of 16. From 1904 to 1907 he was in the United States, spending part of the time at a theological seminary. On his return to Norway he achieved immediate success with his collection of poems, Nyinger (1907). With them he brought a new lightness, and melodic charm to Norwegian verse. In his later poetry a more serious, even religious, undertone is to be noted beneath his playful exterior. Wildenvey was a born poet, technically a virtuoso, and he endowed all his work with his own extremely likeable individuality.

VERSE: Campanula (1902; rev. as Den glemte have, 1920); Digte (1908); Ringsgang (1910; rev. 1948); Prismer (1911); Arets æventyr (1913); Kjertegn (1916); Hemmeligheter (1919); Trold i ord (1920); Ildorkestret (1923); Fiken av tistler (1925); Der falder stjerner (1926); Dagenes sang (1930); Høstens lyre (1931); En ung manns flukt (1936); Filomele (1946); Ved sangens kilder (1947); Polyhymnia (1952); Ugler til Athen (1953); Soluret (1956).—PLAYS: Lys over land (1913).—SHORT STORIES: Brændende hjerter (1915); Flygtninger (1917); Streiftog i hjembygden (1924); Et herrens aar (1929).—REMINISCENCES: Vingeheten og verden (1937); Den nye rytmen (1938); En lykkelig tid (1939); En lykkelig tid (1949; 1 vol. of the above 3 vols).—Samlede dikt (6 vols, 1945–52); Efterklang (arts and speeches; ed. G. Wildenvey, 1969).

K. Haave, H. W. Poeten-Kunstneren (1952).

R.G.P.

Wilder, LAURA INGALLS (*Pepin, Wisc. 7 II 1867; ∞1885 Almanzo Wilder; †Mansfield, Mo. 10 I 1957), American author of 'Little House' books, warm-hearted, authentic, widely popular pioneer stories based on her childhood. The Laura Ingalls Wilder Award is given five-yearly by the American Library Association for distinguished, sustained writing or illustrating for children.

Little House in the Big Woods (1932) and sequels.

Horn Book, special no. (Dec. 1953). N.C.

Wilder, THORNTON NIVEN (*Madison, Wisc. 17 IV 1897), American playwright and novelist. The nostalgic, gentle irony of Our Town (1938) is controlled by a skilful unconventional theatrical technique, yet the more ambitious philosophical comedy The Skin of Our Teeth (1942) lapses into uncontrolled pretentiousness. His novel The Bridge of San Luis Rey (1927) shows a skilful narrative technique in examining the harsh ironies of fate. The realistic aspects of his work are dealt with in a detached, liberal and humane manner.

NOVELS: The Cabala (1926); The Woman of Andros (1930); Heaven's My Destination (1934); The Ides of March (1948); The Eighth Day (1968).—PLAYS: The Angel That Troubled the Waters and Other Plays (1928); The Long Christmas Dinner and Other Plays in One Act (1931); The Merchant of Yonkers (1939); The Matchmaker (1954; musical, Hello Dolly, 1964); The Alcestiad (1955); Play for Bleeker Street (1962).

J. Gassner, Form and Idea in the Modern Theatre (1956); M. Cowley, 'Introduction' to a T. W. Trio (1956); F. Fergusson, The Human Image in Dramatic Literature (1957); R. Burbank, T. W. (1961). G.A.K.

Wildermuth, OTTILIE, née ROOSCHÜTZ (*Rothenburg am Neckar 22 II 1817; ∞1843 J. D. Wildermuth; †Tübingen 12 VII 1877), German writer, a friend of Uhland* and Kerner*. Her improving novels and tales for women and the young give the quintessence of some aspects of her period.

H.A.P.

Im Tageslicht (1861; Eng. tr. A. Pratt, 1865); Briefwechsel mit Justinus Kerner (1960).—Gesammelte Werke (ed. A. Wildermuth, 10 vols, 1892–94).

O. W.'s Leben (ed. her daughters, 4th ed. 1911). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Wilhelm, PRINCE (*Tullgarn 17 VI 1884; †Flen 5 VI 1965), Swedish author; second son of King Gustav V. Wilhelm wrote poems, short stories and plays. He is, however, best known for his colourful travel sketches and essays, often illustrated by his own photographs.

Sel. in This Land of Sweden (tr. E. Kjellberg, 1946) and Something of My Country (tr. M. H. Michael, 1951).

K. Asplund, Författaren prins W. (1966).

C.H.K. (I.S.)

William Llŷn (*1534/35; ∞Elizabeth ferch John; †31 VIII 1580), Welsh poet. 'A poet from Llŷn', he learned his craft from Gruffudd Hiraethog, graduated as a pencerdd (master-poet) in the Caerwys eisteddfod of 1567, and lived at least the latter part of his life at Oswestry. His collected poems include poems soliciting gifts, a few love poems and scores of eulogies and elegies, mostly in the cywydd metre and addressed to members of the gentry and clergy. His elegies, particularly three written to fellow-poets, are unsurpassed in Welsh literature.

Barddoniaeth W. L. (ed. J. C. Morrice, 1908). B.Re.

Wilkes, JOHN (*Clerkenwell 17 X 1727; ∞?1749 Mary Mead; †London 26 XII 1797), English political journalist, orator, rake and storm-centre who, with Charles Churchill*, replied to Smollett's* weekly, The Briton, with The North Briton, a lively weekly sheet of polemics aimed at overthrowing Bute.

R.M.H.

Essay on Woman (1764); The Political Controversy (5 vols, 1762–63; incl. reprs for these years of The North Briton, The Briton, The Monitor, The Auditor and other papers); Life and Political Writings of J. W. (1769); Introduction to the History of England from the Revolution to the Accession of the Brunswick Line (1768).—Correspondence of J. W. (ed. J. Almon, 5 vols, 1805); Correspondence of J. W. with Charles Churchill (ed. E. H. Weatherley, 1954).

J. Cradock, Life of J. W. Esq. (1773); H. W. Blackley, Life of J. W. (1917); R. Postgate, That Devil W. (1930); P. Quennell, Four Portraits (1945); G. Rudé, W. and Liberty (1962); C. C. Trench, Portrait of a Patriot (1962); I. R. Christie, W., Wyvill and Reform (1962); J. T. Boulton, The Language of Politics in the Age of W. and Burke (1963).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Wilkins, GEORGE (fl. c. 1607), English dramatist and prose-writer. Wilkins (of whom little is known) was associated with the King's Men (Shakespeare's* company). His hand has been seen in Timon of Athens and (more probably) in Pericles, whose story he recounted in prose.

The Painful Adventures of Pericles Prince of Tyre (prose; 1608; ed. K. Muir, 1953).—PLAYS: The Travailes of the Three English Brothers (with Day and Rowley; 1607); The Miseries of Inforced Marriage (1607).

J.B.B.

Wilkins, JOHN (*Fawsley, Northants 1614; †London 19 XI 1672), English Bishop, scientist and leading spirit in the formation of the Royal Society, Wilkins is perhaps the best example of that concern for plainness and precision in language which affected all the followers of Bacon*.

G.K.H.

The Discovery of a world in the Moon (1638); Ecclesiastes, or a discourse concerning the gift of preaching, as it falls under the rules of art (1646); An essay towards a real character and a philosophical language (1668).

B. J. Shapiro, J. W. 1614–72; An Intellectual Biography (1969).

G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wilkins, MARY ELEANOR: see Freeman, MARY ELEANOR.

Willems, JAN-FRANS (*Boechout 11 III 1793; †Ghent 24 VI 1846), Flemish philologist, poet and playwright, the most versatile and important Dutch philologist of his time, founder of the magazine Belgisch Museum (10 vols, 1837-46), a veritable mine of information about the civilization of the Flemish Middle Ages. His entire activity centred in the romantic ideology which he formulated and in his conviction of the cultural unity of the Netherlands. Leader of the renaissance in Flanders, he is called the 'Father of the Flemish Movement'.

VERSE: Aen de Belgen (1818); Maria van Brabant (1828).—CRITICISM: Verhandeling over de Nederduytsche tael- en letterkunde opzigtelyk de zuydelyke provintien der Nederlanden (2 vols, 1819, 1820-24); Mengelingen van historisch-vaderlandschen inhoud (1827-33); Oude Vlaemsche liederen (1848).—Brieven van, aan en over J.-F. W. (ed. A. Deprez, 5 vols, 1965- ).

M. Rooses, Levensschets van J.-F. W. (1874); A. de Poortere, J. van den Broeck and P. de Vroede, J.-F. W. (1944); J. Crick, J.-F. W. (1946); J. van Mierlo, J.-F. W. (1946); A. Deprez, J.-F. W. (1964). R.F.L.

William IX, DUKE OF AQUITAINE: see Guilhem IX.

William of Apulia, wrote, between 1090 and 1111, an epic poem in five books entitled Gesta Roberti Wiscardi on the Normans in Sicily, praising Robert Guiscard.

A. Pagano, Il poema Gesta Rob. Wisc. di Guglielmo Pugliese (1909) and Studi di letteratura latina medievale (1931). R.R.R.

William of Blois (fl. 1170), brother of the Archdeacon of Bath, was a Doctor of the University of Paris and a Benedictine monk. From 1167 to 1169, when he returned to Paris, he was Abbot of St Mary of Maniace near Messina. His only extant work is the Alda, a Latin 'comedy' modelled on Terence*, which he wrote before 1170.

La 'comédie' latine en France au XIIe siècle, I (ed. G. Cohen, 1931; with text of Alda and account of W.).

J. de Ghellinck, L'essor de la littérature latine au XIIe siècle (1946); G. Vinay, 'La commedia latina del secolo XII' in Studi medievali, II (1954); D. Bianchi, 'Per la commedia latina del secolo XII' in Aevum, XXIX (1955); F. J. E. Raby, A History of Secular Latin Poetry in the Middle Ages, II (2nd ed. 1957); E. Franceschini, Teatro latino medievale (1960). R.R.R.

William of Conches (*Conches 1080; †Paris 1145), studied at Chartres under Bernard and taught there all his life. He embodied the humanism and Platonism of that school. He wrote Philosophia mundi (also known as Philosophiae et astronomicae institutiones), an encyclopaedia of philosophy and science; Moralium dogma philosophorum (also known as De honesto et utili), an ethical treatise; Dragmaticon philosophiae, a philosophical dialogue.

Philosophia mundi (in Migne, Patrologia Latina, CLXXII, 1854); Moralium dogma philosophorum (ibid., CLXXI, 1854; ed. J. Holmberg, 1929); Dragmaticon (pub. Strasbourg, 1567); Glosae super Platonem (ed. E. Jeaneau, Paris, 1965).

J. R. Williams, 'The authorship of the M. d. p.' in Speculum, VI (1931); A. Wilmart, 'Préface de Guillaume de C. pour la dernière partie de son dialogue' in Analecta Regimensia (1933); M. Grabmann, 'Handschr. Forschungen und Mitt. zu W. von C.' in Sitzungsberichte der bayerischen Akad. der Wissenschaften (1935); P. Delhaye, 'L'enseignement de la philosophie morale au XIIe siècle' in Mediaeval Stud., XI (1949); T. Gregory, Anima mundi. La filosofia di Guglielmo di C. e la scuola de Chartres (Florence, 1955).

F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

William of Malmesbury (*c. 1090; †c. 1143), English monk, author of several Latin chronicles, principally the Gesta regum, the Gesta pontificum (both 1125), and the Historiae novellae (English history 1125-42). He was perhaps acquainted with Geoffrey* of Monmouth. R.W.B.

De gestis regum Anglorum and Historiae novellae (ed. W. Stubbs, 2 vols, 1887-89; repr. 1964); Historiae novellae (ed. and tr. K. R. Potter, 1955); Chronicle of the Kings of England (tr. J. A. Giles, 1847; repr. 1968); De gestis pontificum Anglorum (ed. N. E. S. A. Hamilton, 1870; repr. 1964). R.W.B. (Tor.)

William of Moerbeke: see Moerbeke, WILLEM VAN.

William of St Amour (†Paris c. 1273), Professor of theology in Paris University and leader in the attack by the seculars on the Mendicant Orders. His De periculis novissimorum temporum (1256) was condemned to be burned.

Ed. (Constance, 1632).

H. Denifle and E. Chatelain, Chartularium Universitatis Parisiensis, I (1889); M. Perrod, 'Étude sur la vie et sur les œuvres de Guillaume de Saint-A.' in Mémoires de la Soc. d'Émulation du Jura (1902). F.J.E.R.

William of St Thierry (*Liège c. 1085; †Signy 8 IX 1148), may have studied and met Abelard* at Laon. He joined the Order of St Benedict at Rheims, but came under the influence of St Bernard*. He was Abbot of St Thierry until he became a Cistercian monk at Signy (1135). William aided Bernard in his dispute with Abelard, but his real importance lies in his mystical and theological works, which are of great significance in the history of the devotional movement of the Middle Ages.

Works incl.: (a) Meditativae orationes; (b) a comm. on the Song of Songs; (c) De contemplando Deo; (d) De natura et dignitate amoris; (e) Oratio ad Deum; (f) Speculum fidei; (g) Enigma fidei; (h) Epistola (aurea) ad fratres de Monte-Dei (a treatise on the solitary life, also attrib. to Bernard of Clairvaux and others).—Eds with Fr. tr.: M. M. Davy (works; 5 vols, 1934–59); J. M. Déchanet ((h); 1956) and with M. Dumontier ((b); 1962); J. Hourlier ((c) and (e); 1959); (c) and (d) ed. with Ger. tr. W. Dittrich and H. Urs von Balthasar (1961).—Eng. trs: J. McCann and W. Shewring ((h); 1930); a religious of C.S.M.V. ((a); 1954); G. Webb and A. Walker ((f); 1959); (c), (d) and (e) Fr. tr. R. Thomas (1965).

J. M. Déchanet, Aux sources de la spiritualité de Guillaume de St-T. (1940) and Guillaume de St-T., l'homme et son œuvre (1942); M. M. Davy, Théologie et mystique de Guillaume de S. T. (1954).
F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

William of Shoreham, 14th-century author of devotional poems; probably vicar of Chart Sutton near Leeds, Kent.

Poems (ed. M. Konrath; pt 1, 1902; pt 2 not pub.).
R.W.B.

William of Tyre (*Syria c. 1130; †c. 1183), French historian, canon of Tyre, clerk of the Royal Chancery, Archdeacon of Nazareth (1174) and Archbishop of Tyre (1175). His chief works include a history of the Orient, of which only fragments survive, and a history of the Crusades from 1095 in 23 books of which the last is incomplete.

Guillelmi historia rerum in partibus transmarinis gestarum in Migne, Patrologia Latina, CCI (1855).—William II, Archbishop of Tyre, A History of Deeds Done Beyond the Sea (tr. and annot. E. A. Babcock and A. C. Krey, 1943).

F. Lundgreen, W. von T. und der Templerorden (1911); R. B. C. Huygens, 'Guillaume de Tyre étudiant' in Latomus, XXI (1962).
R.R.R.

Williams, CHARLES WALTER STANSBY (*20 IX 1886; ∞1917 Florence Conway; †Oxford 15 V 1945), English novelist, poet, critic and playwright. A student of religious poetry and mystical literature, a humanist, he pursued the esoteric, and the ethical problems of good and evil, both in his critical work and in his poetry and fiction. He wrote with vigour and sometimes an exalted sensationalism.

NOVELS: War in Heaven (1930); The Place of the Lion (1931); All Hallows' Eve (1945).—CRITICISM: Poetry at Present (1930); The English Poetic Mind (1932); Reason and Beauty in the Poetic Mind (1933); The Figure of Beatrice (1943); Arthurian Torso (ed. C. S. Lewis, 1948); The

Image of the City, and Other Essays (1958).—PLAYS: Three Plays (1931); Thomas Cranmer of Canterbury (1936).—Collected Plays (ed. J. Heath-Stubbs, 1963).—VERSE: The Silver Stair (1912); Poems of Conformity (1917); Taliessin Through Logres (1938); The Region of the Summer Stars (1944).

Essays Presented to C. W. (ed. C. S. Lewis, 1947); J. Heath-Stubbs, C. W. (1955); A. M. Hadfield, An Introduction to C. W. (1959); C. Moorman, Arthurian Triptych: Mythic Material in C. W., C. S. Lewis and T. S. Eliot (1960).
R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Williams, DAVID JOHN (*Llansawel, Carmarthenshire 26 VI 1885; ∞1925 Siân Evans; †ibid. 4 I 1970), Welsh short-story writer. A farmer's son, he worked as a miner for four years but later graduated in Wales and at Oxford and for 26 years taught at Fishguard County School. His earlier stories and character sketches present the well-loved rural characters of his childhood reminiscences; later stories show an increasing concern with 'the tragedy of modern Welsh life', a concern which also appears in his otherwise genial autobiography. His style throughout is redolent of the speech of a rural community.

Hen Wynnebaw (1934); Storiâu'r Tir Glas (1936); Storiâu'r Tir Coch (1941); Storiâu'r Tir Du (1949); Hen Dy Ffarm (1953); The Old Farmhouse, tr. W. Williams, 1961; Yn Chwech ar Hugain Oed (1959); Y Gaseg Ddu (ed. J. G. Griffiths, 1970).
Crefft y Stori Fer (ed. Saunders Lewis, 1949); D. J. W. (ed. J. G. Griffiths, 1965).
B.Re.

Williams, EDWARD: see Iolo Morganwg.

Williams, EMLYN (*Penyffordd, Flintshire 26 XI 1905; ∞1934 Molly O'Shann), Anglo-Welsh actor and playwright. His one-act play, Vigil, was acted by the Oxford University Dramatic Society in 1925. In 1927 he joined J. B. Fagan's company. His first real success as a playwright came with his adaptation of a French play by René Fauchois, The Late Christopher Bean (1933). He won much acclaim with Night Must Fall (1935), but subsequent plays have shown a greater seriousness of purpose. He is a sound craftsman and his works are always 'good theatre'. Well known as a stage and film actor, he has gained world-wide renown for his solo readings from Dickens*.

The Corn Is Green (1938); The Light of Heart (1940); The Wind of Heaven (1945); Trespass (1947).—George (autobiog.; 1961).

C.P. (M.W.T.)

Williams, ISAAC (*Aberystwyth 12 XII 1802; ∞1842 Caroline Champernowne; †Stinchcombe 1 V 1865), Welsh Tractarian poet, author of the alarming Tract 80, Reserve in Communicating Religious Knowledge, and of an autobiography reflecting the growth of the movement.

Tracts 80, 86, 87.—VERSE: The Cathedral (1838); Thoughts in Past Years (1838); The Christian Scholar (1849).—Devotional Commentary on the Gospel Narrative (8 vols, 1869–70); Autobiography (ed. Sir G. Prevost, 1892).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Williams, ROGER (*London 1603; ∞1629 Mary Barnard; †Providence, R.I. 1683), American clergyman. A Puritan free-thinker, he was banished from Massachusetts and founded Rhode Island. He held advanced democratic ideas and supported complete religious toleration.

The Bloody Tenent of Persecution, for Cause of Conscience, Discussed (1644); Experiments of Spiritual Life and Health (1652).—The Writings of R. W. (6 vols, 1866–74).

S. H. Brockunier, The Irrepressible Democrat: R. W. (1940); C. Covey, The Gentle Radical: A Biography of R. W. (1966); H. Chupack, R. W. (1969).
H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Williams, TENNESSEE, originally THOMAS LANIER WILLIAMS (*Columbus, Miss. 26 III 1911), American playwright, novelist and short-story writer. In his work violent sexuality and perversion are used to emphasize the vulnerability of his protagonists and to suggest that nightmare territory between illusion and reality which they must traverse. The Glass Menagerie (1945), his most delicate and witty play, defines Williams' obsessive themes and also illustrates his continual use of non-realistic techniques to probe a realistic situation. His very stage-technique embodies that dichotomy between illusion and reality which he analyses. The opposition between Stanley and Blanche in A Streetcar Named Desire (1947), the paradoxical title and setting of Camino Real (1953) illustrate the inherent tensions of Williams' dramatic world and suggest that characteristic mixture of realism and fantasy from which, at his best, he creates a poetic effect.

PLAYS: You Touched Me! (1945); Summer and Smoke (1948); The Rose Tattoo (1951); Cat on a Hot Tin Roof (1955); Baby Doll (1956); Orpheus Descending (1957); Suddenly Last Summer (1958); Sweet Bird of Youth (1959); Period of Adjustment (1960); The Night of the Iguana (1961); The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore (1964); The Eccentricities of a Nightingale, Slapstick Tragedy, Two Plays (1966); In the Bar of the Tokyo Hotel and Other Plays (1969).—FICTION: The Roman Spring of Mrs. Stone (1950); One Arm and Other Stories (1948); Hard Candy, A Book of Stories (1954).—POETRY: In the Winter of Cities (1956).

G. L. Falk, T. W. (1961); B. Nelson, T. W.: The Man and His Work (1961); N. M. Tischler,

T. W.: Rebellious Puritan (1961); E. D. Williams, Remember Me to Tom (1963); E. M. Jackson, The Broken World of T. W. (1965); G. Maxwell, T. W. and Friends (1965); G. Weales, T. W. (1965); The Playwrights Speak (ed. W. Wager, 1967).
G.A.K.

Williams, WALDO (*Haverfordwest 30 IX 1904; ∞Linda Llewellyn; †ibid. 20 V 1971), Welsh poet; a graduate of the University of Wales and by profession a schoolmaster and lecturer. His one, modest book (Dail Pren, 1956) contains some of the finest Welsh poems of the middle years of the century. Availing himself of both traditional and personal imagery, he celebrates the humble and enduring community that is founded on faith, hope and compassion; also moments of transcendence: of inspiration, harmony, and awareness of the presence of the Divine Exile.

B. G. Owens, 'Gweithiau W. W.' in Y Traethodydd, CXXVI (1971).
B.Re.

Williams, WILLIAM, known as WILLIAMS PANTYCELYN (*Llanfair-ar-y-bryn, Carmarthenshire 1717; ∞1749 Mary Francis; †Pantycelyn, Llanfair-ar-y-bryn 11 I 1791), Welsh hymn-writer. He was educated at the Llwyn-llwyd academy and after experiencing a religious conversion he became curate of Llanwrtyd and Llanddewi Abergwesyn. He forfeited his curacy but soon became one of the chief leaders of the Methodist revival in Wales, and for the remainder of his life he laboured as an itinerant preacher and spiritual counsellor, a farmer and an author. He wrote over 800 hymns. Among his other works are two very long poems, one of them treating of Christ's kingdom from everlasting to everlasting and the other tracing the spiritual development of one Christian soul. His prose works are mostly in dialogue form. Many of his hymns are outstanding in their passionate fervour and intense, lyrical quality, while his work throughout testifies to his penetrating analysis of spiritual experiences.

Aleluja (6 pts, 1744–47; complete eds 1749, 1758, 1775; ed. Llewelyn Jones, 1926); Hosanna i Fab Dafydd (3 vols, 1751–54); Golwg ar Deyrnas Crist (1756); Rhai Hymnau a Chaniadau (1759); Hosanna to the Son of David (1759); Pantheologia (?1762–79); Caniadau y rhai sydd ar y môr o wydr (1762); Ffarwel Weledig, Groesaw Anweledig Bethau (3 vols, 1763–69; coll. ed. Haleluia Drachefn, c. 1788); Bywyd a Marwolaeth Theomemphus (1764); Crocodil Afon yr Aipht (1767); Hanes Bywyd a Marwolaeth y Tri Wyr o Sodom a'r Aipht (1768); Gloria in Excelsis (2 vols, 1771–72; Eng. hymns under same title, 1772); Templum Experientiae apertum (1777); Ductor Nuptiarum (1777); Rhai Hymnau Newyddion (3 vols, 1781–87).—Gwaith Prydyddawl (ed. J. Williams, 1811–13); Reliquiae Poeticae (1830); Holl Weithiau, Prydyddawl a Rhyddeithol (ed.

J. R. Kilsby Jones, 1867); Gweithiau Williams Pant-y-Celyn (ed. N. Cynhafal Jones, 2 vols, 1887-91).

J. H. Davies, Rhestr o Lyfrau gan y Parch. W. W. (1918); W. J. Gruffydd, 'Theomemphus' in Y Llenor, I (1922); Saunders Lewis, W. Pantycelyn (1927); J. G. Moelwyn Hughes, Mr Saunders Lewis a W. Pantycelyn (1928); Gomer M. Roberts, Y Pêr Ganiedydd (2 vols, 1949-58); J. Gwilym Jones, W. W. Pantycelyn (1969). B.Re.

Williams, WILLIAM CARLOS (*Rutherford, N.J. 17 IX 1883; ∞1912 Florence Herman; †4 III 1963), American poet, novelist and physician. His early work shows the influence of Pound* and IMAGISM before he developed his Objectivist theory and created his epic Paterson (1946-58). He railed against Eliot* for giving 'the poem back to the academics' and his poetry shows a passionate attempt to discover the principle of art in the local conditions of his own society and country. There is a rugged vigour and illuminating vision in the sharpness of Williams' insights as he develops his simple dictum 'no ideas but in things' into the complex, empathic perspective of his verse.

VERSE: Poems (1909); The Tempers (1913); Kora in Hell: Improvisations (1920); Sour Grapes (1921); Spring and All (1923); The Cod Head (1932); Collected Poems (1921-31) (1934); An Early Martyr and Other Poems (1935); Adam and Eve and The City (1936); The Complete Collected Poems of W. C. W. 1906-1938 (1938); The Broken Span (1941); The Wedge (1944); The Clouds (1948); The Collected Later Poems (1950); The Collected Earlier Poems (1951); The Desert Music and Other Poems (1954); Journey to Love (1955); Pictures From Breughel and Other Poems (1962).—PROSE: In the American Grain (1925); A Voyage to Paganry (1928); The Knife of the Times and Other Stories (1932); White Mule (1937); The Autobiography of W. C. W. (1951).—Imaginations (ed. W. Schott, 1969).

E. Pound, Polite Essays (1937); Y. Winters, Primitivism and Decadence in Contemporary Poetry (1937); V. Koch, W. C. W. (1950); B. Deutsch, Poetry in Our Time (1952); R. P. Blackmur, Language as Gesture (1954) and Form and Value in Modern Poetry (1957); R. Jarrell, Poetry and the Age (1955); K. Shapiro, In Defense of Ignorance (1960); R. Lowell, 'W. C. W.' in Hudson Rev., XIV (1961-62); 'A gathering for W. C. W.' in Massachusetts Rev., III (1962); J. M. Brinnin, W. C. W. (1963); S. Paul, The Music of Survival: A Biography of a Poem by W. C. W. (1968); M. Weaver, W. C. W. (1970); J. Conarroe, W. C. W.'s Paterson: Language and Landscape (1970). G.A.K.

Williamson, HENRY (*Bedfordshire 1 XII 1895), English novelist and nature writer. Despite the success of his cycles of novels, he is best known for his studies of animal life, Tarka the Otter (1927) and Salar the Salmon (1935). The second and longer of his sequences, A Chronicle of Ancient Sunlight (15 vols, 1951-69), is the fictional autobiography of Phillip Maddison whose experiences closely parallel Williamson's own; perhaps the best are the earliest volumes: The Dark Lantern (1951); Donkey Boy (1952); Young Phillip Maddison (1953); the final volume is The Gale of the World (1969).

The Flax of Dream (The Beautiful Years, 1921; Dandelion Days, 1922; The Dream of Fair Women, 1924; The Pathway, 1928); The Gold Falcon (1933).—Genius of Friendship: 'T. E. Lawrence' (1941).

H. F. West, The Dreamer of Devon (1932).

W.R.A.

Williams Pantycelyn: see Williams, WILLIAM.

Willis, NATHANIEL PARKER (*Portland, Me. 20 I 1806; ∞1835 Mary Stace, ∞1846 Cornelia Grinnell; †Idlewild, N.Y. 20 I 1867), American poet, playwright and editor. His prose consists mainly of travel letters and personal reminiscence; his plays made use of foreign settings. His sentimental poetry accounts for much of his contemporary fame.

VERSE: Fugitive Poetry (1829); Poems of Passion (1843).—PLAYS: Bianca Visconti (1839); Tortes (1839).—Pencilings by the Way (prose; 1835).—The Complete Works of N. P. W. (13 vols, 1849-59).

H. A. Beers, N. P. W. (1885); R. E. Spiller, The American in England (1926); C. P. Auser, N. P. W. (1969). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Willoby, HENRY (fl. 1594), name or pseud. of an English writer, the author of Willobie his Avis (1594), a poem, perhaps satirical, which has been thought to refer to Shakespeare* and to cast light on the 'mystery' of his Sonnets. G.K.H.

Willobie his Avis (ed. G. B. Harrison, 1926); Shakespeare's Sonnets, II (ed. H. E. Rollins, 1944).

B. N. De Luna, The Queen Declined: an Interpretation of W. his Avis (1970). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wilmot, JOHN: see Rochester, JOHN WILMOT, EARL OF.

Wilna, ELIJAH (*Wilna 1720; †ibid. 9 X 1797), Polish Hebrew religious writer. The greatest Talmudic scholar of his age, he broke new ground by returning to the neglected sources of Jewish religion, the Bible and the pre-Talmudic legal Midrash works. He insisted, a revolutionary act in his time, on the study of Hebrew grammar and a modicum of natural science and mathematics as a means of understanding the Law. He wrote commentaries on many earlier religious works. Among his unpublished works are writings on astronomy and the calendar. He fought Hasidism and is one of the forerunners of the Haskalah ('enlightenment') movement.

Tzurat ha-Aretz (geography; 1802); Dikduk Eliyahu (grammar; 1833); Ayil Meshullash (mathematics; 1833); 'Alim li-terufah (letters to his family; 1836).

S. Schechter, Studies in Judaism, I (1896); J. S. Raisin, The Haskalah Movement in Russia (1913); L. Ginzberg, Rabbi E. W. (1920); J. I. Dienstag, E. Gaon, an Annotated Bibliography (1949). C.R.

Wilson, ANGUS (*S. Africa 11 VIII 1913), English novelist and short-story writer, and one of the more important authors in the English tradition, delights with the brilliance and the sharpness of his satire. He made his appearance as a short-story writer—The Wrong Set (1949), Such Darling Dodos (1950)—and his first novels are in a sense elaborations and extensions of this form. His work has developed continuously, however. In the revealing lecture, The Wild Garden (1963), he discusses his technique as a novelist.

Anglo-Saxon Attitudes (1956); The Middle Age of Mrs Eliot (1958); The Old Men at the Zoo (1961); Late Call (1964); No Laughing Matter (1967).—CRITICISM: Émile Zola (1952); The World of Charles Dickens (1970).—The Mulberry Bush (play; 1956).

J. L. Halio, A. W. (1964).

W.R.A.

Wilson, ARTHUR (*Yarmouth ?1595; ∞?XI 1624 Susan Spitty, ∞1630?; †Felsted X 1652), English historian and dramatist, who lived adventurously in the service of Essex, later entering Trinity College, Oxford (1631). A bad historian but good prose-writer, his plays were successful.

PLAYS: The Inconstant Lady (ed. P. Bliss, 1814); The Swisser (ed. A. Feuillerat, 1904); The Corporal (MS fragment).—PROSE: The History of Great Britain (1653; repr. White Kennett, Complete History, II, 1706); Observations of God's Providence, in the Tract of My Life (ed. P. Bliss, 1814).

B. M. Wagner, 'MS. plays of the 17th century in Times Lit. Supp. (4 Oct. 1934). B.L.J.

Wilson, COLIN (*Leicester, 26 VI 1931), English critic, who made a name for himself by his precocious volume of philosophic and literary essays, The Outsider (1956). He published a volume of autobiography, Voyage to a Beginning, in 1969. Ritual in the Dark (1960) is a novel.

Beyond the Outsider (1965); Introduction to the New Existentialism (1966); Bernard Shaw (1969); Poetry and Mysticism (1970).—Strindberg (play; 1970).

S. R. Campion, The World of C. W. (1962).

W.R.A.

Wilson, EDMUND (*Red Bank, N.J. 8 V 1895; ∞1923 Mary Blair, ∞1930 Margaret Canby, ∞1938 Mary McCarthy*, ∞1946 Elena Thornton; †Talcottville, N.Y. 12 VI 1972), American critic and novelist. Associated with The New Republic and from 1944 The New Yorker, he did much to elucidate contemporary writing. Axel's Castle (1931) is a study of the Symbolist movement; To the Finland Station (1940) traces European revolutionary traditions from Michelet* to Lenin*. Wilson was a prolific critic with a wide range of interests and unrelaxing verve.

FICTION: I Thought of Daisy (1929); This Room and This Gin and These Sandwiches (plays; 1937); Memoirs of Hecate County (1946).—NON-FICTION: The American Jitters (1932); Travels in Two Democracies (1936); The Triple Thinkers (1938); The Wound and the Bow (1941); Note-Books of Night (1942); Europe Without Baedeker (1947); Classics and Commercials: A Literary Chronicle of the Forties (1950); The Shores of Light (1952); The Scrolls From the Dead Sea (1955); Patriotic Gore (1962); The Cold War and the Income Tax (1963).

C. P. Frank, E. W. (1970).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Wilson, ETHEL DAVIES, née BRYANT (*Elizabeth, South Africa 1890; ∞1920 Wallace Wilson), Canadian novelist and story writer whose work, characterized by polished style and ironic wit, focuses on the struggle of sensitive women to attain fulfilment and happiness.

Hetty Dorval (1947); Innocent Traveller (1949); Equations of Love (1952); Swamp Angel (1954); Love and Salt Water (1956); Mrs Golightly and Other Stories (1961).

H. W. Sonthoff, 'The novels of E. W.' in Canad. Lit., XXVI (1965). R.Su.

Wilson, JOHN (*London 1626; †ibid. 1696), English dramatist. Both in scholarly methods and satirical outlook Wilson's drama follows the model of Ben Jonson*, the satire being aimed from an orthodox Royalist standpoint. His tragedy Andronicus Commenius (1664) contains reminiscences of Shakespeare's* Richard III.

The Cheats (1664; ed. M. C. Nahm, 1935); The Projectors (1665); Erasmus' Moriae Encomium: or, The Praise of Folly (tr.; 1668).

James Sutherland, English Literature of the Late 17th Century (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wilson, JOHN: see North, CHRISTOPHER.

Wilson, ROBERT (†1600), English actor and dramatist, who was with Leicester's company when it formed (1574). Outstanding as a player, he is mentioned by Harvey*, Meres* and Lodge*. Wilson's Moralities are loose in construction, mixing rhyme, blank verse, doggerel and prose.

The Three Ladies of London (1584; 1592 variant text; Tudor Facs. Texts, 1911); The Three Lords and The Three Ladies of London (1590; Tudor Facs. Texts, 1911; ed. A. C. Wood, Malone Soc., 1914).

H. S. D. Mithal, 'The two-W.s controversy' in Notes and Queries, VI (1959).

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Wilson, THOMAS (*c. 1525; ∞Jane Empson, ∞Agnes Winter; †London 16 VI 1581), English politician, diplomat and scholar who went from Eton to King's College, Cambridge (1541), where he met Sir John Cheke*. Wilson fled abroad on Northumberland's fall (1555) and returned in 1560, to be entrusted with government service, becoming Secretary of State in 1579. He proved the worth of English as a language for scholars by writing a text-book of logic, The Rule of Reason, and of composition, The Art of Rhetoric.

The Rule of Reason (1551); The Arte of Rhetorique (1553; 1560 etc.; ed. G. H. Mair, 1909, from 1560 ed.; ed. R. H. Bowers, 1962); A Discourse upon Usury (1572; ed. R. H. Tawney, 1925, repr. 1962).

A. J. Schmidt, 'T. W., Tudor scholar-statesman' in Huntington Libr. Quart., XX (1957); R. H. Wagner, 'T. W.'s Arte of Rhetorique' in Speech Monographs, XXVII (1960).

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Wimpfeling, or Wimpfeling, JAKOB (*Schlettstadt 25 VII 1450; †ibid. 17 XI 1528), German pedagogue. One of the early, more conservative humanists, Wimpfeling, a devoted Roman Catholic, wrote a Terentian comedy, Stylpho, in Latin prose (the first to be performed in Germany), the first history of Germany, Epitome rerum Germanicarum (1505), Germania (1501; tr. and ed. E. Martin, 1885; a patriotic treatise against French claims on Alsace), poems and theological works.

Werke (3 vols, 1965).—Stylpho (1480 and 1494; 1480 version ed. H. Holstein, 1892; 1494 version ed. E. Martin, 1884); Pädagogische Schriften (ed. H. Freundgen, 1892).

J. Knepper, J. W. (1902); E. von Borries, W. und Murner (1926); R. Newald, Elsässische Charakterköpfe (1943).

D.G.D.

Wimsatt, WILLIAM KURTZ (*Washington, D.C. 17 XI 1907), American critic. Educated at Georgetown (M.A. 1927) and Yale (Ph.D. 1937). One of the best examiners of poetic texture in modern criticism, he attacked the Chicago critics for their concern with non-literary material in what he called their 'intentionalist fallacy'.

The Prose Style of Samuel Johnson (1941); The Verbal Icon (1951); Hateful Contraries (1965).
D.E.Mo.

Winchilsea, COUNTESS OF: see Finch, ANNE.

Winckelmann, JOHANN JOACHIM (*Stendal 9 XII 1717; †Trieste 8 VI 1768), German archaeologist. Winckelmann, who early displayed a remarkable passion for the classics, became a librarian in Dresden and embraced Roman Catholicism in order to facilitate his archaeological plans in Italy. As Cardinal Albani's librarian he studied classical art and published a monumental history of the art of antiquity. His short, influential Gedanken summarize his view of Greek art as serene and Apolline. He was the founder of the German classical revival, which accepted his views and values.

Gedanken über die Nachahmung der griechischen Werke (1755; Reflections . . ., tr. H. Fuseli, 1765); Geschichte der Kunst des Altertums (1764); Monumenti antichi inediti (1767).—Werke (8 vols, 1808–20; 13 vols, 1825–29); Briefe (ed. W. Rehm, 1952 ff.).

J. W. Goethe, W. und sein Jahrhundert (1805); K. Justi, W. und seine Zeitgenossen (3 vols, 1866–72; 1956); B. Vallentin, W. (1931); E. M. Butler, The Tyranny of Greece Over Germany (1935); W. Waetzoldt, W. (1942); W. Rehm, Griechentum und Goethezeit (1952); H. Koch, W. (1957); W. Bosshard, W. (1960).
H.B.G.

Winckler, WILLIBALD (*Magdeburg 1 VII 1838; †Bernburg 28 VII 1871), German-American novelist.

Vier Schreckenstage in New-York (1864); Lieder eines Wandervogels (1869); Die deutschen Kleinstädter in Amerika (1871).

L. Fränkel in Allgemeine deutsche Biographie, XLIII (1898).
E.R.

Winkler, EUGEN GOTTLÖB (*Zürich 1 V 1912; †Munich 28 X 1936), German poet, essayist and prose writer. Son of an engineer, he spent his childhood in Wangen near Stuttgart. At 15 he lost his father, and became estranged from his home. Influenced by Van Gogh, he began to paint only to discover that his true bent lay in writing. Travels to Italy were followed by the study of Romance languages and the history of art. Despite his declared contempt for Universities as utterly intimidating and frustrating institutions, he came, at the University of Munich, under the spell of the great teacher and scholar Karl Vossler and learnt from him a profound respect for the art of poetry and the imaginative view of life. After completing his academic studies with a Ph.D. dissertation on 'Modern Stage Production of the French Classics', his calling to be an artist asserted itself absolutely but with it a growing incapacity to fulfill the most ordinary daily tasks. With merciless objectivity he analysed the example of his own situation. Twice in one year he became politically suspect to Nazi officialdom; he decided to commit suicide.

As a symbolic figure out of harmony with his terror-stricken age, he passed through every hell of loneliness and despair, but this was countered by his passionate quest for self-realization, an austere and consuming obsession in which it is difficult to separate the critic from the creative writer. A keen critical intellect together with the strictest intellectual discipline made him sceptical of all schemes and dogmas and, like Paul Valéry*, whose ardent disciple he was, he preferred to elaborate some special point which engaged his curiosity. He was at his best when he wrote about some author, e.g. Hölderlin*, Platen*, Stefan George*, Ernst Jünger*, T. E. Lawrence*, who contributed to the growth of his own mind; then his prose of sustained brilliance belied the turmoil underneath.

Gesammelte Werke (ed. W. Warnach, 2 vols, 1937); Dichtungen, Gestalten und Probleme, Nachlass (ed. W. Warnach, H. Rinn and J. Heitzmann, 1956).—Briefe, 1932–36 (ed. W. Warnach, 1949). K.W.W.

Winkler Prins, ANTHONY (*Voorst 31 I 1817; ∞1847 Hendrika R. Klijnsma; †Voorburg 4 I 1908), Dutch poet, Mennonite parson and popular-knowledge compiler; famous for his parodies, co-founder of Braga, Tijdschrift op Rijn (1842–44).

VERSE: De droom (1837); Hansje (1840); De vlinder (3 vols, 1844–48).—Geïllustreerde encyclopaedie (16 vols, 1869–82).

J. Dyserinck in Levensber. Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (with biblio; 1908–09).

J.W.W.

Winsbecke, DER, 'Lord of Windsbach' nr Wolfram's* Eschenbach (fl. c. 1210–20), German author and title of his book: an old man's advice to his son on religion, marriage, chivalry etc. By comparison with Freidank's* Bescheidenheit (which occasionally draws on it) narrowly aristocratic, derived largely from the teaching of Gurnemanz and Trevrizent in Wolfram's Parzival. The last 20 (of 80) stanzas are either a palinode or a monkish addition. An imitation (Winsbeckin) and a parody are known.

Modernized J. Paul (1902); Kleinere mittelhochdt. Lehrgedichte (ed. A. Leitzmann and I. Reiffenstein, 1962).—Sundry arts in Zschr. für dt. Alt., LXVI–LXIX (1929–32). F.P.P.

Winter, NICOLAAS SIMON VAN (*Amsterdam 25 XII 1718; ∞1744 Johanna Muhl, ∞1768 Lucretia W. van Merken*; †Leiden 19 IV 1795), Dutch poet (traditional poetry, translations and psalms), merchant and playwright.

VERSE: Kain en Habel (1743); De Amstelstroom (1755); De jaargetijden (after Thompson's Seasons; 1769); Gedichten en Fabelen (1792).—Tooneel-poëzij (plays, with L. W. van Merken; 2 vols, 1774–78). J.W.W.

Winter, ZIKMUND (*Prague 27 XII 1846; †Reichenhall 12 VI 1912), Czech novelist and historian. A history teacher at Pardubice, Rakovník and finally (1884–1908) Prague, Winter devoted his leisure to the study of documents in local archives. The fruits of his labours were a series of valuable monographs on Czech cultural history, more particularly of the 16th and 17th centuries. His reputation is, however, more securely based on the series of historical novels and stories that were a by-product of his studies. Supreme among these is Mistr Kampanus (1909), a fine evocation of the early 17th century in Bohemia, with the extinction of Czech independence at the Battle of the White Mountain as its principal theme.

Sebrané spisy (16 vols, 1911–25); Dílo Z. Wintra (sel. works; ed. M. Novotný, 8 vols, 1936–38).—A. Novák, 'Z. W.—umělec' in Duch a národ (1936). R.A.

Winther, RASMUS VILLADS CHRISTIAN FERDINAND (*Fensmark, nr Næstved 29 VII 1796; ∞1848 Julia Constantia Werlin, née Lütthans; †Paris 30 XII 1876), Danish poet. He sang the praises of his native Zealand. His worship of woman finds expression in his naive Træsnit ('Woodcuts'; wr. 1841–48), in his versified tales and in the collection of poems written to his future wife, (Til Een, 'To Someone', but by his enemies maliciously nicknamed 'To Everyone'). In his best poems, such as En Sommernat, and Flyv, Flyv, fine descriptive writing conveys an idea of abstract love.

Winther's greatest work is Hjortens Flugt ('The Flight of the Stag') a long epic poem depicting Zealand in the Middle Ages, Folmer the Singer being Winther himself. The constantly changing scene and different characters make it possible for Winther to treat his two favourite subjects in a variety of ways. Winther was influenced by both Byron* and Heine*; his instrument has fewer strings, but many of his love poems are comparable to Heine's best.

VERSE: Digte (1828); Nogle Digte (1835); Sang og Sagn (1839); Haandtegninger (1840); Digtninger (1843); Haandtegninger, gamle og nye (1846); Lyriske Digte (1848); Nye Digte (1851); Nye Digtninger (1852); Hjortens Flugt (1855); Sang og Sagn (1858); Brogede Blade (1865); En Samling Vers (1872); Efterladte Digte (1879).—Samlede Digtninger (11 vols, 1860–72).—PROSE: Fire Noveller (1843); En Morskabs- bog for Børn (1849); Tre Fortællinger (1851); I Naadensaaret (1874); Et Vendepunkt (1876).—Poetiske Skrifter (ed. O. Friis, 3 vols, 1927–29); Breve fra og til W. (1880).

N. Bøgh, C. W. (3 vols, 1893–1901); P. Levin, C. W. (1896); A. Wikström, W. och Carl Snoilsky (1903); O. Friis, Hjortens Flugt (1961). E.B.

Winthrop, JOHN (*Edwardstone, Eng. 12 I 1588; ∞1605 Mary Forth, ∞1615 Thomasine Clopton, ∞1618 Margaret Tyndal, ∞1647 Mrs Martha Coytmore; †Boston, Mass. 26 III 1649), American statesman and diarist. He led a movement of Puritans to emigrate from England; his journal tells the early history of Massachusetts Bay.

The History of New England (1790); The History of New England from 1630 to 1649 (ed. J. Savage, 2 vols, 1825–26); Some Old Puritan Love-Letters (1893).

R. C. Winthrop, Life and Letters of J. W. (2 vols, 1864–67); E. S. Morgan, The Puritan Dilemma: The Story of J. W. (1958).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Winthrop, THEODORE (*New Haven, Conn. 28 IX 1828; †Washington, D.C. 10 VI 1861), American novelist. His first three novels had a tremendous success. An adventurer who travelled extensively, he met an early death in the Civil War.

A Companion to the Heart of the Andes (1859); Cecil Dreeme (1861); John Brent (1862); Edwin Brothertaft (1862).

L. W. Johnson, The Life and Poems of T. W. (1884); E. Colby, T. W. (1965). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Wireker: see Nigel de Longchamps.

Wirnt von Grafenberg (fl. 1202–05), Franconian knight, author of Wigalois, an Arthurian romance of mixed French ancestry with strong fairy-tale elements. Wirnt was stylistically in the wake of Hartmann*, until (when half-way through the poem) he became acquainted with Wolfram's* Parzival. The story remained popular down to 18th-century CHAPBOOKS. Konrad* von Würzburg unwarrantably makes Wirnt the hero of his tale Der Welt Lohn.

Ed. J. M. N. Kapteyn (2 vols, 1926).—H. de Boor, Die dt. Lit. im späten MA., I (1962).

F.P.P.

Wirsén, CARL DAVID AF (*Bällsta 9 XII 1842; †Stockholm 15 VI 1912), Swedish poet and critic. Wirsén's often not very original lyrical poetry covered a wide field, including medieval pastiche and occasional verse. In his more memorable capacity of critic, his rigid conservatism vis-à-vis new trends dictated literary taste in his own time, though most of his tenets have been refuted by subsequent critics.

Dikter (1878); Nya dikter (1880); Sånger och bilder (1884); Toner och sägner (1893); Andliga sånger (1898); Visor, romanser och ballader (1899).

F. Böök, Essayer och kritiker (1911–12); V. von Heidenstam, Minne av C. D. af W. (1914). C.H.K.

Wirtemberska, MARIA ANNA, PRINCESS, née PRINCESS CZARTORYSKA (*15 III 1768; †Paris 21 X 1854), Polish novelist. After divorcing her husband in 1792 she was a supervisor of girls' schools. She initiated the sentimental-psychological novel in Poland with great success and started the first attempts at popular writing.

Malwina czyli domysłność serca (2 vols, 1816; La Polonaise ou l'instinct du cœur, tr. A. Nakwaska, 2 vols, 1822; ed. K. Wojciechowski, 1920); Powieści wiejskie (1818).

L. Dębicki, 'Dwie autorki' in Puławy, I, IV (1887); J. Kleiner, 'Powieść M. z Czartoryskich księżnej W.' in Studia z zakresu literatury i filozofii (1925). S.S. (P.H.)

Wise, THOMAS JAMES: see FORGERIES, LITERARY.

Wiselius, SAMUEL IPERUSZON (*Amsterdam 4 II 1769; ∞1791 Suzanna le Poole; †ibid. 15 V 1845), Dutch playwright and poet, jurist and merchant; secretary to the Royal Institute (1817). He advocated a form of tragedy after the Greek and French example.

De roem (1814); Mengel- en tooneelpoëzij (5 vols, 1818–21); Over de tooneelspeelkunst (1826); Nieuwe dichtbundel (1833).

P. van Limburg Brouwer, Het leven van Mr S. I. W. (1846); H. J. Schimmel in De Gids XVIII (1855); W. Kloos in De Nieuwe Gids, XXIV (1909). J.W.W.

Wiseman, ADELE (*Winnipeg, Manitoba 1928), Canadian writer and Professor of English whose powerful novel about Jewish immigrants from the Ukraine, The Sacrifice, won the Governor-General's award for fiction in 1956.

S. G. Mullins, 'Traditional symbolism in A. W.'s The Sacrifice' in Culture, XIX (1958). R.Su.

Wister, OWEN (*Philadelphia 14 VII 1860; ∞1898 Mary Channing Wister; †Crowfield, R.I. 21 VII 1938), American novelist. The Virginian (1902), a tale of Wyoming cowboy life, gave the 'Western' literary standing by virtue of its tough realism. In other respects his prolific output was more conventional.

The Dragon of Wantly (1892); Lady Baltimore (1906); When West Was West (1928); Theodore Roosevelt: The Story of A Friendship (1930). D.S.R.W.

Wit, ANNA AUGUSTA HENRIETTE DE (*Siboga, Sumatra 26 X 1864; †Baarn 10 II 1939), Dutch author and critic. In Indonesia until 1872, she studied in London and Cambridge, then in Indonesia, Germany and the Netherlands. She wrote novels and short stories in brilliant graphic prose, revealing a wise but austere vision of life, expressive of man and nature both in Indonesia and Europe.

SKETCHES: Facts and fancies about Java (1896); Verborgen bronnen (1898); Orpheus in de dessa (1902); De wake bij de brug (1907); Gods goochelaartjes (1932).—NOVELS: De godin die wacht (1903); Het dure moederschap (1907); De avonturen van een muzikant (1927).

G. Brom, Java in onze kunst (1931); A. Romein-Verschoor, Vrouwenspiegel (1936); M. H. van der Zeyde in Bundel opstellen aangeboden aan Prof. Dr C. G. N. de Vooy (1940). J.W.W.

Wither, GEORGE (*Bentworth, nr Alton 11 VI 1588; ∞Elizabeth Emerson or Emerton; †London 2 V 1667), English poet who wrote satirical, pastoral and didactic poems and a large body of religious and journalistic prose and verse. An outspoken champion of liberty, a moderate Anglican, opposed to intolerance, Wither left Oxford without a degree (1606) and settled in London to study law (Lincoln's Inn 1615). A friend of W. Browne* and Drayton*, he wrote partly in their tradition. An officer in the Parliamentary army, he both advocated peace (1647) and supported the Commonwealth later. He was imprisoned in 1660, but continued writing.

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Works (Spenser Soc., 20 vols, 1871–82).—Poems (ed. H. Morley, 1891; ed. F. Sidgwick, 2 vols, 1902; repr. 1968, with biblio.).

C. H. Firth, 'G. W.' in Rev. Eng. Stud. (1926); A. Pritchard, 'G. W.: the poet as prophet' in Stud. in Philol., LIX (1962); N. E. Carlson, 'W. and the Stationers' in Stud. in Biblio., XIX (1966); C. S. Hensley, The Later Career of G. W. (1969). J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Withuys, CAREL GODFRIED (*Amsterdam 2 V 1794; †The Hague 14 II 1865), Dutch poet, director of the government printing-office and writer of bombastic verse.

Gedichten (1831); Poëzij en proza (1856).

C. Busken Huet, Literarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, VII (1881–88); J. J. F. Wap in Levensber. Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (1865).

J.W.W.

Witkiewicz, STANISŁAW (*Poszawsze 20 V 1851; †Laurana 5 IX 1915), Polish painter, literary critic and writer. After returning with his parents from Siberia he studied art in St Petersburg and Munich. An early Symbolist in Polish prose, he employed motifs connected with the Tatra mountains and often wrote in the dialect of this region.

TREATISES: Mickiewicz jako kolorysta (1885); Sztuka i krytyka u nas (1891).—VARIOUS: Na przełęczu (1891); Z Tatry (1907); Myśli (1923).

S. Benedyktowicz, S. W. jako krytyk . . . (1902); K. Kosiński, W. i Tatry (1927), Bibliografia S. W. (1927) and S. W. (1928). S.S. (P.H.)

Witkiewicz, STANISŁAW IGNACY (*Cracow 24 II 1885; †18 IX 1939), Polish painter, playwright, novelist and theatre reformer. Son of Stanisław Witkiewicz*, he began with naturalism in painting. In his dramas (about 30) there is great dynamism, with a deformation of reality for the sake of pure form in accordance with his theory of art. His novels, while full of lyricism, give pictures of sexual emotion bordering on perversion.

PLAYS: Tumor Mózgowicz (1920); Pragmatyści (1922); Mątwą (1923); Bzik tropikalny (1927); Sonata Belzebuba (1928).—NOVELS: Pożegnanie jesieni (1927); Nienasyconie (2 vols, 1930).—VARIOUS: Szkice estetyczne (1922); Teatr (1923); Narkotyki (1932); Dramaty (1962).

T. Żeleński [Boy], 'Le théâtre de S. J. W.' in Pologne Littéraire, XVIII (1928); W. Nitecki, 'W. i jego teoria teatru' in Zycie liter., LVI (1928). S.S. (P.H.)

Witsen Geysbeek, PIETER GERARDUS (*Amsterdam 31 XII 1774; †ibid. 13 XI 1883), Dutch epigrammist, compiler, playwright, translator and book-seller.

VERSE: De hedendaagsche Olympus (1796); Puntidichten (1809); Nieuwe puntidichten (1818); Gedichten (1828).—Verhandeling over het puntidicht (1810); Biografisch, anthologisch en critisch woordenboek der Nederduytsche dichters (6 vols, 1821–27); Apollineum (3 vols, 1823–26); Nederduytsch rijmwoordenboek (1829). J.W.W.

Witte, JACOB EDUARD DE, from 1795 DE WITTE VAN HAEMSTEDE (~'s Hertogenbosch 2 IV 1763; ∞1790 Maria van Zuylekom; †The Hague 14 VI 1853), Dutch adventurer, sentimental poet and journalist, editor of the satirical weekly, De politieke Blixem (1797–98); convicted of high treason as a petty officer, he was from 1782 to 1795 a prisoner in the Hague Gevangenpoort which he made into a literary centre.

VERSE: Dicht-offer aan Themire (1788); Gedachten bij de dood van Washington (1800); Tafereel voor denkenden (1828).—Cephalide (novel; 1787); Constantia de St Denis (play; 1787).

S. Kluit in Nederl. Spectator (1867); Th. Jorissen in Nederland (1878); J. ten Brink in Haagsche Stemmen (1887). J.W.W.

Wittenweiler, HEINRICH (fl. c. 1400), Swiss master of the grotesque. Ostensibly to make his teaching palatable he offers it in the framework of a grossly vulgar and hilarious rustic epic, Der Ring. A SCHWANK (Metzen Hochzeit) and various Neidhart* motifs are recognizable in the story; for the multifarious didacticism—grouped round three themes (chivalry and love, morality and religion, military science exemplified in village warfare)—literary antecedents are known. In the unique MS the serious and comic sections are (unconvincingly) distinguished by red and green marginal lines.

E. Wiessner, H. W.'s Ring (2 vols, Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, 1931–36) and Der Bauernhochzeitschwank (1956); W.'s Ring (tr. G. Fenwick Jones, Chapel Hill, 1956). F.P.P.

Witte wrongel, PETRUS (*Middelburg 1609; †Amsterdam 1662), Dutch theologian and satirist, attacked the stage, especially Vondel* and his Lucifer. He succeeded in getting all religious matter excised from plays.

Christelicke Huyshoudinghe (1655); Oeconomia Christiana (1661).

J. te Winkel, 'Vondel als treurspeldichter' in Bladzijden uit de geschiedenis der Nederl. Letterkunde (1882). A.M.B.W.

Wivallius, LARS (*Vivalla, Närke 1605; †Stockholm 6 IV 1669), Swedish poet. Wivallius is regarded as Sweden's first modern lyric poet by virtue of his originality and feeling for nature. Most of his verse was reputedly written during imprisonment for marrying under a false name. It was largely polemic, but also included the famous ode to liberty, Ack libertas du ädle ting, and the very beautiful Klagevisa över denna torra och kalla vår. Wivallius was also the first to write Swedish poetry in alexandrines (Svea rikets ringmur, 1637). C.H.K.

H. Schück, En äfventyrare (1918; repr. in Svenska bilder, III, 1940); S. Ek, L. W.'s visdiktning (1930). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Wivel, OLE (*Copenhagen 29 IX 1921; ∞1944 Ann Grethe Helsteen), Danish poet. Profoundly influenced by Martin A. Hansen*, with whom he co-operated in the Heretica Movement, he holds a central position among the modernist poets of Denmark.

VERSE: I Fiskens Tegn (1948); Jævndøgnselegier (1949); Månen (1952); Jævndøgn. Digte 1943–55 (1956); Nike (1958); Templet for Kybele (1961); Gravskrifter (1970); Udvalgte Digte (1971).—ESSAYS: Den skjulte Gud (1952); Poesi og Eksistens (1953); Kunsten og Krigen (1965); Martin A. Hansen (2 vols, 1967–69); Poesi og Protest (1971). E.B.

Wodehouse, PELHAM GRENVILLE (*Guildford 15 X 1881; ∞1914 Ethel Rowley), English novelist and playwright. A voluminous writer of broadly humorous stories which please by their slow gravity and inconsequence, and good-natured display of common failings and absurdities. He has written plays, and lyrics for musical comedies.

NOVELS: Love Among the Chickens (1906); Psmith in the City (1910); Uneasy Money (1917); Piccadilly Jim (1918); A Damsel in Distress (1919); The Indiscretions of Archie (1921); The Clicking of Cuthbert (1922); The Inimitable Jeeves (1924) and other Jeeves stories; Sam the Sudden (1925); The Mating Season (1949).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Performing Flea (1953); Over Seventy (1957).

R. Usborne, W. at Work (1961); R. J. Voorhees, P. G. W. (1967); G. Jaggard, Wooster's World (1967) and Blandings the Blest and the Blue Blood (1968).—Biblio. by D. A. Jasen (1970).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Woensel, PIETER VAN, pseud. AMURATH-EFFENDI HEKIM BACHI (*Haarlem 10 I 1747; †The Hague 21 IV 1808), Dutch physician, for some years practised in Russia. He was important as a satirical editor, caustic and direct in style, anti-French, anti-clerical and non-partisan.

Vertoog over de opvoedinge van een Nederlandsche regent (1771); De konst van waarnemen (1772); De lantaarn (4 vols, 1792–1801).

C. Busken Huet in Litt. Fantasiën en Kritieken, I, IX (1881–88). J.W.W.

Woestijne, KAREL VAN DE (*Ghent 10 III 1878; †Zwijnaarde 23 VIII 1929), Flemish poet, one of the principal exponents of Symbolism. He studied at the University of Ghent, lived in the artists' village, St Martens Latem, between 1899 and 1904, became a journalist and was Professor at Ghent from 1920 onwards. He belonged to the group of 'Van Nu en Straks'. A lonely and hypersensitive introvert, he had in his first volumes (Het vader-huis, 1903; De gulden schaduw, 1910) explored the limits of sensual pleasures and of spiritual love between man and woman. Henceforth unable to live life simply and naturally, he wrote of the tensions between surrender and refusal, enjoyment and sorrow, frenzy and fear. Death and love are the great themes on the background of a sensual approach to nature and a vague religiosity. The form is luxurious and ornate, 'Florentine'. When after some ten years he had nothing essential to add to this poetry he turned to plastic monumentality (Interludiën, 2 vols, 1912–14; Zon in den rug, 1924), in which breathed nevertheless the hedonist, tired of life.

Parallel to this poetry, regarded as symbolic autobiography, ran the heavily Gongoristic rhetoric of his prose stories in which he related legends, Biblical themes, old tales, lives of the saints, etc., but which he charged with his own unrest (Janus met het dubbele voorhoofd, 1908; Goddelijke verbeeldingen, 1918; De bestendige aanwezigheid, 1918). Here he exposed himself even more fully than in his poetry.

Meantime the poet returned to confessional lyricism. From De modderen man (1920) onwards he picked up the earlier themes, but less anecdotal as to the substance. In his latest books, God aan zee (1926) and Het berg-meer (1928), the poet rises to a state of renunciation, to a certain asceticism, by a purification of the blind passion for life.

A complicated individualist, he deliberately strove to raise his art from the particular on to the generally human plane. His writings crystallize round two fundamental riddles of life: the balance between man and woman and that between man and God. In their preponderantly listless, weary and melancholy tenor they constitute one of the great examples of the autumnal art of the transition of the century. In addition they remain one of the most poignant confessions of the inadequacy of man.

Apart from verse and symbolic stories van de Woestijne also wrote impressionistic literary and art criticism, brilliant journalistic chronicles and, in collaboration with H. Teirlinck*, an epistolary novel, De leemen torens (1928).

VERSE: De boom-gaard der vogelen en der vruchten (1905); Substrata (1924); Het zatte hart (1926); Het menscheijk brood (1926).—PROSE: Laethemische brieven over de lente (1904); Janus met het dubbele voorhoofd (1908); Janus mit dem Zwiesicht, tr. H. Graef, (1948); Afwijkingen (1910); Beginselen der chemie (1925); De nieuwe Esopet (1933).—Tödlicher Herbst (tr. H. Graef, 1941); Einsame Brände (tr. idem, 1952); Lyra Belgica, I (Eng. tr. C. and F. Stillman, 1950); Poèmes choisis (tr. M. Lecomte, 1964).—ESSAYS AND CRITICISM: De Vlaamsche primitieven (1903); Kunst en geest in Vlaanderen (1911); De schroeflijn (2 vols, 1928).—Verzameld werk (8 vols, 1947–50).

U. van de Voorde, Essay over K. van de W. (1934); M. Rutten, De lyriek van K. van de W. (1934); De esthetische opvattingen van K. van de W. (1943); Het proza van K. van de W. (1959) and K. van de W. (1970); P. Minderaa, K. van de W., I (1942); F. V. Toussaint van Boelaere, Marginalia bij het leven en het werk van K. van de W. (1944); G. van Severen, K. van de W. (1944; in Fr.); A. Westerlinck, De psychologische figuur van K. van de W. (1952); J. Aerts, Stijlgeheimen van K. van de W. (1956). R.F.L.

Wogau, BORIS ANDREYEVICH: see Pilnyak, BORIS.

Wolcott, JOHN: see Peter Pindar.

Wolf, CHRISTA (*Landsberg an der Warthe [now Gorzów Wielkopolski] 18 III 1929), East German novelist and short-story writer. She studied

German at University and then worked for various publishers until 1962 when she turned to free-lance work. Her first novel Der geteilte Himmel (1963) provoked considerable controversy. It tells of a young couple who are finally separated, one of them leaving for West Germany and the other remaining in the East just before the construction of the Berlin Wall. Her second novel, Nachdenken über Christa T. (1969; Eng. tr. 1971), has been withdrawn from circulation in East Germany. She has been severely criticized by the East German government.

Wir, unsere Zeit. Prosa (1958); Moskauer Novelle (1961); Biographie der Anna Seghers (1965).

D. Schlenstedt, 'Motive und Symbole in Der geteilte Himmel' in Weimarer Beiträge, X (1964); J. P. Wallmann, 'Nachdenken über Christa T.' in Neue dt. Hefte, XVI.24 (1969); Hans Mayer, 'Nachdenken über Christa T.' in Neue Rundschau, LXXXI (1970). D.E.

Wolf, FRIEDRICH AUGUST (*Hagenrode 15 II 1759; †Marseilles 8 VIII 1824), German classical philologist. Professor at Halle (1783) and at Berlin (1810), Wolf, the first modern German classical scholar, denied that 'Homer'* was one poet.

Prolegomena ad Homerum (1795); Darstellung der Altertumswissenschaft (1807); Kleine Schriften (2 vols, 1869); W.s Briefe an Goethe (ed. S. Reiter, 1906).

W. Körte, Leben und Studien F. A. W.s (2 vols, 1833); O. Kern, F. A. W. (1924). H.B.G.

Wolfdietrich: see MINSTREL, text and biblio.

Wolfe, THOMAS CLAYTON (*Asheville, N.C. 3 X 1900; †Baltimore, Md. 15 IX 1938), American novelist. Wolfe celebrated himself and his country with an epic intensity unequalled since Whitman*, claiming to have 'an almost insane hunger to devour the entire body of human experience'. A sense of the Americans as 'a nomad race' seeking a spiritual location is merged with his examination of the isolation of the incommunicable self. In the autobiographical Look Homeward Angel (1929), Wolfe's romantic, rhetorical assertion can slip into sheer bombast as it attempts to articulate the epiphanic qualities of a scene, but at its best creates an incantatory power and a delight in the savoury texture of experience. The attempt to reconcile the paradoxes inherent in 'the strange and bitter miracle of life' obsessed Wolfe and created a fictional style redolent with images of wonder and loss.

Of Time and the River: A Legend of Man's Hunger in His Youth (1935); From Death to Morning (1935); The Story of a Novel (1936); The Web and the Rock (1939); You Can't Go Home Again (1940); The Hills Beyond (1943); Mannerhouse: A Play in a Prologue and Three Acts (1948).—The Letters of T. W. (ed. E. Nowell, 1956).

J. W. Beach, American Fiction: 1920–40 (1941); M. Geismar, Writers in Crisis (1942); J. H. Muller, T. W. (1947); R. Walser, The Enigma of T. W.: Biographical and Critical Selections (1953); L. D. Rubin, Jr., T. W.: The Weather of his Youth (1955); F. C. Watkins, T. W.'s Characters: Portraits From Life (1957); C. H. Holman, T. W. (1960). G.A.K.

Wolff, or Wolf, CHRISTIAN, FREIHERR VON (*Breslau 24 I 1679; †Halle 9 IV 1754), German philosopher. Professor at Halle in 1707, Wolff was dismissed by Frederick William I at the instance of religious intriguers (1723). He was honourably reinstated by Frederick* II in 1740. Wolff's philosophy, a deductive rationalism which owes much to Leibniz*, forms the basis for the rationalistic outlook of the early ENLIGHTENMENT. His personal integrity and his systematic and comprehensive presentation secured a wide reception for his frequently pedestrian views.

Vernünftige Gedanken von den Kräften des menschlichen Verstandes (1712); Vernünftige Gedanken von Gott, der Welt und der Seele des Menschen (1719); Vernünftige Gedanken von des Menschen Tun und Lassen (1720); Gesammelte kleinere Schriften (6 vols, 1736–40).

C. Joesten, C. W.'s Grundlegung der praktischen Philosophie (1931); M. Campo, W. e il razionalismo precritico (2 vols, 1939); H. Schöffler, Deutscher Osten im dt. Geist (1940). H.B.G.

Wolff, HANS (*Guben, Lusatia 13 IV 1888; †17 III 1918 Cilka Balai; †New York 3 VI 1959), German poet, emigrated 1940 to the United States. His beautiful verse expresses a deep-felt humanism.

Lied des Lebens (intro. K. Vollmoeller, 1945); In den Silbernen Nächten (1950); Auch der Herbst kommt wieder (1958). E.R.

Wolff, JULIUS (*Quedlinburg 16 IX 1834; †Charlottenburg 3 VI 1910), German novelist and poet. His historical novels were very popular. The details are exact, the costumes colourful and the atmosphere sentimentalized. There is no psychological treatment of character and no motivation of events. In his ballad-like verse he is a successor of Scheffel* and was equally successful. R.W.L.

Tannhäuser, Ein Minnesang (verse; 2 vols, 1880; Eng. tr. C. G. Kendall, 2 vols, 1903–04).—NOVELS: Der Sülfmeister (2 vols, 1883; Eng. tr. W. H. and E. R. Winslow, 1890); Der Raubgraf (1884; Eng. tr. idem, 1890); Das Recht der Hagestolze (1888; Fifty Years, Three Months, Two Days, tr. idem, 1890).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. J. Lauff, 18 vols, 1912–13). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Wolff-Bekker, ELISABETH [BETJE], pseud. SILVIANA (*Flushing 24 VII 1738; †1759 A. Wolff [†1777]; †The Hague 5 XI 1804), Dutch novelist, essayist, poet and translator. Her talents showed at an early age and, a high-spirited girl, she eloped at the age of 17, but soon thought better of it; five years later she married a clergyman, 30 years her senior. She studied literature, wrote witty verse, admired Rousseau* and the Dutch independent thinkers (H. Noordkerk and Petrus* Burman Jr). After 1777 she befriended Agatha Deken*. By then they were both established poets, Betje Wolff also writing essays in De Grijsaard (1768–69) and De Borger (1778–79); they wrote novels in letter-form, influenced by Richardson*, but without the latter's melodramatic element. In Sara Burgerhart (2 vols, 1782), a portrait and the imagined love story of Betje, and their masterpiece Willem Leevend (8 vols, 1784–85), of greater psychological depth and in addition a study of religious creeds, they depicted typically Dutch people with such atmosphere and richness as to make these first novels paradoxically a part of world literature. In later, weaker novels they presumably also had an equal share. Their perception and insight into characters of great diversity were excellent; they did not agitate for social reform but their works were imbued with love of naturalness and truth. Refugees in France between 1788 and 1798, they lost their fortunes on their return. Their last years were spent in translating. J.W.W.

VERSE: Bespiegelingen over het genoeg (1763); Eenzame nachgedachten (1765); Walcheren (1769); Lier- veld- en mengelzangen (1772); Zedenzang aan de menschenliefde (1772); De onveranderlijke Santhorstsche geloofsbelijdenis and De menuet en de domineespruik (1772); Aan mijnen geest (1774); De ongelukkige morgen, Datheniana (1774); De Bekkeriaansche doling (1775); Beemster-winterbuitenleven (1778).—With Agatha Deken: VERSE: Economische liedjes (3 vols, 1780–81); Fabelen (1784); Mengelpoëzy (3 vols, 1785–86); Wandelingen door Bourgogne (1789); Gedichten en liedjes voor het vaderland (1778).—PROSE: Proeve over de opvoeding (1779); Brieven over verscheidene onderwerpen (3 vols, 1780–81); Sara Burgerhart (Fr. tr. B. van Zuylen, Lausanne, 1787); Brieven van Abraham Blankaart (3 vols, 1787–89); De historie van Cornelia Wildschut (6 vols, 1793–96).—Brieven van B. W. en A. D. (ed. J. Dyserinck, 1904).

J. van Vloten, E. W.-B. (1880); C. Busken Huet in Litt. Fantasiën en Kritieken, V, XIX, XXII (1881–88); J. Dyserinck in De Gids, XLVIII, LVI, LXVII (1884, 1892, 1903) and Catalogus Tentoonst. W. en D. (with biblio.; 1895); H. C. Moquette, Over de romans van W. en D. (1898); J. Koopmans in De Beweging, V (1910); J. W. A. Naber, E. W.-B. en A. D. (1913); A. de Vletter, De opvoedkundige denkbeelden van B. W. en A. D.

(1915); H. C. M. Ghijsen, B. W. in verband met het geestelijk leven van haar tijd (1919), in Tijdschr. Nederl. Letterk., XXXVIII (1919), in De Gids, LXXXIV, LXXXVI, LXXXVIII (1920-23) and Dapper Vrouwenleven (1954); Boeket voor Betje en Aagje (1954). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Wolfram von Eschenbach (fl. c. 1200-20), author of the greatest German romance Parzival, of Willehalm, Titivel and outstanding lyrics. Minsterialis, we gather, to Count Boppo II of Wertheim, modestly housed at Eschenbach (nr Ansbach); he spent some time with Landgrave Hermann of Thuringia. He claimed to be 'first a knight, no mean poet and not a scholar'; he was a native genius of amazing erudition: motifs and characters from popular epic and court romance, and bizarre Oriental and European lore overflow into and transform his 'primary' sources. His diction is virile, laden with metaphors, obscure—he lacked 'taste' (see Gottfried* von Strassburg). He has a strong sense of humour and delights in waggish asides on contemporaries, his home, himself and his characters.

Parzival (c. 1200-12): Wolfram adapts for Books 3-6 (at this stage unaware of Chrétien's* authorship) the Conte del Graal. But as his intentions (in part moulded by his own innovations and their implications) become clear, he invokes (invents?) one 'Kyot der Provenzale' and finally refutes Chrétien. Despite excessive mystification of the Grail (a life-giving stone) his interpretation of Grail knighthood and Parzival's kingship is consistent and profound. Gahmuret (Books 1-2) is an adventurer. Parzival, his son, becomes the companion of Arthur and peer of Gawain (the 'hero' of Books 7-8, 10-14); but his further progress, through a crisis of faith to humility, seems to require remorse for the death of his mother, deep longing for his wife Condwiramurs and the example of Sigune's devotion. He attains lasting happiness and honour, however, not salvation (which a secular poet cannot award, even as a fiction). Richard Wagner's* nightmare of suffering, compassion and gory ritual has little in common with it. The final book (16) sketches the story of LOHENGRIN, Parzival's son.

Willehalm (c. 1212-15; summarily concluded) is a free adaptation of a version of the Bataille d'Alis chans. Willehalm is portrayed, not as the slaughterer of the heathen whom the official Church had beatified, but as a devout knight, enlightened and magnanimous in his treatment of the Saracen knighthood. Wolfram excels in the organization and description of massed battles.

Titivel (two fragments only were completed) isolates for fuller elegiac treatment in stanza form the love of Sigune and Schionatulander (episodic in Parzival).

Wolfram's few lyrics (early works) pass from minnesang to a series of highly dramatic and sensuous Dawn songs; in the last (conviction triumphing over convention) he celebrates marriage as the only satisfactory love-relationship.

The number of MSS (Parz. approx. 80) and continuations (see Albrecht* von Scharfenberg; Ulrich* von Türheim; Ulrich* von dem Türlin) testify to Wolfram's enormous success and influence. Less fortunate was the example of his obscure diction.

Ed. K. Lachmann and E. Hartl (1926), A. Leitzmann (1956-61).—Parzival and Titivel (ed. with comm. E. Martin, 2 vols, 1900-03; best ed. K. Bartsch and M. Marti, 3 vols, 1927-32); Willehalm (Middle High German and modernized D. Kartschoke, 1968).—Parzival (mod. tr. W. Herz, 1930; prose ed. W. Stapel, 1950; in Eng. [adequate], Helen M. Mustard and C. E. Passage, 1961); Story of Parzival (extracts ed. M. F. Richey, 1935).

A. Schreiber, Bausteine zu einer Lebensgeschichte (1922); M. F. Richey, Gahmuret Anschevin (1926), Sigune and Schionatulander (n.d.) and Medieval German Love Lyric (2nd ed. 1969); F. Misch, 'W.s Parz.' in Dt. Vierteljahrschr., V (1928); J. Fourquet, W. d'E. (1938); intro. for all purposes, J. Bumke, W. von E. (1964); Eng. Parz. studs by: H. Sacker (1964); D. Blamires (1966); essays ed. H. Rupp in Wege der Forschung, LVII (1966).

F.P.P.

Wolfskehl, KARL (*Darmstadt 17 IX 1869; †Auckland 30 VI 1948), German poet and critic, chief collaborator with Stefan George* on his Blätter für die Kunst (1893-1919), and up to the First World War leader of an intellectual circle of writers and artists in Munich's Schwabing. After the early Gesammelte Dichtungen (1903), limited by George's aesthetic doctrines, he achieved individuality with Der Umkreis (1927), poems which unite formal and linguistic precision with Expressionistic intensity. After enforced emigration in 1933 he eventually found asylum in New Zealand (1938). His predominantly religious later poetry is born of the creative tension between his strong roots in both German and Jewish cultures.

VERSE: Die Stimme spricht (1933); An die Deutschen (1947); Die drei Welten: Mittelmeer, I.N.R.I., Hiob (1950).—Bild und Gesetz (essays; 1930).—Zehn Jahre Exil (letters 1939-48; 1959); Gesammelte Werke (2 vols, 1960); Briefe und Aufsätze, München 1925-33 (1966).

E. Landau, Stilkritische Untersuchungen der Lyrik W.s (1929); F. Wolters, Stefan George und die Blätter für die Kunst (1930); E. Preetorius, W. dem Freund (1950); 'K. W. Gedenkschrift' in Agora, IV (with biblio.; 1955); P. Berglar, K. W. Symbolgestalt der deutsch-jüdischen Tragödie (1964). K.P.

Wolker, Jiří (*Prostějov 29 III 1900; †ibid. 3 I 1924), Czech poet. The most promising of the young Czech poets who came to the fore immediately after the First World War, Wolker was struck down by consumption. The importance of his poetical work is quite disproportionate to its small extent. His first volume of verse, Host do domu ('A Guest Comes Into the House'; 1921), is inspired by a simple love of the surrounding world, animate and inanimate, expressed in free metrical form. His second published volume, Těžká hodina ('The Hard Hour'; 1922), is deeply inspired by the Communist faith to which Wolker had committed himself.

Spisy (4 vols, 1953–54).—V. Nezval, W. (1925); Z. Wolkerová, J. W. ve vzpomínkách své matky (1937; 2nd ed. 1951). R.A.

Wolkers, JAN HENDRIK (*Oegstgeest 26 X 1925), Dutch prose writer and playwright. A sculptor by profession, his entry into literature was spectacular. His prose, full of gruesome humour, centres around death and decay.

PROSE: Serpentina's petticoat (1961); Kort amerikaans (1962); Gesponnen suiker (1963); Een roos van vlees (1964; Eng. tr. John Scott, 1967); De hond met de blauwe tong (1964); Terug naar Oegstgeest (1965); Horrible tango (1967); Turks fruit (1969).—PLAYS: De Babel (1963); Wegens sterfgeval gesloten (1963).

Paul de Wispelaere, Het Perzische tapijt (1966); Kees Fens et al., Literair lustrum (1967).—Interview, H. U. J. d'Oliveira in Scheppen riep hij gaat van Aul (1965). J.J.O.

Wollstonecraft, MARY: see Godwin, MARY.

Wood (or A WOOD), ANTHONY (*Oxford 17 XII 1632; †ibid. 29 XI 1695), English antiquary. Wood was inspired by Dugdale's* Warwickshire to produce a similar work on Oxford, and devoted his life to the task. Despite the difficulties of his temperament, he was helped by many friends, including (notably) John Aubrey*.

Historia et Antiquitates Universitatis Oxoniensis (2 vols, 1674); Athenae Oxonienses (2 vols, 1691–92); Survey of the Antiquities of the City of Oxford (ed. A. Clark, Oxford Hist. Soc., 3 vols, 1889–99); The Life and Times of A. W. (ed. idem, 1891–1900). J.B.B.

Wood, ELLEN, née PRICE (*Worcester 17 I 1814; ∞1836 Henry Wood; †London 10 II 1887), English novelist, author of the much-dramatized East Lynne (3 vols, 1861) and of some 30 other novels of domestic life.

Mrs Halliburton's Troubles (1862); The Channings (3 vols, 1862); Roland Yorke (1869); Johnny Ludlow Papers (5 ser., 1874–90).

Charles Wood, Memorials of Mrs H. W. (1894). R.M.H.

Woodcock, GEORGE (*Winnipeg, Manitoba 8 V 1912; ∞1949 Ingeborg Linzer), Canadian writer and Professor of English whose numerous works range from literary criticism to historical, cultural and biographical studies; editor of the influential periodical Canadian Literature since its inception in 1959.

William Godwin (1946); Paradox of Oscar Wilde (1950); Incas and Other Men (1959); Anarchism: A History of Libertarian Ideas and Movements (1962); Faces of India (1964); The Crystal Spirit: A Study of George Orwell (1966); Henry Walter Bates (1969); The British in the Far East (1969).

J. W. Bilsland, 'G. W. man of letters' in Brit. Columbia Lit. Quart., XXIII (1959). R.Su.

Woolf, VIRGINIA, née STEPHEN (*London 1882; ∞1912 Leonard Woolf; †[suicide] river Ouse 31 III 1941), English novelist and essayist. Brought up in a highly intellectual circle (BLOOMSBURY GROUP), she wrote many reviews and two accomplished novels before she manifested her original and distinctive power which had a lasting effect on the art of the novel. Her plots were to consist of what goes on inside the mind, her characters revealed mainly through the impressions her persons were aware of or produced on the minds of others, with just enough external action for the purpose of the story. She differed from her predecessors (e.g. Dorothy Richardson*) who presented life as a 'stream of consciousness' in that, however tenuous and delicate the subject might be, her strong understanding imposed on it a severe artistic unity and significance.

NOVELS: The Voyage Out (1915); Night and Day (1919); Jacob's Room (1922); Mrs Dalloway (1925); To the Lighthouse (1927); Orlando (1928); The Waves (1931); The Years (1937); Between the Acts (1941).—ESSAYS: The Common Reader (2 ser., 1925, 1932); A Room of One's Own (1929).—Collected Essays (4 vols, 1966–67).—BIOGRAPHIES: Flush (1933); Roger Fry (1940).—A Writer's Diary (1953).

D. Daiches, V. W. (1942); J. Bennett, V. W.: Her Art as a Novelist (1945); B. Blackstone, V. W. (1949); J. Guiguet, V. W. et son œuvre (1962); D. Brewster, V. W. (1963); L. Woolf, autobiog. (5 vols, 1960–69; particularly Beginning Again, 1964); Q. Bell, V. W.: a Biography (1972).—Biblio. by B. J. Kirkpatrick (1957; 1967).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Woolcott, ALEXANDER HUMPHREYS (*Phalanx, N.J. 19 I 1887; †New York 23 I 1943), American journalist. Famous as a 'personality', he was drama critic for various New York papers; contributed witty columns to the New Yorker; broadcast literary talks and occasionally acted on Broadway.

Mrs Fiske (1917); Shouts and Murmurs (1923);

Mr Dickens Goes to the Play (1923); Enchanted Aisles (1924); The Story of Irving Berlin (1925); While Rome Burns (1934). H.L.C.

Woolman, JOHN (*Northampton, N.J. 19 X 1720; ∞1749 Sarah Ellis; †York, Eng. 7 X 1772), American diarist. A Quaker humanitarian and itinerant preacher, he was an early opponent of slavery. Whittier* called his journal 'a classic of inner life'.

Some Considerations on the Keeping of Negroes (1754); Considerations on the True Harmony of Mankind (1770).—The Works of J. W. (1774); The Journal and Essays of J. W. (ed. A. M. Gummere, 1922).

J. Whitney, J. W.: American Quaker (1942); E. Cady, J. W. (1965); P. Rosenblatt, J. W. (1969). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Woolner, THOMAS (*Hadleigh 17 XII 1825; ∞1864 Alice Waugh; †London 7 X 1892), English sculptor and poet, member of the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood. He contributed poems to The Germ and wrote several other volumes.

My Beautiful Lady (1863; expansion of contributions to The Germ); Pygmalion (1881); Silenus (1884); Tiresias (1886); Poems (incl. 'Nelly Dale', 'Children'; 1887).

Amy Woolner, Life (1917).

R.M.H.

Woolson, CONSTANCE FENIMORE (*Claremont, N.H. III 1840; †Venice, Italy 24 I 1894), American short-story writer, novelist and poet. Best in her short stories, which Henry James* noted for their minuteness of observation and tenderness of feeling, she also wrote five novels.

Castle Nowhere: Lake Country Sketches (1875); The Front Yard and Other Italian Stories (1895); East Angels (1886); Jupiter Lights (1889).

J. D. Kern, C. F. W.: Literary Pioneer (1934); R. S. Moore, C. F. W. (1963).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Woordt, ANTHONY VAN DER (*Flushing 3 XI 1769; †Amsterdam 24 IX 1794), Dutch poet, wrote chiefly blank verse in classical metres; was a friend of Bellamy*. Some of his poems are striking for their poetic purity and their proud spirit. His Gedichten were edited by C. J. Wenckebach preceded by a short biography (1785). A collection of his letters and MSS is in the library of the Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk.

M. M. Prinsen in Handelingen XIII Vlaamsche Philologencongres (1936). J.W.W.

Wordsworth, DOROTHY (*Cockermouth 25 XII 1771; †Rydal Mount 25 I 1855), English writer, sister and companion of William. Her Journals record their life together and reveal her sensitive love of nature and her brother's debt to her.

Journals of D. W. (ed. E. de Sélincourt, 2 vols, 1941).

E. de Sélincourt, D. W.: a Biography (1933). R.M.H. (K.W.)

Wordsworth, WILLIAM (*Cockermouth 7 IV 1770; ∞1802 Mary Hutchinson; †Grasmere 23 IV 1850), English poet. Born in the Lake District and educated at Hawkshead grammar school, where a mild discipline allowed him to wander and read widely, 'everyday life', the raw material of poetry for Wordsworth, always meant for him the life of the Cumberland peasants. A revolutionary enthusiasm gained in France in 1791–92, after a desultory Cambridge career, plunged Wordsworth into painful conflict on his return to England, and, settling with his sister Dorothy in Racedown in 1795, he wrote his pessimistic 'Borderers' and 'Guilt and Sorrow'. In Dorothy's companionship he gradually regained his early faith in nature. In 1797 they settled in Alfoxden near Coleridge*, with whom Wordsworth planned Lyrical Ballads, a volume of poems in which Coleridge would give supernatural themes the veracity of everyday life, while Wordsworth gave poetic colouring to the commonplace. To the 1800 edition, which included the Matthew and Lucy poems and 'Tintern Abbey', Wordsworth added a preface maintaining that poetry should adopt the language of everyday life, which theory he never rigidly observed. This volume, initially ridiculed, won recognition by its freshness, pathos and lyrical beauty. By 1805, again living in the Lake District with Dorothy, in Dove Cottage, Wordsworth had finished his long, blank-verse 'Prelude' recording his poetic development. Odes to 'Duty' and 'Immortality' mark his transition from spontaneous faith in nature's all-sufficiency to a more sober philosophy. 'The Excursion' (1814) was the introduction to a 'philosophic epic' never completed. The still later 'Dion' and 'Laodamia' show his mature powers, while in the serenity of his final settled years at Rydal Mount he cast into poetic form his daily experiences and reflections.

Poetical Works (ed. E. de Sélincourt and H. Darbishire, 5 vols, 1940–49; I–III, 2nd ed. 1952–54); Prose Works (ed. A. B. Grosart, 3 vols, 1876).—An Evening Walk and Descriptive Sketches (1793); Lyrical Ballads (1798; with pref., 1800); Poems (2 vols, 1807); The Excursion (1814); Poems (2 vols, 1815); The White Doe of Rylstone (1815); Peter Bell (1819); Poems Chiefly of Early and Late Years (1842); The Prelude or Growth of a Poet's Mind (1850).—Letters of W. and D. W. (ed. E. de Sélincourt: Early Years, rev. C. L. Shaver, 1967; Middle Years, 2 vols, 1937; Later Years, 3 vols, 1939).

C. Wordsworth, Memoirs (1851); M. Moorman, W. W. a Biography (2 vols, 1957, 1965); F. W. Bateson, W. W.: A Re-Interpretation (1954); J. Jones,

The Egoistical Sublime (1954); G. H. Hartman, W.'s Poetry 1787-1814 (1964).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Worm, OLE (*Aarhus 13 V 1588; ∞1615 Dorthe Fincke, ∞1630 Susanne Madsdatter, ∞1639 Magdalene Motzfeldt; †Copenhagen 31 VIII 1654), Danish antiquarian. He studied on the Continent and in London and Oxford, and in 1613 he became Professor at Copenhagen. In spite of his great knowledge in medicine and natural sciences he is now most famous for his keen interest in runology and antiquities.

Runic seu Danica litteratura antiquissima (1636); De aureo cornu (1641); Danicorum Monumentorum libri sex (1643).—The Death-Song of Ragnar Lodbrock, tr. from the Latin of W. (1781); W.'s Correspondence with Icelanders (1948).—Olai Wormii et ad eum doctorum virorum epistolae (2 vols, 1751). E.B.

Wotton, SIR HENRY (*Boughton Hall, Kent 1568; †Eton XII 1639), English diplomatist, poet, scholar and Provost of Eton who was a close friend of Izaak Walton*. From Oxford he travelled abroad, later acting as a government servant. Knighted by James* I, he represented the King at Venice for nearly 20 years in three terms of office. His letter to Milton* on Comus is famous. B.L.J.

Reliquiae Wottonianae (1651; enlarged 1654, 1672, 1685).—Poems (ed. A. Dyce, Percy Soc., 1842; ed. J. Hannah, 1845).

J. Hannah, The Courtly Poets (1870); Sir A. W. Ward, Sir H. W. (1898); L. P. Smith, Life and Letters of Sir H. W. (2 vols, 1907; repr. 1966). J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Wouters, ANTONIO FRANCISCO (*1641; †Antwerp 1676), Flemish playwright, wrote a rather good farce in alexandrines, De twee gelycke Schippers (1675) after Plautus* Menaechmi, and a comedy in verse, De Heilige Genoveva ofte de herkende onnooselheyt (1664) which, popular on the Amsterdam stage, influenced some German playwrights.

J. te Winkel, 'A. F. W.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., I (1881); J. A. Worp, 'A. F. W.', ibid., VIII (1888); H. Junkers, Niederländische Schauspieler . . . in Deutschland (1936).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Wraxall, SIR NATHANIAL WILLIAM (*Bristol 8 IV 1751; ∞1789 Jane Lascelles; †Dover 7 XI 1831), English writer of memoirs giving interesting portraits of lesser historical figures.

Cursory Remarks made on a Tour thro' some of the Northern Parts of Europe . . . (1775); Historical Memoirs (2 vols, 1815); Posthumous Memoirs of his own Times . . . (3 vols, 1836);

Memoirs (ed. H. B. Wheatley, 5 vols, 1884; combining Historical and Posthumous).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Wright, ABRAHAM (*London 23 XII 1611; †Oakham, Rutland 9 V 1690), English poet and divine. A fervent Anglican and Royalist, Wright compiled a miscellany of University verse with an anti-Commonwealth preface. Most of his contributors were clergymen, but the prevailing tone is wittily secular.

Parnassus Biceps: or, several choice pieces of poetry composed by the best wits that were in both the Universities before their dissolution (1656; ed. G. Thorn-Drury, 1927). G.K.H.

Wright, DAVID JOHN MURRAY (*Johannesburg 23 II 1920; ∞1951 Phillipa Reid), South African poet and editor. Deaf since the age of seven, he was educated in England where he has spent most of his adult life. His poetry often has a South African background, and exploits the exile theme.

VERSE: Poems (1949); Moral Stories (1954); Monologue of a Deaf Man (1958); Adam at Evening (1965); Nerve Ends (1969).—Deafness: A Personal Account (autobiog.; 1969). U.La.

Wright, JAMES (*Yarnton 1642; †1713), English theatrical historian. His is the first work in which antiquarian scholarship was applied to English medieval and Renaissance drama. The work was written in reply to Jeremy Collier's* attack on the stage. G.K.H.

Historia Histrionica. An historical account of the English Stage: showing the ancient uses, improvement and perfection of dramatic representations in this nation (1699).

James Sutherland, English Literature of the Late 17th Century (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wright, JUDITH ARUNDEL (*Armidale, New South Wales 31 V 1915), Australian poet. Her poems are passionately personal but modulated by a sharp critical intelligence. The experiences of love and motherhood, familiarity with the landscape and history of Australia, and a strong sense of family heritage are interwoven with her exploration of both traditional and contemporary spiritual and intellectual problems.

VERSE: The Moving Image (1946); Woman to Man (1949); The Gateway (1953); The Two Fires (1955); Birds (1963); Five Senses (sel. poems; 1963); The Other Half (1966).—The Generations of Men (family biog.; 1959); Preoccupations in Australian Poetry (criticism; 1965); The Nature of Love (short stories; 1966).

Critical Essays on J. W. (ed. A. K. Thomson, 1968); South Australian Libraries Board, J. W.: A Bibliography (1968). A.M.G.

Wright, RICHARD (*Natchez, Miss. 4 IX 1908; ∞1938 Rose Dhima Meadman, ∞1941 Ellen Poplar; †Paris 28 XI 1960), American novelist, short-story writer and essayist. Brought up in the midst of poverty and violence, he became the first Black novelist to achieve international fame. His novel Native Son (1940) is a horrific account of Negro life in America; it was followed in 1945 by Black Boy, a moving account of Wright's childhood in the South. He later moved to Paris, but there his abilities as an imaginative writer declined.

FICTION: Uncle Tom's Children (1938); The Outsider (1953); Savage Holiday (1954); The Long Dream (1958); Eight Men (1961); Lawd Today (1963).—NON-FICTION: 12 Million Voices: A Folk History of the Negro in the United States (1941); Black Power (1954); White Man Listen (1957).

H. M. Gloster, Negro Voices in American Fiction (1948); R. A. Bone, The Negro Novel in America (1965); C. Webb, R. W.: A Biography (1968); E. L. Margolies, The Art of R. W. (1969); D. McCall, The Example of R. W. (1969). I.W.

Wright, THOMAS (*Tenbury 23 IV 1810; †Chelsea 23 XII 1877), English antiquary, co-founder of the Camden and Percy Societies, for which he edited many early works.

A History and Topography of . . . Essex (1831–36); Early English Poetry (anthol.; 1836); History of Domestic Manners and Sentiments in England during the Middle Ages (1862); History of Caricature and Grotesque in Literature and Art (1865).

R.M.H.

Wroth, LADY MARY (*?1586; ∞27 IX 1604 Sir Robert Wroth; †?1640), English poet; eldest daughter of the 1st Earl of Leicester and niece to Sir Philip Sidney*. She wrote Urania, a pastoral romance.

The Countess of Mountgomerie's Urania (1621).

J. J. O'Connor in Notes and Queries (1955).

J.J.Y.L. (A.N.W.)

Wu CH'ENG-ÊN (□Shan-yang ?1500; †ibid. ?1582), Chinese novelist. He became a licentiate in 1544, and later served as assistant magistrate of Ch'ang-hsing in Chekiang, and retired to his home c. 1567. Although he had some reputation as a poet, he is above all known as the author of China's finest novel of the miraculous, Hsi-yu chi (first extant ed. 1592). The subject, which derived originally from the real pilgrimage of the famous monk Hsüan-tsang* to India (7th century) but which had gained large accretions of legend, including Indian legend, had been treated by story-tellers in the Sung period and by dramatists in the Yüan. It has been argued that the novel already existed in approximately its present form in Yüan times and thus the originality of Wu's version would be slight. His version also appeared in many different editions. The most popular is Hsi-yu chên-ch'üan by Ch'en Shih-pin (1780).

Hsi-yu chi (Monkey, partial tr. A. Waley, 1942; Si Yeou Ki, complete Fr. tr. L. Avenol, 2 vols, 1957).—C. T. Hsia, The Classic Chinese Novel (1968). A.R.D.

Wu CHING-TZÜ (□Ch'üan-chiao 1701; †Yangchow 12 XII 1754), Chinese novelist. Wu came of a family with many examination distinctions, but he himself obtained only the first degree (1723). Although reputed a prodigal in his youth, from 1733 he lived in poverty. His fame rests on Ju-lin wai-shih ('Unofficial History of Men of Letters'; first pr. bet. 1768 and 1779), which is China's greatest novel of social satire. In it he attacked the follies and vices of contemporary official society, founded on the examination system, and its conventional morality and arts. It set a type for 'reformist' fiction in the last years of the Ch'ing dynasty.

Ju-lin wai-shih (The Scholars, tr. H.-Y. and G. Yang, Peking, 1957).—C. T. Hsia, The Classic Chinese Novel (1968). A.R.D.

Wu JU-LUN (□T'ung-ch'êng 15 X 1840; †ibid. 9 II 1903), Chinese educationist and essayist. Wu became interested in Western learning under the influence of Tsêng* Kuo-fan. He served (1890–1900) as head of the Lien-ch'ih academy, Paoting, where he established teaching in foreign languages with British and Japanese instructors. As a writer, he was regarded as among the finest prose-stylists of the late 19th century.

T'ung-ch'êng Wu hsien-shêng ch'üan-shu (coll. works; 1903–04); T'ung-ch'êng Wu hsien-shêng jih-chi (diary; 1928). A.R.D.

Wujek, JAKUB (*Wągrowiec 1541; †Cracow 27 VII 1597), Polish translator and theological writer. From 1568 he taught in Jesuit colleges. Besides his polemic and apologetic writings he prepared the first translation of the Bible for Roman Catholics, which is still used.

TREATISES: Postylla mniejsza (2 pts, 1579–80).—TRANSLATIONS: Nowy Testament (1593); Psalterz Dawidów (1594); Biblia to jest księgi Starego i Nowego Testamentu (1599).

J. Archutowski, Ksiądz J. W. (1915); S. Zwolski, De Bibliis polonicis quae usque ad initium saeculi XVII in lucem edita sunt (1904). S.S. (P.H.)

Wulfila (*Cappadocia c. 311; †383), first missionary Bishop to Christians held by the Western Goths in south-east Europe. Of his Gothic translation of the Bible mainly the New Testament is preserved.

W. Streitberg, Die gotische Bibel (1919); G. S. W. Friedrichsen, The Gothic Version of the Gospels (1926) and ... of the Epistles (1939); Elfriede Stutz, Gotische Literaturdenkmäler (1966); E. A. Thompson, The Visigoths in the Time of Ulfila (1966). F.P.P.

Wulfstan (†York 28 V 1023), Archbishop of York (1002–23), Bishop of Worcester (1002–16). He is best known as the author of a large number of homilies, the most famous of which is the Sermo ad Anglos. He also drew up laws for Ethelred and Cnut, and his other works include the Institutes of Polity, on the organization of society, and two Chronicle poems (959, 975).

The Homilies of W. (ed. D. Bethurum, 1957); Sermo Lupi ad Anglos (ed. D. Whitelock, 3rd ed. 1963); Die 'Institutes of Polity, Civil and Ecclesiastical' (ed. K. Jost, 1959); The Benedictine Office (ed. J. M. Ure, 1957).

L. H. Dodd, A Glossary of W.'s Homilies (1908); A. McIntosh, 'W.'s prose' in Proc. Brit. Acad., XXXIV (1948); K. Jost, W.-Studien (1950); D. Bethurum, 'W.' in Continuations and Beginnings (ed. E. G. Stanley, 1966). T.F.H.

Wuthenow, ALWINE (*Neuenkirchen 16 IX 1820; Greifswald 8 I 1908), Low German poet. Her nature lyrics, smooth and delicately emotional, were greatly appreciated by Fritz Reuter*, who first edited them.

En poa Blomen ut Anmariek Schulten ehren Goahren (1858); Nige Blomen ut Anmariek Schulten ehren Goren von A. W. (1861).—Blomen ut Anmariek Schulten ehren Goren (sel. ed. M. Möller, 1896).

K. T. Gaedertz, Fritz Reuter-Studien (1890). G.C.

Wyatt, SIR THOMAS (*1503; †1542), English poet. Wyatt's poetic innovations owe much to a knowledge of foreign models acquired in embassies to Italy (1526), France (1528–32) and Spain (1537–39). Wyatt devised the English PETRARCHAN SONNET, which contains five rhymes and concludes with a couplet. His best love-poetry is robustly un-Petrarchan, however, and generally written in short metres designed to be sung to a lute.

Tho. wyatis translatyon of Plutarckes Duke of the Quayete of mynde (1528; ed. C. R. Baskervill, 1931); Certayne Psalmes (1549); Songs and Sonnettes ('Tottel's Miscellany': cont. 40 poems by Wyatt; 1557; ed. H. E. Rollins, 2 vols, 1928–29).—The Poems of Sir Thomas Wiat (ed. A. K. Foxwell, 2 vols, 1913); The Poems of Sir T. W. (ed. K. Muir, 1949); Unpublished Poems (ed. idem, 1961).

J. M. Berdan and L. E. Kastner, 'W. and the French sonneteers' in Mod. Lang. Rev., IV (1909); A. K. Foxwell, A Study of Sir T. W.'s Poetry (1911); J. M. Berdan, Early Tudor Poetry (1920); T. K. Whipple, Martial and the English

Epigram From Sir T. W. to Ben Jonson (1925); E. M. W. Tillyard, The Poetry of Sir T. W. (1929); E. K. Chambers, Sir T. W. and Other Studies (1933); L. E. Pearson, Elizabethan Love Conventions (1933); D. W. Harding, 'The rhetorical intention in W.'s poetry' in Scrutiny, XIV (1947); S. Baldi, La poesia di W. (1953); H. A. Mason, Humanism and Poetry in the Early Tudor Period (1959); O. Hietsch, Die Petrarcaübersetzungen Sir T. W.'s (1960); K. Muir, Life and Letters of Sir T. W. (1963); R. Southall, The Courtly Maker (1964); P. Thompson, Sir T. W. and His Background (1964); D. L. Peterson, The English Lyric From W. to Donne (1967).

W.A.A.

Wycherley, WILLIAM (*Clive 1640; †London 31 XII 1715), English dramatist. Educated in France, Oxford and the Inner Temple, Wycherley achieved fame and court favour by his first comedy, Love in a Wood—favour which he retained till his secret marriage with the Countess of Drogheda in 1680. His later (non-dramatic) works are feeble, in spite of the assistance of Pope*, but his two great comedies, The Country Wife (1675) and The Plain Dealer (1677), reveal him as a major satirist, attacking not only the foibles of his own age but the permanent characteristics of human hypocrisy.

Love in a Wood, or St. James's Park (1672); The Gentleman Dancing-Master (1673).—Complete Works (ed. M. Summers, 4 vols, 1924); Complete Plays (ed. G. Weales, 1966).

B. Dobrée, Restoration Comedy (1924); N. N. Holland, The First Modern Comedies (1959); R. A. Zimbaro, W.'s Drama (1965); J. Sutherland, English Literature of the Late 17th Century (1969). G.K.H. (C.B.)

Wyclif, JOHN (*nr Richmond, Yorks ?c. 1330; †1384), English political philosopher, ecclesiastical reformer and writer, who vigorously attacked Church endowments and eventually denied the mediating power of the priest, assailed the doctrine of transubstantiation etc. To gain wider support he wrote mainly in English, inspired a literal translation into English of the whole Bible, and spread his doctrines among the people through his 'poor preachers'.

Wycliffe's Bible (ed. J. Forshall and F. Madden, (4 vols, 1850); MS Bodley 959: Genesis-Baruch 3.20 in the Earlier Version of the Wycliffite Bible (ed. C. Lindberg, 5 vols, 1959–69).—Select English Works of J. W. (ed. T. Arnold, 3 vols, 1869–71); The English Works of W. Hitherto Unprinted (ed. F. D. Matthew, 1880); Latin Works (ed. fr Wyclif Soc., 1882 ff.).

R. L. Poole, W. and Movements for Reform (1889); G. M. Trevelyan, England in the Age of W. (1899); H. B. Workman, J. W. (the standard authority; 2 vols, 1926); K. B. McFarlane,

W. and the Beginnings of English Nonconformity (1952); S. L. Fristedt, The Wycliffe Bible (2 vols, 1953-69); M. Hurley, 'Scriptura sola: W. and his critics' in Traditio, XVI (1960); J. A. Robson, W. and the Oxford Schools (1961).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Wylie, ELINOR HOYT (*Somerville, N.J. 7 IX 1885; ∞1905 Philip Hichborn, ∞1916 Horace Wylie, ∞1923 William Rose Benét; †New York 16 XII 1928), American poet and novelist. Her brilliant literary career began with Nets to Catch the Wind (1921), poems influenced by the Metaphysical tradition and achieving a 'frigid ecstasy'. Her four novels combine fantasy with highly mannered craftsmanship.

VERSE: Black Armour (1923); Angels and Earthly Creatures: A Sequence of Sonnets (1928); Collected Poems of E. W. (ed. W. R. Benét, 1932).—NOVELS: Jennifer Lorn (1923); The Venetian Glass Nephew (1925); The Orphan Angel (1926); Mr Hodge and Mr Hazard (1928).—Collected Prose of E. W. (ed. W. R. Benét, 1933).

N. Hoyt, E. W.: The Portrait of an Unknown Lady (1935).
H.L.C.

Wynne, ELLIS (*Y Lasynys, nr Harlech 7 III 1670/71; ∞1698 Lowri Wynne, ∞1702 Lowri Llwyd; †VII 1734), Welsh prose-writer. He graduated at Oxford, and became rector of Llandanwg in 1704/05 and of Llanfair Harlech in 1711. His satirical 'Visions' of the World, Death and Hell, which owe much to Roger L'Estrange's* version of the 'Visions' of Quevedo*, are skilfully contrived, and his vivid idiomatic style, in which the resources of the literary tradition and the racy vigour of the spoken language are both used with effect, has rarely been rivalled.

Rheol Buchedd Sanctaidd (1701; tr. of Jeremy Taylor's Holy Living); Gweledigaethau y Bardd Cwsg (1703; ed. J. Morris Jones, 1898); The Visions of the Sleeping Bard, tr. R. G. Davies, 1897; tr. T. Gwynn Jones, 1940); Prif Addysg y Cristion (1755).

Saunders Lewis, 'Y Bardd Cwsg' in Y Llenor, II (1923); Gwyn Thomas, Y Bardd Cwsg a'i Gefridir (1971).
B.Re.

Wyntoun, ANDREW OF (*c. 1350; †c. 1425), Scottish verse historian. He became Prior of the monastery on Lochleven about 1395. Although he writes in octosyllabic verse, Wyntoun is a serious historian like Barbour*, and his ten-book Orygynall Cronycle has some historical value in the later parts. It runs down to James* I.

The Orygynall Cronycle of Scotland (ed. D. Macpherson, 1795; ed. F. J. Amours, 6 vols, 1902-05, 1914).

Sir H. Maxwell, The Early Chronicles Relating to Scotland (1912); F. Brie, Die nationale Literatur Schottlands (1937).

J.K.

Wyspiański, STANISŁAW MATEUSZ IGNACY (*Cracow 15 I 1869; †ibid. 28 XI 1907), Polish writer and painter. Son of a sculptor, he studied at Cracow University and in the School of Art, where J. Matejko was his master. From 1890 he was several times abroad; Paris attracted him most. In 1900 he married a peasant woman and in 1905 he became Professor of applied art.

A man of the Renaissance type, he created a modern Polish drama, exerting a great influence on many of his successors. Though only four tragedies are based on the Greek tradition, there is a great deal of Greek imagery in some of his dramas based on purely Polish history and life. He uses allegories profusely, and Legion, Wesele—his most popular play—Wyzwolenie, Noc Listopadowa, Akropolis are allegorical and symbolic in character. His harmonious language, racy with the speech of the country people, greatly contributes to the originality of his plays and poems. Patriotic sentiment permeates most of the plays. A congenial translator of Corneille's* Cid (1907), he is very interesting in his remarks on Hamlet.

VERSE: Bolesław Śmiały (1900); Kazimierz Wielki (1900; ed. A. Grzymała-Siedlecki, 1920); Piast (1900); Henryk Pobożny (1903).—PLAYS: Legenda (1897); Meleager (1898; Eng. tr. E. and G. R. Noyes, 1933); Warszawianka (1898); Die Warschauerin, tr. S. von Odrowonsch, 1918); Protesilas i Laodamia (1899; 'P. and L.', tr. E. M. Clark and G. R. Noyes in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XI, 1933); Lelewel (1899); Kłątwa (1899; L'anathème, tr. A. de Lada and H. Pourrat, 1933); Legion (1900); Wesele (1900); Les noces, tr. A. de Lada and G. Lenormand, 1917; ed. with comm. L. Płoszewski, 1950); Wyzwolenie (1903; 2nd ed. with changes, 1906; Délivrance, tr. A. de Lada and J. Lichnerowicz, n.d.); Bolesław Śmiały (1903); Achilleis (1903); Akropolis (1904); Noc Listopadowa (1904; ed. with comm. J. Saloni, 1928); Skalka (1907); Powrót Odysa (1907); Sedziowie (1907); Die Richter, tr. A. von Guttry, 1933); Śmierć Ofelii (1907); Daniel (1908); Zygmunt August (crit. ed. L. Płoszewski, 1930).—VARIOUS: The tragical Historie of Hamlet świezo przeczytana i przeczmyślana (1905).—Dziela (ed. A. Chmiel, T. Sinko and L. Płoszewski, 8 vols, 1924-32); Dramatische Werke (tr. S. von Odrowonsch, 1918); Dziela zebrane (1958- ).

J. Kotarbiński, Pogrobowiec romantyzmu (1909); A. Grzymała-Siedlecki, S. W. Cechy i elementy jego twórczości (1909); Z. Marković, Der Begriff des Dramas bei W. (1915); T. Sinko, Antyk W. (1916; 2nd ed. 1922); S. Kołaczkowski, S. W. (1923); W. Borowy, 'S. W.' in Slavon. and East Europ. Rev., XI (1932-33); E. Krakowski, Deux poètes de l'héroïsme. Charles Péguy et S. W. (1937); A. Blum, Le drame du commande- ment dans les œuvres de S. W. consacrées à l'insurrection de novembre 1830 (Fribourg, 1943); C. Backvis, Le dramaturge S. W. (1952); W. Natanson, S. W. Próba nowego spojrzenia (1965); S. Kolbuszewski, Le théâtre de S. W. (1962).

S.S. (P.H.)

X

Xenophanes (6th century B.C.), Greek philosopher from Colophon in Ionia, was an exile for most of his life and travelled widely in the Western Greek world. He contributed to cosmology and ethics, attacking conventional notions rather than developing a new system; his main importance is that he tried to purge the Greek idea of god from notions unacceptable to philosophy by a fierce attack on the anthropomorphic gods of Homer*. Some fragments of his Satires (in hexameter verse) and other poems survive.

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, I (6th ed. 1951); J. Burnet, Early Greek Philosophy (4th ed. 1945; with tr.).

W. Jaeger, Theology of the Early Greek Philosophers (1947); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, I (1962). D.J.F.

Xenophon (*Attica c. 430; †Athens after 359 B.C.), Greek historian. As a young man he was an ardent follower of Socrates*, without having much grasp of his philosophy. In 401 he joined the Greek mercenary corps fighting for Cyrus the Younger in Persia. It was largely due to his leadership that the mercenaries returned safely after Cyrus' defeat and death at Cunaxa. Xenophon then fought under Agesilaus of Sparta, being banished from Athens for his part in the battle of Coronea in 394. After living for 24 years on his estate in Elis, he returned to Athens shortly after 370.

His historical works include the Anabasis, recounting the story of the mercenaries who fought for Cyrus, the Hellenica, a history of Greece from 411 to 362 in continuation of Thucydides*, and the Agesilaus, a panegyric on his former commander. The Cyropaedia, a romantic life of Cyrus the Great who is represented as Xenophon's ideal monarch, is scarcely history. The Memorabilia, Apology of Socrates, Symposium and Oeconomicus are accounts, the value of which has been much questioned, of conversations of Socrates. Minor works are the Hieron, a dialogue on monarchy, works on the Spartan constitution, on cavalry training, hunting and riding. The Pori, a pamphlet on Athenian state finance, is of doubtful authenticity, and the Constitution of Athens is certainly not by Xenophon.

Wyss, JOHANN DAVID (1743–1818) and JOHANN RUDOLF (1781–1830), father and son, author and reviser of Der schweizerische Robinson: see ROBINSONNADES.

Superstitious, old-fashioned and full of common sense, Xenophon is within his limits sincere and honest. He writes simple and lucid Greek, and sometimes, as in the Anabasis, his very lack of imagination is to his advantage as a story-teller.

E. C. Marchant, Xenophontis opera omnia (5 vols, 1900–19).—C. L. Brownson and O. J. Todd, Hellenica, Anabasis, Apology and Symposium (3 vols, 1914–23; with tr.); W. Miller, Cyropaedia (2 vols, 1914; with tr.); E. C. Marchant, Memorabilia and Oeconomicus (1923; with tr.) and Scripta minora (1925; with tr.); H. A. Holden, The Cyropaedia of X. (4 vols, 1887–90; with comm.) and The Oeconomicus of X. (5th ed. 1895; with comm.); F. Ollier, X., la République des Lacédémoniens (1934; with comm.); J. Luccioni, X., Hiéron (1948; with comm.).—G. E. Underhill, Commentary on the Hellenica of X. (1900).—The Persian Expedition (tr. R. Warner, 1944); Hellenica (tr. idem, 1966).

K. Joel, Der echte und der Xenophontische Sokrates (2 vols, 2nd ed. 1893–1901); H. Richards, X. and Others (1907); K. Münscher, X. in der griechisch-römischen Literatur (1920); A. Körte, 'Die Tendenz von X.s Anabasis' in Neue Jahrbücher für klassische Philol. (1922) and Afbau und Ziel von X.s Symposium (1927); J. Luccioni, Les idées politiques et sociales de Xénophon (1947); K. M. T. Chrimes, The Respublica Lacedaemoniorum Ascribed to X. (1948); F. Delebecque, Essai sur la vie de X. (1957). R.B.

Xenopol, ALEXANDRU (*Iasi 1847; †1920), Rumanian historian and economist. He studied law at Berlin on a grant given by the Junimea society and in 1883 was appointed Professor of history at Iasi University. Later he became editor of the historical review Arhiva, published in Iasi. His main study was Istoria românilor din Dacia Traiană (14 vols, 1888–93). This first comprehensive history of the Rumanians was the standard work on Rumanian history for many years. He also wrote numerous articles on the philosophy of history in various languages, which won him European renown. His economic studies are contained in Studii economice (1879).

Principes fondamentaux de l'histoire (1899);

Les Roumains—État matériel et intellectuel (1909).—Opere economice (1967). D.J.D.

J. P. R. Lyell, Cardinal X. (1917); M. Bataillon, Érasme et l'Espagne (1937; Span. tr. Mexico, 1950). E.M.W.

Ximenes, CARDINAL, otherwise FRAY FRANCISCO JIMÉNEZ DE CISNEROS (*Torrelaguna 1436; †Roa 1517), Spanish statesman, founder of Alcalá University and patron of the Complutensian Polyglot Bible (pr. Alcalá 1514–17; pub. 1522). It contains the editio princeps of the Greek New Testament, though Erasmus* version was published earlier. Ximenes also ordered the publication of other works of learning or devotion, including Herrera's* Agricultura.

Cartas del Cardenal F. J. de C. (2 vols, 1867–75).

Ximénez de Enciso, DIEGO: see Jiménez de Enciso, DIEGO.

Ximénez de Urrea, JERÓNIMO: see Urrea, JERÓNIMO JIMÉNEZ DE.

Ximénez de Urrea, PEDRO MANUEL: see Jiménez de Urrea, PEDRO MANUEL.

Xiphilinus: see John Xiphilinus.

Y

Yaari, YEHUDAH (*Tarnobzshec, Western Galicia 22 XI 1900), Hebrew novelist. He pioneered for Palestine from 1920, and joined the first socialist agricultural settlements, where he worked under A. D. Gordon* and Y. C. Brenner*.

His first great novel, K'Or Yahel (1945), was an intimate account of experiences during the Cossacks' invasion of Galicia in the First World War and of the Civil War in the Ukraine, and depicts a world divided between suffering saints and cruel torturers. The tremendous Odyssey to Palestine, told in fine lyrical prose, is a masterpiece. His Darke Ish (1950) is a psychological study of the rapid mental decline of a young man, after war-time and post-war experiences.

Ba-ohalim (1948); Beyn Ashmorot (1950); Shoreshe Alei Mayim (1950).—When the Candle Was Burning (tr. M. Hurwitz, 1947).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Yacine, KATEB (*Condé Smendou 26 VIII 1929), Algerian, writing in French. Yacine's work is a hymn in honour of his native land. Although in turn persecuted or totally ignored by succeeding regimes, he has created an ideal, dream-like Algeria for himself in his poetry and plays. His work, generally published in Parisian periodicals, is as yet uncollected, and exercises a great influence on the youth of the Third World. The plays in the trilogy Le cercle des représailles (1959), written in oratorical and metaphorical language, bear witness to his remarkable gift for dramatic poetry, at the same time cultured and savage.

VERSE: Soliloques (Bône, 1946); Nedjma ou le poème, ou le couteau (1948); Parmi les herbes qui refleurissent (1948, 1962, 1964); Le fondateur, déserteur (1956); Le vautour (1959); La rose de Blida (1963).—NOVELS: Nedjma (1956); Le polygone étoilé (1966).—PLAYS: Le cercle des représailles (1959; cont. Le cadavre encerclé; La poudre d'intelligence; Les ancêtres redoublent de férocité).

M.G.

Yahya Kemal Beyatlı (*Usküb 2 XII 1884; †Istanbul 1 XII 1958), Turkish poet. From an old Balkan family, he studied political science and history in Paris (1902–12). Professor at Istanbul University (1915) and Member of Parliament (1923), he later represented Turkey at Madrid, Warsaw and Karachi. Apart from his successful pastiches in the language and style of Naîfî and Nedim*, his work consists of a few dozen poems in classical prosody, some of the best written after the age of 50. His masterly versification, meticulous choice of words and skilful use of onomatopoeic effect achieve a fascinating musicality, which has made him an enormously popular poet. He also successfully experimented with a verse translation from Omar* Khayyâm and wrote some quatrains himself.

VERSE: Kendi gök kubbe (1961); Eski şiirin rûzgârıyla (1962); Rûbailer ve Hayyam rûbailerini Türkçe söyleyiş (1963).—ESSAYS: Aziz İstanbul (1964); Eğil dağlar (1966).—VARIOUS: Portreler (1968); Siyasi hikâyeler (1968).

Abdülhak Şinasi Hisar, Y. K.'e vedâ (1959); Nihat Sami Banarlı, Y. K. yaşarken (1959) and Y. K.'in hatıraları (1960); Sermet Sami Uysal, Y. K.'le sohbetler (1959); Adile Ayda, Y. K., Kendi ağzından fikirleri ve sanat görüşleri (1962). F.İ.

Yakamochi: see Ôtomo NO YAKAMOCHI.

Yakub Kadri Karaosmanoğlu (*Cairo 27 III 1889), Turkish author. From an aristocratic western Anatolian family, he was educated in Izmir and at a French school in Cairo. In 1908 he joined the 'Fecr-i Âti' literary school in Istanbul and attracted attention by his prose poems which revealed an outstanding stylist and mystic. He wrote for the press, and after the establishment of the Republic was elected a Member of Parliament. Later he represented Turkey at Prague, The Hague and Berne. His short stories which followed his prose poems have the same mystical atmosphere. His real talent and powerful personality are best revealed in his novels. These are period studies of Turkish society since the Tanzimat. He is considered one of the greatest prose writers of modern Turkish literature.

NOVELS: Kiralık Konak (1922); Nur Baba (1922; Ital. tr. E. Rossi, 1945; Flamme und Falter, tr. A. Schimmel, 1947); Hüküm Gecesi (1927); Sodom ve Gomora (1928; Leila, fille de Gomorrhe, tr. R. Marchand, 1934); Yaban (1932; Der Fremdling, tr. M. Schultz, 1939; Terra matrigna, Ital. tr. A. Scalero, 1941); Ankara (1934; Dutch tr. J. H. Kramers, 1938); Bir Sürgün (1938); Panorama (2 vols, 1953–54); Hep o şarkı (1956).—SHORT STORIES: Bir Serencam (1913; Eine Weibergeschichte und andere Novellen, tr. H. W. Duda, 1923; Mahdur, tr. H. J. Kissling, 1948); Rahmet (1922; new ed. with Bir Serencam, 1943).—ESSAYS: Erenlerin Bağından (1922; new ed. with Okun Ucundan, 1940); Ergenekon (2 vols, 1929–30); Alp Dağlarından (1942); Millî Savaş Hikâyeleri (1947).—MEMOIRS: Zoraki diplomat (1955); Anamın kitabı (1957); Vatan Yolunda (1958); Politikada 45 yıl (1968); Edebiyat ve gençlik hatıraları (1969).—VARIOUS: Ahmed Haşim (1934); Atatürk (1946).

E. Saussey, Prosateurs turcs contemporains (1935); O. Spies, Die türkische Prosaliteratur der Gegenwart (1943); Necdet Bingöl, Yakup K.'nin beş romanında Fransız realist ve natüralistlerinin tesirleri (1944); Hasan-Âli Yücel, Edebiyat tarihimizden (1957); Niyazi Akı, Y. K. K. (1960). F.İ.

Yakubovich, PETER FILIPPOVICH (*1860; †1911), Russian poet and revolutionary. His notable book of stories, V mire otverzhenykh (1896; under pseud. L. MELSHIN; 5th ed., 2 vols, 1932), gives—not unlike Dostoyevsky's* House of the Dead—a most impressive picture of convict life in Siberia. His civic poetry is of little interest.

J.L.

Yamabe NO AKAHITO (†soon after 736), Japanese poet. He and his slightly earlier contemporary, Kakinomoto* no Hitomaro, are known traditionally as the two best poets of the Manyōshū*. Yamabe was a courtier and often accompanied the Emperor on his journeys. Although his long poems are inferior to Hitomaro's, his short poems are of noteworthy beauty. Most of his themes describe nature, which he closely observed. His style was clear and graceful, with calm untroubled emotions, greatly contrasting with the passion of Hitomaro.

E.B.C.

Sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry, I (1936); Nippon Gakujutsu Shinkōkai, The Manyōshū, One Thousand Poems (1940; repr. 1965); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964).—Crit. assessments: R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961); E. R. Miner, An Introduction to Japanese Court Poetry (1968).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yamamoto Yūzō (*Tochigi 27 VII 1887; ∞1919 Honda Hanako), Japanese dramatist and novelist. After a very interrupted education he graduated in German literature in 1915 at Tokyo Imperial University and became a lecturer in Waseda University two years later. From 1910 onwards he had published a number of plays but did not gain recognition until his Seimei no kammuri in 1920, after which he consolidated his fame with a succession of fine plays. From 1926 he also wrote novels, which rival his plays in quality. He has also translated several works of German literature. His style of writing shows a liberal and sympathetic outlook.

E.B.C.

PLAYS: Seimei no kammuri (1920; 'The Crown of Life', tr. G. W. Shaw in Three Plays by Y., Tokyo, 1935); Eijigoroshi (1920; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Sakazaki, Dewa no kami (1921; 'Sakazaki, Lord Dewa', tr. G. W. Shaw, op. cit.); Nyonin aishi (1929; 'The Sad Tale of a Woman', tr. G. W. Shaw, op. cit.).—NOVELS: Iki to shi ikeru mono (1926); Nami (1930; Wellen, tr. W. Sakurai, 1943); Kaze (1930); Onna no isshō (1933; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit.).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yamanoe NO OKURA (*659; †c. 733), Japanese poet. One of the best poets of the Manyōshū*, he was a great scholar of Chinese learning: his poems are philosophical and meditative, and show sympathy for children and the sufferings of the poor.

E.B.C.

Sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry, I (1936); Nippon Gakujutsu Shinkōkai, The Manyōshū, One Thousand Poems (1940; repr. 1965); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964).—Crit. assessments: R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961); E. R. Miner, An Introduction to Japanese Court Poetry (1968).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yamato Monogatari ('Tales of Yamato'), a Japanese collection of stories built around poems. Its date of composition is unknown; probably c. 950. Its authorship is uncertain, as is also the reason for the title. Much of it is close to Ise* Monogatari in style, though the last section of the work is less lyrical and places more emphasis on the prose elements in the stories.

One story tr. B. H. Chamberlain, 'The Maiden of Unahi' in Trans. Asiat. Soc. Japan (1878); another story tr. in D. L. Keene, 'Bashō's journey to Sarashina', ibid., 3rd ser., V (1957).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yamazaki Sōkan: see Sōkan.

Yan, VASILY GRIGORIEVICH, pseud. of V. YANCHEVETSKY, whose remarkable and well-documented trilogy about the Mongol invasion in the 13th century, Chengis Khan (1939), Batu Khan (1941; Eng. tr. L. Erskin-Britton, 1945) and K poslednemy moryu (1955), is among the best historical novels published in Soviet Russia.

J.L.

Yáñez, RODRIGO: see Alfonso Onceno, POEMA DE.

Yang CHU (fl. middle of 4th century B.C.), Chinese philosopher. He insisted on the perfection of the individual as the means to the perfect society, a doctrine attacked by Mêng-tzū*. Only an indirect (and distorted) account of his teaching has been preserved in the 'Yang Chu' chapter (Ch. 7) of Lieh-tzū*.

Yang Chu's Garden of Pleasure (tr. A. Forke, 1912).

A.R.D.

Yang HSIUNG (□Ch'êng-tu 53 B.C.; †A.D. 18), Chinese philosopher and author. Yang came to the capital Ch'ang-an in middle age, gaining his first appointment c. 13 B.C. He remained at court under three emperors without seeking advancement, and then, unhappily for his reputation with later Confucians, supported the reforms of the usurper Wang Mang (A.D. 9–22). In his earlier years he wrote fu-poetry, modelled on Ch'ü* Yüan and Ssü-ma* Hsiang-ju, but later he turned to philosophy. His thought, as was typical of his period, was a synthesis of Confucianism, Taoism and naturalistic speculation. His chief works were Fa-yen and T'ai-hsüan ching for which he adopted the forms of the 'Analects' and the 'Classic of Changes' respectively. He also produced the first dictionary of dialects (Fang-yen).

FU-POETRY: Chu-p'in fu ('Poverty', tr. A. Waley in The Temple and Other Poems, 1923); Kan-ch'uan fu, Ch'ang-yang fu, Yü-lieh fu (tr. E. von Zach in Die chinesische Anthologie, 2 vols, Harvard, 1958).—Fa-yen (tr. E. von Zach in Sinologische Beiträge, IV, Batavia, 1939; Le catéchisme philosophique de Yang-Hiong-tse, tr. B. Belpaire, 1960). A.R.D.

Yang WAN-LI (□Chi-shui 29 X 1127; †15 VI 1206), Chinese poet and essayist. Yang had a long though not greatly distinguished official career (1154–c. 1194) during which he held a number of academic and literary posts at the capital and provincial governorships. Although an adherent of neo-Confucianism and himself the author of some minor neo-Confucianist works, he did not adopt the classically-based ku-wên but the 'parallel' prose style, which he wrote with great skill. However, he is most remembered as a prolific poet, who experimented with a variety of models but achieved considerable originality.

Ch'êng-chai chi (coll. works; 1208; sel. tr. in K. Yoshikawa, An Introduction to Sung Poetry, tr. B. Watson, 1967). A.R.D.

Yannai (fl. some time between 3rd and 8th centuries), Palestinian Hebrew religious poet. He lived after Yose* ben Yose and is said to have been the teacher of Kalir*. He is the first known writer of פייטות to use rhyme and to introduce homiletic and legal matter into his liturgical poems.

I. Davidson, Machzor Y. (1919); M. Zulai, Piyyute Y. (1938); J. Schirmann, 'Hebrew liturgical poetry and Christian hymnology' in Jewish Quart. Rev., XLIV (1953). C.R.

Yao NAI (□T'ung-ch'êng 17 I 1732; †Nanking 15 X 1815), Chinese essayist. After a successful civil-service career until 1774, Yao taught in various academies, expounding his views of prose-writing which he illustrated with his widely-read anthology Ku-wên tz'ü lei-tsuan ('Classified Anthology of Ancient Literature'; completed 1779, pr. c. 1820). He was the real founder of the important 'T'ung-ch'êng' school of prose, although he himself attributed his principles to Fang Pao and Liu Ta-k'uei, also natives of T'ung-ch'êng. While achieving the simplicity which he emphasized, his essays lack depth.

Hsi-pao hsüan ch'üan-chi (coll. works; 1866). A.R.D.

Yarchi, SOLOMON: see Rashi.

Yaşar Kemal (*Gökçeli village, nr Osmaniye, Adana province 1922), Turkish novelist; of peasant origin. Forced to leave school at an early age, he worked at all imaginable types of jobs. He began his career as a poet and folk-lorist and then became a journalist in Istanbul and concentrated on writing novels. His works relate the life and struggles of the southern Anatolian peasantry against the great landowners and local bureaucracy. His fluent prose has the fascination of Anatolian folk literature.

NOVELS: Teneke (1955); İnce Memed (1955; tr. into over 20 langs; Memed My Hawk, tr. S. Gökçeli, 1961); Orta direk (1960; The Wind From the Plain, tr. idem, 1968); Yer demir gök bakar (1963); İnce Memed, II (1969); Agrıdaki efsanesi (1970).—SHORT STORIES: Sarı sıcak (1952); Bütün hikâyeler (complete short stories; 1967; Anatolian Tales, tr. S. Gökçeli, 1969); Üç Anadolu efsanesi (1967).—ESSAYS: Yanan ormanlarda elli gün (1955); Çukurova yana yana (1955); Peri bacaları (1957); Taş çatlasa (1961).—PLAYS: Teneke (from the novel; 1965); Yer demir gök bakar (from the novel; 1967).

Tahir Alangu, Cumhuriyetten sonra hikâye ve roman, III (1965). F.I.

Yāska (c. 700 B.C.), Sanskrit author of the Nirukta, the earliest glossary of Vedic words, expanded many centuries later by Sāyana (†1387).

H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Yasuhara TEISHITSU: see Teishitsu.

Yavorov, PEYU, pseud. of P. KRACHOLOV (*Chirpan 1 I 1878; ∞19 IX 1912 Lora Karavelova; †Sofia 29 X 1914), Bulgarian poet and playwright. His early Narodnik verse was the start of a lifelong commiseration in his poetry with the oppressed or rejected, be they peasants, refugees or, ultimately, his own psychotic self. A provincial telegraphist, he was transferred to Sofia in 1900 (on publication of his poem 'Kaliopa') at the behest of Dr Krustev* and Pencho Slaveykov*, who 're-christened' him 'Yavorov' and acclaimed him a star in their 'Missul circle'. In 1902–03 he joined Gotse Delchev's rebels in Macedonia (still then under Turkey) and ran their organ Svoboda ili smurt ('Freedom or Death'), recording his experiences in memoirs and a biography of Delchev (1904).

The crisis marked by his retirement from the Macedonian and other causes is recorded in his self-analysing poems Nosht ('Night') and Pessen na pessenata mi ('The Song of My Song'). Influenced by French poets during his secondment to Nancy (arranged by Shishmanov* in 1906–07), he became regarded as Bulgaria's first Symbolist poet. His obsession with tragic destiny did not inhibit his power of language and rhythm. This, together with his exploration of the inner self, greatly enhanced the range of Bulgarian poetry. With his appointment to the National Theatre (1908–13) he became also a successful playwright, but grief at P. Todorov's* sister's death followed by the agonies of his subsequent marriage led to his suicide, a crise de passion much discussed ever since.

Stihotvorenia (1901); Bezunitsi (1907); Haydushki kopnenia (1909); Podir senkite na oblatsite (1910); V polite na Vitosh (1911); Kogato grum udari (1912).—Coll. works (ed. V. Vassilev, 5 vols, 1934–36; 5 vols, 1959–60).

M. Arnaudov, Kum psihografiata na P. K. Y. (1916); Novi prinosi (1934) and P. K. Y. . . anketa (1961); K. Krustev, P. Y. et alii (1917); N. Sakuzova, Muzikalnost v poeziata na Y. (1920); A. Zlatarov, Tragediata na Y. (1925); L. Russev, Poeziata na Y. (1939); M. Nikolov, P. Y. (1940); P. Russev, P. Y. (1947); G. Naydenova, P. Y. (1957). V.P.

Yavorsky, STEFAN (*Yavor 1658; †1722), Russian theologian, from 1700 Archbishop of Ryazan, one of the principal helpers of Peter* the Great. He wrote a number of polemical pamphlets, yet he became famous mainly on account of his sermons. As he did not agree with all the reforms of the Tsar, he was eventually replaced by Feofan Prokopovich*.

Kamen' very (1728); Neizdannye propovedi (1867).

J. H. Chistovich, Feofan Prokopovich i ego vremena (1868). J.L.

Yaywitz, ZEEB WOLF (*Kolna, Poland 26 IX 1847; †London 24 I 1924), Hebrew scholar, essayist and historian. Although he started writing aged about 40, he nevertheless enriched Hebrew literature with a number of important works, including the translation into classical Hebrew of many Talmudic legends.

Toldot Israel (9 vols, 1894–1924); Sichot Mni Kedem (Talmudic legends; Warsaw, 1887; 2nd ed., London, 1927); Idylls (Warsaw, 1893).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Yayū, pseud. of YOKOI TOKITSURA (*Owari 24 X 1702; †ibid. 15 VII 1783), Japanese haiku poet. A teacher of the military arts, he was better known as a writer of haiku and also of a related type of concise, epigrammatic prose called haibun.

Sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, An Anthology of Haiku (1932); R. H. Blyth, A History of Haiku, I (1963).—W. Naumann, 'Aus dem Uzuragoromo des Yokoi Y.' in Nachrichten der Gesellschaft für Natur- und Völkerkunde Ostasiens, LXXXI (1957). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yazykov, NIKOLAY MIKHAYLOVICH (*Simbirsk 4 III 1803; †20 XII 1846), Russian poet of the Pushkin* Pléiade. In his early verses he celebrated the riotous life of the students—he was at the time at Dorpat University. Later he wrote excellent (though mainly 'visual') nature poems and elegies. To these he added some patriotic verse imbued with the Slavophil spirit. For sheer verbal magnificence Yazykov had few equals. He was much admired by Gogol*.

Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (1934).

V. Y. Smirnov, Zhizn' i poeziya Yazykova (1900). J.L.

Yeats, WILLIAM BUTLER (*Dublin 13 VI 1865; †1917 Georgie Hyde-Lees; †Roquebrune 28 I 1939), Irish poet and dramatist. He was the son of a Dublin painter, who encouraged that interest in writing poetry which Yeats showed from the age of 16. Most of his childhood was spent in County Sligo, whose scenery, stories and place-associations affected his poetry, and in London and Dublin, where he studied art. After some association in London with the fin de siècle poets, during which time he founded, with Ernest Rhys, the Rhymers Club and also dabbled in theosophy and the occult, he returned to Ireland, where, through the Fenian John O'Leary and the beautiful Maud Gonne, he became associated for a time with the Irish revolutionary movement. Later with Lady Gregory* he founded the Abbey Theatre, which he directed and for which he wrote his plays. In 1923 he was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. He was a senator of the Irish Free State (1922–28).

Yeats was the greatest Irish poet who has written in English. He was the artistic mainspring of the Irish literary and dramatic movements from 1889 to 1925. From writing delicate lyrics, romantic and mythological, he passed to a pared personal style, full of individual idioms and tones and of an allusiveness nurtured by his many interests. His plays, even those of too esoteric an interest, are full of poetic fire and his prose writings, especially those which express his critical ideas, are memorable. R.McH.

VERSE: The Wanderings of Oisín (1889); The Wind Among the Reeds (1899); In the Seven Woods (1904); The Green Helmet and Other Poems (1910); Responsibilities (1914); The Wild Swans at Coole (1919); Michael Robartes and the Dancer (1921); The Tower (1928); The Winding Stair (1933); Words for Music Perhaps (1932); Collected Poems (1933); A Full Moon in March (1935); Last Poems and Plays (1940).—PLAYS: Collected Plays, 1892–1934 (1934); A Full Moon in March (1935); The Herne's Egg (1938).—VARIOUS: Letters on Poetry to Dorothy Wellesley (1940); Letters to Katharine Tynan (ed. R. McHugh, 1953); W. B. Yeats and T. Sturge Moore: Their Correspondence (ed. U. Bridge, 1953); John

B. Y.'s Letters to His Son (ed. J. Hone, 2nd ed. 1962).

COLLECTIONS: Collected Poems (1950); Variorum Poems (ed. P. Allt and R. K. Alspach, 1957); Variorum Plays (ed. R. K. Alspach, 1966).—Autobiographies (1955); Mythologies (1959); Essays and Introductions (1961); A Vision (1961); Explorations (1962); Uncollected Prose (ed. J. P. Frayne, 1970).—Letters (ed. Allan Wade, 1954); Senate Speeches (ed. D. Pearce, 1961).—SCHOLARLY AIDS: A. N. Jeffares, A Commentary on the Collected Poems (1968); Allan Wade, Bibliography (3rd ed. 1968); K. G. W. Cross and R. T. Dunlop, Bibliography of Y. Criticism 1887–1965 (1971).

R. Ellmann, Y., the Man and the Masks (1949; repr. 1961), The Identity of Y. (1954; 2nd ed. 1964) and Eminent Domain (1967); A. N. Jeffares, W. B. Y., Man and Poet (1949); T. R. Henn, The Lonely Tower (1950; repr. 1962); T. Parkinson, W. B. Y. Self-Critic (1951); F. Kermode, Romantic Image (1957); F. A. C. Wilson, W. B. Y. and Tradition (1958) and Y.'s Iconography (1960); G. Melchiori, The Whole Mystery of Art (1960); J. Stallworthy, Between the Lines (1963) and Vision and Revision in Y.'s Last Poems (1969); P. Ure, Y. the Playwright (1963); H. Vendler, Y.'s Vision and the Later Plays (1963); S. B. Bushrui, Y.'s Verse Plays (1965); E. Engelberg, The Vast Design (1965); D. Torchiana, W. B. Y. and Georgian Ireland (1966); A. Zwerdling, Y. and the Heroic Ideal (1966). R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Yeh SHAO-CHÜN or YEH SHĒNG-T'AO (*Soochow 1894), Chinese short-story writer and essayist. Yeh was a primary-school teacher from 1912 and had published fiction in the classical language before becoming one of the early successful writers in the colloquial-literature movement. He was a founder of the Literary Association (1920) and afterwards worked as an editor for major Shanghai publishers. The 1920s and 1930s were his creative period. His best-known work is Ni Huan-chih (1930; Schoolmaster Ni Huan-chih, tr. A. C. Barnes, Peking, 1958).

C. T. Hsia, A History of Modern Chinese Fiction, 1917–1957 (1961; incl. biblio. of Yeh's works). A.R.D.

Yehalal, pseud. of JUDAH LEIB LEVIN (*Minsk 5 X 1844; †Kiev 13 XI 1925), Hebrew poet; his style is austere and realistic but lacks finesse. His early lyrical songs are not significant; he distinguished himself only in his socialist poems, in which he related the tragic lot of the Jews in Russia—e.g. Kishron Ha-Maaseh and the epic poem in three parts Elchanan.

Sifte Renanot (Zhitomir, 1871); Coice (2 vols, Warsaw, 1911); Ketavim (Jerusalem, 1957).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Yeh-lü CH'U-TS'AI (□Yen-ching 1189; †1243),

Chinese statesman and writer, and a descendant of the Liao (Khitan) royal family. He served as an official of the Chin (North China) empire and later (1218) became the chief adviser of Genghis Khan and of his successor, Ogotai. It was he who framed an administrative system for the Mongol empire. He left an account of his travels with Genghis to Central Asia (Hsi-yu lu) and a collection of poetry and prose.

Hsi-yu lu (1229; tr. I. de Rachewiltz in Monumenta Serica, XXI, 1962).—Chan-jan chü-shih wên-chi (coll. works). A.R.D.

Yehoash, pseud. of SHLOIME BLOOMGARTEN (*Wiersbolova, Russia 1870; †Chicago 1927), Yiddish poet and philologist. Of his early writing, in Hebrew, little was published. Before emigrating to America (1890), he studied languages including classical Arabic, and translated into Yiddish works by Byron*, Longfellow*, Omar* Khayyām and others. His greatest translation was that of the Bible on which he worked after 1907 (only parts of this were published during his lifetime). These translations were accompanied by original research and extensive annotations. He was co-author of a dictionary of Hebraic and Chaldaic words in Yiddish. His original poetry foreshadowed the 'introspective' school in poetry.

Gezamelte lieder (1907); Fabeln (incl. trs from Eng. and other langs; 1912); Fun der velt un yener (1913).—Shriftn (7 vols, 1913; 2nd ed., 10 vols, 1920).—Poems of Y. (tr. I. Goldstick, 1952). J.S.

Yehoshua, A. B. (*Haifa 1937), Hebrew writer. His stories, told in a clipped economical prose style, often contain within their contemporary setting an allegorical account of the Jewish situation in history.

Three Days and a Child (stories; tr. Miriam Arad, 1971). L.Y.

Yen Fu (□Hou-kuan 8 I 1854; †27 X 1921), Chinese writer. Yen was sent to study at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich (1877), and became on his return (1879) an instructor at Pei-yang Naval Academy. An acknowledged ku-wên ('old-style') prose writer, he translated Thomas Huxley's* Evolution and Ethics (1898), Adam Smith's* Wealth of Nations (1901) and other Western sociological and scientific works.

B. Schwartz, In Search of Wealth and Power: Yen Fu and the West (1964). A.R.D.

Yen Yü (□Shao-wu, early 13th century), Chinese critic. Well known as a poet in his own time, Yen was later remembered chiefly as the author of an important work of poetical criticism (Ts'ang-lang shih-hua). Wang* Shih-chên developed his shêng-yün theory from this source.

Ts'ang-lang shih-hua (Ts'ang-lang's Gespräche über die Dichtung, tr. G. Debon, 1962).

A.R.D.

Yesenin, SERGEY ALEXANDROVICH: see Esenin, SERGEY ALEXANDROVICH.

Yevtushenko, EVGENIY ALEXANDROVICH: see Evtushenko, EVGENIY ALEXANDROVICH.

Yi HAEJO (*1869; †1927), the most prolific of early modern Korean novelists, and the only one who wrote novels based on traditional stories as well as novels with contemporary themes.

Chŏn Kwangyong, 'Hwa ŭi Hyŏl, Ch'un Oe Ch'un, Chayu Chong' in Sasanggye, IV.6-9 (1957).
W.E.S.

Yi INJIK (*1862; †1916), author of the first modern novel in Korean, Hyŏl ŭi Nu ('Tears of Blood'; 1906), and among the first professional journalists, but not greatly admired by modern Korean critics.

W. E. Skillend, 'The texts of the first New Novel in Korean' in Asia Major, XIV.1 (1968).
W.E.S.

Yi KWANGSU (*1892; †1950), Korean novelist, short-story writer and essayist. Koreans compare him with Tolstoy* in respect of the length of his stories and his rather gloomy reflections on human nature.

Kim Tongin, Ch'unwŏn Yŏn'gu (1938).

W.E.S.

Yizhar, S., formerly SMILANSKY (*Rehovot 1916), Hebrew novelist; member of the Knesset for Mapai. His first story, Ephraim Hazer Leaspeset, was published in Gilyonoth (1938). His best-known novel, Yemei Ziklag (1958), describes an incident in the 1948 war. He introduced a new style into Hebrew literature, evolving Gnessin's* stream-of-consciousness technique to investigate the minds of his characters. This description of consciousness serves instead of a developed, formal plot, although he does work within a framework of action.
L.Y.

Befaatei Negev (1945); Hachorshah Bagivah (1947).—'Hirbet Hizah' in Eng. in Jewish Quart. (1957) and in A Jewish Quarterly Omnibus (1962); Midnight Convoy and Other Stories (Jerusalem, 1969).
Y.F.; L.Y.

Yntema, JACOB WYBRAND, Dutch early 19th-century poet-publisher; from 1813 editor of the Vaderlandsche Letteroefeningen.

R. C. Bakhuizen van den Brink, Studiën en Schetsen, III (1876); J. Hartog in De Gids, XLI, XLIII (1877, 1879).
J.W.W.

Yoçef, COPLAS DE, Spanish poem (?early 14th century). The MS of this fragment of 168 lines of a life of Joseph is in Hebrew characters. The metre is a degenerate form of CUADERNA VÍA. The story is a paraphrase of Genesis xlvii-1 and incorporates rabbinic material and medieval Jewish legends. It has little literary value.

Ed. I. González Llubera (Cambridge, 1935).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Yokoi YAYŪ: see Yayū.

Yokomitsu RŪICHI (*Higashiyama, Fukushima 17 III 1898; †30 XII 1947), Japanese novelist. At one time a 'Neo-Perceptionist' (along with Kawabata*), he turned later to psychological analysis of the intellectual in the modern world. Many of his novels reflect the idea that the vicissitudes of human life are not the result of human causes, but the outcome of a fatal predestination outside human control.

Hae (1923; 'The Fly', tr. J. Nathan in Japan Quart., XII.1, 1965); Shizuka naru raretsu (1925; 'Silent Ranks', tr. J. Bester in Japan P.E.N. News, XII, 1964); Haru wa basha ni notte (1926; 'Spring Came on a Horse-Drawn Cart', tr. M. Suzuki in The Heart Is Alone, ed. R. N. McKinnon, 1957; 'Spring, in a Surrey', tr. J. Nathan, op. cit.); Kikai (1930; 'Machine', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Modern Japanese Stories, ed. I. I. Morris, 1961); Shin'en (1932; summaries of this and prec. in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Jikan (1931; 'Time', tr. D. L. Keene in Modern Japanese Literature, 1956); 3 of above trs repr. in Time; Machine; Spring, in a Surrey (1965).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yomtob Lipmann Heller: see Heller, YOMTOB LIPMANN.

Yonge, CHARLOTTE MARY (*Otterbourne 11 VIII 1823; †Elderfield 24 III 1901), English novelist, children's story-teller and historical writer. A Sunday-school teacher at seven and in print at 15, she combined pedagogic and literary talents which Keble*, appointed to an adjacent parish in 1835, enlisted in the Tractarian cause. Her first popular success, The Heir of Redclyffe (1853), attuned to contemporary religious ardour, was followed by Heartsease (1854), which made Kingsley* weep, and numerous novels, with domestic or historic themes, for young and old, showing her graceful gift for portraiture, humour and moral understanding. She long edited the Tractarian Monthly Packet in which appeared her Cameos of History.
R.M.H.

The Little Duke (1854); The Lances of Lynwood (1855); The Daisy Chain (1856); The Chaplet of Pearls (1868); Cameos From English History

(9 vols, 1868–99); Novels and Tales (40 vols, 1879–99).

C. Coleridge, Life and Letters... (incl. a few chs of an autobiog.; 1903); G. Battiscombe, C. M. Y. (1943); M. Mare and A. Percival, Victorian Best Seller. The World of C. M. Y. (1947); A Chaplet for C. Y. (ed. G. Battiscombe and M. Laski, 1965). R.M.H. (M.A.)

York Cycle. The sole complete MS of these Miracle plays (B.M. MS Add. 35290) is a mid-15th-century copy made for the Corporation from 'originals' belonging to the craft guilds, probably dating from the late 14th century. The Christmas and Easter plays in this Cycle owe much to earlier Latin plays associated with the respective liturgical offices. This relationship has been ascertained from that which this Cycle bears to the much earlier Shrewsbury Fragments and the later *Towneley** (or Wakefield) Cycle. Early in the 15th century the Cycle comprised 57 plays: when the surviving MS was prepared these had been condensed to 48 with a fragment of The Coronation of Our Lady, itself a late addition. Like other cycles, the York plays show signs of rehandling by several authors, the best-known being the latest, often referred to as 'the York realist'.

The first record of the Cycle at York dates from 1378, shortly after which 12 sites or 'stations' within the city were prescribed by the Corporation for performances of the plays, held annually on Corpus Christi Day itself until the suppression of the Feast (1548). The Cycle was revived under Mary I and played sporadically under Elizabeth* I until finally suppressed by order of the Privy Council in 1569. York also possessed a Creed Play and a Paternoster Play, both of which were suppressed and disappeared at this time. The Cycle was revived in a condensed version with great success in 1951 and has been performed in the ruins of St Mary's Abbey on a fixed stage every three years since then.

L. T. Smith, Y. Plays (1885); J. S. Purvis, The Y. C. of Mystery Plays (1957, 1962). G.W.

Yosa BUSON: see Buson.

Yosano AKIKO, née ŌTORI AKIKO (*Sakai, Osaka 7 XII 1878; ∞1901 Yosano Hiroshi; †29 V 1942), Japanese poet. She was a lyrical writer of tanka.

E.B.C.

Midaregami (1901; Tangled Hair, tr. S. Sakai-nishi, 1935; see also Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948); sel. poems tr. in A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry (1936). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Yose (Yosi, Yossi) ben Yose, THE ORPHAN (fl. some time between 3rd and 7th century), Palestinian Hebrew religious poet, the oldest known writer of PIYYUT. Seven poems, some of them of considerable length, are known to be by him.

G. A. Prins, Die Aboda des Jose ben Jose (1900). C.R.

Yoshida KENKŌ, pseud. of YOSHIDA KANEYOSHI, also called URABE KANEYOSHI since the Yoshida family was a branch of the Urabe family (*Kyoto 1283; †ibid. 23 III 1350), Japanese writer and poet. Born of a Shinto priestly family, in his early life he was in the service of the retired Emperor Go-Uda (reigned 1275–87), but on the latter's death in 1324 he became a Buddhist monk and took the name Kenkō. He lived in retirement thereafter but probably not in such austerity as his writings might suggest. His fame rests on a collection of essays, anecdotes and reflections called Tsurezuregusa (c. 1330–35) which is comparable in contents and importance to Makura no sōshi by Sei* Shōnagon and Hōjōki by Kamo* no Chōmei. In 244 chapters he ranges over a wide number of subjects connected with religion and philosophy; his ideas reflect much of Buddhism, but also include something from Shinto and from Chinese philosophers, especially Chuang-tzū*. He was inspired by the classics of earlier Japanese literature and had as his ideal an intellectual life formed of a harmony between literature, religion and ethics. The book gives the impression of his having been a cultured and refined man, although there are certain passages which might give support to a later, but unreliable, tradition which paints him as an unscrupulous and cynical character.

Tsurezuregusa is like an oasis in the desert of this period of Japanese literature, when prolonged civil war and unrest had produced a general decline. His poems are also of high quality.

E.B.C.

Tsurezuregusa: Essays in Idleness: The T. of Kenkō (tr. D. L. Keene, 1967: best tr.); also tr.: G. B. Sansom in Trans. Asiat. Soc. Japan, XXXIX (1911; extracts in Anthology of Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1955); W. N. Porter, The Miscellany of a Japanese Priest (1913); T. Wakameda, The Idle Thoughts of a Recluse (1914); C. S. Eby, Meditations of a Recluse (1934); R. Kurata, The Harvest of Leisure (partial tr.; 1931); O. Benl, Betrachtungen aus der Stille (1963).—Kenkō hōshi shū (verse; c. 1340–50).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Young, ARTHUR (*London 11 IX 1741; ∞1765 Martha Allen; †ibid. 20 IV 1820), English agriculturist and traveller, the author of authoritative surveys of rural and industrial economics.

A Farmer's Letters to the People of England (2 vols, 1768); A Six Weeks Tour thro' the Southern Counties (1768); A Course of Experimental Agriculture (1770); A Six Months Tour through the North of England (4 vols, 1771); Tours in Ireland (2 vols, 1780); Travels in France (2 vols, 1794); Autobiography (ed. M. Betham-Edwards, 1898).

A. Defries, Sheep and Turnips: Being the Life of A. Y. (1938); J. G. Gazley, 'A. Y.: Some biographical sources' in Bull. John Rylands Libr., XXXVII (1955). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Young, DOUGLAS CUTHBERT COLQUHOUN (*Tayport, Fife 5 VI 1913; ∞1943 Helena Gossaree Auchterlonie), Scottish poet and man of letters. A man of catholic accomplishments but a stout and vivacious champion of Scots freedom. His poetry, in both 'Lallans' and English, is fluent and rhythmical and marked by kindly human feeling.

VERSE: Auntran Blads (1943); A Braird o Thistles (1947).—PLAYS: The Puddocks (1958); The Burdies (1959; both trs of Aristophanes into Scots).—PROSE: Chasing an Ancient Greek (1950); Scotland's Story (1957); Edinburgh in the Age of Sir Walter Scott (1965); St. Andrews: Town and Gown (1969). G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

Young, EDWARD (*Upham ?1683; ∞1731 Lady Elizabeth Lee; †Welwyn 5 IV 1765), English poet and divine whose uneventful later life, tinged with a sense of frustration, was passed in the country living of Welwyn. He wrote satires, collected in The Universal Passions (1725–28), and aged 62 published his Night Thoughts, a widely popular blank-verse meditation, which greatly influenced European pre-Romanticism. His unequal production includes two plays, some loyal absurdities, and a verse paraphrase of Job.

Poem on the Last Day (1713); Paraphrase on part of the Book of Job (1719); Ocean . . . With a discourse on Ode (1728); Imperium Pelagi. A naval Lyrick (1730); The Complaint, or Night Thoughts on Life, Death and Immortality (9 parts, 1742–45); Resignation (2 parts, 1763).—The Revenge (tragedy; 1721); The Brothers (tragedy; 1753).—Works (6 vols, 1757–78); Poetical Works (with life by J. Mitford; 2 vols, 1830); Correspondence (ed. H. Pettit, 1971).

George Eliot in Essays and Leaves from a Notebook (1884); H. C. Shelley, The Life and Letters of E. Y. (1914); C. V. Wicker, E. Y. and the Fear of Death (1952); The Book Collector, XIX–XX (1970–71; on trs). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Young, STARK (*Como, Miss. 11 VIII 1881; †New York 6 I 1963), American poet, novelist and drama critic. A versatile writer, he is now remembered as an influential and significant drama critic. So Red the Rose (1934) has been considered one of the finest novels on the Civil War.

The Blind Man at the Window (1906); Guinevere (1906); The Flower in Drama (1923); The Theatre

(1927); The Torches Flare (1928); Feliciano (1935); The Pavilion (1951).

E. Bentley, In Search of Theatre (1953); Southern Renaissance: The Literature of the Modern South (ed. L. D. Rubin and R. D. Jacobs, 1953). I.W.

Yovkov, YORDAN (*Jeravna 9 XI 1884; †Plovdiv 15 X 1937), Bulgarian author. A village teacher in the Dobruja, he was called up to serve in the Balkan and First World Wars. He recorded his impressions in Zemlyatsi ('Countrymen') and other stories which portray the Bulgarian peasant uprooted to serve in camp and trench. In government service for the rest of his life (including service in the Bucharest legation, 1920–27), he continued his studies of peasant life centred often on a Dobruja village 'Lyulyakevo', becoming with the more urbane Vazov* the most cherished of Bulgarian prose-writers. In his story-cycles and novels he sought the national mystique, whether in his Stara Planina legends, in his peasants' primeval faith or in the Dobruja frontier lands' resistance to Rumania. Often compared to Elin* Pelin, he lacked that writer's light touch and lyrical humour but is preferred by many for his spiritual depth and epic analysis of Bulgarian rural life and human character. He wrote a few plays, which are still successfully performed.

Razkazi (3 vols, 1917–32); Jetvaryat (1920); Posledna radost (1926); Pessen na kolelata and Staroplaninski legendi (1927); Albena (1930); Milionerut (1930); Boryana (1932); Chiflikut kray granitsata (1934); Jensko Surtse (1935); Ako mojeha da govoryat (1936); Obiknoven chovek (1936); Goromolov (1938).—Coll. works (15 vols, 1928–38; 7 vols, 1956).

Sbornik Y. Y. 1880–1937 (1937); M. Nikolov, Tvorcheskiyat put na Y. Y. (1938); G. Vassilev, Y. Y.—spomeni (1940); D. Minev, Y. Y. (1947); I. Meshekov, Y. Y. (1947); P. P. Pondev, Elin Pelin i Y. Y. (1956); S. Kazanjiev, Sreshhti i razgovori s Y. Y. (1960); S. Vassilev, Esteticheski problemi v tvorchestvoto na Y. Y. (1961). V.P.

Yperman, JAN, 14th-century Dutch physician who earned the title of 'father of Flemish medicine' with his two books in the vernacular, Medicine Boeck and Cyurgie.

C. Broeckx, La Chirurgie de Maître Johan Y. (2nd ed. 1866) and Traité de médecine pratique de Maître J. Y. (1867); E. C. van Leersum, De 'Cyurgie' van Meester J. Y. (n.d.); L. Elaut, De medicina van J. Y. (1972).

A. J. J. van de Velde in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1931, 1933); L. Elaut in Leuvense Bijdragen, LXI (1972). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Yriarte, TOMÁS DE: see Iriarte, TOMÁS DE.

Yü HSIN (□Hsin-yeh 513; †581), Chinese poet and prose-writer. Yü was subjected to differing literary influences, because he served first under the Southern Liang dynasty and after c. 552 in the north. His work may thus be divided into two periods, although the whole is marked by an elegance and strongly rhythmical character. It represents the culmination of the formal tendencies of the 'Six Dynasties' era. He was among the most skilful writers of 'parallel' prose.

Yü Tzū-shan chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: E. von Zach, Sinologische Beiträge, III, Batavia, 1936; J. D. Frodsham and Ch'eng Hsi, An Anthology of Chinese Verse, 1967). A.R.D.

Yü TA-FU, courtesy name of Yü WÊN (*Fu-yang 1896; †Sumatra 17 IX 1945), Chinese short-story writer. Yü gained a wide acquaintance with Western literature while studying in Japan. There he wrote his first volume of short stories, Ch'ên-lun (1921; Der Untergang, tr. A. Rot-tauscher, 1947). In 1921 he founded the important Ch'uang-tsao shě ('Creation Society') with Kuo* Mo-jo and others. His was the pioneer attempt at autobiographical confessional fiction in China.

Ta-fu ch'üan-chi (coll. works; 1928–31; five short stories tr. in Chinese Lit., 1957, No. 3, 1962, No. 2 and 1963, No. 12).

A. Doležalová, Yü Ta-fu: Specific Traits of His Literary Creation (1971). A.R.D.

Yüan CHÊN (□Ho-nan 779; †Wu-ch'ang 831), Chinese poet. Yüan was a descendant of the Wei (Tatar) imperial family which had reigned in North China, 5th–6th centuries. He met Po* Chü-i, with whom he formed one of the most famous Chinese literary friendships, when both were examination candidates in 802. His administrative ability was undoubtedly greater than Po's but his reformist zeal militated against his political success, and, although he was for a short period a chief minister (822), most of his career was spent away from the capital. In the 30 years of their friendship, they were seldom able to meet but they exchanged many letters and poems (often matching poems with the same rhymes). This led to their being coupled as joint models for imitation. To Yüan is ascribed, though the ascription has been doubted, the authorship of the famous 9th-century story, Ying-ying chuan (or Hui-chên chi), which was to become a favourite theme for drama. (Wang* Shih-fu's Hsi-hsiang chi uses this story.)

Yüan-shih Ch'ang-ch'ing chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain, 1929).—Ying-ying chuan ('The Story of Ts'ui Ying-ying', tr. A. Waley in More Translations, 1919).

A. Waley, The Life and Times of Po Chü-i (1949). A.R.D.

Yüan CHIEH (□Lu-hsien 719; †772), Chinese poet and prose-writer. Yüan obtained an appointment under Emperor Su-tsung (759) by the presentation of a series of essays on government (Shih-i). He afterwards gave practical demonstration of his Confucian ideas in relieving the distress of the people when he was Prefect of Tao-chou. His prose and verse are both to a great extent written with a deliberate archaism of style. He was among the most important forerunners of the great prose reformer, Han* Yü.

Yüan Tz'ü-shan chi (coll. works; sel. tr. in G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948). A.R.D.

Yüan HAO-WÊN (□Hsiu-jung 1190; †12 X 1257), Chinese man of letters. Yüan was regarded as the outstanding literary figure of the Chin (North China) dynasty (1115–1235). He was an able if not very original writer in both prose and verse, and though most noted as a poet he is perhaps most successful in his descriptive essays.

I-shan chi (coll. works; 1498; sel. poems tr. in Anthologie de la poésie chinoise, ed. P. Demiéville, 1962). A.R.D.

Yüan MEI (□Hangchow 25 III 1716; †Nanking 3 I 1798), Chinese poet, essayist and critic. Yüan ably pursued a civil service career until 1748, when he retired to Sui-yüan, his famous garden. Henceforth he successfully maintained a large family by writing. He gathered round him many disciples both male and female; for he was ardent for women's greater freedom. In the theoretical controversies of the time, Yüan advocated hsing-ling ('natural genius'), affirming that poetry must have freedom of expression and form, be without restriction of subject and have pleasure as its aim. These views brought him into direct opposition with Shên* Tê-ch'ien. His essays, in both plain and rhythmic prose, range widely and are distinguished by originality and gentle humour; his witty dissertation on cooking is a classic of its type. He was, besides, a noted letter-writer.

Sui-yüan ch'üan-chi (complete works; 1918).—A. Waley, Yuan Mei (1956; incl. many sel. trs). A.R.D.

Yüçüf, POEMA DE, Spanish poem about the life of Joseph, preserved in two MSS in Arabic characters. Generally believed to be 14th-century, but may be much later. The narrative, in CUADERNA VÍA, is clumsy. The story is derived from the 12th Sura of the KORAN, and also draws on medieval Jewish legends. Its chief interest is philological and as a specimen of the ALJAMADO LITERATURE of Spanish-speaking Moors.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LVII; R. Menéndez Pidal, P. de Y.: materiales para su estudio (2nd ed. 1952).

J. Sarrailh, 'Remarques sur le Poème de Y.' in Bull. Hispanique, VI (1904).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Yun SŎNDO (*1587; †1671), Korean poet, always on the losing side in the factional struggles at court, and so spent almost all his life in provincial exile. This is reflected in the rural themes of his poems.

Yi Chae-su, Yun Kosan Yŏn'gu (1955).

W.E.S.

Yunus Emre (†1321), Turkish poet and saint. His life is shrouded in legend. He may have lived during the second half of the 13th century in Anatolia, travelled in Syria and the Caucasus and met great mystics like Jalāl-al-Dīn Rūmī (Maulavī*) and Hacı Bektash. More than seven villages in various parts of Anatolia claim to possess his tomb, but the evidence is strongest for Sarıköy by the Sakarya river. A great representative of the mystic movement in Anatolia, his poems are permeated with religious enthusiasm. He is obsessed with the themes of human destiny and death. He wrote in simple language, using mainly the traditional Turkish syllabic metre. His influence upon succeeding generations of mystics was enormous, and he inspired writers during the renaissance of Turkish poetry before the 1920s.

Y. E. Divanı (ed. A. Gölpınarlı, 1945); Risālat al-Nushīyya ve Divān (ed. idem, with facs. of 15th-cent. MS, 1965).

Köprülüzade Mehmed Fuad, Türk Edebiyatında ilk Mütessavvıflar (1919); A. Gölpınarlı, Y. E. (1939) and Y. E. ve Tasavvuf (1961); A. Schimmel, 'Y. E.' in Numen, XIII (1961); Y. Régner, Le Divan par Younous Emré (1963); Ş. Tekindağ, 'Y. E. hakkında araştırmalar' in Belleten, XXX (1966).

F.İ.

Yushkevich, SEMĖN SOLOMONOVICH (*1868; †1927), Russian author and playwright. He belonged to Gorky's* Znanie group and took his themes mainly from Jewish life.

Golod (1905); Dina Glan (1906); Leon Drey (1922); Golubinoe tsarstvo (1923); Sem' dney (1933).—Posmertnye proizvedeniya (1927). J.L.

Yusuf has Hacib (*Balasagun), 11th-century Turkish poet and author of the first known work of Islamic Turkish literature. He was chamberlain to Tabgaç Bugra Karahan, Sultan of Kashgar, for whom he wrote the Kutadgu Bilig ('Knowledge Which Gives Happiness'; 1069). This is an allegorical poem, of more than 6,000 couplets, on the art of government and consists of a series of conversations between the prince, the vizier, his son and the friend, who symbolize Justice, Good Fortune, Reason and Contentment. It is written in a literary language which is a transition between Uyghur and Chagatay. The metre is from Arabo-Persian prosody, but the vocabulary is not drowned in loan words. The style is didactic. It is a valuable source of information for the history and sociology of Central Asiatic Turks.

W. Radloff, Das Kudatku Bilik (with Ger. tr.; 1891–1900); R. R. Arat, K. B. (crit. ed.; 1947) and K. B. (tr.; 1959).

V. V. Bartold, Histoire des Turcs d'Asie Centrale (1945); A. Bombaci, 'K. B. hakkında bazı mülahazalar' in Fuat Köprülü armağanı (1953); Reşid Rahmeti Arat, 'K. B.' in İslam Ansiklopedisi, VI (1955); Halil İnalcık, 'K. B.'de Türk ve İran siyaset nazariye ve gelenekleri' in R. R. Arat İçin (1966).

F.İ.

Yuzhin: see Sumbatov, ALEXANDER IVANOVICH.

Z

Zabaleta, JUAN DE (*Madrid ?1610; †?1670), Spanish descriptive writer. His chief work is in two parts: a description of a festival in the morning (1654) and evening (1659). He wrote well in the late-17th-century style, influenced by Gracián*. His other works have more learned pretensions.

Obras en prosa (1667, 1672); El día de fiesta in Costumbristas españoles (ed. E. Correa Calderón, 1950). E.M.W.

Zablocki, FRANCISZEK (*Volhynia 2 I 1750 or 1751; †Końskowola 10 IX 1821), Polish author. After serving for 20 years as a clerk and tutor with the Czartoryski family he became a priest. His 54 comedies in verse are mostly adaptations from the French and from 1779 they were the main productions of the national theatre. He also wrote odes, fables, pastorals, political satires and some very witty lampoons.

Zobobonnik (1781; ed. B. Kašinowski, 1905); Fircyk w zalotach (1783; ed. idem, 1907); Sarmatyzm (1820; ed. L. Bernacki, 1928).—Dziela (6 vols, 1829–30).

M. Gawalewicz, F. Z. Szkic biograficzno-krytyczny (1894); L. Bernacki, 'Komédie F. Z.' in Teatr, dramat i muzyka za Stanisława Augusta, II (1925). S.S. (P.H.)

Zach, NATHAN (*Berlin 1930), Hebrew poet; went to Palestine in 1935. His first poem was published in 1950. He introduced conversational style into Hebrew poetry, and writes about the difficulties of writing poetry and of communication between two individuals. He is also a notable translator from German into Hebrew.

Shirim Hadashim (1956); Shirim Shonim (1960). L. I. Yudkin, 'Decline in concentration: study of a poem by N. Z.' in Jewish Quart. (Jan. 1969; with tr.). L.Y.

Zachariä, JUST FRIEDRICH WILHELM (*Frankenhausen 1 V 1726; †Brunswick 30 I 1777), German poet. Educated at Leipzig, where he first sided with Gottsched* and then joined the 'Bremer Beiträger', he became Professor at the Carolinum, Brunswick, in 1761. His most successful work is his first, the verse satire Der Renommist (1744), which good-humouredly mocks at the typical dandyish Leipzig and boisterous Jena student.

Das Schnupftuch (1754); Die Tageszeiten (1755); Murner in der Hölle (1757); Die vier Stufen des weiblichen Alters (1757); Cortes (1766).

H. Zimmer, Z. und sein Renommist (diss. Leipzig, 1892); H. Kaspar, Die komischen Epen von Z. (1935). H.B.G.

Zacuto (ZAKKUTH), MOSES (*Amsterdam c. 1625; †Mantua 1 X 1697), Italian Hebrew dramatist, religious poet and mystic. In his youth a fellow student of Spinoza*, he became rabbi in Venice and later in Mantua. He is the first Hebrew dramatist, his plays being in the taste of Italian drama of the time. He was an eager student of the CABBALAH and founder of a minor Italian mystical school.

VERSE: Hen Qol Hadash (Amsterdam, 1712); Tiqqun Shovavim (Venice, 1712).—DRAMA: Yesod 'Olam (on Abraham; Venice, 1673; ed. with biog. A. Berliner, 1874); Toft'eh 'Arukh (on Heaven and Hell; Venice, 1715; ed. with intro. D. A. Friedman, 1923). C.R.

Zadonshchina ('Trans-Doniad'), a highly coloured narrative about the Russian victory over the Tatars in 1380 on the field of Kulikovo. Written at the beginning of the 15th century by the priest Sophonia of Ryazan, the narrative contains several passages imitative of The Lay of Igor's Campaign (*Slovo* o Polku Igoreve*). It is one of the valuable monuments of Old Russian literature.

A. D. Sedel'nikov, 'Gde byla napisana Z.' in Slavia, IX (1930). J.L.

Zagel, HERMANN HEINRICH (*Columbia, Ind. 1859; †Peoria, Ill. 1936), minor German-American author.

Reisebilder (1907); Aus Frühlingstagen (1929; excerpt in Amer.-Ger. Rev., VIII.1, 1941); Z.'s Allerlei (1930).

A. E. Zucker, 'Die Abendschule, 1853–1940' in Amer.-Ger. Rev., VIII.3 (1942). E.R.

Zagorichinov, STOYAN (*Plovdiv 3 XII 1889; †Sofia 31 I 1969), Bulgarian novelist. His favourite subject-matter is medieval Bulgarian and Balkan history.

Legenda za Sveta Sofia (1926); Den posleden—den gospoden (1931–34); Ruka Ilieva (play; 1943); Praznik v Boyana (1950). V.P.

Zagoskin, MIKHAIL NIKOLAYEVICH (*Penza province 14 VII 1789; †Moscow 23 VII 1852), Russian playwright and author. His Yury Miloslavsky (1829) was the first successful Russian historical novel after the manner of Sir Walter Scott*.

Sochineniya (7 vols, 1889).—Tales of Three Centuries (tr. J. Curtin, 1891); The Young Muscovite (ed. F. Chamier, 1834). J.L.

AL-Zahāwī, JAMİL ŠIDQĪ (*Baghdad 1863; †ibid. 1936), Iraqi Arab poet who met with much opposition to his political and liberal social views. His poetry, which is neo-classical in tone, displays a passionate belief in reason and much irony, especially in his long imaginative narrative Thaura fi'l-Jahīm ('Revolt in Hell'). He tends to deal with abstract ideas and undigested scientific facts.

VERSE: al-Kalīm al-manẓūm (1909); Rubā'īyyāt al-Z. (1924); Diwān al-Z. (1924); Rubā'īyyāt al-Khayyām (1928); al-Lubāb (1928).—Anthologie de la littérature arabe contemporaine: La poésie (tr. Luc Norin and Edouard Tarabay, Paris, 1967).

Nāṣir al-Ḥānī, Muḥāḍarāt 'an J. Z. (1954).

M.M.B.

Zahradniček, JAN (*Mastník 17 I 1905; †Uhřetov 7 X 1960), Czech poet. From his earliest poems (Pokušení smrti, 1930) to his last (La Salletta, 1947), Zahradniček was mainly influenced by his Catholic faith which, together with faith in his people (Korouhve, 1940), gives his often pessimistic and brooding poems their fundamental theme.

R.A.

Zaidān, JURJĪ (*Beirut I 1861; †Cairo 22 VII 1914), Syro-Egyptian Arab historian, novelist and journalist. Creator of the Arabic historical novel, he wrote 22 novels which were translated into several Oriental languages. His History of Arabic Literature (4 vols, 1911–14) is still a standard work. Almost equally important is his History of Islamic Civilization (5 vols, 1902–06; IV, Umayyads and Abbasids, tr. D. S. Margoliouth, 1907).

NOVELS: Al-Mamlūk al-shāhid (1904; Der letzte Mameluck und seine Irrfahrten, tr. M. Thilo, 1917); Al-'Abbāsah ukht al-Rashīd (1906; Al Abbāsa ou la sœur du Calife, tr. M. Y. Bitar and C. Moulié, 1912); Al-Inqilāb al-'Uthmānī (1911; Allah Veuille!, Roman sur la révolution turque, tr. M. Y. Bitar and T. Sandre, 1924).—Mukhtārāt (essays; 1937).

I. Y. Kratchkovsky, 'Der historische Roman in der neueren arabischen Literatur' in Die Welt des Islams, XII (1930–31). C.R. (M.M.B.)

Zaitsev, also Zaytsev, BORIS KONSTANTINOVICH (*1881), Russian author in the 'moody' tradition of Turgenev* and Chekhov*. His roots being in pre-1914 Russia, his narratives about it are full of nostalgia, lyrical atmosphere and a rather feminine sensitiveness. In 1922 he emigrated to Italy. His writings of this period often deal with the uprooted intellectual emigrés.

Sobranie sochineniy (7 vols, Berlin, 1922–23); Zolotoy uzor (1926); Izbrannye rasskazy (1929); Zhizn' Turgeneva (1932); Moskva (1939); Tishina (1948); Yunost' (1950).—Anna (tr. N. Duddington, 1928). J.L.

Zaleski, JÓZEF BOHDAN (*Bohatyrka 14 II 1802; †Villepreux 31 III 1886), Polish poet. After his education, in which S. Goszczynski* was his companion, he was a private tutor. Following his participation in the 1821 rising he went to France where he made friends with Mickiewicz* but was against A. Towiański. Zaleski was the chief co-founder of the 'Ukrainian school' of poetry idealizing the Cossacks and the Ukraine. There is a melancholy strain and religious sentiment in his poems.

Rusalki (1829; Les nymphes . . . tr. V. G. in Bull. Pol., CLXXV, 1900); Przenajświętsza Rodzina (1841; La Sainte Famille, tr. M. Borch, 1844); Dumy i 'dumki' (1841); Złota дума (1891).—Pisma (4 vols, 1877); Dziela pośmiertne (2 vols, 1891).

O. M. Kolessa, Ukraińska rytmika ludowa w poezjach B. Z. (1900); S. Zdziarski, B. Z. Studium biograficzno-literackie (1902); J. Tretiak, B. Z. (3 vols, 1911–14); J. Krzyżanowski, 'B. Z.' in Polish Romantic Literature (1930). S.S.

Zamfirescu, DULIU (*Plăinești 1858; †Agapia 1922), Rumanian novelist and poet. After studying law he entered the diplomatic service and served in Rome, Athens and Brussels between 1888 and 1906, becoming Foreign Minister in 1920. He is best known for his cycle of five novels based on a boyar family (Viața la țară, 1895; Tănase Scatiu, 1896; In război, 1898; Indreptări, 1902; Anna, 1910) which are a portrait of Rumanian boyar society at the turn of the century. This cycle is the first of its kind in Rumanian literature and as well as providing a number of fine character studies it reveals the author's powers of description. His volume of poems Fără titlu (1883) has the flavour of Bolintineanu*, a mixture of the exotic and the macabre. His departure for Italy in 1888 had a profound effect upon him, and the poems in Alte orizonturi (1894) show him rather as a Parnassian or neo-classic poet, Rome and Greece often providing the themes for his meditative verse.

Sasha (Eng. tr. L. Byng, 1927).—Scriseri alese (1962); Opere, I (1970).

A. Sandulescu, D. Z. (1969).

D.J.D.

Zamora, ANTONIO DE (*Madrid ?1664; †ibid. 1727), Spanish dramatist and courtier. He followed Calderón*, but also foreshadowed Ramón de la Cruz's* interest in popular types and customs. His fame rests on his version of the DON JUAN saga—No hay plazo que no se cumpla. Less profound, more down to earth but also more subtle than Tirso's*, it lies half way between the original and the romantic version of Zorrilla*.

Comedias nuevas (2 vols, 1722); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLIX.

J. W. Barlow, 'Zorrilla's indebtedness to Z.' in Romanic Rev., XVIII (1927). R.M.N.

Zamyatin, EVGENY IVANOVICH (*Lebedyan 1884; †France 1939), Russian 'neo-realist' author. He specialized in grotesque and satirical stories about Russian provincial life. Later he wrote two not very complimentary narratives about England (where he had stayed during 1916). His usual method was that of the carefully constructed SKAZ as practised by Remizov*. What he thought of the Soviet régime can best be gathered from his Wellsian 26th-century novel My. As the novel was an anticipation of Huxley's* Brave New World and of George Orwell's* 1984, misunderstandings with the régime were bound to follow. In 1931 Zamyatin emigrated to France.

Ogni sv. Dominika (play; 1922); Na kulichkakh (1923); Uyezdnoye (1923); Sever (1929); Navodnenie (1930); Bich bozhiy (1938).—My (wr. 1920; pub. abroad, 1924–29; New York, 1952; We, tr. G. Zilboorg, ibid., 1925; tr. B. G. Guernsey, London, 1970; Nous autres, tr. B. Cauvet-Duchamel, 1929); Litsa (New York, 1955).—The Dragon (stories; tr. M. Ginzburg, 1972).

A. Efrenin in Krasnaya Nov', I (1930); D. J. Richards, Z. A Soviet Heretic (1962). J.L.

Zanella, GIACOMO (*Chiampo 9 IX 1820; †Cavazzale 17 V 1888), Italian abate, poet and scholar, for many years Professor of literature at Padua, author of a famous ode, Sopra una conchiglia fossile. He combines science and religion in poems whose style, especially in L'Astichello (1884), a collection of 91 meditative sonnets written in the rustic seclusion of Cavazzale, is classical in its clarity and sober realism, though somewhat heavy and antiquated.

Milton e Galileo (1868); Poesie (1928).

E. Bettazzi, G. Z. e la critica di Benedetto Croce (1907). J.G.-R.

Zapata de Chaves, LUIS (*Llerena 1526; †after 1599), Spanish poet and prose-writer. He was page to Philip II and led a courtier's life. His epic about Charles V has few modern readers. His prose miscellany, composed when he was an old man, is extremely entertaining.

Carlo Famoso (Valencia, 1556); sel. (Santiago de Chile, 1916); Arte poética (Lisbon, 1592); Miscelánea (ed. P. Gayangos, 1859); Varia historia [miscelánea] (ed. Horsman, Amsterdam, 1935).

J. Menéndez Pidal, Vida y obras de D. L. Z. (1915). E.M.W.

Zapolska, GABRIELA, pseud. of GABRIELA KORWIN-PIOTROWSKA, also used pseud. JÓZEF MASKOFF (*Kiwerka 1860; †Lwów 17 XII 1921), Polish author. Educated in a convent, after divorcing her first husband she became an actress (1880) and for five years (1890–95) worked in Antoine's theatre in Paris. In her naturalistic novels and bourgeois comedies with brisk dialogue and lively situations she mercilessly fought all cant, depicted the antagonism of the sexes and championed the oppressed.

NOVELS: Káska Kariatyda (1888; Ger. tr. Käthe, 4th ed. 1927); Przedpiekle (1889; tr. Die Hölle der Jungfrauen, 7th ed. 1924); Sezonowa miłosc (1905; Sommerliebe, tr. S. Goldenring, 1915); Pan policmajster Tagiejew (1905; Der Polizeimeister, tr. idem, 1914); O czym się nie mówi (1909; Wovon man nicht spricht, tr. idem, 1913); Kobieta bez skazy (1913; Die unberührte Frau, tr. idem, 1912); O czym się nawet myśleć nie chce (1914; Woran man nicht denken mag, tr. idem, 1917).—PLAYS: Małazka (1887); Káska Kariatyda (1897); Tamten (1898; Die Warschauer Zitadelle, tr. J. Szalit, 1916); Moralność pani Dulskiej (1907; Die Moral der Frau Dulska, tr. I. Goldbaum, 1912); Skiz (1909); Panna Moli-czewska (1912); Ich czworo (1912).—SHORT STORIES: One (1890); Menażeria ludzka (1893).—Dziela (7 vols, 1922–23); Pisma wybrane (ed. J. Z. Jakubowski, 4 vols, 1950); Dziela wybrane (1957); Publicystyka (1958–62); Dramaty (1960–61).

Jadwiga Czachowska, G. Z. Monografia bibliograficzna (1966). S.S. (P.H.)

Zárate, FERNANDO DE: see Enriquez Gómez, ANTONIO.

Žarnov, ANDREJ, pseud. of FRANTIŠEK ŠUBÍK (*Kuklov 1903), Slovak poet. A Slovak separatist whose extreme nationalism coloured much of his poetry, Žarnov went into exile at the end of the Second World War.

Hlas krvi (1932); Štít (1940); Mírvy (1942).

R.A.

Zasius, ULRICH (*Constance 1461; †Freiburg im Breisgau 24 XI 1535), Swiss scholar, Professor of law, who acquired an immense reputation as a Latin stylist.

Opera (6 vols, Lyons, 1548–51).

R. Schmidt, U. Z. (1904); P. S. Allen, Erasmii Epistolae (11 vols, 1906–47). D.H.

Zasodimsky, PAVEL VLADIMIROVICH (*Vologda province 1843; †1912), Russian novelist of the 'populist' (narodniki) team of writers. He wrote mainly about peasants and the village commune, rather idealizing both.

Khronika sela Smurina (1874); Stepnye tayny (1880); Po gradam i vesyam (1885); Sobranie sochineniy (2 vols, 1895). J.L.

Zavattini, CESARE (*Luzzara, Reggio Emilia 20 IX 1902), Italian short-story writer, though perhaps best known as a film director: he collaborated with De Sica in the making of the Italian films Sciuscià (1945) and Bicycle Thieves

(1948) and greatly influenced the development of neo-realism in the cinema. His short stories have won him the reputation of being a humorous writer, but his humour is directed so as to further the social criticism motivating his work.

Parliamo tanto di me (1931); I poveri sono matti (1937); Io sono il diavolo (1942); Torò il buono (1943).
J.F.C. (B.M.)

Zayas y Sotomayor, MARÍA DE (*Madrid 1590; †ibid. 1661), Spanish novelist. Little is known for certain about her life. Her two collections of novels were published in 1638 and 1647. Her novels are melodramatic and sensational; she cultivated the horrible and at the same time defended the rights of women. Her style is more readable than that of most of her contemporary novelists.

Novelas amorosas y ejemplares (ed. A. G. de Amezúa, 1948); Desengaños amorosos (ed. idem, 1950).

E. B. Place, M. de Z. (Colorado, 1923).

E.M.W.

Zaytsev, BORIS KONSTANTINOVICH: see Zaitsev, BORIS KONSTANTINOVICH.

Zea, FRANCISCO (*Madrid 1825; †ibid. 1857), Spanish poet. Little is known of his life. His Obras en verso y prosa were published posthumously (1858) by his friends. Of great lyrical intensity, his famous poem Inspiración is a prophecy of divine punishment through fire. The Diablo alcalde is an interesting evocation of the old one-act entremeses.

J. Olmedilla y Puig, 'El poeta F. Z.' in España Moderna (1914).
R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Ze'ami MOTOKIYO, pseud. of YŪSAKI SAEMON-DAYŪ MOTOKIYO: also known as KANZE MOTOKIYO (*1363; †1443), Japanese writer (and actor) of nō plays. Ze'ami's father, Kan'ami* Kiyot-sugu, and Ze'ami himself were the creators of the nō drama in its present form. Under the patronage of the Shōgun Ashikaga Yoshimitsu, he continued the development of the nō after Kan'ami's death in 1384. He was a prolific writer, and out of almost 250 nō plays still performed, he wrote about half (although in some cases the authorship is uncertain) and in addition revised several earlier works.

In 1908 a manuscript was discovered in Japan containing 16 treatises by Ze'ami (written not for publication, but as manuals for his pupils) in which much information is given about his life and plays. Some further treatises were discovered in 1941. These embody technical directions on all aspects of writing, staging and acting nō plays, directions which were regarded as guild secrets (which is probably why they were so long lost).

In 1429, Ze'ami, on account of his age, made his son Motomasa the virtual head of the company of actors, entrusting to him the inner secrets of the art, but Motomasa died in 1431. The headship of the company passed to his nephew On'ami at the wish of the Shōgun but apparently against the will of Ze'ami, who did not entrust his secrets to him. In 1432 Ze'ami was exiled, probably as a consequence. Subsequent writers of nō plays were few and less significant.

Ze'ami's fame rests on his skill as a writer of nō: his style of composition is noted for its quality of 'yūgen' (a term deriving from Zen Buddhism, with which he was clearly very familiar), 'subtlety', 'elusiveness', whereby the plays were considered to gain in beauty. Contemporary writers applauded his marked ability as an actor: and his dramatic criticism in the treatises is of great value.

PLAYS: 15 plays tr. A. Waley in The Nō Plays of Japan (1921); 5 tr. B. L. Suzuki in Nōgaku, Japanese Nō Plays (1932); 2 tr. P. G. O'Neill in Monumenta Nipponica, X.1-2 (1954); 2 tr. A. Waley, 1 tr. M. Weatherby and B. Rogers in Anthology of Japanese Literature (ed. D. L. Keene, 1955); 18 tr. in Nippon Gakujutsu Shinkō-kai, Japanese Noh Drama (3 vols, 1955-60); group of plays tr. M. Ueda in The Old Pine Tree and Other Noh Plays (1962); 2 tr. S. H. Jones in Monumenta Nipponica, XXXIII.1-4 (1963); 1 tr. G. Wilson, ibid., XXIV.4 (1969); 6 tr. in Twenty Plays of the Nō Theatre (ed. D. L. Keene, 1970); see also Ezra Pound and E. Fenollosa, The Classic Noh Theatre of Japan (1959); Fr. trs: 8 plays tr. N. Péri in Cinq Nō (1921) and Le Nō (1944); 7 tr. G. Renondeau in Bull. École française d'extrême-orient (1926-32) and France-Asie, new ser., XVII.170 (1961); 7 tr. P. Arnold and Y. Fukui in Neuf Nō japonais (1957).—DRAMATIC CRITICISM: Se'ami jūrokubu shū ('Collection of the 16 Treatises of S.'): ed. Yoshida Tōgo (1909); trs: Shidehara Michitarō and W. Whitehouse in Monumenta Nipponica, IV.2 (1941) and V.2 (1942); R. N. McKinnon, 'Z. on the Art of Training' in Harvard Jour. Asiat. Stud., XVI (1953); representative passages tr. D. L. Keene in R. Tsunoda et al., Sources of the Japanese Tradition (1958); Fr. tr.: R. Sieffert, La tradition secrète du Nō, suivi d'une journée de Nō (1960); Ger. trs: O. Benl, S. M. und der Geist des Nō-Schauspiels . . . (1953) and Die geheime Überlieferung des Nō (1961); H. Bohner, 'Kakyō—Blumenspiegel—Hana no kagami' in Mitteilungen der deutschen Gesellschaft für Natur- und Völkerkunde Ostasiens, XXXIV.A (2 vols in one, 1953-54), 'Nōsakusho, Buch der Nō-Gestaltung', ibid., XXXIV.D (1954) and 'Shūdōsho Kyakurai-kwa—S.—Schriften der dritten Schriftumsperiode des Meisters', ibid., XLI.C (1961).

W. G. Aston, A History of Japanese Literature (1907); T. Nogami, Japanese Noh Drama (1934);

Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, The Noh Drama (1937) and Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature (1948); F. Bowers, Japanese Theatre (1952); D. L. Keene, Japanese Literature, An Introduction for Western Readers (1953) and, with H. Kaneko, Nō: The Classical Theatre of Japan (1966); P. G. O'Neill, A Guide to Nō (1954) and Early Nō Drama (1958); H. Böhner, 'Gestalten und Quellen des Nō' in Gakuhō (1955), Nō: die einzelnen Nō (Mitteilungen der deutschen Gesellschaft für Natur- und Völkerkunde Ostasiens, supp. XXII, 1956) and Nō: Einführung (ibid., XXIV, 1959); E. Ernst, Three Japanese Plays From the Traditional Theatre (1959); M. Ueda, Z., Bashō, Yeats, Pound: A Study in Japanese and English Poetics (1965) and 'Imitation, yūgen and sublimity' in Literary and Art Theories in Japan (1967); R. B. Pilgrim, 'Some aspects of kokoro in Z.' in Monumenta Nipponica, XXIV.4 (1969). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Zedlitz, JOSEPH CHRISTIAN VON (*Schloss Johanneberg 28 II 1790; †Vienna 16 III 1862), Austrian poet and dramatist, diplomatist, publicist and conservative patriot, whose late Romantic tragedy Turtrell (1821) provoked Platen's* mockery, but whose ballad Die nuchiliche Heerschau is well known. He translated Byron's* Childe Harold.

H.A.P.

Dramatische Werke (4 vols, 1830-36); Ausgewählte Werke (ed. O. Rommel, 1909).

O. Hellmann, Z. (1910); F. Milleker, Z. (1922). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Zeebots, WILLEM (*c. 1625; †Louvain 8 VII 1690), Flemish priest and writer, continued the tradition of the medieval Mystery plays, sometimes in the style of the schooldrama.

Spel v. d. zuuyveren Patriarch Joseph and Spel van Hendrik VIII Koningh van Engeland, ofte Scheuringe (after Vernulaeus' Henricus Octavus seu Schisma Anglicanum; coll. 1662); Passiespel and Enige heiligen-spelen (Saint Adriaen, Saint Hubertus; 1687).

A. de Maeyer, 'Een Brabantse 17e eeuwse toneelschrijver: W. Z.' in Eigen Schoon en de Brabander, XLIX (1966).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Zeeus, JACOB (*Zevenbergen 14 II 1668; †ibid. 27 XI 1718), Dutch satirist and writer of valuable Arcadian verse; for a short time pupil of Houbraken* as an engraver, then surveyor-notary at Zevenbergen. His Zangberg in gevaar unleashed the so-called Poets' war. He also wrote De wolf int schaepsvel (1711; ed. C. W. van de Watering, 1964). His Gedichten (1720) and Overgebleve gedichten (with biog., 1726) were published posthumously.

Poëten-oorlog (2 vols, 1715-16); C. Busken Huet in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, I (1881); W. Kloos, Een daad van eenvoudige rechtvaardigheid (1909); P. van Valkenhoff, 'J. Z.' in Tijdschrift voor Taal en Letteren, XXVI (1938). J.W.W.

Zegadłowicz, EMIL (*Bielsk Śląski 20 VII 1888; †Sosnowiec 24 II 1941), Polish author. Of a Ruthenian father and Czech mother, he was active in many fields; as a leader of regional Beskid poets and a prolific writer, though often careless in his easy improvisations, he contributed to the development of Polish literary Expressionism. His series of spontaneous ballads is interesting, and his dramas have a compact composition, strong conflicts and well delineated characters. But his autobiographical novel, with a happy start, in the second part indulges in trivial naturalism and obscenity.

VERSE: Ballady (1920); Powsinogi beskidzkie (1922); Dziwanny (1920-27).—PLAYS: Glaz graniczny (1925); Lampka oliwna (1925).—NOVELS: Żywot Mikołaja Srebrzypisanego (5 pts, 1927-37).—TRANSLATION: Faust (2 pts, 1926-27).—Dramaty (2 vols, 1931-32); Pokosy. Wybór poezji 1907-32 (1933).

S. Papée, Misteria balladowe Z. (1927); O. Forst de Battaglia, 'E. Z.' in Pologne Littéraire, XI (1927); K. Czachowski, 'Ostatnie lata Z.' in Odrodzenie, II (1945). S.S.

Zeggelen, WILHELMUS JOSEPHUS VAN (*The Hague 15 IX 1811; †ibid. 15 II 1879), Dutch poet and publisher, founder of Oefening Kweekt Kennis.

Pieter Spa naar Londen (1838); Pieter Spa naar Amsterdam (1841); Lach en luim (1846).—Verzamelde gedichten (8 vols, 1849).

C. Busken Huet in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, VII (1881-88). J.W.W.

Zelandus: see Bellamy, JACOBUS.

Żeleński, TADEUSZ, pseud. BOY (*Warsaw 21 XII 1874; †Lwów 4 VII 1941), Polish author. Son of a composer, he studied medicine at Cracow and Paris, in 1922 settled in Warsaw, and in 1939 became Professor of French literature in Lwów. Co-founder of the literary circle Zielony Balonik (1905), he wrote for it gay and satirical ditties and trifles, from 1908 known as Słówka. His literary and theatrical criticisms from 1919 were valuable and his publicistic writings courageous and provocative. But the translations covering all the great French authors are his greatest work.

VERSE: Słówka (1913).—CRITICISM: Studia i szkice z literatury francuskiej (1920); Flirt z Melpomeną (10 vols, 1922); Molière (1924); Ludzie żywi (1929); Brązownicy (1930); Romanse cieniów (1935); Perfumy i krew (1936).—VARIOUS: Pani Hańska (1926); Piekło kobiet (1930); Znasz-li ten kraj? (1931).

W. Borowy, 'B. jako tłumacz' in Przegl.

Warsz., VII (1922); I. Krzywicka, 'Trois faces de B.-Ż.' in Pologne Littéraire, XVII (1928); F. L. Schoell, L'enfant terrible de la Pologne, B. (1931); K. Irzykowski, Beniaminek. Rzecz o B.-Ż. (1933); K. Czachowski, 'Społeczne oblicze Boya' in Odrodzenie, III (1946). S.S. (P.H.)

Zelinsky, KORNELIY (*1896), Soviet literary critic, connected with the 'constructivist' group of early Soviet poetry. The group was led by Ilya Sel'vinsky*, and Zelinsky became its chief theoretician.

A. A. Fadeyev, Sovetskaya literatura (1948). J.L.

Žemaitė, pseud. of JULIA BENIUŠEVIČIUTE-ŽYMAINTIENE (*Plungė canton 31 V 1845; ∞20 X 1865 L. Žymantas; †Mariampol [now Kapsukas] 7 XII 1921), Lithuanian novelist. She belonged to a Polish-speaking family but mastered Lithuanian early. After an interrupted and defective education and a very hard life, she turned to journalism and literature, visited the U.S.A. and wrote her first book Rudens vakarą ('Autumn Evening') in 1894. Her writings reveal a peasant-type realistic mind, shrewd, observant and not without sentiment. She deals primarily with village life and writes a clear, idiomatic Lithuanian.

Rašiai (4 vols, 1924 ff.). J. Žiugžda, Ž.s kūryba, I (1935); J. Butėnas, Ž. (1938). W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Zenea, JUAN CLEMENTE (*Bayamo 1831; †La Habana 1871), Cuban poet, chiefly remembered for a few melancholy love lyrics of typically Romantic cast, and for his tragic death by execution for conspiracy against Spain in 1855.

Cantos de la tarde (1860); Poesías (New York, 1872). E.Sa.

Zeno, APOSTOLO (*Venice 11 XII 1668; †ibid. 11 XI 1750), Italian scholar and librettist. Founder of the Giornale dei letterati d'Italia (1710); poet laureate to the imperial court, Vienna (1718–28). Desiring to restore dignity to the over-spectacular melodramma of his day, Zeno wrote many operatic libretti on fashionable, heroic themes—regular in structure and strongly influenced by the French classical theatre (Ifigenia, Temistocle, Andromaca, 1695–1730)—and some 20 oratorios on Biblical subjects (Giuseppe, 1722; Ezechia, 1737). In his later years he compiled several works of great erudition and notably enriched G. Fontanini's Biblioteca dell'eloquenza italiana with critical annotations (2 vols, 1753).

Lettere (ed. F. Morelli, 6 vols, 1785); Drammi scelti (ed. M. Fehr, 1929).—Poesie drammatiche (ed. G. Gozzi, 10 vols, 1744).

F. Negri, La vita di A. Z. (1816).—L. Pistorelli,

I melodrammi di A. Z. (1894); M. Fehr, A. Z. und seine Reform des Operntextes (1912); A. Micheli, 'Le poesie sacre drammatiche di A. Z.' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XCV (1930); R. Giazotto, Poesia melodrammatica e pensiero critico nel Settecento (1952).—M. Berengo, Giornali veneziani del Settecento (1962; intro.). M.W.

Zeno OF CITIUM in Cyprus (*335; †263 B.C.), the founder of the Stoic school of Greek philosophy. He was probably a Phoenician, went to Athens in 313 and studied Academic, Megarian and Cynic philosophy. He then developed his own system and taught in the Stoa Poikile at Athens. The Stoic doctrine was that man can attain happiness only by self-reliance, by independence of external circumstance: the cosmos is made of matter permeated through and through, and inexorably controlled, by a material god, conceived as a kind of fire. Sense-perception can give sure knowledge of this cosmos: man's duty is to understand, to live 'according to nature' and to banish from himself 'unnatural' fears and desires. Virtue is the only good: sure of his own virtue, the Stoic wise man could be indifferent to suffering. Zeno's system, developed by Cleanthes* and Chrysippus* and modified by Panaetius* and Posidonius*, appealed to many in the time of Rome's greatness.

H. von Arnim, Stoicorum veterum fragmenta, I (1921); A. C. Pearson, The Fragments of Z. and Cleanthes (1891).

E. Zeller, Stoics, Epicureans and Sceptics (1870); R. D. Hicks, Stoic and Epicurean (1910); E. Bevan, Stoics and Sceptics (1913); M. Pohlenz, Die Stoa (1949); Problems in Stoicism (ed. A. A. Long, 1970). D.J.F.

Zeno OF ELEA (early 5th century B.C.), Greek philosopher, a pupil of Parmenides*. He defended Parmenides' theory of One Being by examining the premisses of others and drawing contradictory conclusions from them. Thus the famous paradox of Achilles and the tortoise was to exhibit the fallacy of supposing that Being is infinitely divisible. Aristotle* called him the inventor of dialectic, and he was clearly a considerable logician. There was a great revival of interest in his paradoxes among British and American philosophers in the 1950s and 1960s.

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, I (6th ed. 1951); H. D. P. Lee, Z. of E. (1936; with tr.).

H. Fränkel, 'Z.'s attacks on plurality' in Amer. Jour. Philol., LXIII (1942); M. Black, Problems of Analysis (1954); G. E. L. Owen, 'Z. and the mathematicians' in Proc. Aristotelian Soc., LVIII (1957–58); G. Vlastos, arts on Z. in Philosophic Classics (ed. W. Kaufmann, 1961) and The Encyclopaedia of Philosophy (ed. P. Edwards, 1967). D.J.F.

Zenodotus (*Ephesus c. 325; †c. 260 B.C.), Greek grammarian, pupil of Philetas*, first librarian of the royal library at Alexandria. He made the first critical edition of Homer*. Insufficient knowledge of Homeric language and archaeology and lack of diplomatic method made him too ready to reject as interpolations authentic passages, and to foist his own conjectures into the text.

J. E. Sandys, History of Classical Scholarship, I (3rd ed. 1921); P. Cauer, Grundfragen der Homer-kritik (3rd ed. 1923); G. M. Bolling, External Evidence for Interpolation in Homer (1925); M. H. A. L. H. van der Valk, Textual Criticism of the Odyssey (1949); R. Pfeiffer, History of Classical Scholarship (1968). R.B.

Zerbold van Zutphen, GERARD (*Zutphen 1367; †Windesheim 4 XII 1398), Dutch theologian, after Geert Groote* the greatest scholar of the DEVOTIO MODERNA. After his studies in Paris Zerbold lived until his early death in the friary at Deventer. He worked hard both as librarian and confessor to the brothers (whom he also defended against the attacks of the Mendicant Friars in his Super modo vivendi devotorum hominum simul commemorantium) and as the author of several works on moral theology and ecclesiastical law. The two most important ones are De spiritualibus ascensionibus and De reformatione virium animae. In De libris Teutonicis he defended the translating of devotional tracts into the vernacular.

A. Hyma in Nederl. Archief v. Kerkgesch., new ser., XVI (1921), XVII (1924), XX (1927); Archief voor d. Gesch. v. h. Aartsbisdom Utrecht, LII (incl. several works; 1926); Eng. tr. of De spiritualibus ascensionibus (preceded by Thomas a Kempis' Life) in The Spiritual Ascent, a Devotional Treatise by Gerard of Zutphen (1908).

G. H. J. W. Geesink, G. Z. van Z. (1879); A. Hyma, The Christian Renaissance (1925; 2nd ed. 1965) and The Brethren of the Common Life (1950); J. van Rooy, G. Z. van Z., I (1936); A. Rayez in L. Reypens-Album (1964). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Zermatten, MAURICE (*Saint-Martin, Valais 22 X 1910), Swiss novelist, one of the first to write of the Valais, its scenery, ancient civilization and rugged and passionate people. The forces of nature play a dramatic part in these stories which often present grave moral conflicts in a rustic setting. His view of the world is determined by his Catholicism.

La colère de Dieu (1940); Le sang des morts (1942); Christine (1944); Le jardin des oliviers (1951); La fontaine d'Aréthuse (1958); Le bouclier d'or (1961); Le cancer des solitudes (1964); Pays sans chemin (1966).—Sève d'enfance (autobiog. narrative; 1970). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Żeromski, STEFAN, pseud. MAURZYCY ZYCH,

JÓZEF KATERLA (*Strawczyn 1 XI 1864; †Warsaw 20 XI 1925), Polish author. Of country gentry, he was brought up in a patriotic tradition. During his veterinary studies he was arrested by Russians in Warsaw in 1888 and contracted tuberculosis when in prison.

In almost all his literary works there is one of two elements: a sense of social injustice and the need of some readjustment in human relations, or that of patriotism. The characters fight for high ideals and pay for it with their own personal happiness; the author's sympathy is always on their side. Though there is some pessimistic strain in several of his writings he believes in the ultimate victory of the good and the just. He is a past-master in describing the beauties of nature. His plays are sincere, though on the whole lack drama. Quick to perceive the great problems of Polish life, he wrote on several occasions topical articles and pamphlets, some of which do not lose their poignancy even today. Besides being a stylist, everything he wrote was dictated by his warm heart and there are in his prose lyrical passages which read like the best lyrical verses or elegies. S.S.

NOVELS: Szyzyfowe prace (1898); Ludzie bezdomni (2 vols, 1900); Popioły (3 vols, 1904); The Ashes, tr. H. Stankiewicz Zan, 2 vols, 1928); Powieść o Udalym Walgierzu (1906; Le roman de Walgour, tr. S. Dunin Karwicki, 1923); Dzieje grzechu (2 vols, 1908; Die Geschichte einer Sünde, tr. S. Goldenring, 1910); Uroda życia (2 vols, 1912; La bellezza della vita, tr. von Dąbwska, 1920); Wierna rzeka (1912; The Faithful River, tr. S. Garry, 1943); Walka z szatanem (3 vols, 1916–19); Wiatr od morza (1922; El viento del este, tr. M. Amster and C. M. Arconada, 1931); Przedwiośnie (1925).—PLAYS: Róża (1909); Ponad śnieg bielszym się stanę (1921; Plus blanc que la neige, tr. M. Grabowska and P. de Saint Wall Pinon, 1923); Uciekła mi przepióreczka (1924).—SHORT STORIES: Rozdziobią nas kruki wrony (1895; Den Raben und Geiern zum Frass, tr. M. Sutram, 1903); Echa leśne (1905; Gli echi del bosco, tr. L. Kociemski, 1923).—VARIOUS: Elegie i inni pisma (ed. W. Borowy, 1928); Dzienniki (1953–56).—Pisma (25 vols, 1923–29; new ed. S. Pigoń, 1949– ).

E. Lo Gatto, S. Ż. Studio critico (1926); R. Dyboski, 'Ż. and Reymont' in Slavon. Rev., IV (1926); J. Drozdowicz-Jurgielewiczowa, Teknika powieści Ż. (1929); S. Adamczewski, Serce nienasycone (1930) and S. Ż.: Zasys biograficzny (1937); Z. L. Zaleski, 'Étienne Z.' in Attitudes et destinées (1932); N. Nucci, Alcuni elementi sociali e nazionalisti dell'opera letteraria di S. Ż. (1932); W. Borowy, 'Ż.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XIV (1935–36); S. Kasztelowicz and S. Eile, S. Ż. Kalendarz życia i twórczości (1961); J. Kądziela, S. Ż., 1864–1925. Poradnik bibliograficzny (1964). S.S. (P.H.)

Zesen, PHILIP VON (*Pirau 8 X 1619; †Hamburg 13 XI 1689), German poet. He early devoted himself to improving the German language and founded his literary society, the Teutschgesinnte Genossenschaft or Rosenzunft in Hamburg (1643). Most of his life was spent in Holland, where he apparently kept himself by writing, though he had certain diplomatic missions. His orthographic reforms found little following, his poetry was much disputed but his use of dactyls and anapaests especially influenced the Nürnberg poets. Though he quarrelled with Rist*, his society and his interest in Protestant Church unity brought him into contact with important European figures, especially Comenius*. His individualistic autobiographical novel, Die Adriatische Rosemund (1645), is a landmark in the history of the genre in Germany, though contemporaries preferred his Assenat (1670; on the theme of Joseph and Potiphar's wife). These two works are an attempt to produce German novels to compete with the fashionable French works by Madeleine de Scudéry* and others, which Zesen had translated. He is in many ways an isolated figure, part bourgeois part courtly, but holds an important place in the literature of the time.

Deutscher Helicon (1640); Poetischer Rosenwälder Vorschmack (1642); Liebesbeschreibung Lysanders und Kalisten (novel, from Fr.; 1644); Ibrahim (from Fr.; 4 vols, 1645); Dichterische Jugendflammen (1651); Gekreuzigte Liebesflammen (1653); Leo Belgicus (Latin 1660; Ger. tr. 1677); Moralia Horatiana (1656; facs. repr. ed. W. Brauer, 1963); Beschreibung der Stadt Amsterdam (1664); Urteile wider den Gewissenszwang in Glaubenssachen (1665); Dichterisches Rosen- und Liljental (1670); Assenat (1670; ed. V. Meid, 1967); Simson (1679); Pirau oder Lob des Vaterlandes (1680); and 58 other works.

A. D. Habichtthorst, Wohlgegründete Bedenkschrift über die Zesische Sonderbahre Ahrt Hochdeutsch zu schreiben (1678); J. H. Gabler, Verzeichnis der ... Zesischen Schriften (1687); M. Gebhardt, Zur Biographie Z. (diss. Strasbourg, 1888); K. Dissel, Z. und die Deutschgesinnte Genossenschaft (1890); E. W. Moes, 'P. von Z.' in Jaarboek der Vereeniging Amstelodamum, V (1907); H. Körnchen, Z. s. Romane (1912; repr. 1967); C. Bouman, Z. s. Beziehungen zu Holland (diss. Bonn, 1916); J. H. Scholte, 'P. von Z.' in Jaarboek van het Genootschap Amstelodamum, XIV (best biog.; 1916), 'Z. in Frankrijk' in Neophilologus, XXVIII (1943) and 'Z. s. Adriatische Rosemund als symbolischer Roman', ibid., XXX (1946); C. Stucki, Z. s. und Grimmelshausens Josephsromane (1933); C. C. van de Graft, 'Filips von Z. en Utrecht' in Jaarboekje Oud-Utrecht (1941); P. Baumgartner, Die Gestaltung des Seelischen in Z. s. Romanen (1942); W. Graadt van Roggen, Een stichtische sleutelroman uit de 17. eeuw (1943); Renate Weber, Die Lieder P. von Z.

(diss. Hamburg, 1962); Volker Meid, Z. s. Roman-kunst (diss. Frankfurt am Main, 1966); U. Maché, 'Z. als Poetiker' in Dt. Vierteljahresschrift, XLI (1968); K. F. Otto, P. von Z., a Bibliography (1971). L.W.F.

Zetterström, HANS HARALD, pseud. HASSE Z. (*Stockholm 23 V 1877; †1 VI 1946), Swedish humorous writer, editor of Söndags-Nisse (1901–24), co-editor with Albert Engström* of Söndags-nisse-Strix (1924–43), contributor to Svenska Dagbladet (1931–46). A prolific and successful writer of the witty causerie.

Samlade historier (12 vols, 1918–22); Berättelser (sel.; 1948); 25 År med svenska folket (1931; account of Söndags-Nisse).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Zevecote, JACOB VAN (*Ghent 1596; †Harderwijk 1642), Dutch poet, monk and Professor of rhetoric at Ghent, after 1624 at Leiden. Renouncing monasticism, he was appointed Professor at Harderwijk in 1626. He wrote dramas in classical form (five acts and choruses).

LATIN PLAYS: Rosimunda; Maria Stuarta; Esther (all pr. in Poemata, 3rd ed., 1623).—DUTCH PLAYS: Beleg van Leiden (1626); Ontset van Leiden (1630).—VERSE: Lof van Harderwijk, Verachtinge des Doots (1625; from the Latin of D. Heinsius); Emblemata (1626).

'Testament van J. van Z.' in Vaderlandsch Museum, IV (1861).—Ph. Blommaert, Gedichten van J. van Z. (1840) and De Nederlandsche Schrijvers van Gent (1861); P. H. Keyser, 'J. van Z.'s Lof van Harderwyk' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., XXXV (1916); J. van Z.'s Nederduytsche dichten (1626–1638) (ed. O. Dambre, 1939). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Zeyer, JULIUS (*Prague 26 IV 1841; †ibid. 29 I 1901), Czech novelist, poet and dramatist. Zeyer was born of a well-to-do Prague family and German was the language of his early upbringing. Not the least of the influences that caused him to accept Czech as the language of his literary work was that of his Czech nurse. After travelling extensively in Europe and studying modern languages and literatures at Prague University he settled down in Prague as a writer. With Vrchlický* he became the most notable representative of the cosmopolitan trend in late 19th-century Czech literature. His epic poems present subjects from Czech antiquity (Výšehrad, 1880), medieval French legend (Karolinská epopeja, 1896) and many other themes—all treated in the neo-Romantic manner. More substantial is his achievement as a novelist. Tři legendy o krucifixu (1895) represents his best prose achievement in the romantic-historical vein. His most notable work, however, is the semi-autobiographical novel Jan Maria Plojhar (1888), with its original, characteristically Czech presentation of the problem of the artistic temperament. Many elements in his work show affinity with the décadents.

Sebrané spisy (34 vols, 1901–07); sel. works (ed. J. Š. Kvapil, 1941 ff.).—Dům u tonoucí hvězdy (novel; 1894).

J. Voborník, J. Z. (1907); J. Š. Kvapil, Gotický Z. (1942). R.A.

Zhirmunsky, VICTOR (*1891), Soviet author, critic and literary theoretician. He started his career as a member of the Formalist Group of writers and critics who considered the mastery of words, styles and genres to be the true material of literary evolution. He turned, though, against the dogmatism of the extreme Formalists and asserted that philosophic, moral, social and religious elements can legitimately blend with a work of art.

Zadachi poetiki (1924); Vvedenie v metriku (1925); Istoricheskaya poetika (1940). J.L.

Zhitkov, BORIS STEPANOVICH (*1882; †1938), Soviet author of excellent children's stories. He was particularly good when writing about animals.

Chto ya videl (1939).

L. Chukovskaya, B. Z. (1955). J.L.

Zhukovsky, VASILY ANDREYEVICH (*Tula 29 I 1783; †1841; †Baden-Baden 7 IV 1852), Russian poet who paved the way for Pushkin*, to whose circle he later belonged. Illegitimate son of a rich landowner (A. I. Bunin) and of a Turkish slave-girl, he received a good education and was among the first poets to introduce—with superb translations—English and German influences to the Russian Parnassus. His version of Gray's* Elegy, printed in Vestnik Evropy ('The European Messenger') in 1802, is regarded as the first landmark of that process which culminated in the 'golden age' of Russian poetry. In some respects Zhukovsky stands between the sentimental and the Romantic periods, and his own intensely musical lyrics are an intimate confession of a contemplative, dreamy and pietistic soul suffering from frustrated love. In epic poetry, however, he made valiant attempts at ballads, as well as at narrative poems with folkloristic flavour. Yet his original work, good though it be, looks small in bulk compared with his translations which range from the poems of Bürger*, Uhland*, Goethe* and Schiller* to Byron* and Homer's* Odyssey.

Sochineniya (3 vols, 1902, 1918); Stikhotvoreniya (1939); Skazki (1946); Sochineniya (1954).

J. Grot, Ocherki zhizni i poezii Zhukovskogo (1883); A. N. Veselovsky, V. A. Z. (1904); V. I. Pokrovsky, V. A. Z. (1912); B. Eichenbaum, Melodika russkogo liricheskogo stikha (1922); V. K. Zaitsev, Z. (1951). J.L.

Ziegler, CHARLES CALVIN (*Center County, Pa. 19 IV 1854; †St Louis, Miss. 19 VI 1930), Pennsylvania-German poet, influenced by Harbaugh's* Harfe and by German poetry.

Drauss un Deheem (Leipzig, 1891; enlarged repr. in Penn. Ger. Folklore Soc. Pub., I, 1936). E.R.

Zigler und Klipphausen, HEINRICH ANSELM VON (*Radmeritz 6 I 1663; †Wurzen 8 IX 1696), German novelist. He avoided employment at court to devote himself to literature, excerpting chronicles and histories. His one novel, Die asiatische Banise, had a remarkable and long-lived success; Gottsched* called it the best German novel. It is a story of heroic and constant love between princely personages amid rapid changes of fortune, set in an Oriental milieu of passion and intrigue. It was continued by J. G. Hamann (†1713).

Die asiatische Banise oder das bluthig- doch muthige Pegu (1689; ed. F. Bobertag in J. Kürschner, Dr. Nat.-Lit., XXXVII, 1883); Heldenliebe (1691); Täglicher Schauplatz der Zeit (1694).

M. Pistorius, H. A. von Z.s Leben und Werk (diss. Leipzig, 1928); W. Pfeiffer-Belli, Die asiatische Banise (1940); H. K. Kettler, Baroque Tradition in the German Enlightenment (1943); E. Frenzel, 'H. A. von Z. als Opernlibrettist' in Euphoriion, LXII (1968). L.W.F.

Zilahy, LAJOS (*Nagyszalonta 27 III 1891), Hungarian author. The ease and clarity with which Zilahy expounds his plots have made him popular as a novelist outside Hungary. On the Hungarian stage his light dramas with their poetic language won wide recognition.

NOVELS: Két fogoly (1927; Two Prisoners, tr. J. Collins and I. Zeitlin, 1931); A szökevény (1930; The Deserter, tr. G. Halász, 1932); A fegyverek visszanéznek (1936; The Guns Look Back, tr. L. Wolfe, 1938); Ararát (1947; The Dukays, tr. J. Pauker, 1950); The Angry Angel (1954).—PLAYS: Süt a nap (1924); A tábornok (1928).

M. Ruzitska, Z. L. (1928). G.F.C.

Zilber, VENYAMIN ALEXANDROVICH: see Kaverin, VENYAMIN.

Zilliacus, EMIL GUSTAV (*Tammerfors 1 IX 1878; †Helsingfors 7 XII 1961), Finnish-Swedish scholar and writer. He lectured in literature at Helsingfors (1909) and became Professor of classical literature (1943). He was one of the founders of the periodicals Euterpe and Argus, and editor of Nya Argus (1911–33). His best poetry reveals a happy marriage of classical form and intimate, subjective, emotion (e.g. Soluret, 1926). He has done some brilliant translations from Greek.

CRITICISM: Den nyare franska poesin och antiken (1905); Grekisk lyrik (1911); Sophokles (1919); Khoros (1939).—VERSE: Offereld (1915); Hellenika (1917); Minnesaltaret (1936); Silverhöst (1943); Brunnarna (sel. poems 1915–50; 1958).

B.M.E.M. (I.S.)

Zimorowicz, JÓZEF BARTŁOMEJ (*Lwów 20 VIII 1597; †ibid. 14 X 1677), Polish-Latin poet and writer. The burgomaster of Lwów, he wrote Latin works describing the city's history, but his major work is a collection of elegies, Sielanki nowe ruskie, which contains realistic descriptions of atrocities committed by the Cossacks during their attack on the city in 1648. If he is also the author of the apparently simple but skilful love poetry of his brother Szymon's Roxolanki, he must be considered one of the leading Polish Baroque poets.

Żywot Kozaków lisowskich . . . (1620); Sielanki nowe ruskie . . . (1663; ed. under the name of Szymon Z.; crit. ed. J. Łoś, 1916); Leopolis . . . a Turcis . . . (1693); Leopolis triplex (pub. 1899).

J. K. Heck, Życie i dzieła B. i Szymona Zimorowiczów (Ozimek) na tle stosunków ówczesnego Lwowa (2 vols, 1894–1903); S. Adamczewski, Oblicze poetyckie Bartłomeja Zimorowicza (1928). S.S. (P.H.)

Zimorowicz, SZYMON (*Lwów 1608; †Cracow 21 VI 1629), Polish poet. His only work, a collection of lyrical poems, Roxolanki, written in honour of his brother Józef Bartłomej's wedding in 1629 and published posthumously by him, is by most scholars believed to be the work of Józef Bartłomej himself.

Roxolanki to jest Ruskie panny . . . (1654; ed. A. Brückner, 1924).

See prec. art. for further biblio. S.S. (P.H.)

Zincgref, JULIUS WILHELM (*Heidelberg 3 VI 1591; †St Goar 12 XI 1635), German poet, a leader of the circle of young men at Heidelberg and Strasbourg who, inspired by Janus Gruter and Mathias Bernegger, worked for a regeneration of German poetry which they saw adumbrated in their friend Opitz*. Zincgref published Opitz' Teutsche Poemata in 1624, appending to it a collection of largely un-Opitzian poems by his friends and himself which characterize their transitional position. His Vermanung zur Dapfferkeit (1625) and Soldatenlob (1632) were influential and his collection of Apophthegmata (1626) had a wide success.

Facetiae Pennalium (1618); Fahnenbilder (1619); Auserlesene Gedichte deutscher Poeten (1624; ed. W. Braune, 1879); Quodlibetischer Weltkefig (1632).

J. Zacher, Die dt. Sprichwörter-sammlungen (1852); F. Schnorr von Carolsfeld, 'J. W. Z.s Leben und Schriften' in Archiv f. Literaturgesch., VIII (1879); A. Reifferscheid, Quellen zur Geschichte des geistigen Lebens in Deutschland während des 17. Jh. (1889); O. Fischl, 'Quelle und Nachwirkung von Z.s Vermanung zur Dapfferkeit' in Euphorion, XVIII (1911); W. P. Friederich, 'Z. and his fellow-poets' in Germanic Rev., IX (1934). L.W.F.

Zipoli, PERLONE: see Lippi, LORENZO.

Ziya, MEHMED (ZIYA GÖKALP): see Gökalp, ZIYA.

Ziyādah, MARIE: see Mayy.

Ziya Paşa (*Istanbul 1825; †Adana 17 V 1880), Turkish poet. Learned in classical culture, he became a secretary in the palace, where he learned French. Because of his revolutionary activities he escaped, with Namık Kemal*, to Paris and London. On his return to Turkey he was appointed to distant provinces. Too deeply rooted in classical culture to practise himself the innovations he believed in and preached, nevertheless his work contributed largely to the introduction and establishment of Western ideas in politics and literature.

VERSE: Es'ar-ı Ziya (1881); Külliyat-ı Ziya Paşa (ed. Süleyman Nazif, 1925); Zafername (1870); Harabat (anthol. of Turkish, Arabic and Persian poetry; 1874).—VARIOUS: Rüya (1867); Veraset-i saltanat-ı seniyye (1868).

Süleyman Nazif, İki Dost (1926); İ. H. Ertaylan, Z. P., hayatı ve eserleri (1935); Ahmet Hamdi Tanpınar, XIX asır Türk edebiyatı tarihi (1956). F.I.

Zlatarić, DOMINKO (*Ragusa [Dubrovnik] c. 1555; †ibid. c. 1609), Ragusan poet of wealthy bourgeois origin; studied in Padua. Translated from Italian, Greek and Latin. His original verse, although showing Petrarchan influence, is moving and sincere.

Pjesni razlike (1899).

A. Vaillant, Les 'Pjesni Razlike' de D. Z. (1928) and La langue de D. Z. . . . (1928). V.J.

Zlatovratsky, NIKOLAY NIKOLAYEVICH (*Vladimir 4 XII 1845; †1911), Russian author with strong 'populist' leanings. In his narratives and novels he idealized the Russian moujik and went into ecstasies over the peasant commune to which he pinned his faith in agrarian socialism. The contrast between the old and the new village is well described in his long novel, Ustoi (1878–82), but his feelings and his didacticism often run away with him—to the detriment of his art.

Sochineniya (8 vols, 1912); Izbrannye proizvedeniya (1947).

V. V. Bush, Ocherki literaturnogo narodnichstva (1931). J.L.

Zmaj, JOVAN JOVANOVIĆ (*Novi Sad 24 XI 1833; †Kamenica, Srem 3 VI 1904), Serbian poet; a doctor and journalist, known as 'Zmaj' ('Dragon') from the title of a humorous periodical which was among others edited by him. He was a prolific and facile writer of lyrics expressing all his emotions, ideas and experiences, of social satire in verse, of narrative, patriotic and didactic poetry, of poems for children, and of translations. This profusion contains many pearls.

Djulići (1864); Djulići uveoci (1883); Čika Jova srpskoj deci (1890); Snohvatice (3 vols, 1895).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 16 vols, 1933–37).

V. Stajić, 'J. J. Z., 1833–1933' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XIII (1934). V.J.

Żmichowska, NARCYZA, pseud. GABRYELLA (*Warsaw 7 III 1819; †ibid. 25 XII 1876), Polish novelist. A pupil of Kl. Hoffmanowa*, she was imprisoned for her political activities (1849–52). From 1855 she taught in Warsaw. Most gifted among the 'Enthusiast women', as an author in verse and prose, she excelled both in artistic form and depth of thought. Her highly romantic novels give a psychological analysis of characters in advance of her times.

Poganka (1846; ed. T. Żeleński-Boy, 1930); Bidla róża (1861; ed. idem, 1929); Czy to powieść (1877; ed. idem, 1929).—CORRESPONDENCE: Listy do rodziny i przyjaciół (3 vols, 1885–1906); Listy do Tekli Dębskiej... (ed. H. Kopia, 1890); Narcyssa i Wanda (ed. T. Żeleński-Boy, 1930); Listy (1957– ).—Pisma (5 vols, 1885–90); Wybór powieści (1953).

M. Mann, Poganka N. Ż. Gienieza i źródła, artyzm i idea utworu (1916); C. Walewska, N. Ż. (1919); M. Stepień, N. Ż. (1968).

S.S. (P.H.)

Żmogas: see Rodziewiczówna, MARIA.

Zoet, JAN (*c. 1614; †2 I 1674), Dutch satirist and chiliastic eccentric, innkeeper at Amsterdam. For some years he was an actor in the town theatre and leader of a poets' club, which published a collection of poetry of little value. He wrote plays and poetry for the house of Orange, often in Cats* style.

SATIRES: Hedendaagse Mantel-eer (1636); Het Grootte Vischnet (pr. in Werken, below).—Het leven en Bedrijf van Clement Marot (prose; 5th ed. 1660).—VERSE: d'Uytsteekenste digt-kunstige Werken door J. Z. Amsterdammer (1675) and in Parnassus aan het Y (1663).—PLAYS: Olimpia (1640); Zabynaja (1648; from the Spanish); Cornelia Bentivogli (1650; after Bandello); De Adellikke huisvader (1658; after Tasso).—Jochem-Jool (farce; 1637).

K. O. Meinsma, Spinoza en zijn kring (1896); W. Zuidema in Oud-Holland, XXIII (1905); J.

Koopmans, 'J. Z.' in Nieuwe Taalgids, XI (1917); K. Meeuwesse, Jan Luyken als dichter van de Duytse Lier (1952). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Zoilus OF AMPHIPOLIS (4th century B.C.), Greek rhetorician. He wrote books Against Plato, Against Isocrates, Against Homer, and rhetorical works. His notorious criticism of Homer* attacked the credibility of incidents and characters. He is said to have been a Cynic, but is insignificant as a philosopher.

F. Jacoby, Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker, II (1923).—U. Friedländer, De Zoilo aliisque Homerii obrectatoribus (1895). D.J.F.

Zola, ÉMILE ÉDOUARD CHARLES ANTOINE (*Paris 2 IV 1840; †1870 Gabrielle Eléonore Alexandrine Meley; †ibid. 29 IX 1902), French novelist. Zola, the son of an engineer of Italian origin, spent his early years at Aix-en-Provence, where his friends included Paul Cézanne. In 1858 he returned with his widowed mother to Paris where, his studies ended, he found work with the publishing house of Hachette. He took up journalism and, as an art critic, actively defended Manet and the Impressionist painters. His Contes à Ninon (1864), and the novel La Confession de Claude (1866), favourably received, were followed by Thérèse Raquin (1867) and Madeleine Féral (1868), both influenced by the novels of the Goncourts*. Between 1871 and 1893 he published Les Rougon-Macquart, 20 novels which he described as 'the natural and social history of a family under the Second Empire'. It has been praised as a remarkable effort of documentation based on the theories of Claude Bernard's Introduction à la médecine expérimentale (1865) which Zola expounded in Le Roman expérimental (1880). In fact, though he thought of himself as a scientific or documentary novelist and spent a great deal of time propagating his theory of Naturalism, he is much more than that. He is, as Balzac*, a visionary—a quality most evident in what is known as his 'black' poetry. The Rougon-Macquart series is not simply a vision of life under the Second Empire: it is a vision of the human condition. Underlying it, is a Naturalist 'theology' in which some of the main Christian dogmas find their equivalents. It begins with a 'fall' caused by alcoholism which produces the lésion organique, the Naturalist form of original sin, and ends with the birth of a child who is supposedly the Naturalist 'saviour'. Zola tried to develop his findings in two further groups of novels, Les Trois villes (1894–1902) and Les Quatre évangiles (1899–1902), but by this time his powers were beginning to fail. He was an active defender of Dreyfus. After publishing his indictment of French justice, 'J'accuse', in L'Aurore (13 I 1898), he was obliged to leave France and sought refuge in England (1898–99). He died, accidentally asphyxiated, in 1902 and is buried in the Panthéon in Paris.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Les mystères de Marseille (1867); Les Rougon-Macquart, comprising: La fortune des Rougon (1871), La curée (1871), Le ventre de Paris (1873), Le conquête de Plassans (1874), La faute de l'abbé Mouret (1875), Son excellence Eugène Rougon (1876), L'assommoir (1877); The Dram-Shop, tr. G. Hopkins, (1951), Une page d'amour (1878), Nana (1880), Por-bouille (1882), Au bonheur des dames (1882), La joie de vivre (1884), Germinal (1885; tr. H. Ellis, 1894), L'œuvre (1886; The Masterpiece, tr. T. Walton, 1950), La terre (1887), Le rêve (1888), La bête humaine (1890), L'argent (1891), La débâcle (1892), Le docteur Pascal (1893); Les trois villes, comprising: Lourdes (1894), Rome (1896), Paris (1898); Les quatre évangiles, comprising: Fécondité (1899), Travail (1901), Vérité (1903), Justice (unfinished); Nouveaux contes à Ninon (1874); Les soirées de Médan, including L'attaque du moulin (1880); Nais Micoulin (1884).—CRITICISM: Mes haines (1866); Mon salon (1866); Edouard Manet (1867); Le naturalisme au théâtre (1881); Nos auteurs dramatiques (1881); Les romanciers naturalistes (1881); Une campagne (1882); Lettre à la jeunesse (1897); Lettre à la France (incl. 'J'accuse'; 1898); La vérité en marche (1901).—Œuvres complètes (ed. H. Mitterand, 15 vols, 1962–69).

H. Massis, Comment E. Z. composait ses romans (1906); Henry James, Notes on Novelists (1914); M. Josephson, Z. and His Time (1928); D. Le Blond-Zola, Z. raconté par sa fille (1931); G. Robert, E. Z. Principes et caractères généraux de son œuvre (1952; best intro.); A. Wilson, E. Z. (1952; 1965); F. W. J. Hemmings, E. Z. (1953; 1966); H. Guillemin, Présentation des Rougon-Macquart (1964). T.W. (M.T.)

Zollinger, ALBIN (*Zürich 24 I 1895; †ibid. 7 XI 1941), Swiss novelist and essayist. He spent his youth in Argentina and was a schoolteacher in Switzerland. Profoundly perturbed by the stagnating social and intellectual life in Switzerland, as he saw it, he was tireless in proposing ways of reinvigoration that were compatible with Swiss democratic thinking and would form an antidote to the remedies prescribed by German National Socialism.

Der halbe Mensch (1929); Die grosse Unruhe (1939); Pfannenstiel (1940); Bohnenblut (1942).—Gedichte (ed. E. Staiger, 1956); Gesammelte Werke (4 vols, 1961–62).

P. Häfiker, Der Dichter A. Z. (1954); H. Bänziger, 'A. Z.' in Heimat und Fremde (1958); W. Günther, 'A. Z.' in Dichter der neueren Schweiz, I (1963). H.B.

Zonaras: see John Zonaras.

Zoranić, PETAR (*Zadar c. 1508; †after 1569), Dalmatian writer of the aristocratic class, with a classical education. His pastoral novel, Planine (Venice, 1569), patriotic and moralizing, modelled on Sannazaro's* Arcadia, is the earliest extant secular work in prose (but interspersed with verse) in Croatian literature. The background is that of the poet's own time and region.

V. Javarek, 'Three 16th-century Dalmatian poets' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XLI (1962). V.J.

Zoroaster (not later than 7th century B.C.), the prophet of ancient Iran. The exact details of his life are still disputed. He preached his doctrine in East Iran, secured the support of King Vishtasp and challenged the older, mainly nature-divinity, worship. The Gāthās, five archaic poems ascribed to Zoroaster himself, are the oldest and holiest part of AVESTA, the sacred book of the Zoroastrians. Their doctrine, with its ethical and optimistic outlook, is based on a belief that two primeval forces, good and evil, govern the world. Man, as a free agent, is exhorted to choose the right and avoid the wrong, so as to bring about the final victory of Ahura Mazda, lord of wisdom, and banishment of Angra Mainyu (Ahriman), the evil spirit.

A. V. W. Jackson, Z., the Prophet of Ancient Iran (1899); H. S. Nyberg, Die Religionen des alten Iran (1938); E. E. Hertzfeld, Z. and His World (1947); J. Duchesne-Guillemin, Z. (incl. tr. of the Gāthās; Paris, 1928); W. B. Henning, Z. (1951); W. Hinz, Zarathustra (1951); and see AVESTA. E.Y.

Zorrilla de San Martín, JUAN (*Montevideo 28 XII 1855; †ibid. 3 XI 1931), Uruguayan poet and essayist. He is the author of the best-known poem in Uruguayan literature and the greatest of its writers before Herrera* y Reissig, whom he outlived. Tabaré (1888), his greatest work, is a lengthy poem on the tragic love of a half-caste Indian for a white girl. The theme is handled romantically and perhaps over-sentimentally; the versification is extremely skilful and, by its lyrical quality, carries the reader over much that in purely narrative form would have been tedious. For the poet as well as for the essayist and historian, patriotism and religion are the most powerful driving forces. E.Sa.

La epopeya de Artigas (2 vols, 1912).—Coll. works (16 vols, 1930).

R. Ibañez, La leyenda patria y su contorno histórico (Montevideo, 1959). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Zorrilla y Moral, José (*Valladolid 21 II 1817; ∞1839 Matilde O'Reilly, ∞1869 Juana Pacheco; †Madrid 23 I 1893), Spanish dramatist. In 1836 he escaped from home and University. A few months after, he conquered fame with an elegiac recitation at the burial of Larra*. Fleeing from his first wife, 19 years his senior, he went to France (1850) and Mexico (1855), where he became Emperor Maximilian's protégé. After 1866 he lived mainly in Spain. Penniless, but with unrivalled popularity, he was solemnly crowned with golden laurels at Granada in 1889.

With him Spanish Romanticism reached its height. Others, with more culture, attained greater perfection and avoided his grave pitfalls, but nobody excelled him in wealth of inspiration, mastery of description and dramatic power. In the Leyendas he recreated the heroic, medieval, Christian and Moorish atmosphere of old Spain (Cantos del trovador, 1840-41; Vigilias del Estío, 1842; Granada, 1852; etc.). His legends are like little dramas written in narrative form, and conversely his plays are dramatizations of legends (El puñal del Godo, 1842; El zapatero y el rey, 1840-41; Traidor, infanado y mártir, 1849, technically his best play). Yet all his works are obscured by Don Juan Tenorio (1844), the most popular play in Spanish literature. It is still performed yearly on 1 XI throughout Spain. In facile, at times cheap, but always sonorous, colourful and dynamic verse, Zorrilla gives new life to DON JUAN's saga, introducing new characters, derived from old Spanish dramatic types. The legends of the burlador and of the banquet with the statue are better welded together than in Tirso* and Zamora*. Zorrilla's Don Juan becomes a popular hero saved from utter damnation at the last moment by the pure love of Doña Inés. This play is important for its recreation of Don Juan's character and its great dramatic force, not as a refined work of art.

Obras completas (4 vols, 1895); Obras completas (ed. A. Cortés, 2 vols, 1943).

Don Juan Tenorio (constant reprs in Col. Aust., Clás. Cast., etc.).—Eng. trs: S. Eliot, Translations From the Spanish Poet J. Z. (Boston, 1846); T. Walsh, 'Toledo', 'The Bull and the Picador' and 'The Springlet' in Hispanic Anthology (New York, 1920); W. Knapp, 'Dagger of the Goth' in Poet Lore, XL (1929); A. J. McVan, 'From Don Juan Tenorio', excerpt in Translations From Hispanic Poets (New York, 1938).

Alonso Cortés, Z., su vida y sus obras (1943).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Zorro, JOAN (fl. 1250), Portuguese poet. Little is known of his life. The sea, ships and the river Tagus are recurrent themes in his delightful cantigas de amigo, which are among the finest in the early Portuguese CANCIONEIROS.

A. F. G. Bell, 'The eleven songs of J. Z.' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XV (1920); C. Ferreira da Cunha, O Cancioneiro de J. Z. (Rio de Janeiro, 1949).

T.P.W.

Zorut(t), PIERI (*Lonzano 1792; †Udine 1867), the most popular Friulian poet. His lyrics, mainly sonnets, are a humorous or slightly sentimental commentary, in the manner of Italian dialect literature, on situations and incidents of everyday life. Although his lyrics may be criticized for their prolixity, his epigrams are masterly and he is considered one of the two most important Friulian writers of the 19th century.

Poesiis (2 vols, 1836-37; 3 vols, 1846-57); Poesie edite ed inedite (2 vols, 1880); Raccolta completa delle poesie friulane edite e inedite (Udine, 1880-82); Le poesie friulane di P. Z. (ibid., 1911-12); Poesie scelte (Udine-Tolmezzo, 1946; Udine, 1949).

B. Chiurlo, 'P. Z. poeta del Friuli' in Le Tre Venezie (Padua, 1942); G. D'Aronco, 'Bibliografia ragionata di P. Z.' in Aevum, XIX.1-2 (1945).

R.R.B.; L.C.

Zoshchenko, MIKHAIL MIKHAILOVICH (*1895; †1958), Soviet author whose humorous tales and sketches were extremely popular in the Soviet Union and abroad. He had passed through a number of professions before—in 1921—he took to writing comic anecdotal sketches of Soviet daily life. His favourite genre was a combination of the SKAZ or the 'told' story (as practised by Leskov* and Remizov*) and of the amusing feuilleton, which was often less innocent than it looked. As his pictures were not necessarily on strict Party lines, clashes became unavoidable. In 1943, he made a new departure with his reminiscences, Pered voskhodom solntsa. They began to appear in the periodical Oktyabr, but after the second instalment they were suddenly stopped. Some three years later Zoshchenko was officially 'purged' by Zhdanov.

Rasskazy Nazara Ilyitcha gospodina Sinebryukhova (1923); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1931); Vozvrashchennaya molodost' (1933); Golubaya kniga (1934); Izbrannye rasskazy (1935); Rasskazy, povesti, felyetony, teatr, kritika (1937); Rasskazy (1938); Povesti i rasskazy (New York, 1952).—Russia Laughs (tr. H. Clayton, 1935); The Woman Who Could Not Read and Other Tales (tr. E. Fen, 1940); The Wonderful Dog and Other Tales (tr. idem, 1942).

J.L.

Zosimus (*Gaza?; fl. second half 5th century), Greek historian. Author of Historia nova, recounting the history of the Roman empire from Augustus to Diocletian very summarily, and from Diocletian to 410 in detail. A bitter enemy of Christianity, he sees in the decline of Rome the vengeance of the old gods for their neglect.

Zosimi historia nova (ed. L. Mendelssohn, 1887; ed. F. Paschoud, I, 1971; tr. J. J. Buchanan and H. T. Davis, 1967).

L. Leidig, Quaestiones Zosimeae (1900); F. Gräbner, 'Eine Zosimosquelle' in Byzantinische Zeitschrift, XIV (1905).

R.B.

Zrínyi, Miklós, COUNT (*Ozaly 1 V 1620; ∞1646 Eusebia Draskovich, ∞1652 Baroness Mária Zsófia Löbl; †Kursanec Forest 18 XI 1664), Hungarian poet and essayist. Educated by Jesuits and influenced by contemporary Baroque, Zrínyi created out of recent history a brilliant heroic epic, his lengthy Obsidio Szigetiana (1651). An accomplished military leader, he also wrote historical and military studies.

Adriai tengernek Syrenaita (incl. Obsidio Szigetiana; Vienna, 1651).—Z. M. összes művei (ed. Cs. Csapodi and T. Klaniczay, 1958).

K. Széchy, Gróf Z. M. (5 vols, 1896–1902); T. Klaniczay, Z. M. (2nd ed. 1964); D. Mervyn Jones, 'Z. M.' in Five Hungarian Writers (1966). G.F.C.

Zschokke, Heinrich (*Magdeburg 22 III 1771; †Aarau 27 VI 1848), Swiss writer, a versatile character, who was first an actor, then pastor in Magdeburg (1792), before settling in Switzerland (1798), where he held public office and edited several journals. His large output included sensational plays and novels, works of undenominational edification, histories and historical novels modelled on Scott*. Das Goldmacherdorf foreshadowed Jeremias Gotthelf*.

NOVELS: Alamontade der Galeerensklave (1803; Eng. tr. J. Oxenford and C. A. Feiling, 1844); Das Goldmacherdorf (1817; Eng. tr. 1833); Die Brannweinpest (1837; Eng. tr. 1853).—Abillino der grosse Bandit (play; 1796; The Bravo of Venice, tr. M. G. Lewis, 1804).—MISCELLANEOUS: Stunden der Andacht (8 vols, 1809–16; sel. tr. F. Rowan, 1862); Ausgewählte Schriften (40 vols, 1825–28); Eine Selbstschau (2 vols, 1842).

E. Zschokke, H. Z. (1866; 3rd ed. 1875); P. Schaffrath, H. Z. als Politiker und Publizist (1949). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Zúbek, L'udovít (*12 VII 1907), Slovak novelist. Zúbek is the author of a series of historical novels which combine documentary accuracy with considerable narrative skill (Jar Adely Ostrolúckej, 1957, on L'udovít Štúr*; Skrytý prameň, 1956, on the medieval sculptor Master Paul of Levoča). R.A.

Zuckmayer, Carl (*Nackenheim 27 XII 1896), German playwright, poet and novelist. His plays have natural dialogue, skilful dramatic presentation. Robust humour, human compassion and unflinching courage are combined in his opposition to authoritarian intimidation. His most successful plays are Der fröhliche Weinberg (1925), Der Hauptmann von Köpenick (1930; Eng. tr. 1932) and above all Des Teufels General (1946). Das kalte Licht (1955; Eng. tr. E. Montague) deals with moral problems of the atomic age and includes the story of the atom spy, Klaus Fuchs. His verse, lyrical and satirical, and his prose works must take second place to his dramatic achievements.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Die Magdalena von Bozen (1936; The Moons Ride Over, tr. M. Firth, 1937); Die Fastnachtsbeichte (1959; Eng. tr. J. and N. Mander, 1961); Three Stories (ed. D. Barlow, 1963).—Gedichte (verse; 1948 and 1960).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Second Wind (tr. E. R. Hapgood, 1940); Als wär's ein Stück von mir (1964; A Part of Myself, tr. R. and C. Winston, 1970).—Gesammelte Werke (1947– ).

Fülle der Zeit: C. Z. und sein Werk (1956); A. J. Jacobius, Das Schauspiel C. Z.s (1956); P. Meinherz, C. Z. (1960); E. T. Rosenthal, Introdução à obra de C. Z. (1967). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Zuhair (6th–7th century), pre-Islamic Arabic poet. He is one of the major poets of early Arabic literature, with a predilection for didactic verse. S.M.S.

A. J. Arberry, The Seven Odes (1957). R.O.

Zumbroock, Ferdinand (*Münster 18 VI 1817; †ibid. 17 I 1890), Westphalian verse writer. His numerous rhymed anecdotes, in the Münster dialect, have only a limited appeal.

Poetische Versuche in Westfälischer Mundart (5 vols, 1847–88).

F. Wippermann, 'Der Altmeister der münsterischen Dialektdichtung' in Niedersachsen, XII (1907); F. Castelle, 'F. Z.', ibid. G.C.

Zúñiga, Francesillo de (*?Béjar; †ibid. 1532), Spanish burlesque writer. He was Charles V's buffoon and wrote a satirical chronicle (1527) of the events of the Emperor's reign and some amusing letters. His death was the result of wounds received from a ruffian hired by one of the nobles he had satirized.

Crónica in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXVI; Cartas inéditas (ed. J. Menéndez Pidal in Rev. de Archivos, XX–XXI, 1909).

A. Morel-Fatio and H. Léonardon, 'La "Chronique scandaleuse" d'un bouffon du temps de Charles-Quint' in Bull. Hispanique, XI (1909); A. González Palencia, Del 'Lazarillo' a Quevedo (1946). E.M.W.

Zunzunegui, Juan Antonio de (*Portugalete, Vizcaya 1901), Spanish novelist in the realist tradition, his novels being set for the most part in his native Basque country.

El chiplichandle (1939); La quiebra (2 vols, 1947); La úlcera (1949); Las ratas del barco (1950); El supremo bien (1951); Esta oscura desbandada (1952); La frontera delgada (1961).—Obras completas, I (in progr.; 1969– ).

Carbonell Bassat, La novelística de J. A. de Z. (1965). J.E.V.

Župančič, OTON (*Vinica in Bela Krajina 23 I 1878; ∞ Ana Kessler; †Ljubljana 11 VI 1949), Slovene poet, dramatist and translator. In his lyric poetry he appears as the confessor of his own personality, the herald of his nation's vitality, a seeker for the meaning of the individual and the nation in world culture and a stern critic of himself and society. During the Second World War he helped with his poems to sustain the fight for freedom. In 1948 the People's Parliament of Slovenia proclaimed him ljudski umetnik 'artist of the people'. He also produced very valuable translations of Shakespeare* (11 plays), Molière*, Calderón*, Pushkin* and other classics.

Čaša opojnosti (1899); Čez plan (1904); Samo-govori (1908); Ciciban (1915); V zarje Vidove (1920); Veronika Dešenška (1924); Zimzelen pod snegom (1945).—Naša beseda (ed. F. Albreht, 1929); Veš, poet, svoj dolg? (ed. J. Logar et al., 1949).—TRANSLATION: over 100 sel. poems in L. Tesnière, Oton Joupantchitch (1931); L. Novy, Blätter aus der slovenischen Lyrik in deutschen Übertragungen (1933); Anthologie de la poésie yougoslave des XIXe et XXe siècles (1935); Anthologie de la poésie slovène (1962); A Selection of Poems (ed. with intro. J. Lavrin, 1967).—Delo (works; 5 vols, 1936–50); Zbrano delo (coll. works; 4 vols, 1957–67; incomplete).

A. Cronia, O. Ž. (Rome, 1928); J. Vidmar, O. Ž. Kritično portretna študija (1935).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Zurara, GOMES EANES DE (*c. 1410; †1474), Portuguese chronicler. He enjoyed the favour of Afonso V, who in 1454 appointed him keeper of the state archives in succession to Fernão Lopes*. Zurara's histories continue those of Lopes, but deal more especially with the early stages of Portugal's colonial expansion in Africa. An ardent admirer of Prince Henry the Navigator, Zurara gives full importance to the latter's role in stimulating the navigations that ultimately led to the discovery of the sea-route to India.

Though describing an eminently epic period in Portugal's history, Zurara's heavy moralistic style often tends to blunt the effect of the great events he is recording; fond of displaying his erudition, his works abound with learned references and quotations. At times, however, the narrative rises above this pedantry and becomes worthy of the subject, notably in the Crónica da Tomada de Ceuta.

Crónica da Tomada de Ceuta (ed. F. M. Esteves Pereira, 1916; with Life); Crónica do Descobrimiento e Conquista da Guiné (ed. Visconde de Santarém, Paris, 1841; ed. A. Dias Dinis as Crónica dos Feitos de Guiné, 1949; The Chronicle of the Discovery and Conquest of Guinea, tr. C. R. Beazley and E. Prestage, with Life, Hakluyt Soc., 2 vols, 1896, 1899); Crónica do Conde D. Pedro de Meneses, pub. in Collecção de Livros inéditos da

História Portuguesa, II (1792); Crónica dos Feitos de D. Duarte de Meneses, ibid., III (1793).

A. J. Dias Dinis, Vida e obras de G. E. de Z. (1949). T.P.W.

Zurita, JERÓNIMO DE (*Saragossa 1512; †ibid. 1580), Spanish historian. His father had been doctor to Ferdinand the Catholic and Charles V. He studied with Hernán Núñez* at Alcalá and became secretary to Philip II and chronicler of Aragon. Travels in Germany and Italy enabled him to consult many foreign libraries and archives. His Anales de la corona de Aragón (1562–80) is still an important historical source; Bartolomé Leonardo de Argensola* continued them after Zurita's death.

Anales (1610; ed. A. Ubieto, M. D. Pérez Soler and L. Ballesteros, 2 vols, 1967); Crónica de la corona de Aragón (extr. ed. G. Castellano, 1918). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Zuylen, BELLE VAN: see Charrière, ISABELLE DE.

Zweifel, ELIESER ZEVI OF LAZAR (*Mohilev 15 IV 1815; †Glukhov 21 II 1888), Hebrew scholar and author. Although active as an educationist, his greatest achievement in Hebrew literature (Shalom al Israel) is his defence of Hassidism, the religious mystical sect which flourished from the middle of the 18th century to the end of the 19th.

Shalom al Israel (I, Zhitomir, 1868–70; II, Vilna, 1873; III and IV, Zhitomir, 1873); Sanegor (a defence of the Talmud; Warsaw, 1885); Heshbono shel Olam (on theodicy; ibid., 1878).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Zweig, ARNOLD (*Gross-Glogau 10 XI 1887; †Berlin 26 XI 1968), German writer. At first preoccupied with modern intellectualism, he dealt more with problems of everyday life after the First World War. Der Streit um den Sergeanten Grischa (1927); The Case of Sergeant Grischa, tr. E. Sutton, 1927) is his best novel, about one of his favourite subjects—war and the individual. His second great subject, Jews and Zionism, gets its fullest treatment in De Vrient kehrt heim (1932; De Vrient Goes Home, tr. idem, 1933). After the war, Zweig continued writing short stories, novels and plays about the contemporary scene, all of which reveal his humanitarianism and objective realism.

NOVELS: Novellen um Claudia (1912; Eng. tr. E. Sutton, 1930); Erziehung vor Verdun (1935); Das Beil von Wandsbek (1947; The Axe of Wandsbek, tr. E. Sutton, 1948; filmed 1951); Die Feuerpause (1954); Der grosse Krieg der weissen Männer (ser. of novels; 1957 ff.).—STORIES: Spielzeug der Zeit (1933; Playthings of Time, tr. E. D. Ashton, 1935); Stufen (1949); A Bit of Blood and Other Stories (1959).—PLAYS: Ritualmord in Ungarn

(1914); Die Umkehr (1927).—ESSAYS: Juden auf der deutschen Bühne (1928); Bilanz der deutschen Judenheit (1934; Insulted and Exiled, tr. E. and C. Paul, 1937).

S. Fishman, 'War novels of A. Z.' in Sewanee Rev., XLIX (1941); W. K. Pfeiler, War and the German Mind (1941); 'A. Z.-Bibliographie' in Sinn und Form (special no. on A. Z.; 1952); J. Rudolph, Der Humanist A. Z. (1955); Festschrift zum 70. Geburtstag (1957); A. Z.: Ein Almanach (1962); E. Hilscher, A. Z. (1962).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Zweig, STEFAN (*Vienna 28 XI 1881; †Petropolis, Brazil 23 II 1942), Austrian biographer, essayist, playwright and poet. Great fluency and the gift of imitative appreciation made his verse and prose somewhat unoriginal as well as polished and elegant. His portraits of historical and literary figures are not objective (Triumph und Tragik des Erasmus von Rotterdam, 1934, Eng. tr. 1934; and Maria Stuart, 1935, Eng. tr. 1935), but masterpieces of creative intuition and elegant lively presentation, at best in Joseph Fouché (1929; Eng. tr. 1930) and Marie Antoinette (1932; Eng. tr. 1933). He remains the most spirited analyst and representative of the tragically premature cosmopolitan culture before the First World War, Die Welt von gestern (1942; The World of Yesterday, 1943), and his many original translations of European writers reveal him as a leading defender of European values.

BIOGRAPHIES: Romain Rolland (1920); Drei Meister—Balzac, Dickens, Dostojewski (1920; tr. E. and C. Paul, 1930); Der Kampf mit dem Dämon—Hölderlin, Kleist, Nietzsche (1925); Drei Dichter ihres Lebens—Casanova, Stendhal, Tolstoi (1928; tr. Adepts in Self-Portraiture, 1928); Die Heilung durch den Geist—Mesmer, Mary Baker Eddy, Freud (1932; tr., Mental Healers, 1932); Balzac. Der Roman seines Lebens (1946; tr. W. and D. Rose, 1947).—STORIES: Amok (1922; Eng. tr. 1931); Verwirrung der Gefühle (1925; tr., Conflicts, 1928); Schachnovelle (1943; The Royal Game, tr. B. W. Huebsch, 1944).—Ausgewählte Novellen (1946).—PLAYS: Jeremias (1917; Eng. tr. 1922); Volpone (adapted from Ben Jonson; 1926).—Die gesammelten Gedichte (verse; 1924).—Complete Works (tr. E. and C. Paul, 1949 ff.); Die Dramen (ed. R. Friedenthal, 1964).

J. Romain, S. Z., Great European (1941); H. Arens, S. Z. Sein Leben—sein Werk (1949; Eng. tr. 1950); Blätter der S. Z.-Gesellschaft (1958 ff.); A. Bauer, S. Z. (1961); F. M. Zweig, S. Z.: Eine Bibliographie (1961); W. J. Lucas, 'S. Z.' in German Men of Letters, III (ed. A. Natan, 1964); R. J. Klawiter, S. Z.: A Bibliography (1965).
R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Zwingli, ULRICH or HULDREICH (*Wildhaus 1 I 1484; ∞1524 Anna Reinhard; †Kappel 10 X 1531), Swiss Reformer; studied at Vienna and Basle, became priest at Glarus (1506), Einsiedeln (1516) and the Grossmünster in Zürich, where he introduced the Reformation into Switzerland. He parted company with Luther* over the communion doctrine (conference of Marburg, 1529) and was killed at Kappel leading the Protestant forces against those of the Catholic cantons. A politician as much as a theologian, more radical than Luther, Zwingli had little direct influence on German literature.

Gesamtausgabe der Schriften und Briefe (ed. E. Egli, 1904 ff.); Hauptschriften (ed. F. Blanke and O. Farner, 3 vols, 1941–47).—Selected Works (Eng. tr. ed. S. M. Jackson, 3 vols, 1912–30).

Myconius, Vita (1532; Eng. tr. H. Bennet, 1561); G. Finsler, Z.-Bibliographie (1897); S. M. Jackson, H. Z. (1901); Zwingliana (periodical; 1904 ff.); H. Nabholz, 'Z. im Drama' in Zürcher Taschenbuch, XXXV (1912); A. Lang, Z. and Calvin (1913); W. Köhler, Z. (1923); O. Farner, Z. (2 vols, 1946); G. Ritter, 'U. Z.' in Die grossen Deutschen, V (1957).
D.G.D.

Zych, MAURYCZ: see Żeromski, STEFAN.